Concertgoers frisked by 'peers'

By JOHN CASEY State News Staff Writer

The resurgence of possibly illegal searches of concert patrons has prompted a Department of Public Safety warning that Pop Entertainment may be shut down if concert abuses continue.

The issue of frisking resurfaced Wednesday light at the Pop Entertainment-sponstred Rush concert in the MSU Auditorium. Under an agreement worked out by DPS and Pop Entertainment, student marshals conducted the searches, while DPS officers stood by to intervene if

The searches are an attempt to keep students from violating MSU ordinances by smuggling bottles and cans into the and be continued, then we might have to close them down (Pop Entertainment)," said Capt. Ferman Badgely, head Department of Public Safety (DPS) officer at the Rush concert.

As people entered the Auditorium, security marshals from Pop Entertainment stopped to check the person for any bottles or cans. Concertgoers were asked to open their coats and were often subjected to bodily frisking by the student marshal.

If a person refused the "peer group by Pop Entertainment security, an officer of DPS was then permitted to

"The concertgoer would rather have them (the student security marshal) do it, than for us (DPS) to do it," Badgely said.

The question of female frisking by male security marshals arose during entrance searches. Women were subjected to body searches without the benefit of another nales present, but many women refused the frisk by the security marshals.

Badgely stated that DPS policy is for the oman to open her coat and purse, but not to be bodily searched.

Inside the Auditorium, those "flagrant violations" were evident as people openly walked around with cans of beer, while marijuana and cigaret smoking was publicly displayed by the nonstudent majority

"We have a hands-off policy inside the Auditorium for fear of inciting something," Badgely said. He claimed the Rush concert was "relatively tame" compared to the Jethro Tull concert in Jenison Fieldhouse two years ago when DPS officers searched patrons at the door.

Though a few concertgoers were seen being escorted out by security officers, the majority of the violations went unchecked.

Jeff Frumkin, adviser to Pop Entertainment said he witnessed many violations occurring during the concert, and noted it was "not a very good night for Pop

House may reopen probe of state police Red Squad

By MICKI MAYNARD and JOE SCALES State News Staff Writer

A renewal of the investigation into the Michigan State Police Red Squad may soon be underway if a resolution approved in committee Thursday receives full House

In a unanimous vote, the House Policy Committee approved a resolution creating a special-committee to reopen the probe into political surveillance in Michigan This committee will have subpena power.

The measure would establish a five-member committee that would be appointed by House Speaker Bobby Crim, D-Davison.

House Civil Rights Committee Chairperson Perry Bullard, D-Ann Arbor, told the policy committee that a probe of the Red Squad two years ago was frustrated by a lack of cooperation from State Police Director Col. George Halverson.

Bullard later refused to charge Halverson vith a cover-up, but said the state police had failed to provide information on the number of organizations and persons spied

He said he did not believe Halverson's contention that the Red Squad no longer

"It operates under a different name now, but it is essentially the same," Bullard said.

The lawmaker said the surveillance targets had now shifted from radical groups to unions and job organizations.

The special committee's main task will be to eventually develop a package of legisla-tion dealing with political surveillence. Forbes said the committee would begin its work "as soon as possible" after it is

Michigan State Police were given authority in 1950 under Public Act 40 to create a Red Squad to monitor "subversives."

In 1974 and 1975 the Red Squad unit became the subject of lawsuits in Wayne and Ingham counties and the subject of a probe by the House Civil Rights Committee, which considered a bill to repeal Public Act 40. The committee probe was ended, but both lawsuits are still pending.

The Red Squad was declared unconstitu-tional and ordered disbanded by Ingham County Circuit Judge Thomas L. Brown early in 1976.

some 50,000 persons came close to being destroyed several times. The Michigan Appeals Court ruled, however, that the files' fate could not be decided until after the suits are over.

Recent investigations and disclosures of a small portion of some Red Squad files has revealed that the state police used their powers to spy on persons because of political affiliations, rather than actual criminal acts.

An analysis by the Detroit Free Press of a 5,000-page file kept on the Socialists Workers party (SWP) said Red Squad information was exchanged routinely with other police agencies and was given to some private organizations and prospective employers to harass SWP members.

Ann Arbor attorney Raymond Cleven-ger, a former U.S. legislator, announced earlier this week that disclosure of his Red Squad file indicates he was a target of their investigations simply because he is a member of the American Civil Liberties

MEASURE ALLOWS LEASE-BREAKING

Bill may benefit students

By PAUL NOVOSELICK State News Staff Writer

Chances of student tenants legally breaking their rental agreements when they find out-of-town employment are slim at best, but a bill introduced by a Grand Rapids senator may better those odds.

The bill, introduced Thursday by Sen. John Otterbacher, would allow rental leases to be broken "when necessitated by a change in the tenant's employment.

Under current law, the tenant is bound by existing leases, regardless of job

William Perry, an aide to Otterbacher, said that it is probable that students will be affected by the bill, though it doesn't specifically single out students in the

"It would probably include those who get new employment as well as those getting transferred," he said, "It may need an amendment to specifically include students, however.'

The bill's main provisions are that the rental agreement shall terminate 30 days after the landlord receives the tenant's written notice that:

•The tenant is being transferred by his employer to an employment situation farther than 50 miles from the rental unit-

•The tenant has been discharged by his employer and has accepted employment 50 miles from his rental unit.

In both instances, a letter of verification from the employer is needed to break the Local landlords seem to have no vigorous objections to the bill, but have some reservations about the applicability to student rental situations

"I usually rent to more than one student (per unit) anyway," said Lee Halstead of Halstead Management Co. "If any of the four people who may rent an apartment decide to leave, it's still the responsibility of the remaining three to live up to the rental

"They would have to shoulder the responsibility to the management com-

"The greatest harm may be in what tenants do to one another than what the landlord does," said Nat Hammond of Reaume and Dodds Realty Company. "If one of them gets a job and leaves, it puts the other people on the lease in a position to either find a sublessee or come up with the money."

