Buffalo continued to feel the whip of high winds Sunday, two days after a blizzard spun off Lake Erie, paralyzing the area.

'The streets are still a total disaster, but they're working to get them clear as fast as they can," said Rob Nett, a member of the Erie County sheriff's volunteer patrol.

"It's terrible. The winds are still continuing and there's a lot of people stranded yet," he said. Winds of 20 miles per hour were expected to increase to 30 to 40 miles per hour. The temperature was not expected to rise even into the teens.

illegal 'U' residence hall tripling may be

By PAUL NOVOSELICK State News Staff Writer

MSU's tripling policy, designed to accommodate overassignment in residence halls, may be illegal, according to a recent opinion by Atty. Gen. Frank Kelley.

In the opinion, requested by the Michigan Department of Labor, Kelley asserted the state's right to inspect boilers at the University of Michigan to insure they comply with state health and safety standards.

"State universities and colleges are required to comply with the provisions of a statute enacted to protect the public health and safety," Kelley said.

The question remains whether certain sections of the Michigan Housing Law apply to MSU's campus housing policy, specifically sections designating the minimum amount of space required per occupant.

It was this contention, on the part of ASMSU in the fall of 1974, which resulted in a lawsuit being planned against the University to stop tripling. ASMSU wanted to limit residence hall rooms to normal occupancy

The Michigan Housing Law, passed in itself as "An act to promote the health, safety and welfare of the people," and it defines standards and "fixes penalties for the violation thereof."

Analysis

In the ASMSII suit of 1974 they cited two sections of the law which, they said, implied that MSU was in violation of the Michigan Housing Law.

Section 125.485 of the law states that "No hedroom or room used as a bedroom in any Class B multiple dwelling shall be occupied as to provide less than 500 feet cubic air space per occupant, exclusive of the cubic air of bathrooms, toilet rooms and closets.

A Class B multiple dwelling is defined by Section 125,402 of the law as to be occupied by an individual "more or less" temporarily. The lodgers, who may or may not be served le in rooms with no cooking or kitchen facilities

Many rooms on the MSU campus have less than 1,500 feet of air space, making their occupancy by three people in violation of the law. Some even have less than 1,000 feet of 1917 and amended numerous times, defines cubic air space and have been used for triples

Tripling is much more frequent fall term when enrollment is at the yearly peak, and the number gradually reduces as students leave the University. There are only about 10 involuntary triples now, according to Bob Underwood, residence halls manager. The number has been reduced from nearly 500 triples fall term. Charles Massoglia, president of the Off-Campus Council at the time of the ASMSU suit, said that suing MSU is difficult Massoglia dislikes MSU's policy of requiring freshmen and sophomores to live on campus (though sophomores may waive the requirement). He feels the requirement has nothing to do with the educational aspect of the University, but is only used to fill the residence halls.

Though ASMSU gave up its suit after MSU allowed sophomores to live off campus in 1974, the question still remains if it is legal for MSU to continue to triple students because of lack of sufficient dormitory space.

asked if the State Housing Law would prohibit tripling, they refused to give their opinion on legal grounds. An opinion by the attorney general can only be given when requested by a legislator or if a case is pending in court

University educational autonomy is provided through constitutional provisions, but that independence ends with education. Kelley's opinion reinforces the responsibility of the University to obey health and Human ecology college grows in enrollment, but not in funds

This is part of a State News series examining the effects of the budget crunch on the individual colleges.

By SEAN HICKEY

State News Staff Writer

Even though the College of Human Ecology is the third oldest college at MSU, it has experienced one of the largest growth rates in the University occurring over a period of economic and budgetary difficul-

In 1970 the College of Human Ecology underwent a reorganization of both its curriculum and departmental structure and since then has accommodated a 40 per cent enrollment growth in its academic programs. Meanwhile, funding for the college has not been able to keep pace.

Lois Lund, dean of the College of Human

Ecology, said that enrollment for undergraduate programs has increased by 30 per cent while that for graduate and doctorate studies has grown by 50 and 65 per cent, We have not had funding comensurate to our growth rate. Our faculty has remained relatively stable while our academic programs have increased significantly," Lund

To meet the economic strain, the college has increased class sizes, reduced individual student attention to group work and has eliminated temporary faculty and reduced graduate assistantships.
"We have done fairly well in retaining the quality of our faculty and professional staff, but have reached a critical point in maintain ing this," Lund said.

Because much of the enrollment growth has been in graduate and doctorate programs, which requires more expensive curricula and higher cost per student, the economic strain on the college has been even greater, according to Lund.

Growth in academic programs in the College of Human Ecology since 1970 has been paralleled by the expansion of research programs and the college's increasing involvement with the MSU Cooperative Extension Service made through the Family Living Education and 4-H Youth programs, which reach over 550,000 families each year. "Programs in the College of Human Ecology are growing, but at the same time we have had several dollar withdrawals since 1970. Some have been temporary, some permanent," Laund said. The College of Human Ecology, which has an enrollment of nearly 2,400 students, received a 1 per cent budgetary cutback this year as part of the University retrenchment program. While the college's budget is contracting, it is also being plagued by a severe limitation of space.

