AUPA fights antidiscrimination changes

Proposed policy revisions called a "mockery"

The Anti-Discrimination Policy and Procedures Committee, a joint body of the SUNY Board of Trustees and the SUNY Faculty Assembly, met on July 26 to hear the results of a review requested by Chancellor Malcolm Wilson and President David Wildstrom. The committee's report was made public on August 17.

The report, which is available on the SUNY website, recommends changes to the existing policy, including:

- Increasing the number of arbitrators
- Adding a new provision on sexual harassment
- Clarifying the definition of "minority" and "women's groups"
- Requiring the SUNY Board of Trustees to approve any revisions to the policy

The committee also recommended that the policy be reviewed every three years.

Despite the changes, the policy remains open to public comment until September 6. Comments can be submitted to the SUNY Office of the Attorney General at 100 State Street, Albany, NY 12246.
French police tangle with dissident

PARIS - French police have pulled a \textit{tirailleuse} (bandoleer) over the shoulder of a convicted terrorist, a move that has drawn criticism from human rights groups.

Human rights groups at the Paris headquarters of Amnesty International have expressed concern about the incident, which took place in a prison in the southwestern city of Toulouse.

The terrorist, who is serving a 10-year sentence for his role in a series of attacks in the 1980s, said he was attacked by a group of officers who entered his cell and beat him with a metal bar.

The incident comes amid a growing concern among human rights activists about the treatment of prisoners by French authorities.

The French government has been under pressure to improve conditions in prisons, where overcrowding and mistreatment of inmates have been widespread.

Amnesty International and other human rights groups have called for the release of political prisoners and an end to the use of inhumane conditions in French jails.

WASHBURN (AP) - As President Reagan prepares to meet with Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin of Israel, the administration is under mounting pressure to respond to growing criticism of the Palestinian uprising.

The White House has been under increasing pressure from Capitol Hill and elsewhere to take a harder line against the Palestinian uprising, which has sparked a wave of violence in the occupied territories.

The administration has been divided over how to respond to the uprising, with some officials arguing for a tough stance and others calling for a more moderate approach.

Rhodesia proposes lifting of race laws

Harare (Reuters) - Rhodesia's government has proposed lifting of race laws, according to a statement issued by the state-owned media.

The government has been under pressure from both the international community and its own people to remove the laws that discriminate against the black population.

The statement said the changes were being introduced in response to international pressure and the desire to move towards a more inclusive society.

The government has been criticized for its policies, including the use of violence and the suppression of opposition. The government has also been accused of human rights abuses.

Rabin's back challenges win labor party nomination

Tel Aviv, Israel (AP) - Yitzhak Rabin has emerged as the front-runner for the leadership of the Labor Party, which is set to hold its annual convention next week.

Rabin's victory is seen as a major step towards the ousting of Ariel Sharon, the party's current leader, who has been facing increasing pressure to step down.

The convention, which is scheduled for next week, is expected to be a key moment in the party's internal struggle, with Rabin seen as the most likely candidate to lead the party in the upcoming general election.

Dirt dumped at Capitol in protest

WASHINGTON, D.C. — A small band of demonstrators smashed a mound of dirt on the lawn outside the Capitol on Monday as the Senate debated a bill to allow the disposal of radioactive waste in a mine in central Washington. The protest, which centered on the site of the proposed mine near Richland, Wash., has been ongoing for months, with protesters saying it is a threat to public health and safety.

The site, which was chosen by the Environmental Protection Agency, has been the subject of intense debate and scrutiny. The protesters, who include local residents and environmental groups, have been calling for a halt to the project.

As the Senate debated the bill, protesters gathered at the site, some with signs and others waving flags. The demonstration was peaceful, with no arrests reported.

The protest comes as Congress is considering legislation to allow the disposal of spent nuclear fuel in a permanent repository. The proposal has been controversial, with some politicians and public health groups arguing that it is not safe.

The protesters at the Capitol site said they were there to call attention to the dangers of nuclear waste disposal and to demand a halt to the project.

"We are here to say no to nuclear waste in our community," said one protester. "This is a dangerous and irresponsible decision that puts the health and safety of our families at risk."

The protest was a part of a broader movement against nuclear waste disposal, which has been ongoing for decades. The protesters said they would continue their efforts until the project is halted.

"This is a fight for our community and for the future," said another protester. "We will not give up until the nuclear waste is removed from our area."

Dear Editor,

I am writing to express my concerns regarding the current state of our student government. As an officer of the ASMSU, I have noticed a concerning trend in our organization.

Firstly, there seems to be a lack of transparency in the decision-making process. Several important decisions have been made without proper input from the student body. For example, last month's vote to approve the budget was made without a thorough discussion, and many students were unaware of their options.

Secondly, there is a issue of accountability. It is my understanding that there have been instances where certain members of the student government have not been held accountable for their actions. This lack of accountability has led to a loss of trust within the student body.

Lastly, there is a concerning lack of diversity in our leadership. The current officers are not representative of the student body in terms of background and experience, which is important for ensuring that all voices are heard.

I urge the student body to consider these issues and to demand better from our student government. We can only move forward as a university if we address these concerns and work towards creating a more inclusive and transparent organization.

Sincerely,
[Your Name]
Sit...stay: the trick is to obey

The first class finds your spirits high,
Prepared for what's ahead.
And at the end of lesson one,
You hurry home to bed.
Though it isn't Michigan State,
And though there aren't 47,000 students,
Canine obedience school
Has one big advantage —
The students only have to be 6 months old to attend.
Dog obedience schools teach the basics to companion dogs,
And sophisticated courses to dogs destined for the show ring.
Mrs. Neil Newman, who has been teaching dogs their proper manners for nearly 30 years —
On her farm near Williamston — explains that some dogs,
Like some people, learn easier than others.
The exercise to sit and stay
Turns minutes into years;
You find your breathing labored.
As your "good dog" perseveres.

St. Bernards can be trained at 4 months while most others are ready when a half-year old. Poodles, German Shepherds and Dobermans are quick to learn. Huskies, Malamutes or Irish Setters, Newman says, "have a mind of their own." But any dog, she adds, is only as good as its handler or master.

Classes work in groups of seven or eight dogs for an hour and a half come a week for two months. But the real learning experience comes during the weeks between classes when the dog and handler repetitiously practice what they've learned at home.
So, they don't play "Pomp and Circumstance" at graduation or flick their tails from right to left:
Passing's fine, but should you fail,
Repeating can be fun;
Especially when you're sure to find
You're not the only one.

Waverly Consort faithfully recreates music of 13th century Spanish court

Through detailed research of Medieval music, the Waverly Consort is able to perform works such as "Las Cantigas de Santa Maria," a collection of songs of praise based on five miracles of the Virgin Mary.

Math head gets students’ grievance list

"Examinations and other assignments submitted for grading during the term should be returned to students within 10 working days," the administration stated.

Another student filed a grievance against a TA who conferred the grade on a paper that was not returned during the term. The student charged that the TA did not return the paper in a timely manner.

Adney said she will forward the complaints and grievances to the Dean of Student Affairs and the Dean of Studies to be addressed by the administration.

The administration also acknowledged that some students may not receive grades in a timely manner and recommended that students contact the TA or the course instructor about the delay.

The administration stated that it will strive to improve the grading process and ensure that students receive their grades in a timely manner.
