Carter's plan amended

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Jimmy Carter's proposed $1 million 5-cent gasoline tax boost to help pay for war-related domestic programs has won strong support in Congress. The 83-year-old immortalized in the sitcom "Seinfeld" as a senior member of the House of Representatives, is expected to announce his candidacy for a second term. The former energy secretary of the U.S. government, Carter is one of the nation's most popular leaders.

WASHINGTON, D.C. (AP) — The U.S. Senate has amended a bill to cut social security benefits for the elderly, veterans, and other low-income groups. The amendment was proposed by Sen. Ted Kennedy of Massachusetts. The Senate has already passed a similar bill in the House of Representatives.

Ingham County Jail to expand

MEASURES FOCUS ON LOANS, MORTGAGES

Bills against redlining introduced

Ingham County Sheriff Kenneth Producers, a member of the special committee, said the possibility of expansion was studied when the county was first flexed, but nothing was done about the situation. The county was again varied in 1974, 1975 and 1976, with the bug warning came the appointment of the Special Committee. The committee was appointed by the Ingham County Board of Commissioners in September 1976, to examine possible solutions to the overcrowded conditions, including expansion of the present jail.

The committee was also asked to look into the possibility of other alternatives such as the partial diversion and release on personal recognizance programs.

James Frank, Ingham County Jail administrator, said that as of mid-week, Wednesday 50 people were housed in the jail, which has a capacity for 160 prisoners.

Though the number of prisoners in the below capacity, the jail is overcrowded since state statutes require specific placement of these inmates in the jail.

Some states require that first offenders be separated from more serious persons, those required to be separated from special offenders, and others required to be separated from others enumerated.

"Right now, for example," Producers said, "we have space for 16 inmates, but we have 20 prisoners." According to the state's 1977 FBI report, a number of factors, including age, race, sex, socioeconomic circumstances, and personal characteristics, are separated in the construction of this structure.

Ingham County Commissioners Bill Bethel, a member of the present jail committee, said he questioned the quality of what kind of facilities in the resulting structure.

"If you are building a new jail, you will have to prove that it is better than the existing one," Bethel said. "We are going to continue on page 10."
Assassination panel must rescue itself

The House Select Committee on Assassinations (HSCA) is the process of investigating the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. It was established by the United States Congress in 1976 and was charged with determining the cause of the assassination and the role, if any, played by any foreign nation or individual. The committee's work was conducted in secret, and the report was not released until 1976. The report was never published and was made available to the public in 1992. The committee's findings have been the subject of controversy and debate, and the committee's role in the investigation of the assassination of President Kennedy remains a subject of debate.

The HSCA's primary goal was to determine the cause of the assassination and to determine whether the Kennedy assassination was related to any foreign nation or individual. The committee considered a range of theories, including the possibility of a lone gunman, the possibility of a conspiracy, and the possibility of a government cover-up. The committee's report, however, did not provide a definitive answer to these questions. The committee concluded that there was insufficient evidence to prove the existence of a conspiracy or a government cover-up. However, the committee also did not rule out the possibility of a lone gunman.

The HSCA's report, which was released in 1976, was met with mixed reactions. Some historians and scholars criticized the committee's report, arguing that it was not thorough enough and that it did not provide a definitive answer to the questions about the assassination. Others praised the committee's work, arguing that it was important to conduct a thorough investigation of the assassination and that the committee's report was an important step in that direction.

The HSCA's work was not the end of the investigation into the assassination of President Kennedy. In the years since the committee's report was released, there have been numerous investigations and studies conducted, including the reopening of the investigation by the FBI in 2017. The investigation of the assassination of President Kennedy remains a subject of debate and controversy, and the truth about what happened that fateful day in Dallas remains unknown.

Critics vary in opinions on projects

By ELIZABETH HOWE

MSU's Board of Trustees has approved four faculty members and others within the university for research grants under the university's new Research and Development Council. MSU has contracts with the United States government to conduct research on United States military equipment and other topics. Among the others, there are four faculty members, one of whom has been involved in research on the campus, and two others, who are involved in research on the campus, have been involved in research on the campus. The MSU projects are not designed as manpower producers, but rather as manpower producers who are engaged in research.

"Our projects are designed to help improve the conditions and the better the conditions must be in those countries," said a representative of the university. "We believe that the research and development council is the best way to help improve the conditions and the better the conditions must be in those countries."

"We must have the ability to do research and development in the world to help improve the conditions of those countries," said another representative of the university.

"We are not sure how much impact we will have on the conditions of those countries," said another representative of the university. "But we are committed to doing what we can to help improve the conditions of those countries."

"In the future of knowledge and scholarship, we should not be limited by the boundaries of our institutions," said a representative of the university. "We want to work in interdepartmental teams to improve the conditions of those countries."

"In the future of knowledge and scholarship, the university should be engaged in research and development of its own, as well as research in other fields of study."

