Senate finishes maneuvers on Carter Cabinet

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
 The Senate Wednesday confirmed Ray Marshall as secretary of labor and approved nomination of Rep. Andrew Young of Georgia to be U.S. ambassador to the United Nations.
 The confirmation of Marshall completed the action on President Carter's Cabinet.

On Wednesday, Griffin B. Bell was named as attorney general. Bell was named by the Senate Tuesday after a debate.
 During the debate of several hours on the nomination of Marshall, conservatives criticized him for being too close to organized labor and for favoring repeal of state right-to-work laws, a major priority of the CIO.

MSU prof dies Wednesday

MSU professor died Wednesday afternoon after being rushed to Sparrow Hospital from the pool in Jenison Field.
 Department of Public Safety spokesman M. H. Chetrick, professor of mechanical engineering and chairperson of the department, was found lying at the side of the pool at noon Wednesday. He was apparently having difficulty breathing, the spokesman said.
 Official cause of death has not yet been released pending an autopsy scheduled today. Funeral arrangements will be handled through Gorsline-Runciman Funeral Home, 1730 E. Grand River Ave., Lansing.
 Marshall had been on the faculty at MSU since 1968 when he was appointed chair- man of the Chemical Engineering Department. He came here from the faculty of the University of Louisville.
 Marshall was born in New Haven, Conn., received his bachelor of science degree in 1939 at the University of Michigan and later received both his master's degree and doctorate at Ohio State University.

Texas economist, also was criticized for favoring expansion of picketing rights for construction unions.
 Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, told the Senate that Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., had been promised by Marshall that he would not actively advocate unionization of the military, repeal of the right-to-work laws or expansion of construction workers' powers. He said he hoped this was not an idle promise made just to win confirmation.

Sen. Paul Laxalt, G-Nev., said Marshall was not fit to be labor secretary because he supports repeal of controversial "right-to-work laws" which organized labor intends to make a major priority in this Congress.
 Laxalt said the repeal of section 14B of the Taft-Hartley Act, which permits states to ban union shop agreements, is the "most explosive political issue in Congress. There is no more emotional, no more divisive issue than 14B."
 Laxalt said Marshall was also on the wrong side of other issues, noting that he favors broadened picketing powers for construction workers.

Sen. William L. Scott, R-Va., said he was especially concerned about Marshall's views on unionization of the military in certain situations.

"Frankly, I do not feel the secretary of labor should attempt to advise military departments on personnel matters," Scott said. He said the military already has enough grievance procedures without collective bargaining or unionization.
 During his confirmation hearings, Marshall said there might be some merit in allowing unions to organize members of the armed forces but later seemed to back off that statement. He also said he would oppose strikes by servicemen.

The chairperson of the Senate Labor Committee, Harrison Williams, D-N.J., said Marshall was sensitive to problems of working Americans, fully understands the "scandalous conditions" of the poor and of urban centers, and has "an abundance of the attributes" to make him a strong labor secretary.
 Elsewhere in Washington, sources said Wednesday that Bill D. Moyers, a former aide to President Johnson, is a frontrunner to be named CIA director. President Carter's spokesman, however, discouraged speculation about the office.

MAY HAVE EVEN MORE POWER Mack trades legislative positions

By THE STATE NEWS
 and United Press International
 Sen. Joseph Mack, D-Ironwood, has traded a potentially powerful legislative role for another that potentially could give him even more power than before.
 After a caucus with ruling Democrats Wednesday afternoon, Mack gave up his seat on the Appropriations Committee and retained the Senate Conservation Committee chairmanship from which environmentalists demanded his removal.
 Mack had been the only Appropriations Committee member allowed to head another major committee. As the second highest senior member, he would have been in line soon for the Appropriations Committee chairmanship.

 However, the Ironwood native was named to the Joint Committee on Administrative Rules and is in line to become its chairperson.
 The rules committee chair would give him direct authority over rule-making of state agencies under a widely supported bill now pending before the legislature.

Earlier this month, Democratic senators caucused for more than three hours to discuss Mack's unique position. At that time, the Ironwood senator told the caucus he wanted to decide for himself which post to give up.
 Conflicting rumors circled the Capitol for the past few weeks about the Mack situation, with observers debating over which post Mack would surrender.
 Environmentalists were optimistic earlier in the week that Mack would give up the Conservation Committee chairmanship.

 Mack, in the past, has been charged with using his personal power on both committees to influence favorite pieces of legislation.
 He recently angered lawmakers by his biting attacks on Gov. William G. Milliken's appointees, as well as his alleged single-handed blockage of a bill to protect Michigan wetlands.

Petitions presented requesting recall of rep to ASMSU board

By ANNE S. CROWLEY
 State News Staff Writer
 A move to recall Mary Cloud as the College of Education representative to the ASMSU Student Board was made Tuesday night just as her presidential campaign is getting underway.
 Kathy Wright, the top vote-getter in the college in last spring's election who was disqualified for filing a late spending report, presented petitions requesting Cloud's recall to the Student Board at its meeting.
 If the petitions are validated, a special election will be held to recall Cloud.
 In other action, the board decided to deny office space to the Young Workers Liberation League (YWLL), the Spirit of Christ Fellowship and Campus Action; to allocate $500 to Greenpeace, a wildlife conservation group; and to retain Kirsten Frank on the All-University Elections Commission.
 Cloud called the recall move a political ploy because it came so late in her term of office and so soon before the ASMSU elections, to be held during spring term registration.

 She is a candidate for president in the election.
 "The whole purpose of this appears to be to slur my name in the campaign," she said.
 "Kent Barry, who has represented Kathy throughout the appeals, is running against me for president. It speaks for itself that they decided not to take action until now."
 Wright, however, said she did not circulate the petitions for political reasons.
 "I wanted to do it in April, but my counsel advised me to wait and go through the proper channels first," she said.
 Cloud said Wright could also have been seated on the board if she had limited her arguments to the judiciary to the fact that she turned in her spending report late.
 Wright said she argued that the All-University Elections Commission (AUEC), which supervised last year's election, was unconstitutionally composed because it was one member short and only one member was appointed by the Student Board.

 Michael Lenz, Student Board president, said the Student-Faculty Judiciary and (continued on page 13)

Dial-a-Joke callers get extra surprise

By MICHAEL SAVEL

 Readers who called "Dial-a-Joke" as a result of an advertisement in the "State News" Wednesday got a bit more than they expected.
 Recording over the telephone thanked the caller for calling Rainbow Ranch Dial-a-Joke, then reeled off two jokes in a friendly voice, followed by an advertisement for the Rainbow Ranch "Sick-of-School-Already Party" Wednesday night.
 Bell, manager of the Rainbow Ranch, did not think using the joke as a guise to attract people to the advertisement was wise.
 "I've seen it done before and we just thought we would try it," he said. "It was only a fun thing to do."
 The Rainbow Ranch name was not on the advertisement and it was only a one-inch ad and there was no room for it. He didn't purposely leave the name out, there was just no room for it, he said. "We probably would not try it again because the ad have been ringing off the hook and no one can get through (continued on page 13)

Determined resisters keep fighting IRS

By MATTHEW GRYZAN
 State News Staff Writer
 Two MSU graduates, Paul and Adeline Snyder, have conscientiously refused to "render unto Caesar what is Caesar's."
 But the price of their conscience came when their $80,000 property was auctioned off to pay $3,000 in federal back taxes and they lost several thousand dollars in legal expenses and interest.
 The Snyders, who describe themselves as past supporters of Barry Goldwater, said they didn't take a strong stance on war tax resistance until the invasion of Cambodia. In 1971, they stopped paying about 50 per cent of their federal taxes, the amount estimated by the Friends Committee on Legislation which supported the war effort with income tax dollars.

 "We put the money we would have paid in taxes into another government program, an old Office of Economic Opportunity program that deals with low income people," Adeline Snyder said.
 "In every quarterly payment we put in a letter explaining why we didn't pay the whole amount," Paul Snyder said. "The agents who come to collect didn't know why we weren't paying the money, only that we weren't paying it."
 Paul Snyder, a veterinarian who has practiced in Fremont, Mich., for 17 years, said that his being self-employed made it feasible to resist tax.
 "I am self-employed," he said, "so I had no specific employer to deal with. For most people the employer takes out taxes every week."
 "In the spring of 1975, we found the IRS had put a seizure on our property, which was our clinic, boarding kennel and home. It was about $80,000 worth of property for $3,000 worth in taxes."
 He said that the seizure papers only said that the land was on lien and that it would be put up for public

The plan would go into effect only if one-third of a company's workers voted for it and would apply only to private firms with at least 2,000 employees. The 738 companies that fall into this category employ seven million people, roughly a third of the total British work force.

Bowman resigns Senate position

LANSING (UPI) — John T. Bowman of Roseville, the hardbitten president pro-tem of the Senate and a 22-year legislative veteran, resigned his seat Wednesday to become a lobbyist.

