Overall CIA budget to be made public

WASHINGTON (AP) — CIA Director William F. Friedman Wednesday said that President Jimmy Carter has ordered the intelligence community not to oppose disclosure of the nation's overall intelligence budget, though such disclosure is without risk.

money in this country is one of our necessary secrets, Turner told the Senate Intelligence Committee. "At the same time we are a free and open society . . . some compromise then is necessary between the risks of giving the enemy an unnecessary advantage over us and of protecting the basic openness of our society," Turner said. "Accordingly, President Carter has directed that I not object to your releasing to the public the single overall budget figure of the U.S. intelligence community."

Calling even that "a major break with tradition," Turner said that to go further would make trends in U.S. intelligence operations obvious to outsiders and "jeopardize the interest of our country more than the additional information would benefit it."

Turner was the leadoff witness as the Senate panel opened two days of hearings on the question of whether all or any part of the nation's intelligence budget should become public. Former CIA chiefs William Colby and Richard Helms also were to appear.

In 40 hours of closed-door meetings over the past several weeks, an intelligence subcommittee has approved, line by line, the budgets of the CIA and all or part of seven other agencies with intelligence missions.

With that task completed, the full panel must decide whether to report the spending authorization bill to the Senate with dollar figures included. To do so would set a precedent for the intelligence budget, historically hidden away in other money bills — primarily the Pentagon's.

In a statement, Chairperson William D. Hathaway, D-Maine, acknowledged the public debate between those who say intelligence costs should remain secret and those who say it is a moral and constitutional obligation on the part of the government to reveal them.

Imports in March cause record-breaking deficit

By EDMUND PINTO
WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. imports exceeded the $12 billion mark for the first time ever during March and helped the nation's trade balance into a record monthly deficit, the government said Wednesday.

trade data, the Commerce Department said the U.S. deficit for the first quarter of 1977 was $5.9 billion, slightly higher than the $5.97 billion deficit registered for the entire year of 1976.

The March imports were valued at $12.5 billion, exceeding a previous high of $11.7 billion recorded in February. Exports totaled $10.7 billion, the highest monthly amount since $10.4 billion in December 1976. The March figure was 3 per cent higher than February's $9.81 billion in exports.

BURGEONING ALUMNI GROUP SEEKS HIS OUSTER Is retirement beckoning Woody?

By EDWARD L. BONDERS

A disgruntled group of Ohio State Alumni is apparently spearheading a drive to force the retirement of Buckeye football coach Woody Hayes, the State News has learned.

The revelation comes in the wake of last week's acknowledgement by OSU's acting athletic director Hugh Hindman that both the NCAA and the Big Ten are conducting inquiries into the recruiting practices of Hayes and his staff.

"The drive to get Hayes to retire actually started last summer. Many were fed up with his hurting the University's integrity by hitting people and such," one alumnus, an influential OSU booster, told the State News Wednesday.

"It reached the point last summer that a group of us made arrangements to charter a plane for the first game and fly over the stadium with a banner which read 'Impeach Woody!' " the Columbus-based source said.

"But, when the administration got wind of our idea they urged us to let them handle it in a more professional manner," he stated.

The OSU alumnus added that "I don't think Woody will be the coach at OSU next season. The victory over Colorado (in the Orange Bowl) may have saved his job for a while, but it's time for his retirement."

A second source unrelated to the first, who was close to Hayes and his football staff for several years confirmed there is a growing movement to force Hayes into early retirement.

Meanwhile, Dan Heinlen, director of the OSU Alumni Association, denied the imminence of Hayes' retirement, saying, "That is honestly the first I've heard of it, and I usually have a pulse on the latest rumors."

Neither Hayes, Hindman nor outgoing athletic director Ed Weaver were available for comment Wednesday night on Hayes' supposedly impending retirement.

The OSU student newspaper called for Hayes' ouster following the 1975 Rose Bowl for his failure to meet the press after that game and his dismissal of defensive tackle Nick Bounamici. But, the 64-year-old coach weathered that storm and returned to coach the Buckeyes for the 26th season.

Last July, Hayes told a meeting of 1,000 people that it was he who had turned in MSU for recruiting violations which led to a three-year probation for the Spartans.

Following that revelation, Hayes was confronted with alleged recruiting violations by both he and his staff by a State News reporter. When asked to comment on the allegations, Hayes attempted to choke the State News reporter.

Subsequently, a three part series was published in the State News which revealed that Hayes had promised Rose Bowl trips to prospective players and their families and paid one Big Ten player who attended another school $50.

Other charges included the use of assistant OSU coaches' cars by players to entertain recruits during their visits to campus and Buckeye boosters paying a high school football coach to transport prospects to the OSU campus.

The published allegations, which resulted in the acknowledged inquiry by both the Big Ten and NCAA, is not the first time Hayes' practices have been scrutinized.

In 1956 Ohio State was placed on probation when Hayes allegedly loaned a player $4,000. The final NCAA verdict stated that Hayes had loaned the player only $400 and the Buckeyes were placed on one year probation.

OSU posted a 9-2-1 record during the 1976 season which was capped with an Orange Bowl victory over Big Eight tri-champ Colorado on New Year's Day.

The dean of Big Ten coaches, Hayes posted a career slate of 222 wins, 65 defeats and nine ties. He led the Buckeyes to three national championships, six outright Big Ten championships and five co-championships.

Council calls meet to save amendment

Student Council has called an emergency meeting for next Thursday in an effort to save an amendment to Article II of the Academic Freedom Report (AFR) calling for grade changes in cases of bad faith grading.

The amendment was rejected by the council Tuesday by an 11-7 vote.

The proposed amendment states that if a judiciary establishes that a student has been graded on factors other than performance, "the dean of the college shall cause the student's performance to be reassessed and appropriate grade awarded."

Merry Rosenberg, University Committee for Student Affairs (UCSA) chairperson and Student Council member, was instrumental in its defeat. Originally a supporter of the amendment, she opposed it because "the students of MSU have been asked to compromise themselves so many times on matters of such importance as Article II that we have lost our ability to assert our rights as students."

Faculty members, students and administrators have called the amendment a compromise because it places the responsibility for the grade change in the hands of the deans, instead of judiciaries or students. "Deans are not going to go against faculty members. The faculty members feel grades are sacred," Rosenberg said.

The last ASMSU Student Board opposed the amendment for the same reasons. The new board, however, approved the amendment after a presentation by Carolyn Stieber, University ombudsman and a long-time supporter of the amendment. She will also speak for it at the Student Council meeting.

As the AFR now reads, no provisions are available for changing a grade even if the (continued on page 14)

Chances for marijuana bill deemed high

By MICKI MAYNARD
State News Staff Writer

Decriminalizing the use of small amounts of marijuana has the best chance of passage in the House, a source said Wednesday.

The measure, introduced this week by Rep. Jerry Bullard, D-Ann Arbor, would reduce penalties for possession of less than an ounce of pot from a misdemeanor to a civil fine.

Proponents of the proposed law would cite a citation similar to a traffic ticket.

The penalty for possession of 3.4 ounces or more would be cut from one year in jail to a maximum of 90 days. However, sale of that amount would remain a four-year sentence.

The idea has been debated for the past several years without success, since laws were last liberalized in 1971. However, this year the decriminalization bill stands a good chance of success in the House, Rep. Lynn Jondahl, D-East Lansing, said.

Jondahl, one of 24 bipartisan cosponsors of the bill, said the measure is almost identical to one which came within one vote of House passage last year.

That measure, sponsored by Minority Floor Leader Rep. Bill Bryant, R-Grosse Pointe Farms, was essentially the same as the Bullard legislation.

However, one main difference — which Bryant labeled a possible "Catch-22" — is a provision legalizing the possession of small amounts of marijuana in private homes.

Bryant said he was not ready to support the lifting of penalties for use in private homes. He said he would work to delete the provision from the bill.

Though the Republican floor leader agreed that the bill had a good chance of passage, he said its success depended on

Carter asks Congress to pass nonproliferation law

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Jimmy Carter Wednesday asked Congress to pass legislation to speed up his nuclear nonproliferation efforts, which he termed "one of mankind's greatest challenges."

In a special message, Carter called for quick enactment of a new law regulating exports of American-produced uranium to foreign buyers.

"Our policy is too weak," he wrote, "we could find ourselves powerless to restrain a worldwide expansion of nuclear explosive capability."

On the other hand, he argued that unless foreign purchasers are offered incentives to buy supply agreements with this country, "the United States could lose important safeguards and controls."

President said he viewed his legislative package as striking "the necessary balance."

Congress agrees, a new law would underscore Carter's stated objective to ban exports of nuclear reprocessing plants that would be capable of producing the plutonium that is used in nuclear weapons.

W. Germany energy program set

BONN, West Germany (AP) — After affirming its determination to continue exports of nuclear power plants, the West German government Wednesday allocated $2.7 billion for a four-year energy research program, with more than two-thirds allotted to nuclear energy.

The Cabinet decision aims at coordinating German efforts to meet growing energy needs over the next four years. It replaces a host of separate programs that totaled $7.3 billion in expenditures over the past 20 years.

Meanwhile, West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt's Social Democrats, under heavy attack from the alleged pro-Communist stand of the party's youth wing, suspended the wing's chairperson as a prelude to his possible expulsion from the party.

A party spokesperson said Young Socialist chairperson Klaus-Uwe Benner has been suspended for three months for disciplinary action.

"The party leadership decision was necessary because serious damage was caused to the party and (because) party interests demanded quick action," a spokesperson told reporters after a 30-4 vote to suspend the 31-year-old Berlin lawyer.

Americans to return to work in Zaire

KINSHASA, Zaire (AP) — The U.S. Embassy said Wednesday that American construction workers will start returning to southern Zaire within days as reports indicated that Katangan rebels were melting away before a government advance.

Reporters returning from the area said the government troops were advancing almost unopposed through deserted villages toward the Angolan border, slowed only by mines laid along the road.

Some military sources in Shaba province said they believe the rebels have abandoned a plan to set up an independent nation in the province previously called Katanga, and have pulled back to bases in Angola.

About 77 American workers and their families were evacuated from Kolwezi, the copper-mining center of Shaba, after an estimated 2,000 Katangan rebels invaded from Angola last month and occupied more than two-thirds of the mineral-rich province without a fight.

Reports from Shaba said there has been little fighting since the government launched its counteroffensive two weeks ago, backed by 1,500 Moroccan troops.

