heading crisis
guilt of teachers,
MSU prof says

by PATRICIA LACROIX
State News Editor

The state's reading problems of elementary and secondary students has been a topic of discussion recently, and educators are exploring solutions to improve reading levels. However, it is important to note that the current levels of reading problems is an issue for many students, regardless of their grade level. This, in turn, may lead to the conclusion that reading deficit is not an issue for every student, but rather a problem that affects a significant portion of the student population. The data indicate that reading difficulties exist in all grade levels and are not limited to a specific subject area.

Carter chooses

admiral to head intelligence unit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Adm. Hyman G. Rickover, a Naval Academy alumnus who was once the Navy's top nuclear reactor expert and has been named to head the Central Intelligence Agency, the White House announced Monday.

The appointment of the admiral to the nuclear-related position comes at a time when the nation's nuclear weapons arsenal is being updated and modernized. Rickover, a retired four-star admiral, has extensive experience in nuclear power and is believed to have played a key role in the development of the country's nuclear submarine fleet.

Carter said Rickover's selection was based on his knowledge of the nation's nuclear weapons program and his experience in managing complex technology.

The admiral has been a vocal supporter of nuclear power and has been critical of the government's efforts to reduce the nation's nuclear arsenal.

Carter said Rickover's selection is a signal that the administration is committed to strengthening the nation's defense capabilities and ensuring the safety and security of its nuclear weapons.

Rickover joined the Navy in 1943 and has served on several nuclear submarines. He was the first admiral to be appointed as commander of a nuclear submarine. He retired from the Navy in 1980 and served as a consultant to the government until 1984.

The admiral's appointment is expected to be approved by the Senate, which has confirmed Rickover in the past.

The appointment will be formally announced at a later date.

Israel impotent with Syrian troops

Israel Foreign Minister Yigal Allon said yesterday that a major military operation was necessary to force Syria out of a nearly eight-mile stretch of Lebanon that threatens Israeli and US/American bases in the coastal Golan Heights, which straddles the Lebanese border and the Israeli-occupied southwestern half of the Golan Heights.

"Israel will only respond to the threat to its security," Allon said, "but not with a mere show of force."

"We have sufficient forces to destroy all targets in Syria," Allon said. "We are not asking for anything more than the withdrawal of Syrian forces from our territory."

Allon said that a series of cease-fires, including the latest one which took effect last week, had been breached repeatedly by Syrian forces.

"We will not be satisfied with a cease-fire," Allon said. "We will continue to attack as long as the cease-fire is not observed."

U.S.S.R. launches Soyuz 24

WINDSOR, Ont. (AP) - The Soviet Union

W. German nuclear talks postponed

BONN, West Germany (AP) - West German leaders and West German planners of space flights are expected to meet Monday at a symposium in Munich, but talks on nuclear arms will be postponed.

A report from West Germany's state-run news service said that West Germany and the United States would agree to hold talks on a possible
"limitation of nuclear arms." The report added that the talks would be held at a later date.

Report shows unemployment figures

WASHINGTON (AP) - Between 1.2 million and 1.3 million low-income workers in Ohio and New York have been put to work in the past month, while the unemployment rate in those states has fallen.

A report from the Federal Reserve Board of New York City said that 1.2 million workers were added to the work force in those states in the past month.

Postal Service may ask for rate hike

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) - The head of the federal government may ask for rate increases for the Postal Service within the next few months.

"It would be a very

Bill defines eviction policy

By Paul Noviellek
State News-Writer

The first piece of tenant-sponsored legislation to hit the Michigan Legislature is over, and all who worked on it agree it will help tenants.

The legislation, introduced by Perry Hallub, D-Detroit, defines what can be considered legal and illegal eviction practices and provides penalties for violations of the statute.

The bill was sponsored by the Michigan Tenants Association, which has been working on the legislation for the past six years. The association is made up of tenants and other interested parties who are concerned with the issue.

Judge W. M. Miller and his staff, 127, 1973, the bill will become the first piece of tenant-sponsored legislation to pass the Senate through the Senate Democratic Caucus of 1973.

