vidence counters Houk Smith death theory

At the scene of the shooting of burglary suspect Michael Edwin Smith, confirmed Wednesday that only one was in a 20-foot radius of Smith when he was shot May 4.

Evidence offered by witnesses contradicted a theory advanced by Ingham County Prosecutor Peter Houk this week that Smith was shot in order to protect an officer standing within the suspect's back porch.

Smith was being sought by the Lansing Police in connection with a burglary.

He was confirmed Tuesday at a press conference that an informant had told the police that Smith's whereabouts at 1032 River Street.

At the press conference that Smith, who had fired the fatal shot, "saw his (Smith's) hand and he thought he was grasping for his gun."

Thelen, whose gun was still in the ground and whom he felt was "in the way," said that he (Hersman) Thelen was going to be hit with the shot. That's when (Hersman) fired.

Witnesses Wednesday reiterated that the police handling of the incident was proper and justified.

The following Monday, new evidence of the shooting was presented to Houk's office after the State News obtained an affidavit from an eyewitness.

After receiving the affidavit, Houk reopened the investigation of the shooting and Hersman, who was scheduled to return to work some time this week after a routine suspension for the duration of the investigation, had Monday off.

"After reviewing the affidavit provided to us by the Michigan State News and after interviewing the so-called secret witness I have found no additional evidence that in my opinion would justify calling a coroner's rear of the property.

Smith left the back door with a crowbar, police said, and ran toward the officer who was in the back yard.

The officer then told him to stop, police said, at which point Smith made a "slinging motion" toward the policeman with the crowbar. A second time, Smith was told to stop and the officer who was in the back yard fired a shot into the ground, missing Smith.

After the first shot was fired, Smith turned around and began to run toward the front part of the property, police said. One of the officers who had been at the front door, Hersman, intercepted Smith at the side of the house while he held a raised crowbar and shot the suspect in the chest, police said.

In a later report released by Lansing police, four officers were said to be at the residence at the time of the shooting.

Police in that report said there were two officers in back of the house and two in front when Smith was fatally wounded.

Upon completion of an investigation by Lansing police two days after the shooting took place, a report was handed over to the prosecutor's office. Houk then concluded over the weekend that the police handling of the incident was proper and justified.

The following Monday, new evidence of the shooting was presented to Houk's office after the State News obtained an affidavit from an eyewitness.

After receiving the affidavit, Houk reopened the investigation of the shooting and Hersman, who was scheduled to return to work some time this week after a routine suspension for the duration of the investigation, had Monday off.

inquest into this matter," Houk said during the news conference. "If at a later date there is additional evidence that is presented to us we of course will consider it and weigh it as we would in any case."

In a third and apparently corrected account of the shooting, Houk said at the news conference that by "the facts that are known to us at this time" Smith left the house with a crowbar and he committed an assault upon Thelen at the bottom of the back porch steps.

Thelen fired a warning shot at Smith, Houk said.

Smith then turned on Thelen with a crowbar in one hand and reached toward him with the other while Hersman fired the fatal shot, Houk said.

James Menlove, Ann Arbor Trust vice president and trust officer, said the proxy in favor of management was sent April 21 to the Ford Motor Co.

Menlove said that Ann Arbor Trust policy is to vote proxies "based upon investment considerations" solely when such proxies involved "social and environmental concerns." In MSU's case, he added, the company is instructed to vote with management.

The proposal to have Ford divest its South African interests sparked protests at Stanford University in California earlier this week which resulted in the arrest of 294 students.

The students occupied the Old Student Union Building following a decision by the Stanford Board of Trustees to abstain on the proxy vote. Students wanted the board to vote in favor of the proposal.

Stanford University holds 93,350 shares of Ford Motor stock.

Protests over investments in South Africa also occurred at Hampshire College in Amherst, Mass., May 4 when about 40 students took over the first floor of the Administration-Science Building. The students were protesting the university's ownership of stock in companies with interests in South Africa.

On May 6, Hampshire faculty walked out in support of the students. The Hampshire College Board of Directors then announced it would defer its holdings.

A similar demonstration at the University of Massachusetts, also in Amherst, was staged April 6 with no arrests. The students were also protesting university ownership of companies with South Africa interests.

The editor of the Daily Collegiate, the University of Massachusetts newspaper, said the protest and activities there prompted students at the nearby Hampshire college to also object about South African investments.

VOTES WITH FORD CO. BRASS 'U' tacitly approves African investments

MSU has tacitly voted to condone Ford Motor Co. investments in South Africa.

A stockholder proposal to have Ford divest its interest in South Africa, because of the practice of apartheid or racial separation in that country, is being opposed by management.

The proposal is apparently being considered at a Ford Motor Co. stockholders meeting today, but company officials were unwilling to confirm such consideration.

MSU holds 8,500 shares of Ford stock, according to Stephen Terry, University assistant vice president of finance and assistant treasurer.

Terry said MSU's Ford stock has a market value of $460,000.

President Clifton R. Wharton Jr. will be attending the meeting. Wharton is on the Ford board of directors. A Ford spokesman refused to say what input Wharton will have on the proposal.

"The basic policy of the University is to vote its proxies in favor of management, unless a member of the University community brings up an objection or challenge or if there is a Security Exchange Commission approved proxy dispute," Terry said.

Terry said the vote favoring management was affected because of a standing policy which allows the Ann Arbor Trust Co., which holds the stock for MSU, to vote in favor of management for any proxy dispute.

James Menlove, Ann Arbor Trust vice president and trust officer, said the proxy in favor of management was sent April 21 to the Ford Motor Co.

Menlove said that Ann Arbor Trust policy is to vote proxies "based upon investment considerations" solely when such proxies involved "social and environmental concerns." In MSU's case, he added, the company is instructed to vote with management.

S. Africa will allow Young's official visit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The South African government, after showing considerable reluctance, approved Wednesday an official U.S. request for Ambassador Andrew Young to visit next week.

The decision, announced by the State Department, broadens the dimensions of Young's current tour of Africa. Two other countries, Liberia and Sudan, also were added to his itinerary Wednesday while a fourth, Nigeria, was deleted until a follow-up trip later in the year.

Tensions between Young and South Africa were raised when the outspoken ambassador questioned the legitimacy of the South African government and, on another occasion, said he hates to have anything to do with it.

Then, when reports surfaced that Young would meet with militant blacks, Foreign Minister R.F. Botha said that "if this in fact is the case, it would not be convenient for us to receive him here."

The State Department, however, persisted through diplomatic channels in seeking acceptance of Young, who has invitations to address university and business groups.

Once in South Africa, the black, former civil rights worker is expected to manifest the Carter Administration's distaste for apartheid, the system of official racial separation and development used in South Africa. However, the administration also is counting on South Africa to help persuade the white minority government in Rhodesia to yield control to the 6.1 million blacks in the breakaway British colony.

However, Frederick Brown, a department spokesperson, made it clear that "it is a British initiative" and that the United States' role would be to support Britain in its drive for majority rule in Rhodesia in 1978.

Arrangements for Young's travel to South Africa and his schedule once he reaches there on May 21 "are still being worked out," the State Department said. He is now in Abidjan, Ivory Coast, attending a conference of U.S. ambassadors to Africa.

Young is expected to stop in Ghana and Liberia later in the week before going to Lisbon, Portugal, to meet with Vice President Walter F. Mondale next weekend. Mondale has a meeting scheduled in Vienna with Prime Minister John Vorster at which time the vice president will present the administration's case for an end to segregation.

BOARD VOTES AGAINST PROJECT, 7-6 ASMSU opposes Iran films

By NUNZIO M. LUPO
and
MICHAEL WINTER
State News Staff Writers

The ASMSU Student Board became embroiled in heated discussion Tuesday night before voting 7-6 to support efforts of the Committee to Stop the MSU-Iran Film Project.

The bill to support the committee also contained a provision to send a letter to the MSU Board of Trustees requesting the University to discontinue its involvement in the project.

The Iran film project is a $247,953 contract between MSU and National Iranian Radio and Television (NIRT) for the production of a series of "instructional" films about Iran.

NIRT is the only radio-television network in Iran and acts as the central governing authority and censor for all broadcasts. It also monitors a majority of the print media and cultural activities.

The film series, started in December 1974, traces Iran's history from 100,000 B.C. to 1750 A.D. The films are for distribution to American high schools and colleges to inform students of the "new Iran" and its contribution to world advancement.

M. Ali Issari, director of the film project and one-time personal cameraman for the Shah, has said the project "is purely educational" and is the "first time the Iranian people will be able to see their history on film." He added that currently there is no "purely educational film" available about Iran and the Middle East.

The Shah came to power in a 1953 military coup and has been cited by several international human rights organizations for torturing political prisoners.

