Students must spend 20 hours per week in classroom training, where they learn the basics of planning and drafting. The school has one full-time instructor and classes never exceed 12 students.

Even though there is only one staff instructor, students have access to instructors upon request, from local businesses as well as from MSU and Lansing Community College. Such instructors teach students on a one-to-one basis that, according to Smith, is

Students work at their own paces and spend their last two months of the semester getting on-the-job training. Thirty hours a week are spent in field training, doing the type of work the student hopes to be employed in full-time.

"We do not deal in problems here, but in alternative solutions, Smith explains.

Confident in his theory, Smith says that often at larger universities students are not taught to find solutions to an urban problem within a similar solution

"Students are normally not taught to apply a working theory to another problem," he said. "Here we teach students that es can be applied in the future."

According to Smith, commitment to a change in environment is the ultimate reason for such a school's existence. To begin to get the people who are not involved into planning is the way to achieve

Analyses contrast on PBB test results

By MICKI MAYNARD State News Staff Writer

The question of whether PBB could recontaminate untainted cattle became more clouded Tuesday with the release of separate reports - one used to substantiate the theory and the other used

State officials have been concerned that healthy dairy cattle could be recontaminated by PBB still present in the farm environment, even though the farms had been cleaned and the contaminated cattle destroyed.

Results of a study done by an MSU professor show cows in a new herd started after the "fantastic cleanup job" of a farm contained levels of PBB above the proposed

The state Senate is currently considering a bill sponsored by Rep. Francis Spaniola, D-Corunna, which would lower PBB levels from the current .3 parts per million (ppm) to .02 ppm and reimburse farmers whose cattle would then be destroyed.

Though PBB recontamination of fat tissue was found, state tests on milk have turned up little more than traces of PBB

Seafarer clears a big hurdle

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The Navy won a crucial round in the continuing battle to put Project Seafarer in Michigan's Upper Peninsula when the Senate Armed Services Committee included $20.1 million in its defense authorization bill for the submarine communication project Tuesday.

The allotment was a compromise from the original $23.7 million sought by the Carter Administration which was entirely removed from the bill by the House.

Committee aides said the funds would cover a smaller version of the proposed underground radio transmission system for

Aides said the committee withheld the full funds asked by the Navy because the National Academy of Sciences has not yet made a final assessment of the project's environmental impact and the Defense Department has not yet made the final selection of a site.

The Navy wants to put the transmitter, which would consist of about 2,500 miles of cables buried in the ground, at a site in Michigan's Upper Peninsula. Critics have charged the extreme low frequency waves put out by the cables would have a harmful effect on wildlife and humans.

Navy officials say the transmitter is needed to send messages to nuclear missile submarines, so that they can remain deeply submerged to escape detection.

In a memo to State Agriculture Director B. Dale Ball, Kenneth Van Patten of the Dairy Division said only six of the 89 herds whose milk was tested for PBB contamination showed trace amounts.

Van Patten defined a trace as from .001 to .004 ppm. The herds involved were made up of either new cattle or mainly new animals obtained after dairy herds were destroyed because of PBB contamination.

Several of the herds showed drastic reductions in contamination levels.

A herd owned by Milton Benson of Stanwood showed a PBB level of 101.317 ppm before being destroyed in 1975. The new herd was shown to be free of recontamination in April 1977.

Another herd owned by Minden City farmer Eugene Block showed 1975 contamination levels of 76.640 ppm. Block's new herd showed only a trace of contamina tion last month.

Spaniola, who gave the state report to the State News, said he felt the figures would eliminate any doubt held by lawmakers about recontamination possibilities. "I don't think anyone worried about recontamination as it regards to my bill will have to worry about it now," he said.

Spaniola said the possibility of recontamination was one of his bill's major stumbling blocks. The bill is seen to have a tough time gaining passage in the Senate.

But experiments done by MSU biochemistry Prof. Steven Aust show that cattle raised on farms believed to be completely rid of PBB had levels above .02 ppm in fat tissue tested.

"I am shocked by the results," Aust said in a letter to Sen. John Hertel, D-Harper Woods, "for they show that the recontamination problem may be more of a problem than I ever imagined."

Agriculture and Consumer Affairs Committee, which is currently considering the Spaniola hill

"To my surprise and dismay, I find the problem to be a very serious one," Aust

Aust and other researchers tested six animals that came from a farm meticulously cleaned after the original herd was de stroyed in 1974.

Two of the cows tested showed levels of PBB above the .02 ppm level proposed in the Spaniola bill.

Aust noted that the daughter of one of the cows in the sample was found to have a higher PBB level than its mother, leading him to the conclusion that the PBB did not come from the mother but from the cow's environment.

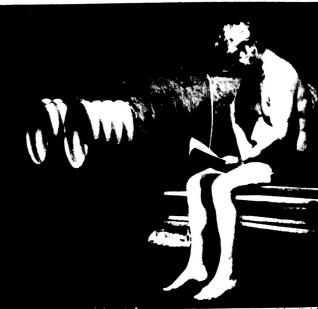

Obviously these cows are picking up PBB and they are doing it under the best of circumstances," Aust said. "Therefore, I would expect that the problem would be much worse on farms where only minimal clean up work was done."

In his letter to Hertel, Aust said he felt the Spaniola bill was "untenable" and said the psychological impact on farmers whose cattle would have to be destroyed could be seen as "cruel and unusual punishment."

Aust also said he did not feel PBB, at its present levels, was toxic. He added that the chemical had not been found to be toxic since shortly after the accidental mixing in

In another PBB development, an MSU researcher told the Senate committee Tuesday night he saw no rationale for lowering PBB tolerance levels.
Stuart Sleight, MSU professor of pathology, agreed with Aust, and said that though (continued on page 9) to a potential horror story.

