The State Police Red Squad did surveillance on alleged subversives from 1950 to 1975, when it was ruled unconstitutional. The contents of its files have been the subject of two lawsuits and the Michigan House is considering a probe into its activities.

Evidence indicates that the Human Relations Commission was the target of Red Squad surveillance in 1984 and the East Lansing City Council was a target in 1971, according to the commission.

Other letters drafted by the commission were to be sent to Ingham County Circuit Court Judge Thomas Brown and Wayne

The injunction could leave open some confusing possibilities regarding who will sit on the Student Board Tuesday. The ASMSU elections code does not state who would sit on the board should an injunction be ordered.

AUEC Chairperson Barry Griffiths said he does not know who would be seated if the order is issued. "SFJ has the answers tomorrow. Until then we're all up in the air." he said.

Several unnamed sources familiar witl judicial matters have speculated that four possibilities exist. These include:

• Current ASMSU Student Board President Michael Lenz could chair the meeting and the Tuesday session would continue to conduct business during the appeals.

• Counterforce presidential candidate

Mary Cloud and other runners-up could serve on the board until all judicial matters are resolved and a special election is possibly held · Kent Barry and the other Spartan Spirit slate members could be seated. According to one of the sources, this is because the injunction could be interpreted as freezing the AUEC invalidation temporarily.

 Only the winners that were not invalidated could take their board seats. Only seven of the 10 college seats would be filled and there would be no Student Board president.

Barry has retained James Haischer former ASMSU Comptroller, and Lewis K. Zerby, of Philosophy Department, as his

A legal definition of "signed" can be applied to the spending report Barry turned in because his name was typed on it.

•The AUEC failed to send out reminders about the spending reports three days prior to the election as required by the ASMSU elections code.

• Nowhere in the code does it specifically say that candidates can be invalidated for submitting unsigned spending reports.

· The document of invalidation only states that Spartan Spirit has been "disqualified," a term not defined in the

emissions agreement reached

Particles would be 'bagged' with proposed solution's use

By ANNES. CROWLEY State News Staff Writer

After eight years of MSU violating state and federal air pollution standards, University and state officials have reached an agreement that may solve the problem at MSU Power Plant 65.

Hearings scheduled to begin Monday by the Michigan Air Pollution Control Commis-sion (MAPCC) have been canceled because of the new agreement.

Under the agreement, the state and the University would share the cost of installing a bag house filter system at the power plant rather than the more commonly used and more expensive electrostatic precipitators, to cut down emissions pollution.

However, a press aide for Gov. William

G. Milliken said the governor had committed himself only to "sharing some costs" and not to any specific amount of money.

Executive Vice President Jack Breslin, though, said in a press release that the state legislature would appropriate $4 million of the $7.2 million cost "later," in addition to the $800,000 it has already approved.

The University would foot the rest of the bill, about $2.4 million, Breslin said. The cost of installing two electrostatic

University officials have argued that MSU could not foot the bill to install the precipitators and has been unable to secure funding from state or federal public works programs since the controversy began in

The federal government entered the fracas last winter when the EPA ordered MSU to take steps toward compliance with state clean air standards.

MSU is now awaiting engineering reports from outside consultants on the bag system before it begins negotiating a timetable with Michigan Atty. Gen. Frank Kelley, Breslin said.

The reports will be finished by June 1, he said, after which the consent order will be negotiated with Kelley and the MAPCC. The order will spell out a timetable for installing the bag house filter, which could be completed by 1980, Breslin said. The bag house system operates like a vacuum cleaner bag, drawing gases from a boiler through a series of long, slender bags to filter out particulates.

Former FBI supervisor indicted

for wiretapping, mail snooping

By MARGARET GENTRY Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A former FBI supervisor was indicted Thursday for allegedly snooping into private mail and for reportedly ordering illegal wiretaps during the early 1970s search for radical Weatherman fugitives.