Jim Davis, member of the committee to stop the film project, said the films were designed to falsely depict the true political situation in Iran, which is presently under a dictatorial rule of the Shah.

"We feel that these films are going to serve the purpose of the Shah," he said. The films, though historical in nature, would be "a gross misrepresentation of the real Iran that will only further serve the propaganda aims of the Shah," he added.

Phillip DeFerman, who assisted Issari in the production of the films, said the claims of the stop-the-film committee were merely "opinions" and that the film's producers "were not interested in the politics" of Iran.

Based on his observations during the filming, DeFerman said the political situation in Iran did not appear to be as repressive as the stop-the-film committee claimed them to be.

After discussion by the Student Board, an upset Iranian student spoke out on the project. "They're trying to show this project is not political," he said. "The film is trying to mislead your attention from the reality in Iran."

"If you have a leaflet in your hand you could be in jail for three years," he said. "You can't even talk."

fffff! Aerosols may disappear under proposed statute

By MICHAEL PUTZEL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Virtually all fluorocarbon aerosol sprays appear from the American market in less than two years if a proposed by the government Wednesday becomes law.

Federal agencies, in an unprecedented joint announcement, said the ban is necessary because the fluorocarbons can deplete the earth's ozone layer, which protects life on earth from potentially skin cancer-causing ultraviolet rays of the sun.

A Council on Atmospheric Sciences, an industry group, said a mandatory phase-out proposal would require study, but a person denied the ban would save consumers money as the ban claimed.

Into effect, the ban would eliminate nearly 700 million aerosol containers used in spraying deodorants, pesticides, hair sprays, air fresheners and various household cleaners, according to industry figures.

It does not mean aerosols would no longer be available.

The industry group said fluorocarbon use in aerosols has been declining in recent years and estimated less than 30 per cent of the 2.3 billion aerosols produced in 1976 were powered by fluorocarbons.

The proposed regulations issued Wednesday will be subject to public hearings and comment for the next 60 days. A decision on whether to go ahead with the ban will be made after the comment period ends.

A handful of products classified as essential would be exempted from the ban, including contraceptive vaginal foams, inhalers used by asthma sufferers, cytology fixatives used in cancer diagnosis, a mine safety warning device, ejectors used to remove plastics from molds and flying insect sprays used on airplanes and in commercial food handling areas.

The three government agencies that joined to announce the proposal are the Food and Drug Administration, Environmental Protection Agency and Consumer Product Safety Commission.

Judge opens door for SST in N.Y.

NEW YORK (AP) — In a ruling that brought joy in Paris and outrage in Queens, a federal judge declared Wednesday that New York's airports had no right to bar the supersonic Concorde jetliner. Air France immediately announced it would begin flights from Paris to New York next month.

Judge Milton Pollack in his decision said the plane was entitled to a 16-month test at Kennedy Airport, just as it is having in Washington. The latter test was ordered by the federal government.

Pollack ruled that the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey which operates metropolitan airports could not overrule federal policy mandating Concorde test runs. But he stopped short of formally granting the faster-than-sound aircraft access to Kennedy.

The Port Authority said Pollack's decision would be appealed. However, a spokesperson pointed out that the next-legal move under the judge's decision is actually up to British Airways and Air France.

They were given 10 days to submit a request for an injunction or other measure to implement the decision. The appeal would follow action by the two airlines which fly the Concorde.

In Paris, nevertheless, Air France said it is proceeding on the basis that its suit was won and scheduled its first Concorde flight to New York for June 20. An appellate court, however, could upset this timetable.

The plane has been in service between Washington and the European cities on a 16-month trial basis since last May. Opponents of the aircraft have maintained it is noisy, polluting and uneconomical.

British Airways and Air France concede that Concorde ran up a $64 million loss in its first year of operation. They and the plane's developers, who developed and marketed the plane, maintain that the North Atlantic route from New York to London and Paris is a must if the Concorde is to be commercially profitable.

New York Gov. Hugh Carey and Donald R. Manes, borough president of Queens, site of Kennedy Airport, both called on the Port Authority to appeal Pollack's decision. And New York's Mayor Abraham D. Beame said he would continue to oppose SST service here "unless the appropriate environmental criteria, such as noise and air pollution standards, are met."

"I disagree with the decision; I expect it will be appealed," Carey said. "... I believe that the landing and take off of the Concorde at this time could have grave consequences. It would convey to the people who are impacted by this decision the clear impression that the Port Authority, which has the responsibility to maintain noise and other environmental standards, is left without power and due process to carry out its important functions."

However, Pollack, who gave lawyers 10 days to draw up papers for implementing his decision, said he was not ruling on the conflict between the local ban and international treaties and foreign policy.

In Howard Beach, Queens, one of the neighborhoods immediately affected, Eleanor Purchil, a homeowner said: "Everyone's going to riot." Howard Beach has been prominent in the campaign to keep the plane out.

Applause for the ruling came, however, from Lewis Rudin, chairperson of the Association for a Better New York, who urged immediate steps to prepare for tests of the Concorde to "give the SST a fair chance to prove itself here."

In Seattle, a spokesperson for the Boeing Corp. said that while the airplane manufacturer wants to see the Concorde fly in and out of New York, there are no immediate plans for development of an American SST because of the energy shortage.

Dressed in an authentic Dutch costume, Gov. William G. Milliken takes part in the traditional street-sweeping which marks the opening ceremonies of the 48th annual Tulip Festival in Holland, Mich.

Nixon to discuss foreign policy next interview

WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard Nixon, in his second television interview, portrays Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev as a firm and sophisticated adversary while the two superpowers pursued a mutual policy of détente.

Nixon, sources said, credits Brezhnev with being less volatile and having a firmer grasp than his predecessor, the late Nikita Khrushchev, who broke up the 1960 summit meeting in Paris with a denunciation of American spy-plane reconnaissance of the Soviet Union.

David Frost's second interview show with Nixon is scheduled for broadcast tonight at 7:30 EDT over a makeshift network of 155 stations. The show is devoted to foreign policy.

Nixon offers his appraisal of former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, as well as the two Soviet leaders, and emphasizes that he himself originated the attempted reconciliation with Communist China.

While lacking the emotional impact of Watergate, the sole topic of last week's program, the second Nixon show was considered sufficiently attractive to viewers to cause President Jimmy Carter to move up his own news conference on his first overseas trip.

In reviewing the controversial U.S. incursion into Cambodia in 1970, Nixon said Kissinger as having no doubts about the domestic but fully supporting the position once it was taken.

Later, after student protests, Nixon said he wanted to cut the U.S. troops in Cambodia. Nixon, the sources said, the position that diametrically opposite consequences his decision to maintain there until 1973.

Vance sees 'signs of movement' in talks

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance said Wednesday he sees "some signs of movement" in Middle East talks that show a "better understanding among the parties" of what each requires in a permanent peace.

"Don't let me exaggerate this. ... there's no major movement at this point," Vance told reporters en route to Madrid to meet with the Spanish king. "But I see some signs of movement among the parties."

"Let me put it this way — it's a better understanding of the requirements of each other with respect to the key issues," the secretary said. He declined to be more specific because it might be "a little early for that."

Vance said he told Israeli Foreign Minister Yigal Allon about the signs of movement during a two-hour discussion in London before the secretary flew to Spain.

New British ambassador named

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister James Callaghan's son-in-law, Peter Jay, was named Wednesday as Britain's new ambassador to the United States.

Jay is currently economics editor of the Times of London newspaper.

He replaces Sir Peter Ramsbotham, who has been in Washington since 1974 and is taking over as governor and commander-in-chief of Bermuda.

The announcement was made by British Foreign Secretary David Owen at a Foreign Office news conference. Owen emphasized that the decision to appoint Jay, 40, was his and not Callaghan's.

Jay, who is expected to take up his post in July, met President Carter during the weekend's seven-nation summit meeting.

"They got on very well together," said a spokesperson for the Foreign Office. He said the meeting had been Carter's idea.

Conferees agree on spending plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — House and Senate budget conferees agreed Wednesday on an initial $460.9 billion spending plan, including $111 billion for defense.

The agreement projects a deficit of $64.6 billion.

Agreement on the key defense figure, after three days of hard bargaining, broke a deadlock that had threatened to halt work on spending bills for the year beginning Oct. 1.

However, the tentative budget faces tests in both chambers, which differed widely on the slice of the budget to be allocated to defense.

The compromise budget resolution was tentatively set for a vote in the Senate Friday and in the House Tuesday.

The issue was considered especially close in the House, which rejected an earlier resolution after liberals deserted it on the defense issue. They contended that the Pentagon was not subjected to as tight spending control as departments administering social programs.

