Red Squad snooping results in citizen lawsuits

"Il did it nine months ago, as they say, come they didn't arrest me?" asks who can still walk from his office to hot dog stand, which remains intact. In Chicago, New York, Detroit and other across America, citizens groups and r lawyers have been suing local Red lately, with surprising results.

New York, the police department's vau of Special Services kept spy files on e than 100,000 people and paid informto worm their way into numerous iral and community groups. In Detroit, neys say they have sworn testimony judges and elected officials were of snooping. Red Squad files also handed over to a major employer, sler Corp. Chicago, Rosner was far from the only respected resident to be named in Red Squad files. The Rev. James W. Montgomery, Episcopal bishop of Chicago, also was snooped upon. His file accuses him of belonging to an organization to help black families move to the suburbs.

Numerous such surprises were swapped as attorneys from around the nation who are involved in suits against local Red Squads met at recent Northwestern University law school for a national conference on Police Spying. A count by Morton H. Halperin, former staff member of the National Security Council and now director of the Project on National Security and Civil Liberties in Washington, shows 28 suits around the nation against local Red Squads and national intelligence gathering agencies. Most were filed during the last five years amid disclosures about domestic spying by the Central Intelligence Agency and the FBI.

Halperin's own telephone was tapped for 21 months as Nixon Administration officials attempted to plug leaks in the Watergate case. He is one of many of the spied upon who has taken his case to court. Many of the entries in Red Squad files are perplexing. Chuck Marson of San Francisco, a lawyer with the Northern California Civil Liberties Union who has filed a police spying suit, says his court action turned up a file on Communist party spokesperson Angela Davis. It had only one entry:

"Has hired flamboyant attorney to attract attention to her cause." Marson's suit is aimed at the law Enforcement Intelligence Unit, a national organization through which Red Squads trade information. Or misinformation.

Since before the days of the antiwar movement, Red Squad members have been periodically spotted at the edges of demonstrations, taking pictures and writing down names of speakers. They often have had the image among "movement" people of being slow-witted. But the stereotype is false, say lawyers who have been fighting the court

"I think they want people to think they are all buffoons," says Val Klink, a Chicago attorney whose suit recently resulted in the release of the names of thousands of persons spied upon, including community organization leaders, public officials and wsmen

"The image of the Keystone Cop is not reflected by the reality. Some of them are rather brilliant."

Just before Klink's group, the Alliance to End Repression, sued to obtain the Chicago Red Squad files, the Police Department burned an estimated 100.000 such records. but many were kept and finally ordered released by a federal judge. Attorney Dick Soble says his suit has resulted in sworn testimony that Detroit Red Squad records were turned over to Chrysler Corp., which kept them in a "plant security file," which was stored separately from regular employe personnel files.

Red Squads are nothing new in America. The New York version was founded in 1912 and Chicago's goes back at least 50 years. They were most active in the union-organizing days of the 1930s, the anti-Communist redhunt era of the early 1950s and in the civil rights and anti-war movements. The names have changed but the job is always the same, attorneys with a historical bent say.

"Some people are afraid of social change," says Klink, "any kind of social change. The Red Squads are designed as a form of repression to stop social change."

While attorneys hope their suits will bring abuses to light and public pressure on government to curb the Red Squads, few believe that they have cut down on police spying very much

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter today asked Congress to increase 1978 spending by $19.4 billion above what former President Gerald R. Ford proposed, saying the money will pay for "important first steps" toward fulfilling his promises to the voters tax cut and jobs program that would total an estimated $31 billion over two years. He trimmed defense spending by about $350 million from Ford's request for fiscal 1978 and proposed cutting back on authority for defense spending after 1978 by about $2.7 billion.

Outlays for defense under Carter's plans would total $111.8 billion. compared with Ford's $112.3 billion proposal. Carter would increase spending for the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to $161.7 billion, compared to the $159.4 billion recommended by Ford.

There would be a cutback in production of the controversial B1 bomber to five planes. instead of eight, and development of the Air Force's new M-X super-missile would be slowed as would development of the Army's advanced attack helicopter.

Production of the F15 aircraft would be reduced from 108 to 78 planes.

But Carter's budget document said, "Despite these reductions, the revised request permits real growth in the resources devoted to strategic programs, although at a slower rate than proposed in January" by Ford.

Carter proposed extending the 26-week supplemental unemployment insurance pro-gram through the end of the year so that unemployed workers can continue to qualify for up to 52 weeks of jobless benefits.