Hammond said that it may also result in a flood of students signing 12-month leases and then leaving for home in June because

Milliken supports bill to lower PBB levels

By MICKI MAYNARD State News Staff Writer

In a surprise appearance Thursday before the House Public Health Committee, Gov. liam G. Milliken urged the passage of a bill lowering PBB tolerance levels.

Milliken's testimony came as part of hearings on a measure introduced by Rep. Francis Spaniola, D-Corunna. The measure would lower detectable levels of PBB from the present .3 parts per million (ppm) to .02

Milliken said the legislation "will be a major step toward restoring consumer confidence in Michigan-produced meat and dairy products.'

Milliken had planned to send a written statement to the committee but then decided to appear in person.

The governor said there were two basic approaches to the PBB problem. One he said, would be to take no action unless there was strong evidence that PBB was harmful.

"I sharply differ," Milliken said. "If state government waits for that kind of hard-core evidence to be available, which may take at least five to 10 years, it will simply be too

He is now finishing a book called "Decadence and Renewal in the Higher Learning," which is a history of education in the United States since World War II.

"Michigan State took the lead in lowering standards of colleges in the nation," Kirk said of the year Hannah's quest began. They admitted too many people that aren't competent and the standards of the school were lowered and curriculum altered to keep the less competent students busy.

Carter's plan amended

President Jimmy Carter's program for economic stimulation passed preliminary tests in the Senate and House on Thursday.

First the Senate, by voice vote, and then the House, on a 226-173 roll call, agreed to amend the budget for the current year to allow $17.5 billion worth of emergency spending and tax cuts. Later action will be required to approve the specific tax cuts and spending programs.

Republicans in both houses made clear that their votes for the budget amendment did not commit them to support Carter's tax-cut plan, but showed only that they see the need for Many Republicans favor a permanent tax cut rather than the one-shot $50-per-person rebate proposed by Carter.

The budget amendment accepted by both houses will raise federal spending in the current fiscal year, which ends on Sept. 30, to $417.5 billion. That will mean a deficit of

The House delayed until next Tuesday consideration of Carter's modified $13.8-billion plan of tax cuts, including rebates for 200 million Americans and a small permanent tax reduction million couples and individuals. Plans for increasing federal spending by $3.7

months are covered in separate legislation.

When the tax-cut bill comes up for debate next week, an early vote is expected on a Republican effort to shelve the Carter rebate plan and substi-tute an $11-billion across-theboard permanent tax cut.

Republicans contend the rebate is a wasteful and ineffective way of creating jobs. But Democrats favor the rebate because it is a one-shot provi-sion that would not continue to drain the treasury of money needed to finance such social programs as national health insurance.

Soviet fishermen face new problems

MOSCOW (AP) - Diminishing fish stocks and 200-mile fishing zones imposed by the United States and a growing number of other countries are bringing new problems to the Soviet fishing industry, the world's largest.

Soviet trawlers now take 13 per cent of the world catch, more than any other nation and about twice as much as they cought 10 years ago.

With tens of thousands of fishing vessels and a yearly catch topping 10 million tons, the industry has a reputation as one of the best organized and scientifically advanced sectors of the Soviet economy.

Perhaps as a result of the success, the Kremlin has been loading increasing quotas on fishermen that future conditions may make difficult to meet.

The latest Soviet five-year plan calls for 30 to 32 per cent more fish put on Soviet tables in 1976-80 than in the previous five

Japanese nationalists surrender

TOKYO (AP) - Four Japanese nationalists armed with a samurai sword and guns surrendered early Friday, 11 hours after seizing hostages in the headquarters of Japan's most powerful economic organization. None of the captives was harmed.

headquarters of Keidanren, a federation of 896 businesses and industries.

The rightists had scattered leaflets denouncing big business for "poisoning" Japan's postwar society and landscape and they cited the Lockheed payoff scandal as one example. But beyond drawing attention to their cause the purpose of their seige was not immediately clear.

MEASURES FOCUS ON LOANS, MORTGAGES

Legislation attacking redlining was introduced in both the Michigan House and Senate

Two bills, one dealing with mortgage redlining and the other establishing a bond fund for home improvement loans, were introduced as the first part of a package attacking the discriminatory practice.

The mortgage measure, which requires financial institutions to disclose details of mortgage applications that are accepted and denied, was introduced in the House by Rep. Bill Bryant, R-Grosse Pointe Farms, and in the Senate by Sen. Earl Nelson, D-Lansing.

Nelson said he felt the legislation was unique in that it had the support of leaders in both parties as well as the Michigan State Housing Development

American people. Its credibility problems began when word got out that it was poised to hire Mark Lane as its chief counsel. Lane's single-minded commitment to the theory that Oswald was framed in the Kennedy assassination would have made it impossible for the committee to conduct a fairminded investigation.

The eventual hiring of Richard Sprague — the man who threw former United Mine Workers President Tony Boyle in jail — as chief counsel at first appeared to be a stroke of genius. Subsequent events suggest that it was an egregious error.

Henry Gonzalez recently resigned as committee chairperson, calling Sprague "an unscrupulous individual, an unconscionable scoundrel." Previously, Gonzalez had attempted to fire Sprague, but the rest of the committee voted unanimously to retain him.