"For about a year-and-a-half someone has been dumping a white powder, along with varying amounts of mercury, in the hood vents of a select group of cars," said a Department of Public Safety (DPS) spokesperson. "The powder smells like fertilizer and is currently being analyzed by the Michigan State Police.

To date, no serious injuries have been reported, DPS said. But, while cleaning a vehicle which had been contaminated with the powder and mercury mixture, two mechanics of Bob Baker American Motors dealer in Lansing were overtaken by toxic fumes from the mercury and were treated and released from Sparrow Hospital.

"I've had three cars contaminated with the powder and the mercury," said one of the car owners. "When the heater or air conditioner fan is turned on, the entire interior of the car gets coated with the powder, and because of the fumes, the car is impossible to drive. PROGRAM CENTERS ON WATERGATE

Dramatic show predicted for Nixon TV interview

WASHINGTON (AP) - The television audience watching the first post-resignation interview of Richard M. Nixon about Watergate probably won't include the former president.

"His practice in the past has been not to watch himself (on television)," Nixon's top aide said Tuesday in San Clemente, Calif.

"After all," continued the aide, Col. Jack Brennan, "he did this taping for 28% hours. He knows what he said."

Others who know what Nixon said predict a dramatic show tonight.

"In the early part of the program, his (Watergate) defense was shattered and the interesting part follows from there," said James Reston Jr., who researched the Watergate portion for interviewer David

Carter calls for tough ethics code

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Jimmy Carter called on Congress Tuesday to write tough new ethical standards for the executive branch and to provide for possible appointment of a temporary special prosecutor to deal with any future Watergate-style scandal.

Carter also called for creation of a new ethics office in the Civil Service Commission to ride herd on standards of conduct inside the executive branch.

There were indications that most of the pasin 1907, Baker has lived in East Lansing most of his life. For 191/2 years he was a fire inspector for Michigan Millers Insurance Co. After leaving, his retirement was cut short by a serious stroke which left him almost totally paralyzed.

"The nurses kept saying I wouldn't be able to talk or move for the rest of my life, but I showed them something different," he said. Unable to care for himself, Baker has since been put in the center with the many other patients who live a life of past memories. The stroke eventually left Baker nearly paralyzed and unable to speak. To move about the second floor where he lives, Baker leans against his constant companion, his portable bed table, and wheels himself back and forth from his favorite spot in the hall where he spends most of his time just staring at the walls.

"I don't think I will be here for long. I want to go out on the road and travel someday," Baker said hopefully.

Mealtime for Baker is a highlight that he looks forward to each day. Meanwhile, he patiently waits with the many other patients who silently line the walls of the hallway. Occasionally a patient will wearily walk by or silently roll past in a wheelchair.

"Sometimes I get so hungry before a meal I could eat my plate, but I just stick to the regular food because I don't have any teeth,"

Except for the occasional sound of a radio or TV, the halls of the center are always silent. A group of MSU students from Phi Gamma Delta fraternity began visiting on Saturdays a few weeks ago. One student in particular, Marty Johnson, has become a part-time buddy of Baker, who now has something to look forward to besides his favorite food, fish.

"The college boys mean a lot to me. They have broken down the wall between the future and me," said Baker.

Johnson has managed to get some of the patients involved in a variety of activities that are seldom seen in an old folks home.

"The men here don't like to talk about their families; it just makes them feel bad. They would rather talk about the times when they were young and raised hell," Johnson said.

After rounding up some of the men, Johnson was able to organize wheelchair races down the hallway. Enthusiastically, Baker was

ENTHUSIASM FACILITATES SPEEDY MEETING

Academic Council covers 7 agenda items

By NANCY ROGIER State News Staff Writer

In a rare burst of enthusiasm Tuesday, Academic Council succeeded in knocking seven items off of an 11-item agenda, making the meeting one of the speediest of the term.

Three of the items were routine approval of Tuesday's agenda and the last meeting's minutes and president's remarks. The remaining four active items dealt with University bylaws, student complaints and tenured faculty dismissal.

Lengthy debate was brought on by a proposal to the Bylaws for Academic Governance, expanding the membership of the University Committee on Academic Policy (CAP). The proposal was initiated by the University Committee on Academic Governance (CAG) at the request of CAP to allow for wider college representation in handling committee work.

It states that the three University residential colleges and the College of Urban Development will jointly select one CAP member and the Colleges of Human Medicine and Osteopathic Medicine will also jointly select one member. Each other college, including noncollege faculty, will select one member. Four undergraduate student members and two graduate student members selected from Student Council will make up the remainder of the voting committee membership. The provost is a member without a vote.

The present provision on CAP membership states that CAP will be made up of nine faculty members elected by the colleges, including the noncollege faculty. No provisions are made to promote wider college

Joe T. Darden, associate professor of urban and metropolitan studies, proposed a substitute amendment removing the first provision (residential colleges and College of Urban Development joint selection of one member and the Colleges of Human Medicine and Osteopathic Medicine joint selection of one member) thereby allowing each University college to select one member. This would eliminate any conflict in attaining wider college representation on

The council agreed to seriously debate Darden's proposal and after discussion from both sides, the proposal was passed.

Another item that attracted debate was the revised procedures for student complaints in regard to violations of the Code of Teaching Responsibility. The Council finally passed the procedures which are designed to make the instructor aware of the nature of the complaint.

Added provisions include that the departments' chief administrators will inform the instructor of the contents of the complaint and that a copy of the written complaint will be sent to the instructor. This makes sure the instructor knows a complaint has been lodged against him or her and assures that the complaint is processed accordingly.