Carter proposed holding down the rising cost of health care by putting a ceiling on the annual increases in hospital bills. The budget said a 9 per cent ceiling, for example, could save the government $695 (continued on page 8)

It is called priority reassessment, but it is an attack of priority mania. It is called self-examination, but it will likely be manifested as self-defense.

MSU President Clifton R. Wharton Jr. has done the most talking about priority reassessment. He mentioned it in last week's State of the University Address, he mentions it at meetings and when he talks to eporters. The self-examination, seemingly becoming a new MSU ideology, has apparently caught on around the University, Each department and academic unit will be charged with the task of evaluating itself and drawing up a list of priorities to submit to a funneling committee to be known as the Long-Range Planning Council. The recommendations then flow to the appropriate level of decision-making, from where the entire package goes to the MSU Board of Trustees for what will by that time be inevitable approval. Priority reassessment is a visionary dream forced about by bureaucratic pragmatism. While there's no question that "priorityism" has purely economic origins, other, perhaps less practical members of the University have urged such a program for the sake of educational definition. The end result of the current endeavor, however, will be a convenient reference of where the budgetary wrath will fall in the clutch. In his address, Wharton said the self-examination will result

"The problem that I see with the amending procedure lies with the lack of consistency in student government," Donald Batkins, Council of Graduate Students (COGS) Steering Committee member said. "Each amendment has to be approved by student government and they get a complete turnover each year. For student groups to make changes it has to be done within a year."

Batkins added that COGS has appointed a committee to look at general revisions needed for the document and to report back to them next term.

"The document has been effective, but as the University changes there needs to be a systematic significant review of it." said Eldon Nonnamaker, vice president of student affairs. "The document has become such an extremely difficult one to amend."

Nonnamaker added that he hoped the Ad Hoc Committee set up to review the document writes an entire new report and in doing so, eliminates those parts that it does not need and that are no longer effective.

"We are leaders in this unique budgeting approach," he has said.

And except for the occasional rhetoric, all intent of using the unfolding "priority model," the plan for change, for anything other than cutting from the bottom of the list has been abandoned. The few students and faculty who for a while entertained hopes that MSU might at last acquire an educational identity other than its mandate from the Morrill Act felt quickly subdued.

Though it has only started to weave its way into the fabric of MSU, priority reassessment has already begun to permeate the community with a dynamic of "priority action/priority reaction." Faculty say lounges, meetings and cocktail parties are riddled with discussion of a defensive nature; nobody wants their unit or their job to be next to the cutting edge.

"They're all scared as hell," quipped one professor. About the only assurance is that, moving through most of the established bureaucratic machinery, change will come slowly, and the whole process will end a long time from now.

By that time, MSU is hoping that the economic trauma which prompted "priorityism" will at last have left us in peace.

WASHINGTON (AP) With drum rolls and trumpet fanfares for his guest but none for himself, President Jimmy Carter gave a warm welcome Monday to Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau, saluting the "tremendous friendship" between the United States and Canada.

After receiving a 19-gun sa-lute, Trudeau told Carter: "We feel these are great days for our relations and for the world. We have great expectations this continental neighborhood will flourish."

Trudeau and Carter met in the Oval Office after the welcoming ceremony for the first of two days of discussions expected to cover such wideranging issues as the economy, defense and fishing rights.

Carter has expressed his desire to eliminate some of the pomp and circumstance of state visits, but there were flashing swords and precise rifle move ments by the more than 100 members of the military honor guard on the South Lawn when Trudeau and his wife, Margaret arrived.

Since the drum rolls and trumpet fanfares preceded the playing of the Canadian national anthem, the musical flourishes were considered in honor of Trudeau.

Several thousand spectators, many waving small U.S. and Canadian flags provided by the State Department, stood behind ropes on the lawn. Carter praised Trudeau as

Republicans threaten filibuster

WASHINGTON (AP) - Conservative Republicans threatened a Senate filibuster Monday against the nomination of Paul Warnke to head the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency

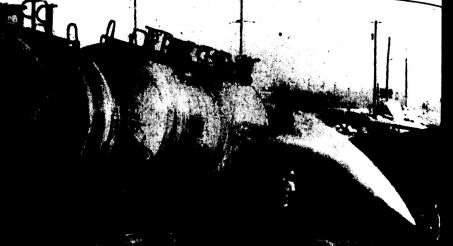

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said he would do "everything I can" to stop the Warnke nomination. He declined to use the term "filibuster," preferring to say he would mount a "campaign to enlighten the public." But he made it clear that he included filibustering the nomination among his alternatives.

Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, meanwhile, repeated his belief that Warnke will win confirmation. The groups opposing Warnke disputed that assessment. Helms and others planned to subject him to rough questioning when he appears before the Senate Armed Services Committee today.

Handicappers' group formed

By ROXANNE L. BROWN State News Staff Writer

Though the handicapper movement has be-come one of the most active and recognized minority groups on campus, there is a segment of this group that is often overlooked. Two MSU students decided to put their heads together and form an organization for mental handicappers.

Mentally Ill/Restored, Regaining Our Rights (MIRROR), under the direction of Ellen Smith, a 45-year-old student of humanities pre-law, and David Jones, a junior in Justin Morrill College, hope to successfully serve the needs of all students who can benefit from such communica-

According to Jones, who has been in a mental institution twice, one of MIRROR's biggest goals will be to erase the stigma attached to the mentally ill.

"I can count at least 30 persons in this area who underwent treatment the same time as I," Jones said. "They ignore me when I see them and have shameful feelings when I see them and What MIRROR does not plan on doing, Jones said, is taking up where the doctors leave off. "We are not going to play doctor, we are not qualified and that is not what people want,"

Jones said. Recalling his own experiences, Jones said that the mentally restored have a hard time rehabilitating themselves, getting back into the world and getting along with the world. Jones stresses that MIRROR will be open to all troubled persons here at MSU.

MIRROR will also help prepare students for outside living again. According to Jones, a lot of persons leave mental hospitals totally unprepared. MIRROR will also act as a listening center, giving advice, as well as referring persons to others who may help them.

Jones said he realizes there are a lot of mentally restored persons in the area who may not need the services MIRROR is willing to provide. "Hard knocks," from the outside world will take care of them, he hopes.

Both directors of MIRROR agree that pity is something they plan on staying away from.

"We are not going to pour out sympathy," Jones said. "This merely reinforces the de-pendancy a person has on his/her illness." Smith is working to get recognition statewide and nationally for mental handicappers. In hopes of getting some of her views across, she will attend the White House Conference on Handicapped Individuals in May. Smith hopes to have the mentally restored, as well as the emotionally disturbed, included in an amendment to the Handicappers Civil Rights Bill in Michigan.

The right to public accommodation, education, employment and housing are the priorities MIRROR is pushing out front.

The right to education is perhaps the most important issue MIRROR will be pushing. Now the emotionally and mentally restored often have hard times gaining entrance into public schools. Smith and Jones also feel that education should be continued right along with treatment, in mental hospitals, if the patient is able to absorb knowledg

MIRROR will also push to get the state of Michigan to separate patients in mental hospitals by ages. According to Jones, preteen children are sometimes thrown in with adults. This often proves to be detrimental, he said

'I came out of the hospital far worse off than when I went in," Jones said, "simply because I was faced with adult problems that I did not need.

Barrier-free design (accessibility) is something that Smith is currently pushing for in Michigan mental health institutions

"Handicappers don't even have the right to go nuts!" Smith exclaimed.

A lot of physical handicappers wind up in mental homes, Smith said, because people don't want to put up with them, or feel that they have to have a mental problem, when actually they don't have one.

Updating mental hospitals as well as making them accessible is something both Smith and Jones hope to gather support for through MIRROR. Some of Michigan's mental institutions are over 100 years old.

Jones said often the desire is there to upgrade the hospitals, but the money is not. But Smith said the opposite is true. She said the problem lies in misdirected funds.

When the State Department of Mental Health was given funds, it hired more regional directors," she said.

Above all, through MIRROR, Smith and Jones said they hope to show people that it is not a disgrace to have a mental problem. Neither of them claim to be completely cured of their own problems, but they plan on bringing people to the University to visit with MIRROR and illustrate that a mental problem can be overcome MIRROR will hold its first meeting Tuesday in C-302 Wells Hall.

Possible worker unionization may be closer to realization

By SUE STEWARD

State News Staff Writer Workers at the Alle'Ey and America's Cup, who have been trying to unionize since November, may be one step closer to their goal after an appeal hearing today with the Michigan Employment Relations Commission (MERC)

At the hearing, management will bring up what it perceives to be problems with the Alle'Ey – America's Cup Employes' Association. In formal hearings management generally argues that the bargaining unit is inappropriate or the workers it represents. In the case of Alle'Ey and America's Cup, management may argue that the unit should include employes at Rainbow Ranch, which is also owned by George and Lou Eyde, or management might argue that the unit should be separate for workers at each place.