According to Lund, the college is requiring a greater need for laboratory and work space as a result of increasing research and growth of child-care centers. Last fall one of many child-care centers worked through the College of Human Ecology was evicted from the Quonset huts located south of Jenison Fieldhouse because of fire hazards.

Since then the center has been temporarily located at the Clinical Sciences Building and is having trouble finding a new lcoation. Besides a space problem, the Human Ecology Building is one of seven buildings on campus that have been labeled unsafe by the fire marshall after the building suffered a devastating fire two years ago that shocked the University.

In past years the College of Human Ecology has been able to secure an increasing amount of outside funding which has been responsible for much of the college's growth. But while the additional funds have added flexibility to the budget, it has also created an additional strain on space and faculty work loads. "Everyone is working above faculty expectations and I'm concerned that our faculty sometimes can't find the time to continue their professional development,"

Bombs carried IRA 'signature

LONDON (AP) — Scotland Yard chiefs believe a weekend bombing blitz in London may have been a one-shot assault carried out by a special squad of Irish Republican Army guerillas from Northern Ireland, sources reported Sun-

One unexploded bomb bore the "signature" of an IRA bombmaker known to be active in Northern Ireland, Scotland Yard sources said.

Twelve bombs, five of them incendiary, exploded over a five-hour period early Saturday in the Oxford Street area, one of Europe's busiest shopping districts. The bombs damaged stores and employment agencies, but only one person, a taxi driver, was injured.

The London bombings coincided with an even bigger blitz in violence-torn Northern Ireland — 17 explosions or firebombings in seven towns, including the capital of Belfast. Two boys were injured.

An anonymous caller, using a codeword given by IRA bombers in earlier attacks, telephoned a British newspaper and said the London attacks were the work of the Provisional wing of the largely Roman Catholic IRA.

Mondale arrives in Japan

TOKYO (AP) — Vice President Walter F. Mondale, making the final stopover on his 10-day international tour, arrived here Sunday to sound out Japan's Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda on major diplomatic, economic and security issues.

The talks in Tokyo are the first opportunity for the Carter Administration and the new Japanese government to meet face to face.

Fukuda, who took office in December. told a news conference that joint efforts to stimulate the world economy will be at the top of the agenda in his Monday meeting with Mondale at the prime minister's official residence.

Prisoners end hunger strike

TEL AVIV (AP) --- Arab prisoners in an Israeli jail have ended a hunger strike which lasted more than a month, prison officials said Sunday.

About 400 striking prisoners had demanded changes in the Ashkelon Prison, including less crowded cells, more time in the prison yard, better food and more frequent family visits. The Red Cross had supported some of the demands.

A prison spokesperson said no concessions were made to the strikers. "Our position was that as long as the strike continued, we would not consider any of the prisoners' demands," he said.

The strike ended about a week ago, he said, after jailers isolated its ringleaders. Striking prisoners were force-fed a mixture of milk and vitamins and there were no deaths, he said. Arab officials in Gaza confirmed there had been no

Zambian seeks Western support

The Zambian leader opened the 28th session of the Organization of African Unity Liberation Committee Saturday with a warning that opponents must be ready to use every means and cooperate with any forces in the world to end white minority rule in Rhodesia.

"Africa must know that in the event of a real, bloody, racial war in southern Africa, the West will not be counted on the side of the oppressed. We wish they would, but history shows that they will not," Kuanda was quoted as saying.

Kuanda called on Britain and the United States to apply full sanctions against Rnodesia and he asked the Carter Administration in Washington to end imports of Rhodesian chrome.

Girl Scouts endorse ERA

NEW YORK (AP) — The national board of directors of the Girl Scouts of American endorsed the Equal Rights Amendment on Sunday.

A spokesperson for the organization said it was the first time the Girl Scouts had ever made an endorsement on a political issue.

"The special Committee on Public Issues is aware that a critical time has come in the ratification process of the Equal Rights Amendment and therefore the committee recommends that the board formally endorse ERA," said Creighton Abrams, chairperson of the committee, just before the board made the endorsement

"The rationale behind passage of today's motion follows the national board decision last year that 'Girl Scouts of the USA 'must be actively involved in current issues which will have an impact on the lives of our girls as they mature into womanhood," said Gloria Scott, national president of the Girl Scouts.

Ann Arbor man defends Nixon

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) - A nursing home owner has assumed trusteeship of the President Nixon Justice Fund, replacing Rabbi Baruch Korff who is stepping down largely because of ill health.

Lloyd Johnson, 54, said this weekend that he will be a custodian rather than a fund-raiser in accordance with the wishes of former President Richard M.

Johnson met for 70 minutes in November with the former president and said Nixon told him he is confident he "would be able to take up and do for himself what others had been doing for him."