Welfare reforms still undecided, Califano says

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Jimmy Carter next week will set forth the "broad parameters" of welfare reform, but the details of the proposal are still undecided, Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph Califano Jr. said Wednesday.

"The President obviously wants to remove antifamily elements from the welfare system and provide incentives for people to work," Califano told the Washington Press Club.

But, he said before leaving for a meeting with the President, no decisions have been made on the specifics of the proposal.

The secretary spoke at a downtown hotel picketed by about 20 handicappers, some wheelchair users, who are pressing for regulations to enforce a 1973 law protecting the rights of handicappers in subsidized programs.

Senate rejects permanent tax cut bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Wednesday rejected a Republican proposal for permanent tax cuts with the greatest share of benefits earmarked for middle- and lower-income persons.

Offered as an amendment to the tax stimulus bill, the proposal lost, 58 to 39.

President Jimmy Carter has said he would veto any such permanent tax reductions enacted now, but will propose thorough tax reforms later.

In another development, the Senate Budget Committee, in what could be viewed as a slap at Carter, voted to leave room in the current year's budget for a major tax cut. On a 10-3 vote, the committee agreed to retain virtually the same revenue figures that the budget carried when Carter's now-withdrawn proposal for $50 rebates were considered likely to be adopted.

CIA fired two for helping friends

WASHINGTON (AP) — CIA Director Stansfield Turner said Wednesday he fired two employees for "lack of good judgment" in helping former agency officers obtain explosive devices and other equipment for overseas sale.

The two, both middle-level employees, were not identified.

"Neither could be accused of illegal activity or deliberately trying to harm the intelligence community," Turner told the Senate intelligence committee. "But each man was entrapped by the same mechanism — trying to do a favor for an old friend, and these were old friends who improperly imposed on them."

The firings were first disclosed by the Washington Post and Turner was asked about them when he testified before the Senate committee on another matter.

'Tough' tanker standards sent to Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate is preparing to consider tough new safety and environmental standards for oil tankers entering U.S. waters.

By a unanimous vote, the Senate Commerce Committee on Tuesday approved legislation supported by the Carter Administration that would, among other things, require oil tankers using U.S. ports to have double-bottoms. These are intended to lessen the chances of oil spills.

However, the legislation, which now goes to the full Senate for a vote, would give the transportation secretary the option of waiving the double-hull requirement if he felt it was unneeded for certain ports.

Voter registration change urged

LANSING (UPI) — House Speaker Bobby D. Crim, D-Davison, called Wednesday for congressional approval of legislation allowing voter registration at the polls on election day.

In addition to simplifying the registration process for federal elections, the measure would provide funds for states and local governments to cover the costs of registration, improve election and registration procedures and establish programs to encourage voting.

Subcommittee approves Carter's Dept. of Energy

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Jimmy Carter's proposed Department of Energy cleared its first legislative hurdle Wednesday when a House subcommittee approved the bill after curbing the power to be given the new cabinet-level secretary.

The approval by the legislation subcommittee of the House Government Operations Committee was the first by any unit of Congress on the proposed legislation. It came on a voice vote.

However, the legislation reported out by the subcommittee does not give the head of the new department all of the powers Carter had suggested.

"We are creating a position of great power and authority in this legislation," said Chairperson Jack Brooks, D-Tex.

"What we are trying to do is to make sure that the authority will be exercised lawfully and not exercised in an arbitrary manner."

The subcommittee approved the President's proposal to give the secretary of energy authority now exercised by the Federal Power Commission to regulate such matters as natural gas prices.

But is also set up an independent Federal Energy Regulatory Commission with power to review appeals from the department's decisions in that area.

It rejected Carter's proposal to transfer to the new department the powers now exercised by the Securities and Exchange Commission over the finances of gas and electric utilities.

And it turned down a proposal that regulation of coal slurry pipelines be transferred from the Interstate Commerce Commission to the new department.

The subcommittee also added a provision creating an assistant secretary for competition and consumer affairs.

Meanwhile, Rep. Thomas Ashley, D-Ohio, chairperson of a special 40-member committee studying the energy problem which Carter has proposed for the new department to administer, announced that the President himself would be the first witness as the panel begins its work next week.

Ashley said that Carter had declined an invitation to appear on Capitol Hill but had instead invited the entire committee to meet with him in the White House.

He said Carter appeared to have no objections to holding the White House session "in the nature of an open hearing" but the committee rejected this approach, agreeing that only committee members should meet with the President.

Carter has said that he nominate his energy secretary James R. Schlesinger, to the new department once created.

Capping efforts to stop oil leak almost succeed

STAVANGER, Norway (AP) — A team of oilmen made one crucial step of capping the five-day-old runaway oil well North Sea Wednesday, but quit for the day because of after six hours of perilous work.

The Phillips Petroleum Co., Oklahoma-based operators of in Norway's Ekofisk oilfield, said attempts to cap the well resumed today, weather permitting.

"All steps in the operation require fresh, well-rested people," Phillips spokesperson said.

Spewing 36,000 gallons of oil and shale an hour since Friday, the broken well has formed an oil slick estimated to cover 130 miles in the middle of the North Sea's prime fishing grounds.

Two Texans from Red Adair's Houston-based team of troubleshooters, Boots Hansen and Richard Hattberg, with five assistants on the Bravo rig from daybreak until afternoon.

The Phillips spokesperson said they were one step away from activating "blind rams," half-moon-shaped steel discs that close off the flow of oil.

The spokesperson said the crew became fatigued wrestling with ram doors that gave access to the derrick. On difficult to move because of a balky gasket.

The men returned to their headquarters on the barge. The barge is holding a load of special heavy mud ready to be pumped into the well to reduce the oil pressure once the blow is capped.

Efforts to stem the gusher were curtailed in the past two days by gale-force winds or lack of wind. A calm Tuesday saw a dangerous buildup of suffocating and volatile gas around the rig, forcing the men off after six hours of work. Conditions Wednesday were described as ideal, with a sea blowing away the gas.

A Norwegian government spokesperson said that by morning Tuesday the well had flushed more than 4.7 million gallons of oil into the sea, but he estimated that about 1.8 million gallons have evaporated.

Norwegian officials reported at midmorning that part was drifting south and another appeared stationary about 160 miles from the Norwegian coast, 160 miles from Denmark and 100 miles from Britain.

Ex-Nixon aides' lawyers ask for postponement of decision

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorneys for former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell and ex-White House aides H.R. Haldeman and John D. Ehrlichman asked the Supreme Court on Wednesday to give them 10 days to explain what impact an apparent news leak from the court has had on the three Watergate cover-up appeals.

In a one-paragraph request to file additional briefs in the case, attorneys for the three powerful officials of former President Richard M. Nixon's administration said the additional information would look at "The impact on petitioners' rights before this court of the publicly disclosed circumstances involving the consideration (of the appeals)."

National Public Radio (NPR) last week reported that the court already has voted 5 to 3 to deny the appeals of the three men.

Quoting unnamed sources, NPR said Chief Justice Warren E. Burger was delaying announcement of the court's vote in an attempt to persuade at least one more justice to vote to hear arguments in the case.

It takes four votes for the court to decide to hear arguments.

The report said three justices, Burger and two Nixon appointees Lewis F. Powell Jr. and Harry A. Blackmun, had voted to hear arguments.

The fourth Nixon appointee, William H. Rehnquist, disqualified himself from considering the case, the report said.

The court has not commented on the NPR report, but other news agencies have confirmed the essence of that report.

Leaks about what is discussed during the justices' closed sessions are extremely rare, and the NPR report is believed to represent the first time a final determination of a case by the court was reported before being officially announced.

Mitchell, Haldeman and Ehrlichman were convicted of conspiracy, obstruction of justice and giving false testimony under oath in what prosecutors said was an attempt to conceal information about the Watergate scandals.

All three were sentenced 30 months to eight years in prison.

Ehrlichman has begun serving a prison term, but Mitchell and Haldeman have remained free pending appeal.

If the Supreme Court denies their appeal, Mitchell and Haldeman likely would be imprisoned soon thereafter.

MEMBERS OBJECT TO ILLEGAL TACTICS

Kelley chastized by Senators

WASHINGTON (AP)—FBI Director Clarence Kelley was told Wednesday there is no excuse for FBI agents to break the law, even if approval is given by higher governmental officials.

"You can't legalize lawbreaking in this country," Sen. Lowell P. Weicker, R-Conn. told Kelley.

In the Nurnberg trials of Nazi war criminals, "this nation of all nations" rejected the idea that an illegal act could be excused because it was done on orders, Weicker added.

Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., chairperson of a Senate appropriations subcommittee, said that if he were a police chief and found he had a "bum cop" on his force, he would want to get rid of him.

But he said that did not seem to be "the atmosphere here" as Kelley and his aides were questioned about the recent indictment of John J. Kearney, a former FBI supervisor in the bureau's New York City office.

The indictment, which Kelley said had had a bad effect on FBI morale, accuses Kearney of illegal wiretapping, mail opening and conspiracy in connection with surveillance activities in the early 1970s against Weatherman, a suspected underground terrorist organization.

He added that he did not advocate any "extra legal" authority for the FBI in combatting crime or subversion.

Kelley said he had not asked the attorney general to drop the case against Kearney but only to review it in light of the Justice Department's decision not to prosecute CIA involvement in a mail operation.

Weicker noted that in a CIA case, two presidential least one attorney general approval for the openings. He asked whether the FBI case, anyone of the agency had given approval.

"I don't know," Kelley replied.

Handicappers pessimistic about meeting

ROXANNE L. BROWN
State News Staff Writer

Michigan's handicapped individuals are expected to approach the first White House conference of this sort. Michigan, with 41, has one of the largest delegations attending, consisting of 16 delegates and the rest alternates and attendants.

The main purpose of the conference is to give handicappers a chance to voice some recommendations and implementations to the nation's lawmakers concerning the betterment of the country's environment for physical and mental handicappers.

Len Sawisch, chairperson of STIGMA (Students for Total Integration through Greater Mobility and Accessibility), is not too gung ho about being a delegate to the conference. He calls the conference "a total rip-off" aimed to suppress handicappers on a national level.

According to Sawisch, since the change in Administrations handicappers have had only hassles with the Carter Administration concerning the conference goals.

Eric Gentile, assistant coordinator for The MSU Office of Programs for Handicappers and a White House delegate, expressed his sentiments on the conference using the same jargon as Sawisch.