Remaining agenda items dealing with evised procedures for dismissal of tenured faculty and the institution of an advisory/ consultative committee on honors programs were approved with a minimum of dis-

GM reconsiders tax break request

By JUDY PUTNAM State News Staff Writer

The world's largest automobile manufacturer promised Tuesday to tone down a multimillion dollar tax break request it made to the city of Lansing.

The move by General Motors (GM) has postponed a recommendation by the Lansing City Council Planning Committee on the issue for at least three weeks.

The committee was originally expected to form a recommendation to the City Council Tuesday, following the presentation of a report by Richard Baker, committee chairperson, which shows that the local government units and schools could lose over $33 million in foregone taxes over the next 12 years if the GM request were to be approved by the council.

"We will hold a decision until a public hearing," Baker said. "It will be a minimum of three weeks."

GM, the city's largest private employer, had asked for a 12-year tax freeze on rehabilitation of its Oldsmobile and Fisher Body plants under a 1974 Michigan law, Public Act 198. Devised to keep industry and jobs within the state, the law grants property tax exemptions for a dozen years on the cost of rehabilitation.

Last June GM asked the city to rezone most of its property as a rehabilitation district. All Fisher Body property and all of Oldsmobile except the administration and engineering buildings were to be included in the district.

Following criticism from some members of the council and the United Auto Workers Community Action Program, Edward G. Vogt, Oldsmobile comptroller, said Tuesday that GM would submit a new proposal this week which would encompass a smaller area.

"Life is a compromise," Vogt said when asked why he considered a smaller tax abatement.

GM plans to spend over $132 million in expansion and rehabilitation, investment which would not have been taxable for 12 years if the City Council would approve the rezoning and grant exemption certificates for proposed projects.

The University finally has awakened to the fact that it needs a concerted fund-raising drive to reap the necessary private money for certain University improvements.

The "new" concept, the $17-million Enrichment Program, is a good idea but a little late in coming. The recently announced program would funnel $11 million to a proposed Performing Arts Center, $2.75 million to build a new MSU museum and a badly needed $1.5 million to bolster the pathetically weak book and microfilm collection at the MSU Library. Another $1.75 million would establish endowed chairs in several academic areas.

The idea of enrichment programs or university development offices is not novel to large institutions of learning. The fact that it took MSU so long to exploit this avenue of raising revenue is rather perplexing. Before this new program, MSU was the only Big Ten school without an enrichment effort. Perhaps this explains why the MSU Library collection is the worst in the Big Ten, and why its performing arts facilities are so grievously inadequate.

It is unfortunate that MSU did not learn a good lesson from our neighbors in Ann Arbor, with whom we must compete for state monies. The University of Michigan started its development program in 1953;

we started ours in 1973. U-M raised $73 million in a "capital campaign" between 1964 and 1968. The original goal was $55 million. Most of the money came from large donors - businesses or foundations. Until this year, U-M ranked within the top 10 for collecting private money through its development program.

Now MSU will be hard-pressed to meet a 1980 building deadline for the Performing Arts Center. This pressure may spill over onto prospective donors and hamper fund-raising efforts further.

Despite the record of ignorance or administrative fiscal blindness, the new Enrichment Program is welcome and desperately needed. The campus campaign has raised $252,000 of its $500,000 goal. Soon the campaign will spread to the state and national level, with former MSU President John Hannah directing the nationwide project.

Let's hope the rest of the $17 million comes as easily and that the 1980 deadline can be realized. We need it.

Valindaba — "the talking is over."

Valindaba is the name of a specially secured site where analy believe the government of South Africa is working to develop an at bomb. The name is a contraction of a Zulu expression which transla into the phrase cited above.

The talking may indeed be over. The recently completed negotiati between South African officials and representatives of five West nations on the U.N. Security Council over the question of freedom Namibia ended in a deadlock.

Namibia — known otherwise as South-West Africa — is controlled by South Africa, despite the U.N.'s refusal to recognize South African Prime Minister John Vorster stubbornly refuses e to meet with the South-West Africa People's Organization, the group officially recognized by the U.N. as representing the Nami people.

Vorster is seeking to perpetuate the "homelands" policy in Nami whereby an "independent" Namibia would be politically dominated its white minority and the black majority would be forced to liv specially designated areas.

This situation is patently unacceptable. It is obvious now that Von will not readily surrender control over Namibia, and will never age a peaceful transition to black majority rule in his own country. U the circumstances, Western nations on the Security Council sh refrain from vetoing a proposed measure which would mandate worldwide arms and investment embargo on South Africa.

Such an action would have extreme consequences for the South an action would undoubtedly impose further hardship the black majority, which already suffers severe economic deprivation. Still, it is a necessary action, one which would help under apartheid's foundations by effectively isolating the Pretoria gov ment from the community of nations.

The clock is ticking away. South Africa may be working to develo atom bomb. The situation in Namibia has stagnated. It is time Western nations — including the United States — not to obstruct embargo whose ramifications would be economic, military and m

Blacks needed

I want to speak out as a professor in the College of Education about a situation at MSU which I think is wrong. I may be misguided. If so, perhaps your readers can set me straight, or give suggestions on how to correct the situation.

The problem is this: very few black students enroll in my classes. I wish more would do so. Why don't they? Is it something about my personality? Or is there something amiss in the way our college operates the programs which I am

I teach graduate classes in curriculum. I teach undergraduate classes in general secondary school methods. I believe that black children need black teachers who know what curriculum and methods are all about. I believe white children need black teachers. I think it is a shame that so few black MSU students plan to be high school teachers. I think it is a shame that so few of our graduate students of curriculum are black educators.