The indictment was the first criminal charge stemming from the year-long Justice Department investigation of burglaries and other allegedly illegal tactics used by the FBI to gather intelligence about political militants.

Department officials indicated other indictments may be forthcoming as the investigation continues.

The indictment, returned by a federal grand jury in New York City, charged John J. Kearney, 55, with two counts of conspiracy, two counts of obstructing correspondence, and one count of illegal wiretapping. If convicted, he faces a maximum penalty of five years in prison on each charge plus fines which could total

Kearney retired after 25 years with the FBI in June, 1972 and now is assistant vice president of Wells Fargo Armored Service in New York City. He could not be reached Atty, Gen. Griffin Bell, who approved the recommendation of department officials to seek the indictment, had no comment on the specific charges.

From August 1970 until his retirement, Kearney supervised Squad 47 in the New York FBI office. The squad was assigned to hunt down Weatherman radicals who were charged with bombings and other terrorist activities.

The Weatherman group split off from Students for a Democratic Society, a group which led many of the campus protests and antiwar demonstrations of the 1960s. Weatherman generally was more violent than Perhaps the best-known Weatherman fugitive was Bernadine Dohrn who was charged in connection with the "days of rage" in which dozens of leftists roamed through downtown Chicago smashing windows and committing other acts of van-dalism in 1969. She has never been apprehended.

An FBI spokesperson said Squad 47 was responsible for apprehending some Weatherman fugitives but he had no information on the number of names.

The indictment alleges that Kearney and the agents of Squad 47 conspired to intercept and copy private mail and use illegal wiretaps "for the purpose of seeking leads to the location and apprehension of Weatherman fugitives. The targets of the mail opening operation and the 11 illegal telephone taps were persons the FBI agents thought might be in contact with the fugitives, the indictment

It listed 17 New York residents whose mail was intercepted illegally, including Jennifer Dohrn, believed to be a relative of Bernadine. Some of the mail opening targets also were targets of the wiretaps.

None of Kearney's agents was named or charged in the indictment. Department officials earlier granted immunity from prosecution to low-ranking street agents involved in the allegedly illegal acts in exchange for their testimony against their bosses.

Kearney and the squad obtained keys "that could be used to open various mailboxes in the New York City area," the indictment said.

Oil potential exaggerated, officials say

ANCHORAGE (AP) — The potential of National Petroleum Reserve No. 4. ballyhooed as the nation's richest oil field and a possible solution to the energy crisis, has been wildly exaggerated, say industry and government officials.

The reserve, whose potential has been estimated at as much as 100 billion barrels of oil, may hold only one billion to three billion barrels, according to the latest figures from the U.S. Geological Survey

Even one billion barrels could be important if it were to be extracted at a reasonable cost — the United States uses about 18 million barrels daily. And no one in government or industry would rule out the possibility that a larger field might be found on the 37,000-square-mile area on Alaska's North Slope.

But R. A. McIntosh, North Alaska District geologist for Atlantic Richfield, notes it's not even certain that any Pet 4 oil can be extracted in quantities that would make it economical to develop the area. "There's no easy oil in Pet 4," he meeting that dissidents described as a "pep rally.

The dissidents, who picketed the heavily-guarded meeting, earlier filed an internal union complaint demanding Fitzsimmons' ouster on charges of nepotism, squandering funds and dealing with organized crime figures.

SEN. NELSON URGES PROMPT CONSIDERATION

Senate to ponder Seafarer fate, has final say on Navy system

MILWAUKEE (UPI) - Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., said Wednesday the Senate must decide soon if the proposed Navy communications system called Project Seafarer is "vital to national security."

In a statement released by his Milwaukee office Nelson said the House Armed Services Committee vote to scrap Seafarer, the controversial project once known as Project Sanguine, means the Senate now as the final say on it.

"The door of decision has been flung wide open by the House; we must now scrutinize this program and decide the fate of Project Seafarer and see if it is vital to national secur-" Nelson said.

