

GIVES $102 MILLION TO MSU Senate OKs funding bill

By PATRICIA LACROIX
State News Staff Writer

The state Senate accepted a bill to provide $102 million to MSU for 1977-78 as the higher education appropriation on Tuesday afternoon.

The bill had requested $126 million from the state but the total is subject to change as it goes through the House Appropriations Committee and be voted on Tuesday.

William G. Milliken, in accordance with the state budget formula, had recommended a $100 million allocation to MSU, $2 million less than the figure accepted by the House last year the University's final general fund appropriation was $92 million, also a $2 million increase over the governor's original proposal.

Jack Breslin, executive vice president and chief MSU lobbyist, said he considered the Senate Appropriation Committee's treatment of the University "very generous."

He said the Senate bill was a step toward meeting the previously "unmet needs of the University," such as medical programs, cooperative extension programs and the agricultural experimental station.

"These unmet needs have been recognized now," Breslin said. "They have not been in the past."

MSU President Clifton R. Wharton Jr. said he was pleased with the Senate appropriation.

"I'm very pleased with the action of the Senate committee and hope the House will meet the same figure," Wharton said. "It's not everything that we need, but the increase this year is significant."

Wharton said the percentage of increase this year from last is 11.4 per cent, which is the largest increase MSU has received "in a long time."

He also said that it is important to realize that MSU has been "trying to catch up" with other universities for many years in terms of faculty salaries and equipment replacement.

"They have gone a long way to meeting our needs," he said.

Breslin said universities rarely, if ever, receive the total amount that they request of the state legislature and that MSU should not be discouraged with its allocation.

He added, however, that MSU did not pad its request to ask for more than the University really needed from the legislature, but the request does include measures to meet "sizeable inflation" factors.

Three hours of debates on the floor preceded final approval of the bill, in which $30 million dollars of amendments were suggested for all Michigan universities, but these were all voted down prior to approval.

Breslin said it was likely that the University will be asked to answer questions for members of the House Appropriations Committee, also adding the possibility that the House committee will add funds to the $102 million figure.

The measure now goes to the House for approval. Breslin said the final figure could not be expected from the House committee for about three weeks.

This year the state legislature has more time to formulate the higher education appropriations, since the fiscal year now runs from Oct. 1 to Sept. 30.

The legislature changed the fiscal year last summer because it failed to meet the deadline necessary for the July 1 to June 30 fiscal calendar.

Senators vote to lift Cuba trade embargo

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Foreign Relations Committee voted Tuesday to lift the trade embargo against Cuba to permit that nation to purchase agricultural, food and medical supplies in the U.S. market.

Over, it balked at opening U.S. markets to exports of sugar and other Cuban agricultural products after senators heard arguments that such a step would give away an important bargaining chip in continuing negotiations with the government of Fidel Castro.

The amendment, a diluted form of the proposal offered by Sen. George McGovern, was 10 to 6.

The original McGovern amendment would have lifted the embargo on imports of Cuban agricultural products and medicines entirely.

Sen. Richard Stone, D-Fla., many of whose constituents are exiled Cuban-Americans, said this amendment would give away vital U.S. bargaining leverage at the time that negotiations with Cuba are beginning to yield results.

That leverage, he said, could open the way for negotiations on such matters as pending requests of more than 1,000 U.S. citizens still in Cuba to leave the country.

Clearing the amendment for floor action by the full Senate came after nearly two days of debate. There was no immediate word on when the measure might be taken by the Senate.

President Jimmy Carter had told McGovern he would not oppose the McGovern amendment, which was tacked onto the pending State Department authorization bill, and department representatives present for the session maintained that stance of neutrality.

Increase in coal reserve urged

By PATRICIA LACROIX
State News Staff Writer

Either a long hot summer or a winter on campus if the MSU coal supply is not brought up to levels, so efforts are being made by university administration to bring the supply up to the recommended levels.

Wilkinson, University vice president for business and finance, has been working to correct the 20 per cent drop in the coal reserves and, in addition, to raise the authorized reserve for the University.

Reserves are necessary to provide for the University, including the operated air conditioning systems, heating systems, operative during the winter months.

Currently, a reserve supply of 50,000 tons is maintained. Wilkinson is attempting to raise it to 70,000 tons, though no final decision has been made on the issue.

He said there are a number of factors contributing to his efforts, most of them stemming from market supply capacity in the near future.

Because of a particularly harsh winter in Kentucky, the major coal-producing state for the University, he said there may be difficulties in obtaining the needed amounts of coal.

The University tries to maintain a 90-day reserve of coal, Wilkinson said. Currently a two-month supply. A contract was sold to the University at about $1.50 a ton with the money coming from the cash pool.

He said his department has approved efforts to return the supply to the recommended levels, but he said the director of the automotive and mechanical department of the MSU Physical Plant, may be easier said than done.

"At the moment, this may be pretty difficult to achieve," he said, citing the weather conditions in Kentucky as a factor.

He said assuring a steady supply of coal is a top priority, and it was that that the University watch for developments in coal supplies.

He said the University has already authorized a switch from a one-year to a three-year contract for coal. Bids have been posted for the three-year contracts.

He said the maximum supply level was set in an effort to insure a supply of coal under unfavorable weather conditions are unfavorable, he said.

Efforts are being made despite a coal shortage last year by former University President Warren Huff, D-Plymouth, which stockpiled coal lost some of its value when it is stockpiled for periods of time," Huff said.

He added that there was "some dispute" over the issue when he made his presentation, saying the University did not believe the credibility of his sources.

Wilkinson said Huff was discussing problems of coal supplies last year which were blown out of proportion. Coal would have to be stockpiled in amounts and periods of time beyond what the University is planning, he said.

Huff explained that he had gotten his information from authorities from one of the major coal fields.

In addition, Huff said it is not wise of the University to tie up money in stockpiled coal when it could be invested in other projects while collecting anywhere from 6 1/2 to 7 per cent interest.

"The University should not be speculating on the coal market," Huff said. "The prices should be fairly firm."

"The University cannot afford to let the Physical Plant feel fat and happy with a high supply," Huff added. "This is an economical issue, not an emotional one."

CARTER CALLS FOR 'HIGH PRIORITY' CHANGES

NATO warned to toughen force

By RICHARD E. MEYER
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — President Jimmy Carter warned the North Atlantic alliance Tuesday it should toughen up to match Communist buildup of an offensive force in Europe and then flew home from his first round of summitry.

Carter said the North Atlantic Treaty Organization should make "high priority improvements" in the European forces, report on progress December and submit a full program to a NATO summit next spring in Washington.

The President spoke to a NATO ministerial meeting in gilded, red-carpeted Lancaster House near Parliament. He spent the rest of the day talking privately with individual prime ministers of NATO countries.

Carter was blunt in his speech.

"The threat facing the alliance has grown steadily in recent years," he said. "The Soviet Union has achieved essential nuclear equivalence. Its theater nuclear forces have been strengthened."

"The Warsaw Pact's conventional forces in Europe emphasize an offensive posture. These forces are much stronger than needed for any defensive purpose."

"Since 1965, new ground and air weapons have been introduced in most major categories: self-propelled artillery, mobile tactical missiles, mobile air defense guns, armored personnel carriers, tactical aircraft and tanks."

His speech was the last formal presentation of his first trip abroad as President. He was to return to Washington late Tuesday night.

British Prime Minister James Callaghan said of Carter, "I think he's been like a breath of fresh air to the Western world." In a farewell appearance with the President outside Lancaster House, where the NATO speech was delivered, Callaghan praised Carter for vitality, dedication and confidence.

The President, in an assessment of his trip, said, "The most important thing to me has been getting to know the leaders of the very strong and important nations in the European area."

He expressed certainty about British-American friendship and "a complete faith in the future of our economic and social and political systems."

Over the past five days, here and in Geneva, Carter met with such leaders as President Valery Giscard d'Estaing of France, Chancellor Helmut Schmidt of West Germany and President Hafez Assad of Syria.

"After reviewing the affidavit provided to us by the Michigan State News and after interviewing the so-called secret witness, I have found no additional evidence that in my opinion would justify calling a coroner's inquest into this matter," said Peter Houk, Ingham County prosecuting attorney.

Houk terminates probe; SN reporting assailed

By DEBBIE WOLFE
State News Staff Writer

The reinvestigation of a shooting involving the Lansing police last Wednesday was "essentially closed" and a coroner's inquest was ruled unjustified by Peter Houk, Ingham County Prosecuting Atty. Tuesday in a joint news conference with Lansing Police Chief Richard A. Gleason.

In an effort to dispell what he called "misinterpretations" of conflicting police reports and to discredit the signed testimony of a secret witness as reported in the State News, Houk announced that he had "found no additional evidence" that in his opinion would justify an inquest.

Lansing police conducted a two-day investigation into the incident. A spokesperson for the department said Thursday that two uniformed Lansing officers approached the front door of 1032 River St., Lansing, where Michael Edwin Smith, 28, was being sought in connection with a burglary warrant.

The spokesperson said that a third officer remained in the rear of the property.

According to the police account Thursday, Smith left the back door with a crowbar and ran toward the officer who was in the back yard.

The officer then told him to stop, police said, at which point Smith made a "slinging motion" toward the policeman with the crowbar. A second time, Smith was told to stop and the officer who was in the back yard fired a shot into the ground, missing Smith.

After the shot was fired, Smith turned around and began to run toward the front part of the property, police said. One of the officers who had been at the front door according to the statement was John Hersman. Hersman intercepted Smith at the side of the house while he held a raised crowbar and shot the suspect in the front midsection, police said.

After the official completion of the investigation by Lansing police, a report was handed over to the prosecutors office. Houk then concluded over the weekend that the police handling of the incident was proper.

Monday, new evidence of the shooting was presented to Houk's office after the State News obtained a signed and notarized affidavit from a secret eyewitness who swore he gave the statement by his own "free will with no coercion or threats."

