"I feel it's not really necessary," he said of the plane, which can cross the Atlantic in

A state Supreme Court justice issued a court order Friday banning a planned drive-in by residents of the community around the airport in a repeat of a demonstration by about 1,500 motorists whose cars filled Kennedy's roadways for several hours in February 1976, slowing and sometimes blocking traffic.

Spirit slate wins one in appeals

By NUNZIO M. LUPO State News Staff Writer

Round one in the ASMSU Student Board appeals was won by the Spartan Spirit Slate Friday as the All-University Student Judiciary (AUSJ) reversed its invalidation.

The decision will be appealed to the (SFJ) today, Student-Faculty Judiciary according to Barry Griffiths, All-University Elections Commission (AUEC) chairperson.

Spartan Spirit may not, however, sit on the Student Board if the judiciaries are in the process of appeals, according to the Academic Freedom Report. "Should the student (or AUEC) appeal, any action assessed by the judicial body shall be held in suspense until acted upon by a higher body, the report states.

AUSJ based its 9-1 decision on the premise that "the AUEC acknowledged that there was no reason to doubt that the document reflected what Kent Barry (slate presidential candidate) and the other members of the slate wished to present as their spending report.

Since Spartan Spirit was invalidated for not signing its spending report, the AUEC had based part of its argument on the premise that without a signature it could not be proven who submitted a report.

"What would happen if someone filed a report other than the candidate?" AUEC counsel Timothy Cain asked the judiciary.

AUSJ ruled that "because there was no disagreement in the hearing as to who actually submitted the report on behalf of the slate or as to who would be responsible and accountable for its substance, the more appropriate course of action would be to accept the report in good faith.

Justice Mary Hickey was the lone dissenter, saying, "I do believe, however, that an elections code should be strictly adhered to, and that even technical infractions are subject to the sanctions as outlined in such a code.

The judiciary did not uphold the contention of Spartan Spirit that "signed" as described in the code can mean typewritten. Counsel Lewis K Zerby said "for a report to be signed it does not have to be handwritten" citing Black's Law Dictionary.

"The AUSJ does not view itself as a body which should appropriately rule on the definition of 'signed,'" the opinion stated.

Today, the AUEC will file to appeal the decision of the judiciary. Also in the appeal will be a complaint of misconduct on the part of the judiciary.

"We were a little perturbed that they dent" during Cain's closing statement, the AUEC said.

SFJ has yet to decide whether to hear the appeal, according to SFJ Cochairperson John Forsyth. "We'll make every effort to deal with it as fast as we can," he said.

Other issues discussed at the hearing include whether: •Spartan Spirit was actually invalidated because the document posted said it was disqualified.

The code actually provided for invalida-tion for not signing the report.

•The AUEC failed to send out reminders shout when to and how to file the reports.

Carter's son returns from China

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Jimmy Carter's son Chip and a congressional delegation arrived home Sunday from an eight-day trip to China, the first Congressional visit to China since Carter took office.

Chip said he carried a "handwritten personal note" from his father to China's top leader, Chairman Hua Kuo-feng. The contents of the note were not disclosed, but Chip said he saw himself as a token of the President's willingness to continue improving relations with the Chinese government.

The bipartisan congressional delegation was headed by Rep. John Brademas, D-Ind., and Sen. Richard Schweiker, R-Pa.

At an airport news conference, Brademas said the congressmen had a "spirited exchange of views" with Vice Premier Li Hsien-nien over the subject of continued U.S. support for the Chinese

"The whole Taiwan question is an issue of great sensitivity to all the people of China," Brademas said.

Protesters rally at Japanese airport

NARITA, Japan (AP) — Police and students armed with bamboo spears clashed Sunday as more than 11,000 demonstrators marched to protest the opening of a new international airport in this town 45 miles east of Tokyo.

Police said 24 officers and an undetermined number of students were injured. Two policemen were reported seriously hurt. Seven demonstrators who hurled rocks and charged police lines with their spears were arrested, police said.

About 5,000 riot police were called in for the demonstration.

Tive protesters rallied at the site of two towers, one 200 feet high, they had built at the end of the runway to prevent airplanes from landing.

Anti-inflation plan weak, senator says

WASHINGTON (AP) - Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., chairperson of the Senate Banking Committee, said Sunday that President Jimmy Carter's anti-inflation program "has no teeth, no bite."

"I think a strong anti-inflation program will have to wait worsening conditions, unfortunately," Proxmire said.

He made his remarks on the CBS television program "Face the Nation." Proxmire said the most effective economic stimulus Carter could employ would be to reduce home mortgage rates from the present 9 per cent to 7½ per

He said that could provide 230,000 jobs in the housing construction industry and would have a minimal effect on inflation.

Turning to Carter's energy program, to be announced this week, Proxmire said he has no doubt it will increase inflation and unemployment.

Young welcomes Mondale's help

ATLANTA (AP) — Andrew Young, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, said Sunday he never wanted "to handle Africa" and welcomes the widening role of Vice President Walter Mondale in African affairs.

"My job is the United Nations mission." Young said. He noted his duties extend to other parts of the world, including the Middle East and Latin America.

"There's just so much to be done," he said. "I think we need all the help we can get in Africa."

Mondale's recently announced leadership role in African affairs has been interpreted by some observers as an effort to remove the outspoken ambassador from that sensitive area and to reduce the reported friction between Young and Secretary of State Cyrus Vance.

Young was in Atlanta to speak at a memorial ceremony commemorating the death of six million European Jews during World War II.

New York averts workers' strike

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) - New York State averted a threatened strike by 140,000 state workers Sunday, 18 hours from the deadline, with a tentative agreement for a 14 per cent pay boost over two years.

The proposed contract will cost the state another $220 million, though Gov. Hugh Carey said that was "well within the state's financial plan.