"He (Nixon) said he never believed that things should be done for a person that a person can do for himself," said Johnson

Korff started the fund in 1973. The money now pays lawyers to help Nixon regain from the government some of the 42 million personal papers he accumulated while President.

Johnson operates nursing homes in Novi and his hometown of Ann Arbor.

Pope Paul's comments were an apparent answer to critics of a document issued Thursday by the Vatican Congregation for affirming the ban on priestly ordination of women. The document was issued on the Pope's orders.

The world leader of Roman Catholicism said the woman priest issue has been made unduly fastidious by forms of unmoderate fem-inism." "The true reason for the

"It cheapens those who go out and do the job and get elected as precinct delegates," Ramey said Sunday. "All of a

However, Ramey's amendment was voted down and the proposed rules were adopted.

Ingham County Commissioner Jess Sobel, D-East Lansing, said Sunday that this issue has been raised continuously within the party, and the issue often has labor and students in

"We can always find students to fill the vacancies," Sobel said, "and this gives students more votes and labor less."

Phosphate ban long overdue

Legislation that would improve facilities and in places where food the quality of water in Michigan is long overdue.

Two bills that would reduce the phosphorus content in laundry detergent have been introduced in the Michigan Legislature, but only one such bill is necessary.

The main intent of both bills is the same - to prohibit the sale or distribution of laundry detergents and water conditioners that contain phosphorus in excess of zero per cent by weight except for a trace incidental to manufacturing that does not exceed .5 per cent.

The sponsors of both bills admit that the bills are basically the same and only contain some very minor differences. These differences ought to be worked out soon so that such vital legislation is not slighted in minor nitpicking.

One of the bills, introduced by Rep. Sal Rocca, D-Sterling Heights, would allow detergents with a .5 per cent phosphorus is processed.

The first bill, sponsored by Rep. Lucille McCollough, D-Dearborn, does not contain this exception. However, she said such an exception may be included in her bill after a public hearing is held on Phosphorus causes an acceleration of the aging process of lake water by increasing the growth of algae and other aquatic plants. This causes the taste and odor of water to change and surface scum forms on lakes.

New York and Indiana have had phosphate bans for over three years. Chicago has banned it since 1975 and Minnesota banned it just one month ago.

Critics of the proposed phosphate ban, such as the Soap and Detergent Association (SDA), say consumers would suffer a cost increase because they would have content to be used in medical to wash their clothes more often, use more laundry additives and repair their washing machines more often.

McCollough said, however, that she does not think there is any substance to that argument. She said that is "only an excuse and a very poor excuse at that.'

But even if a cost increase occurs, and that is questionable, it would be worthwhile if it means an improvement in the quality of our

The idea of reducing the amount of phosphate in laundry detergents is supported by the Department of Natural Resources, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, the West Michigan Environmental Action Council, the League of Woman Voters, the Sierra Club and the Michigan United Conservation Clubs.

We look forward to this proposed legislation becoming law soon because the declining quality of our water involves high stakes.

Gandhi's intentions questionable

Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's release of political prisoners, the lifting of the press censorship and her proclamation to the people that the election delay will end this March seem all too good to be true.

When Gandhi invoked unlimited emergency powers some 19 months ago, she took the vital first step in organizing a dictatorship in India.

Because of an alleged widespread conspiracy against the government, Gandhi's 1975 crackdown on political opponents meant the arrest of over 3,000 Indian citizens. The newspapers were also heavily censored. Gandhi's biggest fear was her conviction by a local court for violating election laws.

Taking care of this problem last November, an amendment was passed strengthening Gandhi's dictatorial powers.

The amendment to the constitution meant the abolishment of any political freedom for India's 600 million people. It tossed to the wind any form of a constitutional safeguard protecting individual rights of citizens. The amendment also barred the courts from reviewing any other amendments like this one.

A few weeks ago Indira Gandhi overgenerously relaxed the emergency, telling her citizens that they will be able to go to the polls under "guided democracy" this March and cast their votes for the candidates of their choice.

To some this seems to be an indication that India is returning to democracy. Let no one be fooled, least of all India's people. Indian citizens still do not have the right to criticize the prime minister. There is no guarantee of press freedom and the emergency by no means been lifted, merely relaxed,

How can a free election take place in a cou where an amended constitution limits the pown the president, while at the same time aggrand the personal status of the prime minister?

Almost two years after the emergency enacted, political opposition has been seven stifled. India's people have existed stripped of civil liberties, including the right of habeas on

Holding the elections in March gives most pur only two months to organize. Needless to say, to very little time for any effective cam regrouping to take place.

Shortly after the emergency was declared, G said, "My intention is not to destroy but streng democracy." Perhaps Gandhi's idea of democracy is differs greatly from what the per India believe it to be.

Lifting the press censorship and releasing la political prisoners represents some some beginning. The unanswerable question remains beginning for who?

Is Prime Minister Indira Gandhi simply tryin prove to her worldwide critics that India is inde democratic state? For it is highly inconceivable why she would now decide to act in the interest people — a people whose civil liberties and rights has neglected and ignored in the past for her personal attainment.