Here is my situation: during the present quarter, I have three graduate classes and one undergraduate class.

Iggy and the Stooges were an Ann Arbor band that gained nationwide notoriety in the late '60s and early '70s - not in the early '50s as Dan Hallind was quoted as saying. Iggy Pop's onstage antics, such as vomiting, rolling on broken glass and urinating on the audience, made him one of rock's most infamous personalities. Just as outrageous was his music, like the love ballad "I Wanna Be Your Dog."
As for Mr. Hallind's remark that "Pop...

is still playing around somewhere," that is some understatement. After a three-year semiretirement, Iggy has gone on a sellout tour in the United States. David Bowie produced Iggy's latest album and is playing keyboards in Iggy's band on tour.

I think this is a good opportunity for Pop Entertainment to live up to its name. Bring Iggy Pop to the spring concert!

Ritchie praised

The Lecture-Concert Series and the MSU Folksong Society should be applauded for bringing Jean Ritchie and her songs of the Appalachian Mountain tradition to Fair child Theatre last Thursday night.

Despite a cold and poor acoustics she sang delightfully, accompanying herself on her instruments. She gave her attentive audience the music, lyrics and stories that represented her life in Kentucky, and it was joy to see and hear her on stage quietly talking to the audience about Kentucky moonlit nights, "lightning bugs" and apple trees as if we were sitting on her front porch with glasses of lemonade in our hands. Her concerns about the devastation that stripmining has rendered were made clear in songs like "Blue Diamond Mine" and "Blackwaters."

Jean Ritchie's personal charm was not st on the audience as she sang "Sister Mae's weddin' song" and selections she's remembered since childhood. The audience was involved, too — whistling, humming and singing along with her.

In one of her ballads about Kentucky she sang, ". . .I belong to the hills and the mountains . . .," and it is here that I beg to differ. You belong everywhere, Miss Ritchie - vour voice, music, cheerfulness and warmth are treasures to be shared by one and all. We would be lucky to have her on our stage again.

Chilean agents operate in U.S.

WASHINGTON - Some of the world's most sinister secret police are operating in the United States with the blessing of the Central Intelligence Agency. There is evidence that these foreign agents have arranged murders, committed burglaries attempted kidnappings and terrorized political opponents in violation of U.S. laws. In past columns, we have reported that the CIA has a secret understanding with such notorious foreign intelligence agencies as Chile's DINA, Iran's SAVAK and South Korea's KCIA. Not only does the CIA work closely with these police agencies; the agents operate within one another's countries by mutual consent. Now the Senate Foreign Relations Committee has quietly started an investigation into the activities of foreign intelligence agencies in the United States. The co tee is particularly curious about the CIA's role in these activities.

On the House side, Rep. Donald Fraser, D.-Minn., has also asked the CIA to divulge the details of its reciprocal arrangements with foreign intelligence agencies. The CIA

As far back as July 17, 1975, we published charges that the KCIA had terrorized Korean exiles, had set up illegal front groups to manipulate U.S. public opinion nd had tried to buy off U.S. congress We also cited documents from SAVAK's files as evidence that the Iranian secret police were intimidating opponents of the Shah in this country. The documents included detailed instructions on how to burglarize homes and offices

In our reports on the Chilean police, we warned on Nov. 16, 1975: "There is reason lieve the DINA has hired thurs to track down and assassinate prominent exiles." Ten months later, Chilean exile leader Orlando Letelier was blown up in his car on Washington's embassy row. Investi-

Rutledge, PAC called 'inept'

I read recently in a letter to the State News that Frank Rutledge, Theatre Department chairperson, has taken a "risk" on my behalf by planning, without first obtaining performance rights, a production of Peter Shaffer's "Equus" to "fight the arbitrary and unjust leasing practices of Samuel French, Ltd., and other companies like

Samuel French, Ltd. Dramatists Play Service and The Dramatic Publishing Co., as major lessors of performance rights, have been, in fact, protecting playwrights for many years, insuring that royalties are paid any time the writer's work is Anyone who had created a work of art out of his own toil and sweat would demand the same respect and integrity.

What I want to know is: if Frank Rutledge is so courageous, why has this courage not revealed itself in past Performing Arts Company (PAC) seasons? Is it his courage that has brought us such daring productions as "Dames at Sea." "The Lion in Winter," "Paint Your Wagon," "Jacues Brel. . ." "Dark of the Moon,"

"The Little Clay Cart" and now the viewpoint

controversial "Fiddler on the Roof"?

There are hundreds of challenging and artistically rich plays already available through these leasing companies, and given that the Broadway road show production of "Equus" was here last November and subsequently in Detroit for weeks, a PAC production of the play is not tops on the list

I do not expect Broadway-caliber productions from a University theater gr when I see student actors wandering aimlessly about on stage for twe-and-a-half hours, without the slightest inking why they are moving, muffing choice dramatic moments, not because they are personally inept, but because they are obviously neither being taught nor given in rehearsal even the rudiments of sensitive and meaningful blocking and stage direction, I wender why it's Ratledge rebelling against Samuel French and not the theater students rebelling against Rutledge. I would think they would want more for themselves and I am outraged for them.

I am frankly shocked and saddened by the work of the PAC. I have been fortunate anough to have avvarianced some great theater. I know when I am being moved by the when I see student actors wandering aimlessly about on stage for two-and-a-half hours enough to have experienced some great theater. I know when I am being moved by the

I have not felt anything remotely like this spirit in anything I have seen produced by the MSU Department of Theatre and I candidly believe they wouldn't know great theater if it jumped out of the bushes and bit them on the When a theater department parades theatrical dreck across the stage for years, and badly at that, and then gets caught violating international copyright laws, does that constitute a "risk" that I am supposed to admire, even be thankful for?

that I am supposed to admire, even be mankful for?