Bowman, 55, second-ranked in seniority among Senate Democrats, said he believes his family deserves more financial security than his $22,500 salary provides.

Rep loses chairmanship

WASHINGTON (AP) — Proponents of a tough ethics code for members of Congress claimed a major victory Wednesday as House Democrats voted to oust Rep. Robert L.F. Sikes of Florida from a key subcommittee chairmanship.

caught him a hallway outside his office after the caucus vote.

He blamed the defeat on opposition to his advocacy of a strong national defense and "a growing intolerance for the people who do not support the straight liberal line of the Democratic party."

Sikes lost on a 189 to 93 vote in his effort to keep control of a panel that annually doles out millions for construction of military facilities.

The challenge to Sikes grew out of a reprimand given him by the House last year for misuse of influence in certain financial dealings.

"I'll tell you one thing, you're looking at a very live corpse... I've lost an election but I'm not dead," Sikes said to reporters who ethics of senators and other congressmen as they do in his, even though "a hundred or so of them have been accused of wrongdoing of one kind or another."

The edge by which Sikes lost in the caucus vote surprised even the most optimistic members of the reform group which viewed the case as pivotal to its hopes to create a strict code of conduct for legislators this year.

"We thought we would win but only by a slight difference," said Rep. Max Baucus, D-Mont., who managed caucus debate for the reform faction that is dominated by first- and second-term congressmen.

Baucus and other members of the group declared their victory an important boost for the effort to develop an ethics code.

Rep. Mark Hannaford, D-Calif., said it was "a victory for the cause of good government" because "what good is a reprimand if it results in no change."

Common Cause, the self-styled citizen's lobby which had campaigned for Sikes' ouster, said the House had "passed with flying colors" the first test of its public commitment to a code of conduct. A spokesperson said that if Sikes had won, "it would have been a disaster. It would have made a sham out of any premise that rules of conduct would be enforced."

Some of the reform group said they learned that Sikes, in recent days, had mounted a lobbying campaign on his own behalf with the help of defense contractors and other influential persons in the military field.

Sikes, a congressman since 1940, is third-ranking Democrat on the Appropriations Committee and, as subcommittee chairperson, would control the distribution of about $3.5 billion annually for construction of military installations, which are important in many congressional districts.

He declined to talk to reporters after his ouster by the caucus, but later issued an informal statement through aides, saying he "is still a member of Congress, respects his oath of office, and will continue to represent his constituents to the best of his ability."

Major welfare study planned

WASHINGTON (AP) — The new secretary of health, education and welfare announced plans Wednesday for a major study of the U.S. welfare system to produce recommendations on how President Carter should carry out his campaign pledge to overhaul aid programs for the poor.

on what specific reforms will be proposed.

The secretary, who was sworn in on Tuesday, also announced he plans to restructure HEW's powerful Office for Civil Rights, where he said there is "too much data collection, too little enforcement."

HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. said the recommendations will go to Carter by May 1.

"This will be an administration vigorously involved in the enforcement of civil rights for minorities, women and handicapped."

Califano, in his first news conference as head of the government's largest department, said he will take responsibility for making the decisions ping programs that include cash grants, food stamps, rent subsidies and other "in-kind assistance."

Some of these programs are administered by the states and others by the federal government.

Carter said during his campaign that the welfare system should be simplified with "one fairly uniform, nationwide payment, varying according to cost-of-living differences between communities," and financed largely by the federal government.

Carter has indicated he would "eliminate the food stamp program" administered by the Agriculture Department to give or sell stamps to low-income people who may thus purchase food in supermarkets at substantial discounts.

Califano declined to commit the advisory group to any specific course, saying, "We will look at every possible way of doing this," soliciting the views of experts and welfare recipients alike.

By involving people from Congress and throughout the various levels of government in what he termed "a first" in his experience, the new secretary said he hopes to expedite goal of getting an administration proposal through the legislative process.

In addition to HEW, departments of labor, housing and urban development, treasury and agriculture will be represented in the study group, as well as Council of Economic Advisors and the congressional committees concerned with welfare legislation.

Califano said state, city and county governments will be representative from their own Coalitions of Organizations made up of the nation's governors and other local officials.

The study group will be headed by Henry Aaron, former economics professor at Brookings Institution who has done extensive research and writing in the field of welfare, housing and education. Carter has nominated him to be assistant secretary for planning and evaluation at HEW.

In dealing with civil rights issues, Califano said F. P. Libassi, the first director of HEW's Office for Civil Rights, will return to Washington to study the office and recommend ways of improving its efficiency and enforcement.

Califano also said he trimmed the staff of the secretary and undersecretary to 160 people to about 100 plans to deal more directly with department heads and assistant secretaries in order to speed up their response to their tasks without crowding them with numerous special assistants.

He said he hopes to be able to decide whether to resign from his job in 16 government ministries.

Strikers, demonstrators protest violence campaign by Francoists

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Tens of thousands of mourners jammed downtown Madrid for the funeral Wednesday of three Communist lawyers slain by rightists. Labor strikes spread across Spain in protest of a campaign of violence by Francoists.

walked with Roman Catholic priests behind the bodies.

Labor sources said an estimated 300,000 workers stopped work nationwide to protest what newspapers have called a violent effort by followers of late dictator Gen. Francisco Franco to weaken the efforts of Premier Adolfo Suarez' government to liberalize the country.

The massive demonstrations against political violence came as the government worked to cool unrest threatening to undermine its plans for a restoration of democracy.

Reinforced police in jeeps and buses guarded key spots in Madrid to head off possible fighting between extremists of the left and right. Police reported only scattered clashes with leftist students.

Huge crowds of mourners outside the government justice building stood in silence as the funeral cortege passed by. The coffins, covered with hammer and sickle wreaths, carried the bodies of three of five Communists shot to death in a massacre Monday night.

An extreme right-wing group has claimed responsibility for the deaths of the Communists and has threatened to continue its bloody attacks.

As police stood guard, members of the Communist Politburo and other political leaders with this country's worst political crisis since Franco died 14 months ago.

Unconfirmed reports said Suarez, already under fire for two unsolved political kidnappings, might propose an expanded amnesty for political prisoners as a move to ease pressure from the left.

The extreme right-wing fears that the reform program of Suarez and King Juan Carlos will open the door to leftist participation in the government. The key reform will be Spain's first free parliamentary elections in four decades, scheduled for sometime this spring.

The Socialists, the illegal Spanish Communist party and other leftists urged their followers to stay off the streets Wednesday and downed the call for a national protest strike.

In Madrid, Maoist militants brandishing iron bars reportedly forced some small businesses to close and tried unsuccessfully to block a subway line.

More than 50,000 workers were reported idle here, an estimated 200,000 in the autonomy-minded Basque and Catalan regions and another 50,000 elsewhere across the nation.

The strikes ranged from two-hour work stoppages to full walkouts. They affected industry, schools, banks and public transport.

Miners in the Asturian region, a hotbed of anti-Franco feeling during the Spanish Civil War, walked off the job in 16 government ministries.

B1 would be costly for state, prof says

By MICHAEL MACKSOOD
State News Staff Writer

A study conducted by an MSU professor has revealed that Michigan taxpayers will lose close to $1 billion if the United States builds the B1 bomber. James R. Anderson, assistant professor of humanities, said if the B1 bomber is built by Rockwell International for the estimated $23.7 billion, Michigan taxpayers would suffer a net loss of $905 million in tax dollars. "Since Michigan pays about 4.7 per cent of the federal tax bill the estimate of $23.7 billion means the B1 would cost Michigan taxpayers $1.12 billion," Anderson said. Anderson used Rockwell's figures on how much each state would get in subcontracts and determined the net loss for each state if the bomber was built. According to the company's figures, Michigan would get $215 million in contracts.

The decision on whether or not to build the B1 will be made by President Jimmy Carter. Anderson said Rockwell has been lobbying hard for the B1 by going to each congressional district and pointing out the size of the contracts the districts will get. Besides Michigan, Pennsylvania and Illinois will also lose a lot in taxes if the plane is built. California and Ohio will be the big winners, Anderson said. California, particularly the 31st Congressional District just south of Los Angeles because it is the headquarters of Rockwell International, will benefit most. Ohio stands to benefit greatly because of the General Electric plant there. Anderson said that 42 states will lose money on the B1 bomber and only eight will benefit from its construction. Anderson's findings will give opponents of the B1 bomber more ammunition to use in the efforts to halt the construction of the plane.

"My data shows just what economies are being torn apart in order to create a new type of missile or plane," Anderson said. He said the results of his study show what an extreme inequality in the distribution of income construction of the B1 would create. Anderson said the study does not prove or disprove the contention that the B1 bomber is vital to our security and military power but, "it does force supporters of the program to look at who will carry the burden of building the plane." Anderson has done research on tax inflows and outflows in the past. Last year he did an analysis for Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wisconsin, which found that a major impact of the defense budget is a drain of taxes from the Midwest into the Sun-Belt. "I'm sure Rockwell will attack my results and say they are wrong, but I'll stand by my data," Anderson said.

