

Trade with Cuba banned by House

WASHINGTON (AP) — Counteracting Senate committee action, the House voted Thursday to prohibit U.S. trade with or aid to Cuba.

The House voted 288-119 to prohibit aid to or trade with either Cuba or Vietnam.

The position was urged by Rep. John Ashbrook, R-Ohio, who said the House should specifically take a stand on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee vote Tuesday to lift part of the U.S. trade embargo against Cuba.

The Senate Committee voted 10-7 to approve a proposal by Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., to permit Cuba to buy American medicines, food, and agricultural supplies but not to permit any U.S. purchases of Cuban sugar or other goods.

Ignoring the tradition against criticizing fellow congressmen by name, Ashbrook said the House should not allow McGovern to set U.S. foreign policy.

The House action was taken on a $1.7 billion authorization for U.S. economic aid around the world during the fiscal year starting next October 1.

After adding the amendment barring trade with Cuba and Vietnam, the House approved the bill, 252 to 158, and sent it to the Senate.

The bill includes $1.1 billion for U.S. assistance for food development, population planning and other human resources programs.

The balance is primarily for U.S. contributions for international organizations.

The House also rejected an effort to prohibit any of the foreign aid money for sterilization but approved by a 30-11 standing vote a provision that no U.S. money may be used for forced sterilization programs.

The prohibition against using U.S. aid for voluntary or mandatory sterilization was proposed by Rep. Robert Young, D-Mo., who said "the United States has no right to sponsor and establish extreme population control methods on another nation."

Rep. Jonathan Bingham, D-N.Y., called

runaway population one of the greatest world threats and said "one of the most effective methods of population control is voluntary sterilization and it would be a tragedy if we could not assist in such programs."

Bill on Laetrile introduced by state legislator

By MICKI MAYNARD
State News Staff Writer

Flanked by cancer patients testifying to the validity of the controversial cancer drug Laetrile, Sen. John Welborn, R-Kalamazoo, Thursday introduced legislation allowing the sale of the drug in Michigan.

The medicine, banned by the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) in this country, is the subject of conflicting views from cancer patients who say it works and doctors who argue it is a sham.

Laetrile is manufactured from peach and apricot pits and bitter almonds. Advocates say though the drug may not be of any medical value, it is not harmful and should be legalized.

At a news conference announcing the bill, Welborn pointed out that the only way cancer patients in Michigan can obtain Laetrile treatment is to go outside the country, usually to Mexico, or have the drug smuggled in.

The senator displayed a sugar cube, an aspirin tablet and a vial of Laetrile and said the FDA would call the sugar or aspirin more toxic than the drug.

"This Laetrile is not certified by purity or content," he said. "In fact, the only things the FDA would do to it would be to double the cost. It should be their job to check the dosage and the purity of content."

As Laetrile users looked on, Welborn said it was unfortunate cancer patients had to go outside the country in order to exercise freedom of choice in treatment.

The drug has grown in popularity in the last four to five years. Mexico clinics just over the United States border offer treatment to thousands of Americans who believe the drug is helpful.

Three states — Alaska, Florida and Indiana — have legalized its use.

A Dearborn nurse who learned she had intestinal cancer several years ago said she was confident the drug was helpful and said it helped cure her.

"I was different than most people," Virginia Crawford said. "I walked out of the hospital after diagnosis and knew about Laetrile."

Crawford said though she would recommend the drug to anyone who wanted it, treatment must be combined with the right diet in order to get the full benefits.

She blasted hospital treatment methods as lacking in actual health care and said she would stand up against officials.

"I believe it's right, and I'd like to see them try to take my license away!" she exclaimed.

Another person testifying to the need for Laetrile was a state representative who lost his wife to kidney cancer after 30 years of marriage.

Rep. John Kelsey, D-Warren, said the unwillingness of doctors to tell cancer patients the exact state of their condition led him to support the bill.

"There's mass suffering here," he said. "Chemotherapy (a common cancer radiation treatment) is expensive and doesn't always work. We have to stop the medical community from destroying patients' lives."

Disposal site not wanted by Milliken

ALPENA (UPI) — Gov. William G. Milliken asked federal officials Thursday to withdraw Michigan from consideration as a potential site for nuclear waste disposal.

"I am concerned that the negative economic impacts of the projects could be substantial," Milliken said in a letter to Robert Eri, acting head of the U.S. Energy Research and Development Administration.

"I have also been advised that there are significant questions over the suitability of Michigan for an operation of this nature, due to our geological proximity to the Great Lakes."

"With these considerations among others in mind, I am hereby requesting that the U.S. Energy Research and Development Administration no longer consider the state of Michigan as a participant in the nuclear waste disposal facility exploration program and that all ERDA activities in Michigan in connection with this project cease."

ERDA has been looking at underground salt beds near Alpena as a possible burial site for dangerous radioactive waste.

UNION BUILDING

STIGMA vice president, Pam Kanaar and other members set out Thursday afternoon to demonstrate the Union's inaccessibility for handicapped. With signs, wheelchairs and monetary inspiration, they challenged anyone, handicappers or not, to try and enter the Union in a wheelchair. And all those who tried found out it just can't be done.

It is too good to be true, though, that a coupon to the Union grill and for $5, no strings attached.

It is also literally impossible for those who tried to get into the inaccessible building with the wheelchair provided for many MSU handicappers it is impossible.

It is also literally impossible for those who tried to get into the inaccessible building with the wheelchair provided for many MSU handicappers it is impossible.

The Union is inaccessible because there are two sets of stairs and no wheelchair ramps.

"We're just trying to educate people here on how we can't get into the Union," said Jeff Knoll, a STIGMA member and chairperson of ASMSU Handicapper Council.

Several students did try but none were successful, said Jadoga Perich, a nonhandicapper member of STIGMA. "The ones that thought they could do it found out soon enough they couldn't."

Holding signs that protested "Union building: no pets, no bicycles, no wheelchairs — why not?" the students challenged TAB (Temporary Able-Bodied) students to try to get into the Union.

Kent Barry, ASMSU Student Board president, was among the 10 to 15 students attempting to enter the building in the wheelchair. Once a wheelchair-user himself, he joined the protesters at the Union.

"It's not a student Union," said Penny Metcalfe, a STIGMA member.

STIGMA members said that while the Union is making attempts to serve other students better, it is leaving out handicappers. Paul Turpin, a member, said the management should "make the Union better for everyone."

Pam Kanaar, STIGMA vice president, said there had been some discussion of installing a lift at the loading entrance in the back of the building to make it accessible.

But "using the rear entrance is the old segregation thing," she said. "The technology is available to make one of the front entrances accessible."

"We're not too keen on going in the back door," Turbin said.

Student reaction to the protest was mixed, the protesters said. Some students told the STIGMA members they would not patronize the Union.

One student, however, told the protesters, "You're lucky to be alive."

When another student approached the steps and was asked to try it he said, "I can't do it — nobody could."

"See the point," a handicapper replied.

INTERVENTION MAY HAVE RAISED CONFLICT

Nixon refused to send troops to Israel

By BARRY SCHWEID
State News Staff Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard Nixon rejected as "sheer madness" a proposal that he send two American troops to Israel during the 1973 war to use a cease-fire while Russian troops moved into Egypt and Syria.

Nixon took credit for preserving peace but it would have raised "the risk of big-power conflict."

Nixon took credit for preserving peace but it would have raised "the risk of big-power conflict."

brought to bear on the Israeli government, Nixon said that like the storied Mafia "Godfather," he "gave them an offer that they could not refuse" — a promise of unflagging U.S. support whenever Israel came under attack.

Israel subsequently relented and the stage was set for negotiated interim settlements with Egypt and Syria.

The timing of the broadcast of Nixon's interview led President Jimmy Carter to move up his news conference by five hours to avoid a conflict.

Carter told reporters Thursday he had seen only "a small part" of the first interview and did not intend to watch the second. "It didn't change my opinion of a President Nixon," he said. "I personally think he did violate the law and did commit impeachable offenses."

Carter added: "Most of the people do agree with what I have just said. I think he's mistaken."

The interview with Nixon was shown over a makeshift network of 155 stations. Frost is paying Nixon $600,000 for the interviews, plus a percentage of the gross.

Without having to deal with the tensions of Watergate, which forced him to resign in 1974, Nixon sketched with considerable detail his impressions of Henry A. Kissinger, his principal foreign policy adviser, Chairman Mao Tse-tung of China and Soviet leaders Nikita Khrushchev and Leonid I. Brezhnev.

Nixon said Kissinger "couldn't stand the bureaucratic infighting" and that Kissinger feuded with William P. Rogers, who he finally succeeded as secretary of state in 1973.

Nixon said Kissinger had suggested "maybe a half-dozen times" that perhaps he (Kissinger) ought to quit.

Kissinger advised Nixon it might be politically dangerous to send more than limited military support to Israel during the 1973 war but Nixon gave the order: "Send everything that flies."

Mao Tse-tung, despite complications of at least a partial stroke and having to converse almost entirely in monosyllables, "was in charge of himself and he was in charge of China" until his death in 1976.

A tough and ruthless leader, Mao lived simply and was aided by "rather pretty Chinese girls" who lifted him up and helped him walk.

Khrushchev, the late Soviet leader who steered his country away from the harsh regime of Josef Stalin, was both boorish and brilliant, with "a terrible inferiority complex."

By contrast, Brezhnev, his successor and current head of the Kremlin hierarchy, is not so quick but is "far better mannered" and "a much safer man to have sitting there with his finger on the nuclear bomb."

Somewhat of a "fashion-plate," Nixon said Brezhnev likes beautiful cars and beautiful women.

Nixon's analytical description of the October 1973 war in the Middle East began with what he called a "heated discussion" with Brezhnev at their summit meeting earlier, in June of that year.

According to Nixon, the Soviet leader insisted that Nixon force the Israelis to withdraw from all the former Arab territory captured in the Six-Day War of 1967.

Nixon said he refused because he thought Israel's interests would be served by negotiating some adjustments in the borders with its Arab neighbors. "I still believe

Carter's opinion of Nixon not altered

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Jimmy Carter expressed a personal belief Thursday that Richard M. Nixon "did violate the law" in handling the Watergate scandal, but suggested the former president has convinced himself he was innocent.

Following a formal television-radio news conference, Carter was surrounded by reporters seeking his reaction to the initial Nixon interview on Watergate with David Frost, broadcast last week.

"It didn't change my opinion about President Nixon," said Carter, adding that he watched only "a small part" of the interview.

Carter amplified: "I personally think that he did violate the law, and I think he did commit impeachable offenses. I think he doesn't think he did...I think he has rationalized in his own mind that he did all these things for the benefit of his staff members and so forth, and that he didn't have any criminal intent. I think he's mistaken."

Carter called the new conference, originally scheduled for the same evening hour as the second Nixon broadcast, to report on his six-day trip to London and Geneva.

