President proposes spending increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter today asked Congress to increase 1976 spending to accommodate a proposed $1 billion increase in the federal budget. His federal budget, "essentially the President’s budget," because he says tax cuts will offset the increase in government spending, is expected to follow the President’s proposal for a $1 billion increase in the federal budget. The President’s budget, which he presented to Congress on the same day, will cut taxes by $3 billion and increase government spending by $3 billion, an increase of $1 billion over the current budget. "Prioritism" permeating MSU as economies take the reigns

It is called priority reassessment, but it is a new approach to spending and decision-making that is sweeping through the state of Michigan. One of the more important components of this new approach is the University of Michigan, which has implemented a number of programs and policies designed to reduce the amount of money spent on non-essential programs. Among the many individuals who are supporting this new approach is President Ford, who recently announced that his administration would be reducing the amount of money spent on non-essential programs. President Ford, in a speech to the National Association of University Presidents, said, "We must make difficult choices, but we must make them." President Ford went on to say that he was committed to reducing the amount of money spent on non-essential programs and that he was willing to make the tough decisions necessary to achieve this goal.

CLOSING IN ON PEACE IN THE MIDAST

The selection of the University Long Range Planning Council members has proven to be another step in the process of choosing the remaining trousers. This group was given a stacked card committee of 26.

There is a great need for broad input into such a group. With the

WHARTON MUST GIVE UP CONTROL

The majority of members choose either directly or indirectly by Wharton on the effectiveness of the current administration.

The general function of the council is to receive, analyze and recommend suggestions that are not introduced through new research studies and procedures in the University. Since Wharton consists of such a small cross-section of people who will be interested in one area, it can deal with the multitude of problems at MSU. Such small cross-section consisting of a vital part of the reorganization team creates the problems of whether cross-departmental, mental, cross-college, and all-University concerns will actually be studied.

The reporting of these people to Wharton makes one question its effectiveness. It is not hard to predict this condition under the total influence of Wharton. For the present administration has the administration been guilty of reluctantly playing politics with the different organizations at MSU. The creation of a visible University Student Council has been a step in this direction.

Wharton's control of the council can only be restrained through concerning Wharton University priorities so characterized of his administration.

The Student Council has been the only organization to ex¬ press dissatisfaction with the selection system desired by the administration. Without opposi¬ tion, Wharton can create an organization that is at home in the University. There is a need for other organizations to criticize Whar¬

ton's behavior and raise questions about the rights of students are neg¬ lected in its present position.

Students must receive more input into the affairs of the council. Without greater student involvement in the council's composition, it is unrealistic to simply be reluctant of existing administration policies.

Chorus director’s lifelong affair

Malcolm Herman

Malcolm Herman, who became director of the Chorus at the University of Michigan in 1961, was one of the most distinguished vocal instructors in the country. He was an innovator in the field of choral music, known for his ability to bring out the best in his students and to inspire them with a love for music.

Herman was a frequent collaborator with contemporary composers, and his choirs were known for their interpretations of modern works. He was also a dedicated teacher, who spent many hours working with his students to develop their skills.

His influence extends far beyond his time at the University of Michigan. He was a mentor to many of today’s leading choral conductors, and his legacy lives on through the many students he taught.

Malcolm Herman passed away last year, but his memory lives on through the many students he taught, and through the legacy he left in the field of choral music.

Msu trackmen take maul-19

by Tom Watson
State News Sports Writer

The MSU trackmen's 31-19 triumph over the Michigan Wolverines in last weekend's Big Ten conference meet at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, is the biggest victory in MSU History.

The Spartans raced to victory in 12 of the 14 events, with the only losses being the 1 mile, 880 yards and hurdles.

The Spartans' record-setting day was highlighted by the performances of Peninger, Pennington, and the 4x100 relay team.

Peninger set a personal record of 10.55 in the 100 dash. Pennington's time of 21.8 in the 200 was also a personal record. The 4x100 relay team clocked 41.9 seconds, just .09 seconds off the school record.

Peninger and Pennington are leading MSU's charge in becoming one of the nation's top track teams. Peninger is currently ranked 13th nationally in the 100 dash, while Pennington is 17th in the 200.

The Spartans' victory over the Wolverines was the first in the series since 1972. MSU has lost 11 of the previous 13 meetings.

The Spartans will take their momentum into the Big Ten championships next weekend, where they hope to finish in the top three and earn their third consecutive national title.

Gymnasts rebound with Shephard hot

By BOBBY POLLIT
State News Sports Writer

MSU's women's gymnastics team is on the rise after a disappointing start to the season. The Spartans won their first meet of the year against Michigan, 198.5 to 190.5, last Saturday.

The team is led by senior captain Ann Shephard, who scored a perfect 10 on the balance beam in the meet.

"Ann is a great gymnast and a great leader," said MSU head coach Michael Brown.

"She has been working hard all season to improve her routine and she has really stepped up for the team this year."