Announcing the settlement at a joint news conference with state and union negotiators, Carey called it "fair and equitable." He noted most state workers have gone without a general raise for the past two years because of the state's financial troubles.

Theodore Wenzel, president of the Civil Service Employes Association who participated in the overnight, 14-hour negotiating session that led to the agreement, predicted his union would ratify the pact. The mail vote is expected to take about three weeks.

WASHINGTON (AP) President Jimmy Carter's cuts in recommended funding for water projects could save taxestimated $120 million in fiscal 1978, but that's only a small fraction of the $55.2 billion budget deficit he wants to wipe out.

Some interpreted Carter's policy as the first step in a gradual process to phase out commerical nuclear energy in general. But out-and-out opponents of nuclear energy thought the policy fell far short of their demands

While issuing the moratorium on reprocessing, Carter only announced a go-slow policy on breeder reactors, which in effect "breed" plutonium from their initial fuel to create a self-sustaining nuclear reactor.

What exactly are plutonium reprocessing centers and why does Carter want to stop their future development?

Commercial reactors use uranium for fuel to produce energy. The spent uranium is highly radioactive in its raw form and cannot be used. Presently officials are trying to figure out what to do with these wastes that remain highly toxic for centuries. E.L. City Council may easily ratify preliminary budget

By MICHAEL ROUSE

State News Staff Writer The preliminary East Lansing city budget for fiscal year 1977-78 may be approved by the City Council with no effort

Comments on the budget which was submitted by City Manager Jerry Coffman to the council a week ago - have been for the most part favorable

A public hearing on the $10.8 million budget is scheduled for Tuesday at the City Council meeting.

Some of the highlights of the budget are: No increase in property tax; a restructuring of the city departments that would bring planning, housing and community development together in one office; the citizen housing commission would be replaced by a housing and community development commission; and a new compre hensive plan for the city's future development would be the first priority of the planning commission.

Council cops out

The East Lansing City Council has the opportunity to take positive action by passing a resolution urging the boycott of nine U.S. corporations with holdings in South Africa. The fact that the members of the council appear willing to forego this opportunity is distressing.

the council appear willing to forego this opportunity is distressing.

An informal polling of the councilmembers last week revealed that a resolution to boycott the firms, proposed by the South Africa Liberation Committee (SALC) in mid-January, lacked substantive support for council consideration.

The three liberal members of the council — Mayor George Griffiths, John Czarnecki and Larry Owen — have copped out on this issue. Czarnecki and Owen said they might consider an alternative resolution, possibly one that will not name the nine corporations. But this type of action would be impotent at best and further allow watered-down lip service to humanity.

The nine corporations — General Motors, Firestone, IBM, ITT, Mobil, Motorola, Union Carbide, Caltex and Kennecott — should be named and their sins exposed.

Those who oppose the resolution on the grounds that it connotes opposition to multinational corporations miss the point. The point of the resolution is to condemn the involvement of multinationals in the morally offensive practice of racism, not to condemn multinational business in general.

Councilmember Mary Sharp's comment that she agreed with U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young on his support of multinationals, and that she rested her opposition to the boycott on that basis is absurd. It is extremely doubtful that Young would ever condone the support of apartheid by the multinationals.

Another scattered argument used by Sharp — that the boycott would have little effect — sounds much like an apathetic voter lounging at home during an election. While it is true that the boycott would have little immediate effect, the fact remains that the councilmembers are in an excellent position to make their views known on this issue, in a symbolic way if nothing else. They have the opportunity. They should green it

A step backward

Student Council's vote last Tuesday to recommend abolishing guarantees of minority representation, women inclusive, for at a Academic Council representatives is a discouraging step to minimizing the minority voice in an influential and important segment the University power structure.

This proposal is a disquieting regression to the archaic belief the equality can be achieved without positive action.

Though not binding, the council's vote is an advisory one which undoubtedly influence Academic Council's decision when the proposition brought up for consideration on May 3.

It cannot be denied that minorities have come a long way in securing positions of relative power in a political context. However, the University and the nation as a whole have not come nearly as in guaranteeing that minorities will have representation if left to a white-majority electorate.

It is unfortunate that a system of guarantees — seen by some quotas — must exist. We prefer to look on the present system not as consisting of quotas, but rather as one which guarantees that miner rights will have representation. Practically speaking, to do otherwise, as history has demonstrated repeatedly — would be to insure the perpetuation of majority dominance of the levers of power and influent the expense of minority interests.

In any event, it is not altogether clear that the term "quotas" tap properly used in this context, especially when one of the categoria person can run under is "undesignated" — meaning anybody.

Morever, the entire system of designations is inherently faulty in few students understand just what those category designations when asked to vote. Academic Council must clarify these.

To give the deletion proposal even a second thought is a slap in face to all MSU students and the "democratic foundations" of University governing unit. Student Council has blundered, but it will up to Academic Council on May 3 to see that such a blunder does become binding.

Handicappers

On page 5 of the April 8 edition of the State News is an article entitled "Prof seeks to find humanity in people." It was written by John Casey, a State News staff writer.

I am generally favorable impressed by the appearance of the article. It is the technological accomplishments of Dr. John Eulenburg and his associates which have had and will continue to have a positive effect on humanity.

However, please be aware of the fact that there are some errors in the article. First of all, the gentleman pictured with Dr. John Eulenberg is Dr. Mortza A. Rahimi. Dr. Eulenberg and Dr. Rahimi are co directers of the Artifical Language Laboratory in the Computer Science Department. Eulenberg's research team also includes such non student professionals as Mr. J. J. Jackson, a systems analyst.

As a handicapper, I must object to the impression that the staff writer gives when he says, "Eulenberg and his student research team have created computerized devices enabling handicappers to communicate." The impression one may get from reading the statement is, handicappers didn't communicate before computerized devices were developed. That's a falsity! It would have been accurate to have said such creations have enabled some speech handicappers to communicate more effectively.

