

AAUP fights antidiscrimination changes

Proposed policy revisions called a 'mockery'

By MICHAEL SAVEL
State News Staff Writer

MSU chapter of the American Association of University Professors (AAUP) has asked the MSU Board of Trustees to reject proposed revisions to the antidiscrimination policy the board scheduled to vote on Friday. AAUP charges that the revisions were made without sufficient consultation of minority and women's groups and would make the policy ineffective in stopping discrimination on campus.

The Anti-Discrimination Policy and Procedures were originally established in 1970 to reaffirm the University's commitment to a policy of no discrimination on the basis of race, creed, ethnic origin and sex in faculty hiring.

The Committee Against Discrimination and an Anti-Discrimination Judicial Board were established to carry out the grievance procedures.

The Committee Against Discrimination was formed to handle University policy that went against the anti-discrimination guidelines and the Anti-Discrimination Judicial Board's function is to handle individual grievances.

The revisions which will come before the trustees propose that the two bodies be consolidated to help speed up the grievance process and reduce costs.

The proposed revisions would also eliminate rules in the current policy which call for the University to pay for each of the contesting parties' counsel and to bring in an outsider arbitrator to resolve conflicts where the two parties cannot reach an agreement.

If the two parties do not reach an agreement, under the revisions, the fact findings would be sent to President Clifton R. Wharton Jr. and the board of trustees would make the final decision.

AAUP spokespeople said the revisions make the antidiscrimination policy "nothing more than a farce or mockery." In a letter to the trustees the AAUP has also charged that the revisions were made without sufficient consultation of minority and women's groups. Having the University not pay for counsel, the letter said, could create an unfair balance between the two parties.

Zolton Ferency, president of the MSU chapter of the AAUP, said the proposed revisions could severely damage the University's fight against discrimination.

"We highly object to those revisions based on our reports that the various minority groups were not consulted in the process," he said. "The proposals could be damaging in the fight against discrimination."

Sally Bright, executive secretary for the Anti-Discrimination Judicial Board, said the revisions were made with complete consultation of all minority groups on campus, and will simplify the faculty grievance procedures.

"They are absolutely wrong when they say minority and women's groups were not consulted," she said. "I personally sent letters to the various councils and heard no objections to the revisions."

"I have had endorsements from many groups on campus and the objections are coming from a handful causing an uproar," she said.

Bright said that counsel is not paid for in any court of law and the bill should not be footed by the University.

"In what court do the loser's attorneys fees get paid, is what I want to know," she said. "The object of the revisions is to keep the process simple and internal."

The purpose of eliminating the outside arbitrators is to keep the procedures within the University and also conform to the State Constitution, Bright said.

Article 8, section 5 of the constitution says, "Each board (of trustees) shall have general supervision of its institution and the control and direction of all expenditures from the institution's funds."

"When an arbitrator makes the decision and determines a settlement, that goes directly against the State Constitution," Bright said.

Bob Repas, professor of labor and industrial relations, said having the board of trustees make the final decision is a conflict of interest.

"The same institution that makes the policies then judges them, and that is definitely a conflict of interest," he said. "That could exist in no place except the weird world of a university."

Repas also objects because the revisions were not made through the correct University channels and the definition of discrimination does not include handicappers.

Bright said that handicappers fall under a different category.

"The antidiscrimination committees themselves made the revisions and then got endorsements from campus groups," she said. "As far as the charge about handicappers goes, a separate definition and procedure will be established soon. That is such a different area because it involves access and things like that."

Charles Scarborough, chairperson of the MSU Black Faculty Administrators, said a copy of the revisions was "around" but he did not see it.

"I never received a copy but I heard of one being around somewhere," he said.

Mary Zehner, chairperson of the MSU Faculty Women's Association, said she received a copy but, "I have not looked at it sufficiently enough to comment on it," she said.

CIA activities all right by Carter; B1 production question undecided

By RICHARD E. MEYER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Jimmy Carter put his stamp of approval Wednesday on all current CIA activities and said his review of news reports that the CIA has secretly paid millions of dollars to foreign leaders has "not found anything illegal or improper."

Carter defended the $2.75-billion reduction in defense expenditures he proposed in the revised budget he submitted to Congress on Tuesday. But he said "I can't say" whether next year's Pentagon budget will be more.

The President promised to send Congress his proposal for a new department of energy "the first of next week" and said he probably will present his comprehensive energy policy in a speech to a joint session of Congress around April 20.

Carter made the point in his second nationally televised news conference as President. The questioning appeared more pointed than during his first, on Feb. 8, but he answered without any substantial mis- cues and lingered afterward to talk to reporters after television cameras were turned off.

During the news conference, the President made these points:

• He has not reached any decision on whether to go ahead with production of the costly B1 bombers but hopes to decide by May. "I have serious questions whether the B1 ought to be in the center of airborne defense capability," he said.

Carter said that he would be less likely to order a production go-ahead if the Soviet Union co-operates in "lessening tensions."

• The administration is analyzing the pressures and problems of inflation, and Carter will speak out on corrective measures when that analysis is completed. "I think rigid wage and price guidelines are a mistake," he said.

But Carter said that he will "retain the option" of asking business and labor for advance notice of wage or price increases. He said the program would be voluntary.

• Another analysis is being conducted on reducing the amount of government regulation over business, beginning with the airline industry.

Carter said he will send Congress a message about that, probably next week.

• He prefers to have all public elections federally financed, an extension of the system by which the government now pays for the presidential election campaign.

Carter also said he favors eliminating the electoral college and providing "a simple way for American people who are citizens and 18 years old to register to vote."

• Secretary of State Cyrus Vance's recent Middle East trip was "very successful." Vance reported to Carter on the trip during a morning meeting with national security advisers.

Carter said he plans to see Arab and Israeli leaders in Washington starting March 12 with Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin. The White House later said the proposed visit is planned for March 7 and 8.

During his presidential campaign Carter pledged he would provide full public accountability of intelligence abuses or mistakes.

On Feb. 11, 1976, in Manchester, N.H., Carter was quoted as saying: "If the CIA ever makes a mistake, I'll be the one, as President, to call a press conference and I'll tell you and the American people 'this is what happened, these are the people who violated the law, this is the punishment I would recommend, this is the corrective action that needs to be taken, and I promise you it won't happen again.'"

In reply to a question about newspaper accounts of secret CIA payments to King Hussein of Jordan and other foreign leaders totaling millions of dollars in return for intelligence and other advantages, Carter told Wednesday's news conference:

"I have adopted a policy, which I am not going to leave, of not commenting directly on any specific CIA activity...I have reviewed the more controversial revelations that have been publicized in the last few days, some quite erroneous, some with some degree of accuracy."

"These same operations have been reviewed by the Intelligence Oversight Board, an independent board, and also by my predecessor, President Ford. I have not found anything illegal or improper."

Carter says he does not know how he would address the same question if he were still a candidate.

But he added: "Impropriety or illegality does not exist on any ongoing CIA operation."

The news reports said the secret payments were made during previous administrations.