The President said his participation in London summits with the leaders of other major democratic nations helped spark "a quiet sense that we have justified reasons for confidence."

He said the leaders he met with there came away with "a renewed spirit of hope and confidence" that they can compete successfully with the Soviet Union and its Warsaw Pact allies.

On other topics, Carter said: "Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., the 1972 Democratic presidential candidate, was 'mistaken' in arguing last weekend that Carter's economic policies closely resemble those of former Republican President Gerald R. Ford. Carter cited a variety of social welfare plans he has proposed, ranging from more public works to special efforts to combat youth unemployment."

He does not view McGovern or California Gov. Edmund Brown as political threats in the next presidential election year, jokingly suggesting that he might not be interested in seeking reelection in 1980. "I feel quite secure in my position," Carter said.

Israel continues to have a special relationship with the United States but, "I don't think that there can be any reasonable hope for a settlement of the Middle Eastern question...without a homeland for the Palestinians." But he said details on such a homeland should await further negotiations.

"FBI agents should not be immune from prosecution on charges of illegal entries carried out while they may have been on assignment. Carter, saying the agents merit "no special excuse," endorsed Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell's handling of investigations into FBI activities that already have led to one federal court indictment.

Carter pictured McGovern as the only prominent Democrat who has questioned his programs. But when asked if there was a danger of losing liberal support, he said, "There's always' that danger." He described the liberals in the Democratic party as "very difficult to please."

The President also acknowledged he had sharp policy differences with AFL-CIO President George Meany but insisted that Meany's criticism "doesn't mean any rupture in our relationship."

Back in the international area, Carter said he could not set a target date for achieving full diplomatic relations with China because of problems in settling long-standing monetary claims between the two countries and difficulties over Taiwan.

He talked anew of a determination to balance the federal budget before his four-year term expires. And he said he hoped Congress will vote early next year to overhaul the welfare system. He acknowledged it would take two years after that to implement welfare revisions.

President Jimmy Carter, Thursday, in a nationally televised press conference in Washington, suggested that his recent trip to Europe resulted in a "quiet sense" of confidence among the Western allies.

FEC orders fund repayment

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pennsylvania Gov. Milton Shapp was ordered Thursday to pay back almost $300,000 in federal Democratic presidential nomination.

The Federal Election Commission ordered the repayment because investigators found that Shapp's supporters had made numerous claims about raising the amounts of money from the number of donors required by the election law for a candidate to qualify for matching federal funds.

Shapp, declining to leave his Harrisburg, Pa., office in the state capitol building, had no comment on the commission's ruling.

However, his lawyer, Gregory Harvey, said there was no evidence that Shapp was personally aware of the irregularities. Harvey said Shapp would fight the repayment order.

FEC Counsel William Oldaker said the irregularities were uncovered during audits of all 15 candidates who got matching federal campaign funds last year. He said that so far no other irregularities have been discovered.

The six-member commission voted 5-0 to order Shapp to make repayment, with one member abstaining.

Meanwhile, the commission was pursuing an investigation that could result in prosecutions for others involved in fund-raising for Shapp.

The commission disclosed that it has reached coordination agreements with 22 people in the case. Eighteen agreed to pay fines ranging from $25 to $750, the others agreed to testify in the continuing probe.

In voting for the repayment order, Commissioner Thomas Harris said, "I am puzzled and distressed with the rather casual and cavalier fashion by which many of these people have entered into this scheme. I find it shocking."

In deciding that Shapp was unqualified for the $299,000 campaign draw from the federal treasury, the commission said that illegal contributions could not be counted in qualifying candidates for the matching federal dollars.

Under the federal election code, Shapp is personally responsible for paying back the funds.

The case involves a provision of the new post-Watergate election laws which provide federal financing for presidential elections. In the primaries and other pre-convention campaigning, the government matches the private contributions made by candidates once a threshold has been reached.

Harvey argued Thursday that if Shapp erred in accepting campaign committee bookkeeping, so did the FEC auditors who approved the claim.

Arabian oil fire brought under control

DHARAN, Saudi Arabia (AP) — A mysterious explosion and pipeline fire in the heart of the world's greatest oil producing area was brought under control Thursday before it could cripple Saudi Arabia's oil production and export facilities, oil company officials said.

Though contained, the fire was still reported burning Thursday at the Abqaiq oil field in the desert about 35 miles from the Persian Gulf.

The Arabian American Oil Co. (Aramco) which operates the field and most Saudi oil production, said one employee was killed and 13 others were hospitalized with burns and other injuries. A U.S. Embassy official said the dead man was a Saudi foreman and that no Americans were believed to be among the injured.

The cause of the explosion was not immediately determined. American diplomats in Saudi Arabia said the possibility of sabotage was being investigated, and a source on Capitol Hill in Washington said he understood Palestinian terrorists had set off the giant blaze with satchel explosives to protest the possibility of a negotiated settlement between Israel and Arabs.

But Frank Junger, American president of the said of the sabotage possibility: "Absolutely not. It's a pipeline failure."

Port shutdown ends in N. Ireland

LARNE, Northern Ireland (AP) — A fleet of ferries loaded with container trucks sailed into the port of Larne Thursday, ending a 10-day shutdown by striking Protestant extremists, the harbor authority said.

Police and British troops sealed off the docks as the trucks rolled off the vessels with their cargoes of raw materials for Northern Ireland industries.

Striking dockers jeered the truck drivers and ferry crews, but no violence was reported.

Closing of this east coast port, some 40 miles north of Belfast, was the only major victory by striking Protestants in their campaign to paralyze the province's economy and force the British government to take a hard line against the largely Roman Catholic Irish Republican Army.

The IRA wants to unite the province with the predominantly Catholic Irish Republic.

Voter bill squeaks through rules group

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter Administration's election day voter registration bill squeezed through the Senate Rules Committee Thursday by a 5-4 vote.

Republican opponents abandoned their fight against the bill in the committee, calling it an exercise in futility in view of the Democratic majority's rejection of amendments they proposed.

"The sooner we can carry our case to the floor and the public, the better," said Sen. Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., the committee's ranking minority member.

He said he had many more amendments but it was a waste of time to offer them in view of the way the Democrats were voting.

James B. Allen of Alabama was the only Democratic member of the committee who voted with the Republicans against reporting the bill favorably to the Senate.

Last week, the House Administration Committee approved the legislation on a straight party-line vote.

Abortion issue heads for debate

LANSING (UPI) — After languishing in committee for two years, a proposal that would take the first step toward outlawing abortion in Michigan is headed for emotion-charged debate in the state House.

The House Policy Committee Thursday approved on a 6-2 vote a resolution calling for a constitutional convention to draft a "right to life" amendment to the U.S. Constitution. Such an amendment would have to be approved by 34 states.

Committee Chairperson Joseph Forbes, who strongly opposes the resolution, nonetheless paved the way for it to reach the House floor by placing it on the committee's agenda. The former committee chairperson repeatedly refused to bring the question up for discussion.

Forbes fought the resolution in committee, delivering a strongly worded and highly personal appeal for its defeat.

Misconception of PBB study angers author

By MICKI MAYNARD
State News Staff Writer

The author of a study on PBB expressed anger and concern Thursday after results of his tests were misinterpreted by an agriculture official, causing confusion on the issue. Agriculture Department Deputy Director Donald Isleib told a Senate committee hearing testimony on a bill lowering PBB contamination levels that new evidence indicated the measure would only take care of 20 per cent of contaminated animals. Isleib said the bill would cause the state to test most of Michigan's 800,000 dairy animals on 10,000 farms at a cost of $190 million. The House-approved bill, sponsored by Rep. Francis Spaniola, D-Corruna, is based on figures showing that around 80,000 animals would need to be tested at a cost of $27 million. The author of the study, researcher Fred Frye, said the tests cited by Isleib were made

Rocky expression nets arty arrests

Painting the "Class of 1873" rock near Beaumont Tower may be a form of self-expression but you'd better be careful if you decide to express yourself this way. Early Wednesday morning the Department of Public Safety discovered 10 people using the rock as canvas for their artwork. Campus police said at least five were engaged in the actual painting while the other five held the paint. Not everyone is an art lover as they found out when they were arrested for malicious destruction of property.

Cable TV viewership increases

By GEORGIA HANSHEW
State News Staff Writer

Two thirds of East Lansing's cable subscribers interviewed said they have had public access TV, according to a survey conducted by two MSU students and a doctoral candidate from the Telecommunication Department. The survey shows public access viewership has increased in the last 18 months. Associate Professor John Abel told the East Lansing Cable Commission Wednesday night, comparing the results of a recent telephone survey to earlier ones taken in the fall of 1975.

They watch and whether they are satisfied with their cable service. Muth told the commission one of their goals is to discover whether cable television "enhances a sense of community" among East Lansing residents.

Other results of the first survey include the following:

- Four out of five respondents who subscribe to cable TV said their primary reason was to "get more channels." One-fourth mentioned better reception, and one-fourth mentioned a specific program or channel they wanted to watch.

- Reasons given for not subscribing to cable were lack of interest in TV, the cost and good reception on their present TV hookup.

- When told about special two-way fire detection and burglar alarm services which can be attached to cable systems in each home, more than half of the cable subscribers said they would be interested in getting the services in their homes.

Also at the meeting, the cable commission took steps to form a "cable coalition" of local communities in the Midwest with cable TV.

The coalition's purpose, the commission said, would be to communicate state and local concerns to the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) and the legislature.

The idea for the coalition grew out of a conflict between the cable commission and the FCC last year over the commission's franchise stipulations with National Cable Company of East Lansing.

After discussing its objections to some of the FCC's requirements with Rep. Bob Carr, D-East Lansing, the commission concluded that its voice could most effectively be heard if it joined with other local communities, commission chairperson Carolyn Stell said.

The commission has contacted 44 communities throughout the Midwest, and the 16 responses it has received so far have been generally favorable to the formation of a coalition, commission secretary Mary Padilla said.

Cable commissioners set up a committee to begin planning a regional conference for this fall.

In other action, Randy VanDalsen, National Cable representative, announced that East Lansing subscribers will have available in September a pay TV service — Home Box Office — which will broadcast nightclub acts, films and sporting events at an approximate cost of $6 a month.

The cable commission also relaxed one of its conditions for the proposed interconnection of the East Lansing and MSU public channels with Lansing.

ASMSU'S split vote

The 7-6 vote by the ASMSU Student Board to support a measure endorsing the Committee to Stop the MSU Iran Film Project was commendable, but the closeness of the vote indicates that several Student Board members are laboring under grave misconceptions.

The informed position of those who supported the committee is summed up in the language of the bill, which declares that MSU students "do not wish to see the name of our University placed upon any materials that would glorify this wealthy dictatorship."