Another point which may come up at the nearing is whether the case falls under the urisdiction of the National Labor Relations Board or MERC.

The distinction depends on the dollar estimate of business volume done, and the Alle'Ey and America's Cup may fall close enough to the dividing line to cause confusion as to who should hear the case.

If a disagreement between legal representatives for management and the employes' associa-tion can't be settled at the hearing, a formal hearing will be scheduled before a MERC judge. Written briefs must be filed by both parties asking for is consideration from our manage-before the formal hearing, and the MERC judge ment."

will then decide on the issue Once all the appeals have been decided a consent election is scheduled. Any worker who is employed at the time the election is scheduled is eligible to vote. If a majority of the voters who vote in the election favor the employes association, the association would be certified to bargain for all the employes.

Collective bargaining would then begin and the employes would ratify or reject a proposed contract.

The unionization process began during a three-week period in November and early December when about 50 per cent of the employes signed authorization cards giving the employes association the power to represent workers in collective bargaining.

MERC guidelines require at least 30 per cent of the employes to sign authorization cards as evidence of enough interest to schedule the first informal hearing. The informal hearing was held in Lansing on

Jan. 26, and at that time management requested the appeal hearing. Members of the association have written a first draft of a contract as an example of what the association might bargain for with management. The contract includes association policy on wage scales, raises, a grievance procedure and a variety of general benefits. "We really think our demands are moderate," a representative of the association said. "All we are

FREDDIE, MR. PRESIDENT ... HE'D LIKE TO SAY HELLO, TOO. SAY 'HELLO', FREDDIE

Closing in on peace in the Mideast

Peace is closer to a reality in the perennially war-torn Mideast than it has been since Israel came into existence in 1948.

It would definitely be jumping the gun to say that peace is here, or that it is just around the corner, because it is not. But the conditions for some kind of reasonable settlement are as favorable now as they probably could ever be for a beginning to the incredibly long, hard road to peace in this explosive trip to six Mideast nations -Israel, Syria, Lebanon, Saudi Arabia, Egypt and Jordan — it appears that the United States may have considerable input into coaxing an all-around return to the negotiating tables of Geneva.

The major issue to be resolved. whether it be in Geneva or elsewhere, is the vicious circle that has kept the Israelis and the Palestinians from coming to any kind of understanding. Israel refuses to negotiate with the Palestinian Liberation Organization (PLO) until it removes from the charter of its organization the aim to destroy the state of Israel. The PLO, in turn, must concede this most basic point to the Israelis.

For this crucial change to come about, both sides are going to have to make some necessary concessions.

Israel must give up all of the territory that it conquered in the 1967 war. United Nations resolutions do not speak of giving up a portion of the conquered territory. Granted, it is understandable that a nation surrounded by hostile states, as Israel is, would want occupied territory not only as buffer zones, but to use in bargaining for security in its vulnerable position.

The best time for Israel to make these concessions is now. Currently, the leadership of almost all the Mideast nations is moderate, and concerned primarily with domestic troubles like the recent food riots in Egypt. This moderation of leadership is a key reason for the prospects of peace being as likely as they are right now.

Even the PLO leadership is somewhat moderate, after having been severely weakened by fighting in Lebanon this past summer. The wars in Lebanon badly bruised the Palestinians, and made them change their tune.

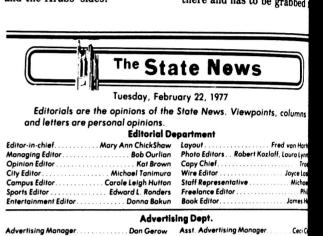

This is why now is the time to pull together all the pieces of the peace. President Hafez Assad of Syria is a key figure in this peacemaking. As evidenced by the war in Lebanon last summer. Assad can manipulate the PLO. The Palestinians were only free to run rampant as terrorists while they were allowed to live in Syria as a state within a state.

The terrorism that has been a trademark of the war in the Mideast is the most inexcusable part of it all, on both the Israelis' and the Arabs' sides.