COMPLAINTS SENT TO MATH HEAD Math gripes forwarded

By SUZIE ROLLINS
State News Staff Writer

Formal grievances written by students regarding the quality of instruction they received in Math 108 last fall term were sent to the chairperson of the Mathematics Department this week.

Scott Schreiber of ASMSU's Legal Services Cabinet wrote a letter to Joseph Adney, chairperson of the math department, summarizing the complaints and grievances students filed concerning Math 108. Schreiber also enclosed the grievances for the department to examine.

Schreiber has been in charge of all the footwork for Legal Services in the Math 108 controversy. In his letter, Schreiber said that though the majority of the complaints listed do not represent violations in the Code of Teaching Responsibility, they are still formal complaints and warrant the math department's attention.

Samples of the formal complaints include:

• Students who felt their grade suffered in the course as a result of communication problems with Foreign Teaching Assistants (TAs);

• Students who contested the uniform final;

• Students who complained of homework problem solving inconsistencies between what the instructor taught and what the TA would demonstrate;

• Students who said that their homework problems were not reviewed sufficiently in class.

One student charged that her homework was often returned uncorrected and/or not returned at all. Schreiber found this in violation of point 3 of the code, which states: (continued on page 10)

Farmer in PBB case waives jury trial right

The farmer involved in the first PBB-contamination court case waived his right to a jury trial Wednesday.

Wexford County Circuit Court Judge William Peterson will begin hearing opening arguments on the million-dollar suit filed by dairy farmer Roy Tadoma against the Michigan Farm Bureau, the Michigan Chemical Co. and a local feed distributor.

The defense requested the waiver of a jury trial because it said all the publicity surrounding the PBB incident would make it impossible for a jury to be impartial, a source at the trial said. Attorneys for Tacoma were at first reluctant to agree, the source said.

The jury would have consisted of six members selected from 100 area residents.

Tadoma says he lost 100 cattle in 1976 because of PBB poisoning. PBB, a toxic fire retardant chemical, was accidentally mixed with livestock feed in 1973.

The Michigan Farm Bureau, the distributor of the tainted feed, has already paid nearly $40 million in out of court settlements.

One hundred thirty lawsuits are still pending involving millions of dollars.

Tadoma's suit is the first to actually go to court and observers believe it will serve as an indicator of how the pending suits will be handled.

In an unexpected move Tuesday, attorneys for Michigan Chemical entered a "no contest" plea in the case.

But Peterson said it would have little impact on the issues or outcome of the trial. "In other words they say, 'Yes, we made the chemical and, yes, it was mixed with the feed. But you must prove that our product caused the damage you are complaining about.'"

"The real issue of the case is whether low level PBB contamination can cause this kind of damage and these kinds of symptoms," Peterson said.

Subcommittee says Gulf Oil deliberately withheld natural gas

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gulf Oil Corp. was accused of deliberately withholding natural gas to a federal law by failing to deliver amounts of natural gas to a system serving 16 states, a House subcommittee charged Wednesday.

The subcommittee charged that Gulf Oil deliberately withheld gas and said it is doing "humanly possible" to get it to report by a panel of the House subcommittee also accused the Federal Power Commission of a "six-year failure" in its dealings with Gulf.

It recommended that the FPC and Texas Eastern "initiate legal proceedings against Gulf to require that it comply with its delivery obligations." Any such legal action would be in addition to an October 1976 FPC directive ordering Gulf to supply the gas in question.

The report said that consumers "cannot rely on the Federal Power Commission to protect them because the commission did not move in a timely manner to enforce Gulf's delivery obligations."

Texas Eastern supplies gas to Texas, Louisiana, Arkansas, Missouri, Illinois, Ohio, West Virginia, Mississippi, Alabama, Tennessee, Kentucky, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York, Maryland and Delaware.

New Jersey was the hardest hit of states suffering gas curtailments last year as a result of Gulf's failure to deliver the contracted gas to Texas Eastern, the report said.

In a letter to subcommittee member Andrew Maguire, D-N.J., Gulf Chairperson Jerry McAfee said: "Gulf is doing everything humanly possible to meet the terms of the contract. Gulf has been producing and delivering the maximum amount of natural gas which can be produced from fields that we operate."

Maguire had written a letter to White House energy chief James Schlesinger to protest the Gulf curtailments.

McAfee said sections of the Texas Eastern contract remain under litigation. "We believe this judicial process should be allowed to proceed unencumbered by pressure from other branches of the federal

DEMONSTRATORS KNOCK PROJECT SEAFARER

Dirt dumped at Capitol in protest

LANSING (UPI) — A small band of people dumped a mound of dirt on the floor just outside Gov. William G. Milliken's door, then knelt beside it and sang in an Ash Wednesday protest against Project Seafarer.

The demonstration shortly before noon ended so quickly and unexpectedly that state police body guards assigned to the governor's office did not intervene.

The protesters simply walked into the reception area of Milliken's suite of offices, dumped the dirt on the floor, formed it in the shape of a grid and knelt in prayer.

Seafarer is the Navy's name for a proposed underground system of cables in the Upper Peninsula for submarine communications.

Some critics claim it is a "doomsday" system whose only purpose would be to coordinate an attack in the event of nuclear war.

"What we've laid here is Ash Wednesday

— we've tried to mark the day with ashes — the victims of Seafarer, the victims of nuclear holocaust from Hiroshima on," said protester Bob Randalls.

The five demonstrators, members of a group called Great Lakes Life Community, left Milliken's office without incident.

But they ran into resistance from seven police officers when they joined about 20 others and attempted to plant a tree in front of the Capitol.

Reward hike announced for missing student info

By JOHN CASEY
State News Staff Writer

The concerned mother of the missing Martha Sue Young and the senior minister of a downtown Lansing church announced in a press conference Wednesday that there will be an increase of reward money in an attempt to stimulate new leads in the case.

In addition to the $1,000 reward issued by the missing East Lansing woman's father, the Central United Methodist Church of Lansing has contributed a matching amount, bringing the total to $2,000.

Dr. Howard Lyman, the senior minister of the church, called the disappearance a "great mystery of which there is a solution."

Martha Sue Young has been reported missing since New Year's morning, when her mother woke up to discover her 19-year-old daughter's bed had not been slept in.

So far, East Lansing detectives do not have any solid leads to work with. There have been a few telephone tips received on the special information line.

The mother, Sue Young, asked anyone having information of any significance to call that special number — 337-2232, Monday through Friday, between the hours of 8 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. Calls will be treated confidentially.

"There is too much area to cover for the police," Mrs. Young said.

Lyman also noted that people who have information, but who are afraid to go through the "regular channels," can come forward to him at the church.

The East Lansing Police have requested that all abandoned buildings and fields within the greater Lansing area be searched, especially now with much of the winter snow already melted. There are no leads indicating any foul play in the disappearance, but considering the time length, the police are checking all possibilities.

The local police have been in contact with Texas authorities. Martha Sue Young attended a small community college in Georgetown, Tex., and has a few close friends there. Investigations by local agencies have found no evidence of her in Texas.

The father of the missing woman resides in Austin, Tex.

Martha Sue Young's physical features are — Caucasian, blond hair and blue eyes, 5 foot 5 inches and 120 pounds.