State proposals for universities may be revised

By SEAN HICKEY
State News Staff Writer

Proposed state appropriations for Michigan colleges and universities for 1977-78 by Gov. William G. Milliken are only recommendations to the legislature and are subject to much revision, according to various university and state officials. Richard Bossard, analyst for the House Fiscal Agency, said the legislature has a history of appropriating funds to universities and colleges that exceed the governor's recommendations. The recommendations made by the governor must go through a six-month process involving hearings and recommendations from each House with final recommendations put into the form of bills. "The House and Senate go through months of public hearings with universities discussing their dire needs. Things could easily happen subsequent to the governor's recommendations," Bossard said. Last year MSU received a surprising increase of $20 million over Milliken's original requests, but University officials remained uncertain if a similar increase would be made this year. "It will either go up, down or remain the same. These are only recommendations of the governor to the legislature which still have to go through their approval," Elliot Ballard, assistant to the president, said. Milliken requested that MSU receive an appropriation of $117.1 million next year, which is the largest grant to any university or college in the state, up from $107 million received last year. Charles Sterts, vice president for business and finance for Wayne State University, said legislative appropriations have been traditionally close to the governor's recommendations, but said the final result was always lower than what the school originally requested from the state. "We obviously submitted a request that was much greater than the governor's proposals and we will definitely point out that difference to the legislators," Sterts said. Last year Wayne State received an appropriation that was $300,000 above Milliken's proposal and in the previous two years was given funds that were almost identical to the governor's requests. Wayne State asked for a $17 million raise this year but Milliken proposed only a $10.6 million increase to bring its total funding to $83.9 million, up from $73.3 million. Richard Kennedy, vice president for state planning for the University of Michigan, said that past proposals from the governor have been close to what the legislature appropriates to them but have the distinct possibility of increasing. "I wouldn't have the foggiest notion. It's much too early to tell," Kennedy said. "By and large, the funds appropriated to us have not deviated significantly from the governor's proposals. As a general rule we stay very close varying only a few percentage points," Kennedy said. University of Michigan requested a $29 million increase over this year's budget, but only got a $9.7 million increase under Milliken's suggestions. This would raise the budget for the University of Michigan from (continued on page 7)

FILLS CHAMBER IN HOUSE Lobby plans redlining strategy

By MICKI MAYNARD
State News Staff Writer
A group of about 250 concerned citizens met in the House chambers Tuesday night for the first meeting of the Statewide Coalition on Redlining. Detroit Common Councilmember Erma Anderson chaired the meeting, which laid out a state redlining conference March 1 in Lansing. Anderson said she wasn't surprised at the turnout, which included members of clubs and community organizations throughout the state. "Our goal is to get a package of legislation to redline," Henderson said. "We need cooperation from the legislature to get this done." About 20 legislators, a majority of whom from Detroit, attended the conference. Speaker of the House Bobby Crim, and Senate Majority Leader Jim Faust, D-Westland, both addressed the gathering. Crim and former Majority Leader Wilbur Fitzgerald, D-Detroit, were among the members of the coalition last year. The coalition came together mainly as a result of findings of Gov. William G. Milliken's task force on redlining. Anderson said she thought antiredlining legislation could be passed by this November, he said there would probably be some lobbying against the bills by financial institutions. "The action taken at the meeting will be around four committees that will be set up at the statewide conference in March. They include one on insurance and another which will decide the goals for the conference, a committee to study practices in financial, home mortgage and repair loans, and the disinvestment-reinvestment committee. Conference cochairperson Sara Foley said the disinvestment committee was the primary one. She described disinvestment as a financial practice where a bank will take resources from one neighborhood branch and invest them in other cities or states instead of in that neighborhood. One conference participant called herself a "walking example of disinvestment." She said that she had been trying for four months to get a $7,500 government-insured loan for property in Detroit, where she owns over $500,000 worth of land. "I've never had any problem borrowing money," she said. "But they don't want to give it to me because my investment is in Detroit." The Detroit real estate broker added that a dealer in the suburbs would have no trouble getting the money. "It's a matter of an 'in' with the bank," she said. "By doing this, they're contributing to the creation of slums." Detroit is not the only city with disinvestment problems, according to a local conference participant. Marge Maas, of the Lansing Coalition against Redlining, said the problem existed in this area, also. "There are a lot of things to be done that we need to look at," she said. "We need to get down to nuts and bolts." Maas said anyone in the East Lansing area who wanted to fight redlining is welcome to join the Lansing coalition. The group's next meeting will be Feb. 8 at 7:30 p.m. on the 10th floor of Lansing's City Hall. The statewide coalition will meet in the House chambers again on Feb. 17 to discuss and make final plans for the March conference.

Rise in drinking age may give 'U' trouble

By MICKI MAYNARD
State News Staff Writer

Another try at raising the legal drinking age in Michigan to 19 could cause problems for MSU students and administrators. The measure, introduced Tuesday by Sen. James DeSana, D-Wyandotte, brought a scowl from Gary North, coordinator of residence halls programs. "The raising of the drinking age could cause awkward and cumbersome problems to any colleges and universities that allow drinking in residence halls," North said. An aide to DeSana said the senator has received over 80 letters from high school principals asking for help in cutting down the drinking problem among minors.

Terry Bronson said the measure, which was unsuccessful last year, was intended to eliminate the recurring instances of drinking among minors. He said the problem, once only found among seniors when the drinking age was 21, is now hitting 13 and 14-year old freshmen. "There's quite a difference between now and then," Bronson said. "Now, everyone can get it — even little kids." Bronson cited Michigan State Police statistics that show an increase in drinking among high school seniors of 118 per cent for those under 18, and a 165 per cent increase among those 18 to 20. North said that though the bill would eliminate the problem in high schools, it would only transfer it to colleges. "There would be extensive problems for us to deal with, especially at group social events," he said. "There are 6,000 freshmen in the dormitories that are 18, and another 10,000 on campus who would then be of legal age." North said he was not in favor of raising the drinking age, especially in the light of previous drinking policies at MSU. "It's a fact of life that drinking went on here before the age went from 18 to 21," he said. "The problem then was basically overlooked." The MSU Board of Trustees permitted alcohol on campus in 1971 in rooms, suites and campus apartments. Bronson said he thought the bill had an excellent chance of passing in the Senate, since 15 senators out of 36 present cosigned it. Though he expected strong opposition from the liquor industry, Bronson added that he felt the bill would make it on this second try. Even if the 19-year-old limit causes problems at MSU, North said there was no possibility of a liquor ban. "Prohibition didn't work," he said. "What we would do would be to convene a group to determine what impact the law would have on MSU." North said a more strictly enforced system of identification at events with liquor could be one of the methods used to enforce the limit. Hearings on the bill by the Senate Commerce Committee are expected to start soon.

Groups forming to investigate new law

By SUE STEWARD
State News Staff Writer

Amid cries and protestations from bankers that redlining does not occur in the greater Lansing area, legislators, governmental agencies and concerned citizens are forming groups to investigate the "nonproblem." Why the sudden concern over something which has been happening for years? Most of it is because of a very important provision of a new federal law which goes into effect March 1. The law, known as the Home Mortgage Disclosure Act of 1975, requires lending institutions to publicly say where in the city they have lent money and for what purpose it was lent. Mortgage loans must be disclosed by census tract from each lending institution with assets more than $10 million at that time. This disclosure will be a boon to groups formed to combat redlining. The open records will enable the groups to either substantiate their allegations or have them proven unfounded. Prior to March 1, lending institutions only have to disclose mortgages by zip code locations. The East Lansing area is a prime example of how that provision was of little benefit to persons concerned about the practice of redlining. The entire area falls into one zip code area and thus, the mortgage locations could not be more closely scrutinized. However, East Lansing is divided into 13 census tracts. Disclosure of mortgage loans in these small districts may allow allegations to be founded. Redlining, the denial of credit to credit-worthy persons because of where property is located, is viewed as a contributing factor to the urban decay in cities. If individuals can not get credit to purchase or improve existing property, they are bound to decay. But, at the same time, what must be taken into consideration is the responsibility of lending institutions. They may stand to lose money invested in "high risk" districts, causing interest rates to rise for their other customers. Individuals or groups invest their money in an institution which they trust will provide a good return on the amount invested. Bankers therefore have a responsibility to invest the money wisely.