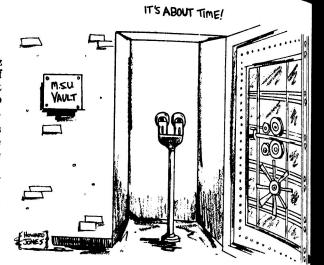

While Gonzalez' remarks may be somewhat hyperbolic, his sentiments have validity. Sprague was responsible for the outrageous suggestion that the committee employ sophisticated and probably illegal bugging techniques against potential witnesses. He hired 73 staff members and made numerous other moves without consulting Gonzalez or the committee. In retrospect, his demand that the committee be given $13 million over two years to conduct the investigation appears to be exces-

The fact is that Congress has cooled considerably at the prospect of conducting an investigation, and the Sprague-Gongalez imbroglio has been a source of acute embarrassment to most congressmen, who, by nature, do not relish this type of controversy.

The real tragedy in all this is that the demise of the committee would end what is probably the last chance to determine the truth about the Kennedy and King killings. Even as news of the committee's self-immolation was appearing in the papers, another story was printed which told of the FBI's obtaining a mysterious letter, reportedly written by Lee Harvey Oswald and delivered to Texas oil magnate H.L. Hunt. The letter, dated Nov. 8, 1963, contains implications which demand a serious investigation.

Moreover, the assumption that James Earl Ray was the sole mastermind of the King assassination increasingly appears to be a dubious one. Committee members have promised to produce three witnesses who, they say, will shed new light on King's death. If these witnesses are proved to be reliable, it is morally imperative that a congressional investigation of some kind be continued.

The repercussions of the Kennedy and King slayings can never be fully measured. The time has come to make an objective and fully concerted effort to lay to rest, for all time, the burgeoning questions about these two tragic events. It is our fervent hope that the assassination committee find a way to patch up its internal differences so it can begin, in earnest, the search for truth.

cashes in on fine

Well, it's about time. The University has finally established a cam parking violations bureau. The bureau, scheduled to take effect Jul will allow the University to cash in on revenue generated from gu pleas on campus parking violations.

Currently, either East Lansing or Mason District Court collects the fines, depending on where the violation takes place. According to Elliott Ballard, assistant to the president, MSU m net about $150,000 a year from the fines.

State law has allowed public universities and institutions to estab their own violations bureaus since 1967 for the purpose of collect guilty pleas.

Considering when the law was passed and the amount of money M could gain from the bureau, it is difficult to understand why the bureau. was not set up long ago.

Parking violators who do not plead guilty will still go to appropriate District Court for contested cases to appeal the ticket those courts will still profit if they win.

Ballard said that funds generated from the bureau would be reser for campus improvements which are presently underfunded. § improvements will include lighting, bicycle paths and fire safety.

East Lansing and Ingham County officials will probably be unabout the transfer of revenue. But if the money is being collect primarily from students and faculty, it only makes sense that the mo goes to benefit the University community.

The bureau took a while. But better late than never.

I want to offer a sincere well-done to the ASMSU Programing Board for the excellent Superstars Competition they recently held. This was student government at its best because everyone involved had a damn good time, met a lot of new people and made new friends. The camaraderie among the contestants proved my old contention that students of all types can get along if they just give it a chance.

I was especially impressed and encour aged by the fact that people eliminated early in the competition often volunteered to stick around all afternoon to lend a hand in keeping scores and such. Anything that can bring students closer to their govern-ment groups like that is to be heartily applauded. I'd like to say I enjoyed meeting and talking to all the people in the competition and I only wish that some of the ASMSU candidates would have shown up to meet and talk with people instead of whining about it being a publicity stunt. Again, my sincere congratulations to the sponsors and all the winners, and I think everyone that competed came out a winner. Bruce Ray Walker 4642 S. Hagadorn Road

Student solidarity

Every once in a while I'll be walking and think about all the people in the world. What if we were all together? What political "system" would unite us?

But the governments never unite - the people unite. A choice is made and the people get behind it.

Political parties by their very nature exclude people. Position is a space/time occurrence. It is lower than some things and higher than others. Consequently, those involved in a "political structure" are constantly vying for power shifting their

The antiquation of political parties, interests, sides, factions, divisions, sects, wings or splinter groups is apparent when man attempts to move toward solidarity. Only on a more ideal, godly plane can man/woman move towards unity. Competition isn't necessary on this plane.

The means one uses to get the people united can be as subtle and noncompetitive as imaginable. The government only serves to help people get it together, and people should remember this when voting for a governmental being.

Fair time

I'm all for people being published by the State News who offer an assortment of inaccuracies. Indeed, the State News might have some difficulty going to press but for such allowances. However, there comes a point where criticism, in its attempt to make a serious point, departs from the facts

Recently the State News published the letter of a person who said that I was a proto-fascist. For several days now I've been trying to put a construction on his meaning. Either he was uttering the ravings of a demagogic nut or he sincerely believed that I favored some form of new fascist or totalitarian rule. If the latter, he may rest easier with the knowledge that I am opposed to any form of totalitarian rule.

Now it just happens that this same individual called me at home one evening several weeks ago to tell me that he was running for ASMSU president. He said that he wanted to arm coeds as protection against rape and have ASMSU train them the use of firearms. I told him that I thought his idea was somewhat less than prudent; but wished him good luck in his

I know that as a candidate for ASMSU president I am going to be the object of many remarks which fall short of the truth. This doesn't bother me really, and it certainly hasn't deterred me from getting out with my campaign. I won't even ask that people clean up their remarks about candidates, limiting them to truthfulness. It's good for us all to be in the fire to see what we're made of.

I only think it fair that an individual be allowed to respond to any personal com-ment directed against him or her.