Iran is a wealthy and hideously corrupt dictatorship, and it is disheartening that Student Board members Rob Vatter, Thomas Lammy, Sue Lalk, Jim Randall, Kirsten Frank and Kathy Wright could not see beyond the end of their noses to repudiate the MSU-Iran connection. Student Board President Kent Barry abstained in the conflict in an effort to "remain neutral."

Barry and those who voted against the bill reasoned that the films MSU is making for Iran deal only with Iran's past history and in no way support the present dictatorship.

Such logic is based on several misconceptions. The fact that MSU has linked its name to an Iran-backed project is in itself a tacit approval of the Shah's regime. Taking money from the Iranian government to finance this project is equivalent to stealing money from those Iranians who paid for the right to speak out with their freedom and, in countless cases, their lives.

In the words of Clarence Green, codirector of the Office of Black Affairs and a nonvoting member of the Student Board, "The project is a piece of propaganda with MSU's stamp of approval on it. MSU's name means MSU's approval."

Another misconception inherent in the reasoning of those who voted against the bill was summed up by Stuart Carter, a cosponsor of the bill, who pointed out that coordinating the project through MSU will enhance the films' distribution prospects. High school students may soon be fed pabulum about Iran's "glorious" history.

Moreover, the bill provides for sending a letter to the MSU Board of Trustees, urging a cancellation of the project. The credibility of this stand has been severely diluted by the split vote.

It is indeed unfortunate that so many members of the University community are apathetic to the consequences of MSU's name being associated with a piece of political propaganda. That apathy was perhaps reflected in the closeness of the vote.

Ideally, the Student Board should avoid getting involved in international affairs and concentrate on dealing with matters of substantive importance to the student body. MSU's connection with Iran is not some ephemeral, faraway thing, but has immediate and real impact on student life. Those who voted against the bill should be reprimanded for their shortsightedness.

Carter at the summit

President Carter's first foray into foreign summitry appears to have been a success, but several troubling controversies remain.

Carter's sojourn to Europe to meet with the heads of the Western democracies transpired against a backdrop of suspicion. Many of the leaders are alienated by Carter's preachy style and commitment to human rights, a philosophy they fear may be undermining detente with the Soviet Union.

Carter's expansive style apparently won over most of them, including West Germany's intractable Helmut Schmidt. Grave problems still remain. Several of our allies — especially West Germany — are hesitant about providing greatly needed stimulus for their respective economies in an effort to alleviate world unemployment. Moreover, Carter apparently failed to convince West Germany of the inadvisability of selling nuclear technology to Brazil.

Carter's first trip abroad was a success more in style than substance — much like the domestic end of his administration.

Mad as hell? Unplug that set, America

Back in those cold days of February, when nights were spent cuddling up to a warm TV set, eating TV Tyme popcorn and engrossing oneself in the good reading of TV Guide, a frigid note was struck in these pages when I professed to be "mad as hell" at the ridiculousness known as television network programming.

In the same ranting and raving style made famous by the hero of "Network," Howard Beale, I pointed out numerous ethical violations which referee Nicholas Johnson has been blowing the whistle on for years. Little did I know what was to come.

Attacking the sacred cow of television proved to be as controversial as the medium itself. People finding the time to unglue themselves from the TV set long enough to read (do people still read?) why I was "mad as hell" got "mad as hell" and responded accordingly. More than a dozen letters to the editor and viewpoints found their way to the opinion desk — most of them from people accusing me of picking on television and dwelling too much on the negative aspects. I found out that, like religion and politics, discussing TV in an honest light is a touchy subject. C'est la vie, I guess.

Those nasty letters didn't bother me too much, but there were some comments which I found to be noteworthy. There was one correspondence from an old acquaintance that said, in effect, I was unduly getting upset at "the chromacolor mess" of TV programming.

"There's really nothing you can do about it, so relax, getting 'mad as hell' will adversely affect your health," he said as if to give some friendly advice. It sounded good, but I still remained "mad as hell." That is until earlier this month when I found a better solution to deal with televised absurdity. Instead of being mad, I've joined the "unplugged generation."

Skimming a recent issue of that revolutionary rag turned gossip sheet, Rolling Stone, a small ad in the back pages caught my eye and subsequent attention. Under the bold headline, GET MAD AS HELL AND DON'T TAKE IT ANYMORE, the copy continued by saying "declare your independence from TV by supporting the Unplug American Coalition (UAC) in its efforts to rid the nation of television addiction."

It sounded too good to be true until I got to the part about "kicking the TV habit" by purchasing official UAC bumper stickers, T-shirts and buttons. Though these commercial aspects implanted suspicions about the overt integrity of these "unpluggers," my interest was raised to the point of investigation.

The Unplug America Coalition was born in Ann Arbor on April 1, the proud parents being three ex-U-M students — Larry Lobert, Chris Stoddard and Yvonne Hoarty. It was created, in their words, "to demonstrate their disgust at the poor quality of television programming." Hey, these are my kind of people. If they wouldn't have said the institution of television is a "perverse art form," you could bet your bippy (OK, I'll admit to watching "Laugh-In" when I was young and gullible) I certainly would have.

"We would like to see the networks this exposure to put across its message the two future projects now in the

On Sunday, the UAC has selected the series "Delvecchio" as the target of its boycott against inane cop-and-robber shows. They will be sending a 200-watt model electric plug to CBS network.

The Unplug America Coalition is behind the national moratorium on viewing to take place June 15.

"We're asking that people take out of their TV viewing to tune out."

"Attacking the sacred cow of television proved to be as controversial as the medium itself. People finding the time to unglue themselves from the TV set long enough to read why I was 'mad as hell' got 'mad as hell' and responded accordingly."

upgrade program," said founder Lobert. Currently the networks are not inspired to put on decent shows; they're merely interested in the revenue accrued from advertising dollars, the UAC believes.

I wasn't the only media person to see the "unplug yourself" ad. A Toronto radio station and the Detroit Free Press caught the "mad as hell/let's unplug" fever and featured the UAC. The coalition has used said.

So, if you're cruising campus on beautiful spring days and pass the UAC with a "I'm Turned Off" T-shirt or "Thank You For Not Watching Television Proudly Pinned to My Shirt" know who it is.

I can be very friendly.

Letters

No Viet aid

This letter is in response to your editorial last Friday about aid to Vietnam. I disagree with your reasoning.

First, the United States did not lose the Indochina war. If anybody lost the war, South Vietnam did. The United States pulled out of Vietnam after the signing of the "so-called" Paris accords on Jan. 27, 1973. Secondly, Vietnam should not receive any aid — simply because they violated the 1973 treaty by invading the South. Now they say we must abide by the peace treaty.

On our Missing in Action (MIA) issue, North Vietnam has done little. There are 87 missing Americans who were known to have been alive in Hanoi. Not one has been returned or accounted for. But Hanoi has published data and photographs of the men. Ask Mr. and Mrs. Walter Estes of Williamston. Their son is one of the glaring tragedies.

Since the fall of South Vietnam, North Vietnam has made over $7 billion on selling abandoned equipment. First they said we owed them $3.25 billion in reconstruction aid, now it is $4.75 billion.

The Vietnamese brag about humanity — yet they are still digging up bodies and selling them back to the French at $1,000 a shot from the French-Indochina war. You also write how mistreated the Vietnamese have been. Then I strongly suggest that you visit Vietnam and see what they have done in restructuring the South.

The Hanoi government even lied to its own people.

When the invaders from the North entered South Vietnamese cities they came with gifts for their "mistreated" brothers. The invaders were confronted with new homes, automobiles and a thriving economy. When the North Vietnamese entered the homes they were again astounded to find air-conditioning, colored television sets, etc. . .

And finally, before we give North Vietnam anything, what about our own 250,000 wounded and maimed? Do we forget them? I also do not like being blackmailed by a foreign country. When we do anything the Vietnamese want, they will then tell us about our MIAs.

You see, I worked on opening negotiations with Vietnam the past year and have been exposed to much more than you.

Question

After reading Bob Ourlian's column in Monday's paper, a question arose in my mind. Was he trying to make a point or trying to be funny? Needless to say, he failed miserably at both.

Several additional comments:
1) What seems to be Ourlian's favorite verb, adverb, noun, adjective and exclamation is not used by practically everybody in all walks of life.

2) Ourlian's ability to articulate his feelings leaves much to be desired.

3) If this column is indicative of his journalistic ability, it seems likely that he will be an unemployed journalist upon graduation.

Don't forget MIAs

In last Friday's State News you printed an article titled "Vietnam needs aid." I can agree that Vietnam needs aid. What is impossible for me to ever agree with is your statement that "Though some of the MIAs have never been accounted for it would be unrealistic to push this issue further. Those who have not been accounted for are almost certainly dead."

I have a friend who is an MIA and I have heard his son cry for his father in his sleep. His son has come to me with tears in his eyes, asking "Is daddy coming home?" What am I to say to the boy? Your dad is "almost certainly dead." Would that satisfy you?

I know that Vietnam needs aid to recover from the devastation of the war, but must we sacrifice our MIAs to do it? I hope the United States has more respect for its people than to turn its back on the sacrifices made by the MIAs and the people that knew them.

"IT IS BETTER TO LIGHT A CANDLE..."

Nixon on TV

ART BUCHWALD

WASHINGTON — It's very hard to get the family together these days. We only seem to gather for graduations, weddings and when Nixon goes on television.

Last week it was our turn to have everyone over to the house because Cousin Edith had us over to her house when Nixon resigned. We all gathered around the TV set — Cousin Edith, Uncle Harold, Aunt Alice and Granny.

Granny is the only one in the family who is still 1,000 per cent for Nixon. She thinks the press drove him from office and she doesn't mind saying it to me. "You and Robert Redford and Dustin Hoffman are responsible for that poor man being driven into exile."

I keep explaining to her that it wasn't just Robert Redford and Dustin Hoffman who did it. If Jason Robards hadn't backed them up the would have never been able to do it. Anyway, after dinner my wife gave each person a box of Kleenex and we waited for the show to begin.

As it opened up, Granny said incredulously, "Oh, my goodness. He's developed an English accent."

"That isn't Richard Nixon," I explained to her. "That's David Frost."

"What's an Englishman doing interviewing Richard Nixon on American television?" she wanted to know.

"Frost offered Nixon $600,000 plus 10 per cent of the profits to appear on TV."

"Nixon would never take money for appearing on television," Granny said. "That would be checkbook journalism."

"Well, he did."

"Hush," said Cousin Edith, "or we'll never know the truth about Watergate."

Frost started to ask about the tapes and what was said on them.

Nixon replied that everyone could put their own interpretation on them, but he could categorically say he did nothing to obstruct justice.

"I believe him," Uncle Harold said. "I never did before, but a man wouldn't go on television for $600,000 and lie."

"Why not?" I asked.

"Because if the FCC found out about it, they could take the station's license away."