It must be remembered that PLO is not the only representat of the Palestinian people. PLO, whose leader, Yasir Ara has pushed his organization the limelight, is only the m radical faction. Significantly, Palestinian National Council, more moderate and larger fac from which the PLO gets authority, is meeting next me to discuss some of these un problems.

The United States should doubtedly continue its st commitment to Israel and all it stands for. But in light of amount of U.S. aid funnele Israel, it has the right to den that some steps be made tow peace. Syria and its president putting the pressure on the P too, to get it to moderate its st on Israel.

Wharton must give up control

The selection of the University Long-Range Planning Council members has proven to be another step in President Clifton R. Wharton Jr.'s attempt to create more power for his office.

Indirectly, he has influenced the choosing of eight conservative members. And he is now in the process of choosing the remaining 18 members. This gives Wharton a stacked committee of 26.

Since the faculty and students have the same amount of representatives, some students at large - not just Student Council and liaison group members - should be on the council. This will help to balance the faculty at-large membership. Also, more college heads should be added to the long-range planning council. Students and colleges, after all, are those bodies of the academic community that stand to be hurt the most - not the administration.

The general function of the council is to receive, analyze and recommend suggestions which "are not easily introduced through the regular structures and procedures" of the University. With the council consisting of such a small cross-section of people it will be interesting to see if they can deal with the multitude of problems at MSU. Such small clan controlling of a vital part of the reassessment team creates the problem of whether cross-departmental, cross-college and all-University concerns will actually be studied

He should walk around our building, antiquated and inadequate, before he further inserts his motile apparatus into his alimentary canal. He would see the entire graduate staff of 29 sharing a miniscule office containing two tables, two chairs, two typewriters, two filing cabinets and a piano bench. Coffee pot optional. Comfy!

He should look at the schedule the main stage maintains before he depreciates the number of people that are served in this old WPA project. He should see the Theatre Department, Speech and Audiology, College of Communication Arts and WKAR studios cramped into the building.

Then he can leave, go home, sit and scratch his jock itch, and maybe that recreation could make do for a while so the recreation of other people could continue and the cultural activity in the Performing Arts Center might be worth the wait - if not to him - then to those who enjoy less active and violent forms of entertainment that are on occasion allowed to sneak into

ETTERS To the Editor

Misconceptions

On Tuesday a letter appeared in the State News regarding the relative merits of the Performing Arts Center (PAC) and a new intramural facility. I feel it necessary to correct some of the misconceptions in that letter.

The assertion was made that the PAC would only serve "the faculty, staff and alumni who can afford to be patrons of the Lecture-Concert Series, opera, ballet and various other cultural events" and the Theater Department. Anyone who has attended a Lecture-Concert event can vouch for the fact that students attend them, and that the ticket prices are substantially lower than for football games.

WASHINGTON - The talk grows on Capitol Hill and elsewhere that it is necessary to bring back the draft. The timing must be fortuitous to b sure, but it is a fact that the revival of conscription coincides with a tacit. bipartisan admission that nobody here knows of a safe and practical way to bring unemployment down much faster than Jerry Ford said he could. Depending on how large the recently decried Russian arms buildup is determined to be, and therefore how big our Army should be, one or people are soft, too much indulged and so pampered that not only are the hard virtues like perseverance and lobbying throughout the state for the past year. Last fall about 1,500 students from leges across the state demonstrated for SALT at the Capitol. Only 40 of those students were from MSU.

Surely anyone who pays tuition would like to pay less. Where are all those people I stood next to at registration, who grumbled and complained as they wrote out their checks to MSU2

We must organize SALT at MSU now, so that during the ASMSU election campaign in the spring, candidates will take a stand on the issue.

MSU students must first develop a position through research on the problems of funding higher education. Once these estions are answered, they must work to find ways tuition can be lowered.

Education hearings in the legislature are in late April and May. In any effort to demonstrate student concerns to legislators, MSU students bear a responsibility to represent students throughout the state. We must work to turn out students for tuition demonstrations.

Hopefully, next Monday students will

In addition, the Music Department annually sponsors 65 concerts by the large perform ing groups alone. Not only are these student functions, but virtually all of them are free.

The letter also asserts that the designing of the Great Hall to seat "only" 2.500 is "no indication that the facility is designed to help meet student needs." First, a hall large enough to render a rock concert profitable would inevitably lose acoustical quality. Second, the student need for a viable hall in which to perform and hear performances has never been met, as any campus concertgoer knows. No one seems to know what the auditorium was originally de signed to be, but the acoustics compare unfavorably to a barn and Fairchild is not significantly better. In contrast, the Univer ity is quite well equipped with athletic facilities: a stadium, a fieldhouse, two ice rinks, two IM buildings and many assorted playing fields.