Gentile added that the conference is a form of exploitation as well, saying that the Michigan handicapper movement has the best civil rights act, the best system of enforcement and the best university backing, yet cannot achieve national awareness of the movement because its members are not in the position that New York or Washington, D.C. handicappers are.

"Those who have the geographical advantage and those with friends (in Washington) and money are the only ones that those elitist individuals will listen to," charged Gentile.

According to Gentile, the handicappers have been

Dean of 'U' medical college resigns

Dr. Andrew D. Hunt Jr. — the first and only dean of MSU's College of Human Medicine — has stepped down after almost 13 years in that position.

He assumed the post of acting director of the Office of Health Services last September to reorganize and develop a management base for new coordination with the University Health Center while still dean. Three weeks ago he resigned from the dean's position saying he "believed the college would now benefit from new leadership."

Dr. W. Donald Weston has been named acting dean of the College of Human Medicine.

Hunt will also continue to be a professor of human development.

He was named dean of the medical school while it was still in the planning stages in 1964. Hunt is known as the "dean of all deans of the medical schools in Michigan" because of his dozen-year reign as dean.

"I did build the school up and successfully recruited faculty members," Hunt said.

The college became "an interesting and important medical school," Hunt said. "Obviously I miss having that responsibility."

The 61-year-old physician earned a bachelor of science degree from Haverford College in 1937 and his medical degree from Cornell University in 1941.

Before coming to MSU, Hunt was the director of the ambulatory services at Stanford Medical Center from 1959-64.

He is a member of the New York Academy of Sciences, the Society for Pediatric Research, the American Pediatric Society, the American Association for the Advancement of Science and the American Academy of Pediatrics.

He served as a secretary-treasurer of the Pediatric Society of Central New Jersey from 1955-59, diplomate of the American Board of Pediatrics in 1948, chairperson of the State Health Planning Advisory Council, vice chairperson of the Regional Advisory Group of the Michigan Association for Regional Medical Programs and as first vice president of the Michigan League for Human Services, as well as holding other committee memberships.

"ripped-off" in the sense that they were told that the conference would express the voice of the consumer when in actuality it will not.

"They (Carter's handicapper conference committee), asked us to compile a comprehensive document of priorities, needs and problems of handicappers," Gentile stated angrily. "Then they threw out our data and got a group of medical professionals, out of touch with the mainstream of the consumers, to write up recommendations and needs of handicappers."

Gentile added that he strongly believes the only way to be heard in Washington now is for the delegates to "come up with strategies to effectuate the expression of the general will" and to be very vocal denouncing the already given handicapper priorities.

Sawisch expressed little faith in handicappers getting any federal backing and explained his rationale:

"They have done the same kind of political maneuvering of other conferences," Sawisch said. "The White House is getting a lot of strong opposition to such priorities as barrier-free design from builders, contractors and designers and of course they are not going to act against the powerful lobbyists," he said.

Sawisch, though faithless as far as any progress coming from the national conference, said he will continue, along with the rest of STIGMA to visit other colleges and stress the need for handicappers to "Have their voice heard through the most powerful source: the media."

One of the biggest problems of the Michigan handicapper movement has been gaining recognition on a national level. And, according to Sawisch, they do have a lot to be recognized for.

"Michigan has a unique program and unique needs," Sawisch said. "Michigan has exercised a great deal of leadership in activism. The Michigan handicapper movement is one of the few in the nation, that has worked at moving the

Lofts due for possible regulation

By SEAN HICKEY
State News Staff Writer

Definite University policies to regulate loft construction in residence halls may be instituted next fall term due to the increasing safety hazards involved, said Robert Underwood, residence hall manager.

The regulations and policies could range from simple inspection and approval of the structures to complete elimination and prohibition against the increasingly popular lofts. Currently, the only restrictions on lofts is that they be freestanding within the rooms and remain unattached to the walls.

"I think it is time we took a definite look at the safety of lofts. We wouldn't take a stand on lofts without a lot of student input through RHA but we won't approach the potential dangers lightly," Underwood said.

At a recent RHA meeting Underwood mentioned the possibility of regulating the construction and safety of lofts, but liabilities to the University under such a program would have to be determined first. Total elimination was an option that Underwood did not rule out.

Carl Eigenauer, fire safety supervisor of the Department of Public Safety, said the danger in lofts lies with increased fire hazards as a result of faulty wiring, poor escape exits and ventilation, lower ceilings and the added amounts of flammable material that a loft brings into a room.

A recent fire in Fee Hall involving a loft is one incident that has sparked the recent concern of University administrators. Because of poor ventilation and a blocked entrance route, fire officials said the loft almost caused the death of two students who escaped from the smoke in time.

"Fee Hall is the one that really shook me up. Those people were extremely lucky. Just a few more minutes and we might have been taking dead bodies out of there," Eigenauer said.

According to a recent survey taken last year, there were an estimated 650 lofts in the residence halls. Underwood said they became popular five years ago, especially when rooms were frequently being overassigned and tripled.

"Our main concern is that every time you have a fire, smoke and heat go to the ceiling causing asphyxiation. As an administrator, I get a real concern when I see lofts constructed like the one in the Fee Hall fire," Underwood said.

Eigenauer said that many of the lofts he has seen are well constructed and safe, but a large majority of them are potentially dangerous.

"Some of them are terrible. We have a serious problem with a lot of lofts and we want to get something started on them before the fall," Eigenauer said.

Gary North, coordinator for Residence Halls Programs, said no formal plans for instituting a policy on lofts has been undertaken, but that additional review of the situation is underway.

"We may be directed by the fire safety people to treat the situation as a definite fire hazard, but we have not been notified to do so to date," North said.

Added funds to give Library pop line, music, special books

Library late at night in the MSU Library may be a bit more pleasant when scheduled payments to the tune of $1.75 million are made.

Money is the Library's portion of the $17 million to be raised by the MSU Enrichment Fund, kicked off by University administrators weeks ago. In addition to the Library, noneducational sections of a Performing Arts Center and a new museum will be built with the funds. Also, additional Endowed Chairs will be established for faculty.

Richard Chapin, director of the MSU Library, said though the administration has "been generous" with financial allocations for operational costs, there were several areas in which the Library could be bettered.

The annual allotment of approximately $1.5 million that the Library receives is generally "already earmarked" for the purchase of new books needed for the year, Chapin said. As a and prohibition against the increasingly popular lofts. Currently, the only restrictions on lofts is that they be freestanding within the rooms and remain unattached to the walls.

"I think it is time we took a definite look at the safety of lofts. We wouldn't take a stand on lofts without a lot of student input through RHA but we won't approach the potential dangers lightly," Underwood said.

At a recent RHA meeting Underwood mentioned the possibility of regulating the construction and safety of lofts, but liabilities to the University under such a program would have to be determined first. Total elimination was an option that Underwood did not rule out.

Carl Eigenauer, fire safety supervisor of the Department of Public Safety, said the danger in lofts lies with increased fire hazards as a result of faulty wiring, poor escape exits and ventilation, lower ceilings and the added amounts of flammable material that a loft brings into a room.

A recent fire in Fee Hall involving a loft is one incident that has sparked the recent concern of University administrators. Because of poor ventilation and a blocked entrance route, fire officials said the loft almost caused the death of two students who escaped from the smoke in time.

PBB bill stalled by ponderous committee

It appears that the people of Michigan will have to endure an acute case of legislative constipation as a bill to lower allowable levels of PBB collects dust in a Senate committee.

While the entire state government's response to the PBB mess has seemed like a recommendation for political Ex-Lax, the Senate's sluggishness in moving on the Spaniola bill — passed earlier by the House — is even more frustrating.

The bill would reduce allowable levels of PBB in meat and milk to .02 parts per million (ppm). Determining this level is admittedly difficult; some would say impossible.

But the major concern here is to get the legislative machinery moving, to get the bill out of the committee and before the Senate, so some sort of compromise may be worked out. If, as some say, the proposed .02 ppm is unrealistically low, perhaps a compromise of .05 ppm can be worked out.

There is some fear the committee may not muster enough votes to dislodge the bill and send it to the Senate floor. There is only one sure vote for the measure (Sen. John Otterbacher's) and three votes are needed for passage.

Once on the floor, however, the prospects of passage are not particularly bright. A recent survey showed that 12 senators are for the measure, two are opposed and the rest undecided. Twenty-six votes are needed to insure that provisions of the bill take effect immediately.

Failure to pass this bill, even in a diluted form, would fly in the face of all decency, evidence and popular demand. Recent findings of a new comparison between Wisconsin and Michigan farmers, part of a larger study of PBB effects, has shown a tendency for Michigan farmers to be more susceptible to blood, nervous system, skin and stomach disorders than their counterparts in the dairy state.

In addition, failure to pass this bill would allow Gov. Milliken to have been a most persistent procrastinator, to expiate his neglect by blaming the Democratic Senate for ignoring the problem.

Milliken jumped on the wagon of PBB concern a bit late in the day. Democratic failure to pass the Spaniola bill would reinforce his tendency to pass the buck.

Support decriminalization bill

The bill offered in the state House to decriminalize the use of small quantities of marijuana is sensible and long overdue.

The bill would reduce the penalty for public possession or noncommercial distribution of 3.4 ounces of marijuana from a misdemeanor to a civil offense. It would also eliminate any penalty for possession in private homes.

The provision which reduces the penalty for possession of 3.4 ounces or more to a maximum of 90 days in prison is severe. Ideally, no penalty should exist; but a step this radical would probably scare away votes.

As it stands now, the proposal not only has the necessary votes, it has solid bipartisan backing. Eighteen Democrats and six enlightened Republicans are cosponsors of the measure.

The marijuana issue has receded in the public consciousness over the years. It is no longer fashionable to believe that marijuana users constitute a hard-core radical minority. Moreover, several scientific studies have failed to establish a link between marijuana use and health disorders. Indeed, there is little doubt that alcohol and tobacco are far more dangerous drugs.

If Michigan passes this bill it will join Mississippi and several other states in decriminalizing marijuana. If Mississippi can do it, so can Michigan.

PAUL NOVASELICK

Ten-four, CBs

"Breaker one-nine, this is Disco Duck calling the Haslett Hustler. Can you read me, Hustler?"

Maybe the Haslett Hustler can't read you, Disco, but after five months of hassling with you and the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) I can still read you loud and clear, good buddy — illegally interfering with the reception of my home stereo system.