Frost kept zeroing in on what Nixon said to Haldeman, Ehrlichman and Colson about the hush money.

Granny started to get mad. "What right does an Englishman have to ask him questions about American hush money?"

"He's only doing his job, Granny," I said. "There does seem to be a discrepancy between what Nixon said and what he really meant."

When Nixon was asked what was on the 18 1/2 minutes of tape that had been erased, he said that it was merely a discussion between himself and Haldeman on a public relations offensive to counteract the political sloopover of Watergate.

"I believe him," Cousin Harold said. "What else could they have possibly talked about?"

As the show went on, Nixon switched from details to what was in his heart. He said if he had any fault it was that he wasn't a good butcher.

"I didn't even know Nixon was a butcher," Granny said.

"That's just a figure of speech," I told her.

"He was quoting a prime minister of Britain who said a leader has to be a butcher."

Nixon admitted he lied to the people, but they were little lies and to protect Ehrlichman and Haldeman, because he didn't want to do to the Eisenhower did to Sherman Adams.

"I believe him," Uncle Harold said. "Nixon was only trying to protect himself."

At the end of the show Nixon would never grovel before the people, and if he had made mistakes were of the heart and not the head. This moment that everyone grabbed Kleenex boxes.

Granny was the most moved. Finally, she pulled herself together and said, "Well, I hope Robert Redford and Dustin Hoffman are satisfied. They've destroyed the best president we've ever had, but they made him go on television with his soul to an Englishman."

All Uncle Harold could say was "I believe it. I believe it. I believe it." Los Angeles Times

'WATCHDOGS' NEEDED FOR POSTS UCAG seeks new members

By NANCY ROGIER
State News Staff Writer
On May 24 Student Council will hold elections for students to serve on the six Academic Council standing committees. This is the first of a series to inform students on the functions and responsibilities of each committee.

Wanted: students who enjoy being watchdogs. No, the above is not an advertisement for a psychology conditioning experiment. What it means is that the University Committee on Academic Governance (UCAG) is looking for interested students to serve as members for the 1977-78 school year. Five positions are open on the committee and four

Meet set by PIRGIM

PIRGIM will hold an organizational meeting Sunday for interested persons who would like to become volunteers for the organization.

The meeting will focus on organizing potential volunteers and discussing new projects for PIRGIM to look into.

Anyone can attend the meeting in 340 Union at 7:30 p.m.

PIRGIM is a student-supported research group which conducts many projects both on the state and campus level. Some of its projects include nuclear power, freedom of information laws and various consumer concerns.

members must be on Student Council.

Steve Spivey, Student Council member and vice chairperson of UCAG, described the committee as the "watchdog agency of the University system itself." He said the committee deals with the entire academic system and is responsible for overseeing what goes on at the all-University level and why.

UCAG plays an indispensable part in the makeup of Academic Council. Each year, the committee is charged with running Academic Council standing committee elections. Members collect, screen or make nominations and recommendations to the other five council standing committees and interview applicants.

UCAG also serves as a watchdog to the Bylaws for Academic Governance. "We are constantly reviewing academic bylaws and changing them when needed," Spivey said. When an interpretation problem arises in council or committee it is referred to UCAG for review and possible solution.

The committee's major issue in bylaw interpretation this year was the dilemma of delegated authority, a bylaw term currently under much discussion.

Spivey explained the term as authority given to the faculty through the board of trustees and the president that committees are supposed to exercise in the committee's particular area. For example, the University Committee on Academic Policy is expected to act in the faculty's delegated authority on grading policies.

"It's been a constant problem all year long," Spivey said. He added that if the matter was not resolved at the May 31 Academic Council meeting, it will be placed on next year's agenda.

Spivey applauded the committee for the chance it gives students to know the "interworking" of a major group of governing structures, such as Student and Faculty Councils. He likened the committee to an internal police probing into the "why" behind University action. Ed Wilson, active committee member and Student Council member, added that UCAG is "good for students who want to get involved." "It's good to get insight into how University government works," he said.

UCAG is in charge of all

Academic Council Standing Committee elections. Student Council will elect student members May 24. Applications are available starting Monday through noon on Friday in 10 Linton Hall. According to Spivey, roughly 30 positions are open, with at least two nominations needed for each. Students can return views, to be held by UCAG, start Wednesday at 5 p.m. and run until Friday. Monday also be used as an interview day if necessary. They will be held in 10 Linton Hall.

More power and more bass for a little more money. That's the Intermediate System. The Scott R-316 is a full-sized, full-featured receiver with enough power for those great bass notes (below 45 Hz) that characterize popular music today. What this means is you can use medium efficiency speakers in a medium sized room and still get great gutsy sound. The Genesis I speakers are those speakers. You get adequate sound pressure levels in a normally damped 9x12 room with power to spare from the Scott R-316. So Fleetwood Mac sounds like Fleetwood Mac and feels like Fleetwood Mac. The Kenwood 1033 is a belt-drive turntable with a very sensitive, positively tracking tonearm; a completely new suspension system that eliminates the problem of acoustic feedback; and a heavy zinc platter for smoothest rotation. The Audio Technica AT1IE cartridge requires a relatively low tracking force and features a bonded diamond tip mounted on a cylindrical stylus tube. Unusual high frequency tracking ability is the result.

ARMS CONSIDERATIONS GRANTED U.S., Israeli rift healed

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Jimmy Carter and Israeli supporters in the Senate reached a compromise today to allow the Jewish state special consideration in receiving American arms and technology, congressional sources reported.

The compromise was worked out in an hour-long meeting at the White House this morning between Carter, Vice President Walter F. Mondale and Sens. Jacob K. Javits, R.N.Y.; Frank Church, D-Idaho; and others.

The meeting was sought after reports circulated that Carter intended to leave Israel out of a preferred category of nations which would receive shipments of sophisticated American weapons and technology as well as being allowed to coproduce certain type of arms.

Under pressure from the Israeli Embassy, two amendments were introduced stating that American interest would be served by allowing Israel to coproduce key weapons and stating that the United States should take no action to damage Israel's military capability.

After the White House meeting, the sources said Carter agreed to a proposal by Sens. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash.; and Clifford Case, R-N.J.

They asked for a presidential determination that where restrictions apply on coproduction, technological transfer and sale of weapons, there be an exception for countries "who are friendly to the United States and must depend on advanced weaponry to offset quantitative and other" matters in order to maintain a regional military balance.

While not mentioning Israel by name, the sources said Carter specifically had the Jewish state in mind in agreeing to issue the determination.

The only addition that Carter made to the Jackson-Case language was to insert the qualification that an exception would require a presidential determination.

In exchange for the President's concession, Case and other Israeli supporters agreed to "shelve" one of the amendments dealing with coproduction. The President also worked out a compromise with the Israeli supporters on the question of supplying Israel new F16 fighter-bombers.

Carter reportedly said he would give prompt consideration to long-standing Israeli requests for engines and transmissions to power the Jewish state's new Chariot tank.

As part of the tradeoff, Sens. Church and Javits agreed to modify their amendment dealing with past U.S. commitments to supply Israel with new F16 fighter-bombers as well as allowing the Jerusalem government rights to coproduce the plane. The original amendment included a reference to a 1974 section of the Sinai agreement between Israel and Egypt whereby then-Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger promised Israel large numbers of F16s as well as coproduction rights.

However, though that specific reference would be eliminated, Carter promised to write a letter to Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., assuring him that the United States would honor all previous commitments concerning arms supplies to the Jewish state.

The AHEPA Week activities, entitled "A Salute to AHEPA," will begin Sunday with a divine liturgy and a memorial service for deceased AHEPAians and members of the Daughters of Penelope, the women's auxiliary group of AHEPA. Following will be a testimonial buffet attended by Sen. Earl Nelson, D-Lansing, who will present AHEPA with a legislative proclamation in honor of the chapter and its 50-year members.

On Wednesday, the public will be allowed to browse from 7 to 8 p.m. over the AHEPA exhibit of the historical contributions of Americans of Greek descent, which is loan from the national headquarters in Washington, D.C.

At 6 p.m. on May 21 there will be a banquet and dance with guests of honor including Lansing Mayor Gerald W. Graves, State Atty. Gen. Frank J. Kelley, Michigan Supreme Court Justice and former Michigan Gov. G. Mennen Williams and various Order of AHEPA and Daughter of Penelope officials.

Romantic 'Annie' Woody Allen's best

By BYRON BAKER
State News Reviewer

"Annie Hall" is Woody Allen's best film. It is not only his best film, it is also his truest, most romantic and most reflective work thus far.

This is a landmark achievement for the 41-year-old filmmaker. In "Annie Hall," Allen has finally managed to integrate the distinctive, personal humor for which he is noted into a more complex, more thoughtful narrative form.

"Annie Hall" is not so much a comedy (though it boasts some of the funniest comic sequences yet created by Allen) as it is a tentative exploration of the relationship between a man and a woman. Indeed, it is one of a very few American movies to probe with insight and an exquisite sensitivity of a loving relationship.

The film (written by Allen with Marshall Brickman, his "Sleeper" collaborator) depicts in elliptical vignettes the love life of New York comic Alvy Singer, most specifically concentrating on his lengthy, intense affair with fledgling singer Annie Hall (Diane Keaton).

In the very opening scene, Alvy peers into the camera and confides his feelings about the relationship to the audience. A loosely connected series of episodes follow, freely sketching out his childhood, his past lovers and his deep, complicated love for Annie. We are shown the development of the relationship through its various stages: we watch Alvy and Annie grow, and ultimately we see them grow apart.

With "Annie Hall," Woody Allen, long recognized as a contemporary comic genius, emerges as an enormously talented and skilled film director. The visual and editorial style that marked "Love and Death" two years ago, has blossomed here into a real cinematic fluency. The collaboration with Gordon Willis, the brilliant cameraman of "The Godfather" films and "All The President's Men," is part of it, as is the incisive editing by Allen's favorite editor Ralph Rosenblum, but more of it is the growth of Allen as a scenarist-director.

There are terrific one-liners and non sequiturs a-plenty in "Annie Hall," but most of them further the narrative and characterizations. The comedy — and the drama, and the filler — is rooted in the story of the relationship. Though the story is constructed episodically, the film is the most cohesive of Allen's canon. It is consistently compelling and funny throughout.

Allen seems just perfect in the slightly autobiographical role of Alvy. As Annie, Keaton is gentle, flighty, loving and honest — this is her best film performance. The rest of the cast members are mostly in for nice bits: Tony Roberts (from "Play It Again, Sam") appears occasionally as Alvy's childhood pal; Carol Kane portrays an early lover; Janet Margolin (of "Take The Money and Run") plays his intellectual ex-wife; Paul Simon is a charismatic record producer who is fascinated by Annie; Shelley Duvall is a Rolling Stone stringer who sleeps with Alvy; Colleen Dewhurst plays Annie's mother; and Christopher Walken is Annie's weird brother Duane. Marshall McLuhan portrays himself.