When last seen she was wearing a blue ski jacket with a grey fur collar; orange/rust plaid slacks; tan Earth shoes; a purse-shoulder bag with a flap and big pouch — containing a driver's license, and house and car keys; green yarn-woven scarf and dark brown oval-rimmed glasses.

The $2,000 reward is effective for a one-month period.

Student Board fills vacant seat

By ANNE S. CROWLEY
State News Staff Writer

The ASMSU Student Board, at its Tuesday night meeting, chose to fill the vacancy in the College of Education seat with someone who was not involved in last year's election appeals and is not a candidate in the upcoming election.

Robert C. Evans, a junior in elementary education, will fill the education seat until the new session begins two weeks into spring term. Evans is Fee Hall's representative to the Residence Halls Association (RHA), chairperson of the RHA damage and Department of Public Safety liaison committees and has been on the Fee Hall governing board for two years.

Several board members objected to appointing Mary Cloud, who held the seat until resigning last week, or Kathy Wright, who won the most votes in last spring's election but was disqualified for filing a late spending report, because they are candidates in the upcoming election. Also, both were involved in last year's election appeals.

Cloud is running for the Student Board presidency and Wright for the College of Education seat.

Tim Beard, College of Business representative and also a candidate for Student Board president, said appointing a person involved in the upcoming election could hurt the board's credibility because the appointment could be construed as an endorsement.

Coke puts hold on plastic bottles

By MICHAEL ROUSE
State News Staff Writer

John Otterbacher, D-Rapids, asked the Coca-Cola Bottling company Wednesday to voluntarily stop distributing soft drinks in plastic bottles in Michigan, but a company representative said Otterbacher is behind the bottles "could be potentially harmful to humans and presents a serious threat to the health and welfare of the people of Michigan."

He cited tests in which rats that ate the chemical suffered weight loss and other abnormalities.

Last week, the state health department advised Michigan residents to avoid purchasing the bottles until more facts are known about the effects of the chemical on humans.

The health department said it is not known for sure if the chemical leaks from the plastic into the soft drink or if it is harmful to humans.

Otterbacher has also asked the federal Food and Drug Administration (FDA) to immediately pull soft drink bottles containing acrylonitrile from grocery shelves.

If the FDA does not take this action within the next two weeks, Otterbacher has threatened to introduce legislation to stop the sale of Coke in plastic bottles in Michigan.

Last week, the FDA withdrew its support of plastic bottles containing soft drinks or beer.

"We have a potential health problem that could be corrected if the Coca-Cola bottling industry would exhibit sensitivity to the health needs of the people of Michigan, and voluntarily stop selling Coke in plastic bottles," Otterbacher said. "Unfortunately, they appear reluctant to take this course of action unless the FDA requires them to do so."

However, Scott said "it would seem Sen. Otterbacher is a little behind us."

"As a result of conflicts arising from the FDA announcement last week and subsequent press coverage, we have elected to stop the distribution of the packages pending a clarification of the present situation," the Coca-Cola statement said.

Shady CIA dealings just go on and on...

Menacing CIA activities continue at a deplorable rate. Assassination plots to kill Cuban Premier Fidel Castro, fabricated stories concerning Lee Harvey Oswald's participation in the Kennedy assassination, Ashland Oil Company's use of CIA money for illegal political contributions, and illicit mail-opening operations compose only a small part of the endless list of unthwarted and apparently unimpeachable CIA activities.

Most recently this was shown with the disclosure of monetary payments given to Jordan, Kenya, South Vietnam, Zaire, Guyana and West Germany.

Due to CIA payments totaling millions of dollars to Jordan's King Hussein, agents have been allowed to operate freely in that country. This is bribery of the lowest caliber.

Former President Gerald Ford knew about the annual cash payments to Hussein, made for a period of 20 years, through information received by the Intelligence Oversight Board. The board regarded them as improper, yet Ford failed to mention the matter to President Jimmy Carter.

Carter has, at this time, stopped the payments and advised CIA Director Adm. Stanfield Turner to report any further action that may be discovered. However, what is discovered and what is reported are often horses of a different color with the CIA.

Even the Senate Intelligence Committee, formed last year, was not completely informed by the Ford Administration about the large payments made to Hussein. And if the supposed supervisory group over the CIA has been ill-informed, imagine the degree of misinformation or noninformation that exists among the American public at large.

The payment of government money to top foreign officials is one horrendous action, to make these payments for the purpose of Hussein's assistance in gathering intelligence in the Mideast is yet another unjust action.

John W. O'Connell, Washington lawyer and former U.S. intelligence officer, has records that indicate his law firm has received $333,000 in legal fees from the Jordanian government for four years. Perhaps this money is representing Jordan's best interests in Washington.

Carter's intentions for improved intelligence operations are honorable, but so were Gerald Ford's. While the CIA continues to exist — an unfortunate probability — Carter must designate, and enforce, stronger standards for its monitoring. The intelligence gang should be made to shake in their spit-polished black oxfords at the thought of withholding information about their dealings.

With the multitude of intelligence-gathering agencies within the government and in the armed forces, there is no logical reason to continue financing and supporting the CIA. We have witnessed enough of its shady maneuverings to last us through another century. Our supposed protectors who oversee the CIA are only pseudo watchdogs.

Before this country's government and citizens are jeopardized even further by this runaway agency, the accusations against it must be investigated and acted upon, not just looked at so the public can feel appropriately horrified for a short while.

LETTERS To the Editor

Prejudiced

From reading the review on Harry Chapin on Monday, I believe John Casey should either take a course in logic or forget about writing a critique in the future.

Determined to find something wrong with the concert he writes of Chapin, "his appeal is devastatingly magnetic: his music is devastatingly boring." Obviously there is a disagreement here between the huge audience and Casey. "Blindly as it may seem," the people in the seats loved him.

However, I will not dwell on the anomaly of Casey's taste. Read further into the article where he adds lines like: "Musically Chapin was consistent." "Chapin and the band played well as a unit." He also compliments members of the group. Now, I ask you, are these lines consistent with "devastatingly boring" music? As a member of the audience, I don't think so. Evidently Casey was prejudiced against Chapin, which might explain his weak review.

Review ducks

In response to John Casey's review of the Harry Chapin concert, I feel that Casey should start reviewing things more his speed, like maybe the ducks on the Red Cedar. Being in attendance at the concert, I cannot help but be appalled by the review.

Casey starts out by telling us that "...his (Chapin's) music is devastatingly boring." But a couple of paragraphs later we are told that music is the essential ingredient at any concert and that "This was Chapin's saving grace." We are also told that "His (Chapin's) appeal is devastatingly magnetic..." But then Casey goes on to say that the in-between chatter by Harry distracted from the concert. The contradictions in the review are confusing, and the reader doesn't know which paragraph to believe.

Casey also tells us that the audience countdowns were downright embarrassing. Unlike other performers Harry, Chapin wants to get the audience involved in the concert, and one way he does this is with the countdowns. For the audience it makes them feel part of the concert and not like they were listening to an album with the sound turned up. It wasn't embarrassing for us, Casey, for we can count past two.