It states that any person who is evicted or put out of any place by a tenant, or whose personal belongings are removed from such place, shall have the right to return to such place, absent such cause, unless the landlord or other person has obtained a court order to remove the tenant.

The bill also prohibits the landlord from entering the premises of a tenant during the hours of seven o'clock in the morning to nine o'clock at night, unless an emergency exists or the tenant consents.

The bill further provides for the landlord to give the tenant three days' notice of eviction and a copy of the bill. If the tenant fails to respond within the three days, the landlord may file suit and seek possession of the property.

The bill also provides for the landlord to be liable for damages to the tenant if he or she commits any of the following acts: (1) entry into the tenant's premises without notice or consent; (2) damage or destruction of personal property; (3) eviction for non-payment of rent; and (4) eviction for violation of the terms of the lease.

The bill was passed by a vote of 16 to 9 in the House of Representatives and by a vote of 26 to 10 in the Senate. It will now be sent to the Governor for his signature.
After a steady flow of complaints by temporary and untenured female faculty over the last few years, the MSU Faculty Associates have recently filed a lawsuit charging the University with employment discrimination against female faculty members.

Mary Tompkins, president of the Affirmative Action Committee of the Faculty Associates, said that affirmative action is not a realistic goal in the early 1970s to attain 1.4 percent of the women faculty members in the same 11-minute period attained that status. "Tenure ratio is lower for women, thus providing the University with a cheaper source of intellectual talent," Tompkins said.

Out of 400 women faculty classified as temporary employment programs by the University, 282 of them held tenured positions. Since there are 2,255 temporary and tenured female professors at MSU, according to 1973-74 records, the remaining 7.5 are all temporary and tenured men.

Not that it was any of the FBI's business what types of people were involved in this or any other movement. Women's activities, of whatever political or social collect, had to do with a clear right to express their views without fear of governmental intimidation. Such a concept is central to the well-being of a democracy. It appears that the FBI was only interested in Edward Hoovers who had never really understood this.

Hoover was obsessed with the notion that those who openly expressed their disatisfaction with some aspect of society — union leaders, civil rights activists, women's liberationists — were somehow subversive and bent on overthrowing the government. He never understood the importance of free speech in a free society.

Under Hoover's reign, the FBI became synonymous with organized crime. If recent history is any indication, none of the agents involved in this dirty business will have to pay for the crimes they committed. "It will be up to the judge who knows their intent on their affairs, and not the FBI, to determine the responsibility to see that they are punished."

FBI probe of women unethical

The recent disclosure that the FBI spent four years investigating and compiling derogatory information on women's liberation groups and women activists is more demeaning evidence of our government's contempt for the rights of its own citizens.

Men, the FBI says, the women activists "in general appeared to be hipeties, though many from other far left groups" indicates that the goal of the probe was to discredit the women's movement by perpetuating false and stereotyped stereotypes of the group. Not that it was any of the FBI's business what types of people were involved in this or any other movement. Women's activities, of whatever political or social collect, had to do with a clear right to express their views without fear of governmental intimidation. Such a concept is central to the overall democratic system.

It's not what you might think you're getting for that many women. Hoover didn't act to protect the woman's mind or her body, but to protect the FBI from itself. It's not what you might think you're getting for that many women.

For his bravery in the face of prejudice in that era of the 1960's, I'm proud to recognize Ms. Hoovers with this month's Governor's Award.

There's a truth to the saying, "If it's real, it's real and it's true." This is true of the Student Retention Task Force, which stands behind the student retention program, located in the Michigan State University Press, in the Student Retention Task Force.

The task force is responsible for developing strategies to improve student retention and success at MSU. It includes representatives from various departments and offices across the university.

The task force has identified several areas for improvement, including enhancing communication between faculty and students, improving access to resources and support services, and addressing financial barriers to education.

The task force is committed to working closely with students, faculty, and staff to develop and implement effective strategies to support student success and retention at MSU.

FAKED HEALTH PROBLEMS

Director former 'patient'

By Nancy A. kale

A group of MSU students, faculty, and staff are facing a dilemma: how to handle a situation where a student is being faked as a 'patient' for class assignments.

The situation involves a student who has been faking illnesses to attend classes while other students are missing class time to deal with their own health issues. The fake illnesses are being used to fulfill assignment requirements.

