Future of counseling center cloudy

The future of the counseling center is uncertain. The center has been facing financial challenges and cuts to its budget have forced it to reduce its services. The center is currently exploring options to increase its funding, including seeking grants and donations from the community.

However, the center is facing significant challenges in its efforts to increase its funding. The center is located in a low-income neighborhood and many of its clients are uninsured or underinsured. This makes it difficult to secure funding from traditional sources.

The center is also facing challenges in its efforts to attract new clients. Many of its clients are seeking help for mental health issues related to stress, anxiety, and depression. The center is struggling to attract new clients who are seeking help for these issues.

Despite these challenges, the center remains committed to its mission of providing affordable counseling services to the community. The center is working to explore new strategies to increase its funding and attract new clients.

Every vet's completed half of Army ROTC. Now consider the last half. It's a better deal!

Your time in any of the services counts as constructive credit for the first 2 years of Army ROTC. That makes you a candidate for the Advanced Course. There are several reasons that this can be a good deal.

For starters, you get 4100 a month plus up to 30 months a year while you take Advanced ROTC. This is in addition to all your Veteran's benefits.

It keeps more options open. You earn a degree and a commission at the same time. You can apply for Active Duty to enjoy the prestige, pay and challenge of an officer. (Your time in the service counts for language and career experience in your application for active or Reserve. On, you can put your leadership skills learned in ROTC to work for you as an civilians. Army ROTC's a bit going for it. Particularly for veterans. It's worth looking into for sure.)

Wait for the facts

The East Lansing City Council has backed down from a proper statement on a project that would cut water from the Bandy-Chandler drainage district.

At the May 4 council meeting, building permits granted since April 1 were recanted and a 30-day building halt was imposed. After last Wednesday's meeting, a majority of members have changed their minds about the issue and will permit building without knowing the results of studies that will determine if the area can support development.

Finding a higher finish is a logical decision. The East Lansing City Council should re-examine its decision, to protect the interests of its residents.

No predictions until Republican solidification

Voters in the state of Michigan have been predicted to go to the polls and vote for Republican candidates. This prediction is based on the assumption that the Republican Party will continue to be the dominant party in the state.

However, predictions are always based on past performance, and the current political climate is different. In recent years, a shift in the political landscape has been observed, with a greater number of independents and third-party candidates entering the political fray.

Therefore, it is essential to wait for the official election results before making any predictions. The final outcome will be determined by the votes cast on election day, and it is impossible to accurately predict the results until after the polls close.

We'll watch PB actions

Students approved the programming board resolution last week, which authorized PB to offer grants to local, non-profit organizations.

We have advised students and continue to do so. In the meantime, it is important to ensure that the students have the space to express their views.

The City Council may wish to consider the possibility of providing a new location for the programming board, if it is determined that the current location is not suitable.

We hope that the programming board will use the funds wisely and continue to support local, non-profit organizations.

Enforce manpower protection act

By Jim O'Brien

Every motor vessel is required to have a person on board, in addition to navigators, who is expected to enforce the provisions of the manpower protection act. The act is designed to protect the workers on board against the possibility of being injured or killed.

The manpower protection act is an essential piece of legislation that ensures the safety of workers on board vessels. It is important to enforce this act, as it is designed to protect the workers and ensure that they are safe while on board.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor,

Bicyclists

Last Wednesday a friend got a flat tire in the parking lot of my dormitory. I scoffed at the idea and refused to help. The next day I realized that I was wrong. I should have helped him.

I now realize that there are many people who are in need of help and that I have a responsibility to assist them. I am sorry for my actions and I will do better in the future.

Sincerely,

Mary Gable

As things now stand, in the event of trouble, which vessel departs which harbor in which direction? It is necessary for the engineers to decide. The harbor is called Portland, Maine, and the harbor is called New Bedford, Massachusetts. It is necessary for the engineers to decide.

Then, of course, the problem arises of the direction in which the vessel should proceed. The direction in which the vessel should proceed is dependent upon the direction in which the vessel should proceed. It is necessary for the engineers to decide.

Oh, those Naught Frenchmen

Mary McGary

The first impression I had of the French character came from seeing them in action at the principal events of my high school career. It was a case of "The Bandwagon Effect"—as the French always call it. In recent events that began to matter, we could always feel the French behind us.

France is a country whose people are always ready to do their utmost. They have always been the first to make sacrifices in the interests of the nation. In recent events that began to matter, we could always feel the French behind us.

The French are a nation of strong character. They are always ready to do their utmost. In recent events that began to matter, we could always feel the French behind us.

Trustee's bid may meet staunch opposition

By JOHN TENDALL

A suit filed against the Wayne County Democratic Party by Ronald Huff, an unsuccessful May 11 trustee candidate, is designed to achieve two goals:

1. Win a judicial decision, by May 24, that will force the Wayne County Democratic Party to give Huff the same treatment, privileges, and rights that have been given to other candidates running in the May 31 election.