Israeli copter crashes; 54 left dead

TEL AVIV (AP) — An Israeli military helicopter crashed and exploded in the occupied West Bank, killing all 54 servicemen aboard in the nation's worst air force disaster, officials announced Wednesday.

The tragedy plunged the nation into mourning and prompted politicians to suspend campaigning for the May 17 election.

The state radio said 10 crewmen and 44 passengers were killed in the crash that occurred during maneuvers Tuesday.

Lt. Gen. Mordechai Gur, Israeli chief of staff, told newsmen the aircraft carried paratroopers and their officers. He said that while the cause had not been pinpointed, an inquiry committee had ruled out the possibility of foul play, such as an attack by Palestinian guerrillas.

A paratrooper told the Israeli armed forces radio he saw the helicopter make a half-turn and then disappear from sight.

"I heard an explosion followed by several more smaller explosions," he said.

Entertainment portions of a Jerusalem celebration of the 10th anniversary of the 1967 war were canceled, and the Israeli cabinet met on receiving the news.

The previous worst air force disaster in Israel's history occurred in November 1975 when 20 soldiers were killed in the crash of a Hercules transport plane into mountains in the Sinai Desert.

Tuesday's accident occurred five miles west of the Jordan River, Gur said. He said the helicopter plunged to the ground after climbing a few hundred feet. Wreckage was reportedly spread over a 200-yard radius.

CATA INTEGRATION PLAN CAUSE Councilmembers blast 'U'

By MICHAEL ROUSE
State News Staff Writer

Lansing City Council members blasted the University Tuesday night for its failure to cooperate on the proposed Capital Transportation Authority (CATA) - bus service integration plan.

The issue came during a discussion of the projected 45 per cent increase in fares to CATA - from $85,000 to $123,750 - in a work session on the 1977-78 budget.

The bus service integration plan would require CATA bus routes swing onto the MSU campus with seven stops. Riders would pay $1.00 per ride and buses would arrive every 15 minutes.

The purpose of the integration would be to support students, faculty and East Lansing residents back and forth between the MSU campus and Grand Avenue and would not intentionally interfere with the existing MSU bus service.

A total cost of $32,270 for the University's share would be based on the number of miles the bus would run through campus. Manager Jerry Coffman received a letter from MSU Assistant Vice President B. Simon stating that MSU would not provide any financial support for the plan.

University does not consider it its duty to extend money to East Lansing for this purpose," Simon's letter stated.

Discussion with a large group of Lansing City Councilmembers John Polomsky and Larry Owen said the city would not be able to pay the full cost, but said the city would contribute to the cost between the city and the University. The city and the University cannot be autonomous when it serves its purposes and the city must serve its citizens.

See related story on page 16.

Mayor George Griffiths suggested holding off on implementing the plan until the University comes up with the money.

Letters stating the city's position would be sent to state Rep. Lynn Jondahl, D-East Lansing and state Sen. Earl Nelson, D-Lansing, as well as the MSU Board of Trustees, Griffiths said.

The bus integration plan nearly suffered a fatal blow when the Farm Lane bridge was closed to heavy vehicles. An alternate route using Bogue Street was developed by the planning department and CATA officials that could be implemented in September for a trial period.

MSU has failed to cooperate with the city of East Lansing in several instances, Owen said.

Coffman said University officials have not been too keen on the idea of giving up land on the south side of Grand River Avenue so the street can be widened according to recommendations of the state Department of Highways and Transportation.

The alternative the city is trying to avoid is trimming the median to widen each lane by two feet.

PIRGIM project director named in politics dispute

By MICHAEL MACKSOOD
State News Staff Writer

In a public statement released Wednesday, PIRGIM's state executive director, Joseph Tuchinsky, named project director Marion Anderson as the staff employee who was charged with misconduct and conflict of interest by three MSU-PIRGIM board members.

The grievance, filed by Ann Tydemann, MSU-PIRGIM board chairperson, and fellow board members Jeff Moore and Ed Smith, charged that Anderson gave improper support to a candidate for an MSU-PIRGIM board position. The grievance said there was a "serious conflict of interests" because staff employees are employed by the students and therefore staff employees should not try to influence campus elections.

An anonymous source close to PIRGIM said the improper support Anderson is alleged to have given involved calling up an MSU PIRGIM member and telling the person to vote for a particular candidate and to suggest to their friends to also vote for this candidate.

The grievance was formally filed Tuesday with Tuchinsky, who will have 10 working days to make a ruling on the matter.

Tuchinsky said Anderson is "alleged to have taken action to get votes for a candidate" and he will have to consider if Anderson engaged in the alleged support and whether this type of support was improper.

Tuchinsky said PIRGIM's bylaws place limitations on the political activity of staff members but the section pertains to national, state and local political elections rather than internal PIRGIM elections.

"My responsibility is to attempt to resolve the grievance by mediation and try to get the two sides to agree on a solution," Tuchinsky said.

If Tuchinsky rules against Anderson he will recommend disciplinary action to the state board which may range from an informal reprimand to suspension.

Anderson, in a statement about the grievance filed against her, said that "her alleged improper support of a candidate for election to the campus board must be examined in the context of a long-standing debate about the goals and structure of PIRGIM."

At the beginning of this term the MSU-PIRGIM board voted to withhold the $8,341 in spring term contributions to PIRGIM which were previously committed to pay expenses budgeted by the state board.

Tydemann and Moore, who voted in favor of this action, said they believed the campus PIRGIM should retain a large portion of the MSU student contributions to be used locally instead of on the state level.

Both Tydemann and Moore, who filed the grievance against Anderson, are running for reelection.

Both Anderson and the candidate she was alleged to have improperly supported do not agree with the action of the present MSU-PIRGIM board.

Tuchinsky said the dispute about the campus board's retention of student contributions previously earmarked for the state organization cannot be separated from the present grievance.

Tuchinsky has requested the University administration not remove the $8,341 from the MSU account until the matter is resolved.

'U' employees report sexual harassment

By JUDY PUTNAM
State News Staff Writer

Pinching, teasing, sexual innuendos, and women getting fired for not "giving" at the office all form the problem of sexual harassment on the job, a problem which extends to University employees.

About one-fourth of 77 female janitors in a University department who were interviewed have experienced some form of on-the-job sexual harassment.

Stemming from complaints of sexual harassment, the survey was completed by 77 out of 96 females in the department. A grievance against a foreman, filed by the employees' union, is currently being processed.

Joan Nelson, who was contracted by Local 1585 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees (AFSCME) to conduct the survey, said that the results are probably conservative.

"Based on the replies to other questions, my personal feeling was that a whole lot more had gone through similar experiences," said Nelson, who teaches self-defense for women.

The women were asked to identify forms of harassment ranging from "leering, suggestive looks" to "subtle or out-and-out threats to your job or working conditions if you didn't cooperate."

While 19 complained of sexual harassment, 28 said that they knew of experiences against other women. Of these, there were 12 reports of other female custodians (continued on page 5)

A panel rates, rates cuisine

By ED LION
State News Staff Writer

Whoever decides what food is served in the cafeterias? A taste panel of eight students will sample new recipes and brands to determine if they are suitable for consumption.

Organized by Residence Hall Association, the committee samples the foods by appearance, color, flavor and texture and rates them on a scale of one to five. The panel usually means the samples will be used in the residence hall cafeterias.

Here to serve the students so we give them what they like," said Dunn, residence hall food specialist. Students, who are on the committee for RHA or because they have been asked about the food in the past, take it seriously.

Don't complain about the food and not do anything constructive," said Dunn. "Junior Fran Meyer said, 'I should give suggestions to the RHA and they also can try to get on it.'"

Nadel, a junior, had complaints about food at Brody Complex so he got on the panel.

It's not going to change things," he said. "But since I've been on, it seems to have improved."

Students meet every Wednesday in the test kitchen of Williams Hall. In separate carrels so they cannot hear each other and taste the samples. The panel in the room attempts to simulate the conditions in the cafeterias.

On each sample the students take notes to insure they won't have any bias. They do not discuss the food or rate it on special score sheets.

A serious thing," said Dunn. "They're here for free food. They take it with a grain of salt."

She processes the score sheets and the results over to the cafeteria. The MSU Food Stores. If the panel approves a food and the costs are reasonable, it will usually be served in the cafeterias, she said.

Scientist Krebs says originality, vigor essential

By MICHAEL MACKSOOD
State News Staff Writer

Sir Hans A. Krebs, winner of the 1953 Nobel Prize in physiology and medicine who is lecturing MSU audiences today, said universities are largely responsible for the productivity of scientists.

Krebs, in an interview, said many scientists who start "promisingly and brilliantly slow down after a while and show a sharp drop in productivity, when still rather young" and only a relatively small number continue to do research with "undiminished vigor."

Krebs said those who organize scientists can actively increase the productivity of scientists.