Perhaps those patriots supporting the Theatre Department's "cause" would do well to spell out what these unserupulous policies are that Mr. Rutledge is so valiantly rebelling against. There may indeed by some "Woodward/Bernsteinism" going on; but if, as in the Watergate model, it is revealing ineptitude and dishenesty to a student community that has a right to know, then it is deing is a service.

I flatly reject the notion that the State News and Samuel French are bullying the "little guy" Theatre Department and I coupling to the the theatre students department.

Theatre Department and I genuinely hope that the theater students do not rally around Frank Rutledge. I have seen this man's productions for four years now and I am appalled at the lack of even fundamental stage awareness and the inability to understand the playwrights' work which shows through in them. I am glad the department did not get the rights to mutilate Mr. Shaffer's magnificent play.

To fill their coffers, the MSU Theatre Department treats us like imbeciles, appealing to the least discriminating and lowest common denominator, giving us tired musicals, ndu ritual, cruelly miscast and badly conceived productions of campy revues, obscure Hir "The Classics" — instead of daring and dynamic theater pieces like Edward Bond's "Saved," Friedrich Durrenmatt's "The Visit," Tennessee Williams' "Camino Real," Peter Barnes' "The Ruling Class," Friedrich Buchner's "Danton's Death," John

Osborne's "A Patriot for Me," or Henrik Ibsen's "Peer Gynt."

This is addressed to those who are in a position to choose between seeing a PAC production and reading a play. For anyone who has not seen an emotionally vibrant, intellectually consistent production of a powerful play, the PAC no doubt looks good enough. And because enough of us have taken this good-enough attitude, the Theatre Department has nothing to lose. As long as we go on ignorantly buying tickets for back historical melodrama, esoteric oddities, gross disrespect for the work of talented playwrights, rampant ineptitude, and now, patent dishonesty, they will continue to give it to us. And boy, do we deserve it!

MSU splits with Hurons

State News Sports Writer The tall kid standing out in center field must have reminded Eastern Michigan coach Ron Oestrike of somebody he had seen before. And by the end of the day Tuesday he probably wasn't excited about seeing him again.

MSU center-fielder Ken Robinson had been courted by Eastern during his high school days in Ypsilanti but opted for East Lansing when former football coach Denny Stolz dangled a grid tender in

It was only fitting that Robinson drove home three runs in the nightcap of the Tuesday's twinbill, including a first-inning lead-off homer, to give the Spartans a 7-2 win and a split. Eastern handily won the opener, 11-1.

"It was kind of nice, you know," Robinson smiled while wiping the sweat off his forehead. "When I was younger I used to watch Eastern play baseball and I knew they had a good program.

"But the main thing I wanted to do was be a college quarterback," Robinson continued, explaining why he abandoned the hometown Hurons. "They came and watched me play one game in high school but I wanted to play both sports in college. Maybe Oestrike should have taken more than one look a few

For the MSU men's golf team, this weekend's 12th annual Spartan Invitational will offer the Spartans a chance to get reacquainted with Forest Akers Golf Course and relocate the kind of game that has deserted them the past two weeks.

Gudelsky will be facing Western's Bob Learman, who is 12-1 as the Broncos' No. 1 player. Keating will be facing Tom Mitchell, who is only 6-5, but was a Mid-American league champ at No. 6 last year.

If the weather turns out sunny this weekend, MSU's net squads will have plenty of action on display for tennis buffs. Thursday at 3 p.m. on the varsity courts the women's team takes on Central Michigan in a rescheduled match, while the men meet Indiana Friday at 3 p.m. and Ohio State Saturday at 1 p.m., also on the varsity

If the good weather con tinues, the opening date for the outdoor pool at the Men's IM Building is scheduled for May 16. Rain prior to this date could push the opening to a later date, since good weather is needed for painting.

Cobb taken by Bengals first picked from Big 10

By EDWARD L. RONDERS

State News Sports Writer Seventh in the Big Ten but first in the eyes of the NFL.

That describes MSU's football fortunes following Tuesday's NFL college draft. The Spartan's premier tight end Mike Cobb was the first Big Ten player selected in the pro lottery, being chosen in the first round by the Cincinnati Bengals.

The 6-foot-5 Cobb was the 22nd player picked; one notch ahead of Ohio State's defensive lineman Bob Brudzinski, who was tabbed by the Los Angeles

"Being picked on the first round is the dream of every college player," Cobb explained from his agent's office in New York Tuesday.
"I'm just delighted to be oing to the Bengals. Mike Brown called me from the Bengals today and told me that they intend to use me at tight end," he added.

Some pro experts had envisioned moving Cobb to a tackle slot - a position not really desired by the former Spartan.

MSU coach Darryl Rogers had lauded Cobb last season, saying on one occasion, "If there's a better player in college football I sure haven't seen Through two rounds of the draft no other MSU player had been tabbed. But defensive back Tom Hannon was expected to be selected in the early rounds.

Meanwhile, All-American running back Rob Lytle from Michigan was drafted by the Denver Broncos on the second round and Ohio State fullback Pete Johnson was picked on the second round by Cincinnati.

Southern Cal's explosive running back Ricky Bell was the first collegian drafted — going to the Tampa Bay Bucs.