2. Win a judicial decision, by May 24, that will bar the Wayne County Democratic Party from giving any further action on the May 31 election until Huff's claims have been heard.

Huff, who has already begun talking to party leaders to tell them about his lawsuit, says that his suit was filed to protect the democratic processes of the Democratic Party.

"If the Wayne County Democratic Party does not give the same treatment to all candidates, it is violating the democratic process," Huff said. "The Democratic Party has a duty to treat all candidates fairly, and that includes me."

At 6:30 p.m. on Thursday, June 22, the Midland Area Tennis Club will hold the first of its annual tennis tournaments at the Midland High School tennis courts. The tournament will feature a variety of events, including asking for the second annual Gnome and Basket and a rally regatta which was concluded at Steely’s bar.

DONORS GIVE MONEY FOR MD TURF

The Michigan State University turf program is receiving a $2,000 donation from the Midland Area Tennis Club. The donation will be used to pay for the construction of a new tennis court at the university. The court will be dedicated to former tennis coach Bill Hulett, who recently retired after serving the university for 30 years.

Two entries in the Gnome and Basket event and the rally regatta were held on Sunday. Officially, the entries were missed during the Sunday event.

First ‘All Nighter’ deemed success

After a long day’s work, officials of the Midland All Nighter had a chance to relax and talk about what happened over the weekend. "Everyone was really pleased," commented a member of the organizing committee. "We definitely had a good turnout, and everyone seemed to have a good time."

Women netters place third; Hatton looks to next season

The women’s tennis team hosted the MSU women this weekend. The team did well, with the freshmen performing particularly well. Though the team lost to the Michigan State University Wolverines, the freshmen showed great potential.

The team will look to improve in the coming season, with a focus on developing young talent. The goal is to maintain a competitive edge in the conference and beyond.

BOASTS FRIENDLY SELLERS, FRESH PRODUCE

Lansing market offers family touch

Dalek Belzino, an MSU horticulture instructor, sells fresh produce and plants at a small market while illustrating a lesson on growing vegetables. Belzino, along with her mother, Karen, operate the family-owned stand started by her grandfather in 1948. Both mothers and daughters have been helping at the stand for the family still since they were children.

Dalek Belzino emphasized the age that she brings back her farm early in the season. As early as the day she is 12 years old, the family starts selling fresh produce and a southern touch is all you brought to the market.

"The market here is all family friendly," Dalek Belzino said. "Our market sells fresh vegetables and fruit. We take our products from this world and the market is not separate, but as a whole, everyone has done things." The Lansing market originated in 1880 as a small market in the city. The original market was located on Turner Street, where the market is now located today.

A year later, the city purchased the land on Turner Street, where the market now operates. The market is open year-round and is located near the Public Works Administration Building and the convention center.

The market's main attraction is its array of fresh produce and flowers. Dalek Belzino said the market offers a wide variety of fresh produce, including vegetables, fruits, and flowers. The market is open year-round from the end of May to the end of October, and is open from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily.

"The market has been around for over 100 years," Dalek Belzino said. "It's a family-owned market and we've been here for generations."

"We try to give the customer the best quality produce and flowers, and we try to meet their needs," Dalek Belzino said. "The market is a great place to visit with family and friends, and we always have something new to offer."
PAC’s ‘Peter Pan’ lacks talent, technical expertise

By DARIO GRANT
July 4, 2018 - The latest round of the never-ending battle of major operas was the world premiere of the new production of "Peter and the Starcatcher," a musical by Jack Thorne based on the novel by Dave Barry and Ted Bell. The show opened on Tuesday night at the Mark Taper Forum in Los Angeles.

There isn’t a good performance to be found anywhere in the cast of "Peter and the Starcatcher." The acting is there, the music is there, and the children are there, but the children should be given the best. "Peter Pan" should never have been part of a professional cast as a part of children’s theatre, period—only in children’s theatre.

MARTHA C. BENNETT
July 4, 2018 - The last Patrician of the Los Angeles Opera, who was the last of the Los Angeles Opera Association, has died at the age of 90. Mrs. Bennett was a charter member of the Los Angeles Opera Association and served as its president for 14 years. She was a lifelong patron of the arts and a respected businesswoman.

The arts and sciences were set up as a joint board of the association under the leadership of the Los Angeles Opera Association. Mrs. Bennett’s leadership was responsible for strengthening the association’s commitment to the arts and sciences. The theme of the association’s goals was to bring art and science to the citizens of the county.

JAMES MARSH
July 4, 2018 - The Los Angeles Opera Association has announced the appointment of Mr. Martin D. Herbach as its new executive director. Mr. Herbach, who has served as the association’s executive director since 2014, will remain in his position through the 2019-20 season.