Need coverage

In the Feb. 21 edition of the State News, candidates running for ASMSU president (as other candidates pointed out in letters to the editor), challenged the other candidates to compete with him in the MSU Superstars Competition. The timing of Walker's challenge seems odd to me. He did not mention his challenge the night before, when a majority of presidential candidates were present at a "Meet the Candidates" gathering in Fee Hall. By the time I picked up a copy of the State News the next day, it was too late for me to meet his deadline. My principle purpose here is not to discuss Walker's infelicitous timing, but to rather voice my concern about the State News' lack of coverage of the presidential race

Last week, there were two important public discussions between candidates, yet the State News has chosen not to rep these events. In light of the State News apparent lack of concern, it seems especially peculiar that a candidate's "challenge" is deemed worthy of front-page coverage. I fear that in adopting such a passive attitude toward the campaign, the State News may simply become a stage on which candidates make their names known by engineering gimmicky attention-grabbing events. I'm certain that a majority of candidates would prefer not to conduct their campaigns in this manner, but the lack of active reporting places us in a rather strange position.

For many students, the State News will be the only source of information concerning the 16 candidates. Given the short length of time alloted for campaigning, it is imperative that thorough well-rounded coverage begin immediately.

No support

It has been brought to my attention at a recent session of the governing board of ASMSU by a representative of the Student Association for Lower Tuition (SALT) that I have not yet made a public statement on my position regarding the tuition problems

I am, of course, adamant against any further rise in tuition. I feel a large part of the problem here in Michigan is President Clifton R. Wharton Jr.'s and other top administrators at the rest of the fat universities, insistence on holding to the "sovereign university" ideal. In this state (other states have far more progressive legislators) the top universities are in actual competition with one another for their slice of the state fund "pie," and woe betide the loser. Continued use of this policy shows a typical selfishness that has become a crime unto the public in this hard century.

One can begin to understand why Wharton continually talks of law schools hospitals, and most contemptuous of all, plans for more dormitories. We understand that one must show a pretense of growth to the legislature in order to pry more funds from it. Never mind that in our budding growth we forsake the thicker trunk for the

The current educators' strike at the University of Michigan is a case in point. Never mind that the State News hasn't mentioned it yet — a terrible strike is underway in Ann Arbor. Undergraduates are forming picket lines to help their graduate teachers gain more pay. police are bashing heads. Many of us know that the grads there are very well organized, and that the undergrads aren't. These educators strike nearly every year with similar results; the grads receive pay increases and the administrators raise tuition to cover it. The poorly organized undergraduates can't hold their own and suffer the worst of all.

For this reason I cannot support the strike in Ann Arbor. I do feel very strongly about the actions of the police and am considering actions the ASMSU board could take. I hope everyone realizes that competition in the field of education is discrimination - someone has to lose.

Remedy ills

As the ASMSU presidential candidate of the Popular Front for Student Democracy I have found this campaign very upsetting. First, it is being poorly covered by the State News because the staff has had to resort to a work slowdown in a desperate attempt to prove a point to the board of directors. Second, the lack of knowledge and the extreme naivety of many of the candidates is unbelievable. Not only do they assume that the women of MSU want to b escorted around campus by men and that the Department of Public Safety is truly committed to protecting the students almost all feel that if the students beg the administration for their rights in the correct (most acceptable) manner we will get an acceptable number of crumbs tossed in our direction.

Finally, no other candidate has said anything about the fundamental question whether a university, committed by its charter to helping the people of this state, can carry out that commitment by creating a student body steeped in blind obedience to the present system and power structure. The Popular Front thinks it cannot. In order to train leaders one must allow the students to truly lead. If we are to enter the world and right its ills, we must experiment with new forms of social, economic and political organization — not in theory, but in

For MSU to serve any purpose students and society itself, it mus center for revolution, a place when ideas are formulated, put into pri evaluated and accepted or rejected. Trustee Warren Huff said, "If the thing which is deadening to a Univ it's a sense of tranquility.

Critics vary in opinions on projects

By ED LION State News Staff Writer

MSU has come under some heat from faculty members and others within the University community over the propriety of its foreign dealings. MSU has contracts with the governments of Brazil, Iran and South Korea (among others), all of whom have been labeled by various human rights organizations as brutally repressive.

Then why is MSU dealing with these countries? The answer is different depending on the source. Some say it's because of the bucks, while others say it's to improve the bucks, while those nations.

"They're in it after the bucks," said C.

Patric "Lash" Larrowe, economics professor and a frequent critic of University projects. "It doesn't really matter to them if they are helping to suppress civil liberties only how many bucks it will get them."

And MSU projects are big bucks. The University is getting $7.6 million over a four-year period for helping Brazil set up six agricultural training centers. Among other foreign projects, MSU also has contracts amounting to the hundreds of thousands of dollars to make documentaries for the Iranian government and agricultural models for South Korea.

According to Larrowe, the projects create jobs for University personnel, provide them with chances to travel and help pay the costs of running the University are not designed as moneymakers, but rather as humanity savers.

"Our projects are designed to help improve education and better the lot of the common man in those countries," he said.
"We want to spread the benefits of education and true, sometimes we must work with governments that don't exactly follow our American concepts of democracy. But there would be few nations in the world to deal with if we only worked with nations following Western-style democracy."

Due to the sensitivity of the subject, the University has developed guidelines dictating policies in conducting projects in "politically sensitive" areas.

They say "since the flow of knowledge and of scholarship should not be inhibited by political or ideological boundaries," the University is willing to work in totalitarian regimes if the freedom of project personnel is not curtailed. But the guidelines also say the University shouldn't be "engaged in strengthening the elements of repression in an extreme regime of either the left or right." In those type countries, the guidelines say, projects that benefit the "well-being of the people," like educational or nutritional research, are permissible.