When it was first proposed it was known as Sanguine and under that name it was slated for possible construction in Wisconsin. But citizens, government officials and environmental groups opposed it and in Wisconsin.

Michigan Gov. William G. Milliken has also vetoed the project in that state. The Navy has asked for $23.7

million for work on Seafarer during fiscal 1978 but the House committee turned it

Nelson criticized the Navy for not answering questions about the proposed system and said the Senate must "now scrutinize this program and decide the fate of Project Seafarer."

Michigan Rep. Philip Ruppe said Wednesday there still is a strong possibility Congress will restore funding for the Navy's controversial Seafarer Project.

Ruppe, a Republican from Houghton, asked a Senate Armed Services subcommittee to follow the lead of a similar House panel and delete all funding for Seafarer.

But he added that even if the subcommittee does take the action he is "not certain" it will

The Cave of the Candles restaurant in East Lansing was threatened with closure by the county health department Thursday because of unhealthy conditions.

The acclaimed restaurant, located at 110 Abbott Road, was given 24 hours Wednesday night to remedy all violations involving cleanliness.

Some of the health code violations found in the restaurant were uncovered foods in the refrigerator, broken plumbing resulting in toilets that were used without being able to be flushed, a lack of thermometers in some refrigerators, storage of food containers on the floor instead of on shelves, food that had been spilled on the kitchen floor and not cleaned up, walls that had deteriorated from splashed water and had not been patched and a dish-which has been a prominent fixture of public discussion for the last several years.

The "breach of responsibility" which Milliken cites does not arise out of taking a stand on this issue, but rather comes about when the governor refuses to hold state utilities — and his own appointees to the PSC - responsible for their actions with regard to consumer interests.

Milliken skipped, skirled and slithered around other issues in a similar manner. His highly selective interpretation of the history of the PBB matter - in which he portrayed himself as a man using the fullest resources of his office at the earliest possible time to resolve PBB difficulties - is simply not substantiated by the

With regard to Seafarer, Milliken's insistence that he always intended to veto the project "if the people did not want it" is contradicted by his failure to cast the veto last year, when Upper Peninsula residents repudiated the Navy-sponsored boondoggle by referendum margins as high as 10

His excuse that he was awaiting an environmental impact report before making his judgment is lame, for it implies that had the statement rejected the possibility of Seafarer-inflicted environ-mental damage, he might not have cast the veto. Failure to veto. obviously, would contradict his own professed commitment of abiding by the people's judgment.

It is talk like this that ultimately dissuades people from taking part in the political process. After all, it is difficult to cage and analyze snaking political rhetoric.

Editorials

Your editorial of April 1 concerning the difficulties MSUFA has encountered with the administration and with MERC was a most welcome surprise. We are gratified that you have chosen to support so strongly the faculty's efforts to win collective bargaining.

We firmly believe that the real victors in our struggle will be the students, because collective bargaining is the last, best hope for quality education at Michigan State University. Through collective bargaining. the faculty can assure that the first and persistent consideration in MSU's list of priorities will be quality education for our students. Our professional commitments demand that we accept no less. We know that our students deserve no less.

Thank you again for your support. It will surely make our uphill struggle easier. Philip A. Korth

Brazil Project

On March 3 the State News published a viewpoint written by Prof. Milton Taylor entitled "Brazil, The Economics of a Ripoff," as well as an "Issues and Trends" article by staff writer Ed Lion, both specific to MSU's involvement in the Brazil Project and both heavily slanted toward an abandonment of the project.

On that same day I wrote a "letter to the editor" entitled "Isolationist Folly" in which I advocated, or so to speak, a somewhat differing position. I fully expected that the letter would be published because (1) it conformed with the style and limitations the State News imposes, and (2) I have been led to believe during the past 10 years that the State News was a relatively honest voice on the campus which conscientiously presented all sides on important and controversial issues of campus concern. I was WRONG! A number of issues of the State News were published subsequent to March 3 and prior to the end of the term and two issues have been published at the beginning of the new term and the letter has not, to my knowledge, appeared.