Houk claimed the witness told him the State News reporters threatened and harassed the witness into signing the statement.

Upon receiving the affidavit, Houk reopened the investigation and Hersman, who was scheduled to return to work this week after a routine suspension for the duration of the investigation, had Monday off.

Additional information which further supported the secret witness' testimony was uncovered by the State News Monday and strengthened evidence of the possibility that the police may have been mistaken in their original statement.

The secret witness' testimony differed with the original police account of the shooting in three key areas:

- Police said that Smith threatened two officers with an 18-inch crowbar during the incident. The witness said that "at no time during the incident did I see Smith carrying a crowbar, tire iron or any other object which could have been used as a weapon against the officers."

- The police said that Smith ran toward an officer in the back yard making a "slinging motion" with crowbar. The witness said that "at no point in time did Smith make a threatening motion toward any officer."

- The police report also said that two police officers fired one round each for a total of two shots, one hitting the ground and one hitting Smith. The witness in a detailed account said that one officer fired both rounds to the indicated areas and that "the other two officers at the scene at the time of the shooting never drew their guns."

PIRGIM board election postponed; tampering by state member charged

The MSU-PIRGIM Board of Directors elections scheduled for today have been postponed due to allegations that a staff employe "tampered with due process of the elections."

Stephen Ferns, election commissioner, postponed the elections Tuesday to allow Joseph Tuchinsky, executive director of PIRGIM's state organization, to rule on charges filed by MSU PIRGIM members against a PIRGIM state staff employe.

The grievance, filed by Ann Tydeman, MSU-PIRGIM board chairperson; Jeff Moore, MSU-PIRGIM board member; Ed Smith, MSU-PIRGIM board member; and Mary Jo Kevkes, charges one of PIRGIM's state employes with misconduct and conflict of interest connected with the campus elections.

"Serious conflict of interests exists in that a staff employe is employed by the students and therefore should not attempt to manipulate an election," Tydeman said.

Ferns said he believed the charges had enough merit to warrant a postponement of the elections while the charges are investigated.

According to PIRGIM's grievance procedure, Tuchinsky will have 10 days from Tuesday (May 10) to make a decision on the matter.

When Tuchinsky was contacted Tuesday he was in the process of preparing a statement naming the staff employe involved, outlining the grievance procedure and outlining the allegations against the employe.

He said in the interest of fairness the staff employe's name and the charges against him should be made public.

Tuchinsky will announce his ruling later in the week.

Social Security plan criticized

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Jimmy Carter's plan to pump income tax revenues into the ailing Social Security system was characterized by skeptical congressmen Tuesday as dangerous, a grave error and politically motivated hocus-pocus.

Even some House members who appeared inclined to support parts of the Carter plan questioned whether it has been thoroughly thought out. And one Republican, William M. Ketchum of California, came close to accusing the President of lying.

Ketchum, while questioning Joseph A. Califano Jr., secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, about the Social Security plan, recalled Carter's campaign promise that he would never lie to the American people.

"Well, maybe that didn't include Congress," Ketchum said. He quoted Carter as telling a group of congressmen only six days earlier that his administration would oppose any effort to use general income tax revenues for Social Security.

Califano ran into the wall of criticism as he spelled out the Carter proposals to the House Ways and Means subcommittee on Social Security. Despite the criticism, a subcommittee aide predicted the Carter plan would be approved by the panel.

Carter offered his eight-point plan for helping Social Security out of a financial bind in a message to Congress on Monday.

He proposed to feed some income tax revenues into the fund during times of high unemployment, gradually raise Social Security taxes on employers and employees, and to correct a 1972 error that could result in many future retirees getting pensions larger than the paychecks they earned in the last year on the job.

Carter asked that about $14.1 billion in income tax revenue be turned over to Social Security between now and 1980 to compensate for Social Security taxes that were lost because of high unemployment in 1975-78. If such a step were renewed in future years, the Social Security system would get income taxes anytime the national unemployment rate exceeded 6 per cent. The rate now is 7 per cent.

Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., chairperson of the House Ways and Means Committee, told Califano it would be a "grave error" to use general tax money in the pension fund, which throughout its life has been financed totally by taxes on employees and employers.

Ullman said a better short-term solution would be to simply raise the Social Security taxes slightly, allowing time for a complete study of alternative ways of financing Social Security.

Califano replied that such a tax increase now "could make the recession worse," and noted that Carter proposes only to test for three years the concept of using a limited amount of general tax money in Social Security. An advisory council would recommend whether the plan should be made permanent.

Rep. Bill Archer of Texas, ranking Republican on the subcommittee, called the Carter plan "the most brazen demonstration of fiscal legerdemain ever given in this room. It boggles the mind."

Rep. Joe Waggoner of Louisiana, No. 2 Democrat on the panel, said using general taxes for Social Security would turn the pension program into a welfare plan "and this looks dangerous to me."

Reps. Abner J. Mikva, D-Ill., and Jim Guy Tucker, D-Ark., endorsed the Carter program.

Tucker said the "agonized wailings" of opposition came from the philosophical descendants of those who fought the whole Social Security concept from the beginning.

"This is a good first step toward restoring some confidence in the system," Tucker added.

Rep. Richard A. Gephardt, D-Mo., wondered aloud whether there is any need for such a drastic change in the financing of Social Security in order to correct short-term problems in the system.

Archer said tapping the federal Treasury in order to feed the Social Security system is like the blind leading the blind because the Treasury is in worse shape than the pension fund.

"Your proposal means one of two things," Archer told Califano.

"Either you're planning to take $14 billion away from other programs or the Treasury secretary is going to borrow that amount."

"I suspect it's the latter case, which will increase the public debt, built up inflationary pressures, and ultimately add to the already oppressive burden on the American taxpayer," Archer said.

Students at DePaul University in Chicago Monday were holding a shaving cream pie-throwing contest to raise money for a retarded children's home. But during the event enthusiasm ran so high, the contestants threw the pies in their own faces as well as at others.

N. Ireland's Paisley detained as Protestant strikers rally

BALLYMENA, Northern Ireland (AP) — The Rev. Ian Paisley, firebrand leader of a faltering eight-day-old Protestant strike in Northern Ireland, was detained by police Tuesday after he refused to order a tractor barricade dismantled.

The burly preacher-politician, a member of the British Parliament, was held for two hours along with another strike leader, Ernest Baird, and 10 of their supporters.

Police said they will be charged with the minor offense of obstructing the highway.

The Rev. Mr. Paisley told cheering crowds of supporters in Ballymena, his home town northeast of Belfast, "The strike goes on. It's a fight to the finish."

Then he drove off to whip up support for the stoppage and man another strikers' barricade in Ballymoney, 40 miles west of Belfast.

The minister's detention, the third time he had been picked up in his stormy political career, came as strong-arm squads of strikers continued a campaign of intimidation in a desperate bid to force the government to stay at home.

Police reported a gunman shot a bus driver and wounded a 79-year-old singer on Belfast's Crumlin road.

Consumer agency bill approved by committee

WASHINGTON (AP) — House and Senate committees have approved a new consumer agency, but the House vote was so close the bill's future is in doubt.

While the Senate Government Operations Committee approved the bill 10 to 2 on Tuesday, the House part passed it by 221 to 215.

There has been intense lobbying against the bill.

The bills now are new votes before the full House and Senate.

Young emphasizes development policy

ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast (AP) — Andrew Young, U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, arrived here Tuesday for a meeting of U.S. ambassadors and said President Jimmy Carter's evolving Africa policy stresses "development and food, and not warfare and destruction."

Young, the first black to head America's U.N. delegation, told newsmen his message to the conference was the "whole change of style" brought in by the Carter Administration.

More than 35 U.S. ambassadors were gathered for the conference at the luxurious Hotel Ivoire. Other officials included William Schauffele, assistant secretary of state for African affairs; William Maynes, assistant secretary for international organizations; Donald Petersson, director of the Office of Southern African Affairs; Thomas Thornton of the National Security Council; and Sam Brown of ACTION, the umbrella group that includes the Peace Corps.

Officials said the conference was the first of its kind in seven years.

Carter predicts arms sale to Turkey

LONDON (AP) — President Jimmy Carter predicted on Tuesday that Congress shortly will approve resumed arms sales to Turkey as a "demonstration of mutual friendship."

Carter made the statement to reporters after meeting privately with Turkish Prime Minister Constantine Caramanlis. Carter termed Turkey a staunch friend in times of crisis and said its membership in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) is "crucial to the security of Europe and to our own national future."

The U.S. Congress embargoed arms shipments to Turkey in February 1975 because U.S. weaponry was used in the 1974 invasion of Cyprus that forced nearly 200,000 Greek Cypriots from their homes.

Five charged with spying in W. Germany

KARLSRUHE, West Germany (AP) — Five persons, including a secretary in Chancellor Helmut Schmidt's office, have been charged with spying for Communist East Germany, the Federal Prosecutor's Office said Tuesday.

Dagmar Kahlig-Scheffler, 30, was named as a suspected spy last Thursday a day after she was detained in the chancellery by federal agents.

A search of her Bonn apartment turned up incriminating evidence, the prosecutor's office said in announcing she would face trial.

Kahlig-Scheffler had worked in the chancellery since December 1975, and had access to secret documents on European politics, a spokesperson for Schmidt said after her detention Thursday.

In May 1974 Schmidt's predecessor, Willy Brandt, resigned when his close aide Guenter Guillaume was unmasked as an East German spy.

Officials said the two cases are not comparable, however.

President changes time of conference

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Jimmy Carter has changed the time of his prime-time televised news conference on Thursday, apparently to avoid conflict with the second Richard M. Nixon-David Frost interview.

The new Carter news conference — a report on his first presidential trip overseas — had been announced for 7:30 p.m. EDT.

After White House officials were reminded that the Frost interview with Nixon was scheduled for that time, the news conference was rescheduled for 2:30 p.m. EDT. The Frost-Nixon show deals with foreign affairs, particularly big power diplomacy.