To some these guidelines appear contra-

"Sure they say the project will ultimately increase food production in Brazil," said Zolton Ferency of the Criminal Justice Department. "But is the common man benefitting? Ask the Indians or dissidents who are repressed and imprisoned. The project only helps the people who support the government and thus it directly strengthens a fascist regime."

Who is to decide then if a particular project is "moral" and complies with the guidelines? The University has a projects committee, elected from various student and faculty governing bodies, that advises the dean of international affairs on each project. But again there is disagreement surrounding the committee.

"There should be stronger oversight," Larrowe said. "The group is only consulta-

And critics also suggest the committee members are prone too much toward the administration's stand of "putting bucks above morality" and don't represent the University community.

Kevin Gottleib, of the Social Science Department and head of the 20-member committee, acknowledged that his group only has advisory powers.

In practical terms, however, the group can use its leverage to veto any project, he said. Gottleib says the group's composition is picked in a "democratic" manner.

Given the enormous gap between what the administration and the critics say, some movement has started toward exploring the problem. The board of trustees, which must put its seal of approval on every project after it passes through the other channels, has set up a meeting to hear both sides of the story concerning the Brazil project.

But some say the disagreement will not be easily solved. "It's an education problem," Ferency said. "I think they (the administration) have to have their thick skulls educated about political realities. They're living in a never-never land, their vision obscured by dollar signs.

An aura of confidence and competence glows from the Office of Supportive Services, where Christine T. Wilson is director and assistant professor of higher education administration.

Wilson received her bachelor of arts degree in social work and her master of arts degree in educational psychology at MSU. She earned her doctorate at the University of Michigan in higher and continuing Wilson articulately described her duties as director of Supportive Services as management responsibilities.

"I'm in charge of handling personnel, hiring, firing, budgetary record keeping and developing programs for educationally and economically underprivileged students" she said

Prior to her present position, which she was appointed to in November 1976, Wilson was director of the Office of Women's

The 32-year-old extremely tall and slender woman said she left her job as director of Women's Programs because she desired a grow h in her career.

"It is a career appointment for me to work in a different area, but I am still growth. Leaving Women's Programs provides for me to become a more creative person."
Wilson stated that the plight of a black female in the professional world is one of powerlessness

"I think the black professional woman faces the same suspicion of the low-trained person," she added. "Black women are powerless in two ways. One as a woman, and one as a black. In many ways powerlessness gives women an edge at certain times. When it's a double bind it makes her less threatening, it gives her less permissiveness than others, and she is perceived less suspect as a romantic to a white male.

Wilson said at times she is taken less seriously by her male counterparts because she is a black female, though she tries not to let it upset her too greatly. She said the biggest compliments that men can give her is to call her self-confident, aggressive and arrogant.

"I take those remarks as highly complimentary, I hope I am all those things because I strive to be," she explained. "We are special, we have to know we're confident or we couldn't make it otherwise."

Wilson has a lot to be proud of and she recognizes it. She is affiliated with numerous organizations, such as the Women's Political Caucus, the National Association of Negro Business and Professional Women, the Michigan Council on Crime and De-linquency, the Task Force on Female Offenders and the American Association of Higher Education-Women's Caucus, to name a few. She was also cited in 1976-77 as an Outstanding Young Woman of America. As a mother of three children, Wilson attributes some of her success to her childhood and family surroundings. She said her parents always encouraged her to get an education and become someone much more than a housewife. She in turn practices these ideologies and perpetuates them on to her children. Her parents stressed the importance of becoming a professional and she said she was lucky enough to have had the opportunity to attend college and lucky enough to become someone special.

"At each step in your career when you break down those barriers around you, your feelings of specialness are reinforced," she confidently stated.

When speaking about affirmative action at MSU, Wilson became hesitant when asked if she believes that it is working.

"In some ways it's working to stimulate some awareness, as to the legal requirements," she added. "In terms of visibility in numbers, that's not happening rapidly.

Wilson said that the majority of the discrimination problem today stems from ingrained attitudes people have developed against minorities over the years. Wilson added that a better way to end a high cost of discrimination is to make equal opportunity a truism.

"We must allow minority individuals to enjoy the same kinds of freedoms that white males have had for years," she contended. "We must change those ingrained stereotyped attitudes

Pest control under study on campus

By MARGARET DeFORD

Better ways of controlling pests while de-emphasizing the use of chemicals is the object of research being conducted by an MSU assistant professor of electrical engineering and systems science.

Ramamohan Tummala, also an assistant ofessor of entomology, is one of a number of MSU faculty researching "on-line" pest control, a complex system whereby models of pest populations are fed into computers and synchronized with actual field conditions, providing immediate information on when and how to control the pests.

On line pest control may have impact in areas other than crop management.

process enabling farmers to do things in

Instead of predicting weather and crop conditions and spraying to control conditions which might occur. Tummala said. on-line pest control "continuously monitors" these conditions and provides feedback control, taking much of the guesswork out of crop management.

Tummala and his associates began their research in 1970 with a grant from the National Science Foundation for Research Applied to National Needs.

After several subjects for research were considered, integrated pest management was chosen because it paradigm of environmental management,"

Funded by grants from the Environmental Protection Agency, the United States Department of Agriculture and other agencies, the program is working on a prototype basis in several Michigan counties. It is not yet available to all Michigan farmers but many are participating in the pilot program, Tummala said.

Models are now available for pests such as the cereal leaf beetle, the alfalfa weevil and other orchard pests, Tummala said.

Participating farmers feed pest data once a week to computer terminals located in several county extension agent offices in the state. Information on soil, weather, temperature, crop condition and natural predators is collected this way.

Once all the information is received and fed into the main computer at MSU, recommendations are available to the farmer in a matter of minutes.