"It's very simple. Those in charge of organizing scientists, such as universities, must strive to get good people, those who have proven themselves, and they should then be given full support," Krebs said.

Unproductive scientists who occupy a lot of space hinder others and should be weeded out, he said.

"Researchers, especially those with tenure, who are not particularly productive should be given other responsibilities in administration and teaching," Krebs said.

He said many of the productive scientists are hindered in their research by being overburdened with teaching and administrative duties.

"Administrators must see that every person is employed to the best of their ability," Krebs said. "Some people simply don't have original ideas and so are not good researchers."

Krebs said there are also many other distractions which diminish a scientist's research productivity.

"Scientists are perpetually tempted away from science to administration, positions of power and teaching. Successful scientists are offered invitations to travel, to lecture and to attend conferences," he said.

Krebs said personality characteristics such as a curiosity to find out something new by research are needed to help scientists overcome these distractions.

Krebs is a British biochemist born in Hildesheim, Germany, in 1900. He left Germany in 1933 as a refugee, won the Nobel Prize in 1953, was knighted in England in 1958 and now conducts research at Radcliffe Infirmary at Oxford.

Krebs' work has involved discovering metabolic pathways, including the famous tricarboxylic acid cycle (Krebs cycle) which describes the stages of oxidation of all foodstuffs in living cells.

Speaking about the regulation of recombinant-DNA research, Krebs said the work must be left in the hands of people who are trained in procedures for handling dangerous materials.

"Scientists should direct research, but the work should be done under strict rules established by legislators," Krebs said. "In a democratic society these rules must develop gradually by discussion. We don't want a dictator telling scientists 'you can't do this work.'"

Krebs' visit to MSU is part of the spring colloquium "Regulation of Metabolism" sponsored by the Biochemistry Department.

Today at 4 p.m. in 138 Chemistry Bldg. Krebs will present "The History of the Discovery of the Tricarboxylic Acid Cycle."

MSU cops out on Ford-South Africa link

"Abstain."

Abstain is a dirty word, especially when it relates to clear-cut moral issues. MSU, which owns 8,500 shares of stock in Ford Motor Co., has abstained from moral duty by voting covertly and in proxy against a stockholder-sponsored measure to force Ford to withdraw from apartheid-corrupted South Africa.

When MSU seeks to raise $17 million for an enrichment program it has no qualms about hauling out the colored flags and confetti and making pitches for cash. When money matters impinge on moral considerations, however, the administration reflexively sweeps the issue under the rug and sits on its hands.

MSU policy dictates that the University will always vote in management's favor on a stockholder-sponsored measure, unless challenged by members of the University community or in cases of disputes adjudicated by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

This policy is immoral. It is immoral because it transforms human beings — such as those oppressed by apartheid in South Africa — into numbers on a balance sheet. No person of responsibility within MSU had physical or intellectual contact with the actual process of the proxy vote. The responsibility for casting this vote rested with Ann Arbor Trust Co. MSU has effectively closed its eyes and washed its hands of the matter.

The acute and horrendous suffering in South Africa, a direct result of apartheid, has been documented so many times that facts and figures tend to blur into insignificance. MSU administrators know full well how abhorrent corporate involvement in that blood-tinted regime is to thinking people. Voting to sustain Ford's position — a vote which was covert and impersonal, in accord with the University's pitifully anachronistic policy — is an abstinence from morality that is truly unconscionable.

Earlier this week 294 Stanford students staged a sit-in at the Stanford Union to protest a similar cop-out by their University administrators. The students were trundled off to jail by 35 policemen clad in riot gear.

A few weeks earlier, Hampshire College in Massachusetts underwent a similar experience. After the trustees originally voted against the measure, a massive student sit-in, bolstered by a faculty walk-out, motivated Hampshire to defer its stock in Ford.

Will the faculty walk out over MSU's action? Will the students protest? Don't bet on it.

The policy which allows MSU to uphold management by proxy must be changed, since it is obvious that MSU will always morally abstain in matters of importance. Since a change in policy is extremely unlikely, only other alternative is to challenge MSU's position and again. MSU owns stock scores of companies, including Atlantic Richfield, Coca Cola, Consumer's Power, Dow Chemical, Mobil Oil and Exxon.

By voting in proxy against interests of South Africa's majority, MSU has shirked its clear-cut moral duty. Since administration appears perfectly comfortable in abstaining on moral issues, the University community must no longer abstain in vigilance.

End politics in Supreme Court

State Supreme Court Chief Justice Thomas G. Kavanagh's suggestion to institute a legislative appointment method for the selection of appeals court judges is a commendable effort at establishing judicial nonpartisanship.

The state Supreme Court is still tethered to the antiquated political party nomination routine. With party politicking and affiliation, justices inevitably succumb to the dictates of partisanship.

Kavanagh knows first-hand about this problem. As a Democratic incumbent, he refused to campaign for Democrats running for other offices, and lost his party's nomination as a result. Kavanagh ran as an independent and was elected.

Kavanagh's proposal would institute a constitutional amendment, subject to the approval of voters, which would leave appointments of appeals court justices to the legislature. Though partisanship would still intrude, justices would not be required to get down in the gutter of political infighting in campaigns, making promises they cannot keep.

Intertwined with this problem is the issue of reapportionment. The task of drawing legislative district boundaries is presently left to a four-member commission which is usually hopelessly divided. When divided the commission drops reapportionment in the laps of the Supreme Court to decide.

Reapportionment should be a legislative, not judicial, function. The problem is that the court, when mired in politics, will decide on reapportionment according to the dictates of political expediency. This political pretzel is that two court justices are up for grabs in the 1978 election. Which party gains a majority on the court can make legislative reapportionment decisions in its own interests. The 1980 reapportionment will be held until 1992.

Kavanagh's proposals to extricate the appeals court system from entangling political alliances worthy of careful scrutiny and should be acted with dispatch.

Antiobscenity

I would like to reply to the column by Bob Ourlan, which appeared in the State News on Monday. Mr. Ourlan was complaining about having to proofread articles in order to remove obscenities from them. He says that being required to do this is a waste of time as well as an infringement of the right to free speech.

It seems to me that an important part of an editor's job (Mr. Ourlan is managing editor) is to edit — to remove things that would be detrimental to the publication. And obscenities are indeed detrimental. Aside from offending a sizable portion of the readership, they only serve to illustrate the ignorance of writers who are unable to express themselves without resorting to the childish use of foul language and words which are so "versatile" that they have become totally meaningless.

I commend the State News management for sticking to its ethics (Victorian or otherwise) and hope that they will continue to do so. I'm sure there are many of us who appreciate it.

Destroyed art

Where are people coming from when they start throwing works of art in the river? What business was it of anyone to maliciously destroy an artist's work? Jim Lawton's sculpture wasn't hurting anyone in its place by the Red Cedar River when it was thrown in.

We wonder why they did this. Why did a group of individuals decide to drown some art? Did they understand what the artist was trying to convey by his contemporary work? If they didn't, did they try to?

What ever happened to respect for a person's work, an individual's work? It shouldn't matter what his/her occupation is, be it a doctor, lawyer, shopworker, football player or artist. We can't fathom anyone throwing a stethoscope or football into the river just because he/she hates doctors or football players.

A total lack of sensitivity on their part and ignorance in its worse sense was exhibited by this cruel act.

The sad part is that it possibly ruined a potentially good thing for MSU. One reason for placing the sculpture on campus was to make a clear introduction of contemporary sculpture to MSU and to the Lansing area. Contemporary sculpture is a booming art movement in America today. People should be grateful for being exposed to the fresh direction art has taken.

Hopefully in the near future a committee for sculpture at MSU will be formed. Insurance on an artist's work will inevitably be necessary.

This incident must not deter present or future work from being shown publicly.

We are most surprised that people from this area have done such a thing.

Cult plague

In my four years at MSU, I and many others have been plagued by unwanted solicitations by various "religious cult" organizations on campus. The University prohibits other types of unwanted soliciting in the dorm complexes, such as door-to-door salesmen. These "religious cults" are in fact selling religion. If one makes the mistake of talking to them, his or her own beliefs are challenged if not condemned, and they make it their mission to save you.

Religion is a personal matter and there is no "right" or "wrong" way to practice it. Members of these groups should worry more about their own salvation. Because of the injustices they commit against those they are trying to convert, they are the ones who are likely to burn in hell.

Now we are plagued with "I found it" graffiti on the blackboards of our classrooms. Two years ago it was "Josh is Coming" and other such sales pitches. We are paying to have professors write on the boards. The students at MSU deserve clean blackboards at the start of class.

If people want to belong to these organizations, they will seek them out and join them without the need for religion salesmen and their marketing ploys. Let us who do not want to belong to or hear about these "religious cults" live our lives in peace and not have to put up with their hassle.