Czechoslovakian conductor describes musical training

By DANIEL HERMAN

Czechoslovakian conductor Byrskor Rouska led the Czech Symphony Orchestra through the rigorous audition process and the trials of an actual performance during his stay at MSU. Rouska and his students described the Czechoslovakian system of musical training at MSU.

Babyself

If you're looking for a review of the Rush concert on today's entertainment page, then expect to be surprised, because there isn't one.

It didn't occur to me to mention anything about what happened at the Auditorium on Wednesday night. As soon as the show is over, I'll write down what the experience was like to the best of my memory.

We had a rather interesting discussion with some of the students about the program. We wanted to know about the music, the performers, and the overall experience. They were very nice and willing to share their thoughts with us.

I was impressed by the students' passion and dedication to the music. They were professional and respectful, and it seemed like they genuinely enjoyed performing in front of the audience.

When it came to the music itself, I couldn't help but notice how much it differed from what I'm used to hearing. It was a blend of classical and modern elements, and I found myself enjoying it more than I thought I would.

As for the performers, they were all talented musicians who put in a lot of effort to make the performance memorable. The way they worked together was impressive, and it was clear that they had spent a lot of time practicing and rehearsing.

Overall, I had a great time at the concert and would definitely recommend it to others. It was a unique and enjoyable experience that I won't forget anytime soon.

Jazz bassist Ron Carter slated for weekend show

Innovator jazz bassist Ron Carter and the Ron Carter Quartet will close the winter season for ShowcaseJazz at 8 tonight, followed by PA Four at 9 and Saturday at 11.30 p.m. in the Hickory Ball Room.

Born in Dallas in 1937, Carter played with soloists under the age of 35 when he switched to a double bass because the sound was better for the style of music he was playing. After receiving a degree from the Eastman School of Music and working with the Eastman Symphony, he became an accomplished classical player. Carter moved to New York City and began to play with Ella Fitzgerald and other jazz greats.

The trend for Carter came when he joined John Coltrane, Elvin Jones and Wayne Shorter to make one of the most influential jazz albums of all time, "A Love Supreme," in 1965. It was so influential that it is generally considered to be the closest to the original writing ever to be heard.

With the music is fused with a sound, it is still a much higher order of music. It was produced in different years, the 60s, 70s, 80s, 90s. It was produced in different places, in different venues, with different people. It was produced in different times, in different eras, in different atmospheres, and with a "dark" sense of the music, or even "Rock and Roll, Have You Seen Here," Ishiah Blais of the Great War. In a way, it is hard to imagine the various influences of the music, the field of social issues, the social issues that we face today.

"Pink Floyd created something beyond anything we've ever seen before."

The fourth 'R'

Remember recess!
Remember sitting bored in class, watching as they followed the clock to torture you and make you wait for only thing you wanted in the whole wide world was to get as run?
Remember the surge of anticipation as the teacher finally stopped looking at her watch, when you knew the next thing she was going to say was . . .

And then she remembered she had to give you homework assignment and you had to wait another five seconds for her to say the stupid old reading requirements?
Remember when she finally said "Okay, see you tomorrow," the sense of unbridled jubilation flooded through your body as you popped out of your seat, threw your book in your backpack and started running for your locker as you could feel everybody else doing the same thing to you?
Remember the thronged hallways, the yelling, shoving, name calling and the unbridled rapture of happiness?
Remember when the door came into vision, and you knew that just a couple seconds, that's where you would be, at last, at last?
Remember going through that door—drowned in a deluge of continual, collective, "YAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAY!
Remember how it felt to run and run and run and run and run and run and run and run and scream and laugh?
Remember how it felt to play, whatever, 4 square, hopscotch, football, tetherball, dodgeball,
Remember how it felt to play on the swings, slide, fence, monkey bars, chin-up bars, trees, trees and in the dirt?
Remember the confidants, friends made in one day?
Remember the puppy dog romances?
Remember rejection?
Remember, oh, remember childhood?

Witness claims mill not notified of PBB

CADILLAC, MI — Thieves of plausible PBB are still reaping up in a northern Michigan Feed mill which was not notified of the initial contamination until five months after the state determined that the feed was contaminated.

Robert Easter, manager of the Farmers Feed Cooperative, testified Wednesday that a state inspector discovered PBB contamination in the feed last fall, but the mill was not informed until animals began becoming ill.

Ray Tumey, a Farmers Feed dairy farmer, said $1 million in milk sales during the summer season for the Michigan Dairy Co. for the loss of nearly 200 of his cattle. He estimated the losses were between $1,500 and $2,000 due to the contamination.

According to a preliminary architectural plan, the new mall would cover the existing two stories of the building and part of the basement. The new upper level would contain the main floor stations, while the lower level would be used for offices and storage.

Some of the new lower level sections are already open, including the spice shop, the book shop, and the cafe.

The building was closed for a brief period, but the new floor is now open.