The United Artists release is at the Campus Theatre.

Woody Allen and Diane Keaton take a lovers' stroll through Manhattan. Allen's new comedy-romance, "Annie Hall," now at the Campus Theatre.

Writing practices for TV blocked by coproducer

KATHY ESSELMAN
News Staff Writer

reason that more things are with blacks behind the camera in television is that there are no blacks in the structure. There are no black men or women on network prime time it," Chas. Floyd Johnson said. "The Rockford Files" pursue his acting career. He added that though men and women have worked in theatrical films and television, there are no other producers working in the industry.

He described the decline of black leading and supporting players on network television. Johnson said: "What was a lack of presence in more period pieces. There are more and more series being done which do not involve blacks. 'Baa, Baa Black Sheep' had no blacks in it. There were none. The Army was segregated. 'City of Angels' was a period piece, and they finally brought a guy in as a shoeshine man," Johnson cited "Captains and the Kings," "Testimony of Two Men," "The Rhinemann Exchange" and "Rich Man, Poor Man," as miniseries in which there was only one major black character. "There is a lack of pressure. It is no longer necessarily chic to do it, so there's less of it," he said. "They may get one or two episodes a year where they may feature a black cast. And they may get a black in a small role, now and then."

"But traditionally, you will see blacks only in the comedies that they have, or maybe in a featured role or a small part on a regular series. 'I mean, I happen to be a black producer on this show ('Rockford Files'), but that doesn't mean that I can force blacks into roles that won't work for them here," Johnson added.

He described the entertainment industry as a closed business, especially to non-whites.

"My point is, Jesse Jackson has begun to make a move toward economic dealing with the industry," he said, "but it's been a slow battle. At the network I know one young man, Peter Andrews, who's at NBC in development. I know there used to be one at ABC and two in Standards and Practices at ABC. They're few and far between.

"There are more people coming in at craft-union levels, but not enough, because the EEOC (Equal Employment Opportunities Commission) is now having hearings. There's a big thing because there are no black cinematographers.

"There are only two black camera operators at the top. There are four or five assistants floating around and there are black people now in hair-dressing and wardrobe, and it's growing."

Johnson also named two black associate producers, Arnold Turner ("The Six Million Dollar Man" and "Wonder Woman," now working on pilots), and Sig McCoy ("Soul Train").

Johnson said he feels there are only three black directors who are established in network television: Ivan Dixon, ("The Waltons") Mark Warren, (comedy and drama) and Michael Schultz (who has gone on to direct "Cooley High" and "Car Wash").

"But that's it," he said. Johnson said, "The entertainment business is an industry. I (continued on page 20)

Evening sun filtering through overhead trees, cool grass underfoot, birds chirping, squirrels making their last mad dash around the ground...

This may sound like a scene from a calendar or a picture-pretty wall poster, but the MSU Parks and Recreation Resources (PRR) Department is organizing free nature walks through campus on May weekends during which these experiences may be enjoyed.

The 40 senior students organizing the walks are majors in the department and are currently enrolled in PRR 451. The walks are designed to be family outings, lasting approximately two hours.

Each Saturday, May 14, May 21 and May 28, the following trips will be offered:

•7:30 a.m. — spring bird walks will be offered beginning at the entrance to the Sanford Natural Area behind Holmes Hall. Guests are asked to bring binoculars.

Park, recreation majors to sponsor nature walks

•11 a.m. — tour of Beal Gardens, beginning at the top of the stairs next to the Women's IM Building.

•4 p.m. — a photographic hike starting at the parking lot behind the Natural Resources Building. Guests are asked to provide their own cameras.

•7 p.m. — a Michigan history campfire program in the area west of the Women's IM Building.

•9 p.m. — night hike through Baker Woodlot beginning in the parking lot behind the Natural Resources Building. Guests are asked to bring a flashlight.

On Sundays, May 15, May 22 and May 29, the following trips will be sponsored:

•9 a.m. — morning hike through Sanford Natural Area, beginning at the entrance behind Holmes Hall.

•11 a.m. — "Rating the Great Outdoors," a study of edible and poisonous plants, beginning in the parking lot behind the Natural Resources Building.

•1 p.m. — tour of the Horticulture Gardens, beginning at the west entrance of the Horticulture Building.

•4 p.m. — historical tour of campus, beginning at Reunited Tower.

•8:30 p.m. — "Night Thrillers," tour of Rose Lake, beginning at the headquarters building on Stoll Road. Guests are advised to bring a flashlight.

No reservations are necessary to participate in the tours. Paul Risk, assistant professor of PRR, said the program has been planned to give future environmental interpreters a brief encounter with the field.

"It's an attempt to get people who are interested in the environment to interpret it," said PRR graduate assistant Paula Thomas. Thomas also said the students are required to design a brochure for park visitors, make a taped message, automatic recording mechanisms, prepare a slide show and master plan for a park area.

INDICTED FOR ILLEGAL CAMPAIGN CONTRIBUTIONS

Louisiana rep resigns from Congress

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Richard Tonry, who resigned from Congress a week ago amid allegations of widespread vote fraud, was indicted by a federal grand jury Thursday on charges stemming from his campaign.

Also indicted was John W. Mumphy, one of Tonry's law partners.

Tonry, 42, was accused in the indictment of obstruction of justice, receiving more than $54,000 in illegal campaign contributions, promising jobs for political purposes and conspiracy.

Mumphy was accused of conspiracy, obstruction of justice and lying to a grand jury.

The U.S. attorney's office originally announced Mumphy was also charged with promising jobs for political purposes. A spokesperson said later that announcement was an error.

Summons were issued for their arrest.

Tonry had predicted the indictment when he complained to the Justice Department about the way U.S. Atty. Gerald Gallinghouse was handling an investigation into the Oct. 2, 1976, Democratic primary election, Tonry said Gallinghouse, a Republican, was conspiring against the Democratic nominee.

But Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell cleared Gallinghouse last week, commending him and the FBI for "the fine work they have done on this investigation."

Twenty-two poll workers have pleaded guilty in U.S. District Court to charges stemming from the vote fraud investigation.

Tonry won the primary by 184 votes. A state judge, ruling on a suit challenging the outcome of the election, said Tonry got at least 229 fraudulent votes compared to at least 25 for his opponent, James Moreau.

Tonry resigned May 3, the day a congressional subcommittee was to vote on whether he should be thrown out. Two of the three subcommittee members said they would have voted to recommend his ouster.

Since his resignation, there has been no representative from the 1st district, which includes four parishes in southeast Louisiana, with half the constituents in east New Orleans. It is the seat held for 36 years by F. Edward Hebert, who retired last year.

Machinery is in motion for a new election, but Moreau has asked the state Supreme Court to name him the nominee without further balloting. A hearing on that issue is scheduled for Monday.

The court refused Wednesday to block preliminary moves to set up the primary.

Satyr's first issue out today

The first issue of a new MSU publication, Satyr, will be found on the MSU campus and in the East Lansing area today. Its staff members hail it as "The MSU Humor Magazine."

"We want it to be funniest to people at MSU," said Satyr staffer Tom Rombouts. "We will try to keep it limited to campus humor."

The magazine, which got some initial funding from ASMSU Student Board, contains a satire on the recent ASMSU election, an editorial on MSU's ducks and a "true confession" story.

Even the advertisements are takeoffs on happenings at MSU, including one about the Performing Arts Company's "non-presentation" of "Equus."

"Any censorship comes from our own judgment," Rombouts said.

The magazine is scheduled to come out next term beginning next fall. The staff hopes to organize each issue around a theme, Rombouts said.

"We want to do a welcome back issue parodying the State News," he said.

Satyr can be found on campus at the east and west entrances of Shaw and Hubbard halls, the west entrance of Wilson Hall and at the Butterfield hall. Off campus, it can be found at State Discount, Paramount News Center, various Bookstore and Campus Book Store.

Satyr is now funded by the ASMSU Student Media Appropriations Board (SMAB).

Police of Lansing to sponsor benefit

Lansing police officers will hold a fund-raising benefit tonight to finance the cost of expensive treatment for the 20-year-old son of a police officer. The Mark Bos Cancer Benefit will take place from 3 p.m. to 2 a.m. at the Fraternal of Police Lodge, 741 Eifert Road, Mason.

Son of Lt. and Mrs. Richard Bos, 634 E. Bluff, Lansing, has been undergoing treatment at the Roswell Park Memorial Cancer Center in Buffalo, N.Y., since early April, according to Mrs. Bos.

Mark was diagnosed at Lansing General Hospital early in March, and Bos underwent major operations there before admission to the center.

Two weeks doctors will decide if a fourth operation will be performed.

With or without the operation Mark will have to travel to New York every three weeks for the next three years to get his treatments," Mrs. Bos said.

Mark Bos began working at a Charlotte glass plant in January, and worked for 28 days before illness caused him to leave his job. According to Mrs. Bos, two more days would have qualified him for insurance coverage and workman's compensation benefits.

Treatment so far has been financed by private sources, she explained, and she won't know if Medicaid will cover any of the cost for six weeks.

"The police benefit gave us $500 when we left," she said. "But we've paid about $2,000 so far."

Lansing police officers hope to raise about $3,000 from tonight's benefit, according to Betty Johengen of the police department.

"We expect a few thousand people," Johengen said. "The money will come from the sale of tickets and from donations."

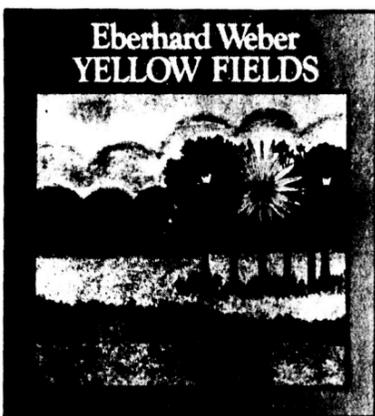

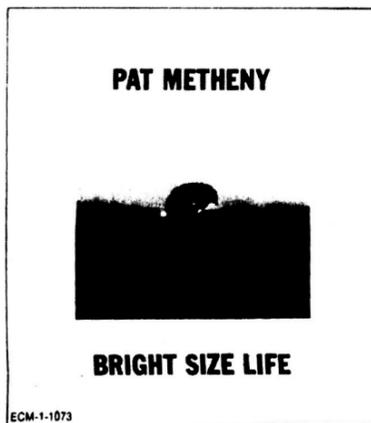

"The Lansing merchants downtown have been just fabulous in donating cameras and things for prizes," said Mrs. Bos. "The fire department has donated $500."

Tickets for the Mark Bos Cancer Benefit may be purchased at the door for $5 apiece. All are invited to attend. Donation information is available from the police department.