The recommendations, he said, can be either biological, chemical or cultural. That is, it may be suggested that the farmer use natural predators as pest controls, cultivate or harvest the crop or perhaps apply chemical controls to the pests.

However, if pesticide use is recommended, it is used as a precise control measure with insured results, Tummala said, not as a stop-gap measure.

Tummala considers on-line pest management "a long-term solution to the continuing struggle with the environment."

The ultimate goal, he said, is to provide on-line pest management to all farmers free

Gains for the farmer and society as a whole can be measured in dollars, hopefully saving the farmer quite a bit, but it can be better measured in benefits of an environmental and sociological nature, Tummual

"We have only one environment," he said, "and we must manage it to our advantage."

Un-line control, he said, "gives us a framework to look at the system and make it work for us."

Tummala added that on-line control can be used in areas other than pest control. By monitoring weather patterns, the system could make recommendations for recreational activity, foresee and perhaps prevent some transportation problems and avert pollution problems on days when an

In fact, he said, the system is now used by the highway department to predict and therefore better control traffic patterns.

More information about on-line pest control can be obtained through county extension offices or by contacting the Entomology Department at MSU. Also, Tummala has written a book with two associates, Dean L. Haynes and Brian A. Croft, entitled Modeling For Pest Management, which explains modeling activities in the United States.

Tummala said he believes systems design and management, on which an on-line pest control is based, provides the options which we can meet the limitations of our

As the term draws to a close, it is time once again for students to rate their courses and instructors.

The vehicle for this evaluation process is the Student Instructional Rating System (SIRS) forms that are distributed by the faculty to the students during the last week of

WHERE VARIETY IS KING!

There are cafeterias and then there are cafeterias, and if you've ever eaten at Schensuls, located just inside Meridian Mall or Lansing Mall, I'm sure you'll agree with me when I say it's quite a nice cafeteria.

For lunch or dinner, if you cared to count, you'd find a variety of about 120 items to choose from. You can always be assured of finding a poultry, veal, beef, fish or pork entree. For example, Schensuls has 10 different entrees for every meal with some of their best sellers being fried chicken, breaded veal, baked liver and onions and beef kabob, complete with interesting vegetables and potatoes to complement them. A new addition to their menu is a steamship round Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays. From now on you'll be able to enjoy hand carved roast beef. Schensuls is now offering a salad bar, 75¢ for a small one and $1.50 for a large one. Your salad, built to suit you, can include cherry tomatoes, eggs, shredded cabbage, croutons, carrots, bacon bits, sliced onion, shredded cheese, and a choice of 5 dressings. A wide assortment of soups and sandwiches are always offered, changing every meal of every day. Their choice of desserts was much too tempting and I found them too difficult to resist, (I had the cherry crunch cake . . . mmmmmm).

All Schensuls food is prepared fresh every day in their kitchen. A dinner at Schensuls includes an entree, choice of potatoes or vegetable, salad or dessert, roll and butter from $2.19 to $2.75. I had no idea a cafeteria could be so good and so inexpensive. And while I'm on the subject of great prices, Schensuls has some terrific lunch and dinner specials which vary each day.

There are two week night specials so popular they've made them a consistent part of their menu planning.

Wednesday night is their chicken special night, a complete meal for $2.19 and Friday night fish is available on special for also $2.49.

Every day is family day at Schensuls. Children's menu available at reduced prices. The kids will be happy for the chance to eat out and you'll know they're getting a balanced meal. No smoking areas are also available.

Schensuls has banquet facilities available for up to 300 people. A great spot for club meetings.

Don't wait for the next time you're at Meridian Mall to eat there, their State News/Linda Bray echoslovakian conductor Bystrik Rezucha led the SU Symphony Orchestra through the rigors of dless rehearsals and the jitters of an actual perrmance during his stay at MSU. Rezucha noted any differences in the Czech and American sysms of musical training while at MSU.

"The kids wanted to do the Brahms symphony very badly, and they worked hard and did their best," Rezucha said.

Rezucha described the work by Rorem as "very clever."

"It's orchestral part is not too difficult, and there are two very interesting parts for violin and

"I had planned to do a Czech work by Ilja Zeljenka, the 'Elergy for Strings,' but the work was too difficult and more rehearsal time would have been needed for the work than we had for the entire program."

The Czech work utilized what Rezucha referred to as "polymetric," or "metrical modulation," which calls for several different sections of the orchestra to play in different time signatures.

Training for musicians in Czechoslovakia is very different from that in the United State, Rezucha said.

"We would take students earlier in Czechoslovakia and one would try to get into the convervatoire at age 12 or 13," he said.

When students graduate from the conservatoire, they usually find jobs teaching or performing. They may also audition for an orchestra or continue their studies, Rezucha

In Czechoslovakia, the recording companies (there are three: Suprophon, Panton and Opus), symphonies, operas and music schools are state controlled, and through Czechoslovakia's system of state support for the arts, composers produce prolifically.

Jazz bassist Ron Carter slated for weekend show

Innovative jazz bassist Ron Carter and the Ron Carter Quartet will close the winter term season for ShowcaseJazz as they present this Detroit-born artist today and Saturday at 8 and 11 p.m. in the Erickson Hall kiva.

Born in Royal Oak Township, Carter played cello until the age of 10, when he switched to a double bass because the sound was better and it was the only route to employment. After receiving a degree from the Eastman School of Music and working with the Eastman Rochester Symphony (where he became an accomplished symphonic player), Carter moved to New York City and began to play with Chico Hamilton and later the Miles Davis Band.

The break for Carter came when he joined John Coltrane, Elvin Jones and McCoy Tyner to create one of the most influential jazz units of the time. During this period, Carter introduced audiences to Juzek, a German bass noted for note retention and fine tone.