Analysis At the same time, the money coming in to banks is generally from their community, and bankers have the social responsibility to invest that money in the community to maintain a high standard of living for all. If people in blighted areas of the city are denied a loan because they live in the blighted area, the area can only grow worse. Rental properties also enter into the question, though none of the governmental agencies include rental properties as victims of redlining. But if landlords can not get funds to improve structures the rental areas will also decline. This is a particular problem in East Lansing. With the threat of rent control, banks are reluctant to invest money in rental properties. If landlords can not get the money they need for improvements, rental housing will continue to grow worse and worse and the number of rental properties will not increase. And so the student housing dilemma will continue at peak levels. A host of area groups have formed to express views on redlining — both pro and con. Citizens, bankers and government officials alike are collecting information and are preparing to launch their cases March 1. The Governor's Task Force on Redlining released its final report Jan. 12 and made several recommendations, including:

• Establishment of a new and more equitable relationship between loan applicant and lender. No standards exist governing mortgage lending decisions as they relate to the availability of credit, and consequently, of housing opportunity, in a geographic area. • Adoption of a three-point approach to develop a loan pool system which would assure the availability of mortgage credit to credit-worthy individuals for structurally sound properties located in high risk areas. • Development of broad long-term strategies to deal with the problem of urban disinvestment. The recommendations presented to the governor by the Task Force were well-researched and are pertinent, but a recommendation exists only on paper until distinct action is taken. The Lansing City Council voted last week to support the Statewide Coalition Against Redlining, but East Lansing councilmembers have not confronted the issue. They say they will make a decision on the issue if and when it is brought to their attention by residents of the city. Concerned citizens in Lansing have formed a Coalition Against Redlining and Reinvestment. This coalition has been in existence for quite some time and has periodically made its presence known to (continued on page 10)

Megalomani-Mack bullies senators again

Sen. Joseph S. Mack has let go of the power harness on the Appropriations Committee. This may be the best thing that could happen concerning the committee, but Mack has been named to another powerful committee, the Joint Committee on Administrative Rules.

Mack's possible chairmanship of this latter committee, which has already become an object of speculation, would give him direct authority over rule-making of state agencies under a widely supported bill now pending in the legislature. An air of potential tragedy will hover over the state until the future reveals what such a bush-league megalomaniac as Mack has in mind.

There is only one acceptable word in the English language for a person who forcibly uses others to gain what he wants — bully. Mack has proven to be a bully. He has proven to his Senate colleagues and to the public that he knows no limitations when it comes to the exercising of power.

Until Wednesday he had been the exception to an old caucus rule that prohibits any senator from serving on the Appropriations Committee while chairing another. An exception was made for Mack because the Senate leadership thought he wanted to control the Appropriations Committee. Foreseeing the disaster that might have developed from this act, Mack was instead offered chairmanship of Conservation and a seat on Appropriations.

So for two years Mack has meant double-trouble in the Senate. Reported vote-trading and mutual favors are the sort of thing in which Mack has dabbled, on a scale unseen since the days of Joe McCarthy.

Mack is known throughout the Senate for doublecrossing the leadership, breaking agreement after agreement with his colleagues and, worst of all, for castrating every piece of decent environmental legislation that has ever been sent to his committee.

Reportedly, Mack has used his position to create mayhem on the state's landmark Environmental Protection Act. He has released legislation regulating sand mining and single-handedly killed the Wetlands Preservation Act. Only when the committee members have reached a point of rebellion has Mack put the handle on his destructive rampage.

According to a Michigan Senate scorecard compiled by PIRGIM, Mack voted in opposition to what PIRGIM calls the public's interest on all three key environmental issues in 1975-76. Environmental legislation is not the only sort that Mack has voted against. He has also opposed Consumer Protection Acts.

For obvious reasons the notorious Mr. Mack is against political reform. He voted for the weakening of the amendment that requires government bodies to open meetings to the public.

No man is unconquerable, no matter how much power he may possess. Mack's status must be reduced permanently to that of the other senators.

The man will continue to prove himself a nightmare in the eyes of all environmentalists. No one should expect Mack to change his past method of handling legislation assigned to him. He must be forced to change his methods, and the Democratic caucus and all committee members opposing his actions should exercise their rebellious power until he does.

ASMSU room allotments shaky

The reasons given by ASMSU Student Board for refusing to give office space to two religious organizations Tuesday night are questionable at best.

The two Christian groups, Campus Action and Spirit of Christ Fellowship, were denied office space on the grounds that they had missed the deadline, that space should not be given to religious organizations because there should be a separation between church and state, and that if one religious group was given space every other religious group would also want space.

The only excuse that had even an inkling of credibility is that both groups had applied after the deadline and, therefore ASMSU would be violating its code.

But even this excuse is weakened in light of the fact that other groups, such as PIRGIM and ACLU, applied after the deadline and received space.

According to ASMSU officials, those groups were considered after the deadline because they already had office space and said they did not know that they had to reapply.

If ASMSU insists upon sticking to its code, it ought to do so in all cases.

We also question ASMSU's grounds for refusing to dole out space because the groups are religiously oriented.

Religious groups have been given space in the past and nowhere do the rules for allocating space suggest that religious groups shall be denied offices.

We might be able to understand if the groups were denied space because there was not enough room — but the space was available.

In fact, the Space Allocations Committee had worked out a schedule that would have allowed the two groups to share Room 331, an office used by various groups that only need a home base and need not spend a lot of time in the office.

The religious groups would have used the room for religious counseling and a place where people could call for Christian information. The room is presently used by such groups as the Star Trek Club, the Sierra Club and the Organization of Arab students.

It seems that if ASMSU can provide space for the Star Trek Club to worship Mr. Spock it seems they could find a place for these two groups to worship Christ.

In future decisions over the allotment of space, we would like to see ASMSU be a little more consistent when it comes to sticking to the rules, and if religious groups are to be denied space it should at least be put in writing.

LETTERS To the Editor

It's true

Ed Ronders is probably going to get a lot of flak for his column, "Reality depicts a hard lesson." (Jan. 18) but damn, ain't it so! You can take just so much of the "character building," "good sportsmanship," and "devotion and sacrifice" stories about sports, both professional and amateur.

It's good to see a little bit of the sobering truths brought to light, even if they are to be ridiculed and denied by so-called "supporters" of sport.

The Arena Theatre presentation of "Jacques Brel is Alive and Well and Living in Paris" this past weekend surpassed by far any student theater I have previously seen at MSU. Let's all hope that the Theater Department gives us much more of Betsy Baker and John Beam, who mesmerized the audience with their renditions of "Carousel" and "Amsterdam."

I wondered how this revue played to full houses for over a year at Mercy College in Detroit; now I know. Mirth-makers at MSU, this is a must that should be included in your plans for this weekend.

The MSU Faculty Associates have long advocated direct faculty involvement in shaping the future of MSU. Our efforts to bring collective bargaining for faculty to our campus are directed specifically to that end. We wish to express our support to the University Committee on Faculty Affairs for the proposal to establish a direct liaison between faculty and the board of trustees. That is a step in the proper direction.

Biased

The State News Editorial Staff has always been, at least during the last five years that I have noticed, anti-Palestinian and very biased to the Zionist side. This was clearly manifested last Friday with the cartoon that was placed beneath Kay McFadden's response to Ed Lion (a staff member who I think is very misinformed and ignorant about Third World and international events). This cartoon contained the Nazi insignia and the French president.

I would like to ask the State News editorial staff about their purpose and aim behind placing such a cartoon right after McFadden's article?

As I see it, the State News was trying to undercut Kay McFadden's article that exposes the Zionists and shows the hypocrisy behind Lion's humanitarian feelings. Is the State News trying to say with the cartoon that anyone who writes against the Zionists must be associated with the Nazis? By the way, this is the same tactic the Zionists employ when they attempt to justify their extermination of the Palestinian people.

For your information, the Palestinian people deplore and condemn the mass killings of Jewish people of all nationalities during World War II or any other time. This is clearly stated in many Palestinian publications. In fact, were it not for the oppression and murders committed by the Nazis, the Zionists would have never been able to deceive the large number of Jews they have, and as a result we would have had no Mideast problem today.

This is not the first time the State News has resorted to using cartoons to distort the truth and cut down Palestinians, Arabs, Africans and Third World people in general. I consider such a tactic very low. I would have greater respect for the State News editorial staff if they would comment with words rather than use cheap and deceiving cartoons.

VIEWPOINT: THE PRESIDENCY Ford deserves richer praise

By GUY R. SWANSON

Friday's State News editorial, "Hello, Jimmy Carter... Goodbye, Jerry Ford..." was quite correct in its summation of Carter's inaugural, but devoid of the richly deserved praise which is owed Gerald R. Ford.

Carter's inaugural was a conglomeration of nebulous rhetorical drivel, exemplifying the characteristics of his campaign speeches. His visions for America are those which many of us already hold, and represent much of what has already been said by other political leaders reflecting upon the spirit of our times. Visions are only as good as their resulting substance. Hopefully, Carter will not remain true to his enigmatic idealisms and will take the decisive action he has planned for the United States, for better or worse.

Ford rebuilt a solid governmental and political base for our country after one of the most critical and shameful periods in the history of the United States. The people of our country, and Carter, have a nation healed of violent domestic division. Ford's personal integrity, openness and hard work were the basis for the recovery of our national dignity and trust in the office of the president. A man who was thrust into the most powerful office in the world under such conditions repaired them, and handled himself with the alacrity that Ford did is truly remarkable. That fact alone demonstrated the leadership abilities held by Ford and is what he is best remembered for. He was an intelligent down-to-earth man who restored a firm steady hand at the wheel of government, and history will reward him for that.