An aide to Frost said the British television personality called the White House early Tuesday and spoke with Carter TV adviser Barry Jagoda. But, he said, Frost did not ask to have the presidential news conference changed.

"David made no request whatsoever and I would imagine he would have regarded it presumptuous to make a request of that nature," Frost researcher Robert Zelnick said. "President Carter calls press conferences at such times as he deems it in the public interest to call."

Storm interrupts New England power

BOSTON (AP) — Hundreds of thousands of homes were without electricity across southern New England on Tuesday after a freak storm scattered tree limbs and power lines across a snow-covered spring landscape.

Newly opened lilac blossoms crushed by snow and white-covered trees in full foliage created a bizarre mixture of midspring and winter, just weeks after the region emerged from its worst winter on record.

The National Weather Service said the storm, which pounded much of New England with high winds, snow, sleet and rain Monday and Tuesday, left record snow depths for this time of year, ranging to 15 inches in parts of Massachusetts.

Up to two feet of snow was unofficially reported in towns at higher elevations in the Berkshire Mountains of western Massachusetts.

Income goes up over 9 per cent

WASHINGTON (AP) — The average American's personal income grew by 9.1 per cent in 1976, well above the inflation rate, the Commerce Department reported Tuesday.

In a report on personal income, the department said that per capita income nationwide increased from $5,903 in 1975 to $6,441 in 1976.

"The gain in personal income in all but five states exceeded the rise in consumer prices," said Robert B. Bretzfelder of the Bureau of Economic Analysis.

Consumer prices increased 4.8 per cent in 1976, though the pace of inflation is picking up in 1977.

The highest per capita income was $10,178 in Alaska, while the smallest was $4,575 in Mississippi.

States with high per capita incomes generally are concentrated in the Northeast and Far West, while those with low incomes are in the Southeast.

Per capita income increased the fastest in Michigan at 13 per cent, Maine at 12.5 per cent and Mississippi at 12.25 per cent.

Debates on decriminalization continuing

Proposed amount allowed point of controversy amount of joints that 100 of marijuana can make among the topics of debate testimony on a decriminalization bill Tuesday.

The House Civil Rights Committee is looking at a bill sponsored by Rep. Perry Bullard, D-Ann Arbor, that will lower marijuana penalties and legalize use of small amounts in private homes.

Rep. Rosetta Ferguson, D-Detroit, who is opposed to the bill, said the 100 grams allowed for private use in the bill was a dangerous level.

"One hundred grams is equal to three packs of cigarettes," she said. "And they tell me if you get a hold of good marijuana, two or three people can smoke it and get high."

Ferguson said she realized tobacco cigarettes were dangerous to health, but added, "you can't get high on them."

A concerned citizen, Hugh F. Fish, agreed that the amount of marijuana allowed under the bill was too much.

"Anyone who smokes one joint a day is considered a heavy smoker," he said. "It's impossible to carry around that much pot unless you intend to deliver it or give it away."

The proposed amount was criticized by another person who said the limit was unrealistic by current market standards.

"People today are more likely buying in pounds because of economic reasons," said William Oberland of the Drug Education Center.

Oberland, who counsels drug users, said he had been hard put to knock marijuana use.

"It seems to be illegal for moral rather than health reasons," he said. "I have trouble talking to kids about pot. I don't think it's a serious danger to public health."

Bullard's measure is similar in form to one sponsored last year by committee member Rep. Bill Bryant, R-Gross Pointe Farms. Bryant's bill failed to pass the House by one vote.

The main difference between the two measures is the provision legalizing marijuana use in private homes. Bryant has said that he will attempt to delete the provision from the measure.

The committee will meet again Tuesday at 11 a.m. to hear more testimony on the decriminalization bill.

Tuesday's hearing at the state Capitol on marijuana drew a large crowd.

The impact of East Lansing's growing pains on the Abbott Road Station were portrayed at a public information meeting Tuesday night.

Chief Phil Patriarcho used a slide show sales pitch to show the need for a new fire station on Abbott Road north of Saginaw that would replace the present one.

Some of the reasons Patriarcho gave for the need were the low capacity of the present station that cannot accommodate a needed truck, the lack of space for the existing equipment, the cars that must be left outside in the winter, the small offices and deterioration of the building, which was originally built in lack of an adequate practice area was also pointed out by the chief. Fire fighters used to practice behind Fire Station on Shaw Lane, but Case and Wonders residence halls were so close to the station, Patriarcho said.

"I could reach the dorms with the water, if we tried," he said.

An ideal fire station, in the chief's eyes, would have five bays, three of the three bays of the present station, that could accommodate reserve equipment and squad cars. It would have a setback from the road so the trucks could be pulled out of station without blocking traffic and it would have a through capability so the trucks would not have to back into

A dream station would also have room for compressors for air and would be located in an area with few traffic problems. A major problem in realizing the dream is finding a suitable site. A bond issue on a new fire station was before voters in November 1975, the city bought a site north of Saginaw Street from Bessemaur Drive and even poured the concrete for a bond issue was defeated and the original site, along with 11 acres, is being considered for a new bond issue vote.

Criteria for evaluating possible locations included the cost of land, displacement of homes or businesses, soil conditions, property taxes, road visibility and neighborhood location. Generally, the sites north of Saginaw Street have poor soil and the ones south of Saginaw Street have more traffic and would be more expensive because of existing buildings that would have to be relocated.

Welburn, 117 Loree Drive, brought up the issue of moving the station farther from the older, more fire prone sector of the city. Patriarcho said a location north of Saginaw Street would be in a central location to cover the entire city and would be in an area with less congested traffic.

A site adjacent to city hall is being considered, on land the city has for a peripheral access road through the city and possible extension of the city hall.

However, Patriarcho said the site still has the problem of a street and City Manager Jerry Coffman said the city may have to keep on moving 40 or so students out of the houses and

Enrollments on decline in Michigan classrooms

Following is the second part of a State News series examining school enrollment trends in the nation and locally.

There is little disagreement that enrollments in Michigan's elementary and secondary schools are declining, Gov. William G. Milliken's education adviser said Tuesday.

"The question is, what needs to be done to help the problem?" James Phelps said.

"Some think the problem will go away if you give the schools more money," he said. "But where do you get the money?"

School districts with declining enrollments currently receive state aid money if they have a two per cent or more loss in students. The funds amount to about $40 per student lost.

Districts will probably eventually get more money, Phelps said, but they must compete with institutions such as prisons and community colleges which are facing an increase in use and enrollments.

Enrollments have been declining in Michigan between 1971 and 1976 mostly in large urban communities, with one exception — older suburbs where the population has stabilized or declined, according to the State Board of Education.

The biggest drop has been in grades one through six. Total enrollment in those grades decreased from about 1.2 million in 1970 to 992,722 in 1975.

By 1985 the number of graduating high school seniors will have dropped by nearly 35,000, thus affecting college enrollments. The number of teaching positions is also estimated to drop by 14,000 by 1980-81 with the biggest loss in secondary education teachers.

"Problems schools are facing won't be eradicated only with money," Phelps said. "They will have to consider cooperative programs and better utilization of space."

A 1977 report by the Michigan Department of Education Declining Enrollment Task Force suggests the establishment of cooperative relationships among districts as a possible solution.

The report also offers proposals for state aid, management techniques to reduce costs, ways to determine personnel needs and school closing guidelines.

"A lot of schools haven't faced problems yet," said Lynn Schroeder, staff assistant on the task (continued on page 16)

PSC, utility fairness: a first step forward

A pair of bills offered in the state House last week by Rep. Dennis M. Hertel (D-Detroit) are commendable first steps in the battle to make the Public Service Commission (PSC) and state utilities more accountable to the public.

Hertel's first bill would prohibit PSC staffers and commissioners from accepting employment with the public utility companies they regulate for at least 10 years after leaving the PSC.

The second bill would prevent utilities from using rate payers' money for advertising, except to advance safety information or explain methods of dealing with utilities when business problems arise.

The "revolving door" between industry and the agencies that supposedly regulate them has been spinning round and round for many years. Industry has traditionally found it profitable to obtain the services of their erstwhile regulators and vice versa.

Shenanigans of this type breed conflict of interest, or at least the appearance thereof, and deserve the strongest condemnation.

President Carter has proposed legislation to correct this matter in the Federal government, and Hertel's bill is an extension of that philosophy to the state level. Hertel believes that the bill — which is presently being considered by Lynn Jondahl's Consumer's Committee — has a good chance of passing.

The use of rate payers' money by utility companies for the purpose of spreading the gospel of utility magnanimity and efficiency has been particularly galling to consumers. Hertel's second bill — about whose prospects he is somewhat less sanguine — would technically do very little to assuage the public's throbbing pocketbooks, but would remind state utilities of the responsibility they have not to throw away good dollars on wasteful, self-serving frills.

Hertel's bills, while useful, will have very little long-range impact on the operations of the PSC and utilities or the prices charged consumers for energy service. The energy crisis will inevitably drive up prices, but state utilities — which are monopolies — must be prevented from raking in the gold without regard for the suffering their profiteering generates.

To that end, more fundamental reforms will be needed, many of which are outlined in a report, issued by a House committee chaired by former Rep. Howard Wolpe. The state legislature will be considering several of these reforms in the months ahead, and it is incumbent on the press and people to keep a watchful eye on their actions.

Razzle-dazzle Houk

Ingham County Prosecutor Peter Houk delivered what amounted to a soliloquy hard-sell Tuesday on the propriety of his investigation into a police killing and on what he termed "misimpressions" created by State News.

Houk staged quite a spectacle, and he must be given credit for what was one of the new prosecutor's first public appearances. A Democrat looked quite competent and able even though his statements were often conflicting. Plus, the story he told of the shooting incident that was widely reported in local media represented a diametric contradiction to the Lansing Police Department's own version, and also radically different from what the State News has been told by at least a half-dozen witnesses.