Nixon refused to send troops to Israel

that," he said.
When Brezhnev predicted that Egypt and Syria would soon attack if Israel did not withdraw, Nixon said he told the Soviet leader: "We will not let Israel go down the tube — or words to that effect."
Then, the former president related, when the Arabs attacked, the United States supported Israel with "everything that flies" and by filibustering against a cease-fire — at Israel's request — until Egypt and Syria were pushed back.
With Israel "on top," Egypt and then the Soviets proposed a joint American-Soviet force be sent to the region to keep the peace, but were turned down by Nixon.
Recalling his conversation with Kissinger, the former President told Frost: "Henry," I said, "This idea of the Russians having two Russian infantry divisions going to the Mideast and putting themselves down in Egypt and Syria, and we send two American divisions into Israel in order to keep the peace there."
I said, "This is sheer madness. It may keep the peace but it runs into the possibility of a big-power conflict."

I said also: "You're not going to get many Americans' public support for sending in Marines, or Army, or for that matter, Air Force. I don't care what it is... into this... this place, where nobody knows what's going to happen."
Nixon said Brezhnev then sent him an "ominous" message, saying the Russians would move "unilaterally into the situation" if the United States could not restrain Israel.
This, Nixon said, "would tip the balance so that Israel would have been down the tube" and would have established the precedent of a Soviet presence in the Middle East with "the risk of a great-power confrontation."
As a result, Nixon said, he sent a strong message to Brezhnev disapproving of any unilateral Soviet action.
When the Russians alerted troops and concentrated 85 ships, including one with "certain nuclear components" in the Black Sea and the eastern Mediterranean, Nixon said he ordered a third-level alert of U.S. military forces.

Israel, meanwhile, once it had gained the upper hand by crossing the Suez Canal, encircled the Egyptian third army and wanted to wipe it out, Nixon said.
"But if the Israelis had insisted on capturing and destroying the Egyptian third army, that would have brought about, I predicted, a coup or worse as far as Sadat was concerned," Nixon said.
Nixon wore a pale blue suit with a light blue shirt and patterned tie. His demeanor was serious as he discussed the Middle East and other foreign policy concerns, sometimes with large gestures. At the same time, he responded to Frost's questions with an easy assurance.

The move to seek accommodation with China after nearly a quarter-century of hostility was his own, Nixon said, and not Kissinger's.
"I conceived it before I ever met him and I pushed it very hard from the first days of the administration," the former president said.

Nixon said he could foresee neither a rapprochement between China and the Soviet Union nor a Chinese attack on Taiwan.
"The only major external threat that they face from the Soviet Union is so immediate," he said, "that the Chinese do not want to become involved in military action, even on an issue as sensitive as Taiwan."
Turning to the 1971 war between India and Pakistan, he said he brought pressure to bear on the Russians and thereby was able to restrain "their clients," India.
"Unless that had happened," he said, "I believe that she would have taken West Pakistan. She would have gobbled it up and that would have had dramatic consequences," particularly on China, which was friendly to Pakistan.
On the U.S. incursion into Cambodia in 1970, Nixon said Kissinger initially had some reservations but once the decision was made fully supported it.
However, after the demonstrations in May at Kent State and other U.S. universities, Nixon said Kissinger came to him and said: "You know, I'm not sure that should have gone into this Cambodia thing and perhaps now has come the time that should shorten the time and get out a bit sooner."

Actually, Nixon said, Kissinger "was seriously considering it" and he told the adviser:
"Henry, we've done it. Remember Lot's wife. Never look back."
Nixon told Frost: "I don't know what Henry had read the Old Testament or what but I had, and he got the point."
"Henry and I often had a little bit between us after that."
"Whenever he would come in and say, 'Well, I'm not sure we should have done this, or that, or the other thing,' I would say, 'Henry, remember Lot's wife.' That would end the conversation."
According to the Bible, as Lot and wife fled Gomorrah in advance of destruction, she defied an admonition to look back and was turned into a pillar of salt.

Nixon's tree bites dust

CINCINNATI (AP) — A tree planted in honor of former President Richard M. Nixon has died of frostbite, according to the director of Cincinnati's city parks.
The 20-year-old tree, a bald cypress replanted after the 1968 election, has three frost cracks from the severe winter and was pronounced dead Thursday, parks director Fred Payne said.
The tree is part of the President's Grove, which was established at Eden Park in 1882. Nixon requested that it be a cypress, according to Payne's office.

Weston, this is your year. And after this season it will be record book, too.

MSU situated in seventh place and out of the Big Ten race, Weston's bat heroics are becoming more of a focal point as the season grinds down.

Weston has already established career hitting records in runs scored, in most hits, most doubles and the season mark for two hits.

Weston weekend against Northwestern and Wisconsin, the Michigan slugger will place his name on top of three more hitting categories.

Weston needs to score only two runs to surpass Gary Boyce's record of 100 accumulated between 1969 and '71. Two more hits will break Rob Ellis' 1970 feat of 60 hits in a season while a trio will snap the 1972 effort of Shaun Howitt.

Weston's season splurge could conceivably vault him to the top of the batting departments.

Weston heading for more marks

"It's going to take a helluva player to break his records," assistant coach Frank Pellerin acknowledged.

Pellerin, who handles a good deal of the baseball recruiting, first heard of the Hazel Park outfielder through his Detroit scouting connections and brought him to the campus where he signed a letter of intent. See how easy it is to sign one of your all-time best hitters.

Currently Weston is hitting a healthy .401 overall but fell to third place in the conference batting race with a .459 average.

His hitting will be a plus factor when the Spartans attempt to creep above the .500 mark for the first time in three weeks. Coach Danny Litwhiler's squad is 22-24 overall and 5-7 in league play.

The Spartans will send Sherm Johnson and Brian Wolcott to the mound against the improved Wildcats while Larry Pashnick and Rob Campion get the starts against the Badgers on Sunday.

Campion bumped Todd Hubert from the starting rotation on the strength of his sparkling four-hitter against the Broncos last Tuesday.

BUNTS AND BOOTS — MSU signed its fourth ballplayer to a letter of intent this weekend and will have the signature of a catcher early next week. In the fold is Lansing Everett left-hander Dean Hartley.

Shortstop Rodger Bastien is tied for third in the Big Ten home run ranks with three, behind the Wildcats' Bill Buffie, who has six.

Michigan quarterback-outfielder Rick Leach has moved into the eighth spot in hitting with his .371 conference mark.

WKAR will broadcast the second games of both double-headers this weekend while WMSN will handle all four contests starting at 1 p.m.

Hurons to match Spartans' speed?

By GEOFF ETNYRE
State News Sports Writer

The top sprinting track teams in the Midwest will collide at Ralph Young field when the Eastern Michigan Hurons and the Spartans in a dual meet.

The Spartans' only home meet of the outdoor season begins at 10 p.m. Saturday.

There are a lot of great trackmen in the state of Michigan who are going to take a shot at each other Saturday," Jim Bibbs, acting coach, said.

Those are Big Ten 60-yard dash champion Randy Smith of Eastern Michigan and Central Collegiate champion Russell Bailey of Eastern Michigan. They square off three times Saturday — in the 100- and 200-yard dashes and the anchor legs of the 440-yard relay.

But they'll have plenty of company.

The 100 features Smith and freshman roommate Ricky Flowers against the Hurons' Bailey, Ken Delor and Bruce Taylor.

While the Spartans have a better 440-yard relay time, the Hurons boast better individual times.

Though Eastern hasn't run at 100 yards this year it has an edge in 100-meter times. Bailey and Delor have run 10.0 and Taylor has a 9.9 second wind-aided. Smith and Flowers own 10.3 and 10.50 electronic times.

"There'll just be one heat and pffft, it's over, Bibbs said.

In the 440-yard relay the Spartans will lead off with Flowers and then Williams, Charles Byrd and Smith.

"We have a 40.6 on the boards and Eastern a 40.8 or .9," Bibbs said. "But with their kind of speed, if they ever put their sticks together they can run with anybody in the country."

But the sprints won't be the only races with head-to-head match-ups.

All-American Herb Lindsay and roommate Stan Mavis will battle the Hurons' Jim Deron in the mile.

Byrd rates the favorite in the 440-yard dash with a 46.8 timing to his credit, but Eastern has three men in the 48-second bracket.

The 440-yard intermediate hurdles has Big Ten runner-up Tim Klein and fifth-place finisher Howard Neely of the Spartans pitted against the Hurons' Jeff Dils.

Even the coaches have a rivalry of sorts.

"I ran with Jim Parks when I was at Eastern," Bibbs said. "We're old friends."

"This is the first time we've had a dual with Eastern since I've been here. I hope it's the beginning of a good relationship."

"Whoever wins the meet will just have a little more braggin' power for the next year."

Other outstanding performers include Spartan varsity shot put record-holder Paul Schneider, who threw 56 feet 4 1/2 inches indoors, and pole vaulter Nat Durham of Eastern, who's gone 16 feet 11 1/2 inches.

"It could come down to the mile relay," Bibbs said, "but they may have a little too much strength in the field events for that to happen."

GEOFF ETNYRE

Who'll be top athlete?

Pardon me, Earvin, but you have some competition.

Not out on the basketball floor but over on the track.

If Earvin "Magie" Johnson stays here for at least three years he'll get some tough competition from freshman sprinter Randy Smith for MSU's top athlete.

Smith has already established himself as one of the top 60-yard dash men in the country by earning All-American status with a fifth-place finish in the nationals this year. Previous to that he won the Big Ten 60-yard dash title.

But times and statistics are not the only thing great athletes are measured by. Most of the great ones have a special aura — an awe-inspiring appearance that brings immediate respect.

Smith has that aura.

It's a quite, powerful confidence in contrast to Johnson's stage presence, but it is just as noticeable.

Smith's aura emanates from a pair of legs that are quite frankly the most phenomenal I've ever seen. The muscular density of his thighs and calves sends reporters searching for terms like "Herculean" but none of them do justice.

I've heard fans oooh and ahhhh when Randy slips off his warm ups before a race. They simply cannot believe their eyes.

But, just as in advertising, a pretty package is nice but the product better deliver.

Smith delivers.

Indoors in his specialty, the 60, he only lost twice all year. Once was the nationals and the other was the first meet of the year. In that meet he placed second to Eastern Michigan's Russell Bailey, who comes to East Lansing Saturday to do battle with Smith again.

Outdoors in the longer races Smith's explosive start is not quite as dominating, but he's a freshman and still learning.

Saturday's dual meet against Eastern is the kind of confrontation Smith relishes. When most runners are talking about times, he talks about winning.

His coach, Jim Bibbs, says he has the one quality that a sprinter needs more than any other — the ability to separate himself from the field — just as world record-holders Marshall Dill and Herb Washington did.

That may sound rather academic, but it goes a lot deeper than that. It arises out of a desire to be the best and a commitment to reach that goal. No compromises.

Smith will tell you every time that he wants an Olympic gold medal. So much for compromises.