On the March 30 editorial page the State News indignately and self-righteously scathed the MSU Board of Trustees of suspicion of wrongdoing for not providing an opportunity to hear both sides of the Brazil Project controversy during its between-term meeting. Come come now, editors, isn't this a bit of the "pot calling the kettle black?" For shame!

Please don't tell me or your readers that (1) the letter was lost or misplaced, or too long, or (2) it was squeezed out by other letters written on more significant or more controversial topics. To do so would only compount an obvious unwritten policy of selective exclusion and blatant dishonesty and hypocrisy.

News Bulletin

Had I known Prof. Philip Korth would publish my response to his viewpoint, I would have expanded it to include other information I had given him in a telephone month ago and in a statement of News Bulletin policy and procedures in regard to collective bargaining sent to him in February 1976.

Because I thought he was familiar with that information, I did not repeat it, but I am happy to clarify and to expand on my brief response to Korth.

The News Bulletin, funded by the University as a means of communication to faculty and staff, is, in my opinion, a helpful service. It is a publication devoted to news and features about the University. It serves as guide and calendar for campus activities. It is also a forum for faculty and staff opinion, and, yes, opinions on controversial Collective bargaining is a controversial issue. It is an issue of concern throughout the University and, as such, it should be explored in the News Bulletin — but at the proper time.

In February 1976, Korth was informed by personal letter by the then editor of the News Bulletin that News Bulletin pages would be open to such exploration during the two or three weeks preceding an election.

This was an attempt to keep the News Bulletin free from efforts to garner support for or against collective bargaining all year long. It was the procedure used preceding the election in 1972.

In his letter to me, Korth said that the News Bulletin has little difficulty finding for those who oppose collective bargaining. It we have printed opinions of those who oppose collective bargaining, to my knowledge and in my memory, they have not said so in those opinions in the News Bulletin.

Chemistry

The Chemistry Department deserves a lot of long overdue credit because of the improvements in Chemistry 130 and 131. Fall term these courses had some definite shortcomings.

One problem fall term concerned the lessons. The Chemistry 130 and 131 courses are both taught by lessons recorded on cassette tapes. In addition to listening to tapes in the Tape Room, students can get the recordings of lessons to listen to at home on their own tape recorders. In Fall, students provided their own tapes to be recorded by the Chemistry Department and waited at least two days to get them back. Many students fell behind in their lessons because of the delay in receiving their tapes. Winter term however, prerecorded tapes are available through the Chemistry Department for a small fee, and they can be exchanged from lesson to lesson. This procedure saves much time.

Incomplete learning material was a second problem. The tapes are supplemented by books of corresponding tape notes. Fall term these books were not finished, so the tape notes had to be picked up separately by students at the Chemistry Building for each unit. But in winter term the books were complete so trips to the Chemistry Building for individual notes were unnecessary.
A third problem was the poor testing situation. Earlier, the scheduled testing rooms filled up quickly, and additional students were sent to different buildings at the last minute. Now there are more testing rooms scheduled, and the room numbers are announced beforehand along with the test days and times. Also, the keys to the exams are now posted outside the testing rooms so students do not have to walk to the Chemistry Building to see their scores.

Thanks to these improvements I am learning and enjoying chemistry at the

Cable TV

I am surprised at the amount of press being given to the proposed interconnect of the Lansing East Lansing C.A.T.V. systems. I suppose one could derive s humor in the fact that so many would make it appear it was just thought of and it couldn't happen without them, from councilmembers to cable commissions there are statements and quotes all serving to involve them with their "whatever."

It is time to point out that interconnect was provided for and required when the ordinances were written.

Ref: Lansing Ordinance 11-A9 (e) Every cable television system franchised under this Cable TV Code shall maintain such capacity, capability and technical standards as will enable it to interconnect with any other cable television system located in any adjacent community.