True, Ford's pardon of his predecessor was inappropriate and the full story of the horrible scandal that brought him to power should have been searched out and all guilty parties punished. However, Watergate was successfully removed from the public concern of the business of government and we began to move forward as a nation. The growth of our country was precisely what Ford was concerned with. His other downfall was with respect to the economy, and as indicated in his State of the Union Message, was one of his greatest disappointments. Ford cannot be accused of not making efforts to improve the economy; but what leader acts he often does things that are not pleasing to him. Naturally the president hears most from those sectors which have become offended.

Best wishes and full support should be given to President Carter. He will need the best of everything during the last months of his administration, and America will continue to grow as begun under President Ford.

At the same time, the greatest respect and gratitude from a nation should be shown Ford. He will be available for consultation when Carter needs him and would make an excellent good ambassador for the United States. Knowing that Ford will still be around is something all citizens may be proud of and grateful for.

Nuclear power plant built near quake fault

WASHINGTON — It started in the quiet darkness before dawn. Two small leaks, seemingly insignificant, trickled down the canyon wall near the north end of the great earth-filled Teton Dam.

But three minutes before noon on the fearful Sunday, June 5, 1976, the 30-story dam split open, and a massive wall of water roared over the peaceful Idaho countryside. Miraculously, only 14 people died from the flood's ravages. But over a billion dollars worth of Idaho real estate was washed away. Thousands were left homeless.

Subsequent investigations indicated that the dam should not have been built at all. For the Bureau of Reclamation knew, long before a billion gallons of water backed up behind the dam, that it was a risky project. The geology was tricky, the engineering dubious. But unfortunately, Washington was more sensitive to the lobbying for the dam than to the scientific warnings against it. And so the government built a monster called Teton.

Now a worse disaster may be in the making on the California coast. A nuclear power plant is nearing completion near Diablo Canyon, just three miles from an earthquake line called Hosgri Fault.

The Hosgri Fault hadn't been discovered when the government issued the construction permit in 1968. But several eminent geologists warned that more care should be taken to locate possible faults in that earthquake-prone area.

In 1971, Shell Oil geologists announced the discovery of the Hosgri Fault. They found it by using a method, ironically, that the nuclear facility's critics had unsuccessfully urged the government to try.

Yet despite the earthquake danger, the government went ahead with the Diablo Canyon plant. It doesn't take a geologist to figure out that an earthquake could rupture the nuclear power plant. This could cause a radiation spill, with catastrophic consequences.

JACK ANDERSON and LES WHITTEN

The construction of the plant could have been stopped in 1971, of course, before the full $1.2 billion it cost to build it was spent. Now it is too late to recover the enormous construction cost; the plant will soon be ready to open. However, it still requires an operating license from the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, which is supposed to protect the public safety.

The NRC is toughening its standards to make the Diablo Canyon plant more earthquake resistant. But no human engineering could guarantee the safety of a plant on the edge of an earthquake fault.

The NRC's project manager for the plant, Dennis Allison, told us that the commission's proposed safety regulations give some comfort "but not much." He acknowledged that the site "turned out to be not such a great place."

Yet so much money and effort has been invested in the plant, and so many powerful politicians have backed it, that there is tremendous pressure to open it. Allison said the operating license "probably" would be granted.

It was also the site, according to congressional findings, that doomed the Teton Dam. But the politicians who promoted the dam and the bureaucrats who planned it have not been held accountable for the billion-dollar disaster. The Bureau of Reclamation, whose mismanagement helped to produce the catastrophe, has been left unscathed.

Congress, of course, conducted its usual investigations, but these didn't perturb Reclamation Commissioner Gil Stamm. He told some bureaucrats, as we reported last year, that he "wasn't losing any sleep" over the congressional inquiries.

Now we have discovered additional evidence of his apparent nonchalance about the dam disaster. At obscure public hearings, Stamm pooch-pooched the case, count, which had then reached only 11, total number of deaths is 11, three of which were gunshot wounds, two were stab wounds, one is a couple of days after the loss of the dam, the other two weeks after the water he reported blandly to the Water Power subcommittee.

"There have been a number of deaths," he said. "I think the drownings were a total of five, two of whom were a couple of 70s years of age who were warned to leave their home. Some time later, when they were in the water rising, they did choose to stay but it was too late. They were drowned."

It is true that the warnings reached Idaho residents in time for them to leave the flood. For this, the dam builders deserve no credit; thousands might have been drowned. Stamm assured us that and his agency are "extremely sensitive" to the Teton Dam disaster. But if the responsible bureaucrats, the NRC and the Bureau of Reclamation, had taken measures had been taken against the dam, a little less willing to issue an operating permit to a nuclear plant on the edge of an earthquake fault.

Bills would limit detergent phosphates

By NANCY JARVIS
State News Staff Writer
Two bills which would reduce phosphorus content in laundry detergents have been introduced in the Michigan legislature this session.

The first bill introduced was by Rep. Lucille McCollough, detergents and water conditioners which contain phosphorus in excess of zero per cent by weight except for a trace incidental to manufacturing that does not exceed .5 per cent.

D-Dearborn, and the second was by Rep. Sal Rocca, D-Sterling Heights.

Rocca said both bills have the same intent but differ on a few technicalities. He said his bill would allow detergents with a .5 per cent phosphorus content to be used in medical facilities and in places where food is processed. McCollough's bill does not contain this exception. "My bill is in better shape as far as being ready for action," Rocca said. "Even with the .5 per cent, it will eliminate the major part in detergents."

McCullough said she is hopeful her bill will be passed this session. She said she is working toward a public hearing in February. The exact date has not yet been set.

New York and Indiana passed phosphorus bans over three years ago, Chicago has banned it since 1975 and Minnesota's ban became effective this month. Canada has a 2.2 per cent phosphorus limit.

The Department of Natural Resources (DNR) is also working toward a phosphate ban. The DNR ban would be implemented by an administrative rule change provided for in the 1972 Public Act that limited the detergent phosphorus content to 8.7 per cent by weight.

Charles Guenther, member of the Natural Resource Commission, the policy-making body of the DNR, said he does not know whether the bills or the rules change would become effective first.

He said that both means of instigating a ban would achieve the same results. The DNR held a series of public hearings in three Michigan cities last December.

Mike Stiffler, sanitary engineer for the DNR, said the majority of the testimony at the hearings was from the Soap and Detergent Association (SDA), which opposes the ban. Those speaking in favor of a ban were the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, the West Michigan Environmental Action Council, the League of Women Voters, the Sierra Club and Michigan United Conservation Clubs.

Keith Booman, technical director for the SDA, said at the Lansing public hearing that consumers would suffer cost increases by having to wash clothes more often, use more laundry additives and repair their washing machines more often.

"No cost effective replacements for detergent phosphate are available for general laundry detergents and especially for the critical performance and public health tasks performed by automatic and industrial institutional products," Booman said.

He concluded that a phosphate ban would not be effective, anyway, since other states with bans have not shown "any observable significant change in water quality," even though reductions in phosphorus levels have been achieved. Booman said the most effective way to "minimize" point source phosphorus is by chemical treatment of wastewater.

DNR studies show that 50 per cent of the phosphorus reaching the lakes and streams is discharged from municipal wastewater treatment plants. However, the treatment plants currently in use cannot remove enough phosphorus to be beneficial. The study showed that only 20 per cent of the state's population is being serviced with water that meets the desired goal of 80 per cent phosphorus removal.

Phosphorus causes an acceleration of the aging process of lake water by increasing the growth of algae and other aquatic plants. When this happens, the taste and odor of water changes and surface scum forms on lakes.

Studies show the beginnings of this process in Saginaw Bay, Lake Ontario, Lake Superior near Marquette and Munising, Lake Erie and Lake Michigan's Green Bay.

Lockheed payoff saga continues as Tanaka goes on trial today

OKYO (AP) — Kakuei Tanaka, former prime minister, went on trial today, charged with taking bribes in the Lockheed payoff scandal that has rocked Japan's political world.

Tanaka's chief defense counsel, 76-year-old Asanosuke Kusaka, says he has gone through sleepless nights, prayer and blood pressure in preparation for the case.

Tanaka, 58, is accused of receiving $1.7 million in bribes from the Lockheed Aircraft Corp. through its agent in Japan, the Marubeni Trading Company, to promote sales of Lockheed aircraft in this country. He also is charged with violations of foreign currency regulations.

Tanaka has denied all charges. He is being tried on trial with Tanaka's former secretary, Toshimomoto, 50, and three other executives of Marubeni.

They are part of 18 persons indicted as a result of the Lockheed investigation. Heavy security has been maintained for the trial in a small district courtroom. A crowd of hundreds of curious is expected to gather.

Tanaka, once known as the "autocrat bulldozer" for his direct, aggressive manner, served as prime minister from 1974 to 1976. He was arrested in 1976, jailed and then released on bail last Aug. 17. He was re-elected to Parliament in last month's national elections.