As far as John Wallace being excess baggage, his wide voice range adds greatly to the group. While we're on the subject of baggage, Casey, why don't you pack yours, put a banana in your mouth, grab a "Taxi," and find "A better place to be." The Chapin concert was superb and nothing more could have been asked for.

Balance

While reading your article on the University Long-Range Planning Council (Monday), I was moved to see what Mr. Webster said about the word "balanced." His comments were, "balanced: to be equal in number, weight, force or value."

Accepting this definition (and who am I to argue with one so esteemed?), I suggest President Wharton will have a difficult time living up to his charge to make the council "...balanced racially, ethnically, sexually and academically." If one looks at those already on the Council (via position, appointment or status), there are eight males and one female. Thus, out of the remaining 17 seats to be filled, to achieve balance the president must appoint five males and 12 females.

If one uses the broad categories of nonminority and minority, there appear to be nine nonminority members already on the council. To achieve balance: appointment of four nonminority and 13 minorities.

If academic balance means administrators, faculty and students, already the council has four administrators, four faculty and one student. To achieve balance is impossible as there are six administrators (deans, chairpersons, and associate professors) to be appointed, six faculty (Faculty Council), and only five students (Student-Liaison and Student Council). Or a 10-10-6 imbalance.

I suspect the math department will need to provide consultation (as well as the political science and psychology departments) on how to get people to adhere to the math department's recommendations) so as to assure the proper selection of which administrator will fit the sex balance, which faculty will fit the minority balance, and how we get 10, 10 and six to add up to a sum equally divisible by three.

In his letter ("Wandering," Feb. 16) written in response to Milton Taylor's viewpoint on the Brazilian project, Prof.

CIA-AID

Archibald Shaw urged Taylor to clarify and justify his statements concerning the fact that "Brazil is clearly an American puppet" and about the "perpetuation of the CIA-AID linkage."

A puppet government, Prof. Shaw, is a government that carries out the interests of the imperialist nation that it is dependent upon for its continued existence in power, and that represses nationalistic forces opposing foreign domination and domestic exploitation. Read about the CIA and military participation in the military coup in Brazil in 1964. See the Wall Street Journal article of Nov. 9, 1976, that documents the increase of corruption there since the coup. Inform yourself about the growing American and West European domination of the Brazilian economy and natural resources, about the denationalization of the industrial, agricultural and commercial sectors.

Read the New York Times of Aug. 16, 1976, to understand that the Brazilian "economic miracle" has been miraculous, for the most part, only for the well-to-do (distribution of income is worse than ever, real wages have decreased since the coup). If there has been an agricultural miracle, why do nutritionists estimate that 40 per cent of Brazilians are suffering from malnutrition, that in the state of Bahia malnutrition was cited as the indirect cause of 80 per cent of the 17,000 child deaths in 1974?

While some prefer "to wander in a thicket of diatribes," tens of thousands of political prisoners in Brazil will remain in their torture chambers; thousands of innocent people will be murdered each year by the right-wing death squads; the vast majority of Brazilians will become poorer, while the beneficiaries of United States "aid" programs get wealthier; American business in Brazil will continue to thrive at the expense of balanced economic growth; the native Indian population will be completely exterminated because of the "need" for more land; and the national capitalists and "apolitical" MSU professors and officials will continue to participate in the $7 million rip-off.

Using the other guy's oil

People should not go grocery shopping in a supermarket when they're hungry, and nations shouldn't make energy policies when coming out of extraordinarily cold winters. In both cases it leads to too much impulse buying.

The real vicissitudes and hardships of this winter aren't due to poor government planning or corporate greed. They're owing to a winter which is described as the coldest in the last hundred or 200 years. To build a fuel storage and distribution capacity to anticipate that, would be absurdly expensive. It's the kind of insurance that everybody wants but nobody can afford, like $1 deductible collision insurance on the car, or a 38-lane highway outside a football field so that seven times a year spectators can leave the stadium at 45 miles per hour. It's cheaper: to let the folks steam up their windshields in a traffic jam; by the same token our great-grandchildren in the year 2077 will be better able to take one bad winter than we are to invest the money to forestall it.

Nevertheless people are working on energy policies. The President has said he will have one ready for Congress and the nation in April. Actually what we need isn't one, but two policies. A short-term policy for, say, the next 10 years, and at the same time initiate another policy, a fuel-conservation policy, whose good effects will start to become apparent in the early '80s.

The noises emitted by many of the leading people in Washington make one suspect that they are being tempted to foist immediate and drastic energy-use cuts on the country and that, if they hesitate to do it, it is only because they're uncertain as to the economic consequences of this madness. The economic consequences have to be bad, and the personal consequences for people of modest means will be worse. Larger percentages of what is mockingly called their disposable income will be given over to paying for fuel in one form or another. The poorest will have to have some kind of subvention, thereby increasing their already politically dangerous dependency on the central government.

Whence comes this need for immediate cutbacks? Not from a shortage of crude oil. Although American crude reserves have been declining, proven world reserves have been growing thanks to a continuous stream of discoveries. Much of this oil, however, is in Arab lands, and we have an aversion to burning any foreign oil, but most especially Arab oil which we appear to regard as a species of camel dung. On account of a grossed-out, anti-Arab racism and a more general overweening pride our big shots are insisting America have "energy independence."

Otherwise the little buggers on their humped dromedaries will be in a position to embargo our oil again. Only now the question arises, did they ever embargo our oil? The late John M. Blair in his new and excellent book, "The Control of Oil" (Pantheon, New York, $15.00), brings forth a number of disturbing figures to show that the oil embargo was mainly another hoax sold to journalists. Production figures from the Arab countries during the year of the embargo not only revealed no dip, but a rise so finger of suspicion points to the oil companies and their never-satisfactorily-explained reduction in refinery production here in the United States at the time.

Cutting back either at the well or at the refinery industry's traditional way of trying to control prices. In the 1930s oilmen prevailed upon the governors of Texas and Oklahoma to send the National Guard into the oil fields to shut independent drillers whose "overproduction" had driven the price of crude to 10 cents a barrel. That they should have to the same tricks in the 1970s is hardly surprising, rational response to such maneuvers isn't to denounce, but to break the price downward.

It makes more sense to forge the oil companies to the quantities of oil at stated maximum prices. Although tax like this usually backfire, we might, for instance, consider setup for the industry in which companies pay progressive taxes as they sell progressively more oil at or under the price. On the other hand, income from oil sold over that price be taxed at breathtakingly high rates.

That oil should be imported from abroad. We can be independent" while burning OPEC oil. Indeed during short-range period the best way to forestall another embargo or American oil company boycott or call it what is to husband American oil reserves so that persons, corporations and nations thinking about pushing up the price inordinately that we can swamp the world with oil anytime we want, it to break the price downward.

From the late 1950s American oil policy has been imports and to encourage the consumption of domestic first. Given the need for moderately priced oil for national and world economic stability, the policy was near treason, first put into effect to protect the price of domestic oil cheaper imports, and it remains in place as a goal because in Washington mistakenly believe burning other people's oil of national weakness.