Jail study

Last Thursday you published a letter from Richard Poynton in which he suggested that Sheriff Kenneth Preadmore "wants a nice 'safe' study to be conducted to rationalize an expansion of the (Ingham County) jail." As a member of the Ad Hoc Committee appointed by the County Board of Commissioners to recommend action in this area, I can report that the proposal for such a study came not from the sheriff, but from members of the committee. In my opinion, $500 is a small sum to pay for data on which to base a decision to build a facility which will cost a minimum of $1.5 million. Hopefully, it will assist committee members in deciding whether that is the best route to follow or whether there are viable alternatives.

TRC very helpful to community

By CHARLES IPCAR

In recent days several local landlords have sharply attacked what they view as the policy and services of the Tenants Resource Center (TRC), first at an East Lansing City Council budget hearing and subsequently in a letter to the State News on May 3. The coordinating staff of TRC would like to state once again just what services our center does provide to those with housing related concerns and to respond to some of the accusations raised by our critics.

There are no restrictions on who can utilize our services. In a typical month some 300 tenants, landlords and other people do just that. Although the vast majority of TRC clients are young adult tenants, no one should be surprised by this fact given that this particular group is least familiar with basic housing rights and responsibilities.

When people bring a problem to TRC, our counselors clarify what has happened, provide empathy when appropriate, find out what the client wants to do and then outline alternative ways that the client might use to resolve the problem. Booklets housing system. The politics of individual members of TRC are a private matter. However, the center is very concerned that all counselors do a good job of providing information to those involved with housing problems.

It is true that TRC serves as a repository for a variety of housing literature: local housing studies, position papers, media articles, legislation, court decisions and booklets. Many students find our files invaluable for preparing housing research papers.

Frankly, it would be surprising if some landlords did not find it in their interests to attack TRC, especially if our counselors had provided their tenants information which helped reclaim a security deposit or secured compliance with local housing codes. Other more fair-minded landlords recognize that TRC is a valuable service to themselves when it provides landlords up-to-date information about new housing laws and codes or when it outlines to tenants their responsibilities as well as their rights.

Finally, TRC no longer has a policy which prohibits larger landlords from staffing the center. Current policy, then, is for all counselors to be reviewed on shift for a four-week trial period on an equal basis.

Commissioners reject county coliseum

By JIM DuFRESNE
State News Staff Writer
and CHRIS KUCZYNSKI

Plans for building a $6 to $8 million coliseum adjacent to the Ingham County Fairgrounds in Mason may have died Tuesday.

In a 11-10 vote, the Ingham County Board of Commissioners voted a measure to purchase 60 acres of land next to the fairgrounds for $100,000.

At this time the county is not in a financial situation to afford such a purchase, said Tom Hoisington, commissioner of district 14. "The land would have become a parking lot until the board of commissioners had decided what to do with it."

"We would have argued over the use of it, and it would have probably remained a parking lot for the next 10 years."

Many of the commissioners believed, however, that the land was being sold at a good price and it could be used to expand the county fairgrounds with the proposed coliseum.

The coliseum, which was being studied by Commissioner Thomas Mitchell of the 4th district, would have an air-supported system for the roof and hold 10,000 to 12,000 people. It could have been used for horse or other farm shows, trade shows or concerts.

But opposition to the coliseum is strong among the commissioners.

"I am not in favor of a coliseum in Mason," Hoisington said. "It would be in competition with such facilities in Lansing and at MSU. I don't think the county could make any money from it."

"The coliseum is dead now, but it could be resurrected sometime," Mitchell said. "I think the program to expand the fairgrounds was a good one."

In another 11-10 vote, the board voted to retain two assistant prosecuting attorneys presently being funded by a federal grant. The grant expires June 30 and will now be funded by Ingham County.

Mitchell said the reason the vote was so close was because many of the commissioners were not willing to fund the attorneys with such a tight budget.

Commissioner Patrick J. Ryan of the 19th district voted "no" on the proposal because it would put a disproportionate amount of money in the prosecuting office.

"There is an imbalance of money between social programs and criminal programs," Ryan said.

Commissioner Mark Grebner of the 8th district, who also voted "no" on the measure, called the present office "a gold-plated prosecuting office."

"With a gold-plated prosecuting office they can prosecute everything that comes their way," Grebner said. "They presently prosecute cases that I feel they shouldn't bother with."

Hoisington defended the measure, however, and said that Ingham County prosecutor Peter Houk needed the attorneys because of the county's expanding court system.

FEA to offer energy meets

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is taking its battle to save energy out into the country, with more than 600 local conferences and workshops.

The sessions are sponsored by the Federal Energy Administration (FEA) and are aimed at helping businessmen cut energy use in their firms.

Some of the workshops will concentrate on pooling transportation to and from work; others will center on saving energy in restaurants, supermarkets, office buildings and retail stores.

The workshops are free though there is a lunch charge at some day-long sessions.

tions for sexual favors.

In addition, six knew females who had quit jobs at MSU because of sexual harassment.

When asked what reprimand they would recommend for men harassing women, the largest category cited was removal from supervisory positions.

"They clearly feel anyone in a position of power and authority shouldn't be able to abuse that position," Nelson said.

Over half of the women in the survey identified sexual harassment as a major problem, with an additional one-fifth calling it a minor problem.

The form used by Nelson was roughly based on a 1976 study by the magazine Redbook, one of the few studies done in this area.

The Redbook study, with about 9,000 responses, concluded that nine out of 10 women have experienced some form of unwanted attention. Nearly half of the respondents said they knew of a woman who had quit or had been fired because of a sex-on-the-job problem.

The Kitty Genovese Memorial Anti-Rape Collective, a group which works out of the ASMSU's Women's Council office, is currently putting together a program on sexual harassment.

The collective is also in the planning stages of a citywide speak-out against the problem and is looking for volunteers.

Nineteen female workers said that they had experienced 34 incidents of the following sexual approaches at MSU:

Leering, suggestive looks	15
Sexual remarks, insults, teasing, innuendos	11
Actual touching, pinching, grabbing, etc.	5
Subtle or blatant offers of promotions or better working conditions in return for sexual favors	2
Subtle or out-and-out threats to job or working conditions for refusal to cooperate with sexual demands	1

Bethea's anxious and confident; doesn't want last shot wasted

By TOM SHANAHAN
State News Sports Writer
It's come down to the final year for MSU all-Big Ten defensive tackle Larry Bethea and he isn't about to waste it. Ideas and optimism poured out of the charismatic Spartan as he sat in his Holden Hall dormitory room Wednesday afternoon and explained how anxious he was for the 1977 season to get started. "This is probably the best condition I've ever been in at any time in my football career," Bethea said. "I'm in super condition and I could start the season tomorrow. I attribute it to their program (Coach Darryl Rogers and his staff) — they work the hell out of us. "Now I'm getting big and strong and I've been successful gaining size and strength. I feel it will be an added dimension to me because of my quickness." Last year Bethea played at 230 to 235 pounds and he says he hopes to play between 240 and 250 next fall. And he said carrying the extra weight won't cost him any speed, as he said it will be much easier for him to play with the added strength.

Bethea will play his same role on the Spartan defense that needs much improvement over last season. Even though he did not get to switch to linebacker where all the tackles are made, Bethea says he likes the role of the pursuit tackle.

"Most of the defense is centered on the guys up front because we cause panic and disruption on the offense and that makes it easier for the guys behind us," he said. "I like tackle because I'm the kind of player to raise disruption. I have an initial assignment and after I carry it out I'm after the football. That's where my speed and quickness come in."

"Most teams still won't run to my side because I always play on the weak side. I have to be chasing and if I didn't have speed I'd be ineffective. I might grade out (coach's grade from game films) at 90 per cent but only make five or six tackles."

But Bethea said he isn't interested in statistics or all-Big Ten honors this year. He's putting winning as his highest priority heading into his senior season.

MSU defensive tackle Larry Bethea (88) is playing his role as the Spartans' pursuit tackle as he chases Notre Dame quarterback Rick Slager in the loss to the Irish, 24-6, last fall. Bethea says that both he and the Spartans will be stronger for the 1977 season. Saturday the gridders will play an intrasquad scrimmage at 2 p.m. for the first real look at MSU this spring.

Baum gets soccer job, was aide three years

By KIM SHANAHAN

Joe Baum's perseverance has finally paid off.

After three years as Ed Rutherford's unpaid soccer assistant, he was named the head coach of the MSU booters last week.

Baum was an all-Midwest soccer conference goalie his senior year in 1969 and has held two coaching jobs since then. He is presently a full-time counselor for the Lansing Public Schools, but will quit counseling next fall to coach and work toward a master's degree in physical education.