Prosecutor Kusaka, a 76-year-old former Supreme Court justice, said in an interview he would be "a bunch" he would be asked to defend Tanaka when the former prime minister was indicted. He said he accepted, saying "much of the actual job would be taken care of by my seven younger colleagues."

But he added, "I had sleepless nights pondering important points of defense argument and my blood pressure shot up. But now I am quite all right and confident as all preparation is completed."

"Some time ago, a Buddhist priest invited me to see a two-inch Buddha statue which he said can achieve whatever you pray for. I prayed for an innocent verdict. Then Tanaka said he wanted to pray at the temple, too, and I told him 'not now.'"

The veteran attorney said this is one of "the most difficult cases I have handled," and added that a basic point will center on the "authority" of a prime minister.

The prosecution charges that Tanaka abused his authority. He could face a maximum five-year sentence on the bribery charge and up to 7 1/2 years on the charge of currency violations.

"Another thing that bothers me is the massive publicity by the press, which certainly must have bombarded the judges," Kusaka said.

Kusaka said the defendants will be assigned a waiting room to rest and eat lunch Thursday "because it would be virtually impossible" for them to step out of the court to lunch elsewhere.

He indicated the defense plans to have the former prime minister deliver a half-hour statement shortly after the court opens.

The defendants and lawyers are concerned that crowds might give them trouble in getting into the court at 9:30 a.m. Spectators are to draw a lottery for the allocation of 52 seats, court officials said.

Tech Hifi.

Here's how we guarantee your satisfaction.

Tech Hifi is the safest place to buy stereo because we guarantee your satisfaction in writing.

Here's how it works. Let's say you buy a stereo system that sounded great in the showroom, but it doesn't sound so great when you play it at home. (Because of the difference in room acoustics, this could happen to you.)

Tech Hifi will give you an entire week at home with your new equipment to decide if it sounds as good as you expected. If you're not totally pleased, you can bring it back for a full refund.

(Even if you come to the conclusion that the color of the loudspeaker grillcloth clashes with your drapes, you can return the speakers for a full refund!)

We'll also guarantee that you'll be satisfied with the price you pay at Tech Hifi. Within 30 days, if any store offering similar services advertises a lower price for the same components, we'll refund the difference (we're pretty confident of our low prices).

In Tech Hifi's experience as a stereo specialist, we've found that some people change their minds after a couple of months, wishing they had bought a more powerful receiver, or different speakers. So we have a return policy that allows you to trade in your components within three months for 100% credit towards the manufacturers' suggested retail prices on any new equipment.

Ohm ADVENT PICKERING Garrard $459

reason whatsoever. And, even after the sale is final, our return policy allows you to trade up, or to have repairs done.

All of this we put in writing, right on your sales slip.

So why risk buying stereo someplace else?

Systems on sale this week

One reason we can offer such liberal written satisfaction policies at Tech Hifi, is because we offer such great music systems. Like this $279 system featuring quality components from KLH, BSR and ADC. The KLH Model 71 stereo receiver is ideally matched to the accurate KLH 100 two-way acoustic suspension loudspeakers. It provides plenty of power, better FM reception than any receiver even near its price, and the kind of control flexibility you'd expect from KLH. The BSR 2260BX automatic turntable with a fine ADC magnetic cartridge complete the system.

And for $459, you just can't find a better-sounding system than this one with Ohm E loudspeakers, an Advent 300 stereo receiver and a Garrard 440M automatic turntable. The Advent 300 stereo receiver was designed to compete with exotic "separate" components in all respects other than power output. So by combining it with the very efficient Ohm E loudspeakers, you end up with a combination that offers the low distortion and ultra-clean FM performance of audiophile systems — with volume potential that will satisfy almost anyone. For your records, there's the precision Garrard 440M with a rugged Pickering magnetic cartridge.

KLH BSR ADC $279

And our return policy also protects you against defects. If anything goes wrong with any component within 60 days, we'll either repair it for free in three working days, or give you a new unit.

What Tech Hifi's guarantee adds up to is this:

No sale is final until seven days have gone by. Within that time, we will refund your money if you are dissatisfied for any

OPH transport system manager leaving

By JUDY PUTNAM
State News Staff Writer

When Terry Davis began as a student in January 1974 driving for the Office of Programs for Handicappers (OPH) transport system, there was only one vehicle, five students and a manual wheelchair lift.

Today the system services 20 students and has three fully-accessible green and white vans. Last term the vehicles covered 6,000 miles.

Davis, who has been transport manager since September 1974, is leaving his position this week and moving to Miami. Largely responsible for the expansion of the transport system, Davis said he has benefited from his experiences.

"I've become involved in the handicapper movement over the past three years and I've really grown from it," he said.

Davis was a student when he first began working with OPH. After he organized a campus protest against the visit from then-Vice President Gerald Ford, he said his financial aid was cut and he had to drop out of school, 30 credits short of a degree in political science. The manager position opened up and he took it.

Davis said that at the time he did not know much about technology for accessible vehicles but found out that "nobody else did, either."

Since then he has studied literature and visited companies. He renovated one van himself and contracted a local company to manufacture lifts for his vehicles.

Last summer, Davis said the Alpena school district consulted him on the problem of transportation for handicappers in outlying areas.

"I told them they could either have a separate, segregated service or make the mainline buses accessible," he said. "They did a cost analysis and unanimously decided to make the mainline buses accessible."

Davis said that it is cheaper, on a long-term basis, to run one service rather than two.

Davis has been made an "honorary handicapper" and includes himself when talking about the movement.

"We are not inferior and we deserve our civil rights just like everyone else," he said, talking about the attitude in the Lansing-area movement. Eventually, Davis said, as people age, they will lose mobility and join the handicapper movement.

"It can happen to anybody at anytime," he said. Jim Armstrong, a senior in personnel management, will replace Davis.

EDUCATION CLASSES, ATHLETICS OFFERED

Community program for all ages

By MICHAEL SAVEL
State News Staff Writer

A large number of special interest classes and an alternative to the crowded University intramural facilities are available to area residents from the East Lansing Community Education Program.

The program provides the same basic functions for residents of University apartments and off-campus students as the dormitories do for campus residents. There are programs for all age levels.

The activities are funded jointly by the University and East Lansing School Board and City Council. The resources and facilities of the East Lansing public schools are used as activity centers.

The off-campus recreation program began 15 years ago as the School-City Activity Program. It was primarily a youth-oriented sports program geared to families in married housing.

Three years ago the University was petitioned for funds to expand the program to the general community and include education activities along with athletics.

"The schools belong to the public and should be used as much as possible," said Richard Hoehlein, coordinator of the program. "The city and the University are sharing the responsibility of providing recreation and so far it has been a good merger."

The program regularly conducts surveys around the community to determine needs and welcomes suggestions for new activities.

"We have just about everything from story hours for children to senior citizen programs," Hoehlein said. "We have a 50-50 balance of University and non-University affiliated people participating."

The office found that many new couples moving into the University apartments are foreign so English language classes were established. A bookmobile now makes regular rounds into the apartment complexes because it was found that the East Lansing Public Library was inaccessible to many residents.

"The program not only helps to generate community spirit, but it helps make new families in the area more aware of what is going on in the community," Hoehlein said.

Each term about 30 different courses are offered, ranging from knitting and crocheting to Tai Chi dancing and Lamaze childbirth preparation. There are also sports leagues and open recreation time.

There is a nominal fee for each class to cover materials costs and instruction. Courses are taught by anyone who has knowledge in the field. The instructors are paid and the program welcomes suggestions from people interested in teaching a class.

"We also try to be a community information and reference service," Hoehlein said. "It is information on day-care centers, welfare and where to go to a doctor."

Last year over 5,000 people participated in 90 courses and various athletic activities.

Activities take place in Red Cedar School off Hart Road by South Complex, Stanton Elementary and the Lansing Middle and High schools.

For information and an activity schedule, contact the Lansing Community Education Center in the Red Cedar School.

Women's studies reps inspired by national Frisco conference

By SABRINA PORTER

Three members of the MSU Women's Studies group have just returned from the founding conference of the National Women's Studies Association with plenty of ideas to improve their women's studies program here.

Joyce Ladenson, professor of American thought and language (ATL), and students Jude Baker and Sherri Moses represented MSU at the conference held Jan. 13 through 16 by the women's studies program at San Jose State University in San Francisco.

Ladenson, who teaches women's studies courses in ATL, and Baker, a junior in criminal justice, co-coordinate the Women's Studies group at MSU.

Moses, a freshman psychology student, was selected by national lottery to represent undergraduate students in the Great Lakes region.

The MSU delegates wanted to learn how other groups represented at the conference dealt with problems in developing women's studies. According to Ladenson, the program here needs funds and a recognized director.

"We brought back models of programs that will help us build our own," she said.