The group of concerned students and faculty are working to find solutions to this problem, including reaching out to university officials and exploring legal options.

A career in law—without law school.

What can you do with only a bachelor's degree? When you have a master's degree, you can pursue a career in law. Each year, thousands of students graduate from law schools with impressive credentials, and many are able to land jobs in top law firms or government agencies.

But what if you don't want to attend law school? Is there another way to pursue a career in law? There are several options available.

One option is to pursue a master's degree in legal studies, which provides an overview of the legal system and helps you develop critical thinking and analytical skills.

Another option is to work as a paralegal or legal assistant. Paralegals and legal assistants work under the supervision of attorneys and assist them in preparing legal documents, conducting research, and attending court proceedings.

You could also consider working as a legal intern or law clerk, which provides hands-on experience in the legal profession and can lead to permanent employment opportunities.

There are many other career paths available to those with a master's degree in legal studies. It's important to research the options and make an informed decision about your future.

Professor blames teachers

"Teacher classes are automatically attended by about 20 people. Our class is a very hard class to fill, and we have a lot of turnover," said the professor. "They don't even have a great听课率.

"The role of a student in the student retention role is a strong one," he said.

"The teachers have the responsibility of identifying the students," he said. "It is important that the teachers give their students the opportunity to tell us what they are learning.

The parents of these students may also help by offering their own positive feedback toward the students.

"It is an absolute fact that students who have better retention abilities need to perform better at high levels all the time.

Chubby feeling finishes 9th life

HEDGEFORD, Con. (AP) — Stan, once recognized as the world's heaviest cat, has died at age 12.

The 13-pound, 13-month-old Maine Coon cat was the world's fattest cat when she was recognized in 2017. She had been a house cat for nearly a decade before she died Wednesday.

Stan's owner, литтомond Kielbaso, said that he had been in contact with a somewhat fatter cat before she died.

"I had to come in and see how much more she was doing through on a production line," he said.

Linda Parman, an MSU junior and simulated patient, witnessed medical students learning the importance of a cooperative doctor-patient relationship.

In one simulation, she had to play three visits to a doctor in front of a large group of medical students. The first visit was when she was ill and pregnant. At the second visit, she came back to the doctor with physical problems and told her her marriage was ending. At the third visit, she came back, saying she had divorced.

"At each visit, the students worked together," she said. "That's what we were supposed to do. They had the students to just talk to someone.

They were supposed to talk about the patient, and then they listened to the physician and promised. They were listeners as well as talkers.

Looking Glass’ a peek at sophisticated fantasy

By SYDNEY BAKER

News Times Reviewer

"The Looking Glass," a new film directed by Jean-Michel, "A Lady," is fairly silly. Look for the movie soon. There are also some good things about it, but the plot seems predictable, and the characters are somewhat flat. The film is worth seeing, however, if you like these kinds of movies.

Jim Harrison, the popular novelist, and his wife, Jim, have recently moved to Lansing. Their new home is located in the middle of downtown Lansing, near the St. Johns Bridge, on the east side of the Michigan Avenue Bridge. They are currently working on a novel called "Snow Country," which has been compared to "The White Heat" and "The Grapes of Wrath." Their new home is near the center of the city, close to many of the city's attractions.

The Looking Glass is a peck at sophisticated fantasy. It is a film that combines the elements of fantasy and reality, creating a world that is both familiar and strange. The film is directed by Jean-Michel, a director known for his innovative and imaginative approach to storytelling. The Looking Glass features a cast of actors who bring their characters to life in a way that is both captivating and thought-provoking. The film explores themes of identity, family, and love, and it is a story that resonates with viewers of all ages.

The Looking Glass is a film that will leave you questioning your own reality and wondering what the world is really like. It is a film that will inspire you to explore the unknown and to embrace the mysteries of the universe. The Looking Glass is a film that is sure to become a classic, and it is a film that you will want to see again and again.

'Kong' killed by a director's meanderings

By JOHN DOWER

State News Reviewer

Now that the much-hyped S itself has been released, it is clear that the film is not as good as many critics had hoped. The movie is long, meandering, and often frustrating to watch. The director, John Guillermin, is clearly the problem. He has a tendency to drag out scenes and to indulge in long, pointless sequences.