And as almost 2,000 other people discover each month when complaining about CB radios to the FCC district office in Detroit, the FCC is incapable of processing the huge increase in CB complaints. In fact, it is now to the point where there is virtually no enforcement of FCC regulations at all.

"It's no use going to the FCC and complaining," said Disco when I first told him of the interference last December. "They never do anything about CB radios in the area."

Unfortunately, he was right. The FCC is supposedly responsible for the licensing and regulation of the airwaves, including over nine million CB radios. When I called the Detroit office in January (there are none in Lansing), they instructed me to put my complaint in writing and send it to their office. Fine, I thought.

After waiting a month without response, I mailed a second letter to the FCC certified mail, again detailing my complaint against Disco, and asking what course of action either I or the commission could take. Again, I waited another month and still got no answer. Finally I called the FCC office once again.

"There's just no way we can handle all the complaints," said Janet Davis, an FCC secretary. "We only work on CB complaints when we have time for them, which is usually on Saturday."

"There are more important things we have to work on first," she said, "like inspecting television and radio stations and licensing all those CBs."

"So now the FCC licenses CB operators free of charge, but has no enforcement clout to insure that the operators follow proper FCC regulations. In effect, there is no reason to even get a license, except the fact that it's free and it's official."

Trying to enlist the aid of the East Lansing Police proved futile, for they emphasized they have no jurisdiction over broadcasting. "You'll have to write a complaint to the FCC," said Lt. Donald Hewson. "But that type of action doesn't take overnight."

No kidding. "We get about 2,000 complaints per month, and there's no way a staff of five people can handle them," Davis said. "We can only put them on file and hope we get to them."

"We're all doing five people's jobs, but we're working on January's complaints now."

Finally, I got my chance to go to the top. James H. Quello, FCC commissioner and MSU graduate, was to speak at the University Club and would hear questions afterward.

"We just don't have the manpower to hear all the complaints," Quello said. "We've tried to squeeze more money out of Congress for enforcement people, but they haven't given it

"Congress just doesn't want to appropriate any money and we can only give token enforcement."

No kidding. The FCC previously charged $4 for each operator's license, but suspended all collections after the U.S. Court of Appeals ruled that those fees were unfairly assessed. The court said that the fee need only cover the cost of administering the licenses, therefore the FCC has been ordered to process the license free of charge and refund the money already collected.

"If they would have let us keep the fee, we would have had enough money for enforcement," Quello said. "But the court ruled we only had to charge an amount in relation to the cost of procuring the license."

According to Jeffery Young, enforcement officer for the FCC in Washington, D.C. the $4 fee wasn't given to the FCC, anyway.

"The money went directly into the Treasury Department; it didn't go to us," he said. "We received our money from direct budget appropriations from Congress, so it's up to them how much money we get."

He added their offices will have to process about 100,000 complaints against CB radios this year alone.

So now the FCC licenses CB operators free of charge, but has no enforcement clout to insure that the operators follow proper FCC regulations. In effect, there is no reason to even get a license, except the fact that it's free and it's official.

Commissioner Quello stressed that the FCC was formed to "protect the public interest," but added that there are various ways of interpreting exactly what that means. He said that "public interest" means "the best service to the most people at the most reasonable cost."

In my opinion, it should read "the best service to the illegal CB operators at the least possible cost."

If the Detroit office alone receives 2,000 complaints per month, it would seem that the "public interest" lies in stricter enforcement of CB radios.

"Maybe we'd be better off if we washed our hands of the CB problem until there is enough public outcry to force Congress to allocate more funds," Quello said.

In the meantime, there is no reason for CB operators to get licensed, no reason to obey FCC regulations, and no reason for Disco to stop transmitting over my stereo.

As Janet Davis of the Detroit office said, "All you can do is write your senator."

Thanks, Janet.

No help

The "Brown's Town" comic in Tuesday's State News implies that Carter's energy proposal will be helping small car companies in general and American Motors in specific. Unless his ideas have changed significantly in the last two weeks, this just isn't so.

According to the April 13 issue of the Wall Street Journal, "No manufacturer could make money from" the planned rebates to small cars "because the rebate to each maker for its efficient cars couldn't exceed the taxes collected from that company on its 'gas-guzzlers.'" (Taxes are assigned and rebates are awarded to car companies directly, not to the buyers of the automobiles.)

In effect, what this means is that a car company must produce some large cars if it hopes to get any rebates at all and it must produce an almost equal number of large and small cars to get its full share of the rebates.

This proposal does not encourage car manufacturers to switch to small cars unless their production currently consists

Ethics code stymies House

WASHINGTON — The tough new House ethics code is forcing many congressmen to choose between their hefty outside incomes and early retirement.

Beginning in the next session of Congress, no member can earn more than $8,625 from outside ventures. The code, which was supposed to help justify their recent salary hikes to $57,500, will make some members either abandon lucrative private sidelines or pack their bags.

Take the case of Rep. Otis Pike, D.-N.Y., the dapper, white haired former chairman of the House Select Committee on Intelligence. He now serves on a key health subcommittee, where he has sponsored several bills on Medicare and hospitals.

At the same time, Pike is also vice president and director of Long Island Home Ltd., which owns a nursing home and a psychiatric hospital. In fact, Pike owns 26 per cent of these medical facilities.

One of the facilities, South Oaks Psychiatric Hospital, receives over $1 million a year in Medicare payments from the federal government. The Broadlawn Manor Nursing Home receives between $50,000 and $100,000 a year from Medicare.

Meanwhile, Pike has sponsored a statute insuring that 1976 Medicare payments to doctors would be no lower than those for 1975. The same law granted temporary waivers of some nursing staff requirements to "small hospitals in rural areas."

"Pike insisted there is no conflict of interest involved. 'It's only a conflict of interest if it benefits me or my hospital,' he told our reporter Jane Winebrenner. 'All hospitals receive Medicare payments.'"

But the popular, nine-term liberal has also proposed cracking down on Medicare fraud.

Pike insisted there is no conflict of interest involved. "It's only a conflict of interest if it benefits me or my hospital," he told our reporter Jane Winebrenner. "All hospitals receive Medicare payments."

When asked if legislation he has introduced has benefitted him or his hospital, Pike paused for a long time, then said softly: "I know it hasn't."

The Long Island Democrat refused to tell us how much money he earns as vice president of the medical facilities, but he admitted it was over the $8,625 limit in the new ethics code.

Pike wouldn't rule out resigning from Congress, or quitting Long Island Home, where he has been a director for 29 years. "I reconsider every two years whether I will run for Congress," he told us.

SECRET TAX BREAKS: The White House has blocked an attempt to shed more light on the secret operations of the Internal Revenue Service (IRS).

For years, the IRS has made confidential rulings on tax breaks for corporations and well-to-do taxpayers. The agency responds to specific requests from these big shots with a "private letter ruling," which then sets a legal precedent for future tax deductions in similar cases. But the average taxpayer has no way of knowing about these private tax breaks and thus can't take advantage of them. Even Congress has no access to the secret decisions. Recently, however, after a federal court order, Congress approved a plan to release the hidden rulings.

But here's the catch: Only the new rulings must be made public. And, even on the new rulings, key facts (such as names of the companies involved) are being withheld. Past rulings can be released only if the White House grants additional funds to publish them as the IRS has requested. The Office of Management and Budget, however, turned down the request cold.

Although the agency received past funding to make 30,000 rulings a year, we have learned the IRS actually makes only 3,000 to 6,000. The others are simply rubber-stamp approvals that cost virtually nothing, according to Tax Analysts and Advocates, a public interest group.

Meanwhile, a select group of high-powered New York and Washington attorneys has cornered a "black market" on past private rulings. They have been peddling them to the highest bidder.

JACK ANDERSON
and LES WHITTEN

Footnote: A White House spokesman told us that other expenditures on the priority over publishing the rulings. Besides, he added, the IRS seems to be that the matter was "not that important." But the IRS insists it will be more money and shouldn't be blamed on the White House.

SUGGESTION BOX: A year ago today, we created the National Suggestion Box to solicit ideas on how to solve the country's problems. More than 25,000 suggestions have poured in from all 50 states and overseas.

We have brought these suggestions to the attention of key officials. At first it was difficult to penetrate the bureaucratic fortress. Since President Carter took office, however, the government has been more responsive to suggestions from average people.

Earlier in the year, for example, Les Purvin of El Paso, Texas, suggested that utility companies charge more equal rates for natural gas.

Many big utilities, he noted, use a system which rewards big industrial users. The administration seems to agree and has proposed that the authorities change to fairer structures, which curb discounts on business.

The best suggestions are being hand-carried by the Suggestion Box staff to the White House, where they are being actively considered. Send your suggestions to the National Suggestion Box, P.O. Box 2009, Washington, D.C. 20518.

'Let 'em find their own oil!'

WASHINGTON — The argument that President Carter gives for energy conservation is that if we keep using up the petroleum reserves we have now there won't be any left for our children.

It's probably strong logic with many people, but Clemstone, my gas-guzzling friend, isn't buying it.

"Let the kids find their own oil," he said after the President's address on television. "How can you say that?"

"We found it, didn't we? We dug in the ground and we brought the stuff up with our own hands. Why should we give the kids our oil on a silver platter?"

"We have to think of future generations who may suffer because of our waste and abuse."

"Why?" Clemstone asked me. "Because," I said weakly.

"Look, do you think they'll appreciate the oil and gas if we just leave it to them? I know kids. The only things that have any meaning for them are those they worked for themselves. What we should say to them is, 'We're using up whatever petroleum we've found in the ground. You want some for yourselves, go out and find it.' That's the kind of challenge that will grab them."

"But you can't use up all our reserves in ONE generation."

"Sure we can. It's OUR oil and gas. Why should we freeze so some rotten kids can have gas to tool around in their cars 20 years from today?"

"There's something wrong with your argument," I told Clemstone, "but I can't put my finger on it."

"There is nothing wrong with it. Each generation should fend for itself. Do you think we'd be where we are today if we depended on handouts of oil from our parents? No sir, we worked to get that petroleum. We drilled holes in Texas and Oklahoma. We sweated for it in the Gulf of Mexico and froze our tails off on the northern slopes of Alaska. We kissed the feet of desert sheiks to get our oil. And, by heaven, when we got it we appreciated it."

"Now Carter wants us to say, 'Here, kiddies. We won't use up the oil so you can have it. Well, I say 'bulldozer'! You can give them your oil reserves if you want, but I'm not giving them mine."