Furthermore, contrary to what has been reported in news releases, it was a person (myself) who ordered the pizza in 1974. The talking computer's responses were initiated by me. The point that should be stressed is that communication devices have been developed to facilitate communication between people.

In conclusion, it is hoped that the State News will consider the above as constructive criticisms. It's also hoped that the State News will continue to report about issues relevant to handicappers' lifestyles in the positive vein which the paper has done in the past. Furthermore, it is hoped that the State News will continue reporting about humanitarian efforts that are being conducted around the world as well as here at

Dead phones

In regards to your editorial on Tuesday about the Michigan Public Service Commission (PSC).

First off, it does not have a history of granting excessive rates. Just the opposite is true; throughout the national and international investment communities Michigan is known to be among the worst places to invest in since utilities cannot get fair return on the investment required to run them.

As for your cut about the utilities being monopolistic, would you rather have two sets of wires and poles stringing the land? Before you blindly answer "yes" remember that nowhere in the world do nonmonopolistic utilities exist. The reason for simple: if they did, no one could afford any utilities. The role of the PSC has once again been misunderstood. It not only is to be a guardian of consumer interest but also of investor interest.

Your own opinion says that the Michigan Bell increase was pared significantly from what was asked for. This is hardly a rubber stamp like you said.

Your entire editorial seems to be a campaign letter for William Ralls. Commissioner Ralls' name appears no less than 10 times while Commissioners Demlow and Schultory's names appear twice each. The opinion reads like you listened to Ralls' side only and did no research on your own to confirm or discredit what he claims.

Michigan's utilities are going broke. This was shown to all of us who experienced the power brownouts this winter. The PSC has not allowed enough rate return for the utilities to attract investor dollars at an affordable interest rate, thus forcing them to halt expansion building. If this continues much longer we are all going to be greatly affected by the PSC rate increases. We will all be in the dark with a dead phone.

Restaurant

Having been a waitress in the Lansing and Detroit areas for over 10 years, I feel qualified to reply to the article of last Tuesday on the health conditions in the East Lansing area.

Many people are unaware of the way health inspections are conducted. The number of demerits a restaurant is charged with does not necessarily show poor health conditions. For example, an establishment with 10 demerits caused by uncovered food or a dirty kitchen would be worse in my mind than one with 25 demerits because of structural defects such as "sneeze guards" or walls that need painting.

I've also found in this business that most owners try to keep things up to code. This is accomplished by having waitresses scrub, dust, clean and polish. Through the years, dust experiences have included dusting venetian blinds, hand wiping silverware, cleaning milk and juice machines and in fact, keeping conditions cleaner than in my own kitchen.

I feel that the reporter of this article did not take time to thoroughly investigate the restaurants he mentioned. And I is so wondered why he skipped over so many others in this area.

Invalidated

It's about time someone explained some of the circumstances that surround the "invalidation" of the Spartan Spirit slate. There are two questions that should have been answered. The first is whether it is equitable and proper for someone to be disqualified for not signing their spending report. This one has received considerable attention. The second is whether or not Kent Barry is willing to sign his spending report. This one will receive more attention as time goes on.

You might ask why wouldn't someone be

You might ask, why wouldn't someone be willing to sign such a report. Consider the following: if it is proved that a candidate falsified his spending report, not only does he face expulsion from the University for falsifying University records, but potential criminal charges for false public records. Not signing such a m and attempting to fight the need for it, might prove to be the most advantage course in the long run.

Ever since finals week, I have convinced that Spartan Spirit had spent their limit. Knowing firsthad cost of campaigning, I was amuzed a amount of literature and special gimes the slate had employed. I thin a spending report is made public, the at body will be surprised and later spath the blatant violations of spending ments. I think it will become degree itemization of expenses and a sign attesting to the validity of a spategory and the spending.

So before you judge the All-Universe Election Committees (AUEC) too he and feel sorry for the plight of Kesth and Spartan Spirit, go take a look at spending report. Why is there such his miscellaneous category? Why are the differences between the two sets of he in the report? Why are there or known expenses that can fit nowhell under miscellaneous? Why was a legit member charged for publicity, but given a share of the slate spending of But most of all, why didn't Kent Buryl his spending report and would be intoday if given the chance?

"Cheap shot" cited

By ROBERT B. NELSON

The State News has once again genuflected at the altar of the cheap shot, as witness its editorial of last Tuesday regarding the Michigan Public Service Commission's (PSC's) decision to grant a rate increase to Michigan Bell Telephone Company.

The State News has a history of using excessive rhetoric at the expense of the facts. In February Mr. Terence Davis of the Commission's staff wrote to the State News and took issue with an editorial which charged that merely because the PSC granted rate increases for utilities, it was somehow in a conspiracy with the utilities to maximize their profits. Mr. Davis attempted to explain the complexity of the PSC ratemaking process, but within a week the State News had repeated the same charges and they have done so again, without the least concern for the facts.

Ideally, the State News should act as an investigative tool for its readers, reporting the facts and commenting thereon, if appropriate. However, it is apparent by a cursory review of the State News editorial that its investigative tool is impotent and its rhetorical tool is cranking away, out of control. To begin with, the editorial states that profits of utilities are "by law. guaranteed." This statement is at the very least a serious breach of the responsibility of the State News to its readers. The commission's obligation is not to guarantee a utility's profits but to insure that a utility is provided a reasonable opportunity to earn its authorized rate of return. In the case of Michigan Bell, it has consistently failed to earn the rate of return authorized by the commission. The editorial's statement that the PSC should not consider rate cases before it as an impartial judge and jury implies that the commission should be "partial" and disregard the "merits" of the cases. In fact, the commission must base all its decisions on the record evidence.