Finally, the letter states, "There is a nandate from the students for new intramural facilities. The only mandate for the PAC is from the administration." Faculty and students have been donating their time and talents for years toward the PAC by giving benefit concerts, soliciting private donations, etc. If those interested in a new IM facility can show similar effort and commitment. a mandate for its construction can be verified; until then, I must conclude that the PAC merits higher priority. Thoughtless jocks two percentage points could be knocked off those damnable monthly unemployment numbers.

Some of the rascals who want to bring this form of involuntary servitude back are quite open about its sanguine effects on joblessness. These are the people who don't want a mere draft for the Army but a National Service Corps in which all 18 to 20-year-olds, male and female, will have to give two years of labor to the fatherland either playing soldier or emptying bed pans in hospitals or trees

The arguments to do this thing are many and varied, ranging from the nasty pragmatic to idealistic. The most ignoble is that the voluntary Army costs too much money, money we'd rather spend on new bombers and aircraft carriers for admirals to strut on, so make the kids work for nothing or next to it.

As ever is the case, they'll conscript people but not capital, not money. This gives a certain piquancy to another proconscription argument: The volunteer Army is "unfair" The volunteer Army is because it tends to recruit black youths in a higher proportion than they exist in the general population. Whether or not a racial slur is intended, that's what it sounds like when prodraft speakers tell us 1) the Army is getting blacker and 2) the quality of the personnel is in decline he argument which ought to get the biggest chuckle is the one which insists the "volunteer" Army is becoming mercenary. The men and women signing up, so say the conscription advocates, aren't doing it out of love and a desire to submerge themselves in the larger greatness through service and obedience to the fatherland. No, the urchins want money! Shall we apply the same set of standards of selflessness to Lockheed? If the boys and girls are to serve for love, not money, shouldn't the munitions manufacturers sell their products at cost? Well, perhaps not, because another reason advanced for the draft is that it's good for the soul. Our young fortitude unknown to them, but they are also prey to nervous disorders and frightening insanities. In the old days they used to say the Army built character even if it did increase a boy's chance of contracting a venereal disease; now they are telling us it cures neuroses,

But none of the inconsistencies and airy assertions concerning the benefits of the draft are really that important. If every argument made for the draft was valid and convincing, it still wouldn't abrogate Amendment XIII of our Constitution: "Neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, shall exist within the United States or any place subject to their jurisdiction.

It is reasonable to say that Amendment XIII can be licitly suspended in time of war, especially if the enemy is at the gates, if the United States is immediately and directly threatened. but a peacetime draft is a different proposition altogether. To deny milns their liberty, millions who have committed no crime, who have been convicted by no court, to slap them into involuntary servitude to fight unemployment or because the older part of the population doesn't want to pay the tax bill is to threaten liberty herself.

What if Congress said, "Let's draft the teachers. Their salaries are too high, and the garbage collectors and firemen?" Nobody would stand for it because everyone would see it for the threat it is. In the long run it is no of a threat to steal young peop liberty from them, and if you doub w America has changed as draft has stayed with us longer longer.

Freedom beckons on Mitchell's 'Hejira'

enough to devalue all the gifts. Mitchell has wrestled with the dilemma for a long time for a woman, freedom is not love, love is not freedom. Art. creativity and a career are freedom - and love wins. Even now must being a woman mean being an appendage of a male? Does loving a man mean permitting him to define the woman who does?

The guitarwork of Mitchell With "Hejira," Mitchell and Larry Carlton is light and makes her clearest statement about the dilemma. "Hejira" elusive; it suggests flight and is the underpinning of most of the means flight. It was the name songs. Mitchell's musical highpoint is as a jazz singer on "Blue Motel Room," reminiscent of "Harry's House/Centerpiece," from "Hissing of Summer Lawns" and "Twisted" from "Court." It leaves you wanting much more, maybe a whole album of these some day. But one must come back to the words before beginning to think about the music Mitchell is direct with us and honest with herself. Men and women will have to cringe at the powerful indicting light she turns on crippling bondage that poses as relationships.