"You make a strong argument against conservation," I told my friend, "but you forget one thing. You can't take it with you."

"I'm not taking it with me," he yelled. "I'm going to use it up right here, today, tomorrow, next week, next year. When I go there won't be a quart of the stuff left."

"What will your kids think of you? What will they say about a father who doesn't leave his kids a quart of oil after he's gone to that big Exxon station in the sky?"

"They'll bless me. They will eventually say, 'Thanks, Dad, for not making it easy on us. Thanks for having the faith in us so we could find our own Alaska slope. You found your oil and we found ours, and our kids can find their own.'"

"I'm not sure that was the message the President was trying to get over to the American people," I said.

"Of course, it wasn't," Clemstone said. "But he doesn't have the confidence in the next generation that I do. He doesn't think they have the moral fiber and the pioneer spirit to go out and drill for their own fuel."

"But suppose it's true that there aren't any more reserves of gas and oil left?"

What about all the stuff you've said about faculty, students and administrators sharing a lot of common goals and interests, that we ought to try to resolve differences within the framework of these common community concerns. That was your big pitch back when you supported student participation in the governance process, and I thought it made sense."

"Just shows how persuasive the approach can be, dummy," I retorts. "Anyone knows that what we've really got here is an adversarial system which thrives on conflict and dissension. Big trick is to make the faculty think they have something in common with students and administrators, then to lower the boom when they're relaxed. But when I close this office door this afternoon, you'll be able to reach me the rest of the night at Paul Revere's, not Dooley's or the Walnut Hills Country Club. "Right denouncement but wrong word," I answers. "Should have been 'chauffeur'ing the move against collective bargaining. Only reason a majority of the faculty voted 'No Agent' is because I made 450 trips to the Armory that day. Went through 34 bottles of Cutty, too."

"But wasn't that hard on your car, Lush?" my colleague queries.

MSU, Michigan colleges develop training for bilingual teachers

Since 1974 many colleges in Michigan, including MSU, have developed programs to train people to instruct in a bilingual classroom. A bilingual teacher is responsible for reinforcing in a student's native language what they learned in English. Bilingual education will help students use what they already know — their native language, in learning to read and write," said Luis Olivarez, bilingual education consultant with the Michigan Department of Education. MSU's College of Education provides three ways for people to become Spanish bilingual teachers.

Undergraduates must take required courses in Spanish language and culture, besides basic teaching methods courses. People who already are certified teachers can take additional courses to obtain endorsement to teach in a bilingual classroom. A graduate program is available for people to become trainers of bilingual teachers.

Potential bilingual instructors become equipped with specialized skills in areas such as history and math, but also gain training in ways to be competent in a bilingual classroom.

"In the last two years approximately 50 different MSU students have undertaken some work toward becoming a bilingual education teacher," said Clinton T. Cobb, assistant dean of the College of Education.

Federal funding since 1975 has helped provide fellowships for those involved in the graduate program. "But our resources are still limited for providing additional staff," Cobb said.

MSU is also contributing to bilingual education by jointly sponsoring the 3rd Annual Conference on Latino Education June 18 and 19 at Eastern High School with the Michigan Department of Education and the La Raza Citizen's Advisory Committee to the State Board of Education.

Parts of redlining legislation criticized

By JUDY PUTNAM
State News Staff Writer

Redlining may occur in East Lansing, but state legislation dealing with the issue may not even directly affect the city's housing problems, according to members at Tuesday's East Lansing Housing Commission public hearing. Panel consisting of Rep. David Hollister, Lansing; Liz O'Hara, who was part of William G. Milliken's task force on housing; and Chad Shane, vice president American Bank and Trust, fielded questions from an audience of about 25 scattered in the large Hannah School auditorium. The points raised were that bills do not include protection from money-lending discrimination against large rental and student housing cooperatives.

"The bills can't do everything," O'Hara said. "They tackle a very small part of the problem of urban housing."

Redlining has been defined as the arbitrary denial of financial lending on the basis of race, geographic location or the age of the neighborhood. The term also includes mortgage loans made on less favorable terms for certain areas.

Two antiredlining bills were discussed. One, simultaneously introduced in the House and Senate, deals with mortgage redlining and requires lending institutions to disclose circumstances of loans which have been denied as well as those accepted.

The other measure has been called the "HIP-NIP" bill by Hollister, who sponsored the bill; this stands for Home Improvement Program and Neighborhood Improvement Program. This bill will authorize the Michigan State Housing Development Authority to issue $100 million in bonds for improvement loans for individual homes and neighborhoods.

As they stand, the bills do not include structures with more than four families or student cooperatives.

"Co-ops are basically outside of everything which exists," Joe Murphy, president of the Student Housing Corporation (SHC), said.

Murphy said that co-ops have been discriminated against for mortgage loans and home improvement loans because the co-op houses are owned by a large number of people and not one or two individuals.

The SHC was refused a mortgage loan to purchase an East Lansing house last October. Murphy addressed Shane, asking, "Why would an organization which has a history of rehabilitating houses be denied a loan because of its (the house's) age?"

Shane, who said that American Bank and Trust had turned down an SHC request, denied that the refusal was made on the basis of the house's age. Shane said that SHC had no accounts with his bank and that there was nobody to sign the mortgage. The problem of landlords letting their rental units run down and the shortage of rental housing in East Lansing was brought up by Bill Beachler, chairperson of the housing commission, who asked if the HIP-NIP bill addressed these problems. "No, the bill as drafted does not speak to the two issues," Hollister said.

Hollister said later that the thrust of the bill is for inner city areas which are a priority. The problems of suburbs and cooperatives are "separate issues" he said, though the issue of discrimination against co-ops should be looked into.

Rep. William Bryant, R-Grosse Pointe Park, sponsor of the mortgage redlining bill, said that the Statewide Coalition Against Redlining, an organization consisting of government, religious, education, labor and local civic groups, has proposed an amendment to the bill which will include all sizes of buildings.

Bryant said that he would be reluctant to see the amendment added since the financial considerations are multiplied when dealing with large rental units as opposed to one or two family homes.

"It will jeopardize the bill totally, if we try to expand beyond four units," he said.

Group seeks help in research project

An MSU group, attempting to document redlining in the Lansing area, is looking for volunteers to aid in the survey. The Center for Urban Affairs has designed a research project which will examine mortgage and home improvement loan requests in three Lansing census tracts.

While redlining has received much public attention, there has been little documentation of the practice. Currently, lending institutions are not required by law to disclose information about loans which have been denied. Persons interested in volunteering their time for telephone surveys should call 353-9558.

Civic Players find new home a hot deal

By JIM DuFRESNE
State News Staff Writer

After four years of searching, the Lansing Civic Players have finally found a home. The Lansing City Council voted unanimously Monday night to accept the theatrical group's bid of $51,000 for Fire Station #8, a 46-year-old station on Michigan Avenue.

"In the past four years we have been moved twice by urban renewal out of the downtown area," said Donald White, president of the Civic Players. "We vowed the next time we moved would be the last time."

And, according to White, the final home is ideal for the local actors.

"The nice thing about the old fire station is that we can move in it right away without any major work," he said. "It fits our needs almost perfectly."

The Civic Players, who are planning to move in June, will use the building as their headquarters and as a place to build their scenery, sell tickets and hold their tryouts and practices.

But no performances will be held there. The Civic Players will continue to perform at the Pratington Education Center since the fire station is too small to house their 1,100 season ticket holders.

"Depending on what is required to set up a stage," White said, "we are hoping in the future to do some studio or children plays. But no major productions at the fire station."

Before the theatrical group does anything, however, its members will have to sign a five-year land contract with the city and reach an agreement on the interest rate. The Civic Players specified in their bid that the rate could not exceed 8 1/4 per cent while Lansing required "prevailing interest rate" or what Lansing City Councilmember Robert Hull said was around 9 per cent. Both parties will sit down and work this out and White said it is possible the Civic Players will go higher.

"The fire station buy couldn't have come at a better time," White said. "We will be able to move during the summer as we don't produce any plays."

The Civic Players' season runs from October until May and the 300 members produce four plays and one musical every year. The group, which formed in 1929, is one of Michigan's oldest theatrical organizations and composed of nonprofessional area performers.

Though the group plans to change parts of the building, the old character and atmosphere will remain.

"The fire station is a relic of the city and we are going to try to preserve its character," White said. "But I don't think we are going to change our name to the Firehouse Theatre."

Navy will hold public hearings about Seafarer

U.S. Navy will hold public hearings at 7 on Project Seafarer at the Civic Center, 505 W. Allegan St. Navy is seeking to gather public opinion on its proposal to locate a 4,000-mile underground communications cable named Seafarer, in the Upper Peninsula.

Project has stirred heated debate. William G. Milliken has asked that the Navy not place the project in Michigan. Navy, despite a pledge to follow Milliken's advice, wants the project in Michigan because the terrain is best suited to permit radio waves capable of slicing through the ocean to submerged sub-

Seafarer action may spur sit-in DETROIT (UPI) — If the Navy goes ahead with its controversial Project Seafarer, Upper Peninsula residents will stage a series of nonviolent protests, including an encampment at K.I. Sawyer Air Force Base near Marquette, it was reported today.

Sawyer would serve as the project's nerve center should the controversial submarine communications system be built in the west-central Upper Peninsula.

Part of the nonviolent protest plan evolved out of a clandestine meeting of Seafarer foes earlier this month, the Detroit Free Press said.

The U.S. House of Representatives has rejected Seafarer funding but the Navy is hoping that veteran military supporters in the U.S. Senate will rescue the project.

The civil disobedience advocates said the Sawyer protest would be an attempt to prevent workers from laying the project's massive underground antenna cable.

"We would camp outside the base and just prevent them from extending the cable lines," they said.

Referendums on Seafarer that have been put before voters in recent months show Upper Peninsula residents overwhelmingly opposed to the system.

Gov. William G. Milliken had said that if U.P. residents had opposed Seafarer he would veto the project. He has done so but there was some question as to whether his veto could stop the Navy from building the project.

Foes of the project charged Seafarer's ecological impact has been poorly researched, that the system's massive underground grid would scar the landscape and its electro-magnetic field might endanger plant, animal and human life.

Advocates called the $500 million system essential to the U.P.'s sagging economy and vital for national defense and protection of America's submarine fleet.