The most blatant example of the proclivity of the State News to charge headlong into rhetorical folly without stopping for factual support, is the absence of any reference, in either the Tuesday editorial or a companion article on Monday, to the 75-page decision of the commission explaining the reasons behind the rate increase. Instead the State News chose to quote verbatim from the nine-page dissenting opinion of Commissioner Ralls and to boldly state that "(c)opies of the majority opinion were not available." In fact, conies of the majority opinion were available for a full week prior to the Monday article, but it appears that the crack investigative reporters of the State News were unable to handle the assignment of finding where to go to find them.

Did the absense of the facts stop the State News from recklessly lashing out at its target Not at all! Like a chicken with its head cut off, although with perhaps less intelligence, the State News strutted about in a frenzy, oblivious to all but its own rhetoric. Although the State News casually notes that the PSC pared down Bell's original request significantly (the $56.9 million increase represents less than one third of the company's original request, it turns around and intimates that the commission acted as a "rubber stamp."

As final proof of its recklessness, the State News has the incredible audacity, or perhaps sheer stupidity, to proclaim that it is "imperative" that certain legislation be passed, even before it has considered "the merits" of such legislation, or indeed even before the merits of such legislation are known. Come on, State News, quit ripping off the students by charging them for something they might expect to be truthful.

Ralls anti-consumer

By MIRIAM VAN GOOR

How often I have yearned for the safety and security of the idealistic world found sheltered academia. This "professional" real world is so complex, I find I cannot kept head in the clouds because I am held accountable for my actions and because my idealism must be consistent with actuality. If I was safe, once again, within MSU's ivied was then I would have the freedom to verbalize my idealism without responsibility with the author of the editorial appearing in your April 12 issue of the State News.

If the author had taken the time to read the legislative mandate governing in your April 12 issue of the State of the Public Service Commission (PSC), he/she would discovered that the PSC was not created as a "guardian of the public interest." along must, indeed, protect the interest of consumers and utility companies alike. Contrary your statement, the PSC must act as "... an impartial judge and jury weighting relative merits of rate hike requests." If the PSC was, as you allege, rubber-stamp utility rate requests, why would the professional staff of the commission bother to utility companies financial records, and why, then, was Michigan Bell's last rate in request pared down, and why was General Telephone's recent request for mincreases flatly denied, with accompanying commission-ordered rate decreases?

"Commissioner Ralls has, as you note, made it a habit to volt against rate increases. Had the ultimate public interest been foremost in this "consumer advocate's" mind, the political expediency of dissenting votes would not have misguided his actions. Without adequate profit margins, utility companies cannot afford to maintain adequate service or expand facilities to meet the needs of the citizens of Michigan."

would have us all freezing in the dark with his misplaced political motivations.

Mr. Ralls touts his participation in the promulgation of the Consumer Bill of Rights utility customers which emanated from the commission. Ask Mr. Ralls how many he spent drafting those rules, studying the issues, and implementing those rules. Mr. Ralls what his activities in the area of energy conservation have been programs has he effected to help customers pay their bills?

In conclusion, it is my sincere hope that there will be enough energy to serve the generation of Michigan citizens. To that end, the committed staff of the commission continue to work, making unpopular but responsible, future-oriented decisions to the people it serves.

Susan Sheehan has changed all that. She leads the reader steadily and surely away from that media image of the welfare taker as a huge, anonymous tide constantly sucking at society's pocketbook, and presents the reader, instead, with the real life personality of Mrs. Carmen Santana, the welfare ment or analysis would be superfluous.

What comes through to the reader is more than just facts, however, It is the cruel and intimate detail of a life of poverty: "The second bedroom furnished with nothing but a bunk bed and an infant's stroller. It is occuppied by Vincente, age 13; Emilio, 12; Gabriel, 11; and Maria, 10. The two older children sleep in the top bunk, the two younger ones in the lower. The children's clothes are piled on the stroller."

first child at the age of 15. She came to the United States at age 27 and worked to support herself and the children that kept coming until she could no longer find a babysitter to work for the little pay she could afford. The welfare life is not an easy, luxurious one for Santana; she receives $588 a month for herself and the four children still living at home with her, or a little less than $120 a month per person. About what the average person spends per month just for food.

Social services caseworkers occasionally come to call on Santana, though more often they require that she make the three-subway, one-hour trip to their office. Sheehan gives the reader, verbatim, sections of the caseworkers' hapless, ineffectual reports, which at best show them to be insensitive, recommending that Santana can improve the quality of her life by cleaning her refrigerator with baking soda.

"A Welfare Mother" is not another treatise about the poor by some well-intentioned but inexperienced person who has never been there. It is an opportunity to walk just behind and watch over the shoulder of an American woman who, like about 10 million other Americans, has been excluded from an education, employment, a decent home, healthy food and opportunities for growth and betterment. Sheehan's book is a piercing reminder that Santana and the nation's other recipients of welfare dollars are powerless human beings who can have turned to welfare only after the final failure of alternatives, because the welfare life is a meager and grueling and futureless subsistence and that's all it is. Sheehan reveals that the welfare recipients are the victims not the perpetuators, of the inequities in the American economic structure, by looking into the faces and lives of Santana and her friends.

A sterling strike at medicine men

By JOE PIZZO

It would be interesting to ascertain the precise number of Dr. Edgar Berman's colleagues on friendly terms with him now since the publication of "The Solid Gold Stethoscope."

I would guess that very few of the prominent physicians he mentions by name — and while their names may not be "legion," there are quite a few — are still offering him rides in their Mercedes.

In a style reminiscent of Thurber, and the honesty of that gentleman for whom Diogenes searched for so long, Berman reveals some truths about medicine that heretofore have been known in what are euphemistically referred to as "professional circles," but never spoken of aloud.