The MSU Women's Studies program is an unofficial group of approximately 50 students and faculty who work to enlarge, coordinate and publicize women's studies courses offered in 11 departments. The program is offered as a thematic concentration, meaning that successful completion of 20 credits in women's studies will be acknowledged on a student's transcript. Under the present system, that is the group's only official recognition.

"The women's studies program at Michigan State is very rich and fairly advanced, compared to most others," Ladenson said, "but the thematic concentration format is inadequate."

"We want to move in a direction different from the past," she said. "As women's studies becomes more respected as a discipline, we'll have more opportunities to expand and improve our program."

"It will take director coordination as well as money to enable us to make use of those opportunities," Ladenson said.

According to Baker, feminists at the conference represented nearly every branch of the women's movement. Community groups, teachers at all levels, Third World women, lesbians and students organized to provide input, she said.

"It was a grassroots, democratically based conference with very good spirit," Ladenson said.

"We have the courses and the womanpower to develop women's studies," Ladenson said. "This conference will help us make it happen."

Moses was voted undergraduate head of the National Student Caucus and will serve on the steering committee of the Association's Coordinating Council as a student representative.

Baker was voted student representative to the caucus of the Great Lakes regional organization.

Barrie Thorne, assistant professor of sociology on leave, coordinated a "Women and Language" workshop at the conference.

Major schools reach a critical period

By TOM SHANAHAN
State News Sports Writer
EDITOR'S NOTE - This final of a three-part series studying the financial structure of various collegiate athletic programs.

Which way are major athletic schools going to head in college sports? The Oklahomas, Ala-bamas and Texas want continued spending with few restrictions, while the Big Ten and Pac-Eight schools are willing to follow NCAA economic measures.

Neither of the two conferences have lent support to the idea of a superconference of major schools. The idea of such a conference came about when one of the big-budget football schools resented having restrictions put on them by the CAA.

"Our feeling in the two conferences is there has to be a way to solve the economic problems within the NCAA," MSU Athletic Director Joe Kearney said. "If we are going to dress ourselves in equity, we've got to live within the rules."

Kearney

The demands of schools for unrestricted spending lends credibility to critics' claims of business and professionalism in college sports. And schools currently on probation, such as MSU, appear guilty of the same claims after receiving probation for special treatment to their athletes.

But, according to Kearney, there is a reason for large programs getting equated with business.

"Intercollegiate athletics have to be self-sustaining, because when founded by students in the late 1800s and early 1900s, it was not accepted in the school as a department," Kearney explained.

"As a result, athletics flourished under outside interests such as athletic associations or alumni groups. When the athletic departments were finally brought into the school, the new department brought its people and method of operation with them."

Athletic departments have now evolved into million dollar businesses. MSU's budget is $3.3 million and some are higher. Michigan and Ohio State have two of the highest budgets in the nation, at approximately $5.5 million.

"To maintain a self-sustaining program you have to get more and more business aspects into your operation," Kearney said. "Philosophically, our main aim is to have intercollegiate athletics as part of the school. But more pressure is brought to bear in the process of funding a program."

MSU operates a 24-sport athletic program. It is self-sustaining, except for the 13 per cent it draws from the general fund. Its other sources of income are gate receipts and the Ralph Young Fund.

Kearney says that most major athletic departments are between 75 and 100 per cent
self-sustaining.

For the future, Kearney said spending can't keep increasing unless new resources are found, because more money is needed
just to fight inflation.

"Schools have to have more money just to keep the status quo, and more money is going to be needed to pay for women's sports," he said. "If more money isn't generated there may be dramatic curtailment in the number of sports.

"Things that may happen would be a modification of nonrevenue sports. There are some creative ways that we could function. A lot of nonre-venue sports could be incorporated into one men's and women's meet, or double-headers."

Though major schools all operate in the millions, there is still a great divergence among different schools.

An act of the legislature waived all tuition for athletes in Arizona, which has helped Arizona State's and Arizona's programs grow so rapidly.

Ivy League schools don't offer athletic scholarships past a need-only basis, but the athletes are still taken care of by influential alumni with jobs.

One Ivy school has an alumni group for several of the sports that, for instance, invites the swim team to warm climate southern waters to train in.

Alumni groups are a problem for all major schools. It is becoming an important priority for an athletic department to keep its alumni groups aware of what is legal and what isn't.

"With as many rules and regulations the NCAA has, its possible to run afoul of the rules," Kearney said. "We are trying to communicate to staff members and alumni the rules of operation to minimize problems."

Minimizing problems is the right approach, as college athletics' financial problems won't be solved easily.

Spartan streak broken, Western Broncos win

Cagers battle fatigue on road

By GEOFF ETNYRE
State News Sports Writer
The little of masochistic rule-maker must have led with glee when he aged the Spartan basketball team's 1977 Big Ten schedule.

Four games with Northwestern tonight and Wisconsin today afternoon mark the and seventh contests the Spartans have played in a fortnight beginning with the 83-70
U-M Jan. 15.

The situation grows more tense when coach Jud Heathcote has the additional problem of maintaining the cagers' mental outlook after two enervating losses against Minnesota and Wisconsin.

"I don't know how long we can keep playing with the fatigue we have been without a real collapse," Heathcote said.

Sophomore forward Greg Kelsner epitomizes Heathcote's dilemma.

Kelsner has played the entire 40 minutes the last two games and has scored 24, 23 and 28 points in the last three. The output has zoomed Kelsner to the top of the Big Ten scoring race, tied with Indiana's All-American Kent Benson at 21.8 points per game.

Meanwhile, he has found time to haul down rebounds at 10.7 per game, good enough for third place behind U-M's Phil
Hubbard at 12.7 per game.

The Spartans have needed
every point and every rebound that Kelsner has made, but by the final stages of the game, Kelsner is understandably tired when he is needed most.

"I've tried using my time outs to give our starters a break, and they seem to get rested temporarily, but it just can't go on this way," Heathcote said. "Even though we get hurt going to the bench, we're just going to have to get more

MSU rolled over Wisconsin
84-61 in their Big Ten opener
Jan. 6 at Jenison.

Game time for Northwestern is 8:05 p.m. (CST) at Evanston, sin is the scheduled Big Ten game of the week at 3 p.m.

(CST) in Madison.

Jim Johnson and MSU need a better effort after the double weekend loss to Minnesota. MSU meets top-ranked Wisconsin in Madison this weekend, and must start winning soon to make the play-offs.

By CATHY CHOWN
State News Sports Writer

The MSU women's basketball team may have lost more than just a game Tuesday night, as the Western Michigan
Broncos beat the Spartans 66-63.

Western broke up a five-game winning streak for MSU and may have cost the Spartans a No. 1 seeding in the State of Michigan tournaments next March.

After an eight-point halftime lead by the Broncos, Western suddenly became hot, and before the Spartans knew it, MSU was down by 20 points. However, freshman Ann Silver came in the game for MSU and helped spark a late game surge, with three steals and three assists. With 20 seconds to go in the game, MSU came within one point of victory, but Western converted a turnover into a basket and won the contest.

Despite a poor shooting performance of 34 percent for the Spartans, Diane Spoelstra
tossed in 24 points, while Lori Hyman had 12.

"We just couldn't get plugged in - we were very cold. We were making good shots and had some good moves, but I think that our poor shooting percentage really hurt," MSU coach Karen Langeland said.

Another thorn in the Spartans' side was the fact that standout Kathy DeBoer had badly injured her ankle in a warmup the night before.

Spoelstra

"She may be out another week," Langeland said. "Losing her cost us some strength inside the key for us. Anytime you take someone out with Kathy's ability, you're going to be hurt."

MSU slipped by U-M the night before, 63-62, without the services of DeBoer, but Langeland attributed a tough schedule as part of the reason for MSU's loss Tuesday night.

The squad has had six home games in a row, and now will play an extensive road trip.
Langeland says she dislikes the schedule and added that double-header contests (games two nights in a row) after a weekend have hurt the Spartans.

MSU played last Tuesday and Wednesday nights, and played this Monday and Tuesday. Langeland feels the schedule has not given the team time to rest, and has affected the Spartans' usually good shooting percentage.

She did, however, attribute part of the loss to Western's strength.

"Western has a very strong team. I knew all along that they would be tough," Langeland
said.

Last week MSU downed Illinois State, which was nationally ranked, by more than 30 points. Illinois had beaten Western the night before by only three points.

MSU plays two away games
next week, one at Eastern Michigan and one at Adrian.

Council OKs CD fund plan

By MICHAEL ROUSE
State News Staff Writer

The East Lansing City Council has agreed to a preliminary slicing of the $602,000 federal Community Development (CD) pie.

At the third in a series of council work sessions, City Manager Jerry Coffman presented a plan Tuesday night for allocating money for the priority projects discussed by the council last week.

The CD program, administered by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), is geared to the improvement of housing, living environment and economic opportunities for persons of low and moderate income.

Fiscal year 1977-78 will be the third year of East Lansing's CD program.

The preliminary allocations discussed by the council will be finalized at Tuesday's City Council meeting. The program application will be reviewed by various regional and state agencies before finally arriving at HUD offices.