Board approves merger of committees

By NUNZIO M. LUPO
State News Staff Writer

In a meeting haunted by ghosts of the Student Board's past, the ASMSU Student Board approved the merger of two committees and examined a new projected budget for 1977 Tuesday night.

The discussion of a bill to merge space allocations and search and selections committees into a "Space, allocations and personnel committee" resulted in confusion and a great deal of floor yielding to former Student Board members including Mary Cloud, Phillip Elliot, Michael Lenz and Vincent Yeh.

The two committees are active during different parts of the school year and relatively nonactive the rest of the year, the bill said. The combination of the two necessitated several amendments to the ASMSU Student Board Code of Operations.

Dan Courtney, Inter-Fraternity Council (IFC) representative said the former committees did a good job separately and didn't require a merger.

Search and Selection, which was responsible for ASMSU personnel, should not be merged because the new president might require it to help in his appointments, he said.

Kent Barry, presidential race winner, was recently seated on the board after the invalidation of his slate was reversed by the judiciary.

The debate on the bill, lasting well over two hours, became choppy because of the number of code changes in wording and intent required. Several moves to table and send the bill back to the policy committee were introduced.

John Furtaw, University College representative, moved to refer it to a committee, saying, "this could have used a lot more research."

The bill also proposed the revision of sections of the code not dealing with the two committees. One of these sections included the provision regarding how an ASMSU appointee could be recalled.

By recommendation of any board member and a two-thirds vote of the members present, an appointee to a University Committee can now be recalled. Previously the appointee could be recalled by the recommendation of the president and only for "chronic nonattendance."

Richard Lehrter, ASMSU comptroller, presented a revised budget to the Student Board that projected total 1977 revenues of $78,338, including summer and fall term revenues yet to be collected. This includes monies distributed to ASMSU Student Board, Programming Board and Student Media Appropriations Board. Total revenues left for the special projects fund would be $6,029.05 and Lehrter said there was about $4,700 left.

The Student Board also approved a bill directing the president to write a letter to deans of colleges that offer television classes requesting live sessions for deaf students. Kirsten Panhellenic Council Representatives said these students had difficulty with television classes because the camera moves the professors' hands when they use a black board, preventing students from lipreading.

The Student Board also approved Programming Board appointees Stuart Carter, Inter-Cooperative Council (ICC), Riley, College of Business and Kathy Wright, College of Education.

CITIZENS IN NEARBY AREAS OPPOSE PLAN

Milliken announces four prison sites

By MICKI MAYNARD
State News Staff Writer

Gov. William G. Milliken Wednesday announced four sites across the state for corrections facilities intended to alleviate overcrowding in Michigan prisons.

The sites are St. Augustine Seminary, near Holland; the Wayne County Child Development Center, Northville; a portion of Kincheloe Air Force Base, Sault Ste. Marie; and a J.L. Hudson department store warehouse in downtown Detroit.

The governor has contended for the past few months that Michigan prisons are drastically overcrowded and unless action was taken to find new facilities by summer, the state could see Attica-like riots.

However, none of the announced sites can be ready for occupancy before September. Milliken told a news conference that the state would have to hope that no disturbances take place.

Citizens in most of the areas proposed by the governor for a prison site have been adamantly opposed to such a move. Persons in Holland and Saugatuck, in particular, have launched a letter-writing campaign in opposition to the St. Augustine location.

Milliken said he could understand their feelings, but said the state had to respond to "an urgent public need."

"I can't exaggerate the crisis enough in our corrections system today," Milliken said. "We must move without delay. Nothing would be so wrong as to do nothing at all."

The governor's proposals will almost certainly come up against legislative opposition. He said he realized legislators would not be happy with the announcement, but said the state had no alternative.

Persons in the Northville area also have made known their opposition to the new prison. The Child Development Center is located on the edge of a residential area in the Detroit suburb.

Milliken told reporters he would not make the Northville site a permanent one, saying that the state would attempt to secure land across from the Detroit House of Correction for a new facility.

The governor stressed the seriousness of the overcrowding situation, citing statistics on the ever-increasing prison population. He said the state's prison population was now at 13,210 in a system intended to house 11,432.

Milliken added that the prison population is expected to be 14,200 by Jan. 1.

Factors for the increase, the governor said, include the economic recession in 1974 as well as an increased number of sentences resulting from mandatory sentence laws Milliken himself signed in the last two years.

Milliken said his proposals released Wednesday were only intended to solve a short-term problem. He said he would urge the state to begin looking at long-range solutions.

New agreement affiliates MSU with U.P. hospitals

Medical students in the MSU College of Human Medicine will have an opportunity to get clinical experience in two hospitals in the Upper Peninsula because of new affiliation agreements between the hospitals and MSU.

At their last meeting the MSU Board of Trustees approved the affiliation agreements with Marquette General Hospital and with Escanaba's St. Francis Hospital.

The two new agreements raise the number of the College of Human Medicine's hospital affiliations to 21.

Dr. Donald Weston, acting dean of the College of Human Medicine, said the purpose of the medical school's hospital affiliations is to give the students an opportunity to learn in the type of environment where they will eventually work.

Both contracts will facilitate development of teaching programs, delivery of health care and the clinical training of M.D. students enrolled in the Upper Peninsula Medical Education Program. The program is designed to train physicians for patient care in doctor-short small towns and rural areas.

Player's Gallery alive and well —ready to act

By DANIEL HILBERT
State News Staff Writer

Player's Gallery is alive and well and living in the MSU theatrical group, in existence since the summer of 1974, has produced such musicals as "Camelot," by Learner and Lowe; "Fiddler on the Roof," by Kander and Ebb; and "The Fantasticks," by Jones and Hill, but has yet to mount a full production this year. The main problem has been a shortage of volunteers, "David" new director of Player's Gallery, said. "We have lumber, costumes, but not very many people." Hennessy, director of activities for the Union Activities Board, said the problems started last spring when there was a turnover of people, with many members graduating and leaving. "That, she continued, the Gallery had problems recruiting to reform the group. Sara Thorne, director of the Gallery from 1976 to the spring of 1977, said the problems encountered by the Gallery are also those of another campus theatrical group — The Company. "The problem with getting people involved could come from the fact that the Theatre Department is putting on more outside Fairchild and the Arena — such as Studio 49 productions — so we get less theatre people involved," she said. "The setbacks, the Gallery, under Kropp, plans a comeback, beginning with a production of Tennessee Williams' "The Glass Menagerie." There are a dozen people involved with "The Glass Menagerie" and it's the first show I've ever directed. All of the cast and technical people are excellent but we still need more people," Kropp said.

The play will run May 19 through 22 at 8:15 p.m. in Wonders Hall Kiva, with a matinee on May 21, at 2:15 p.m.

After that production, Kropp explained, the Gallery will hold auditions May 24 to 26 for its second major project, the summer season, a three-week continuation of the Summer Circle Free Theatre which the Gallery will produce in conjunction with The Company.

The season will tentatively consist of three plays, Bertolt Brecht's adaption of Moliere's "Don Juan," David Campton's

British play, "Jonah," and Shakespeare's "The Taming of the Shrew."

These plays will run Tuesday through Saturday during the first three weeks of August.

"One of our other projects will be the building of a prototype Elizabethan stage in the Union Ballroom. It will be a 20-by-24-foot extension of the permanent stage, and we will make it as faithful to the original as our finances will allow," Kropp said.

That stage will be used for the production of "The Taming of the Shrew," and forthcoming productions.

The Gallery also plans an innovative season that should promote involvement from both students and faculty next year.

"All of next year's season will be determined by applications from students and faculty," Kropp said. "We would like to do six shows demonstrating a wide range of theatre."

He added that the season will be open to everyone, and won't be overrun by Theatre Department faculty and students.

"We have very grand ambitions," Kropp continued, "so we have to build them slowly."

"Everything we do is for the student's benefit, as is spelled out in our constitution."

Despite problems this year, the 12 members of Player's Gallery have potential to make all of the projects become reality, Kropp said.

"We now have a good core of responsible people. I really can't complain," he said.

Jean Ritchie slated for concert

The MSU Folksong Society and the Lecture-Concert Series will play host tonight to one of America's premier musical folklorists — Jean Ritchie. The concert concludes three days of ballad singing, dulcimer crafting and playing, Appalachian play-party games and folklore collecting by Ritchie and her husband, George Picknow.

Born the youngest of 14 musical children in a family reared around the Appalachian region of Kentucky, Ritchie's self-taught ability on the mountain dulcimer inspired her to continue exploring the riches of folk music.

Ritchie sang ballads and love plaints rooted in the Scottish, English and Irish ancestors who settled in the mountainous Cumberland region. Favorites were "Barbry Ellen," "A Pretty Fair Miss A-Workin' In The Garden," "Sourwood Mountain" and "Lord Randal." After receiving highest honors and a Phi Beta Kappa key from the University of Kentucky at Lexington, she journeyed with her dulcimer to New York to teach her mountain music at the Henry Street Settlement.

While in New York, Ritchie was discovered by Alan Lomax, who recorded her singing for the Library of Congress Folksong Archives, and introduced her to Oxford Press. She published her first book in 1955, "Singing Family of the Cumberlands," and has followed it with nine others. Ritchie also has 25 albums showcasing her abilities on the dulcimer, zither and guitar, all accompanying her "people reaching" voice.

Tickets to the 7:30 p.m. performance in Fairchild Theatre are available today at the MSU Union Ticket Office for $3. Tickets will also be available at the door for $3.50.

Students, professor cast 'The Marriage of Figaro'

MSU assistant professor and six MSU voice are featured in an version of Mozart's opera, "The Marriage of Jennings, assistant professor in the title role of Count Almaviva.

Other MSU students in the cast include seniors Terrance Odette, Monte Long and Eileen Coy; Janine Novenske, graduate student in music; and Deborah Byrne, instructor of voice, as Cherubino.

The English version, translated by Carl Saloga, former director of the MSU Opera Workshop, will be performed in its entirety. Saloga will give a brief explanation of each scene throughout the opera.

Members of the MSU Symphony Orchestra and musicians from the Lansing area comprise the orchestra.

"The Marriage of Figaro" will continue with performances Friday and Sunday at 8 p.m. in Pardington Auditorium of West Junior High School, 400 S. Chestnut St., Lansing. Admission is $3 for adults and $1.50 for students.

Jazz Ensemble, cellist will give free concerts

MSU Jazz Ensemble, conducted by Burgess Gardener, will give a free concert at 8:15 tonight in the Music Building atrium.