MSU track fans will have their only chance to see Smith at home this year. The meet will feature some of the top sprinting this country has to offer and you can't get much better than that for a dual meet.

The 100-yard dash will be strictly a pins and needles event. Less than 10 seconds and it's over, so you'd better know what to look for.

Smith should break first since none of the others can touch his start. At about 50 yards Bailey should start to make things very interesting, however.

If the race were 100-meters, just nine yards longer, Bailey would probably be the favorite, so valuable are those last few yards to a strong finisher.

In the 220-yard dash where Bailey is defending Central Collegiate Conference champions, a bit of revenge could be in order.

No matter who wins, the meet will be a great developer in Smith's race to fame.

You'd better move over, Earvin... or at least make room.

No. 3 doubles team of Steve Carter (L) and Dee McCaffrey (R) handle this match against Eastern Michigan University easily enough, taking the win, 4-6, 6-2, 6-1. The Spartans as a team also had no trouble as MSU took the match, 8-1, to even their season slate at 8-1.

Spartan netters set Eastern, 8-1

MSU's tennis team set things straight in the final dual of the season, as the Spartans took an easy match over Mid-American conference foe, Eastern Michigan, 8-1 Wednesday.

The win gives the netters an even mark of 7-7 as they prepare for the Big Ten tournament at Ann Arbor May 20 through 22. Though the Spartans aren't favorites for the Big Ten title against such powers as Michigan, Ohio State and Wisconsin, MSU has come on in the last week with wins in two of the last three matches. The loss was to Ohio State, but MSU still played some of its best tennis in the match.

MSU took all six singles and won two of the three doubles as Tighe Keating and John Boukamp fell at No. 2 doubles, 4-6, 6-3, 7-5.

Tom Gudelsky and Kevin McNulty won No. 1 doubles, 6-1, 6-1, to start things off for MSU. Steve Carter and Dee McCaffrey won No. 3 doubles, 4-6, 6-2, 6-1, but sat out singles to give Steve Klemm and David Tien a shot at No. 5 and No. 6 singles, respectively. Klemm won 7-5, 6-3 and Tien won 7-6, 6-2.

Gudelsky also had the easy win in singles as he won No. 1, 6-1, 6-0. McNulty won No. 2 singles 7-5, 6-3; Keating won No. 3 singles, 7-5, 6-0; and Boukamp took No. 4 singles, 7-5, 6-3.

MSU now has until Thursday to rest up and prepare for the tourney. Besides aiming for what would be an incredible upset to win the Big Ten title, MSU will also be after a few individual championships.

Though coach Stan Drobae has a 192-92 record at MSU, the netters haven't won a Big Ten championship since 1967. The last singles champion at MSU was Mike Madura in 1971 at No. 3 and the last doubles champ was in 1976 when three partners swept all three of the league crowns.

Namath signs with LA

Joe "Willie" Namath's wish came true Thursday as he officially became a member of the Los Angeles Rams after his colorful career as the New York Jets' quarterback. Namath agreed to the terms of the Rams to finish his career on the West Coast. The gimpy-kneed quarterback wanted to play near Hollywood to help his hoped-for movie career after he retires from football.

IM coaching forum has 5 MSU heads

Football coach Darryl Rogers and baseball coach Danny Litwhiler take a break from their spring seasons, while basketball coach Jud Heathcote, hockey coach Amo Bessone and wrestling coach Grady Peninger take a break from recruiting for a coaching forum in 208 Men's IM Bldg. Monday at 7 p.m.

The five Spartan coaches will be available for approximately two hours to give MSU students a chance to ask the coaches anything they'd like about the upcoming seasons or recruiting.

The IM is sponsoring the forum as a kick off to the second IM All-Nighter May 20.

Golfers try for fifth straight at Bowling Green

By JOHN SINGLER
State News Sports Writer

The MSU women's golf team finished 12th in the Furman Invitational last weekend, but along about April Fool's Day, it must have been a good omen.

The Spartans have since rattled off one second and four straight wins in their last five tournaments and are in Ohio this weekend for the Bowling Green Invitational.

The annual tournament before the nationals, to be held in Hawaii in June.

"We all seem to be hitting the ball pretty solid now," head coach Fossum said.

Weston marks the return to tournament play of MSU's Big Ten star, Sue Ertl. After stashing titles in the Big Ten and the Invitational, the Ionia sophomore was off last weekend, not to mention medals but to visit relatives in Wisconsin.

Escott, Joan Garety, Sue Conlin, Sheila Tansey and Everett will complement Ertl at Bowling Green for this weekend's tourney.

Escott and Garety probably can't wait to get back on the Bowling Green course.

In the fall of '75, Escott was the Midwest regional medalist with a 36-hole total of 150 and Garety had the low single round of the tourney, a 73.

Ertl fired a 37 on a trip over the par-36 front nine at Forest Akers Golf Course earlier in the week.

In the field with the Spartans this weekend will be Ohio State, Marshall, Illinois State, Wittenberg, Central Michigan and the host Falcons.

Cincinnati may send two golfers to compete as individuals.

Ertl, Escott and Garety all stand a good shot at the medal. Others who rate strong consideration are Ohio State's Cathy Duplin and Judy Ellis and Marshall's Nancy Bunton. Ertl edged Duplin for the Big Ten medal at Illinois three weeks ago.

The Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (IAAW) is expected to announce berths for the national tournament sometime next week.

GOLF NOTES: The MSU men's golf team has started playoffs for three spots on the squad that will represent the Spartans in the Big Ten Championship Tournament, to be held at Forest Akers Golf Course May 20 through 22.

After 18 holes of the 54-hole qualifying tourney, the scores included Tom Baker, Eric Gersonde and Mark Egly, 74; Jack Delaney, 77; Joe Marx, 78; Kevin Aubuchon, 78; Marty Holda, 80; and Doug Lemanski, 83.

The golfers will play 18 holes on both Monday and Tuesday. Gary Domagalski, Mark Brooks and Riek Grover have been granted exemptions from qualifying, based on their play in recent tournaments.

The Michigan State chapter of the Evans Scholars will host the fourth "Chick Evans Golf Day" at Forest Akers Golf Course Sunday.

The MSU chapter is one of 14 nationwide and counts 55 members of the coast-to-coast total of more than 800.

The recipients of Evans Scholarships have, for the most part, caddied at various courses and country clubs and it is the members of those clubs who are invited to play on Chick Evans Day.

Without a doubt, when they won't come to you, the only alternative is to go to them. And that's exactly what this admirer decided upon finding that most ducks at MSU, though tame and hungry, prefer bread to sticks and stones. Fortunately, the food supply ran out before the rest of the gang caught on and surrounded him.

Magicians' benefit show set for Saturday in Holt

By JOHN GEORGE
 "Now, how did they do that?" will probably be the most frequently asked question at Michigan Magic Day Saturday. The annual statewide convention of amateur and professional magicians will meet from 10 a.m. to 11 p.m. at Holt High School, 1784 N. Aurelius Road, Holt. Promoters say the convention's purpose is to encourage interest in the study of magic in Michigan. 500 people are expected at the convention.

The convention will consist of stage competitions and close-up magic demonstrations by amateur and professional magicians. Some exhibitions will include audience participation. Prizes including plaques, trophies and certificates will be awarded to amateur participants. Magic dealers from across the state will be available to answer questions and provide information to prospective amateur magicians or hobbyists. The major attraction of the afternoon and evening show will be performances by professional and semiprofessional magicians. Among these will be Hank Morehouse of Ann Arbor, master of ceremonies for the shows; Carl Jarboe, an MSU student and secretary of the MSU Magic Club; Dan Watkins of Lansing; and Tim Wright, who represents Abbott's Magic Company, the world's largest magic manufacturer. The convention is sponsored by the National Brotherhood of Magicians, a non-profit organization. The money collected from Michigan Magic Day will be donated to Lansing's Beekman Center, a special-education facility for children, and to the St. Vincent Home for children. Tickets for the convention will be $6.50 for all day, $5 for the afternoon show only and $2.50 for the evening show only. They may be purchased at the Sorcerer's Apprentice Magic Shop in the University Mall, 220 M.A.C. Ave. or from members of the MSU Magic Club, who are affiliated with the National Brotherhood of Magicians. The public is invited to the convention, which is held each year in different cities throughout the state and supports different cause each year. Those who do not wish to attend but wish to donate a purchase a complimentary ticket for $1, which will be given to a child from the Vincent's to attend the show.

U.S., world events important, poet says

By JANET HALFMANN
 Poetry should deal with what's happening in America and the world, according to Harold Norris, law professor and author of the collection, "You Are This Nation," for which he was nominated for the 1976 Pulitzer Prize in poetry. Most poetry today deals with landscapes, nightscapes, seascapes and escapes, Norris told a faculty and student audience Wednesday evening in Bessey Hall Auditorium. Poets such as Archibald MacLeish, Carl Sandburg and Edwin Markham would have difficulty getting published today, he said. "In my judgment, there is a need for poetry to reckon with whether or not the United States can make it in the world in which we live," Norris said. "I think there is a very definite question as to whether the human race is on the road to survival or something less." In much of his poetry, Norris exhorts the reader to accept more personal responsibility for America's purpose and direction because "you are this nation." In one poem, the persona Rosa Parks declares, "This nation is what I do. It will not be done unless I do it." As a self-governor in a self-governing society, whatever an individual — positive or negative, activist or inactivist — that is what that person thinks the nation ought to be, Norris said. "This country is nothing other than what you are," he said. "All you do is the country and you are personally responsible for your conduct."

Norris said that he feels there is room in politics for poetry and that he hopes writers of this generation do more in this field. "The most harsh, difficult, frustrating, demanding job is to encourage this complete involvement, with a sense of purpose, and yet maintain a sense of decency, a sense of respect, a sense of balance," he said. Norris commented on the failure of "You Are This Nation" to win the Pulitzer Prize. "For a book on the transubstantiation of the soul rather than one committed to national purpose and how we are to carry out the national purpose to win the highest award in poetry during the Bicentennial year seems to me a little misplaced," he said. Norris began writing poetry about 40 years ago as an undergraduate at University of Michigan. "I tailed along with a very interesting group of people at U-M — Arthur Miller, John Ciardi, Kimon Friar, John Malcolm Brinnin — and I am indebted to them for inspiring me to think poetically," he said. Norris was a practicing lawyer for 15 years before joining the faculty of the Detroit College of Law. Norris is on campus as part of the Writers Reading series sponsored by the English Department.

Canal treaty talks cut by negotiators' retreat

WASHINGTON (AP) — Panama Canal treaty

Panamanian negotiators to fly home for consultareported Thursday.

decision to break off the meeting came two-hour session Wednesday when chief Panamanian negotiator Romulo Escobar Betan-decided to fly home.

that "there was an exchange of ideas which the Panamanian negotiators wanted to discuss personally" with Torrijos.