The Dallas Cowboys traded four draft choices to the Seattle Seahawks for that expansion team's first choice and then grabbed Heisman Trophy winer Tony Dorsett. Southern Cal had the most players chosen in the first round, equaling an old MSU record. In addition to Bell's selection by Tampa Bay, offensive tackle Marvin Powell went to the New York Jets and the New York Giants nabbed his teammate, defensive tackle Gary Jeter. That matches the record set by the Spartans in 1967 when Bubba Smith, Clint Jones and George Webster were taken first, second and fifth.

Spring glorifies garden scenery

By PETE BRONSON

Nestled in the scenic Irish Hills of south ern Michigan are 670 acres of breathtaking countryside called Hidden Lake Gardens.

From now until the second week in May, the MSU-operated gardens, located several miles south of Jackson on M50 near Tipton, will be at "the peak of their springtime glory," caretaker Fred Freeman said.
"We usually expect our springtime color peak around Mother's Day, but this year, spring has been odd," Freeman said. "Early warm spells have contributed to a "very unusual and spectacular display of spring blossoms.

"Everything is blooming at once. We have narcissus, forsythias, tulips, rhododendrons and azaleas as well as several varieties of flowering trees in bloom," he said.

Formally donated to MSU in 1945 by Harry A. Fee, Hidden

Lake Gardens was first planted in 1926 under personal supervision of the late Adrian businessman. There are now more than 2,000 varieties of plant life on the surrounding grounds and a collection of plants from around the world in the plant conservatory tropical house

With seven miles of paved roads and five miles of hiking trails, the gardens can be viewed by car, bicycle or on foot, Freeman said. The hiking trails range from the half-hour Sassafras Trail for novices to the three-mile, three-to-four-hour

Another part of Hidden Lake Gardens is the Garden's Center Building. Featuring meeting rooms, an auditorium, a refere library and an information counter, the Center Building also boasts an exhibit concourse.

The concourse is a collection of informative museumlike displays, with the most recent one dealing with the pressing ecological problem, eutrophication of lakes.

cast the deciding vote.

Adado said he is against the June 13 election and that the charter should be voted on in November when there will be a larger voter turnout. He made reference to an earlier statement by a Lansing Charter Commission member that the charter could be "sneaked by the people in a special election.

Councilmember William Brenke, who cast the other "no" vote said that city council was led to believe that there would be no transfer necessary. The charter election is being comwith the Lansing Community College (LCC) Board of Trustees election, and Brenke said he had believed that LCC would be paying for the elec-

"When two or more separate units of government have a joint election they will share the costs," Walsh said. "This has been a long tradition in Walsh said that despite this delay the charter election will take place on June 13. He said the city clerk by statute has the duty to hold the election.

"Timothy Sanderson (Lansing city attorney) has made the point clear that state law provides autonomy for charter commissions in setting election dates," Walsh said. "The council must provide the funds. The election will take place."

Councilmember Richard Baker agreed, saying that the funds transfer was "just like paying our utility bills, it's something we've got to do."

City council voted in favor of the election date at their April 18 meeting. Brenke and Adado are in favor of putting the charter on the ballot in either the Aug. 2 mayoral primary or the Nov. 8 general election. But this has caused concern for many because of the changes in the organization of the city government that the proposed charter would call for.

Under the proposed charter the administrative power of the mayor would be increased and city council would have largely a policy-making role.

"It is most important that people know what kind of a mayor they are electing. Walsh said. "Under the present charter the mayor is largely a figurehead, but under the proed charter he would be the city's chief administrator.' Adado said the charter would make little difference in how the citizens voted for mayor and stressed again that the charter should be voted on when there will be a large voter

'U' enrichment funds faculty research

By PATRICIA LaCROIX State News Staff Writer

Receiving the second smallest allocation from the $17 million MSU Enrichment Program is the Faculty Endowed Chairs and Professorships, a program designed to attract exceptional faculty researchers to the University, with an amount of $1.75 million.

The Enrichment Program was initiated two weeks ago. Other facilities to benefit from the collected money are: the Performing Arts Center, a new MSU museum and the University Library.

Money that is donated through the campus Enrichment Program for the endowed chairs will be invested in various concerns, with the interest from these investments being used to finance the chairs through the departments.

Vice President for University Development Leslie Scott said the program was established with this requirement so that the program is operative on a

If the money donated was directly distributed to the departments, the program would have a finite end, he explained.

The number of chairs established through the Enrichment Program donations will be determined by the amount of donations that are made, Scott said. With the $1.75 million earmarked for the program, Scott said that approximately four chairs would be possible.

PIRGIM energy bills unveiled

By ED LION State News Staff Writer LANSING - PIRGIM unveiled a package of measures Tuesday designed to save energy, provide more jobs and slow down the development of nuclear reactors.

The measures proposed by PIRGIM were introduced in the legislature by Rep. Stephen Monsma, D-Grand Rapids.

PIRGIM says the three measures will cut more than 2,000 megawatts off of energy consumption and 40 per cent of the state's natural gas use.

These bills will provide a framework for a healthy economy oriented to efficient use of energy and renewable reources," said Richard Conlin, PIRGIM projects director.

The bills would require the state's Public Service Commission to only allow utilities to cover expenses through rate hikes for facilities that are most efficient, operate at the lowest costs and create the most jobs. They also would establish a tax on consumption to finance a $50 million annual fund to help subsidize insulation and other energy-saving measures by

Finally, the package would reform utility pricing struc-tures so low users have lower rates than wasteful users and industry would be encouraged to use energy on off-hours.

Conlin said the bills will have immediate and long-range ef fects at saving consumers money for their electric bills.

Immediately, he said, consumers will pay out $10 in added taxes a year, but reduced charges brought about by the package would have a net effect of saving $20.