The program will include two arrangements by Count Basie: "In a Silent Way" and "Doing Basie's Thing." Also performed will be Jones' "Tiptoe" and Ray Brown's "Double Fault Blues." At Martha Reikow Prudon will give her graduate recital at Hart Recital Hall in the Music Building on Saturday at 4 p.m., assisted by pianist Anthony Sirianni, will perform her "Sonata in E Major," Haydn's "Concerto, Op. 101 in G," Frank Bridge's "Sonata for Cello and Piano" and Liszt's "Largo," transcribed by Prudon. Admission is free.

Softball team optimistic

By JOHN SINGLER
State News Sports Writer

The fluid optimism of MSU softball coach Diane Ulibarri is becoming a byword of the Spartans and a warning to prospective opponents.

Prior to last weekend's Big Ten Tournament, Ulibarri suspected some disregard for MSU's talents on the part of the other teams in the tourney.

All the Spartans did was tip-toe to the title.

"The people who have played us respect us," Ulibarri said. MSU enters this weekend's State Tournament, in Grand Rapids, as the top seed in the 12-team, double-elimination tourney which begins today.

Of the 12, only Western Michigan and Grand Valley State have faced the Spartans this season, leaving nine other schools wondering what to expect from MSU.

Ulibarri held an intrasquad scrimmage Tuesday, but she said that little could be accomplished because everyone was tired from the trip to Iowa for the Big Ten Tournament.

Kathy Strahan was kept out of that scrimmage because of continuing trouble with a pulled hamstring, but is expected to start the tourney at second base.

Center-fielder Nancy Green is still nursing a tender elbow but, like Strahan, will play. Green was one of the big hitters for the Spartans in the Big Ten tourney.

The pitching rotation is not set, but Nancy Lyons rates strong consideration. The sophomore from Westport, Conn., won three straight games in Iowa, including three-hitters in both the semifinal and final.

Gwen White was outstanding in relief and mopped up in the Big Ten title game against Iowa, saving the win for Lyons.

MSU breezed through last season's state tourney, challenged only by Western in the round, 4-1. The Broncos go into this year's tourney 3-2, and after considering how few games the Broncos have played, Ulibarri was surprised that they are seeded as high as third.

Grand Valley appears to be the most legitimate challenger to the Spartans' crown, sporting a 9-1 record and a split in a doubleheader with MSU earlier in the campaign.

The Spartans open today at 5:30 p.m., against the winner of the tourney-opener, Wayne State vs. Olivet.

MSU shortstop Carol Hutchins reaches for a throw at second base, a step too late, in action earlier this season against Western Michigan at Old College Field.

WOMEN SEEK BIG TEN TITLE Net team at Wisconsin

By TOM SHANAHAN
State News Sports Writer

It's been almost two weeks since MSU's women's tennis team has played a match, but coach Elaine Hatton still feels that MSU is ready for the Big Ten Championships.

The Spartans are on the campus of Wisconsin in Madison today for the opening round of the tournament that concludes Saturday. MSU takes a 5-2 dual record into the tourney after double wins the weekend of April 15 and 16 — which was the squad's last match. A meet with Central Michigan was rained out April 21.

"Central has a good team and we were looking forward to playing them," Hatton said. "It would have helped us a lot, but not playing one match won't hurt us that much."

"We've been working individually on weak points, going through the strokes and working on going to the net," Hatton said. "But the thing we have to do is be mentally tough. They've got to think on the court. The one who thinks in a match can change their game to adjust to the match and keep the pressure on, will win. They've practiced enough — what they need is to be sharp."

Last year MSU finished second in the Big Ten. The netters were also runners-up in 1975, but were the champions Hatton's first two years at MSU in 1973 and 1974.

Individually, MSU's only returning Big Ten champ is Mike Krueger, who won at No. 5 singles. The Spartans also have Big Ten champions in doubles as Debbie Mascarin and Diane Selke won the No. 1 title. This year Mascarin teams with freshman Jodi Ross, while Selke and freshman Cindy Bogdonas are playing together at No. 2 singles.

Krueger is playing No. 4

singles and, like the rest of the team, isn't likely to be seeded in the tourney.

"Only two are seeded in the Big Ten and Mary Hicks (No. 6) and possibly No. 1 doubles (Debbie Mascarin and Jodi Ross) will be the only ones seeded because we lost to Ohio State and Michigan," Hatton explained. "It's pretty important to be seeded because it assures you won't meet the No. 2 player until the finals. But in a small tournament it's not vital. I'm not worried too much," she added. Hatton said Ohio State is the favorite but also pointed out that in a tennis tournament anything can happen if one player is on her game for the next three days.

"Last year was the first time Minnesota has done anything in women's tennis. They had a girl play her best tennis ever and she won No. 1 singles," Hatton said.

That same player, Patty Moran, also teamed with her partner to finish runner-up to MSU in No. 1 singles.

"We're always up for the Big Ten and if we play well anything can happen," Hatton said. "Ohio State and Michigan beat us, but I don't think we were quite ready for the play at the time."

All 10 teams will field women at this year's tourney which decides the league title with less of dual records. The netters have hosted it all six years in the 12-indoor-court facility donated to them by the National TV Raters.

Laxers beat Albion

MSU's lacrosse squad spread the offensive wealth Tuesday as eight players entered the scoring column en route to a 10-9 victory over Albion.

Kevin Willitts and Bob Bogart paced the MSU attack with tallies apiece.

Senior goalie Chuck Molla helped tighten the Spartan defense the second half while MSU rose from a 7-6 halftime deficit to secure the triumph.

Molla had a total of 23 saves to his credit. The laxers' next action is slated for Saturday when they meet Albion boosted the Spartan season slate to 5-5.

Britain's Finest Speakers

In England, they take speaker design very seriously. British research has been responsible for much of the advances we take for granted in high fidelity today. Bowers & Wilkins of Worthing, England continues today, as they have in the past, to be at the forefront of loudspeaker research.

Every loudspeaker system that B & W produces has been designed and manufactured with one simple aim in mind: to be, quite simply, the best of its kind in the world. Which is why one third of the total B & W work force is permanently engaged in research and quality control.

It is also why they took the trouble to have their factory built from the ground up. With acoustic laboratories that are amongst the most advanced in Europe. Furnished with everything from individual anechoic chambers for both research and quality control, to the very latest digital equipment for spectral analysis. New on board is a $200,000 computer which enables complex acoustic problems, formerly taking months, or even years, to be solved in days. But machinery alone won't bring perfection and the B & W research and development team represents a collective expertise that has, over the years, set the standards for others to follow.

Standards of manufacture are no less exacting. Every speaker system must pass stringent tests for distortion, phase, and frequency response before it leaves the B & W factory. Each speaker is also supplied with a calibration certificate. A service that no other manufacturer in the world supplies. When you add it all up it takes a lot of effort to be the best. But it also brings its own reward. A fact that received formal recognition when B & W received the Queen's Award to Industry for export achievement.

TOM HANAHAN's tradition burden?

Spring football is in session for MSU and like professional ball's spring training, it's a time to be optimistic.

It is a time for fans to point to returning veterans and rising freshmen as evidence for a successful season next year.

It also can point to proven veterans who are coming off years that forced them to miss the previous season to make sound even more optimistic.

Two years ago was a banner year for the speculative fan as MSU appeared to have so much strength coming back for the 1975 season opener — and return of a bitterly upset Ohio State and his quarterback, Charlie Baggett.

Encourage the optimism (and eventual disgust when the didn't produce) with their boastful comments.

Second-year coach Darryl Rogers is taking a preventive by staying away from encouraging the press and fans.

Reasons MSU fans expect too much from MSU football are probably because Lansing is such a good sports town — but even more so because Biggie Munn and Duffy Herby created too much tradition for the fans to compare the mediocre football MSU has played in the past decade.

Between there were just enough upsets of Notre Dame, Michigan (1969) and Ohio State (1972 and 1974) to keep expectations of MSU high.

But all Rogers upset the MSU following when he said it would take seven years before the Spartans had a winning record. And when his team didn't win last fall (4-6-1) there were a people questioning his coaching ability.

For all, people still believed everything they had heard the 1975 season and a lot of those players were still in.

But the knowledgeable people know that Rogers' team will win once he establishes his program. Even with a team that was lashed by Ohio State and Michigan, and lost to North Carolina and Iowa, Rogers still earned enough respect from the coaches to be voted the runner-up for conference coach year. And even though he only coached at San Jose State (name Darryl Rogers was still known when mentioned in name of California).

Looking at 1977's schedule of six average Big Ten opponents, including Washington State and the possibility that MSU upset Notre Dame or Michigan, one might expect Rogers to produce next fall.

That's tradition talking because this is April not November and the Spartans will have to show a lot of improvement until then.

4-mile team hot; Drake relays next

By GEOFF ETNYRE
State News Sports Writer
Armed with their best four-mile relay team in history, the Spartan trackmen travel to Des Moines, Iowa, for the prestigious Drake Relays Friday and Saturday.

Two weeks ago at the Dogwood Relays in Knoxville, Tenn., the unit of Keith Moore, Jeff Pullen, Stan Mavis and Herb Lindsay set a new varsity record of 16:23. Mavis and Lindsay kicked home in 4:02 and 4:03 respectively, to seal the mark.

"They should be right up there with Arkansas," Jim Bibbs, acting head track coach, said. "Arkansas ran a 16:19 so we're not too far behind."

The old Spartan record of 16:26.6 was set in 1972 by the Cool twins, Rob and Ron, Randy Kilpatrick and Ken Popejoy.

The 1977 Spartan four-mile relay team resembles the 1972 unit, in that most of the runners double on the distance medley relay team, which also could be closing in on the varsity record.

In 1972 the Cool twins, Kilpatrick and Popejoy also set the distance medley record of 9:41.6. The 1977 unit retains everyone except Pullen, who is replaced by Tim Klein for the 440-yard leg of the distance medley.

"It's a tough double for the boys," Bibbs said. The competition of Drake is exemplified in the 100-meter dash where sprinter Randy Smith will get a rematch with Olympian Harvey Glance of Auburn. Glance took second in the NCAA 60-yard dash at Cobo Hall this year as Smith finished fifth.

While Smith's better race is generally considered to be the 60-yard dash, Bibbs said the extra length should provide no problem.

"Sure, Randy has a good start, but he's so consistent through the race that shouldn't bother him," Bibbs said.

So far in the outdoor season the Spartans have lost three athletes.