Specifically, the program list looks like this:

- $100,000 for housing rehabilitation loans and grants;
- $40,000 for a housing rehabilitation program for senior citizens;

- $50,000 for a neighborhood conservation program consultant;
- $70,000 to pay for the current staff of the CD program, including a coordinator, housing research analyst, housing inspector and data specialist;
- $29,000 for the proposed positions of compliance officer and CD secretary;
- $13,000 for operating expenses;
- $278,000 for a slew of physical improvement projects;
- $40,000 for contingencies.

Under the physical improvements category, the projects suggested are street lights, curb repairs and median strip replanting along Grand River Avenue, a neighborhood environmental improvement program, alley reconstruction, water main reconstruction, Emerson Park Development, Stoddard Park recreation equipment and playground equipment for Bailey, Central and Red Cedar schools.

construction meetings are adhered to, CD coordinator Adrienne Berry said.

Coffman said the ability of the city to monitor itself has not been what it should be.

"Mike (administrative assistant Mike Benedict) and I have let things slip by," Berry said.

The marketing of the rehabilitation assistance program was also discussed.

Councilmember John Polomsky said there may be "human relations problems" in tactfully getting people to accept the assistance in a designated target area and dealing with people who will never be able to repay the loans.

Coffman said East Lansing is not suffering from any major housing problems, judging from his thorough tour of the city.

"Evanston, Ill., was wrestling with the same sorts of problems in the 1960s," Coffman said. "If we do not do something in the way of rehabilitation, in 8, 10 or 15 years we'll see more deterioration."

Two other priority projects discussed by the council last week — an evaluation of the housing code and a study of housing costs and availability — will be conducted by the current city staff.

Regarding the use of CD funds to replace inadequate two-inch water mains in the older sections of the city with CD funds, councilmember Larry Owen asked why the cost could not be absorbed by the water authority as has been done in the past.

City Engineer Bob Bruce said that may not be the best policy, even though the project may be eligible, since the water authority is currently running in the red and city residents may be hit with another water rate increase next year.

Applications available

Nomination applications for Academic Council representatives at large are available from 9 to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday in 10 Linton Hall. Deadline for applications is 5 p.m. Wednesday.

Six student representatives are needed. Students applying will be placed in one of three categories: nonwhite male or female, nonwhite female and undesignated.

Gallery opening Hearst exhibit

(ZNS) — The saga of Patty Hearst is moving from the courtroom to the museum.

The Southern Exposure Art Gallery in San Francisco has announced plans to open what it calls the "Patricia Campbell Hearst Exhibition" on Feb. 4 — which happens to be the third anniversary of the heiress's kidnaping.

According to the gallery: "The show is an assemblage of photographs and artifacts which bear on the lives of Hearst, her family and friends . . . (including) . . . items which relate to the heiress's childhood, to the chaotic years of rebellion and to the events since her capture."

The compliance officer and secretary are new additions to the program list — different from the projects proposed by the city staff and planning commission.

The compliance officer would make sure all the federal regulations regarding such things as fair wage laws, civil rights acts, environmental reviews and pre-

Redlining law to be studied

area lending institutions.

Members of the West Side Neighborhood Association last fall took local bankers on a bus tour of Lansing areas they alleged were being redlined. The bankers responded that the alleged redlining did not exist because of geographic location. They cited other reasons as being at the base of loan denials in those areas.

Area mortgage lenders have announced the formation of a committee to "assure that no redlining occurs."

The committee, formally named the Lansing Area Mortgage Lenders Review Committee, has proposed that when any home buyer believes his mortgage was denied due to property location, he may ask the committee to review the application.

If the committee determines the reason for denial was property location, it will tell the lending institution of its decision and attempt to force the lending institution to review the application.

If the institution again declines to process a loan, the committee will try to get the person a loan with another lending institution.

The sentiment of the bankers' committee is that redlining does not exist in the greater Lansing area, but that the committee will serve to insure that no redlining occurs.

The Home Mortgage Disclosure Act will enable these interest groups to stop spinning their wheels. Access to the records of mortgages by census tracts will allow areas in which no investment occurs to be clearly seen. March 1 will mark the beginning of a concerted attack against alleged redlining practices.

Petitions for recall presented

Nonmaker, vice president for student affairs, has both the constitutional authority of the commission. Problems may arise in the wording of the petition and the number of signatures on it, said Tim Cain, a member of this year's Student Board. Cain and Barry Griffiths, elections commissioner, are petitioning for a special election to choose the College of Business representative if Cloud is recalled, but Cain said a special election cannot be held to fill a regular vacancy. The seat would have to be filled by Student Board appointment, he said.

He added that the AUEC could deem the petition invalid if it calls for a special election. He is also uncertain how many signatures are needed for a recall election. Ten per cent of the college's eligible voters are required to sign the petition and he said he does not know if secondary education majors, who are also enrolled in other colleges, but are eligible to vote in either college, should be counted in determining the number of eligible voters.

Cloud said she turned in 280 signatures and could get more if needed. Secondary education majors count toward the total number of voters. Wright will need over 500 signatures to recall Lenz said.

Recall seekers dial surprise

There are no written codes of ethics in advertising and the trend of court decisions on false advertising cases has been erratic, according to the chairperson of MSU's Advertising Association.

"There is no law against an ad like that specifically," Gordon said. "The tendency in the courts now is less restrictive and more permissive."

There is no federal law governing this type of advertising and it involves only one state so only state or municipal laws apply.

A spokesperson for the attorney general's office said this type of advertising is common and as long as what is advertised is true, it is not against the law.

When they told a joke, they did what they said they would do when it is the caller's option to hang up," said Sandra Jewell, a worker in the office. "It is just like the dial-a-prayer ads all over the place."

Whether or not this type of advertising is deceptive, the State will print the name of the company sponsoring the ad in the said Dan Gerow, the student advertising manager.

Generally, the jokes were, "Did you hear the one about the memory university? Forget it! How about the one where the teacher asked Johnny to make a sentence using the word 'forget'?" Johnny said his coat had nine buttons but he could not remember how many. "Ha Ha!"

In denying office space to the YWLL, members of the Student Board said it was a political group and could not have space since ASMSU policy states no office space can be allotted to political groups.

The YWLL had appealed the Space Allocations Committee's refusal to allocate them space last term on the grounds that they were an educational group and not affiliated with a political party. However, seven Student Board members insisted that the YWLL is associated with the Communist party.

The committee recommended that the group be added to the Library Group, four organizations which share one office.

Tim Hagle, College of Communication Arts and Sciences representative, and Dan Courtney, president of the Inter-Fraternity Council, both objected to allocating space to the group.

"Because they're Marxist and Leninist, they advocate the overthrow of the government," Courtney said. "That makes them a political group."

Tim Beard, representative from the College of Business, said the board had already admitted political groups to ASMSU offices when they gave space to the Iranian Student Association and the Offices of Arab Students, which advocate the overthrow of the Iranian government.

In denying space to the Spirit of Christ Fellowship and Campus Action, some members of the board, including RHA president Terry Borg, said they also did not want office space given to religious groups.

"We'll open ourselves up to all kinds of religious groups, like moonies or whatever," Borg said. "Who knows? The Young Workers Liberation League could claim they're a religious group, praising their Gods of Marx and Engels!"

Alisa Sparkia, College of Arts and Letters representative, said she objected to allowing the two groups to petition for space after the deadline when every other group on campus was not given the opportunity.

James Haischer, ASMSU Comptroller, said there was simply not enough space in the Library Group office. He said he was concerned about the safety of materials left there, the possibility of tying up the phones and the lack of equipment for everyone in the office to use.

Student clubhouse proposed; campuswide support urged

A proposal for a student club on Lake Lansing was presented to the Council of Graduate Students (COGS) Monday night by Russell L. Rivet, MSU associate director of intramural sports.

Plans include the purchase of the Dells property, on which a clubhouse already stands, and the expansion of the facilities to 25 acres.

Activities that would be offered include swimming, sailing, canoeing, softball, ice skating, ice-boating, cross-country skiing, downhill skiing and courts for horseshoe, volleyball, badminton, basketball and tennis. Picnic areas would also be developed.

Inside the 150 foot by 100 foot clubhouse a bar, snackbar, pool tables, shuffleboard, table tennis, locker rooms, showers, sauna room, a meeting room, areas for dancing, concerts and roller skating are planned. Seating capacity for the clubhouse is 1,000.

The club would be open to all MSU students for a projected membership fee of $10.

$75,000 is needed to start the project and the total cost is estimated at $300,000, according to Rivet. Profits would go back into the University sports clubs.

A spokesperson for the Sailing Club said that so far the administration has put their decision "on hold" so they are seeking support from student organizations.

COGS is the first student organization outside the sports clubs that Rivet has approached.

"Students need to rally behind it," said Rivet. "Students should have their own club."

Rivet said the club would mean more jobs for students. Approximately 30 to 40 jobs would be available, including security, running boats and operating the bar.