Production of American crude should be discouraged or stopped, if possible, so that we can use up the other guy's long as they let us. That won't make anybody warm, but winters are like this one, but it should get us through the range into the 1980s when our consumption must begin to

VIEWPOINT: DAYTON-HUDSON

Malls not harmful

By JAMES N. MCNALLY

The State News has once again spewed forth words of little validity. This time: the Dayton-Hudson mall planned for East Lansing. The opinion appearing in the Feb. 15 issue states that along with shopping malls comes noise, litter, apartment projects, more shopping centers, crime, energy waste and more concrete pavement.

The staff fails to substantiate their conclusions with premises, let alone valid ones. The staff is attempting to lead the readers into believing that all shopping centers bring those results, those results are necessarily evil, and therefore a shopping center should not be built. And knowing that the typical reader doesn't know shit (the continuance of such State News staff opinions tells me this), if I let this argument stand as is, no one will ever realize that there exists a more logical side.

I grew up in Harper Woods, a boring city on Detroit's northeast side. Harper Woods' claim to fame is its major business sector, Eastland Center, a Dayton-Hudson mall. I have seen what the mall has done for Harper Woods over the years, and most important, what it hasn't done. In my 15 years of residence I can't recall a night when excessive noise from the shopping center's patrons has bothered me. I went to school next door to the mall for six years. I can't recall any noise disrupting my classes.

Has anyone from the staff ever been to Eastland or Southfield's Northland center? The malls are immaculately clean. Trash containers are plentiful and cleanup crews are forever patrolling, stabbing paper cups and sweeping cigarette butts. They don't let "Big Mac wrappers" pile up, only to rely on taxpayer-fed city sanitation crews to clean up the mess. The mall's grounds are beautifully landscaped and kept looking good enough to be next door to Grosse Pointe.

By lumping apartment projects with litter and noise, the State News is attempting to make apartments look bad. But they aren't. The apartments surrounding Eastland are controlled by the mall and are kept as clean. They are finer structures than most in the East Lansing area. Apartments create better housing, more construction jobs and increased tax revenues.

The staff seems to be worried that a Hudson's would bring more shopping centers. First, I doubt that more would start springing up. Harper Woods has only one shopping center. There are none in the northeast corner of Detroit, Grosse Pointe, or the southern areas of St. Clair Shores or East Detroit. Maybe businessmen can see there's no hope of competing with an established chain of quality stores. Second, even if a shopping center happened to spring up, would that necessarily be bad?

Crime is a problem in any city that has businesses. My father was a judge in Harper Woods and I saw many shoplifting cases. I would be as foolish as the State News staff opinions tell me this, if I let this argument stand as is, no one will ever realize that there exists a more logical side.

The people who (previously) have done all the talking also seem to have avoided all the thinking. They think that energy use is in itself a waste. Maybe they don't want to waste brain power by using it.

Not only will a shopping center not bring the evils hinted by the staff, it will also bring benefits not mentioned. This shopping center will bring increased tax revenues. The city could apply that money directly to fixing its lousy streets. Or it could lower the tax rate paid by individual citizens. A new business district would also bring additional jobs. The construction business would noticeably profit. And the stores would bring new employment possibilities to residents of Okemos, Lansing, Meridian, East Lansing and the University. This would set off many economic benefits in the area.

Why does the State News consistently seem to align its opinions with the loudest people to state a viewpoint? For once I'd like to see a real opinion rather than the mimicry of some political radical that happened to miss the '60s by a few years.

In the public eye

Monday's edition of the State News, of the candidates for the presidency of MSU challenged the other presidential candidates to join him in the MSU Superstars Competition. Ostensibly, this is in order to "force" the other candidates to appear before the public eye (conveniently the deadline for entering the competition is at noon the same day the article appeared).

While I am in favor of public appearances by the presidential candidates (I was, in the first candidate to come out publicly in a highly visible campaign), I fail to see the relationship between the presence of ASMSU and proficiency at pocket pool.

Instead, that the candidates appear at the pool hall, but at the debate table in front of WMSN microphones to discuss the issues of this campaign. I change any of the other candidates to come over the conference table, rather than the pool table.

Keep slates

While I appreciate the State News coming on Feb. 9 that I withdrew as a candidate for ASMSU president (throwing a relevant quote to boot!), I'd like to point out an error which was made in the article. It was running on a slate, one called Thunder. I empathize some with Coughlan's disdain for slates as a less qualified person do get by matter of party or slate alone. However, I'm also feeling the slate can be a valuable tool in the election of more responsible student representatives.

Looking at the situation it seems that for ASMSU to make any impact at all on university policy then the board needs to display some unity, some solidarity in ideals. Perhaps this could best be accomplished through electing a slate of candidates. When a slate is elected in many cases we can rest assured that people are going to be on the ASMSU Board who can work together towards effective change for the MSU community. This year's slates offer students a very clear choice as to the direction ASMSU can take.

Already we have Counterforce with all the fire and zeal of the Udall campaign. New Realist which sounds more like a magazine than a party, Kent Barry's proto-fascist Spartan Spirit slate and others with dramatic differences between them in regards to how ASMSU can best fill its responsibility to students.

Several years ago when ASMSU Cabinet President Bob Grossfeld and others worked long and hard for the introduction of the slate system it was with the understanding that student unity and solidarity is always the first step toward the recognition of student power in the University's policy-making process. I'd hesitate to drop the slate system before this can be realized.

Humorous campaign

Too often when I see an independent candidate run for an office such as ASMSU I find that the issues often result in biased and ambiguous answers.

Last Thursday I attended a rally by Stoych for ASMSU president. His campaign for "No Eggs, No Tomatoes, & No Sex!" was no bologna. I was doubly impressed with his ideas to bring more attention to student activities on campus and student rights. Stoych says that there are "beaucoup" opportunities for students at MSU to become more integrated, however, along with the "good times" is involved a certain amount of work.

Stoych is well aware of what's going on around campus and expresses views that are not unreasonable for a university the size of MSU to fulfill.

I think that Stoych's campaign for "No Eggs, No Tomatoes, & No Sex!" shows humor as well as creativity for such an important position in ASMSU affairs.

Hollow

In Monday's issue of the State News, ASMSU presidential candidate Bruce Ray Walker challenged his opponents to compete with him in the MSU Superstars Competition. While the idea of meeting students is laudable, there are a few problems with the timing of that announcement.

The deadline for entry was noon of that day, thus giving candidates only a few hours to decide to enter and to get over to the Union. There was potentially less time if a candidate lived off campus and did not get a paper until later in the day. Considering that Walker was at a MEET THE CANDIDATES NIGHT the night before, and that the article must have been written several hours prior to that, it is difficult to understand why he said nothing about the competition if he sincerely wanted to use it as a forum for candidates to meet with students.

The truth of the matter seems to be that the article and the idea were merely being used as a cheap publicity stunt. It is highly unlikely that Walker expected anyone to be able to take him up on the challenge. Thus, the claim of wanting to open up the campaign to the students seems to ring somewhat hollow.

Needs talent?

There is a belief among some of my acquaintances that State News reviewers never write a positive review because it takes more literary talent to praise than it does to criticize. After reading John Casey's review on Monday of the Harry Chapin concert, I am prone to agree.