And in the long-range, Conlin said, the utilities will be forced to look for more efficient methods that will save the state's energy supplies Conlin said the measures would create 5,000 new jobs and would also discourage use of nuclear reactors since they were inefficient.

"We are also confident that this bill would end nuclear plant construction in Michigan because nuclear power is by far the most expensive and risky means of meeting future demand," he said.

Presently there are three

Q. I love ferns. Could you recommend something different? A. Want to give your green thumb a real test? Then try growing one of the maidenhair ferns.

Because these ferns do best in high humidity and moist soil, Michigan State University horticulturists recommend growing them in terrariums or fern cases. Plant maidenhair ferns in an organic soil made of equal parts commercial potting soil and shredded peat moss. Keep the soil moist at all times.

Warm temperatures — 80-85 degrees F during the day and a minimum of 62-65 degrees at night — are the ideal. At cooler temperatures, the ferns require less water. High humidity is necessary at any temperature to prevent curling and browning of the ruffly leaflets. Partial shade or the unbroken light from a north window is sufficient for good growth. Maidenhair ferns should never be exposed to direct sunlight or to high temperatures and dry soil. Too much sun or high temperature can cause outer fronds to turn brown and die. Insect infestations on maidenhair ferns can be trouble some. Aphids, white flies, scale and mealybugs may be difficult to control because malathion, a common ingredient for treating these pests causes chemical burn to ferns.

If you're successful in growing the maidenhair fern and want to propagate it, do so by dividing it and planting the

A. A native of Mexico, this plant gets its common name from the small white flowers in a boat-shaped group of leaves or bracts. This resembles a baby in a cradle. Its leaves are sword-shaped and of metallic color. They grow to be about 15 inches in length. The Moses in the Cradle prefers light near a sunny window, but can be maintained with the light needed to make a faint shadow. Keep soil moderately moist, not wet, at all times. This species is generally not troubled by any major insect pests. These plants are relatively trouble free

'Upstairs, Downstairs' bids farewell

The residents of 165 Eaton Place have packed their things and left Belgravia, leaving a void in the Sunday night television schedule that once held "Upstairs, Downstairs.

The story of the Bellamy family and their servants was one of the most well-produced, finely acted programs in television history. It has been labeled a soap opera, but it far transcends weekday offerings of the major networks.

The PBS series, which ended Sunday night, held audiences spellbound from coast to coast and all across the world.

The series was an accurate portrayal of the period between 1900 and 1930, when both the upper and lower strata of English society were undergoing drastic changes.

The Bellamys and their servants carried equal weight in the scripts and plots of the show. It was hard to determine who had more problems -- the upper-crust, socially prominent Bellamys - or group of people in service down below.

Each had its own patriarch, matriarch and subcharacters. Upstairs was, of course, dominated by Lord Richard Bellamy. The ever-proper, always correct Richard oddly enough was able to bend enough to adjust to the changing times.

Of the original Bellamy family (Richard, Lady Marjorie and their children, James and Eliza beth), Richard was the outsider. He was born into a middle-class family and gained his title through his wife, the daughter of the Earl of Southwold, though he was later knighted. Daughter Elizabeth disappeared to America the same year her mother disappeared into the Atlantic Ocean on the Titanic. This left James to cope with his father at 165 Eaton Place.

Actor Simon Williams, who played James, said he was searching for a base to play the character from. He finally found the answer in the rapidly swirling times of the 1920s.

James Bellamy - rich, young, spoiled and bored - could not find his niche. He went through scene after scene; he married the unfortunate Hazel, his father's secretary; he had an affair with his cousin Georgina, who later rejected him; and he finally committed suicide.

"The series, aired on Public being on their own; assorted maids, some of whom James discovered in one way or another. others who only stayed a few episodes; and miscellaneous manservants, such as Trooper Norton, who later became a gigolo. The lives of the two classes began with sharply drawn lines in 1900, when each person from Lord Bellamy on down to Ruby knew his place and staved there.

However, as World War I, the Roaring Twenties and the Stock Market crash all took their toll, the social distinctions began to fuzz and then disappear. Some people could adjust others could not. Just as the closing of 165 Eaton Place ended an era in British society, the passing of "Upstairs, Downstairs" ends a brilliant four years of public television.

It was the first regularly scheduled PBS show that could compete with commercial offerings and opened up a new awareness of British drama and the use of video-theater.

The saga of the Bellamys has ended, but it will long be remembered as one of the milestones of television.

IF YOU'RE THINKING ABOUT THE HE SHIP SAILS ON MAY 15.

One of the best ways to get into engineering is to get into the nuclear Navy. But you'd better get moving fast. May 15th is the deadline for this year's Navy Nuclear Propulsion Candidate Program.

The Navy can give you the most comprehensive nuclear training possible. Because we operate over half the nuclear reactors in America. We start by giving you a year of advanced engineering technology. This would cost you thousands in graduate school, but in the Navy, we pay you.

Once you're commissioned as a Navy Nuclear Officer, you'll earn a top salary. Over $24,000 a year after four years. And you'll get practical experience on the most advanced nuclear equipment devised by man. All the Navy asks in return is that you serve for 3 years on active duty upon completion of your training.

But remember, May 15th is the deadline for this year's class. If you are majoring in engineering, math or physical sciences, find out from your local placement office when a Navy recruiter will be on campus. Or call toll free, 800-841-8000 (in Georgia, 800-342-5855) for more information. If you're still a junior, ask about the Navy's NUPOC Collegiate Program, which pays you up to $6,000 during your senior year. And hurry. Time and tide wait for no man.