However, as Max Lerner points out in the foreword, there are fine physicians in each of the specialties Berman satirically examines. The reader should bear this in mind.

Berman has very little patience with and even less tolerance of the true malpractitioners running around with licenses to practice medicine and surgery and registrations permitting them to dispense and prescribe "controlled drugs." He makes this very clear, and, perhaps because of this, he doesn't waste valuable space exposing the pill-for-profit boys or physicians with revoked licenses in one state while legally practicing in another.

If the reader learns nothing else from Berman, it will be that a physician is just as human, fallible, intelligent, stupid, greedy and generous as he is.

Berman writes remarkably well. Even if the reader has never scrawled some indecipherable hieroglyphs on a prescription blank, he will understand what this fine physician writer has to say about the state of medical care in America today.

To the less than discerning reader, the line between exaggeration and factual charge may seem blurred, but there is a definite stylistic change involved which should serve as an alert to the seriousness with which the good doctor's allegations should be

"The Solid Gold Stethoscope" is very amusing, full of medical facts concerning the development of specialities, the decline of general practice and the growth of a "beautiful people" species of

Berman is even less charitable toward his colleagues in psychiatry. One gets the impression that psychiatrists are greater adherents to "The Hypocritic Oath" (Berman's own "edited" version of the traditional oath taken by physicians) than others. He

"Unlike the ordinary physician who feels he is the right hand of God, the healer of the mind accepts no secondary role.

Only in psychiatry, Berman points out, could a patient be officially classified as ill on one day and healthy the next, by a vote of the professional association!

He describes in detail the battle between the "psychs" who practice couch therapy and those who prescribe "a few simple concoctions like Librium or Valium."

"These colorful little 'dolls' (which was not street jargon for drugs until Jacqueline Susann invented the term), taken three times daily and at bedtime, are freeing neurotics from the couch faster than pot freed the kiddies," he writes.

His conclusion? "It'll be a 60-minute hour before they (psychiatrists with a couch-orientation) give in to a little Thorazine or lithium." (Those two drugs are used to treat schizophrenia and the manic phase of manic-depressive psychosis, respectively.)

Berman is, by specialty, a surgeon. He worked with Albert Schweitzer in Lambarene, was a pioneer in experimental heart transplantation, and a former personal physicianto a vice president

His impeccable professional credentials earned him the right to write as he does, especially about the upper-echelons of medical society, such as the Barnards, DeBakeys and Cooleys, for he moved in those circles.

Berman is "a funny man" from a glance at the chapter titles: "The Adventures of Mac The Knife: the Barbers of Scal-pel,"
"Public Health: Wombats of the Western World," (Gynecology, Obstetrics), "From Fraud to Freud to Fraud: A Boon for the

It cannot be stressed stongly enough that while Berman levels many valid charges against his peers, he is not to be taken literally. This is satire, and should be read as such Berman can be taken to task on several minor counts, however. In a single sentence, he both dismissed and maligned the entire profession of osteopathy, and did so in a manner most unfair.

"Dr. (Sam) Sheppard, whose murder accusation gave the profession its blackest eye, was merely an osteopath," he writes. One wonders why Berman, who is hardly a hardline supporter of the American Medical Association, would make such a statement unless it was one of those "minor" errors that slipped past his editor at Macmillan, which is located — as is Berman — in New York, where relatively few doctors of osteopathy (D.O.s) practice.

D.O.'s are "complete physicians," however, and Berman's use of the adverb "merely" is an example of poor word choice.

It is also noteworthy that the true satiric subtlety of "The Solid Gold Stethoscope" can be more fully appreciated by someone with a fair degree of medical sophistication

This makes the book attractive to "the profession" and the rest of us mortals as well!

'Bound For Glory' probes Depression era, not Guthrie

By BYRON BAKER State News Reviewer

The considerable creative reources of some of the motion picture industry's most talented and sensitive craftsmen and almost $10 million have been utilized in the making of "Bound For Glory," director Hal Ashby's period essay examining roughly four crucial years in the life of celebrated American folksinger Woody Guthrie.

Ashby ("Harold and Maude," "The Last Detail," "Shampoo") and scenarist Robert Getchell (who scripted from Guthrie's widely read 1943 auto-biography) are here attempting something of a wider human scope than the usual manner of film biography: the story is told in bold perspective of the hard years 1936 to 1940. The Great Depression, the days of the dust bowl, the plight of the migrant worker — are all important dramatic components of the picture.

The film is clearly an ambitious, well-intentioned effort on the part of all those creatively involved. But perhaps Ashby associates have attempted too much. Amid a painstaking quest for period detail and evocation, the focus has shifted away from the

As previously noted, the film explores about four years of Guthrie's career. It begins in poverty-stricken Pampa, Texas where Guthrie (David Carradine), his wife (Melinda Dillon, children have settled. With Depression's effects pervading Pampa, the restless, volatile Guthrie sets out for California

— the rumored Promised Land - hopping freight trains in customary itinerant fashion, leaving his family far behind.

Eventually he reaches Los Angeles where he becomes deeply involved with the exploited, overworked migrant workers. Soon he encounters Ozark Blue (Ronny Cox, as an amalgam of several Guthrie associates, including Will Geer), a union organizer and folksinger on a local radio station. Together they pick and sing, fight off fruit company goons and work to organize the farm workers. Guthrie begins to make a kind of name for

As Woody Guthrie, Carra dine gives a remarkably disciplined performance. He essays the songs with a sort of instinctive feel for the Guthrie material. But there isn't a great deal of life in Carradine's portraval, no real spark of visceral energy to it, though he has certainly put a great deal of surface detail into the role.

The songs on this LP such as "Skating On Thin Ice," "Wizard Men," and "Strangers in Space," are unimpressive. Booker on piano and vocals seems a desperate attempt to recreate some of the old, with two decent cuts, "Something Magic" and "Mark of the Claw." Here, a quick, fluid pace and simple, but cute lyrics help restore some faith in the group.