As a concert-goer, there are many things I disagree with in the article. For instance, the audience countdowns that were "quite unnecessary, if not downright embarrassing." Embarrassing to whom? Certainly not to those of us who shouted ourselves hoarse doing them. Perhaps only those who were too "dignified" (read that haughty) to participate in them found them embarrassing.

This leads us to another misconception in the review. Casey claims the audience was there to hear Chapin's hits. We were, but we were there for more than that. Judging from the crowd's reaction to Chapin, most of us either owned or had heard his live "Stories" album. We were there to do more than listen; we were there to sing along with "Circle," to shout "bananas" at the top of our lungs, to do countdowns, to become involved. Harry Chapin allowed us to do that; it became our concert. Obviously, Casey did not get involved.

I won't attempt to argue with Casey's judgment that Chapin's music is "devastatingly boring" because each of us has our own tastes in music, but please don't call those of us who do like Harry Chapin blind or "easy-please" just because we do. Also, when writing a review, good or bad, at least try to get the song titles right.

Casey did mention some of the good things about Chapin: his rapport with the audience, his humanitarianism and his guitar playing, but he missed the most important thing. He missed Chapin's love for the underdog — thus his continued references to the cheap seats. Casey didn't see that we loved Chapin not just for his music, but because he understands all our hopes, dreams and disappointments. In not seeing this, Casey gravely insulted most of us who were at the Civic Center Friday Night.

Bad review

We were appalled to read the review of the Harry Chapin concert on Monday by the State News so-called reviewer John Casey. It seems apparent that he had his mind made up before the concert on what he was going to write.

Chapin's warm rapport with his audience and stage antics were an added plus to his fantastic musical tales. It seems pretty absurd that you would expect his in-between song chatter to reflect his serious lyrics. That certainly would not provide for a well-balanced act.

All his musicians were of a noticeably high quality. We don't feel that they or the audience were embarrassed by any aspect of the evening.

The reviewer needs to research his story more thoroughly, especially in reference to song titles. For instance, the reviewer referred to Chapin's song "Dreams Go By" as "You and I."

We feel the best way to describe this critique of the concert is to use a term from musician's jargon that usually refers to the Osmonds — it sucks!

Student Board election difficult due to large candidate turnout

By TIMOTHY M. HAGLE

As all of you should be aware, the ASMSU Student Board will be holding elections during spring term registration. There are a record number of candidates running this year and this makes the voters' choice a difficult one.

It is essential to a student government that its members be as qualified, responsible and responsive as possible. For this to occur, it is up to the students — the voters — to find out which candidates fill their criteria for an effective student leader.

Granted, it is difficult to sift through such a large number of candidates to find those capable, but it is a necessary evil if one desires responsible representation. Random voting can be disastrous, not only to the other board members (i.e., some members may be unwilling to fulfill their obligations), but it hurts the students, too. For example, at a recent ASMSU Student Board meeting, several bills, including one dealing with the Handicapper Council, had to be tabled because there weren't enough members present.

But even worse than random voting is not voting at all. In last year's elections approximately 15 per cent of the electorate bothered to vote. The elected ASMSU president got less than 2,000 votes. How much weight can the office carry, how much support and input can be expected when only 5 per cent of the possible vote elected the president?

I've heard many people say that they don't pay much attention to ASMSU because it's useless and ineffective. If they thought about it, they might realize that it is that attitude which makes ASMSU, or any elected body, ineffective. ASMSU cannot be an effective and dynamic student organ unless it represents a dynamic and concerned student body.

When you register for spring term, please take a few extra minutes to vote. You'll have a variety of candidates to choose from so check them out beforehand. See which ones are interested in being a student advocate and which ones just want something to put on a resume.

"ASMSU cannot be an effective and dynamic student organ unless it represents a dynamic and concerned student body."

Call up a candidate and talk with her or him. Invite them to speak before your group. I'll welcome such opportunities to speak to interested students and I'm sure other candidates would too. Make an informed choice, not a random one. Make your vote mean something. Make the ASMSU Student Board truly a representative body.

If you have ever trained a dog
My plight you know is true
And those of you to join the cause
There's a garden here for you

You learn to heel, to sit, and stay Praise your dog, you must
And perk his collar, about and round
It's discipline or bust

You'll find your pressure rising
Your spirit not so gay
When man's best friend is downing
And heels when told to stay

The teachers give their all to you
Their patience never wanes
Although their lives might simpler be
If handlers were the chains

Sit...stay: the trick is to obey

*The first class finds your spirits high,
Prepared for what's ahead;
And at the end of lesson one,
You hurry home to bed.*

Though it isn't Michigan State, and though there aren't 47,000 students, canine obedience school has one big advantage — the students only have to be 6 months old to attend.

Dog obedience schools teach the basics to companion dogs, and sophisticated courses to dogs destined for the show ring.

Mrs. Neil Newman, who has been teaching dogs their proper manners for nearly 30 years — on her farm near Williamston — explains that some dogs, like some people, learn easier than others.

*The exercise to sit and stay
Turns minutes into years;
You find your breathing labored,
As your "good dog" perseveres.*

St. Bernards can be trained at 4 months while most others are ready when a half-year old. Poodles, German Shepherds and Dobermans are quick to learn. Huskies, Malamutes or Irish Setters, Newman says, "have a mind of their own." But any dog, she adds, is only as good as its handler or master.

Classes work in groups of seven or eight dogs for an hour and a half once a week for two months. But the real learning experience comes during the weeks between classes when the dog and handler repetitiously practice what they've learned at home.

No, they don't play "Pomp and Circumstance" at graduation or flick their tails from right to left:

*Passing's fine, but should you fail,
Repeating can be fun;
Especially when you're sure to find
You're not the only one.*

'Class' Captain aids Spartans

By GEOFF ETNYRE
State News Sports Writer

A touch of class can win basketball games. Points help too, such as Spartan captain Bob Chapman's 27 against Iowa Saturday night, but it might have been the touch of class that preserved MSU's 81-79 victory.

The Spartans had just gone ahead, 67-65, on Chapman's high arching 18-foot jump shot after trailing 60-47.

The Hawkeyes brought the ball down, lost control and after a mad scramble the referee on top of the play ruled Iowa knocked it out of bounds. The head referee across the court overruled and called a jump ball between Chapman and Iowa's Scott Kelley.

That was enough for head coach Jud Heathcote to start his stiff-legged strut down to the scene of the crime and one head referee.

As Chapman was getting up he spied his coach and rushed to meet him short of his target.

"I knew if he was coming down that he was going for the refs," Chapman said, reflecting on the incident. "It was at a point where we were just coming back and had the momentum to win the game. I didn't want a technical."

Heathcote never made it to the referees, his progress stopped by Chapman's two muscular arms placed gently on the coach's chest.

The 6-foot-3 Chapman then outleaped his 6-foot-7 opponent for the tip and within seconds hit his second straight 18-foot jumper.

For Chapman, it was just part of his duties as the MSU basketball captain.

"I'm not the type of guy to rah, rah, rah all the time," he said. "That's not what it takes to get me ready for a game. But if that's what it takes to get the team ready, I will do it."