Meanwhile, Rutherford, who has coached MSU soccer for the past three seasons, will move up to the position of assistant to Athletic Director Joe Kearney. He will also remain as the coordinator for MSU's cheerleaders.

Baum had nothing but praise for the exiting Rutherford.

"Ed Rutherford left the MSU soccer program in excellent shape for me," Baum said. "He produced three winning seasons and recruited a bunch of fine players to the organization."

In his five-year absence from MSU's soccer program, Baum picked up experience as an assistant at the University of Illinois at Edwardsville from 1969 through 1971 and at the University of Wisconsin at Green Bay from 1972 through 1974.

As the new head coach, Baum said he hopes to be able to use some of the soccer contacts he made at Illinois and Wisconsin to recruit skilled players from those areas.

Baum noted that high schools in Michigan have been slow in adopting soccer programs as varsity sports, but he is optimistic about the future of soccer at MSU.

Karate tourney at MSU

The oriental fighting art of karate will be on tap Saturday at MSU. MSU's Karate Club will host its 11th annual spring tournament beginning at noon in the sports arena of the Men's IM Building.

Sponsored by the oldest university karate club in the Midwest, the spring tournaments regularly draw over 150 competitors.

"The rising interest in the martial arts guarantees that we draw the top talent," Bruce Henderson, instructor for the club, said.

Throughout the day there will be competition in fighting and forms. Fighters range in age from the 6-year-olds to the highest ranked, experienced black-belts. Forms, or kata, individual performances, similar to gymnastics routines. Tournament registration competitors begins at 8 a.m. Saturday.

Lansing club hosts ice show at Munn

The Lansing Skating Club is sponsoring the United States Figure Skating Association Memorial Fund Ice Show at Munn Ice Arena Saturday at 8 p.m.

Top performers will be members of the World Figure Skating Team: Charles Tickner, 1977 U.S. senior men's champion, and the pairs team of Sheryl Franks and Michael Botticelli. Franks and Botticelli finished in third place at U.S. pairs championships.

The memorial fund was established after the U.S. Figure Skating Team was killed in a plane crash in 1961. The fund is used as scholarships promising young skaters in Junior Divisions and above is also used to finance national and world team members.

Club Sports

The MSU sports club is presenting a "Gong Show" Tuesday at the Rainbow Ranch to raise money for the operation of MSU's several club sports. Contestants are needed for the show and applications can be picked up in 231 Men's IM Bldg. Anyone desiring more information can call the club sports office at 353-5108.

Cycle ritual becomes tradition; MSU club pedals in marathon

By SUSAN DWIGHT
State News Staff Writer

During a sun visor, the cyclist straddles the metallic frame of the machine he will be spending a day or more riding. The rider flexes in anticipation of the starting gun, until the blast is heard. A small flow of adrenalin surges as the legs begin the pump, pump, pump they will become so used to.

The ritual has become tradition with many bikers who annually attend the Belle Isle Bike Marathon, the largest event of its kind in the world. On May 21 and 22 tradition takes the MSU club to Detroit to compete for several awards offered by the Wolverine Cycling Club.

The island is packed with bikes of every make and color as participants number in the area of 8,000.

This year's awards include 10-speed bikes and touring kits including tubular tires and other accessories, as compared to the past years when plaques and ribbons were given out.

Every rider receives a patch, plus an additional one each time he completes a certain number of miles.

Participants are adjudged to winners of 10-categories such as "Best Riding Group," "Largest Group Participation," and "Riders from the Farthest Distance."

Years ago MSU took second place for "Largest Group Participation." Last year saw the 47-member MSU group take place and total 3,500 miles.

Members have an opportunity to take more than one prize in the 'Best Riding Group' category," said John Stein, coordinator of the trip, who is certain that the cumulative miles can double.

"It is not a race, but an endurance contest for each person to see how far he or she can go," he continued. "The course is flat, the first 50 to 100 miles are easy for everyone."

Bikers set their own goals, stopping whenever they wish. The most deterrent factor that bikers face is setting a goal that is too high to reach. Stein explained that this can be overcome by thinking of accomplishing 5 miles at a time, instead of 100 all at once.

"If you've accomplished the event and come back with nothing, you've still proven that you're physically able to endure such hard physical activity," said Garry Price, coordinator of the trip.

A large camping area is chosen ahead of time specifically for MSU students, just off the track for convenience.

Stein commented that the event was similar to the most colossal rock concert ever held in 1969: "It's like the Woodstock of bicycling, literally! Both areas are quiet and unassuming and suddenly taken over by a swarm of people."

Round trip bus fare from MSU to Detroit is a mere $5 for students and their bikes. Applications are still available at Velocipede Peddler, 541 E. Grand River Ave.; Community Bike Co-op, 547 E. Grand River Ave.; or from Garry Price at 548 M.A.C. Ave.

REGIONALS BEGIN TODAY Softball team favored

By JOHN SINGLER

State News Sports Writer
For nearly a month now, the MSU softball team has been preparing its case for defense of the national championship.

After losing to Grand Valley State on April 16, 4-1, the Spartans have won 11 of their last 12 games and enter this weekend's regional tournament favored to move on to Omaha and the World Series later this month.

"We're rested and ready to play," said Diane Ulibarri, head coach. "Everyone's healthy and 100 per cent — for the first time this season."

With the exception of the pitching, Ulibarri's line-up is set for the tourney. Gayle Barrons will be at first base, Kathy Strahan at second, Carol Hutchins at shortstop and Diane Spoelstra at third.

With the exception of Spoelstra, the infielders prepped at Lansing high schools and all four are underclassmen.

Patti Lawson will do the catching.

In the outfield, Laurie Zoodsma will be in right, Carmen King in left and center will be shared by Nancy Green and Ann Anderson.

Barrons, Hutchins, King, Lawson and pitcher Nancy Lyons were named to the all-tournament team after last month's Big Ten tourney.

Lyons closed the Big Ten Tournament with three straight wins and Laurel Hills turned the same trick in the state championships two weeks ago.

Those two, along with Gwen White and Sheri Sprangel, comprise the pitching staff. White turned in some fine relief work in the state tournament.

The field for the three-day, double-elimination tournament includes West Virginia, Ohio University, Southern Illinois, Indiana State, Western Michigan, Wisconsin, MSU and the host school, Western Illinois.

The Spartans open today at 11 a.m. against West Virginia. At 4 this afternoon, they will play the winner of the Ohio U — Southern Illinois game.

Western Illinois and Indiana

Siate are cofavored with MSU to win the tournament.

The Spartans have won four of the six meetings with Western Michigan this season and have lost two of three games played with Western Illinois.

Baum new Spartan soccer coach

"Three years ago there were no high schools in Michigan with varsity soccer programs. Last year there were 40," Baum said, pointing out the potential for growth in the state.

"Within four or maybe five years, I'm confident that MSU will be able to field a team with almost all the players coming from high schools in Michigan," Baum said.

"I'm grateful to Joe Kearney for giving me the chance to develop the soccer program here," Baum said. "Kearney was part of a very successful soccer program at Washington. He is really in tune with the needs of the sport," he added.

The soccer squad got off to a successful beginning under Baum as MSU tied Spring Arbor College in an exhibition game, 2-2. Spring Arbor trounced MSU last fall, 6-1.

Baum said he was mildly surprised by the performance, since the focal point of spring practice has been developing skills rather than team coordination and conditioning.

"We had not even been scheduled to play Spring Arbor so we hadn't practiced for them," he said. "Our lack of conditioning hurt us toward the end of the game," he explained. "That won't be the case this fall."

car teams and bowl games don't excite me," he said. "I'm giving it my all and 'Juice' (Land) will be giving it his all and we'll try and get that across to the team."

"It's a matter of being more together," he continued. "I don't think there has been more togetherness on our teams since I've been here."

"If we play together you won't see fleeting glimpses on the field anymore," Bethea said. "You're going to see playing tough all the time and we're going to try and instill this in the rest of the team."

"Ever since January we've been working nonstop and I think we've come a long way even though we haven't played a game. But I can still see everything going the right way for us."

Personally, Bethea said, watching former roommate Mike Cobb become a first round draft choice by the Cincinnati Bengals has given him a lot of incentive for a pro career. "There's no quicker way for a college player to make money than to make it in pro ball," he said.

Bethea said he wants to help MSU restore its football prominence and be the beginning of a new era for the Spartans that he can look back on.

"Who doesn't dream about the Rose Bowl when they're a freshman?" he asked. "But that fades and I'm dealing with now."

"This is our last shot at winning," he said of the seniors.

MSUINGS — Darryl Rogers and his staff offer a first look at the Spartans in an equally split-up scrimmage between the Green and White squads at 2 p.m. Saturday in the stadium.

