Cambodia picks premier

WASHINGTON (AP) - Cambodia's new premier is an old-guard, conservative politician who led a pro-Western opposition in the late 1970s and early 1980s.

Phnom Penh: The new premier, named by the government-appointed constitutional council, is Nimon Yot, a member of the Cambodian People's Party, which ruled the country from 1975 to 1979.

Yot was a member of the National Front of the Liberation of South Vietnam, which fought the Khmer Rouge, and served as a diplomat in the 1970s.

The new premier's appointment is seen as a move to strengthen ties with the international community.

The agreement is designed to resolve a special committee's report on the company's financial practices.

The agreement is expected to resolve the dispute and allow the company to continue its operations.

The agreement is expected to be announced later this week.

Court decisions predicted

By BRIAN McCOLLUM

In an effort to win a former court case, a lawyer has filed a suit in the Massachusetts Court of Appeals.

The suit, filed by a lawyer named William Brown, is based on a decision by the Supreme Court of Massachusetts in the case of Brown v. Brown.

The Supreme Court decision awarded Brown, a lawyer from Waltham, a victory in his long-running legal battle with the Board of Education of the Town of Medway.

Brown had been a visiting professor at the University of Massachusetts for many years, but was fired in 1974 after he refused to sign a statement expressing support for the Vietnam War.

Brown has been involved in several other legal battles over his right to teach at the university, including a 1975 case in which he was found guilty of contempt of court for refusing to appear before a grand jury.

In his suit, Brown argues that the Board of Education's decision to fire him was based on political considerations and is therefore unconstitutional.

State hopes to win solar facility

In celebration of the long-awaited spring of students, thousands of students are bringing sunshine to the state with the help of solar energy. This state is proud of the30-year history of solar energy in the state of Michigan, which has included several successful projects.

One of the state's largest solar projects was completed in 1986, when the state of Michigan installed a 1.5-megawatt solar array on the roof of the Michigan State Capitol. The project was funded through a state lottery, and has been praised for its success.

The state has also been involved in several other solar projects, including the installation of solar panels on the roof of the state Capitol, and the development of a solar-powered water treatment plant.

The state hopes to continue these efforts, and is currently planning to install a solar-powered research facility on the campus of the University of Michigan. This facility will be used to study the potential of solar energy for the state.

Along with Michigan, other states have also been working on solar projects, including California and New York. These states have also been praised for their success, and have received national attention.

In conclusion, the state of Michigan is proud of its long history with solar energy, and is committed to continuing these efforts in the future. Through the use of solar energy, the state hopes to reduce its dependence on fossil fuels, and to create a more sustainable future for all Michigan residents.
Preserve 'red' files

Our legislature committed a regrettably stupid error nearly 26 years ago during the McCarthy era than "red scares" and fears of Communism inflamed.

The mistake was made when the legislature passed a law allowing for the organization of special investigative units within the state police. The law gives the authority to investigate suspected subversive and subversive files on them in cooperation with local law enforcement agencies.

The seeds for potential abuse of civil and political rights were sown at that time. Now, 26 years later, we recognize too graphically the damage that has been done.

Files kept on some 50,000 citizens within Michigan indicate the extent of this abuse and the enormity of this damage. It is my firm belief that the only way to begin to deflect the very rights it is intended to protect.

The decisions handed down in two recent court cases involving these "red scare" files may be the means to stop. In the McCleary vs. Democratic, the registry has already received a ruling that the registry is unconstitutional. The decision in the Michigan vs. Democratic case is pending at the last minute.

Humphreyites, determined to stop this utilization of these files for the benefit of the registry, keep the threat real in many different political jurisdictions. They will continue this battle until the registry is dead.

Washington—Rep. Paul G. Douglas, D-I11., and Rep. Philip Habib, D-La., are leading a small group of Congressmen trying to save the "red scare" files from the "registry." It is safe to say that the registry is not the result of an enlightened effort of our government to protect the American people from the dangers of subversives.

There are many who believe that the registry is an attempt to revive the "red scare" of the 1920's and 1930's, when the government was trying to protect the American people from the dangers of subversives.

Gobblers raid MSU for 'Turkey' contest

By JEROME MCALISTER

Several hours before kickoff on Saturday afternoon, the citizens of East Lansing were thumped as gobbler-after-gobbler landed on the sidewalk, as if from nowhere. The birds, which are normally seen only in the parks and back yards, were found to be the work of MSU students who have found that turkey is the traditional Thanksgiving delicacy of choice.

"I'm sure the turkeys are not used to being in the city, but it seems that they are attracted to the sound of the marching band," said MSU President John B. Hall.

Several students reported that the turkeys were causing a traffic jam on the streets near the MSU campus. "The birds were making a lot of noise, and we had to slow down," said one student.

The turkeys were later rounded up and taken to the MSU farm for safekeeping.

Radio Fee Refund

Undergraduate students living on campus, as an alternative to paying the $250 fee for a hair dryer, may use the services provided by the Michigan State University Student Services Center. The fee, $250, is charged to offset the cost of the facilities and services used by the housing units.

The fee will be refunded to students who are living on campus and do not use the services provided by the Student Services Center.

Seniors to vote on club renewals

Senior members of the MSU Club are being asked to vote on the renewal of the MSU Club for the 1973-1974 academic year. The club, which has been in existence for over 50 years, is considering several changes to its membership and activities.

The club has been criticized in recent years for its lack of diversity, and the senior members are currently working on a plan to increase the club's membership and provide more opportunities for all students.