The franchisee shall interconnect its cable system with all other contiguous East Lansing cable systems, and may interconnect with any other system or service. The franchisee's system shall be designed and constructed so as to be capable of interconnection with any systems existing in municipalities contiguous to East Lansing (and insofar as is technically and economically feasible, with any such systems anticipated for future construction); and the franchisee shall make reasonable and diligent efforts to accomplish interconnection with such systems.

"My family is coming back for graduation It will be fun to see Grandma trekking down

For Karen Douglas, a 39-year-old mother of two children and wife of a Lansing Community College instructor, coming back was a drastic change from working off-and-on as a secretary, doing volunteer work and auditing classes intermittently since 1959.

"By and large, older persons are reluctant to participate in class. They're afraid of being a little rusty," said Mildred Erickson, assistant dean of life-long education.

"They come back for very serious reasons," Erickson said.

One reason many women return is to "work on their minds" after getting their children in school. Or they come back after "moving up the job ladder and not being satisfied," Erickson said.

Sometimes there is pressure to help the family finances by getting a better job.

Fox, who has been in and out of college for the past 10 years, feels she has always had her "toe in the water." She returned as a full-time student last spring just for the "satisfaction value" and to "tie up" her

"A general feature of society is that it or have communication handicans," said associate professor of linguistics and computer science John Eulenberg.
As director of the Artificial Language

Laboratory in the Computer Science De partment, Eulenberg and his student research team have created computerized devices enabling handicappers to communicate. One of Eulenberg's innovations has been the talking computer.
In October of 1975, Vicki Caruso spoke her name for the first time in her 17-year struggle with cerebral palsy. With the use of the talking computer - a modified keyboard containing a matrix of phrases and vertical and horizontal lights - the young handicapper formed the message by selecting words from a display board. Via telephone hook-up, the message was transmitted to a computer on campus, which relayed the signal back to the vocal synthesizer, where it was then converted into words.

Eulenberg was heralded in many newspapers for his humanitarian work, receiving as much coverage as his famous "computer Eulenberg claims the computer is often used as a scapegoat. Through his work he has shown the computer capable of bringing the humanity out of people. Technology has helped the handicapper rise from being the most politically weak group on earth to people with a voice, Eulenberg said. "Language is just a conventional thing we agree to communicate in certain ways

Attending the University of California at San Diego, Eulenberg received a Ph.D. upon the completion of his research on the major language of Nigeria — Hausa. This well-rounded background aided Eulenberg when he decided to combine technology and linguistics in his pursuit to help the handicapper. He came to MSU in 1972, after teaching at Stanford University.

He considers his work in the Artificial uage Lab as an avenue for potential gratification from a highly emotional packed job. Eulenberg has helped and been helped by J. J. Jackson, a blind consultant at the lab, and Jim Renuk, a student with Jackson, a former student of the Michigan School for the Blind in Lansing, became friends with Stevie Wonder, who has financed many projects in the language lab. Wonder has from time to time expressed to Eulenberg an interest in doing a benefit concert at MSU to help the lab.

Not unlike his work in the lab, Eulen berg's life has been a colorful history of "interdisciplinary ventures." He has been a professional photographer in college (he met a fellow photographer whom eventually married), movie company owner and film producer.

"I like to document my projects into sight and sound presentations," Eulenberg said as he showed snapshots of his recent work

"Language is just a conventional thing — we agree to communicate in certain ways and agree not to communicate by other ways.

and agree not to communicate by other ways," Eulenberg reflected.

'It's more important who communicates with who," he said. His interest in technology as more than 'people as numbers" was nurtured in his undergraduate days at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology where he studied engineering and German literature. From there it was a master's degree from Harvard in linguistics, keying on the problems of a synthetic language used through mechanical means.

with the two-way cable project in Rockford, Illinois.

Glossolalia, or speaking in tongues, has intrigued him as another aspect of linguistics. He cites a woman who claims foreign languages pass through her and is able to interpret their meanings. He wishes to talk with her someday.