A 'three-time loser' gives first-rate show

By JOHN CASEY
State News Reviewer

In the male-dominated world of musical performers, where women are usually relegated into the roles of "the torch singer who laments the loss of yet another love" or "the male-created sex symbol songstress who lacks talent but not looks," there is a female who refuses to be considered the weaker sex, submissive to the whims of men. She would rather be just "one of the boys," without risking or compromising her music. Her name is Bonnie Raitt and she proved to the Civic Center audience Tuesday night she's better at making music and relating to crowds than more than just a few men.

Raitt is as good a performer as she is musician. With chunks of strawberry blond, reddish hair falling across her face as she would glide with her guitar playing, she sang in the best gritty, "come on and let's have a good time" voice she could muster. Considering Raitt has been on the road for about two months to promote her new release "Sweet Forgiveness," her delivery was in fine form, though she admitted to sounding "froggy" at times.

Raitt's one-hour set plus three encores was excellently paced with slow folk-oriented ballads cooling off the crowd and Bonnie between the kinetic, bluesy numbers. As she oozed out stinging leads on her bottleneck guitar, the four-piece back-up band lent a driving force to the musical mix. For the first time in recent memory, the acoustics in the Civic Center auditorium did justice to the performer's sound.

Raitt showed she is perhaps the finest interpreter of early rhythm and blues as she spiced the music with numbers penned by a few of her blues mentors, the late Mississippi Fred McDowell and Sippie Wallace. Bonnie's understanding of pioneer blues artistry was phenomenally accurate as she kicked out a mean vocal to complement a hot bottleneck lead in "Write Me A Few of Your Lines."

Songs from "Sweet Forgiveness" served as highpoints in the set. The Jackson Browne composition "Opening Farewell" and Karla Bonoff's "Home" caught Raitt in a melancholy mood, a beautifully striking difference. Not to say that songs like "Three-Time Loser" didn't have the Raitt magic working for them. Her variations in music made for an exciting evening.

The momentum Raitt started while opening up the concert came to an abrupt halt when Jesse Colin Young took over. It took large amounts of concentration to follow Young's beginning pace of 12-string solos with a folk ring. When his more-than-adequate band joined him to run through an uninspired version of "Songbird," Young was smart enough to sense the crowd's restlessness and launched into some up-tempo songs from the just released "Bird On The Wing." With vocal support from wife Suzi, Young and the band started to come alive with "Hey Good Lookin'" and "Louisiana Highway."

Horn player Jim Rothermel blasted out an earth-shaking sax lead to signal the beginning of Young's tribute to his home, "Ridgetop." Keyboardist Scott Lawrence got into some "audience participation" as he shuffled through the crowd as the band played "T Bone Shuffle." The audience was on its feet; Young pulled off a small miracle. Everybody was happy as Raitt came out to get together with Young to sing "Get Together," a fitting end to a fine musical evening.

Blues singer Bonnie Raitt cooked up some spiky tunes in concert Tuesday night at the Civic Center.

'Oh! Calcutta!' greys with the years

It's been nearly a decade since "Oh! Calcutta!" began titillating Broadway audiences at the Belasco. London has given it a West End home at the Duchess for seven years now. Paris has seen it. So have Copenhagen, Amsterdam, Brussels, Stockholm, Hamburg and Sidney. Last Wednesday a newly formed touring company, produced by Barry Singer, brought the review to Lansing's Michigan Theatre.

The theater itself deserves mention. That charming deco house is as old as the memory of its beloved vaudevilles. The maroon and grey rugs are now a few decades greyer. The swirled leaves of its wallpapers swirl greyer still. The house is aged, and for that if for no other reason offers fitting accommodations to "Oh! Calcutta!"

The play has greyed with the years. It's not so charming anymore, not so funny, not so pretty. It has become a curio — chipped, cracked and tacky — but a curio, interesting to the curious.

Its Lansing audience was curious, and — why not admit it — nearly as grey as the rugs and wallpaper. The chic who once filled New York houses for this diversion-with-nudity have been replaced by forms in polyester. They had a heck of a Mother's Day corsage, dad in his Easter shirt-jac, the kids safe at home with the babysitter. They tittered a little and laughed a lot, and all in the right places. They knew what they'd come to see, and they saw it. Honest-to-goodness bodies up there, most of them under 30, some of them attractive. It was everything rumor had been carrying on its back since 1969.

When one thinks back to those rocky days of the late '60s, one remembers that "Oh! Calcutta!" did something of minor import. It put nudity on the Broadway stage for its own sake.

Now one looks at those rather shabby little playlets that surround all the nudity and make "Oh! Calcutta!" a review, and one realizes rather quickly that the format was itself apologetic. The only thing that "Oh! Calcutta!" ever had to offer was the nudity.

It takes a few years (a sense of history, one might say) to discover this, and the American Midwest may have a bit of catching up to do. But there is some consolation. London has had the thing for seven years now, and New York has a revival. O tempora...

Actress-dancer Joan Crawford dies from heart attack at 69

By The Associated Press

Joan Crawford, who began her career as a nightclub dancer and rose to become one of the greatest movie stars of all time, died Tuesday in New York at the age of 69.

Actor Robert Young, who costarred with Crawford in four pictures, said Tuesday: "She was a true queen of the screen and held that place with dignity in every attempt she made."

Crawford's career spanned such a long period — her first film was "Pretty Ladies" in 1925 — that her coworkers found her death by heart attack almost incredible.

Fred Astaire, currently marking his own 77th birthday, made his film debut with Crawford in 1933 in "Dancing Lady." "I hadn't seen Joan in years," he said, "but when I worked with her I found her to be wonderful. She was just as good a dancer as she was an actress."

George Cukor, who directed Crawford in "The Women" (1939), "A Woman's Face" (1941) and "Susan and God" (1949), commented: "She represented the best in the golden period of Hollywood. She started as a personality girl, a dancing flapper, and made herself into an excellent actress."

"She believed in the Hollywood legend," Cukor added, "and was a creature of it."

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter Administration called the hospital industry "obese" Wednesday and blamed inefficiency for much of the rapid increase in hospital bills.

But at a congressional hearing on the administration's proposed legislation to slow the rise in hospital costs, a spokesperson for the hospital industry attacked Carter's plan as "arbitrary rationing of medical advances."

Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Joseph A. Califano said the cost ceiling would not hurt patient care.

Many cost reductions can, if managed appropriately, actually increase the quality of care and put the obese hospital industry in better shape to serve our patients and health care needs," Califano said.

But Andrew W. Miller, president-elect of the Federation of American Hospitals, said if Congress approves the ceiling, it will be voting to establish itself as the moral judge of the dollar value of increased life spans, fewer fatal heart attacks, reduced infant mortality, significant survival rates for cancer patients and every life-saving device or technique."

Califano calls hospitals wasteful

Miller told a joint hearing of two House subcommittees that the quality of hospital care has increased dramatically in recent years, making cost comparisons invalid.

Carter proposed limiting rises in hospital costs to a rate equal to the general inflation rate plus an allowance for improved health care.

The proposal would mean an annual limit of about 9 per cent at the current inflation rate. This compares to annual increases in recent years of about 15 per cent in hospital bills.

Califano said hospitals could achieve substantial savings "by reducing unnecessary utilization, waste and duplication of facilities."

He gave a "fat list of hospital expenditures" that can be reduced:

Of the 240,000 empty beds in community hospitals, he said, "at least 100,000 of these beds are absolutely unnecessary."

Of the 700,000 patients in acute-care hospitals, he said "as many of 100,000 do not need to be there and could be better cared for at home, in skilled nursing facilities or on an outpatient basis."

Use of costly and often unnecessary tests and therapies have increased rapidly in recent years, he said. "Physicians have increasingly made it a practice to order extensive tests for every patient admitted even when there is very little to be gained from such tests."

Califano said hospital costs will double within five years if allowed to go unchecked.

"The largest single bill paid by General Motors is not for steel but for health insurance," he said. "The cost of health insurance added $119 to the cost of each Ford automobile sold during 1975."

Califano asserted that higher hospital costs are devouring revenue needed for child health and other pressing health needs.

Persons without major medical insurance coverage now risk "financial ruin and a lifetime of indebtedness," he said.

Students design handicap facilities for project

Finished works now featured at Kresge Art Gallery exhibit

RONNA HASENAUER designed a circular bathroom for paraplegics and an adjustable kitchen for handicappers are the many student exhibits featured at Kresge Art Gallery through Sunday.

The displays are part of an annual design class project toward developing help for the elderly.

Students were designing groups the industrial students were designing by soon make up the majority of the population, according to the class instructor.

Working with the designs, the great majority of the population have some kind of handicap," Robert S. Alexander, professor of art, said.

Individual who wears a wheelchair has a handicap that needs special attention, as does the person with a psychological fear of something, he said.