Pablo outshines Outlaws

State News Reviewer

The only aspect that the Outlaws and Pablo Cruise shared on Monday night was the Fairchild Theatre stage. While the former sounded like just another uptempo Southern boogie band geared up for a night of hell-raising and synapse-splitting music, the latter displayed an original flair for mixing fine vocals and finer musicianship with an effervescent stage presence. Though it was not indicative by audience reaction to the concert, the opening act stole the thunder from the headliners — Pablo Cruise proved to be, by far, more musically talented than the Outlaws.

Casually strolling out on stage to perform for the second time that night, Pablo Cruise members Cory Lerios, Dave Jenkins, Bud Cockrell and Stephen Price greeted the spirited crowd and acknowledged their comments within the cozy atmosphere of the Fairchild setting. The group's easygoing stance and positive attitude is the essence of Pablo Cruise's repertoire. For over an hour, including an encore, the band bounced along with the music it played - a steady flow of tunes rooted with a West Coast influence and a well-honed edge.

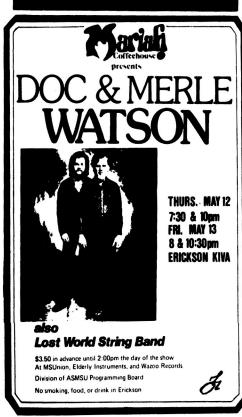

Launching into the set with a composition from the successful third album, "A Place In The Sun," band members Bud Cockrell and Dave Jenkins injected strong vocals into the appealing "Can't You Hear The Music". "Never Had A Love" combination. With Stephen Price's capable percussion work and Cory Lerios' excellent piano playing, Pablo Cruise began to cruise. The sound

Beginning to pick up on the energy from a responsive crowd, the group continued to surge with another song from the latest release; this time it was the vocals of Jenkins and Cockrell again to power "Whatcha Gonna Do?"

Throughout the set Pablo Cruise remained amazingly consistent in its musical finesse. Guitarist Jenkins went the acoustic route "Raging Fire," and with help from the harmonies by Lerios and Cockrell, the song was realized.

The highlight of Pablo Cruise's style was the professional musicianship. The tune "Ocean Breeze" served as a poignant example. The spotlight was cast upon keyboardist Lerios as he practically became one with his instrument. His strong classical intonations and deftly crafted approach was spellbinding as he hurled his fingers up and down the piano effortlessly. The effect was mesmerizing as the rest of Pablo Cruise fell into place to help

The same good qualities can also be found in Bud Cockrell's oaring vocalization in "A Place In The Sun," Dave Jenkins' superb guitar playing in the encore tune "El Verano" and Stephen Price's tasteful drum solo — a rarity these days.

It is also rare to find any redeeming qualities in the work done by the guitar-laden Outlaws. The numbing effect the group had on my senses was not a good feeling. As the group's insignia — a steer surrounded by a rattlesnake — served as an appropriate backdrop, the Outlaws pounded out songs from the first two Arista albums and added tunes like "Gunsmoke" from the soon-to-be-released "Hurry Sundown."

If you've heard one Southern boogie band, you'll probably hear more . . . unfortunately.

From the Director of LAST TANGO IN PARIS

Director's Choice Film Series presents BERNARDO BERTOLUCCI'S

Conformist

1970, Color. Italian Dialogue with English subtitles.

"Bernardo Bertolucci's adaptation of Alberto Moravia's famous novel about the making of a fascist, 1938, is assuredly the work of an artist-very possibly a great one-and the movie itself is filled with the most extraordinary emotional energy, cinematic facility and social and psychological acuteness. As such, it should be seen by everyone who cares at all about advances in the state of the art." Life Magazine

Ever notice how it's easier to ace the courses you like?

It finally comes down to commitment.

When you don't like a course, it's hard to excel. The class gets tedious. The texts get boring. The lectures get dreadful. Your work suffers. And so do your grades.

Compare that with the courses you really believe in.

You care more. You try more. And without even noticing, you just naturally do better.

It's true in school. It's true outside of school.

For example, we believe there's just one way to brew Busch beer. The natural way. With natural ingredients. Natural carbonation. Natural ageing.

We believe that's the best way to brew a beer.

And when you believe in what you're doing, you just naturally do it better.

Taste a Busch and we think you'll agree.

BUSCH.

When you believe in what you're doing, you just naturally do it better.

public works jobs programs.

Sponsors said at least 300,000 jobs would be created in public works projects such as construction of hospitals, jails, schools and roads and predicted thousands more jobs would be created indirectly.

The House passed the bill by a vote of 335 to 77.

Both the House and the Senate already have passed legislation providing the actual funds to carry out the new economic stimulation program but differences in those two appropriations bills must be worked out by a conference committee. The House appointed its conferees Tuesday.

The Commerce Department already has agreed to quickly adopt necessary regulations on how the money will be used so that funds can begin flowing during the height of this year's summer construction season

Congress passed a similar $2 billion public works jobs bill last year but that money was exhausted. The additional funds will be distributed along the same lines as the earlier funds, with the bulk of the money going to areas with the worst unemployment.

The allocation formula is based 65 per cent on the actual number of persons without jobs within each state and 85 per cent on the state's rate of unemployment above 6.5 per cent. However, each state will get a minimum of $30 million.

The bill had been held up for nearly two months because of a dispute between the House and Senate over an unrelated amendment to the water pollution control act.

Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, wanted to include funds to extend water pollution control activities but the House went much further by proposing substantial revisions to the act which some critics said would damage the nation's wetlands.

A Senate-House conference committee, acting under White House pressure, dropped the controversial amendments in order to speed passage of the jobs bill.

The final version, however, requires the administration to spend all previously withheld money for public works water