Upon close scrutiny, Houk will find that for his own story to be the victim, Michael Edwin Smith, would have had to have been shot from the back. Smith was shot in the chest.

This is but one of countless contradictions and discrepancies which Houk has refused to acknowledge.

And in the course of the show, Houk made a bid for the ultimate cop-out: shifting the issue from himself to the State News.

The sad thing is that the area media fell flat on its face for the blunder. The chronology goes something like this: Smith, a burglary suspect who reportedly intended to turn himself in, was found by police in a house in Lansing. He wound up dead.

The police quickly concluded Off. John Hersman's actions were proper and justified. On Friday, Houk supported this conclusion.

In doing so, Houk spoke only with two civilians — a woman who was out of the house after the shooting occurred, and another person presumably the informant who told police where Smith was located. The State News, in three days, spoke with at least six witnesses, some of them eyewitnesses to the shooting, who had relevant and material testimony. From all appearances, and after the State News went to great lengths to cooperate with the prosecutor's office, Houk took testimony and the two witnesses, went about interrogating them and were defense counsel for Hersman, and debunked the evidence.

Houk was understandably embarrassed. He was forced to open a reinvestigation because of public pressure. He wanted to close it.

The myriad charges and slanderous allegations made by Houk against the State News were categorically denied in full. Houk is using our cover-up for the original witness against us, a callous and unforgivable thing for a man who claims he mourns public apathy.

We have drawn no conclusions concerning this case; we have made allegations; we have advanced no theories. What we have done is to stop the cover-up of this case, point out the enormous holes in all of the stories and ask that Houk find out why a man is dead.

Thus far, the new prosecutor's track record is poor. For the people of Ingham County, as well as for justice and truth, we fervently wish that Houk would decide to act as a public servant, and not a gun-shy lackey.

'Unimmunization'

The late-spring Sun is rising higher and higher into the sky, relative to Michigan. Heated winds grow stronger and stronger. Animal and plant life grows stronger and stronger. How would you like to be a bee, flying around to myriad flowers, getting high on nectar? Surely, on a bright windy day when the sap is flowing fully, plants feel something like an adrenalin surge. If consciousness is involved, then this must be a time of near-optimum communion. Information flows in the spring.

In the human animal's world of ideas, the technological media and the communicative aspects of the environment are the sources of information. We of the human race form our concepts of reality and determine how we will react to it on the basis of information. A medium is an environment in which something may function or flourish. TV, newspapers and fashionable magazines, radio and movies are printed and electronic media which have increasingly become our primary medium for reality-making.

Former FCC commissioner Nicholas Johnson asked two relevant questions and gave two answers on campus last fall in an otherwise uninspiring address. "Who controls America? The media. And who controls the media? Business." On a lighter note, a Center article asserts that the quality of our information base is being rapidly eroded by "the big-business nature of the media and the increasing concentration of their ownership in fewer and fewer hands." That business controls the daily media has been fact for 20 years, and the control is still getting stronger. It has taken us 10 years to objectively prove that children who watch more violent TV programs tend to be more violent. Perhaps we should consider media more subjectively.

Try to imagine the sight of a house exploding into a rubble of bricks, glass and wood. Try to imagine what the people in the house would look like after the terrible explosion.

Chances are you imagined what it would look or sound much better than your double 30 years ago would have because you've seen it on television.

I can't sit in a room with a television on and talk responsibly to another person. Can you? The images of television seem more relevant and more credible than physical reality. Now that TV has made the adjective "commercial" a noun, even commercials seem more real than what really happens in social life. Have you noticed how commercial actresses are not the lavish beauties they once were? Why those people look just like you and me? TV says: Leave the imagining to us.

We are the consumers of the producers' programs and to make those programs profitable, advertising was invented. Advertising is sophisticated Pavlovian conditioning. And if you don't think it works then you are wrong. Freedom of choice has been dwindling ever since the human animal institutionalized society. Commercial communication has brought this control to a pinnacle.

In one of the finest articles I've ever read, "Demise of Dialogue," Milton Mayer says, "Before the Communication Revolution transformed communication into unimmunization there were all sorts of groups meeting regularly to talk about life and death, equality and quality, love and law, and the like. (But) the conditions of siege are not the conditions of dialogue." They are not, but they should be.

As in all megaversity environments, we at MSU are treated to a media package of mixed blessings. On the one hand there is such a variety of perspectives and media vehicles that stimulation is insured. Side-walk sloganeering is one of the more interesting: Will you be the next rape victim???

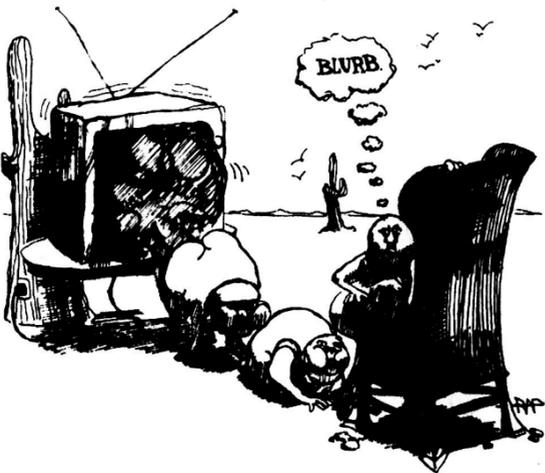

But there is such a large information flow on campus that you simply have to choose to ignore much of it. To ignore is to consciously make oneself ignorant. Everyone involved is under an information overload. Students are often more up-to-date than teachers. Biocybernetic networking appears to be the ultimate information media, approaching McLuhan's programmed consciousness and bypassing computer simulation. Daily facts gleaned from the media will become readily available, rather than lost in the multitude.

More responsible, relevant newspaper content design will go a long way in that direction and it seems that the State News is going to go that way. Newly elected Editor-in-chief Michael Tanimura feels that "when the media says something is true people believe it. We have a tremendous duty, it you will, to be sensitive to what's happening and to get out the facts. Putting out a newspaper cannot be just a job." Managing Editor Bob Ourlian says "The State News board of Directors seems to be mellowing out. Under someone like Mike the State News can actualize its potential. It is probably going to become a student paper." Responsibility.

Energy tip of the week: Due to the underwhelming response to a call for energy conservation ideas, there won't be a tip this week other than to optimize the use of your own. (Second Law of Thermodynamics).

It's What's Not Happening: The WANT club (We Are Not Timid) will be meeting to organize regular Center dialogues, design a future studies program and look each other in the eye as soon as it has some members. The Smokers Unknown Club met last week to exchange carcinogenic tobaccos and black-lung jokes. People aren't (four-letter word for sexual intercourse prohibited by the State News Management) around now as much as before.

Privacy intrusions

The news is full of legislators playing politics with crime and constitutional rights. Capital punishment, wiretapping, bail denial and repressive sentencing measures may make good PR, but they have little effect on deterring crime.

While there are many genuine reforms needed in the fight against crime, the legislature can do one simple thing that would provide immediate help — the repeal of criminal penalties on private possession and use of marijuana!

The Detroit Police Narcotics Division and the State Police Uniform Crime Reports indicate that there were 17,577 arrests from marijuana in 1975. A California Senate Committee estimated that $1,340 is spent on each marijuana arrest. Hence, our legislature may have wasted as much as $23.5 million in valuable criminal justice resources in 1975 alone.

One half of those between the ages of 18 and 30 have tried marijuana at least once. Why impose the hardships of an arrest, arrest record and often a prison term on otherwise law-abiding young people?

Arresting marijuana users offends constitutional rights — especially privacy. Enforcement relies on entrapment, illegal searches and other means which violate civil liberties.

The legislature is now considering (House Bill 4603) decriminalizing the private use and possession of marijuana. Your readers should demand that their representatives stop the waste of public money and intrusions upon privacy.

Ad policy

Months ago the State News proudly proclaimed that it had a new advertising policy, after receiving several complaints about the use of a "dial-a-joke" gimmick by a local bar in an attempt to get people to listen to their phone advertisement of future specials. The State News took that case seriously enough to write an article dealing with possible legal actions for the alleged deceptive advertising. The new policy implemented by the State News staff included a requirement that a company's or organization's name be included in its ad.

On Wednesday I was "tricked" into calling a number about something that "may change (my) life." Instead of an offer for a million dollars or my choice of a Charlie Angel, I found that a young lady on the other end had Found It, and that I may also Find It. She offered to send me a book about Jesus Christ.

I am not so upset about being "tricked" by "deceptive advertising." I just did what the dial-a-joke victims should have done: I hung up. What I don't like, however, is the State News' inconsistency in policy. The religious organization which sponsored the ad was not listed. Maybe the State News made a mistake and forgot that it had bragged about such a policy. Perhaps the State News changed the policy and felt that an announcement of such change was not newsworthy. Or perhaps the State News lied about the initiation of the policy, so as to satisfy irate students while not offending revenue suppliers. Is there still a policy against such advertising?

EDITOR'S NOTE: The State News advertising manager, Dan Gerow, said the policy was only for local ads and not national ads. He also said that adding the name of the sponsor would ruin the "teaser effect" of the national campaign. Democracy waning

When you say in last Thursday's editorial that "MSU should refuse to support political regimes which are repugnant to the principles of democracy," you are ruling out contact with some 73 per cent of world governments: of the world's 158 nations and 51 territories, the people in just 57 of them live in complete freedom, according to the 1976 Freedom House Survey. In fact, as Sen. Moynihan has pointed out, democracy today is in the position of monarchy at the turn of the century, being a waning system of government.

Your eagerness to apply U.S. political principles to other cultures only serves to display your ignorance of the world.

Uninformed

Monoprint, etching, lithography, serigraphy, collography, wood block, linoleum cuts and wood engraving are several art forms that should be studied by Marti Benedetti before she makes another attempt at reviewing exhibitions of art. Her apparent lack of familiarity with these printmaking techniques would indicate her poor preparation for coverage of the student show at the Kresge Gallery and makes one question the validity of her opinions. A reviewer who confuses monoprint with painting, labels photography a "trend" in art and criticizes creative experimentation ("innovation") among student artists could be expected to overlook one of the show's most outstanding areas.