Freshman hurdler Rob Cummings dislocated a shoulder when he fell in the hurdles, high jumper Dan King went to Europe on a student exchange program and high jumper Pete McClain was declared ineligible by the Big Ten for not making enough progress in his major.

MSU netters even slate

Central Michigan was just what MSU's tennis team needed Tuesday as the netters shut out CMU, 9-0, and now have a three-match winning streak.

The Spartans have evened their season slate at 4-4 before heading back into Big Ten competition at Purdue Friday and at Illinois Saturday.

It was the netters' second shut-out after blanking Wayne State a week ago. Saturday MSU beat Notre Dame, 8-1, and the big wins have coach Stan Drobac pleased.

"The kid's games are coming and I'm really impressed," Drobac said between the Notre Dame and Central matches.

"We have Purdue next and we have to keep on going until the Big Ten tournament," he said. The Big Ten championship will be decided May 20 through 22 at Ann Arbor.

Kevin McNulty and Tighe Keating won to boost their singles records to 6-1 and 7-1, respectively. No. 1 singles Tom Gudelsky lost his first set 2-6, but came back with 6-1, 6-0 wins to take the match. Gudelsky, who got off to a slow start against some tough Big Ten competition, now has a record of 3-6.

No. 4 singles John Boukamp (4-4) is also still winning, taking his third straight win, 6-0, 5-7, 6-2 over Central. Steve Carter (4-1) won at No. 5, while Dee McCaffrey won No. 6 to improve his mark to 3-4.

"I'm pleased, but we still have to beat the Michigans, Minnesotas and Iowas," Drobac said, referring to three of MSU's conference losses.

"We're making too many technical mistakes and making unforced errors. I want the opponents to earn their points and right now we're giving away too many points," Drobac said.

MSU doesn't return home again until a May 6 match with Indiana and a May 7 meeting with a strong Ohio State squad.

Charter commission finishes revision

Voters to decide on June 13

By MICHAEL L. KLOCKE
The Lansing Charter Commission put the finishing touches on the proposed city charter at its Tuesday night meeting, and the charter will now go before Lansing voters June 13.

Basically, the same proposed charter which was soundly defeated by voters in November — 54 to 46 per cent — will be voted on in the upcoming election. The commission's chairperson said that the charter issue will not be "clouded" by various other proposals as it was in November.

"The charter was one of seven proposals (Proposal G) on the November ballot," Thomas C. Walsh said. "We really got blanketed out in the mass media. People were just not aware of the importance of the charter election."

Walsh said that two surveys conducted after the proposed charter was defeated in November concluded that the reason many people voted "no" was that they did not understand the charter. And that has been one of the main tasks of the commission in the months following the November election. The commission has tried to clear up any areas that the public could not understand.

There are several significant changes that would be made under the new charter. Under the new charter, the mayor would be given more administrative power and would coordinate the numerous city departments. At present the administrative power is divided between the mayor, City Council and the city boards.

The Lansing City Council would be restricted to policy-making, budget approval and the monitoring of the administration of the city to see that its policies are carried out. In addition, one more councilmember would be added to bring the total number to nine. This would mean the mayor would not vote in case of ties. In fact, the mayor would no longer preside over City Council under the proposed charter.

Commissioner Shirley Sliker said the purpose of the changes would be to make city government more centralized and efficient. One of the more controversial changes under the proposed charter would be a residency requirement for people employed by the city of Lansing. Any city employees hired after January 1, 1978, would be required to live in Lansing. This requirement would not apply to current city employees or employees hired before that date.

Another issue that has caused controversy is the election date itself. Many people, including Lansing City Council member Lou Adado, think that the charter is too important to be voted on in a special election.

CHARGES IRS WITH JURY INTERFERENCE

GM requests halt of tax probe

DETROIT (UPI) — General Motors (GM) has asked a federal judge to put the brakes on a probe into alleged tax fraud by the giant automaker, claiming the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) is improperly using a grand jury as an investigative tool.

GM attorneys Tuesday filed a motion to quash subpoenas issued by the grand jury on the grounds the IRS — and not the grand jury — is directing the investigation, in violation of the constitutional independence of the grand jury.

The automaker also charged that IRS agents "intimidated, abused and harassed" GM employees during the probe by questioning them in an accusing manner during late-night, unannounced visits to their homes.

U.S. District Judge James Churchill has scheduled a hearing on the legal issues raised by GM for May 16.

The GM case could have widespread implications on the use of grand juries as investigative tools, since the judge must decide legal and constitutional questions relating to commonly-used grand jury procedures.

According to the GM brief, at issue is a 30-year-old accounting practice under which the company wrote off supplies, maintenance items and equipment that were not, in fact, part of finished autos.

The IRS contends that the items should have been written off only when used in autos or scrapped.

Papers filed by GM with the motion to quash grand jury subpoenas also charged that IRS agents are reviewing material brought to the grand jury and that all material learned through grand jury investigation will be turned over to the IRS, in violation of the grand jury's secrecy rule.

U.S. Atty. Philip Van Dam denied GM's charges that the grand jury procedures are illegal, but refused to comment on the allegations that IRS agents harassed GM employees.

Dormitory tuna boycott faltering

By ED LION
The News Staff Writer

MSU Fund For Animals call for a boycott of light dormitory cafeterias get dolphins is faltering because of lack of student support.

Doyle, the group's chair, has called a meeting for at 7:30 in 326 Natural Bldg. to revive the effort.

The main problem is that we get people to know the issue," he said.

Doyle first announced the three weeks ago to Congress into taking steps to save dolphins.

Doyle often accompany of yellow fin tuna and shared in fishing nets.

In 1960 more than six dolphins have died because they became entangled in the nets, Doyle said. He said scientists claim the dolphins soon become an endangered species. The number of spotted porpoises, a that often swims with dolphins, is down by 80 per cent.

Doyle said the matter of cutting back on tuna industry to save it from extinction." Doyle said the MSU Fund for Animals has distributed literature and set up information around campus, but just aren't hearing the situation.

Doyle said the tuna used in cafeterias is light tuna, most often made from light tuna, Doyle said. Information could not be obtained on how much tuna is consumed by the cafeteria system, but spokesperson from Brody said the cafeteria uses 100 pounds of light tuna a week.

If the boycott is successful, Doyle hopes to extend it to the rest of the Lansing area.

"If we can get something started it could discourage the tuna industry from getting yellow fins," he said, "and that would save the dolphins."

A similar campaign at the University of Michigan was successful, he said, and now many places in Ann Arbor don't stock light tuna.

Because of environmentalist protests in 1972, Congress called for an end to all hunting of sea mammals by U.S. boats. But the tuna industry protested, and eventually quotas on the number of dolphins killed in the nets were set. The current quota is set at 59,000 dolphins a year, and the tuna industry is lobbying to loosen the laws further.

Library betterment planned with funds

result, the Library is unable to implement the desired improvements.

One of the major additions that Chapin said he would like to see implemented is a tap line to the New York Times morgue of newspaper clippings. Chapin said this is a service the Library has wanted to make available to students doing research for quite some time, but could not since necessary funds were not available.

"This generally is a standard source of reference for researchers," he said. Using the system, students would be able to determine the day that a specific article appeared in the newspaper which relates to their research topic, Chapin explained. The bound volumes of the newspaper could then be used for more information.

Chapin said that libraries around the country are increasingly being looked to as a source of nonwritten materials, which is a switch from their traditional roles.

This type of audio-visual material for the education of deaf and blind persons would also be purchased with the money from the Enrichment Program.

A third improvement scheduled for implementation is the installation of music jacks in walls of the Undergraduate Library on the second and third floors of the west wing.

Chapin said it was unrealistic to think that all students who liked to listen to music while they studied could be accommodated in the Audio Library on the fourth floor.

Another improvement scheduled for the Library is murals and tapestries on the walls, so the facility will be looked upon by students as a "pleasant place to gather," Chapin said.

In addition, the Library will be able to purchase special book collections that in the past would have to be passed up due to limited funds, Chapin said.

Both the staff and budget of MSU's Library is smaller than those of most Big Ten Universities. Even so, Chapin said the MSU staff had "a lot of imagination" in determining programs that would benefit students.

"All we need is the money," he said.

student is shown to be judged unfairly by the faculty members' decisions mean nothing unless the faculty members be persuaded to change the grade.

Faculty response to recent developments has been varied. Gerald Miller, professor of communication, called the Student Council vote "an ironic situation."

"The faculty is for something that the students are against," said He added that students were being "too Napoleonic" in their demands. He said he hoped the vote would be turned around.

Student Council member Steve Poltowicz has been one of the proposal's numerous backers, but at Tuesday's meeting he voted against approval.

He said the reason behind his negative vote was that he objected to the way the amendment was presented.

He also said Stieber should have attended the meeting to explain councilmembers on the measure.

Poltowicz claimed that Stieber was not there "because he lied to," and said Rosenberg was responsible.

Rosenberg said she contacted Stieber after the first meeting this term and told her the proposal would pass the Council. "When I spoke to her I meant it," she said. "I did change my mind until the meeting yesterday (Tuesday)."

"I wasn't lying," she said.

Rosenberg has come under fire by the ASMSU Student Board for opposing the amendment. Her position on Student Council comes from being chairperson of UCISA, to which she was appointed by the Student Board.

Kathy Wright, ASMSU College of Education representative, introduced a bill at the Student Board meeting Tuesday requesting Rosenberg come before the board and explain actions "on pain of being removed."

impressed by Bullard's work on the new Freedom of Information Act and said he felt the Ann Arbor legislator would keep his word to hold extensive investigations.

Bryant also pointed out that Congress is considering decriminalization legislation and said lawmakers may be encouraged by the support of the Administration on the issue.

Support in the House measure is likely to be strong, Jondahl said, because of the strongest opposition to it comes from within the Democratic caucus.

related problems in public schools.

"The 'trickling down' effect of 18-year-olds buying alcohol for minors which De Stigter claims has contributed to delinquency and alcohol-related traffic incidents for those teenagers in the 16-to-18-year age group.

Though De Stigter stated that his bill would have a "definite impact on those bars that cater to the 18-to-21 group," he added that the bars might witness the effect of an older clientele.

He said that he didn't think a "total solution" bill as a "total solution" that it could be part of a program designed to solve the problems he sees.

Misialowski disagreed. De Stigter said "The olds are legally adults should have rights and illegals granted to all adults not just some of those who