Perhaps Eulenberg's most time-consuming hobby is what he simply states as "thinking about what we're doing." For John Eulenberg that is quite a lot of

By PAM WEAR State News Staff Writer

Rep. H. Lynn Jondahl, D-East Lansing, said Thursday that the House bill authorizing state and local police to use wiretaps in drug investigations is "essentially worthless" because it does not handle the basic problem of drug profitability. The wire tapping bill is one of six passed by the House this week designed to "get tough" on the heroin trade.

"If the wiretapping bill became law, the major effect would be to make drug dealing more profitable," Jondahl said

"Whenever there's a big drug bust and lots of heroin is taken up by law enforcement officers. the price of drugs on the street goes up. It will thus make it more profitable for a pusher to be a pusher."

Fear of the drug scene is behind much of the enthusiasm for the drug legislation, Jondahl said. He is cosponsor of a bill to institute a clinical maintenance program to treat heroin addicts and said he feels this, not wiretapping, is the direction that must be taken to combat drug abuse

The worst thing is that the bill permits installation of wire

Ingham County Republican Chairperson William Sederburg criticized Jondahl for his vote against the heroin package, saying the vote was a recent example of Jondahl's continuing and persistent attempt to make this legislation completely ineffective in terms of cracking down on the large volume of drug dealers.

Michigan prison system. Rosenbaum said he believes his $439 million bond bill for prison construction and improvement will alleviate prison overcrowding.

With voter approval in the 1978 election, the state of Michigan would borrow $439 million to upgrade its present prison system under the provisions of the bill.

The total cost of Rosenbaum's bond bill is estimated to be $19.22per taxpayer or $25.88 per household per year for a 20-year period.

• $100 million of the money would be used to provide an additional 200 beds to current prison facilities.

• $152 million would provide additional space for person placed on probation who would be sentenced to prison under the mandatory two-year term. That sentence is for those convicted of homicide, assault, robbery or criminal sexual conduct.

"You can't have mandatory minimum sentences unless you are ng to pay for them," said Rosenbaum.

•$187.25 million would be used to bring existing facilities into conformity with present standards.

Style graces 'She Stoops to Conquer'

By PETER J. VACCARO

State News Reviewer liver Goldsmith's "She Stoops To Conquer" is a charming play, a pretty play, a play that remains after 200 years a great audience favorite. The current BoarsHead Theater staging of the 18th-century comedy, under the sensitive direction of BoarsHead producer Richard Thomsen, is charming and pretty and, predictably, a great audience pleaser. Predictably, not only by merits of the play itself, but because one comes to realize rather quickly that the Boars-Head company does not disappoint its audiences. Thompsen has conceived this production with a great sense of style and with a fine respect for Goldsmith's elegant language and brilliant wit. His actors take admirable care with language, diction is remarkably clear, pacing is quick and fluid. Blocking is simple, movement is smooth and shows a reasonable, if not thorough, awareness of period style; stage business is clean and appropriate.

A new prolog, composed in rather slick couplets by Thomsen for this production, provides a pleasant introduction to the company as well as to the play, while setting a happy mood that is consistently main-

The company itself performs admirably throughout. Eric Tull, as Hastings, gives us his finest performance to date with the BoarsHead Players. His delivery of the play's prolog is delightful, and his handling of verse is particularly note worthy.

One released Red Squad file obtained by the commission indicates that the East Lansing City Council may have been the target of a Red Squad investigation in 1971.

The report makes reference to a previous "intelligence re-port" on the City Council pri-mary election and the possibil-ity that a "liberal-radical coalition" might win control of the "City Government."

That report was not in the file, but the released portion was apparently a follow-up after the City Council election was held. It stated that even though "seasoned City Hall observers discounted this as impossible," it did happen. In the report was the state-ment, "On Nov. 2, 1971 in the general election the liberalradical coalition took three seats and control of the East

Wind to be key to Masters title

By DAVID MOFFIT

UPI Sports Writer AUGUSTA, Ga. (UPI) Jack Nicklaus and Ray Floyd, the only two men ever to go 17 under par for four rounds of golf over the demanding Augusta National, both say wind may be the key factor in the 41st Masters which began Thursday.
"Wind which has whipped the course the past two days changes your strategy," said five-time Masters' champion Nicklaus. "It makes you lay up instead of gambling."