In "Song for Sharon" and the title cut Mitchell is most precise. As "Hejira" begins, Mitchell is a "defector from the petty wars/that shell shock love away" trying to explain why. "In our possessive coupling/so much could not be expressed/so now I am returning to myself/these things that you and I suppressed." Despite 'star" status, she sees everyone as "particles of change" in a universe with lives of simultaneous "hope and hopelessness.

She finally capitulates: in the end "a defector from the petty wars/until love sucks me back that way.' On the eight-minute "Song for Sharon." Mitchell examines at length the mythology of marriage and the traditional woman's life Mitchell is missing out on (and longing for, just a little).

She sees a "long white dress of love/a storefront mannequin" and knows "some girl's going to see that dress and crave that day like crazy." Mitchell says, "the ceremony of the bells and lace/still veils this reckless fool here."

Still, "love's a repetitious danger" and she's in flight from "the dream's malfunction.

Despite her friend's expouse ment of "a wide wide world of noble causes/and lovely landscapes to discover," all Mitchell really wants is "find another

Speaking to a friend Sharon, who has a husband, family and farm, Mitchell cannot commit herself to landscapes or lovers, saying only, "I'll walk green pastures by and by." There is admirable strength in facing confusion.

When a woman allows her feet bound (in ancient Chinese tradition) to keep her from flight, men are her masters. It seems an awesome responsibility to be looked on by a woman with the heart and mind of a Mitchell, as her master . . . for man, the most subtle bondage of all, perhaps.

changes in outlays for housing assistance. The number of additional subsidized housing units to be assisted in 1977 would be increased from 235,800 to 400,000, which would increase outlays by 170 million in 1978.

The change would require an additional $9.6 billion in budget authority for 1977, with the money to be spent in future years.

Carter also proposed an in-crease of $27 million in public housing operating subsidies for 1977 and 1978 to offset higher utility costs from the severe winter this year.

Carter did propose increased funding for environmental and energy conservation programs and a shift in energy research and development costs, totaling $304 million, away from nuclear research to other energy sources.

Carter's budget proposals are still subject to change by Congress, which will begin

Swimmers lose title to U-M

By NANCY JO HALE State News Sports Writer

MSU's women's swim team failed to reclaim the Big Ten Title it held from 1973-75.

U-M held on to the crown it yanked from the Spartans in 1976, last Thursday, Friday and Saturday at the Big Ten Women's Swimming Championships in Madison, Wis., with a total of 967 points. MSU finished second with 817, followed by Wisconsin with 545. Minnesota with 466, Indiana with 354, Purdue with 287, Illinois with 254, Iowa with 240, Northwestern with 148 and Ohio State with 143.

MSU coach Jennifer Parks knew the Wolverines were a big threat since they were the only team that had beaten the Spartans in this season's dual meets. U-M proved to have greater depth in the longer events, and more divers — just as she had expected.

But all in all the team put across a good effort," Parks said. The Spartans' toughest competition was in diving. U-M's six divers picked up 100 points while MSU's two divers didn't win any points. "Diving in the Big Ten is the best in the country," Parks said, which made for fierce competition. One of the Spartans' most outstanding performances was Friday's 50-yard breaststroke race. MSU's Kathy Kolon finished first with a new conference record time of 32:381. Other strong performances Friday came from Kathy Heath who won the 200 backstroke with a time of 2:09.893. Kathy Brown set her career best time in the 200 and 100 individual medley. Brown placed second in the 200 with a time of 2:12.7 and second in the 100 with a time of 1:02.2.

MSU was barely touched out of a first-place finish in the 200 medley relay by Purdue on Friday. MSU beat their best time by two and a half seconds with a time of 1:51.98. Purdue won it with a clocking of 1:51.64.

MSU also placed second behind U-M in the 800 yard freestyle

TRACKMEN WIN 3 IN CANADA Schneider busts record

Three Spartan trackmen won individual events in Canada and Paul Schneider smashed the varsity indoor shot put record Saturday for the third time this season at the Central Collegiate Meet in Ann Arbor.

Schneider boomed the 16-pound indoor shot 56 feet 2 inches to break his previous record of 55 feet $4\frac{1}{2}$ inches by nearly a foot. Marv Roberts' record of 54 feet $2\frac{1}{2}$ inches fell earlier in the season when Schneider threw 54 feet 41/2 inches.

"Paul is making fantastic progress," acting head coach Jim Bibbs said. "He's a strong, hard working and totally dedicated young man. He's a great competitor and I wouldn't be at all surprised to see him over 57 feet by the Big Ten meet."