But perhaps the omission of printing from Benedetti's critique is better, than an uninformed opinion.

Frost hit

In watching the Frost-Nixon interview television last Wednesday night, I was very dismayed with David Frost. At the beginning of the program he appeared very unprofessional, in that he had common courtesy. He rudely interrupted Richard Nixon and tried to speak at the same time Nixon did.

It is my opinion that the public would see Frost ask Nixon the controversial questions about Watergate. It is my opinion that the reason for this interview is to hear Nixon's side of the story. I would like to hear a discussion, an argument.

Baffled

It baffles me that East Lansing can unite behind a person like Mary Lou who considers the enactment of a political exercise "irresponsible."

Perhaps Ms. Luttrell should be writing Atty. Gen. Frank Kelly for clarification that the right to place petitions on election ballots is the Home Rule Act for Cities P.A. 279 of 1967 protects this right. The law was created for people, for people.

Everyone has a different idea on the best exercise control over our lives. control has been something that has widely considered in this town. I find it discouraging to find people like Luttrell, who consider free exercise of control methods to be "irresponsible."

Drinking age contested in Senate public hearing

By MICKI MAYNARD
State News Staff Writer
The Union Ballroom was the site Tuesday of testimony on two Senate bills that would raise Michigan's legal drinking age.

The Senate Commerce Committee is considering bills sponsored by Sens. James DeSana, D-Wyandotte, and Alvin DeGrow, D-Pigeon, changing the law from the present 18 years of age.

DeSana's bill would raise the age to 19 while DeGrow's measure would put the legal limit back to 21, where it was before the state's age of majority was changed to 18 in 1972.

In arguing for his bill, DeSana said he had heard many young adults say the state wanted to take away their "right" to drink.

"It's a privilege, not a right," he said. The Wyandotte native has collected stacks of material from school principals as well as newspaper and television editorials supporting his bill.

"In fact, I haven't been able to find any newspaper or television station saying the state should leave the age at 18," he said.

(A State News editorial Tuesday supported the idea of leaving the drinking age at the present limit.)

DeSana said along with raising the age to 19, the state needed to step up its alcohol education program. His colleague, DeGrow, said he agreed with the necessity for education but insisted the age should be raised back to 21.

"I feel raising it to 19 won't solve the problem," he said. "You have to raise it to at least 20. By that age, kids have drifted off to college or jobs and they aren't around the younger kids."

One school principal said he would be glad to see the age raised to either limit, but that he would be "delighted" to see it at 21.

Grand Rapids East Catholic High School Principal Jerry Victor told the Commerce Committee he had suspended 27 students so far this year for drinking or possession of drugs.

Though the suspensions did not come as a result of school incidents taking place during the school day, but at athletic events or parties, Victor said many students were under heavy peer group pressure to drink.

He said he had found a change in substance abuse since the drinking age was lowered. "Hard drug use has gone down," Victor said, "but the use of marijuana and alcohol has gone up. We're never going to solve the problem completely, but this will help it."

Opposition to both bills came from Durwood Root, president of the Michigan Licensed Beverage Association. Root said the state had no justification for making the change.

"Drinking by young people was a problem even during Prohibition," Root said. He recalled several incidents during his high school years in the 1920s in which seniors would come to school drunk.

Root said it was unfair for the state to give an age group a right and then take it away.

"When you give persons their civil rights and then take them away you're committing a great error," he said.

The beverage lobbyist read to the committee a study made in Grand Rapids showing that drivers who had blood alcohol levels of .05 (intoxication is .10) were more careful than persons with no alcohol intake.

He labeled as "gobbledygook" a report by the state Office of Substance Abuse Services (OSAS) recommending that the age be raised, and added that OSAS's evidence was inconclusive.

The committee will hold another public hearing in the Union Ballroom Tuesday at 10 a.m.

Sen. Don Bishop at the Tuesday morning hearing on raising the drinking age at the MSU Union.

Segregation trend seen

By ROXANNE L. BROWN
State News Staff Writer
An MSU researcher predicts that unless stiffer penalties for housing discrimination are enacted, Michigan's suburbs will be more segregated than the state's central cities by 1980.

Joe T. Darden, an associate professor of geography and metropolitan studies, recently completed a study of residential segregation of blacks in central cities and suburbs.

According to Darden, when a comparison is made of the suburban distribution of whites to that of blacks, blacks tend to remain clustered in certain areas, even in higher-income sections of a community.

"Normally as groups leave the central city, as with the Irish, Jews, etc. . . they become more dispersed, but blacks remain clustered in a few areas," Darden said.

Darden blames housing discrimination entirely for this uneven pattern of distribution. He said because of the fact that even wealthy blacks are affected, the skyrocketing cost of suburban housing is not a factor to be considered.

"The cost of housing has never been a reason for segregation," Darden said. "This is a myth. Blacks with money cannot live anywhere they want to."

Darden has examined data for the Standard Metropolitan Statistical Areas (SMSA) of Ann Arbor, Bay City, Detroit, Flint, Grand Rapids, Jackson, Kalamazoo, Lansing, Muskegon and Saginaw. In the suburbs of Flint, Grand Rapids and Saginaw, Darden found that the black population more than doubled from 1960 to 1970. Suburban Flint experienced the greatest percentage of black migration and suburban Detroit had the lowest.

These patterns of migration can be explained in part, Darden said, because of black suburbanization.

"Some blacks migrate out of the ghetto as individuals (Detroit), but most blacks get to the suburbs through a process called ghetto expansion (Flint), spreading beyond the boundary of the central city," Darden explained.

Darden revealed that though there was substantial migration of blacks into the suburbs in several areas during the 1960s, the suburban black population numbers remained proportionately small.

"Only in suburban Ann Arbor was the black population greater than four per cent. Even though blacks in Michigan suburbs have a higher socio-economic status than those in central cities, these groups remain equally segregated," Darden stated.

The researcher said that the real estate brokers privately construct plans for housing discrimination and that they also keep black real estate brokers out of these private organizations.

Darden suggests federal legislation to correct this discrimination:

"Housing brokers must be regulated so persons can check and find out exactly what houses are available."

He added that a computerized system is the most sufficient check. "A computerized listing service should be available, one in which all houses are listed until they are actually sold," he said.

Currently, housing brokers found guilty of discrimination are only fined. Darden suggests a much stiffer penalty.

"If brokers found guilty of discrimination had their licenses revoked, then more of them would think twice about it," Darden said.

LANSING — Lansing City Council passed a resolution at its Monday meeting urging the Tri-County Regional Planning Commission to appropriate funds to the Capital Area Transportation Authority (CATA) to purchase a new garage and office facility.

But there was considerable debate before the resolution passed by a 5-3 vote.

The proposed facility, located at 4615 Tranter Ave., would be used as part of a 15-year transportation plan for the area, said Councilmember Louis Adado.

"It is our committee's opinion to move ahead so we don't lose time in getting federal grants," said Adado, public safety committee chairperson.

But Councilmember James Blair expressed concern over the cost of the new facility, and said CATA had originally told City Council that the facility would cost far less.

Funding for CATA's projects urged by Lansing City Council

Blair said CATA officials originally cited the cost of renovating the Tranter facility at $700,000, but now they say it will cost "close to $3 million."

"We're talking about $2.3 million," Blair said. "I would rather put that extreme amount of money into helping some of the residents along Tranter," he said.

"The improvements that they are asking for are way out of line. It feels like this is some way to cover up a bad mistake in judgment," he said.

Blair said that CATA turned down proposals to purchase a facility at sites on either Aurelius Road or South Washington Avenue, both of which would have cost far less.

However, Adado and Councilmember William Brenke both said that these sites would be inadequate. "We want something to be proud of and something that will last," Adado said.

"We (the council) all want better transportation," Blair said. "But why waste federal dollars? I'm not saying scrap the whole thing, but cut it down a little."

The council also approved the transfer of $7,700 to the city clerk so that the charter election can be held on June 13.

In other action:

- The council received a recommendation from Mayor Gerald W. Graves that the city's pornography ordinance be amended. Graves expressed concern about the inadequacies of the ordinance, especially in regard to child pornography. He also said there has not been a conviction since the adoption of the ordinance.
- A public hearing was set for May 23 on the General Motors tax abatement issue.
- Councilmember Terry McKane announced that the budget for fiscal 1977-78 would be adopted at next week's meeting.

Alternatives to overcrowding of jails proposed

By MARK FABIAN

State News Staff Writer members of the public voiced opposition to expanding Ingham County Jail as a means of solving the problem of overcrowding at a meeting of the Ingham County Ad Hoc Jail Committee Monday.

Approximately 20 people attended the meeting at which all proposals were alternatives to building a new jail or expanding the current one.

John Veenstra, of East Lansing, said most of the people in jail are not there for committing serious crimes but there for civil offenses such as not paying child support.

Veenstra called this an "unconscionable practice."

He added that about one-third of those in the jail are being tried and many of them have been in longer than the 90-day limit.

"We are coming up with the wrong answer to the problem," Veenstra said. "We can substantially reduce the problem by having speedier trials. They have been doing this in Wayne County and have reduced the population by one-third."

He said the raw facts seem to indicate no need for an increase in size and that the jail may in fact be too large.

Veenstra put the Lansing branch of the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) on record as opposing the expansion of the jail. The ACLU said building the jail would violate rights to a speedy trial, equal protection and would constitute cruel and unusual punishment.

Robert Scott, from the Coalition for Justice, said those sentenced for misdemeanors constitute a lower risk than those sentenced for felonies.

"I would like to see a greater use of probation than is occurring at the current time," he said.

Scott also stressed the need for halfway houses and said consideration should be given to interrupted sentences where a person works in the community during the day and returns to jail at night.

"This would permit the person to be a constructive force rather than idling away in jail," he said.