Carter is also one of the most sought-after jazz bassists. His playing is included on numerous albums from Eric Dolphy to

The Ron Carter Quartet consists of Carter on piccolo bass and double bass, Ben Riley on drums, Kenny Baron on piano and Buster Williams on double bass.

'Animals' clumsy writing from Pink Floyd

State News Reviewer PINK FLOYD: Animals (Columbia – JC 34474) Old McDonald had a farm on Mars. That is the theme you would expect Pink Floyd's "Animals" to have. Wrong.

The theme is as subtle as the inflatable pig flying in a muddy smoke on the cover. It's a metaphor. Get it? Moralizing about big industry's exploitation of the masses was quaint when pious George Harrison wrote "Piggies" in 1968. But from a band like Pink Floyd, the neorevolutionary theme is now simply cliche.

The three main musical pieces are called "Pigs" (the owner-exploiters), "Sheep" (the masses) and "Dogs" (those from the masses who aspire to pigdom). Inventive. The lyrics are to be generally disregarded if one is to enjoy the music . . . the clumsiest writing ever by this band.

While the music is flawed and noninventive, it is still of a much higher caliber than most of what passes as "popular music." "Animals" is overly ambitious, and, unlike "Dark Side of the Moon" or even "Wish You Were Here," falls short of its goals. Yet in falling, it manages to land just ahead of its imitators in the field of cerebral "space rock."

Pink Floyd was one of the first in this field and remains the leader. Combining sensitive, thoughtful lyrics with complex musical compositions which were far beyond the limits of what was defined as "rock," Pink Floyd created something beyond categorizatured (almost in the classical sense) pieces like "Atom Heart Mother" from the album of the same name and "Echoes" from "Meddle" set Floyd far apart from the popular mainstream especially in that they were not only ambitious, but successful, financially and artistically.

"Dark Side of the Moon" was the culmination of Pink Floyd's recording for the Harvest label. Released in 1973, it was an incredible smash hit, going the constitution will also change the method of obtaining funds for RHA. Last week RHA decided once and for all how to raise the per-capita rate of assessment.

If approved, the new constitution would allow RHA to collect $1.75 in lieu of the $1.50 now collected each term. RHA operational costs will no longer be taken from dormitory managements.

Terry Borg, RHA president, said, "They (residence halls

The change gives RHA the power to collect the extra quarter fall term automatically and the option to determine the uses of the extra quarter for spring and winter terms.

If the body does not see a need for the extra quarter by the fifth week of the preceding term, it can give the total $1.75 to the residence halls governments. The entire $1.75 will be allocated to the residence halls governments during summer term.

Borg said that the option seemed the only reasonable recourse to change the rate of assessment. "This is the only alternative we have," he said.

The constitution will allow the appointed secretary to reside off campus as well as make the treasurer the chairperson of the budget committee.

The referendum on boycotting non-UFW southwestern iceburg head lettuce and table grapes is simply to let the board of trustees know whether the students living in residence halls want to continue the boycott now in effect.

The referendum does not give RHA the power to continue or end the boycott, but merely gives the body an official position.

By MIKE LITAKER

State News Sports Writer MSU's hockey team is going to brace itself for this weekend's deciding series against Michigan. At least that's the way it will be for sophomore center Darryl DiPace.

Out since Oct. 22 when he tore ligaments in his right knee against Ohio State, DiPace will return for the regular season finale on a line with Jim Cunningham and Kevin Cough-

The 5-foot-9 speedster has spent the last week skating with a knee brace. He now says he believes he's ready to start collecting dividends on the months of rehabilitation he has put himself through in the Munn Arena weight room and jogging up and down the aisleway steps.

"I was aiming for this weekend just to play at the end of the season," said DiPace, while demonstrating how the brace fits on his knee.

"It was hard to sit and watch the games all year and it got harder the closer it came to when I knew I'd play," he continued. "I'll be a little bit nervous, but I always play a little better when I'm nervous.

DiPace had been a highly discussed Spartan recruit after pumping in 37 goals last season for the Detroit Junior Red Wings to lead the team in scoring. Getting DiPace's stick back on the ice should be a plus for the sagging MSU offense and DiPace is confident that he'll live up to his advance

"The fans can expect what they've heard," DiPace said, looking up with a grin. "Whatever was said or written about me wasn't made up. I'm going to go out and prove it."

At the moment coach Amo Bessone will take all the proof he can get for his eighth-place club that needs at least a split with the Wolverines in order to stay in the play-off race.

Ninth-place Colorado College has a home-and-home set with cross-state Denver this weekend and if the Tigers and MSU should wind up in a tie for the final play-off spot, the nod would go to CC.

The determining factor will be goals for and against difference of the two squads. Presently, CC holds a 27-goal over the Sparadvantage

Michigan will have three 30 goal scorers in its line-up this weekend in the form of Dave DeBol, Kip Maurer and Kris Manery. Rick Palmer has handled most of the Wolverine netminding and was in goal last December when the Spartans swept the two game series.

Green, Thompson unanimous; Kelser 2nd team All-Big Ten

U-M's Rickey Green and Minnesota's Michael Thompson were unanimously selected for the All-Big Ten first team and MSU's Greg Kelser made the second team in the United Press International balloting by the 10 conference coaches.

Completing the first team were Phil Hubbard of U-M, Walter Jordan of Purdue and Kent Benson of Indiana, who made the first team for the third consecutive year and just missed a unanimous selection by one vote.