Also at the Central Collegiate Meet, Spartan gridder Eugene Byrd ran a 6.37 60-yard dash for sixth place.

Smith continued his phenomenal freshman season by breaking the meet record in the 50 meters with a time of 5.6 seconds

GRAPPLERS FALL BELOW .500

Missouri takes dull match, 19-16

Jim Ellis scored a 10-1 superior decision at 177 pounds, but Shawn Whitcomb was limited to a 5-5 draw at 190 pounds, and it clinched the meet for the Big Eight Tigers. Ellis is now 12-9 and Whitcomb fell to the team record of 8-9.

Heavyweight John Gurka did more than break out of his losing streak, but his superior decision of 13-5 only made the final MSU deficit three points. Gurka snapped his own eightmeet losing skein, with many of the losses coming against some of the best heavyweights, and is now 3-10.

MSU's other two wins came from Mike Walsh at 126 pounds and Bob Pollitt at 150 pounds. Walsh jumped off to a 4-1 lead, but let it slip to 4-3 before Peninger came to the side of the mat to strongly remind Walsh how close he was to losing. MSU had many second-place finishes Saturday, including close finishes in the 400-yard medley relay and freestyle relay. In the medley relay MSU finished one second behind U-M with a time of 4:06.33. In the freestyle relay we clocked 4:06.33, again just one second behind U-M.

Parks said the Spartans' times in the 200 medley relay, 200-yard backstroke, 400 medley relay and 200 free style medley should make the cut-off limits for the national championships March 17 through 19 at Providence, R.I.

Gymnasts rebound with Shepherd hot

By JOHN SINGLER State News Sports Writer

"We had a nice weekend

With those words, MSU men's gymnastics coach George Szypula summed up his team's performance this past weekend in

The Spartans dropped a 209.55-201.45 decision to Illinois State Friday night, but managed to hit the magic 200-point mark for the second time this season.

MSU split two meets Saturday, getting edged by Illinois-Chicago Circle, 199.05-195.05 and blasting Western Illinois, 192.85-171.15.

The story of Friday's meet was the sparkling performance of MSU's Joe Shepherd, as he notched two third-place finishes and had a hand in two others.

The 5-foot-8, 151-pound senior captain from Arlington Heights, , grabbed third on the pommel horse with an 8.35 and on the III. parallel bars with 8.60, prompting Szypula to acknowledge the Spartans' improvement on the latter apparatus.

Shepherd tied for third on the rings, with another 8.60, and on the high bar at 8.80.

"He was tough and a good complement to Jeff (Rudolph)," Szypula said.

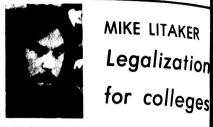

He was also pleased, and "pleasantly surprised," with Hubert Streep's seventh-place showing on the horse.

Shepherd was hot again Saturday, grabbing one first, one second and one third. The Spartans' effort on the parallel bars was, in Szypula's words, "super." Shepherd led the green and white contingent with a fine 8.75 to win the event. His best score of the weekend came on the high bar, garnering an 8.90 for second place. Shepherd's routine on the horse capped one of the finest individual efforts of the entire season.

Against Western Illinois, MSU swept one-two-three in the vault, parallel bars and high bar. .

Rudolph's all-around total of 50.95 stood up to both the Fighting Leathernecks and Chicago Circle. The weekend activity leaves the Spartans with a record of 6-5, heading into the final weekend of the regular season.

The burning ethical question before me today is whether not a sportswriter should launch a full-scale investigation if witnesses a coach slipping a player a dime for the pay to witnesses a coach suppling a payer a unite for the pay to Investigations are currently in vogue around the spo world. Legalize all form cheating. Sure, why not? Prostitution became an honor business when it was legalized in all but two countie Nevada.

And, before the lottery hit Michigan, you had to play odds undercover if you didn't like watching the ponies nu Hazel Park or the Action at Jackson. Legalization has brou to us the wonderful methods of removing vice from the st and putting it in the home where it belongs.

Universities suffer from the fact that they like to football and basketball programs in the cloak of acade when they should accept it for what it is. Big busined believed that Spartan athletics stood for all that is honor and moralistic when I was a child, but when you look stadium holding 60,000 people on a Saturday afternoon, m of whom pay $7 a ticket, you begin to see where the prior lie at MSU.

Since big businesses are traditionally moralistically why not let big-time college sports cheat? Allow the colleges to pay out and promise anything u