Scott added that reducing sentences after the individual has indicated a readiness to be released is another way of cutting down the jail population.

Scott also proposed work camps with modular housing units as another alternative. He said the cost is a relatively small fraction of any other security facility and the construction time is minimal.

Zolton Ferency, professor of criminal justice at MSU, recommended diversion based on careful examination of the individual, instead of putting people in jail.

"There are other things you can do with human beings once you find out their needs," he said.

Ferency urged the committee not to react to public pressure or listen to the demagogs who say crime will increase if people aren't put in jail.

"The release on recognizance program got off to a shaky start but has proven itself," he said.

Ferency added that something needs to be done about poor people who are only in jail because they cannot make bail. He recommended adding more magistrates and night courts.

The Rev. Ray Kacirk, director of the New Way Inn halfway house, recommended that halfway houses be part of the expansion. He said there are houses already existing that can be used for this purpose.

Joan Trezise, chairperson of the special jail committee, said suggestions for reducing the population through the court system are good but they are not within the scope of the committee. She said the committee has to look at the "reality of numbers" and assume the number of inmates will not decline. She said the committee must decide what alternatives exist with this in mind.

Flexibility and performance. The Majestic System is designed to fit changing needs while maintaining exceptional performance for the dollar. You'll experience the same overall kind of sound, the same degree of clarity, accuracy, and spaciousness as far more expensive systems. This is due, in large part, to the Advent 2W speakers, which offer everything but the lowest half octave of bass response as the legendary Advent Loudspeaker. The result is a more natural sound for all types of music from a compact bookshelf speaker. The companion Scott R-306 receiver is the successor to their highly acclaimed R-31 and is rated "best buy" by a leading consumer rating organization. The Scott accommodates future components, has a sophisticated FM section incorporating a phase-lock loop to improve stereo separation, muting which eliminates annoying interstation noises, and remains permanently in alignment. Campion goes route in sweep

By MIKE LITAKER
State News Sports Writer

Rob Campion didn't have any kicks coming Tuesday afternoon. He's saving those for next fall when football season gets underway. Campion, a combination football punter and baseball pitcher, went the distance for the first time this season in the nightcap against Western Michigan to post a 6-2 victory and a sweep of the doubleheader. MSU won the opener 4-3 in eight innings.

The pair of wins gives the Spartans a three-game win string to work with going into this weekend's conference play with Northwestern and Wisconsin.

But it was Campion's four-hit performance that probably earned him a start this weekend in raising his record to 2-1.

"I feel like I was keeping the ball low and they were hitting it but it was always right at someone, so I figured what the heck, I'll just keep doing that," said Campion, who failed to strike out any Western hitters.

The former Lansing Catholic Central place-kicking star saw action in only one game of his more familiar sport last fall and didn't figure prominently in baseball coach Danny Litwhiler's plans at the start of this season, either. But his last two starts have vaulted Campion's name into future decisions.

"As of right now I'm concentrating on playing baseball because I'm doing more but I'll be out there again in the fall for football because that's a heckuva time, too," Campion assured.

Getting the first game of the day under their belts wasn't as easy for the Spartans after they blew a two-run lead in the seventh to force the extra frame.

The chilly weather Tuesday must have lulled the Broncos into a false impression that Christmas was in the air because they began passing out presents in the Spartans' winning inning. Ty Willingham stroled into first on an error by the second baseman and after one out, wound up in scoring position when Weller's infield pop-up fell next to the first baseman.

Shortstop Rodger Bastien's two-out bases-loaded single in the bottom of the eighth eventually won the game for reliever Jim Cotter, who came on for starter Larry Pashnick in the sixth.

Pashnick was coasting along with a two-hitter before Litwhiler hooked him in favor of his ace relief expert with runners on second and third.

Cotter got out of the inning on a quick double play but was knocked around for a couple of runs in the seventh and loaded the sacks in the eighth before getting out unscathed, thanks to another twin-killing, the Spartans' third of the game.

MSU fell behind 1-0 early in the contest on a first-inning rally by the Broncos. But Al Weston doubled in Willingham in the sixth to tie the score and break the MSU record for two-baggers in a season with 18.

Jerry Weller followed with his ninth homer of the year over the left-field barrier for the second of his four hits on the afternoon.

Campion got the support he needed right from the start in the second game on Cliff Northey's bases-loaded single in the first. Western tied it at 2-2 in the third on a couple of long sacrifice flies before MSU put together the winning cushion in the fourth.

Bastien started the three-run inning with a double to score Randy Hop, who had led off with a single. Ken Robinson brought Northey in with another safety and allowed himself to get into a rundown that allowed Bastien to cross the plate.

MSU finished its scoring in the fifth when Willingham opened with a double and raced home on Weller's single.

The Seattle Mariners' Rupert Jones slides safely into second base before the throw gets to the Toronto Blue Jays' Pedro Garcia — who is a Detroit cast-off. Toronto won the first meeting between the two expansion clubs Monday, 10-4, and is still one place ahead of the Tigers in the American League standings.

Spartan net squad faces EMU today

MSU's tennis team will shoot for a 7-7 season with a win over Eastern Michigan today at the varsity courts at 3 p.m.

Coach Stan Drobac's netters are coming off some of its best tennis of the year after beating Indiana, 7-2, and losing to Ohio State in a match that was closer than the 7-2 score would indicate.

Eastern shouldn't prove as tough as Big Ten power Ohio State as the Hurons are only 5-7 for the season. For comparison's purposes — Eastern lost to U-M, 9-0, and beat Central, 6-3, while MSU lost to U-M, 7-2, and beat Central, 9-0.

Spartans most improved player of late as he was the only netter to win both his matches over the weekend at No. 6. Eastern's best record-holder is No. 5 singles Lynn Boziuk (12-7), and he'll face MSU's Steve Carter (7-3).

MSU will continue with its regular line of Tom Gudelsky at No. 1, Kevin McNulty at No. 2, Tighe Keating at No. 3, John Boukamp at No. 4.

MSU track signs two

IM Notes

Today is the deadline for the intramural golf tournament that will be held Saturday and Sunday at Forest Akers Golf Course. Entries should be turned in at 201 Men's IM Bldg. by 5 p.m. The tournament is open to students, faculty and staff for both individuals and teams.

MSU has signed Dennis Lewis of Ypsilanti and Tim Proulx of Brighton to national letters of intent to enroll next fall.

Lewis won the state Class A high jump title as a junior and has already leaped 7 feet 2 inches this season.

Proulx raced to the state Class A cross-country title in 1976 and has a best of 4:17 in the mile.

It may be time to repot your plants. A slowdown in leaf and stem growth, the need for frequent watering, and roots growing on the soil surface or out of the drainage hole are signs that your houseplants need repotting.

Michigan State University horticulturists advise carefully tipping the plant out of the pot to check. A solid mass of roots with little or no soil visible indicates the plant needs repotting. Use a container about two inches deeper and wider than the old one.

Q. My philodendron has a strange new growth on it that looks something like a little banana. What is it?
A. It's a flower. Philodendrons do not commonly bloom in the home, but it can happen. It's nothing to worry about.

Q. How do I care for my gloxinia after it's bloomed?
A. Continue to water and fertilize every one to two months until the foliage starts to die down. Then reduce watering and stop fertilizing. When the leaves are dead, set the container in a cool, dark place for two to four months. When new growth appears, repot in fresh soil and resume watering and fertilizing. It will bloom again in about three months.

Golfers prepare to host Big 10

By JOHN SINGLER
State News Sports Writer

The tanned features of MSU men's golf coach Bruce Fossum have lately become a study in disappointment, concern and determination.

The disappointment is over a shortage of depth, the concern is about the upcoming Big Ten Tournament, to be held on the Spartans' Forest Akers Golf Course, and the determination is to rally the troops and improve on last spring's sixth-place showing in the Big Ten.

By the time the first players are ready to tee it up late next week, a smile of optimism may begin to play on Fossum's face.

After this past weekend, which saw MSU play 72 holes of golf over four days, there is no more tournament play until the Big Ten.

Gary Domagalski, Rick Grover and Mark Brooks have been granted exemptions from qualifying for the Big Ten. Seven golfers will begin the playoff for the other three spots today.

They will play 18 holes and more both Monday and Tuesday next week to determine the Spartan team for the conference tourney.

After a disappointing showing in their own tournament Friday and Saturday, the Spartans were in Kalamazoo for the Western Michigan Bronco Invitational Sunday and Monday, placing ninth among 18 teams.

Domagalski was runner-up by four shots to a golfer he will face in the Big Ten tournament, Wisconsin's Dave Preboosh.

Domagalski shot 140 on other Spartan scores including Joe Marx, 157; Grover, 160; Brooks, 167; Mark Egly, 170; and Eric Gersonde, 171.

Michigan won the team title edging second-place Western by one stroke. Despite Preboosh's medal, the Bronco could do no better than 11th.

Brooks, Grover and Domagalski boast the three lowest stroke averages on the team. Domagalski has 74.8, Brooks at 77.1 and Grover is averaging 78.2, each after 12 rounds tournament play.

Club Sports

The MSU sports club is presenting a "Gong Show" Tuesday at the Rainbow Ranch to raise money for the operation of MSU's many club sports.

Contestants are needed for the show and applications can be picked up in 231 Men's IM Bldg. Anyone desiring more information can call the club sports office at 353-5108.

Heathcote spending his days dreaming

Yep, head MSU basketball coach Jud Heathcote is dreaming these days. It's the pleasant kind of daydreaming you might do on a sunny afternoon, but for Heathcote, it's his job. He's busy piecing together the possible lineups he might use for next year . . . and next year . . . and next year . . .

The planning is all the more enjoyable since it was a luxury Heathcote couldn't afford last year. His team lacked depth more than any other in the Big Ten.

But if this year's recruits develop as expected, you could witness one of the most phenomenal one-year transformations ever accomplished.