I see that once again the Palestinians and the Zionists are going at it in the editorial forum. I'm getting pretty tired of the whole thing. Let me explain.

For a while I had a roommate who happened to be Jewish. Then I moved and a roommate who happened to be Palestinian. During this time, I heard "I detest the killing that goes on, but we have to retaliate — look what they did to those school children," "The land is historically ours," "They are intent on exterminating our race," and the clincher, "We were there

The funny thing is - I heard it exactly the same from both sides.

Correction

The Jan. 21 edition of the State News contained an incorrect effective date for the individual item pricing/advertising law recently signed by Gov. William G. Milliken. The correct effective date is Jan. 1, 1978, rather than April 1, 1977, as given by the State News.

This confusion may be because April 1, 1977, is the effective date of Michigan's Consumer Protection Act.

Consumers having questions on either law can contact the Michigan Consumers Council for additional information, Michigan Consumers Council, 414 Hollister Building, Lansing, Mich., 48933. Linda Joy

Carter proves he can walk, chew gum too

Art Buchwald

WASHINGTON - Everyone in Washington is still talking about President and Mrs. Carter's walk from the Capitol to the White House, and Carter watchers are still asking, "Why did he do it?" The obvious answer is, "Because it was there."

The President made the walk in 35 minutes and 10 seconds — a new world record for a head of state. He would have probably even broken that if Amy hadn't had to stop and tie her bootlaces along the

This, incidentally, was not the first attempt by someone to walk from the Capitol to the White House. In 1957, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Gerard of Tampa, Fla., started out from the door of the Senate building and were making excellent time until they were mugged at 7th Street and Pennsylvania Avenue.

In 1961, Ezra Beatleman of Racine, Wis., decided to see if he could make it. Following almost exactly the route the Carters took along Pennsylvania Ave. in the middle of the street, Beatleman was almost halfway there when he was hit by a Washington express bus and thrown through a window of the Post Office Building. He spent three months at George Washington Hospital and upon his release was given 30 days in jail for jaywalking.

This discouraged people for a little while from walking along Pennsylvania Avenue until 1967 when four Vietnam protesters decided to try it. They were making good time until they passed the FBI building. J. Edgar Hoover happened to be looking out his window. He flew into a rage and 200 FBI men surrounded the protesters and charged them with walking by the FBI building

In 1970, Gerald Timmons of Chevy Chase, Md., had a few drinks and when he couldn't find a taxi he decided to walk the famous route taken by the Carters. Unfortunately, he chose to do it during rush hour and it took an hour to get across 14th Street and Pennsylvania. This discouraged him and, though he was within a few blocks of his he said the hell with it and stepped into Bassin's Bar where he spent the rest of the evening.

Five Cubans hired by the Committee to Re-elect the President were the next people to try the walk. They made it to the White House without incident where they received orders to continue walking on to the Watergate Headquarters of the Democratic Party where they were captured.

Had they not stopped at the White House to rest, their walk would never have been traced to President Nixon's staff and Nixon might have been the man last Thursday to turn over the keys of 1600 Pennsylvania Ave. to the Carters.

The most interesting attempt to walk from the Capitol was made by Congressman Wilbur Mills and his party who decided to do it in October 1974. Mills got off to a good start, but he took a wrong turn at 8th Street and wound up at the Tidal Basin instead. Since it was two o'clock in the morning and a dark night, he mistakenly thought he was at the White

He suggested to one of his party that she take a swim in the White House swimming pool. Much to his chagrin he discovered they weren't at the White House, and everyone knows what this simple mistake cost the Arkansas congressman.

When President Carter decided to take the walk, his aides and the Secret Service tried to talk him out of it. But he was adamant and told them, "I have to show the country I can walk and chew gum at the "strange and hitherto impenetrable world" (the very words of the dust-jacket review) diminishes the author's achievement. As she herself says, Those of us in the first American generations have had to figure out how the invisible the emigrants built around our childhoods fit in solid America."

As a child in a culture that practiced female infanticide, she was given contradictory training. She was to grow up into a slave and a wife, and was informed in proverbs of her worthlessness: "Feeding girls is feeding cowbirds; better to raise geese than girls." Deeply resentful, she breaks with her parents at the climax of the book when they maneuver to match her with a wealthy, mentally-retarded boy whom she despised. But despite this traditional denigration of women, Kingston's mother also filled her with tales of high achievement, of brave warrior women who their villages and saved avenged their wrongs. This was Kingston's fantasy as a child: to replace her father in combat, to ride a white horse and lead armies of her people against their enemies. As part of her transformation people's champion, her father with sharp knives cuts into her back the ideographs describing the wrongs they had suffered However, in the book's climatic scene, Kingston seemingly rejects this dream for a more solid America: "I'm going to college. And I'm not going to Chinese school anymore. I'm going to run for office at American school, and I'm going to join clubs. ... And I don't want to listen to any more of your stories; they have no logic. They scramble me up. You lie with your stories. You won't tell me a story and then say, This is a true story,' or 'This is just a story.' I can't tell the difference. I don't even know what your real names are. I can't tell what's real and what you make up."