The project began when MSU and two other industrial design schools were selected from 40 other colleges by the Zinc Institute Inc.

Inaccessible lavatory and kitchen facilities are among the major problems faced by handicappers, and the students have concentrated largely on designing improvements for those areas.

"Handicappers have to use bathrooms, too, but there aren't that many buildings on campus that have the special facilities they need," Alexander said.

The circular bathroom has a chair on wheels that moves to a lowered sink, toilet and shower.

"Instead of tacking on ideas to existing facilities, we decided to tackle an ideal solution to the problem," Alexander said.

Besides the circular bathroom, students designed a kitchen service cart that can accommodate people over 6 feet and under 4 feet tall, door handles that can be pulled out and adjusted into the display door to find the most convenient height, a kitchen for the arthritic and elderly with a dropped sink area and faucets that are pulled on rather than twisted.

Some of the students used their parents as models in designing devices to aid the elderly. The adjustable kitchen cart was designed by Sherry Mandel, who used her 6 foot 4 inch boyfriend and her 4 foot 10 inch mother as models.

Barbara Malloy designed the security hardware system because, she said, "I've lived in large cities and I know the burglary problem."

The projects won an award from the Zinc Institute after they were presented in late April.

A few students gave up their spring break to finish the project, and three students could not finish their part due to time restrictions.

"There are always difficulties of one kind or another when you're creating new ideas," Alexander said. "The know-how just isn't always there."

Robert Wilsie, one of the students who gave up his spring break to finish work on the bathroom design, said he wouldn't want to try it again.

"It was just too much to handle for those who worked or had other classes. If it had been done just for a grade I wouldn't have done it. But we were responsible to a company and we knew there would be a lot of publicity for MSU," he said.

Malloy said she couldn't even guess the hours she spent on her project.

"Even when I wasn't physically working on it I was always thinking about it," she said.

Alexander said he didn't know how much the projects would cost to install in a home.

"We are hoping to find funding for the further development of the projects," he said.

U.S. restriction alarms Israel

WASHINGTON (AP) — Israel and the State Department are locked in a major lobbying battle over the tentative Carter Administration decision to restrict the transfer of U.S. arms and technology to the Jewish state.

The fight is the first major confrontation between the Israelis and U.S. foreign-policy makers since President Jimmy Carter took office. It underscores a growing and potentially more serious division in Washington-Jerusalem relations.

That is the fear by Israel that the United States is moving to shackle the Jerusalem government's military capability and thereby restrict its flexibility to oppose any Middle East settlement the United States might seek to impose.

The fight centers on three separate but closely related issues. Most important is the so-called PRM 12. The name stands for a "Presidential Review Memorandum," a white House document.

This establishes two categories of U.S. arms clients, one to be favored in terms of coproduction of U.S. arms and the transfer of technology and sophisticated weapons. Israel is not in that category.

Senate supporters of Israel are backing two resolutions stating that American national interest would be served by allowing Israel to coproduce American-designed weapons, and that the United States should do nothing to harm Israel's defense capability.

The State Department is pushing to either drastically modify or delay action on both these Senate resolutions.

Undersecretary of State Lucy Benson has been personally lobbying senators, arguing that passage would pre-empt Carter and would offend Arab nations at a sensitive time in Middle East negotiations.

The Israeli embassy, under the personal leadership of Ambassador Simcha Dinitz, is fighting hard for the amendments, which come up for a vote in the Foreign Relations Committee today.

Israeli supporters charge the State Department with misleading and otherwise unfair tactics but predict the amendments will pass anyway.

More important than the amendments from the Israeli point of view is the need to pressure Carter to modify the PRM.

The maximum Israeli goal is to eliminate the split categories altogether on grounds that each weapons request should be considered on a case-by-case basis.

At the least, Dinitz wants his nation included in the list of preferred clients, which tentatively includes NATO allies, Japan, Australia and New Zealand.

Carter has the PRM, which was drafted by the State Department, on his desk. White House sources say a decision is expected shortly, probably before the end of next week.

These officials and congressional sources say Carter is now inclined to issue the PRM as policy, but Israeli supporters predict the President will feel their pressure and soften some aspects.

The Israelis argue that if Carter does not accept the arguments of the Jewish state, Israel will be weakened considerably. They point out that there has been no new technology provided Israel in two years and that the Arabs are still receiving Soviet arms and are free to buy weapons from European nations who refuse to sell to Jerusalem.

On the record, the administration continues to pledge complete support for Israel's security. Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance told reporters Wednesday in London that "we will make available to Israel whatever they need for their security."

This recalls his earlier statement that "insofar as Israel is concerned, we will supply the arms necessary to her security."

The problem with these formulations from Jerusalem's point of view is that they leave to the United States the decision on what is needed by Israel.

FEC prepares to ask Shapp to return funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Election Commission is preparing to ask Pennsylvania Governor Shapp to give back at least part of nearly $300,000 in federal matching funds on his short-lived 1976 presidential campaign, sources said Wednesday.

FEC met in an executive session

Wednesday to study records from Shapp's campaign in several Democratic primaries. The repayment question was on the FEC's agenda for action at its regular weekly meeting today.

Sources said there were questions about whether Shapp had qualified for the matching funds by raising at least $5,000 in 20 different states in gifts of no more than $250 from any individual.

The sources said the commission staff had recommended repayment after a lengthy investigation. It was not known how much of the $299,066 that Shapp received was at stake.

The governor's office in Harrisburg issued a statement saying Shapp "has been aware for several months that the FEC was conducting a field investigation in several states of contributions to the 1975-76 Shapp for President Committee." Shapp instructed his former campaign officials to cooperate fully, the statement said.

City councilmember criticizes requests of social services for additional money

By MICHAEL ROUSE
State News Staff Writer

Various social services which receive support from the city of East Lansing pled their cases Tuesday night for more money in next year's city budget, but received a wealth of criticism from Councilmember Mary Sharp.

At the final City Council work session on the preparation of the proposed $10.8 million budget, representatives of the Tenants Resource Center (TRC) and Listening Ear crisis intervention center appeared.

The council will approve the final form of the budget Tuesday.

In the proposed budget, TRC is allotted $2,000 — the same amount as last year — out of a request for $6,700. Listening Ear also maintained its present appropriation of $8,450 out of a request for $16,100.

The Drug Education Center received its request, which was lower than the amount currently being spent; the Older People's Program received its requested increase of about $2,000; and the Council on Aging received its present allocation in the city manager's recommendation.

Maurice Grondin, coordinator of Listening Ear, said an additional $600 is needed for increased operating expenses and $6,000 is needed for a part-time person to search for applicable state and federal grants and to coordinate programs in the volunteer center.

Sharp said Listening Ear should check into the possibility of receiving Community Chest aid and said the search for funding should be a function of the center's board of directors.

"When the city steps in, it weakens citizen support," Sharp said. "They say the government is taking over the social service. Then the government better run it and the employees should be on the government staff."

Charles Ipcar, director of TRC, proposed that East Lansing contribute $5,200 — to be matched by Ingham County — for a counseling staff coordinator. With such a supervisor, TRC would be able to receive three full-time employees under the federal Comprehensive Employment and Training Act.

Ipcar said he has received indications that TRC cannot expect any financial support from the city of Lansing.

But Sharp said other municipalities, such as Lansing, Meridian Township and Lansing Township, should contribute to the center since residents of those localities receive information from TRC.

Ipcar said about 40 per cent of the calls come from East Lansing residents, 40 per cent from Lansing and about 7 per cent from Meridian Township.

"If (Lansing Mayor) Graves can fund you in his budget, I'll be more than happy to," Sharp said.

"East Lansing pays double — through the county commission and the city. It appears that your funding depends on where you can get votes," she added.

However, Mayor George Griffiths said funding may be difficult to get from Lansing or Ingham County because such a small part of their jurisdiction is benefited by TRC.

Councilmember John Czarnecki pointed out the problem of people outside the city using city-provided services when he said reservations for Patriarche Park facilities have come from as far away as Owosso.

'Z' showing tonight

Front Line Cinema, a collective of various area political groups, and The Lansing Star will present Costa-Gavras' award-winning 1969 political thriller "Z" tonight and Friday.

The film, based on the novel by Vassili Vassilikos, stars Yves Montand, Irene Papas and Jean-Louis Trintignant. "Z" was cited as the best film of 1969 by the New York Critics Circle, and won Academy Awards that year for best foreign film and best film editing. Pauline Kael of the New Yorker has written of the film: "Remember when the movie ads used to say, 'It will knock you out of your seat'? Well, 'Z' damn near does."

The film will be shown tonight at 8:30 in Parlor C of the Union, and Friday at 7:30 p.m. in B106 Wells Hall. A discussion will follow each showing. A donation is requested.