Named to the second team besides Kelser were freshman

Mike Woodson of Indiana, Ray Williams of Minnesota, Brug Mike Woodson of Indiana, 1843 Williams of Minnesola, but "Sky" King of Iowa and Billy McKinney of Northwestern. Going into MSU's final two games of the season at Purday

Lowering PBB

The governor told committee members that if the state were to make a mistake at all, "we must err on the side of safety in protecting human health. A decade from now may be too late."
Rep. Jackie Vaughn III. D Detroit, asked Milliken if he had considered issuing an executive order to take care of the problem. The governor replied that there was nothing that could be done by his directive.

Milliken was asked by Rep. George Cushingberry, D-Detroit, whether he favored the Michigan Citizen's Lobby proposal of labeling all meat and dairy products produced and sold in the state. "I feel that labeling is only a diversion from the main issue," Milliken said. "It wouldn't accomplish anything except destroying the industry. The question is lowering the tolerance levels."

The governor said later that while he was displeased at the slow progress PBB legislation has made since the problem first arose in 1973, he would not accuse the committees of procrastinating on the

"Either a nine-month lease at higher rates would be instituted, or a 12-month lease with price adjustments would be needed." Richard Lilley, president of the Mid-Michigan Property Owners Association, said he sees no trouble with the bill.

"Pigs" is not carried off as however. The album's weakest selection, it degenerates from a promising intro into endless snythesized vamping interspersed with some lovely effects of grunting pigs. "Pigs" is enervated in the tradition of Traffic's worst selfindulgences. Just as Gilmour and Waters' ascending bass line starts to cook, "Pigs" fades out.

The chief danger of Pink Floyd's type of music is its potential to become too antiseptic and sterile if it assumes abstract thought. It should feel like a band of individuals, and not a machine, is playing.

"Sheep" feels this way and is, by far, the best work here because (while tightly structured and played with discipline), the band rocks. A delicate, shimmering keyboard intro over a loping bass like that on 'Meddle's' "One of These Days," dissolves into a raw rhythm guitar figure, taut with the tension of Gilmour's economical playing. His fresh rhythm licks propel the song - with its nice sense of musical contrasts and the album to its end. "Play more," you say.

"Within the next three or four months we hope to make decisions on what the cost will be and what the plans will be," he said. "Joan Trezise (chairperson of the committee) wants to move rather quickly on this." There has also been some discussion within the committee on a regional approach to the overcrowding problem.

"Feelers have been sent to Clinton and Eaton Counties," Sederburg said, adding that both those counties are facing the same problem.

However, he said there would be a lot of hurdles to overcome in order to take this approach. For example, a big problem would be choosing a county to take charge of administration and management of the program, and Sederburg added that many legalities would have to be considered.

"I would bet that we will have to stay within Ingham County," he said.

The pretrial diversion program and the Ingham County Release on Recognizance (ROR) Program have been credited by the committee with preventing a space crisis at the jail from occurring earlier, but directors of these programs told the committee in February they did not believe the programs could significantly reduce the present jail population. Ingham County Prosecutor Peter Houk's office has been using the pretrial diversion program that was originated by former prosecutor Raymend Scodeller. The program diverts nonviolent felony offenders from the courts into training programs and jobs.

In a Feb. 22 letter to the Ingham County Commissioners'
Finance Committee, William Barker, ROR program director, said the program has "on the average, reduced the inmate population at the Ingham County Jail by 26 persons per day during the period of Aug. 30, 1975, to June 30, 1976."

Barker's letter was sent in eference to a resolution that will make the ROR program a permanent, fully funded county program, provided the commisoners pass the resolution at the Tuesday meeting.

Chambers of the Sea

"We have lingered in the chambers of the sea, By sea nymphs, wreathed in sea weed, red and brown 'Til human voices wake us

-T. S. Eliot

Probably best known for his work with the film, "Blue Water-White Death," Stan Waterman is one of the world's foremost underwater divers, explorers and filmmakers. In CHAMBERS OF THE SEA, he takes us to the Sinai Reefs in the Gulf of Aquaba to study the fascinating garden eel, to Cocos-Keeling, remote atolls in the Indian Ocean, and to the Coral Sea, scene of one of the greatest battles of World War II.

Saturday, March 5 at 8:00 p.m. in the University Auditorium

Tickets are $2.00, at the door only. One child under 12 admitted free with each paid adult admission. $1.00 for additional children under 12 years. MSU Students: FREE with valid I.D.

Plans for Olga's Kitchen rest aurant to be located in the vacant Campus Book Store building may have difficulty being approved because of the shortage of parking in downtown East Lansing.
The plans were discussed

Wednesday night at a planning commission work session.

The Campus Book Store that was located at 131-133 E. Grand lease, which expires March 31. with building owner Meyer

Kershenbaum of Detroit. Rumors about the future occupants of the building were quieted somewhat when Meg Waldron, manager of the Kay Baum clothing store next door and Kershenbaum's local representative, revealed that one occupant would be a Peck and Peck woman's clothing store and when the state Liquor Control Commission received an application for a bar-restaurant liquor license from Aglo Restaurants, Inc., Southfield for the Campus Book area. The basement would be used for offices and storage. Some of the menu items at various service stations include spinach pie, an Olga sandwich, a salad bar and "olgurt." Potted plants would dot the

'We don't know what recommendations are in the study,' senior planner Bob Owen said.

Paula Johnson, chairperson of the planning commission, said she has heard more negative comments from central business district store owners about the proposed restaurant than concerns over the proposed Dayton-Hudson shopping

"They want no more restaurants or bars in the city and they don't want that kind of establishment facing Grand River Avenue." Johnson said.

Members of the commission agreed to keep the moratorium against granting parking waivers until the study results are in.

"This is a change in the use and intensity of the building and we should not approve the restaurant until the parking demands are met," Scott Radway, planning director, said.

Radway said this action will not automatically prohibit the owners from making use of their property because the necessary parking spaces may