ndependence during this classic break between gen erations is not fully realized however, for Kingston could not escape her childhood. As she says, "China still doublebinds my feet." Her self-esteem remains low, aggravated by her failure to become a fabled warrior — she even believes her fellow villagers look at her "as if I had failed them." Identifying closely with an outcast aunt in China who in response to the family's "rare urge west" had, by committing adultery, "crossed boundaries not delineated in space, Kingston writes this book to redeem herself, "The swords woman and I are not so dis similar," she says in an early intention? One would expect from such words as "chink" and "gook" that she would direct much anger at the white culture which had made difficult for her and her impoverished family. But though, indeed, this is a savage, fierce book as has been frequently noted, its overt anger is directed mainly against the author's parents, and its ferocity and savagery are most eloquently found in the brutal stories of the villagers in China wreaking vengeance on their own: when they, fearing attacks from Jananese planes, stone a crazy woman to death whose hat of mirrors, they believe, signaled the enemy; when they, appear ing in masks one night, punish her aunt's adultery by destroying the family farm, driving her aunt thereby to drown herself and her newborn child in a well. She was a "spite suicide," says the author, "drowning herself in the drinking water."

Her aunt's fear of being alone, "unprotected against space... without home, without a companion, in eternal cold and silence" - is this a projection of Kingston's own fear which impelled her to rediscover a once-rejected past? But the curious void at the book's center - of unfulfilled intention nonetheless remains; and though this finally detracts from the artistry of her work, it does reveal the essential conflict of being Asian-American. In her last pages, Kingston revealingly amends her childhood fantasy: "...I was white and had red hair, and I rode a

In the secure world of her family and villagers, the only human beings were Chinese. All others, with the possible exception of Japanese, were "ghosts," fearful, lessthan human creatures without substantial reality. One must be strong and brave like Kingston's mother in order to overcome ghosts; but when one Americanized and loses his fidelity to the old ways, one also becomes a ghost. This is what the fragile and delicate Moon Orchid, another of Kingston's aunts, discovers when she emigrates to America to reclaim a husband she had not seen for 30 years. A prosperous surgeon in Los Angeles who had supported her financially during this time, he had since remarried; but Moon Orchid, according to traditions, remained his first and principal and therefore, says Kingston's mother, deserved to treated accordingly. But Moon Orchid is tearful and speechless during her en-counter with her youthful husband who emerges in a dark, Western suit, smelling and looking like an American. "It's a mistake for you to be here," he says. "You can't belong. You don't have the hardness for this country. I have a new life." The rejected woman is "so ashamed. she held her hands over her face. ... Her husband looked like one of the ghosts passing the car windows, and she must look like a ghost from China. Kingston hated herself for her silence and timidity - how different from the swords-

She hated especially a Chinese girl who was even more silent and passive than she, who in their 12 years of school together never said a word. Draft resisters planning protest

TORONTO (AP) - More than 300 U.S. draft resisters and deserters from as far away as Sweden and France met here this weekend and denounced President Jimmy Carter's amnesty program.

Steve Grossman, an organizer of the conference, said some of the war resisters would travel to Washington for a 10-day vigil and fast beginning Tuesday to dramatize their opposition to the Carter plan. It offers pardons to almost all Vietnam war-era draft evaders but not to deserters.

Tom Nagel, a deserter who has lived in Paris for four years, said the meeting "proves there is universal support for full amnesty. We'll force Carter to

Grossman repeated the com plaint of many expatriates that most draft evaders were white and middle class and that poorer, less-educated youths who objected to the war resisted only at the last moment by becoming deserters

"There are 30,000 military deserters still subject to arrest and some 792,000 Vietnam veterans who received less-thanhonorable discharges that prevent them from getting jobs, veteran benefits, loans or insurance," Grossman said. He is the publisher of Amex-Canada, a periodical for American war

Grossman said the Washing ton demonstration would focus on the plight of veterans with less-than-honorable discharges. Supporters of full amnesty say many veterans received had conduct, undesirable or other less-than-honorable discharges because of antiwar activities.

Grossman and the other Americans at the meeting did not give their hometowns.

It was not clear how many, if any, deserters would risk arrest by going to Washington for the demonstration.

Carter has asked the Defense Department to study the deserter situation and the possibility of upgrading some less-than-honorable discharges.

Research spreads to private industry

By JEREMY RIFKIN

Pacific News Service
WASHINGTON — Recombinant DNA research - the controversial technique to create new forms of life - is quietly spreading from academia, where it has been vocally debated and at least partially regulated, into the research and development laboratories of American business.

There the research is being conducted in an atmosphere of almost air-tight secrecy, which, according to Medical World News, is "reminiscent of the atmosphere surrounding biological-warfare research a few years ago."