Side two completely fails in an attempt to do a musical Aesop's fable of sorts with "Worm and the Tree." This starts with an introduction about a greedy worm in a tree and ends with an epilogue about seeds growing again. The lyrics by Keith Reid are trite and childish, and his efforts seem to have turned from writing good songs to being content with getting the words to rhyme.

When listening to this record and comparing it to some of their past efforts, such as "Broken Barricades," "Simple Sister," "Poor Mohammed," and "Power Failure," one can only wonder where all the group's energy goes. The guitar is shy, drumming is monotone, lyrics are boring and Brooker is going down with the ship.

One of the big areas for potential growth is casino gambling, which has been legal for years in Nevada. New Jersey voters in November approved casinos in Atlantic City.

David Burke, director of the Public Gaming Research Institute, predicted the New Jersey action "will pull the finger out of the dike and lead to other states following suit." He said that in the past states have taken up gambling operations after they have been successful in neighboring states.

Burke forecasts that by the end of 1980 there will be six states permitting casino gambling, 20 with lotteries, five with off-track betting and six with legal sports betting.

The main complaint state gambling officials have is with the federal policy of taxing winnings. They say this leads people to gamble with illegal operators to avoid paving any taxes.

"Federal tax law is interfering with the ability of states to raise money through lotteries," said Peter Simmons, former director of the Delaware lottery.

The Federal Gambling Commission after a three-year study agreed with this view last fall and recommended that winnings not

"Nothing drives-people to illegal gamblers as fast as a policy of reporting winnings to IRS and not reporting losses," James Ritchie, who was executive director of the commission, told the conference.

He noted that the United States is the only nation with such tax laws. However, the Internal Revenue Service opposes changing the law to allow gambling winnings to go untaxed.

NORML sets up 'U' chapter

State News Staff Writer Marijuana decriminalization, with the help of MSU students, may become a reality before next year with the passage of a decriminalization bill to be introduced in the Michigan House of Representatives this week.

Michigan, a prime target for decriminalization, is receiving strong support from the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws (NORML) and has recently set up a branch organization group at MSU.

NORML, a citizens lobby group, is currently campaigning statewide for passage of the bill to make Michigan the eighth state in the nation to decriminalize marijuana.

If passed, the bill would reduce the penalties for public possession or nonprofit distribution of under 100 grams (approximately 3½ ounces) to a civil fine of $50. Possession or use of marijuana in private articles. private residence under 100 grams would carry no penalty and public use would also be only a $50 civil fine.

Punishment under current state law for possession or nonprofit distribution of any amount is a maximum one year in jail and $100 fine. Delivery for profit or intent of any amount is a felony with a maximum four years in jail and

Curt Judd and Paul Grifo, coordinators for the NORML group on campus, said that the bill not only needs support from the MSU and East

"Jimmy Carter pretty much supports marijuana decriminalization and all it takes is a push from the people to do it." - Curt Judd, coordinator for the newly organized MSU Chapter of NÖRML.

Lansing area but that students should write to representatives in their home districts and lobby in those areas.

"One of the problems with an organization here is that the support is limited to the campus and not to outlying communities," Judd said. "It is very important to spread support all over the state, which is something the legislators will have to take a look at."

NORML has already set up a statewide office in Detroit and the bill is receiving backing from Reps. Perry Bullard, D-Ann Arbor, and Lynn Jondahl, D-East Lansing, as well as John Sinclair, editor of the Detroit Sun. The campus effort under Judd and Grifo is one part of the NORML campaign for decriminalization in Michigan.

A similar bill was introduced in August 1975 and was shuffled through committees and amended numerous times before being defeated in April 1976. Judd said he was confident the new bill will pass this time with increased statewide support and better organization.

The main problem with the last bill was that it lacked citizen support. We are hoping it would go through by the end of the year and if citizen support is there, that will make it all the easier." Judd said.

The last NORML effort on campus a year ago was a petition campaign of students in favor of the bill, but the efforts this time will be directed toward getting students to pressure the legislators in their home towns.

"The last effort on campus was only a small effort which didn't possess any real power. Signatures on petitions can only be used once," Judd said.

In addition to the student lobbying efforts,

Judd said a march to the Capital or a rally are possibilities when "things start happening in the House and Senate over the bill."

On May 8 a rally at Central Michigan University in Mount Pleasant is being held in support of the bill. Judd said a similar rally may or may not take place this spring at MSU.

Last year the bill was first introduced to the House by Bullard, one of its main supporters, but Judd says a different approach will be used this

"We are going to have a Republican introduce the bill this time. I'm not exactly sure of the strategy behind it, but we didn't want it to be a one-man show this time," Judd said.

"Jimmy Carter pretty much supports marijuana decriminalization and all it takes is a push from the people to do it," he said. "NORML won't push for legalization until the whole nation decriminalizes."

Wednesday, the day before the bill will be introduced to the House, a meeting will be held at 110 Anthony Hall at 7:30 p.m. for people interested in the efforts of NORML. Jondahl and Bullard are the featured speakers and will

MSU WINS TWO, LOSES TWO

Fast starts stalls on batsmen

By MIKE LITAKER

MSU's baseball reign atop the Big Ten lasted exactly one day over the weekend as the Spartans took a pair from Iowa on Saturday before taking a double beating from Minnesota.

Minnesota won the Sunday contests, 5-4 and 6-2, from the Spartans, who had polished off the Hawkeyes, 5-4 and 4-3, in the Big Ten opener on Satur-

The hit by Willingham was an omen of things to come for the senior cocaptain, who had gone hitless in 11 times to the plate before stroking a safety in the third inning.