"I like to look at it as being another coach on the floor, to convey his messages to the team. That's really my job," he added.

Another part of Chapman's job was adjusting to a new coach, helping his team adjust to a new coach and vice versa.

And it wasn't easy when the team was losing.

"Sure, there were problems adjusting and I think that's why we didn't do as well," Chapman said. "We just weren't used to each other. I think a lot of those things have worked themselves out."

"We've got a good nucleus for next year and if we get a few good high school players — the two that come to mind are Earvin (Johnson) and Jay (Vincent) — we can become Big Ten contenders immediately."

"I've talked to Earvin and Jay, but not about basketball and coming to MSU. I know how it is. Right now they want to concentrate on winning the state championship. After the championships... that's when I'll talk to them about MSU."

Chapman knows how it is since he went to the state finals as a senior on his Saginaw High School team.

He's come a long way since then and is now one of the premier guards in the Big Ten.

The rugged 188-pounder, a senior with one more year of eligibility, is capable of hitting his long jumper from outside or moving inside for a banked shot off the glass. A .534 shooting percentage from the field and a 19.3 scoring average are Chapman's most impressive season statistics, but he's been concentrating on other things.

"I felt I needed improvement on ball handling and defense, so that's what I've tried to work on. My shot was already pretty good so I didn't feel that I had to concentrate so much on that part of my game."

Of course, good ball handling and defense are two prime prerequisites to play professional basketball and the Spartan captain would like a chance to prove himself in the NBA.

"If I get a shot I would really like to prove to myself that I can play pro ball," Chapman said. "But if I don't I'll just go on to other things. Maybe I'll continue my education and go on to grad school."

Club Sports

The Women's Varsity Club will hold its third meeting at 7 p.m. Sunday in the Varsity Club Room at the stadium. All women who have varsity letters are encouraged by club president Jeanna Bordner to attend.

The club has thus far adopted a constitution and elected officers. They will be active until the first spring term meeting, then officers for the 77-78 school year will be elected. They are:

- President: Leanna Bordner, senior and letter winner from the women's basketball team.
 - Vice President: Desi Caudill, sophomore with a letter in track.
 - Secretary: Diane Selke, sophomore and letter winner in tennis.
 - Treasurer: Karen Waite, junior with a letter in swimming.

Gymnasts gun for Gophers

MSU men's gymnastics travels to Champaign, Ill., weekend, savoring the joy of knocking off defending champion Minnesota in a way meet Saturday.

The Spartans and the Gophers will host Illinois in a Big Ten meet featuring two of last year's top three finishers in the championships.

Illini, third in the Big Ten, rely heavily on their all-arounder Steve Yasuka, averaging 53.00 and two scores in the 50-51 range.

Iowa and the Spartans, who will rely on special-teams in the final tune-up for the Big Ten Championships March 12, Gopher all-arounder Lafleur hits 53.00, but doesn't much after that and head coach George Szypula says they might not repeat as league champs. Minnesota's best events are the horse and the still rings.

Iowa and the Spartans are practically identical in scoring this season, somewhere in the neighborhood of 195.00.

The Hawkeyes feature a superb performer on the pommel horse, Bob Siemianowski, and a red-hot ring man in Lloyd Warner. All their vaulters score in the 8s, with two of them 9.00 or better.

MSU is improving in its overall performance and Szypula is particularly pleased with the progress on the parallel bars and in the floor exercise.

The meet will offer competitors the chance to hone their skills in compulsory routines, since they are a necessary part of the Big Ten Meet. Gymnasts will compete in the compulsory Friday and work optionals Saturday. The Spartans then will have two weeks to prepare for the Big Ten Meet.

Through detailed research of Medieval music, the Waverly Consort is able to perform works such as "Las Cantigas de Santa Maria," a collection of songs of praise based on five miracles of the Virgin Mary.

Waverly Consort faithfully recreates music of 13th century Spanish court

By DANIEL HERMAN
State News Reviewer
Tuesday's performance of "Las Cantigas de Santa Maria" by the Waverly Consort was a fascinating presentation musically and historically.

The Consort as faithfully as possible recreates music ranging from the 12th to the early 18th century.

"Las Cantigas de Santa Maria" is a set of over 400 (five of which are used in the program) songs written during the 13th century during the reign of Alfonso X of Toledo. The program presented Tuesday was translated from the original Galician-Portuguese by Kenneth Richie.

The Consort consists of a "troubadour," or narrator, Peter Johnson; soprano Judith Malafronte; tenor Howard Cook; and instrumentalists Judith Davidoff, Kay Jaffee, and Michael Jaffee.

The various medieval and Moorish instruments include the recorder, rauschpfeife, psalter, organetto, shawm and Moorish guitar.

One of the most interesting instruments used was the organetto, which was reconstructed from a painting depicting the instrument. The instrument, as the name implies, has a bellows and must be pumped full of air to be played.

In addition to providing recreations of 13th century songs accompanied by faithful reconstructions of instruments, the performance also benefited from authentic costuming.

Besides the selections from "Las Cantigas de Santa Maria," music from the Benedicamus "Verbun patris," from the Las Huelgas Codex, written during the 13th and 14th centuries, and the "Song of Praise," from the Libro Vermell (Red Book) was presented.

Though the works presented all concerned religious topics, the somber atmosphere usually associated with such works was noticeably absent, and in several instances the presentation proved to be quite clever, and even funny.

The music was but one of factors contributing to the performance. "Las Cantigas de Santa Maria" was what might be termed a multimedia presentation, in which all factors contributing to this recreation were interdependent.

Another important factor Tuesday night's performance was the dedication of the performers. They did more than just perform the music, researched and selected specific areas to be presented.

Musicians strive for period authenticity

By DANIEL HERMAN

State News Reviewer

The Waverly Consort in its performances presents music which ranges from the 12th to the early 18th centuries.

"We can play eight centuries of music while most performers can only present one," Consort member Kay Jaffee said.

Several persons in the seven-member Consort are musicologists.

While studying songs and Cantatas ranging from Medieval to Baroque, their curiosity was aroused regarding what these works sound like on the authentic instruments of the period.

"We had performed many of the works on contemporary instruments, but we were most interested to see how they would sound on the originals,"

Kay Jaffee added.

The man primarily responsible for organization of the Consort is Michael Jaffee.

"With something like 'Las Cantigas de Santa Maria,' it is necessary to read all you can about the period. After you are through doing this, however, you must be a musician, and you must decide how the music is to sound," Michael Jaffee said.

"In the performance of 'Las Cantigas de Santa Maria,' we found out there was a strong Moorish influence, so we added to the concert a solo interlude in which the Moorish guitar is used," he said.

Though the Consort strives to be as faithful to the music as possible, Michael Jaffee said very early music had no specified instrumentation, making it necessary to add an improvisational flavor to the music performed.

"Though we try to be as faithful as possible, we will never sound exactly as the music was performed originally," he said. "This is primarily because we cannot be completely oriented toward the periods we are studying and because we are constantly exposed to outside influences. I step into the elevator, and I get muzak," he said.