The technique involves fastening together DNA segments (the basic material determining the hereditary characteristics of life) from different organisms. Critics contend that such experimentation poses imhealth and safety problems, deep moral and ethical questions, and is being conduct ed almost entirely free of government supervision.

"As of now, there is no federal agency that is looking at research being done by private industry in recombinant DNA," said Dr. Bernard Talbot of the National Institute of Health (NIH), the agency charged with overseeing the federal government's new Interagency Committee on recombinant DNA. "We have no registry (of companies involved in this field.)"

But according to many highlevel government, scientific and industry sources, seven major U.S. pharmaceutical companies are now or will soon be conducting recombinant DNA re-search: Miles Laboratories, Eli Lilly & Co., Hoffman-LaRoche, the Upjohn Co., Merck, Sharpe & Dohme Research Laboratories, Pfizer, Inc. and Abbott Laboratories.

They are expected to apply for patents on the new forms of life they develop.

Nine other corporations in volved in drugs, chemicals and agricultural products are investigating potential applications of recombinant DNA: Cetus Corp., CIBA-Geigy Corp., DuPont, Dow, W.R. Grace and Co., Monsanto, French Laboratories, Wyeth Laboratories and Searle Lab-

Spokespersons for the seven pharmaceutical pharmaceutical companies, while not outrightly denying their involvement in recomb nant DNA research, are reluctant to acknowledge it.

Tom Craig, public relations representative for Abbott Laboratories, said his firm has no intention of informing the general public about Abbott's ac tivities in the field, "because it's often difficult to obtain an understanding of what is being done. It creates more alarm than is justified."

Officials of most of the six other companies refused com-

Under existing NIH guidelines for university DNA research, scientists must disclose all their plans in advance. (Two universities. Stanford and the University of California, have applied for patents on their DNA recombination processes.)

But there are no such guidelines for private industry, and industry leaders say they would find them unacceptable "If you disclose your research plans, you lose your right to patent," explained Dr. Jerome Rimbaum director of Merck. Sharpe & Dohme Laboratories.

A survey of public officials in four cities where private recombinant DNA experimentation is being conducted — Rochester, N.Y.; Kalamazoo, Mich.; South Bend, Ind.; and Nutley, N.J. - revealed that none were aware of such re-

Hamilton pointed out, for example, that while the Upjohn Laboratory was "within three blocks of where I'm sitting," he had not been informed by the company of its work on recombinant DNA.

Breakthrough to What?

While most scientists agree that recombinant DNA is one of the most important scientific breakthroughs in modern history, they vociferously disagree

Cancer Research are deeply concerned that a new "Andromeda"-type virus for which there is no known immunization might accidentally be veloped and spread a deadly epidemic across the planet — or that a new, highly resistant plant might be developed that could wipe out all other vegetation and animal life in its path. They argue for a complete

A prominent recombinant DNA researcher at the Stanford University School of Medicine believes such experimentation could result in creating major new food crops that can obtain nitrogen from the atmosphere rather than from fertilizer. Or it could lead to cheap and efficient production of vitamins, antibiotics and hormones and a new form of medicine - gene therapy - to treat crippling genetic diseases.

On the other hand, scientists are deeply concerned that a new "Andromeda"-type virus for which there is no known immunization might accidentally be developed and spread a deadly epidemic across the planet - or that a new highly resistant plant might be developed that could wipe out all other vegetation and animal life in its path.

as to whether the potential benefits of even the most restricted experimentation outweigh the grave potential dangers to human life and the environment.

Paul Berg, a prominent recombinant DNA researcher at the Stanford University School of Medicine, believes such experimentation could result in creating major new food crops that can obtain nitrogen from the atmosphere rather than from fertilizer. Or it could lead to cheap and efficient production of vitamins, antibiotics and hormones and a new form of medicine - gene therapy - to treat crippling genetic diseases. Guidelines Without Muscle

While the NIH has drawn up guidelines for government-funded recombinant DNA research, it has no power to enforce them.

The Center for Disease Con trol, the Food and Drug Administration (FDA), the Patent Office and the Environmental Protection Agency have piecemeal regulatory powers, but no government agency has overall authority over DNA experimentation. And the agencies have no direct access to the commercial laboratories' research programs as they do to government-funded university

Sinsheimer of Cal Tech believes the government guide-lines are insufficient. "I cannot believe that under these proposed guidelines the organisms can be contained," he recently wrote the NIH, referring to new strains of virus that could be produced during experimentation. The consequences, he says, "are highly predictable and likely highly dangerous."

Now, the federal govern-ment's Interagency Committee set up last fall to "review research involving the creation of new forms of life" — is preparing new recommendations for safety, regulatory and patent procedures on recombi-ant DNA research. Its report probably won't be made public for several weeks.

Sources inside the committee suggest it is more likely to call for strictly voluntary controls and industry self-policing than forced regulations. And to are no indications the con tee plans to even raise their of whether private compa-should be able to create market new forms of life.

State News Sports Writer Mother Nature took out her wrath on the Lansing area this weekend, and put a hitch in the sports schedules of several MSU teams.