First you have what Heathcote calls his basic unit — Earvin Johnson plus the four returning starters. That means Jim Coutré at center, Johnson and Greg Kelsner at forwards and Bob Chapman and Terry Donnelly at the guards.

Now the fun starts.

The first variation is quite simple. Insert the best Michigan high school center, Jay Vincent, into the pivot. Heathcote does not doubt Vincent can challenge for the starting job.

But what if Vincent develops into a power forward? Let's see, move Vincent to forward and Johnson to guard and now Terry Donnelly sits down.

That leaves the pivot open again. Coutré? But there's that seven-foot guy from Sweden.

That seven foot guy from Sweden is named Sten Feldreich. Heathcote describes him as an outstanding prospect who could start his first year if he "develops as we hope."

Some of that developing is still going on as Feldreich still has 20 games yet to play for the Swedish national team. Games against teams like Czechoslovakia, Russia and Italy.

At 215 pounds, Feldreich's drawback is his strength, and Heathcote is quick to add aggressiveness to that. Aggressiveness can overcome a strength weakness and most likely Feldreich will be working on that his last 20 games.

So now you've got Feldreich at center, maybe Johnson and Kelsner at forwards and Chapman and Donnelly at guard. But Chapman's in foul trouble and Donnelly's not hitting from outside.

Enter Len "Lee" Williams, the 6-foot guard who's the highest scoring player in Chicago public school history at 32 points per game.

Williams displayed his reserve by scoring 16 points in the last three minutes of regulation plus the overtime as Jackson Community College downed the MSU JVs in a miraculous comeback earlier this year at Jenison Fieldhouse.

Heathcote describes him as a great one-on-one player who still has a lot of street ball in him.

So send in Williams. Maybe he hits a few quick ones and maybe he doesn't. What now? Time for a little "Magic."

Herein lies the key to all of Heathcote's planning. Johnson can play forward or guard, and no matter where he plays he'll be running the fast break.

Johnson's position will be determined by the play of the forwards and guards. Good play at forward will move Johnson to guard, and vice versa.

Add to all of this Ron Charles, the Spartans' most improved player of last year. To echo Heathcote, "and how can you keep a player like Ronnie out of the line-up?"

OK, OK. Enough's enough. But you get the picture — depth.

It's like a new toy to Heathcote, one he'll probably get hours of enjoyment out of.

Suddenly I remember the winter snow storms and Heathcote's dismay. Tuesday he went to watch the Spartans play basketball.

The East Lansing sunshine is looking pretty good to Heathcote.

Pleasant dreams, Jud.

Students solve pet problem in different ways

By PAM WEAR
State News Staff Writer

What do you do if you're an animal lover and an MSU student, too?

Being both might not seem a problem, but it is if you want to own a pet and live on campus, too. The University ordinances allow on-campus students to have only fish as pets.

This rule has not kept MSU students from having other pets, though. Some have solved the problem by simply living off campus.

Dave Snyder, a senior in criminal justice, lived in an East Lansing apartment for two years. He had to move to a Lansing house in January when he got his German shepherd puppy because his apartment lease didn't allow dogs.

Snyder said he knew he would have to move when he got the dog, but added that it was worth it.

"I just fell in love with him when I saw him," Snyder said of his puppy. "I don't have time for him, but I make time. He's a good pet, and I think I owe the time to him. He goes everywhere with me except classes."

Cindy Ashton, a resident assistant in Mason Hall, bought a kitten while taking classes at MSU last summer. Since she lived in a fraternity then, she could keep the kitten with no trouble.

When classes started in the fall, Ashton found a way to have her cat and still live in the dormitory: she keeps the cat with her sister, who lives in the East Lansing area.

"I think pets are important to students," Ashton said. "At home, everyone belongs to you, and up here (at school) you need something that's your very own, something that's sort of related to you."

Mary Rau, an MSU medical student, lives in a house and has a black rabbit named Doc.

"I had to have an animal that would be happy in small quarters," Rau said, explaining her choice of a rabbit as a pet.

Rau said she knew a medical student who used to have a six-foot Burmese tree python, and the snake was allowed to run loose in the house.

"This one wrapped around the refrigerator coils and we couldn't get him out. I was afraid of it at first — it would hide in drawers and in the bathtub — but after awhile you got used to having it around."

Mark Maynard, a junior in marketing, said last year he had a small aquarium and fed it crickets.

"It was a great conversation piece," Maynard said of the spider. "It's no big deal to have something like a dog or cat, but people are more in awe when you get that thing out and they see it walk across your hand."

Some pet lovers might think the University pet ordinance is too confining, but one student has stayed within those rules and still has a unique pet. Charlie Rehmann, a senior majoring in political science, has an aquarium full of salt water fish — and a sea anemone.

"The anemone is a circular jellyfish-like thing and it has tentacles," Rehmann said. "When fish come by, he attacks them and the tentacles pull the fish in and he eats them. Most of the fish are getting smart now and don't swim close to him."

"This anemone was hard to find. It's from the Philippines. We buy ocean fish and cut them up, and feed him about every other day."

Student Council OKs judicial process changes

By NANCY ROGIER
State News Staff Writer

Student Council took positive action Tuesday by voting to approve amendments to Article IV of the Academic Freedom Report (AFR) and clarified its council code of operations by adopting a series of changes, corrections and additions.

The amendments to Article IV, which deals with student judicial processes, changes the decision-making authority of the Residence Halls Association Judiciary (RHAJ). The proposal gives RHAJ responsibility to deliver a guilty or not guilty verdict in the case of a student who has been charged with violating University regulations.

If a student is determined to be guilty, the amendments also give RHAJ the authority to deliver a penalty, which can be a warning, a warning probation or a disciplinary probation. Warnings consist of an official written reprimand and are issued in minor violation cases.

A warning probation indicates that further violations may result in more severe action and disciplinary probation indicates that further violations may lead to suspension.

Disciplinary probation could take the form of denying the use of a car on campus, withdrawing the privilege of representing a living unit in residence hall or inter-hall events or moving the student to a new residence hall or out of the residence hall system altogether, subject to approval of the vice president for Student Affairs.

Previously, the AFR stated that decision-making authority and the delivery of a penalty would rest with the All-University Student Judiciary (AUSJ). Penalties had the same titles (warning, warning probation, etc.) but consisted of different provisions, such as the possible notification of the student's parents of his or her probationary status.

The Article IV amendments were approved by the University Students Affairs Committee (USAC) in February and will be up for the approval of Academic Council sometime this term. They were initiated by RHAJ last year to replace the judiciary's outdated authority in delivering penalties.

Prior to the amendments, the only penalty the judiciary could give was a living-unit probation, which restricted a student to his or her room by an established curfew.

Though an ad hoc judicial review committee has been set up by Academic Council to review current all-University judicial proceedings, RHAJ members said in a memo to USAC they felt the study would have no effect in changing their decision-making authority for a "considerable length of time," if at all. RHAJ members consequently initiated the changes themselves.

Significant action to clean up the Student Council Code of Operations was taken with the passage of a proposal to prohibit smoking during meeting time. Councilmember Denise Gordon spoke in support of the proposal, which was sponsored by councilmember Richard Gubitz in an effort to protect councilmembers from the dangers of cigaret smoke.

Most members were quite vehement in backing the proposal. Among them was Mark Widrechner, natural science representative, who said the only thing cigaret smoke did was to provide a good insecticide for his hibiscus plant.

Academic Council was scheduled to convene prior to the Student Council meeting Tuesday, but did not meet due to lack of a quorum. Agenda items for Academic Council, which included a report of the tenure system and proposed amendments to Article II of the AFR to be approved, will be brought up at the May 31 meeting.

FDA orders recall of pepper products

The Food and Drug Administration has ordered a recall of a variety of chili pepper products.

The recall affects 24,162 cases of chili products manufactured last year and distributed nationwide. The FDA said the canner failed to control acidity during processing, posing the possibility of bacteria growth in the products.

All of the recalled products carry code numbers stamped on the can that end with the numbers 76.

The recall includes:
• Whole green chilis. In four-ounce cans: Western Valley, Old El Paso and Mountain Pass brands. In 10-ounce cans: Old El Paso and Mountain Pass brands. In 26-ounce cans: Mountain Pass, Million Star, Nobel, Silver Rey and Nugget brands.

• Chopped green chilis. In four-ounce cans: Western Valley, Old El Paso and Mountain Pass brands. In seven-ounce cans: Mountain Pass and Old El Paso brands. In 26-ounce cans: Old El Paso, Mountain Pass, Nobel and Nugget brands.

• Hot green chili pepper (jalapeno) in 3 1/2-ounce cans: Mountain Pass and Old El Paso brands.

• Green chili strips in 26-ounce cans: Old El Paso, Million Star, Nobel, Silver Rey and Nugget brands.

FOR 'U' RELATIONS, ATHLETICS SMSU to form new cabinets

NUNZIO M. LUPO, News Staff Writer

The SMSU Student Board is taking action soon on the formation of three new cabinets. The role of another cabinet, said Kent Barry, Board president.

Three proposed cabinets are: University Relations, Athletics and a cabinet to implement the legislation of the Student Board. There was no name for the cabinet yet.

Barry said the cabinet would be used for "letting them (various campus groups and administrators) know where we stand."

The Athletic Relations Cabinet will deal specifically with the athletic department, Barry said. It will promote student relations with the athletic department and assist the athletic department with public relations.

One item the cabinet might possibly tackle would be the Intramural Building usage policy. Barry said he hopes the cabinet will be able to work out a provision to allow students to bring guests with them when using the facilities.

The other cabinet would be an "ASMSU Operations" cabinet that would implement the Student Board's policies. This cabinet would be in charge of projects such as the ASMSU Book Exchange, Barry said.

The new cabinets will be discussed at next Tuesday's Student Board meeting. The cabinet duties are currently being outlined as well as the code of operations amendments they may incur, he said.

"There's so much work being done in putting them together," he said.