The main issues remaining in signing a new treaty deal are guaranteeing the neutrality and access to the waterway, the disposition of territory now held by the United States and the compensation to be paid Panama.

Talks for a treaty to replace the original accord signed in 1903 have been held intermittently for 13 years.

Panama has demanded eventual jurisdiction over the Canal Zone and the canal as well. The United States has insisted on a new treaty that will assure that the canal will remain open to all nations on a nondiscriminatory basis once Panama gains control.

Panama has resisted any proposals which would in any way limit its jurisdiction over the canal.

Psychology of women topic of 'U' conference

MSU is sponsoring a conference today through Saturday, focusing on "Perspectives On The Psychology of Women." The conference is being held at Kellogg Center and the MSU Auditorium. It is free of charge. Registration for today's seminars begins at 9:15 a.m. The seminars are being held in Kellogg's Lincoln Room. Beginning at 10 a.m., Deborah Waber, from Boston, Mass., along with Sandra F. Witelson, from McMaster University in Ontario, will probe topics related to "The Psychological Foundations of Sex-Typed Behavior." Waber has studied sex differences in cognitive abilities, in relation to maturational differences. Witelson is a specialist in lateralizational differences of the left and right hemispheres of the brain.

At 2 p.m. also in the Lincoln Room, "Social Change and Sex-Typing" is the topic for discussion. "Stresses and Coping With Divorce" will be discussed by Mavis Hetherington. Another seminar, conducted by Mirra Komarovsky from Columbia University, probes the topic: "Dilemmas Of Masculinity In A Changing World." Komarovsky has written a book that presents the heterosexual conflicts involving college men and women in relation to women's changing roles.

Texas will lead a discussion of the topic of androgyny. Less of their traditionally labeled male or female traits.

Jeanne Gullahorn, MSU professor of psychology, is conference coordinator.

Registration for Saturday's portion of the conference, to be held in the Auditorium, begins at 8 a.m. Topics revolve around the "Psychology of Women: Present and Future Perspectives."

From Stanford University, Eleanor Emmons Maccoby will discuss "Women's Sociobiological Heritage: Destiny or Free Choice?" Janet Taylor Spence from the University of

Computerized machine puts words on screen

By ANNE WAKEMAN

There are more than 300,000 handicappers in the United States who are incapable of communicating through speech. But thanks to men like Dr. Richard Reid, there are now a few hundred less.

Reid, professor of computer science at MSU, is one of the original creators of the Say-Me-Scroll device. It is a television-like, computerized machine which attaches to a handicapper's body and flashes his words on a screen, responding to the push of a button.

Most of the persons using the Say-Me-Scroll have cerebral palsy or have had strokes. A major portion of their bodies are usually paralyzed and they are unable to speak.

Reid and his staff have been testing and improving the Say-Me-Scroll in MSU's artificial language laboratories since July 1976. Their handicapper volunteers are mostly Wayne and Jackson County school children, though they range in age from 9 to 23.

"I feel an inner commitment to working on the improvement of artificial speech devices," said Reid, who has been interested in computer speech since 1963. At that time he was new at MSU and helped to program the school's main computer.

Reid said his concern for nonspeaking handicappers has increased over the past five or six years, since the outcome of the civil rights movement. These handicappers, especially students, should have equal opportunity to express their thoughts, he said.

"Some of our volunteer handicappers can barely point to objects," Reid said. "When the Say-Me-Scroll is distributed in the special schools it will help appraise the potential for academic pursuits."

In some early cases, he continued, a special education teacher cannot always tell if the child is retarded or not, since he is unable to speak or move his limbs. Most children can, however, and Reid has created a unique type of Say-Me-Scroll for cases like that.

This special machine is ultrasensitive to muscle reactions and is wired to the handicapper's various body areas, working much like an electrocardiogram device. Certain pressures from the individual's muscles will result in letters appearing one at a time on the screen, eventually forming sentences.

However, Reid is not satisfied with the Say-Me-Scroll's progress. He said he plans to create several more variations, including machines with foot pedals and wired pillows. These special pillows would be wired to react to certain head pressures and, again, the sentences would eventually appear on the screen.

"Things are moving slowly right now," Reid said. "It's difficult to find successful ways to connect the wires comfortably to the individual."

Reid said the primary intent and long-range goal of the Say-Me-Scroll machine is to help bridge the communication gap between handicappers and society. He said he wants to see them be able to exercise their rights, in the most convenient way possible.

"We've got a lot of testing to do here at MSU before these devices can be distributed among the schools," Reid added. "My mission is not to produce quantity but to better the machines."

Reid said that he has not become that publicity-oriented since his discovery, largely because he is not alone in exploring the field.

One of those people is Dr. John Eulenberg, codirector of the Artificial Language Lab and a principal investigator of two communication enhancement projects for which Reid is developing devices. These devices are also handicapper aids.

Reid said that his favorite pastime is sitting by himself in a quiet, empty room and dreaming up new ideas for his creations. When the lab gives a Say-Me-Scroll demonstration, he admitted that he prefers to be present only if the audience is small and interested in special education — the more "serious observers."

"This is my work, a good portion of my life and my area of research," Reid said. "Sophisticated scientists know better than to criticize another scientist's research area. I know we've come a long way, but we've got a longer way to go."

TRISKAIDEKAPHOBIACS BEWARE!

It's that unlucky day

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is the day triskaidekaphobics might well stay in bed.

Not only is it the 13th of May — triskaidekaphobia is the fear of the number 13 — but it's Friday the 13th, regarded by the superstitious as the unluckiest of days.

In the past, May 13 has been unlucky for people as various as the Viennese — Napoleon captured Vienna on May 13, 1809; the Japanese — a nightclub fire took 116 lives at Osaka on May 13, 1972; and Richard Nixon — his limousine was stoned in Caracas, Venezuela, on May 13, 1958, while he was on a goodwill tour as vice president.

But it has not all been bad. The last battle of the Civil War was fought on May 13, 1865, at Palo Pinto, Tex. And while legend has it that it's unlucky to be born on the 13th, Joe Louis was born on this day in 1914 in Lexington, Ala., and went on to be the world heavyweight boxing champion from 1937 to 1949.

So, why all the fuss anyway about Friday the 13th?

The belief that Friday is a bad luck day, according to some lore, stems from Christ's crucifixion on a Friday.

Legend also has it that sailors hated to begin a voyage on a Friday. But one Irish folk belief holds that it is good to die on Friday, be buried on Saturday and get prayed for on Sunday.

Friday comes from the Anglo Saxon word, Frigedæg, which means Frigg's Day. Frigg was the goddess of love in Norse mythology and, oddly, Scandinavians once considered Friday their luckiest day.

As for 13, some believe it unlucky because that's the number of persons at The Last Supper.

There is also a Norse fable about a banquet in Valhalla to which 12 gods were invited. But Loki, the spirit of evil, came uninvited as the 13th, and as a result, Bader, a favorite of the gods, was killed.

For those who believe this sort of thing, new enterprises shouldn't be started on Friday the 13th. But there are special taboos too: Don't pare your nails, turn your mattress, get married, visit the sick or have dinner with 12 other persons — superstition says the first or last to rise from a dinner of 13 will die within 12 months.

There is one lucky thing about this Friday the 13th, however. It's the only one this year. Next year there are two, Jan. 13 and Oct. 13.

FOOD FOR

FOR THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN EATING AND DINING...

The Grapevine Restaurant invites you to settle into their warm country French atmosphere for a satisfying taste of elegance and delightful gourmet and traditional cuisine — sure to please the discriminating palate.

Relax and enjoy their tableside french service and flaming entrees and desserts. Treat your senses to specialties de la Maison, artfully prepared and flamed at your table. Steak Diane, a butterfly filet with tender mushrooms, scallions and sauce Madiera, or Beef Wellington, a sensational array complete with Grapevine salad, center cut tenderloin, coated with mushrooms Duxell wrapped in a delicate pastry and served with a bouquet of colorful fresh vegetables. Or savor the Grapevine Favorites; excitingly different and tastefully garnished to add that extra flair: Veal Oscar, milk fed veal covered with white asparagus tips and crab, topped with sauce Bernaise; a very popular entree for $7.95. For those who savor the crustacean cuisine, the Grapevine has a variety of fresh seafood specialties, from King Crab legs to Sole ala Newburg, Or, for an exciting change of pace, try their delicious Frog Legs, pan fried in Grapevine's secret seasoning. All dinners include the crispy fresh Grapevine salad, potato or vegetable and oven fresh bread.

For "la petite" appetite, the Grapevine serves delicious daliances to tempt the most discriminating tastes.

For the polishing touch, be sure not to pass up the delightful experience of the Grapevine's flaming desserts: Bananas Foster or Cherries Jubilee, prepared right at your table. Or have you ever tried french fried ice cream? A real treat of creamy vanilla ice cream rolled in crushed cornflakes, cinnamon, nutmeg and sugar, then deepfried and smothered in hot fudge then topped with a rosette of whipped cream.

For a satisfying break in your busy day, The Grapevine offers an exquisite luncheon menu, moderately priced, sure to please everyone. The Grapevine has two daily luncheon specials, either a soup and sandwich special or one other choice "du jour".

Choose from a variety of fresh salad plates or a specialty combination. The luncheon entrees deserve special attention. Try their veal parmegiana or sauteed fresh lake perch. All entrees include salad, potato or vegetable and oven fresh rolls.

A luncheon menu wouldn't be complete without a diversified sandwich array. The Grapevine has an impressive assortment of both usual and unusual sandwiches. Try the deliciously different "Hoosegow", roast beef, mushrooms and cheddar cheese on sour dough bread, or the "Monte Christo," a tender turkey, ham and swiss cheese sandwich dipped in a light egg batter and fried to a golden brown.

The Grapevine accommodates those late night munchies in a romantic setting, Tuesday thru Thursday after 10 pm and Friday and Saturday from 11 pm.

Enjoy your favorite cocktails at reduced prices Monday thru Thursday between 4 and 7 pm — otherwise known as "mood adjustment hour".

Wednesday is fashion day at the Grapevine presented by Greens of Meridian Mall. Shows during lunchtime from 12:30-2:30 and at dinner time from 7 pm - 9 pm.

Enjoy nightly entertainment Tuesday thru Saturday after 9 pm by the Grapevine's talented pianist to enhance your dining pleasure. Request a table near the piano. They'll be happy to please you. For later evening enjoyment, The Grapevine has nightly musicians in their cocktail lounge.

The Grapevine welcomes you to experience fine dining at moderate prices every day of the week, and Sundays from 2 till 8 pm.

For the total experience in dining elegance and country French hospitality, come to the Grapevine, located at 2758 E. Grand River, near Okemos. Call for reservations at: 337-1701 and "VIVA LA DIFFERENCE"