"We were pretty disappointed that the meet couldn't be run and I don't think we will be able to reschedule it," assistant coach Mark Pittman said.

While the men's basketball team was having trouble on the courts Thursday and Saturday nights, it also ran into trouble in its travel arrangements. The cagers were scheduled to fly out of Lansing last Wednesday at 7:30 p.m., but had to change that flight to Thursday morning, causing the team to miss its workout before the game with Northwestern that night. After that, the squad had to cancel its Friday flight to Wisconsin, and took the bus to Madison, Wis., in time to make the 5:30 practice before the Spartan-Badger matchup Sat-

G-men divide weekend as Rudolph paces win

By JOHN SINGLER State News Sports Writer

The MSU men's gymnastics team reached its season-long goal of 200 points and Jeff Rudolph hit a career high of 52.40 in the all-around one night too soon as the Spartans split two weekend meets. Friday night in Jenison Fieldhouse they stormed past the Northern Michigan Wildcats, 203.80-187.60, but were stopped at Crisler Arena in Ann Arbor Saturday night, 203.35-194.30.

MSU was scheduled to host Indiana, along with Northern. Friday evening but the Hoosiers were snowed in and couldn't make the trip, while Northern plowed its way down from Marquette. The Spartans continued to improve in the floor exercise, taking five of the first seven places. Al Burchi tied for top honors with 8.90. Rudolph got 8.80 and third place and John Mankovich hit 8.75 for fourth. MSU swept Northern on the pommel horse, taking the first three spots, led by Paul Hamstunning 8.80. the 5foot 11, 150-pound junior's performance against the Wildcats solidified his position as MSU's No. 1 man on the horse.

Brian Sturrock won the vault with a 9 30 and finished fifth on the high bar. Sturrock sustained a knee injury warming up just before the Michigan meet which cost him, and the Spar much-needed points against the Wolverines.

Sturrock could manage only in the sixes in the vault but did put together an 8.40 routine on the high bar, despite scratching his dismount because of the injury. Doctors will know more about the seriousness of the injury today.

Doug Campbell led a one-two sweep on the high bar against Northern, hitting a 9.20 followed by Rudolph's 9.05. Against the Wolverines, MSU got off to a slow start with Sturrock's injury and fell behind Michigan after the opening event, never to fully recover.

Hammonds continued to shine on the pommel horse as he scored an 8.65, good for second in some outstanding competition. Despite Ham monds' effort, the Spartans still lost ground to Michigan in the event. Rudolph led the Spartans in the vault, finishing third with 8.75. Charlie Jenkins took fifth and was the top Spartan on the parallel bars with an 8.55. headcoach MSU Szypula was pleased with MSU's effort on the parallel bars as the Spartans won the

with the performance of Dan Miller, who did a routine on the high bar on very short notice, after it became obvious that Sturrock could not compete. He turned in a 6.7 with a nicely done dismount -- considering he had no warmup on the apparatus.

The Lansing Civic Center bustled as a diverse audience viewed the exhibitions, demonstrations and entertainment provided by a cross-section of the community.

Despite the glutted markets in many categories of the arts, "Arts Universal" still made a significant and necessary contribution to a vicinity that tends toward segmentation.

Jimmy Carter and Peter Frampton. Big smiles, middleof the road philosophies and pleasant veneers with a certain lack of substance underneath. These were America's choices in 1976 - superstars who rocketed out of nowhere.

Carter is No. 1 right now, but Frampton had his summer. "Frampton Comes Alive" (A&M) was top of the pops for most of the year, selling over six million copies-the most by far for any double album. But it's bland. Incredibly, Frampton dwarfed "Layla," the Beatles' White" album and the Stones' "Exile on Main Street" in sales.

Of course, there was more to than Frampton and Carter). Stevie Wonder's "Songs in the Key of Life" (Tamla) was a vehicle for Wonder's messages of love and brotherhood. His familiar melodic brilliance and adventurous arrangements worked well, solidifying a place on the cutting edge of pop music.

Two veteran performers became overnight sensations with albums that created and defined their own markets. Boz Scaggs' "Silk Degrees" Scaggs SHK Degrees. (Columbia) and George Ben-son's "Breezin' " (Warner's) were the year's "discoveries," though both men have been around for years.

Scaggs' clear, powerful voice, combined with his songwriting abilities and those of keyboard

George Benson crossed every audience boundary with "Breezin'" — the first album to simultaneously top the pop, jazz and soul charts. Benson's liquid jazz guitar runs are the essence of that instrument. Benson has played with most of the current jazz stars (CTI people especially) on their LPs and his own, and with a series of strong string arrangements, a steady, disco-ized beat and nice vocals on the hit single "Masquerade," he became a

Bob Seger's "Night Moves," (Capitol) was the closest thing to rock the way Chuck Berry played it - back to basics - in 76. Backed by both his relentlessly rocking Silver Bullet Band and the Muscle Shoals studio musicians, Seger's great voice, in its element, has a smoky luster.