The Student Board will also look at the duties of the existing Legal Services Cabinet. Barry said the cabinet needed "a definition of what their role should be." He added that it was not to give legal advice.

Petitioning also opened Tuesday for the director of the Legislative Relations cabinet. The cabinet is responsible for representing ASMSU at the state Capitol and East Lansing city meetings.

Petitioning for the other cabinets will begin sometime later this term and will continue into fall term of next year.

Universal studios is the GM of the film world, a dream factory with two guards at every gate. Chas. Floyd Johnson manufactures shiny, streamlined dream visions of the American experience: he coproduces James Garner's "The Rockford File."

Johnson has a corner on the dream machine. He produces a top-40 show where he can explore the legal snares and pitfalls that mine the American system of justice. A lawyer by training, an actor by avocation, Johnson is only the second black producer in network television history.

In six years, he has risen from the mail room at Universal — where all executives start out (who are not related to the head of the studio) — and moved up through the ranks. He only spent four days in the mail room. As he puts it, "I was the most overqualified mailboy Universal had."

He had been working as a patent and copyright attorney for UNESCO in Paris on an accord to allow Third World nations legal use of copyrighted materials at fee scales they could afford, until such time as they could afford the payments called for under International Copyright Agreements.

"I decided that I was going to come to Hollywood and be an actor," Johnson said, so he abandoned the security of patent law and the urbane civility of UNESCO, for the seedy, sham kingdom dominated by the Black Tower, the offices of Universal Studios. Four days after Johnson came to the mail room, he said, "They pulled me up. One, because I was on the list; two, because I was black; and three, because I had a law degree. I had a lot of things working for me."

"I worked (as production coordinator) on 'Alias Smith and Jones' and 'Cool Million.' When I came in, they'd never had a black coordinator at Universal. Roy Huggins, executive producer and creator of both these series, had never had a black coordinator. I was a little leery, 'cause Chris Lucky, now one of the business affairs heads here, was their coordinator. He was very bright. I didn't know if I could match up because I didn't know what I was doing. Be that as it may, I went from 'Alias Smith and Jones' to 'Toma' and a couple of 'Jigsaw' episodes, all Huggins' shows."

Johnson said Huggins allowed him to learn a lot. He described Roy Huggins as a "pedagogic person" who let him go to rough cuts, dailies, music and effects runs.

"I took all of their shows to the network, so I had to go to all his rough cuts to explain where the inserts went, and where the music went and what was a story problem," he said. "It was a great experience."

Johnson also worked on "Tenafly" as production coordinator. James McEachin, who starred in the series, wanted Johnson for associate producer, but Levinson and Link, who created the series,

RALPH TOWNER: Diary (ECM 1032 ST)

JACK DeJOHNETTE: Pictures (ECM-1-1079)

EBERHARD WEBER: The Following Morning (ECM-1-1084)

The most impressive and professional jazz tour to sweep this country last year was an entourage of highly talented musicians from the United States and Europe — the likes of which included Gary Burton, Eberhard Weber, Jack DeJohnette, Ralph Towner, John on the award-winning packaging, with most album covers being blue, his favorite color. In charge of distribution is the balding Stoewassand. He packs all albums for mailing while he negotiates with the Polydor/Phonodisc conglomerate, the U.S. distributor for ECM compositions.

Most beautiful sound next to silence: ECM

ECM can be considered an extension of Eicher's personality. The sound quality of ECM albums is emphatically superior to other recorded jazz, an outgrowth of Eicher's artistic integrity and high musical ethics. The most startling aspect in the operations of ECM is the relationship between artists and Eicher. At ECM there are no contracts. A handshake binds the artist to the label. The idea of "pushing the product" is unheard of. The philosophy of Eicher is best understood in ECM's motto: "the most beautiful sound next to silence."

Another facet of the ECM sound is that it is virtually timeless, as evident in the Towner release, "Diary." Though recorded and produced in 1974, this exquisite flow of musical moods created by the founder of the musically improvising group Oregon is outstanding, escaping all elements of time.

Towner is a master of moods. He understands the power of music and the instruments he uses to convey moods. Towner's remarkable perception of the 12-string and classical guitar is breathtaking. Towner is an artist who paints peaceful portraits of harmony with the smooth strokes and sensuous strummings of his guitar.

Though every composition is the musical apex of "Diary," the Towner-composed "Dark Spirit" and "Icarus" are the most memorable.

"Pictures," an album by Jack DeJohnette minus his group Directions, is delicate while being demonstrable. DeJohnette is perhaps jazz's most underrated drummer as he is consistently absent from Downbeat's top jazz drummer selection. Instead it is usually Billy Cobham, Elvin Jones or Buddy

Doc Watson

Doc Watson, son slated for guitar-pickin' show

Doc Watson was 29 years old when he became a professional musician. At 54 years old, his present degree of professionalism can be measured by his long-range musical experience.

Mariah Folk and Blues Coffeehouse will present singer-guitarist Watson on Thursday at 7:30 and 10 p.m. and Friday at 8 and 10:30 p.m. in Erickson Hall kiva. Accompanying Doc will be his son Merle on acoustic and slide guitar.

In 1960, Doc Watson emerged as a full-fledged musician with a following of folkies who held a most devoted esteem for his unamplified and authentic southern mountain music. An outstanding knowledge of the old songs he picked up during his younger days in Stoney Fork, N.C., make his performances natural and evocative.

Doc's guitar-picking style has influenced the playing of many musicians, who have caught on to his particular combination of traditional country songs, folk-rock and gospel music.

Doc Watson takes songs like "Tennessee Stud," "Curly-Headed Baby" or "Moody River" and gives them enough character to make them "his own."

Tickets for the father-son performance are available at the MSU Union, Elderly Instruments and Wazoo Records for $3.50, and $4 at the door.

His poems deal with a broad panorama of American themes: elections, bombs, democracy, laws, Vietnam, the Liberty Bell, football. Archibald MacLeish, himself a practicing lawyer for three years as well as a Pulitzer prize-winning poet, wrote of Norris' book, "The voice that speaks in this manuscript is an authentic voice — not only authentically American but authentically human." In 1961-62 Norris was an elected delegate to the Michigan Constitutional Convention. He was associated with the drafting of the Bill of Rights provisions of the Michigan Constitution and wrote the provision creating a right to a freedom of expression. He is also the author of several books on law.

While a student at U-M, Norris was on the staff of Perspectives, a campus literary magazine, and was an editorial writer for The Michigan Daily.

His visit to MSU is sponsored by the English Department. There is no admission charge for the reading and it is open to the public.

Attorney now 'Rockford' coproducer

Johnson promised the job to Steve Cannell. At that time, he was considering becoming a full-time actor. However, Steve Cannell, cocreator and supervising producer, came to him and asked him to come to "Rockford File" as associate producer. When he protested that he did not know what he was doing, executive producer Meta Rosenberg and Cannell reassured him.

When he went in, the series had been in production for 10 weeks. He said: "I had to learn by fire and brimstone." Johnson stayed that year and has been there ever since, shepherding the series. Part II will examine Chas. Johnson's view of the role of blacks in the television industry.

BIGGER INCREASE FOR CARS THAN FOR FOOD Transportation spending up

WASHINGTON (AP) — America's love affair with the automobile endures despite the higher cost of owning a car, according to a government survey which shows consumers are spending more for transportation than for food.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics said Tuesday that American families increased spending for transportation more than they increased spending for food and housing between the year 1960-1961 and the year 1972-1973.

By 1973, the government said, families spent more on the average for transportation than they did to eat.

"The increase in the transportation expenditures from 15 per cent of consumption in the 1960s to 21 per cent in the 1970s is attributable largely to expenditures connected with automobiles — vehicle purchases, finance charges, maintenance costs and gasoline," the government said.

The analysis of consumer spending compared nationwide government surveys of 20,000 families. In the 1960-1961 study, 76 per cent of American families owned one car. The 1972-1973 study found 80 per cent of the families owned 1.3

cars. Eve Jacobs, a BLS analyst, said the results do not fully reflect higher gasoline prices, which began rising sharply in late 1973 with the Arab oil embargo.

She said the results indicate the difficulties the Carter Administration faces in trying to reduce gasoline consumption "since transportation now accounts for such a big share of everybody's life." In its latest survey, the government found that families spent an average of $8,282 a year for food, housing, clothing, medical care, transportation and recreation, which included education. This compared with an average of $5,054 in the earlier survey.

While transportation rose to 21 per cent from 15 per cent of consumption, food dipped to 20.1 per cent from 24.4 per cent in the 1960s.

Housing costs, including shelter, utilities and furnishings, accounted for 31.4 per cent of total consumption in the 1970s, compared with 28.4 per cent a decade earlier.

The share of expenditures for health costs declined slightly, down to 6.4 from 6.7 per cent. The government said while this may seem surprising in view of rapidly rising medical costs, the survey referred only to "out-of-pocket" family expenses and did not include health insurance premiums paid by employers or the government.

Since the early 1960s, there has been a large expansion in employer and government financed insurance plans.

The results of the survey will be used in updating the bureau's monthly consumer price index to account for changes in spending patterns. The surveys only covered actual expenditures and not expenses for taxes, interest charges, life insurance and mortgage principal payments, which are regarded as a form of savings since they are returned when the individual sells a house.

The government reported that personal income rose 9.1 per cent in 1976, to an average of $6,441 from $5,908 in 1975. The increase was well above the 4.8 per cent rise on consumer prices last year.

The congressional Black Caucus joined the opposition to the administration's $2.50 minimum hourly wage proposal and embraced the $3 limit sought by organized labor.

The caucus, whose members are the 16 blacks in the House, also called for an indexing system where the federal pay floor would be pegged at 60 per cent of the average manufacturing wage.

Citing the administration's minimum wage proposal, AFL-CIO President George Meany charged that President Jimmy Carter and congressional Democrats have produced only "more schemes for tightening the screws on the poor" despite promises made during last year's campaign.