One of the most frustrating aspects of the film is the way in which Guillermin seems to lose sight of the story. He often spends too much time on secondary characters and on details that are not relevant to the plot. The result is a film that is slow and unengaging. The characters are not well developed, and the pacing is uneven.

Guillermin's direction is also problematic. He often seems to be more interested in the visual aspects of the film than in telling a coherent story. The cinematography is often too flashy and the special effects are sometimes overdone. The result is a film that is visually interesting but not emotionally satisfying.

Despite these problems, 'Kong' is still a well-made film. It is beautifully shot, and the cast is excellent. The actors are able to bring life to the characters, and they do a good job of conveying the emotions of the story. The film is also well-acted, with strong performances from many of the supporting cast members.

However, the overall quality of the film is not high enough to make up for the director's mistakes. 'Kong' is a film that is well-intentioned but ultimately flawed. It is a film that is likely to be remembered as a disappointment.
Endless tol pays for Rudolph

By CAROL CROW
Rutland Newspapers

Rutland, Vt. — The name "Rudolph" evokes images of the fat, red-nosed reindeer, but for the MSU track team's Head Coach John Rudolph, the name is associated with a long list of championships and records.

Rudolph, who has been coaching the Spartans since 1984, has built a reputation as one of the nation's top track coaches.

"For me, the most memorable thing about Rudolph is his ability to motivate his athletes," said John Antle, a former Spartan runner and current track coach at William and Mary.

"He is a great motivator and has a fantastic way of getting the most out of his runners," Antle said.

Rudolph's team has won numerous championships and set records over the years, including a NCAA title in 1987.

"Rudolph's success is due to his dedication and hard work," said Antle.

"He is a consummate professional who always puts his runners first."
Callboxes provided for in bill

By JAMES WOLFE
State News-Bud Writer

Michigan motorists may have to pay for the restrooms by mid-1977.

The state legislature passed a bill which would permit the state to begin raising taxes along major roads to help pay for the callboxes and the restrooms.

The bill, which was introduced by Rep.

The bill will not become law until the governor signs it, but it is expected that he will sign it in the near future.

The state legislature passed the bill in a vote of 82 to 29. The bill will go into effect on July 1, 1977, and will remain in effect until the end of the term of the governor.

The bill provides for the installation of callboxes along major highways in the state. The callboxes will be used to provide assistance to motorists in the event of an accident or breakdown.

The bill also provides for the installation of restrooms along major highways in the state. The restrooms will be used to provide a place for motorists to use the restroom.

The bill will be financed through the collection of a tax on the use of major highways.

The tax will be collected at a rate of one cent per mile for the use of major highways in the state. The tax will be collected at the point of sale of gasoline.

The tax will be used to finance the installation of callboxes and restrooms along major highways in the state.

The bill has been introduced by Rep.

The bill was introduced in the state legislature in March of this year. It has been debated and amended several times since then.

The bill was passed by the state legislature on a vote of 82 to 29. The bill will go into effect on July 1, 1977, and will remain in effect until the end of the term of the governor.

Republican post sought by two

By JANET MILES
State News Staff Writer

Though the political scene is being set up for a battle of wits amongst political parties, House Speaker "Evelyn Wood" has expressed his interest in running for the Republican party. Wood, who has been in the Michigan House of Representatives for the past ten years, has decided to run for the Republican party in the upcoming elections. He has not yet announced an official position, but his decision has sparked a great deal of interest amongst his constituents.

Wood's decision comes at a time when the Michigan Legislature is facing several important issues, including education, healthcare, and the economy. As a member of the House Education Committee, Wood has been actively involved in debates on these topics and has a clear understanding of the challenges facing the state.

However, Wood's decision has been met with mixed reactions. Some constituents have expressed their support for his campaign, while others have voiced their concerns about his lack of experience in politics.

In an interview, Wood said, "I believe in the Michigan Republican party. My goal is to help make Michigan better for everyone."

The upcoming elections will be a crucial test for the state's political landscape, and Wood's decision to run for the Republican party is sure to add an interesting twist to the political dynamic.