"If the wind blows at all, there'll be no shot at the record," said defending champion Floyd, who won by eight strokes last year with his record-tying 271. "It would be tough enough to do that even if conditions were perfect. After all, there have been only two 271s here in all these years."

"The greens are a bit slow now because of the heavy rain the other night," Nicklaus said. "But they'll speed up by Saturday. The wind just makes it that much tougher."

Veteran Don January, who tied for fourth here in 1971, and Gil Morgan, never a winner anywhere in four years on the PGA tour, had the honor Thursday leading out the 77-man field as the first twosome at 9 a.m. EST. Nicklaus was not scheduled off until 12:02 and Floyd not until 12:58.

Some MSU students are recruiting American ambassadors in the Greater Lansing area to serve as tutors of American culture to foreign students studying the English language at MSU.

International Interactions, a student organization of the Office of Volunteer Programs, is sponsoring a program to match volunteers on a one-toone basis with foreign students, two to three hours a week.

Originally designed to provide foreign students with practice in conversing in English, the program has changed into a cultural exchange between the volunteer and the foreign stu-

IRS probing purported 'gift' from Rockefeller to Kissinger

WASHINGTON (UPI) Henry Kissinger is cooperating with the Internal Revenue Service in an investigation into whether he should pay income taxes on his $50,000 "gift" from Nelson Rockefeller in 1969, it was reported Thursday.

Kissinger has signed a waiver necessary to extend the statute of limitations in his case, according to a source close the former secretary of

The IRS is investigating 27 close friends and former employes of Rockefeller who received gifts totaling $2 million when the former vice president was governor of New York.

In two test cases the IRS handed down a preliminary ruling that the money was actually income - not a gift and therefore subject to income

Ironically the rulings could mean a windfall of nearly $1 million for Rockefeller, since the government would have to return the gift taxes he paid on the money legal challenges the government will have to collect income taxes from all the recipients. The total could end up being less than the gift taxes Rockefeller paid.

spokesperson Rockefeller Hugh Morrow earlier confirmed the preliminary IRS decision against two gift recipients, but refused to name those It was learned they were

New E. Lansing center features pick-up phones

EAST LANSING (UPI) — Michigan Bell Telephone Co. wants to marketing vice president. make picking up a new telephone as easy as going to the corner

Company officials Thursday unveiled a phone center here that will enable customers with "modularized outlets" to come in, pick up a phone and plug it in at their homes themselves at a savings of

Twenty-five other phone centers are to be opened by Bell this year in Detroit, Dearborn, Grand Rapids, Ann Arbor and other Customers with a modular outlet can plug in a phone themselves just as if they were using a regular electric socket. Bell officials hope that 1.5 million of their 4.3 million residential phones in Michigan will be converted to the modular system by the end of this year. By 1982, most customers should have the plug-in-yourself outlets, they said.

"This new system and the phone centers will make it possible for Michigan Bell customers to obtain phone service cheaper, faster and more conveniently than ever before," said Louis Zimmers, ANNOUNCING..

He said customers with modular systems could save up to $30 in installation charges by going to the stores and plugging in the

If they wish, however, customers can still have Bell representatives install their phones, Zimmers said.

The phone stores will allow customers to come in without appointments and get a chance "to fondle the phones and see if the color fits with their home decor," he said. Previously customers had to order their phones and wait for a service representative to come.

The East Lansing store, within a block of the MSU campus, has been open for a week and so far, employes say the response has been

Bell chose East Lansing to inaugurate the first store because the largely student population from MSU frequently changes phones.

American Telephone and Telegraph, the parent company of Michigan Bell, has introduced phone centers "with great success" in other states, a company official said.