It was Willingham who provided the winning cushion in the nightcap with a two-run single that drove in his fourth runs of the afternoon.

JOHNSON TAKES WIN

The hit allowed starter Sherm Johnson to even his record at 2-2 before turning the mound over to Cotter, who stemmed the Hawks on one hit the rest of the way.

MSU got its first two runs of the game in the first stanza when Simpson came home on a walk, the second of three called by the umpires over the course of the day, and Randy Hop's single to score Al Weston.

The other Spartan run in the first game against the Hawks came on third baseman Tony Spada's second homer of the season down the right-field line.

Netters split weekend; McNulty takes 4 wins

By TOM SHANAHAN

"We're like the Miami Dolphin defense," MSU tennis coach Stan Drobac said after his team played some of its best tennis of the season Friday and Saturday. "We're a team of no-names just like Miami."

The Spartan netters whipped Northwestern Friday, 7-2, and lost to Wisconsin, 6-3, but the nationally ranked Badgers had to struggle and at one point were trailing in all three doubles matches before rebounding. MSU is 1-4.

One of Drobac's netters who may have little time left as a "no-name" is junior Kevin McNulty who teamed with Tom Gudelsky to win No.1 and then beat Wisconsin's nationally ranked No. 2 singles, John Silverthorn, 6-2, 7-5.

Only a No. 4 singles last season, McNulty is 4-1 in singles and 3-2 in doubles at No. 2 this season. "Last year I had problems with my serve and volley so that's all I practiced this winter,' McNulty said. "And I had coach help me with my strategy - I used to strictly play the baseline.

McNulty was all smiles from his improved play and was in a high enough mood to jump the net to shake hands with the racket throwing Silver-

"I've been playing good all year because the spring trip down South helped me," McNulty said. "I lost all my matches, b ut I had a lot of tie breakers and close matches. You don't go down there to win because they've been playing longer than we have - you go down there to work on your game," he explained.

McNulty was a double winner in singles and in doubles with Gudelsky. No. 6 singles Steve Carter didn't play singles against Northwestern, but beat Wisconsin 6-3, 6-4, Gudelsky, Tighe Keating, Dee McCaffery and Jon Boukamp all split their weekend matches with wins over Northwestern. In doubles, Keating and Carter and McCaffery and Steve Klemm beat the

"We're inexperienced," McNulty said of MSU. "But we have a unique advantage because our coach (Drobac) is one of the top teachers of tennis in the United States. He'll have us ready for the Big Ten tournament (May 20 through 22) because he does it with his teams every year.

Tonight at 7:30 McNulty and Gudelsky will play an exhibition doubles match against U-M's . 1 doubles team before a match between Bjorn Borg and Rod Laver at Crisler Arena in Ann Arbor.

Michigan's April sun came out again Saturday and MSU's Cindy Bogdonas took advantage of the perfect tennis weather by playing close to four-and-a-half hours, while leading the Spartans to an 8-1 win over Miami (Ohio).

MSU also turned in an easy win Friday over Indiana, 8-1 that gave the netters a sweep of the two duals and an overall 5-2 reocord. The wins and improved play pleased coach Elaine Hatton after MSU was Ohio State and U-M. Bogdonas contributed double

"Diane (Selke) tends to overhit and I tend to not hit hard enough so we complement each other and remind each other when we play. You get warmed up after a while in a long match and we do running drills and also run a mile a day to get in shape," Bogdonas said. The week of warm weather

East Lansing had also helped. "I think spring is the best time to play tennis because everybody is up to play in the spring," she said. "You don't play an excess of tennis in the winter so then you're not burnt out when spring comes.'

MSU also had double winners in singles from No. 1 Debbie Mascarin, Mike Kruger and Mary Hicks. The double team of Kruger and Hicks also won twice. Jodi Ross lost Friday, but also won a two-and-a-half hour match on Saturday, 7-6,

Pistons knocked | out of playoffs

OAKLAND (UPI) — The Golden State Warriors, ignited by a third-quarter brawl, moved into the second round of the NBA playoffs on the hot hands of Rick Barry and Phil Smith Sunday, defeating the Detroit Pistons, 109-101, in the third game of their best-of-three playoff.

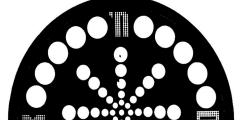

The Warriors, who meet Los Angeles in the next playoff matchup, were trailing by three points midway through the third period when a fight broke out under the Detroit basket between the Pistons' Eric Money and Golden State's Charles Dudley.

The fight lasted several minutes and spread into the stands as spectators and burly Pistons center Bob Lanier also got involved. Moments after the fight was quelled, Barry began fighting with unidentified Detroit players. No one was thrown out of the game.

When play resumed, the Warriors went on a 14-3 tear, including eight points by Barry, in the next 4:23 and moved into an eight-point lead that the Pistons could never overcome. Howard orter's 16 points in the fourth quarter drew Detroit as close as

The Pistons led by as much as 10 in the first half with Lanier dominating the game with 20 points. The Pistons shot at a torrid 70 per cent in the first quarter and 59 per cent for the half. But then the Golden State offense caught fire when it mattered. Barry, who finished with 35 points to lead all scorers, had a dozen in the critical third quarter, then Smith, who was held to only eight points in the first three periods, dropped in 11 in the fourth quarter to keep the Warriors on top. MSU offering summer field experiend

By MICHAEL L. KLOCKE

One way to earn MSU credit this summer without being in East Lansing is to attend a field experience program at the Kellogg Biological Station, an MSU extension service located about 15 miles northeast of Kalamazoo.

The station's summer program will offer credit in biological science, botany and plant pathology, entomology, fisheries and wildlife, microbiology, public health and zoology.

director of the station and professor of George H. Lauff, fisheries and wildlife, said the summer program gives the student much sound practical experience."

"The strong focal point at Kellogg is field research," Lauff said.