Many modern composers are intrigued by the thought of using medieval instruments in their compositions.

"Contemporary composers are interested in medieval instruments because they are interested in individual sonorities, and place emphasis on smaller ensembles. They are trying to get away from the idea of the large symphony orchestra," he said.

For its material the Consort must go to the original manuscripts in Europe. Many of these manuscripts indicate the types of instruments used, and in some cases give illustrations.

In addition to "Las Cantigas de Santa Maria," the Consort also presents a 14th-century work, "Roman de Fauve."

High heating bill? Cold weather is just one reason.

As a customer service representative, it is part of my job to answer questions about energy bills. And lately there have been a lot of calls about why bills are so much higher.

One reason is obvious. Weather — over 25 percent colder than normal. Customers are using many more units of gas, so even if fuel costs hadn't gone up, bills would still be higher.

But fuel costs have gone up. The natural gas we buy from pipeline companies costs a lot more than it used to. And these increases are also reflected in your bill.

Because your bills have increased greatly, I think it is important that you understand why they have gone up so much. I'll try to help you if you call me, but the weather and fuel cost increases are beyond our control. Probably the best advice I can give is to take all possible steps to conserve — to save both your dollars and valuable energy.

Don't forget — the bills you receive this month reflect those record breaking cold days of the last month.

Machines in car lots ripped off

A new fad in rip-offs has been initiated this past week to the tune of an estimated $575, police said. For the first time in 15 to 20 years, the machines which collect a 50-cent fee for various parking lots on campus were vandalized in three areas, said Robert L. Howe, physical plant maintenance supervisor.

The first incident occurred over the weekend in the visitors' area of Ramp 2 which is located next to the computer center.

The second took place Tuesday in D Lot, near the planetarium and the third happened the same day in I

Lot, located next to the Men's Intramural Building, police said.

The amount of damage to the equipment is between $500 and $700, Howe said.

"A prybar or lever was used to bend the metal and force the locks open on the machines," he said.

"The exact amount of money stolen is known only to the person or persons who broke into the machines," said Lowell Levi, MSU controller. "I have no idea how many days' receipts were in the machines but the amount was probably pretty little."

The coin boxes are emptied twice a week, Howe said.

"We empty them in co-operation with the controller's office at different times each week to avoid a set pattern," Howe said.

Presently there are no suspects, police said.

Board fills vacant seat

Vincent Yeh, College of Natural Science representative, said Cloud and Wright might not have time to devote to the board because they also have campaign commitments.

In support of handicappers, the Student Board approved a policy of requiring groups which it sponsors to publicize the accessibility or inaccessibility of all events they put on. The Programming Board passed the amendment unanimously last week.

As of April 1, groups will receive one written warning in case of violations of the new policy before ASMSU funding and office space will be revoked.

The action can be reversed by a two-thirds vote of the board if an appeal is filed.

In other action Tuesday night, the board voted to ask the students on the spring term ballot for a $1 tax in addition to those already assessed if the Michigan State Radio Network should obtain an FM broadcasting license.

They allocated an additional $500 to the book exchange to insure books and supplies to be purchased and sold, provided the sale of new textbooks on campus is not prohibited by a University regulation.

The sale of new books is the responsibility of the MSU Bookstore, said Lyle Thorburn, assistant vice president for housing and food services.

"The bookstore originated as a co-op operated by students and staff and the University was asked to take over when it failed," Thorburn said. "I'm sure the University is not interested in repeating that sort of thing."

The board also approved the appointment of Kevin A. Kelly, a junior in economics and public affairs hospital administration management, to the Student-Faculty Judiciary.

Because Kelly already sat on the All-University Student Judiciary, the board OK'd Joseph Lavey, a criminal justice junior, to fill the vacancy.

The Student Board also decided to support a State News Editorial Department request for a larger budget.

The move stems from a new Editorial Department policy which restricts the number of hours a student staff member can put in at the State News.

The support measure included a demand that certain University officials monitor activities in the Editorial Department in the coming weeks.

The board also allocated:

•$200 to the Legal Services Cabinet to secure a legal opinion on Department of Public Safety ticketing practices.

•$125 to start a new Spartan humor magazine.

•$300 to conduct a campaign urging a "yes" vote on another State News referendum, which is a vote of confidence or no confidence in the State News Board of Directors.

Four of the five Student Board members who were reprimanded last week for poor attendance showed up for the meeting. The four were Krista Shellie, College of Human Ecology; Scott Belanger, College of Agriculture and Natural Resources; Don Breckle, College of Social Science; and Stuart Carter, Inter-Cooperative Council Representative.

Chairperson's comments prompts Damman reply

Gov. James Damman, who was incompetent by Democratic party chairperson Mordecai Winograd last week, replied to Winograd's statement in a delivered letter released Tuesday.

Winograd told reporters, "I think the lieutenant governor has that kind of integrity in that office," citing Damman's involvement in land several years ago.

In his letter, Damman said Winograd had the right to question his judgment as lieutenant governor but not his integrity.

The lieutenant governor pointed out that a member of Winograd's own party, Atty. Frank Kelley, had conducted an investigation after an investigation Damman was not involved in wrongdoing.

Chairman Winograd, you really don't know each other very well," Damman said in his letter. "If we did, I don't think you would question my integrity."

Questions about Damman's involvement in land dealings member of the Troy City Commission were raised during 1974 gubernatorial campaign when he was first elected lieutenant governor.

Damman said in his letter that he recognized he might have been somewhat naive in his personal investments, but added that he has attempted to conduct his activities "in a manner which was above reproach."

Winograd said last week that the Democratic party sent a memo to Republicans, advising them to keep Damman off the ticket.

"I don't know what he was doing there the first time," he said.

The party chairperson added that the Democrats "have an interest in the State of Michigan. It goes beyond party lines."

government," he said.

The Gulf chairperson acknowledged that Gulf underestimated its gas reserves in the 1960s. "When Gulf recognized that additional gas would be needed to fulfill the contract, immediate efforts were undertaken," he added.

The Gulf official said that in the meantime, the government cannot force the company to come up with gas it doesn't have.

The subcommittee report said consumers paid millions of dollars more because of Gulf's alleged curtailments last year — before the even larger shortages caused earlier this year by the abnormally cold weather east of the Rocky Mountains.

As an example, it claimed that customers of Public Service Electric and Gas Co. of New Jersey have had to pay $17.5 million more because the Gulf curtailments caused utilities served by Texas Eastern to find more expensive supplies of gas.

It said that Gulf entered into an unconditional contract to supply the gas to Texas Eastern in 1963 for a 26-year period but began renegeing on the contract in 1971. Yet it took the FPC almost six years to move against Gulf, and then only after the subcommittee prodded the FPC into acting in 1976, the report said.

Gulf's failure to meet its contractual obligations is a violation of the Natural Gas

Act, which sets statutory standards for gas delivery obligations, the report said.

Adney said he will forward the complaints and grievances to the Committee for Student Grievances in the math department and let it deal with it.

Adney declined to comment about the letter issued by Legal Services.

"I could give my opinion but I don't want to say anything that might influence the committee," he said. "I want them (the students) to have a fair hearing."