Lou Reed produced "Coney Island Baby" (RCA), his best album in awhile. Reed momentarily dropped his "vicious" "walk on the wild side" posing to write and sing honestly about himself and reflect on his life. And while revealing that he always "wanted to play football for the coach" in high school. Reed made music to rival anything in his substantial career.

Two relatively unknown groups turned out some of the year's best music. "Southside Johnny and the Asbury Jukes" (Epic) was a great debut album for that group. Out of the Springsteen New Jersey boogie school, Southside plays goodhumored, catchy music. Springand contributed a fine song, "The Fever," to this effort by the former Jersey bar band.

The best jazz-rock of the year wasn't made by Stanely Clarke, Chick Corea or Weather Re port, but by a Dutch group Spin," whose album (Ariola Americal by the same name

Cupid coming to 'U' on Valentine's Day

State News Staff Writer

This year for Valentine's Day, thrifty students can surprise their lovers with more than a card and a kiss.

"Cupid's Delivery Service," sponsored by Precinct 3 in East Shaw Hall, will deliver flowers, candy and singing telegrams to that special or not-so-special

A group of about eight stu-dents will knock on the recipient's door with a carnation, a box of candy and a message of love like, "Mary, Mary it's you I love, your skin is as soft as a baseball glove, your eyes are like marbles, you hair like spaghetti. When I think of you, my palms get all sweaty.'

The telegrams, all originally composed by the residents, come in categories for lovers, friends, roommates, relatives and enemies. They are all set to music and will be delivered in person on campus, or by phone off campus.
"We need some way to finance an all-campus party we are sponsoring during spring term," said Larry Shapiro, resident assistant in Precinct 3. Somebody came up with this idea and it seemed like a good

On-campus students can have the telegrams, candy and carnations delivered personally to the door. For off-campus residents, telegrams will be delivered by phone.

A telegram delivered in Shaw Hall costs 50 cents and personal delivery outside Shaw Hall, but on campus, costs $3. A local telegram by phone costs 50 cents, within Michigan $1 and anywhere in the continental United States,

If the occasion calls for more than a telegram, package deals are available. A telegram and one carnation costs $1, one carnation and one box of candy costs $2.50 and a telegram, a box of candy and a carnation costs $3.

All orders will be delivered on Valentine's Day between 10 a.m. and midnight.

"I think the rates are very reasonable for the amount of work we are doing on the project and what we are delivering," Shapiro said. "We are composing all the telegrams and setting them to music.

Thirty students split into four groups will roam the campus Feb. 14 delivering Cupid's good word. If the caller isn't home the group will try to reach them a second time and then leave a message to get in touch with the delivery service.

The sender of the telegram not only has the choice of what type of person to send it to, but three song categories for each, serious to ranging

"I think my dog would get a real kick out of it," said Cindy Bloom, 107 S. Case Hall. "That would really turn him on.'

But another student would rather do the serenading her-

"I don't want a bunch of guys singing a love song to my boyfriend," said Laura Coskey, a sophomore in special education. "I am capable of doing the singing myself."

For more information and to place orders stop by the "Cupid's Delivery Service" booth in the lobby of West Shaw Hall between Feb. 1 and 13. Booth hours are Monday through Thursday, 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 4:30 to 6 p.m. and Sundays from noon to 1 p.m.

'Push' organizing to stop 'sex rock'

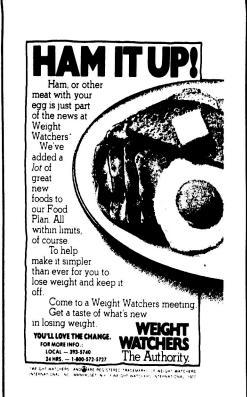

(ZNS) - The Rev. Jesse Jackson, the national director of the Chicago-based "Operation Push," says he hopes to meet with the heads of all major record companies in an effort to stop the spread of what he calls "sex rock.

Jackson says that "Push" chapters will be organized in the 20 leading radio markets, and local boards will be established to screen pop tunes containing suggestive lyrics and what he calls "other negative messages." According to Jackson, the boards will develop 'no-play lists" for radio stations.

"Push" leaders add that they will not restrict their crusade to popular records; also on the agenda, they say, are new codes to control the content of television, advertising and film as well.

Talking about sex-oriented records, Jackson said: "We will encourage major industries not to advertise during the hours when these records are played, and, if necessary, we will conduct consumer withdrawal campaigns against this moral menace."

A career in law without law school

What can you do with only a bachelor's degree? Now there is a way to bridge the gap between an undergraduate education and a challenging, responsible career. The Lawyer's Assistant is able to do work traditionally done by lawyers.

Three months of intensive training can give you the skills—the courses are taught by lawyers. You choose one of the seven courses offered—choose the city in which you want to work.

Since 1970. The Institute for Paralegal Training has placed more than 1600 graduates in law firms, banks, and corporations in over 75 cities.

If you are a senior of high academic standing and nterested in a career as a Lawyer's Assistant. we'd like to meet you.