"This is something that is not readily available on campus." The Kellogg Bird Sanctuary, Kellogg Farm and the Allegan State Forest serve as outdoor field laboratories.

Lauff, who has been a professor in residence at Kellogg since 1964, also said that students who have participated in the summer program have benefited by the experience. He mentioned one MSU undergraduate who received a National Science Fellowship Award for his work at the station.

The residential faculty at Kellogg includes six MSU professors who are in full-time research. In addition, professors from Kansas State University, University of Kansas and Hope College will also instruct this summer.

Lauff said there are usually from 85 to 140 people accepted in the summer program with two-thirds coming from MSU. He said generally there are an even number of undergraduates and

"Most of the students accepted are in either the College of Natural Science or the College of Agriculture," Lauff said. "And in

The Senate was to take up Carter's economic stimulus plan including the tax rebates - immediately upon its return from the 10 day Easter recess. But now action on the stimulus plan is expected to be deferred.

White House aides said that in his televised address to the nation Monday night, Carter will draw heavily on a new Central Intelligence Agency report which concludes that the world has far less oil and natural gas in reserve than has been generally believed.

According to published accounts, the CIA report claims that in less than 10 years the world will be using more oil than it produces, resulting in scarcities that will boost the price of U.S. gasoline to more than $2 a gallon by 1990.

Carter has called the report "deeply disturbing" and hopes to "convince the American people of the truth" about energy Though the plan is subject to last-minute refinements by the White House, drafts of its key components have already widely circulated among government agencies and on Capitol Hill. The program is likely to include:

'standby" gasoline tax of up to 50 cents a gallon that would begin in 1979 if U.S. gasoline consumption does not decrease.

•A "gas guzzler" tax starting at $412 for fuel-inefficient automobiles, ranging possibly as high as $2,500 for the worst offenders, with offsetting rebates of up to $500 for cars that get the most miles per gallon.

and solar energy devices and for industrial fuel-saving measures. Carter has acknowledged his energy proposal will cost him some of his popularity. The gasoline tax is clearly the most controversial element. The last effort to raise gasoline taxes was rejected overwhelmingly in the House two years ago, and congressional tax leaders say it could happen again this year. They also say the proposed "gas guzzler"

Few members of Congress seem completely happy with the proposed package, partly because of its scope and complexity and partly because of regional concerns.

For example, members of Congress from Texas and Louisiana are generally unhappy that the President is not going to recommend removing price controls from natural gas. Lawmakers from Michigan will likely oppose the "gas guzzler" tax. "It has a great potential for adverse effects on the American auto industry," said Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich. "I'm sure the Japanese are quite happy with the proposal however."

"The trouble with energy is that it is one of the most parochial issues there is," said House Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill, noting that each region has its own specific energy priorities and

there's a new day O dawning! AT YOUR IHOP

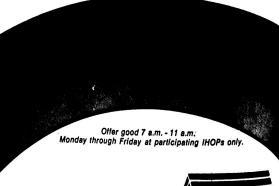

There's a new American feeling about breakfast. People in a hurry, rushing to get to work, to make appointments. These people want a quick, nutritious breakfast. That's why we've created our Good Morning Menu. With breakfasts that are quick (we promise to get you out in 15 minutes) but most importantly, a great value. Good Morning Menu — perfect for those mornings you have to eat and run. Something special from the breakfast specialists — your International House of Pancakes.

Good Morning Menu... 1. Apple Crêpe En Casserole 990 A glorious combination of hot apple compote wrapped in our famous thin crape. Topped with hot apple compote and sprinked with cinnamon sugar. Delightful!

2. Golden Waffle International 990 Our delicious golden waffle, served with your choice of two strips of bacon or two sausage links. 3. French Toast International 990

Four triangular slices swizzled in beaten eggs, browned to golden perfection. Served with your choice of two strips of bacon or two sausage links. $1.19 4. Eggs International Two eggs (any style) served with two strips of bacon or two sausage links. Plus your choice of three Buttermilk Pancakes

Hostage situation tactics taught

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is training hundreds of rolice officials from across the country to use the tactics of waiting and talking in efforts to free hostages held by terrorists. The Law Enforcement Assistance Administration (LEAA) said Sunday that more than 600 police commanders and administrators will be trained this year in hostage negotiation tactics in 15-day seminars.

LEAA is financing the training at the Illinois State Police Academy in Springfield with a grant of $297,000.

Dr. Harvey Schlossberg, a pioneer in the field of hostage negotiations and a recognized authority on the subject, is conducting the training. He is director of psychological services for the New York City police department

In another recent report, an LEAA-sponsored task force predicted a slight increase in incidents in which gunmen capture hostages and barter their lives for all sorts of demands. Some cases are acts of political terrorism, and others grow out of traditional crimes such as bank robberies.

The Hanafi Moslem siege of the national B'nai B'rith headquarters, an Islamic mosque and the city hall in Washington was the most dramatic hostage situation in this country in recent

Police negoatiated the release of all of the hostages and the surrender of the gunmen, but a radio newsman was killed early in the siege.

Schlossberg trains the officers to play for time and use careful psychological planning in dealing with terrorists, the LEAA said.

As the hours and days pass, the terrorist is more likely to fall asleep or to wind down from an emotional high pitch, scale down his demands and surrender, Schlossberg contin

He offers these other principles of successful hostage negotiations:
•Police should use impartial negotiators and should never bring in the criminal's wife, mother, best friend or clergyman. •Police shouldn't give the hostage-holder even a hamburger or cigaret without winning some concession from him in exchange. •Police should negotiate by telephone or radio for at least an hour before any face-to-face negotiations, and shouldn't carry guns in meetings with those holding hostages.

•Negotiators should treat the hostage-holders with deference, addressing them as "Mr." or "Miss."