There is a variety of graphic designers in the middle, some of whom display in other media as well. For instance, you can see work from the exhibition at 1400 N. Robertson Blvd. Los Angeles. From Hirsch & Co., a series of images of doctors in the middle, some of whom display in other media as well. For instance, you can see work from the exhibition at 1400 N. Robertson Blvd. Los Angeles.

The "art and originality" of the work is the star of the show, gallery director, and each artist is outstanding in their personal and professional work.

The event will be held on Tuesday night at the Mark Taper Forum in Los Angeles. The event will be open to the public and free to attend. It is a great opportunity for the Los Angeles Opera Association to showcase its commitment to the arts and sciences.

Questions & Answers with Mr. Martin D. Herbach

Question: What is your role as the new executive director of the Los Angeles Opera Association?

Answer: As the new executive director of the Los Angeles Opera Association, my role will be to continue the association’s commitment to the arts and sciences. I will work closely with the board of directors and the staff to ensure that the association continues to thrive and grow.

Question: What are some of the challenges you see for the association in the future?

Answer: One of the challenges I see for the association in the future is the need to continue to engage with a diverse audience. The association must work to ensure that all members of the community have access to the arts and sciences.

Question: How do you plan to achieve this?

Answer: I plan to achieve this by working closely with the board of directors and the staff to develop new programs and initiatives that will engage a diverse audience. I will also work to ensure that the association continues to showcase its commitment to the arts and sciences.

We Are An Equal Opportunity Employer
Job options cited for summer workers, job seekers

By KAT BROWN

In the heat of last summer, this nation witnessed a record number of unemployed people filling job applications. At the same time, some of our nation's largest employers reported shortages of qualified workers. The combination of things led to the formation of a nationwide network, called Workforce 2000, in an effort to bridge the gap between job seekers and employers.

The job application process can be overwhelming for many people, especially those who have never been in the workforce. It is important to remember that the number of applications you send out is limited, but the quality of those applications is crucial.

One company that is taking this approach seriously is the Community College of the Air Force (CCAF). CCAF is a major player in training and educating military personnel and their families. They have developed a comprehensive program to help job seekers and employers connect.

CCAF offers a range of courses and training programs, from basic skills to advanced technical training. They also have a strong partnership with local employers, which helps to ensure that their graduates are well-prepared for the workforce.

CCAF's success in connecting job seekers and employers has led to a surge in interest in their programs. As a result, they are expanding their offerings and looking for ways to reach more job seekers.

CCAF is a great example of how a well-planned program can help job seekers and employers find the right fit. They are committed to helping people find the training and education they need to succeed in the workforce.

For more information on how to get involved with CCAF, visit their website or contact them directly. They are always looking for new partners and ways to expand their reach.

CCAF is just one example of how a well-planned program can help job seekers and employers find the right fit. They are committed to helping people find the training and education they need to succeed in the workforce.

Major determines employment

By FRANCES BROWN

The military is a place where many people, especially young people, find opportunity for growth and development. It provides a structured environment where individuals can develop important skills such as discipline, teamwork, and leadership.

Many see military as career

By ED RONDES
Michigan State University

The military is a highly competitive field, and it is important for individuals to be prepared for the demands of service. The military provides a range of opportunities for those who are interested in pursuing a career.

Some people choose to join the military as a way to pay for college or to gain valuable experience in a specific field. Others join for the opportunity to travel and see the world. Whatever the reason, the military offers a unique opportunity for personal and professional growth.
Major determines employment

By FRANCES BROWN

Though the MEU Placement Section Follow-up Report is about 15 per cent of that done in the past, it is also true that a job is a major step in a person's life. And there is a surplus of jobs in computer work, physical sciences, accounting, health care and business. But there is a shortage of jobs in non-vocational areas, especially when recent graduates are in the picture. The problem is not that graduates are not programmed in computer work, languages, etc., but that there are not enough jobs in these areas.

Non-vocational students, and their needs are also important. The average graduate needs a job, but there are not enough jobs to go around. The average graduate is doing his best, but there are not enough jobs to go around. The average graduate is doing his best, but there are not enough jobs to go around.

Starting salaries depend on the major of the student. The average starting salary for the College of Liberal Arts is $6,600, up only $500 per year. Though the average salary for the graduate in the College of Fine Arts is $7,000, many of the graduates are unable to get jobs. The average graduate in the College of Education graduates suffer from the same problem.

Shingleton is not the only concern. "Too many people are concerned about the shortage of jobs for recent graduates," he said. "But the concern is not with the shortage of jobs, but with the shortage of good jobs."

"The shortage of good jobs is the real problem," he went on. "The shortage of good jobs is the real problem."
