Uranium fuel to India nears U.S. decision

By ARTHUR L. GAVSHON

WASHINGON (AP) — The Carter Administration is nearing a decision to deliver part of a long-overdue shipment of uranium fuel to India — but only if India opens its secret nuclear installations to inspection.

India, which needs the uranium to keep its big nuclear power complex near Bombay working, must agree to negotiate a new nuclear cooperation pact with the United States opening up all facilities and processes to international surveillance, senior U.S. officials said Sunday.

They stressed that India was not being singled out for the strict conditions of sale.

The administration is preparing an overall strategy for renegotiating its nuclear cooperation arrangements with nearly 30 countries that use U.S.-made nuclear plants, materials, fuel and technology.

India's situation, however, has assumed urgency. Under an existing contract, India last India's situation, however, has assumed urgency. Under an existing contract, india last year ordered 12 tons of slightly enriched uranium for its nuclear power system at Tarapur which lights the homes and feeds the factories and farms on which 40 million people depend.

But the shipment was held up first by former President Gerald R. Ford's Administration, then by the Carter Administration, because new U.S. policies were evolving to stop or slow the spread of nuclear weapons.

The Indians claim Tarapur now is running short of fuel and soon may be in danger of

The Indians claim Tarapur now is running short of fuel and soon may be in danger of shutting down. They argue also the uranium fuel for which they are waiting needs months of preparation before it can be used.

U.S. officials said a demand for a new agreement with India would be consistent with president Jimmy Carter's efforts to stop the proliferation of nuclear weapons.

Carter has vowed to do everying he can to stop or slow the spread of nuclear bombs—yet without denying foreign nations the peaceful uses and benefits of nuclear energy development.

India has refused to sign the world nonproliferation treaty. Under a bill that Carter proposed and sent to Congress last month, the United States would be bound to insist on what are called "full scope safeguards" in supplying nuclear materials to nations that are not parties to the treaty.

India refused to sign the treaty on grounds it discriminated against those states that did not build nuclear weapons.

In private, however, some U.S. diplomats have got the impression from their Indian

In private, however, some U.S. diplomats have got the impression from their Indian colleagues that they see the point of Carter's overall campaign against the spread of nuclear arms. They add that the U.S. position — which in general is backed by the Soviets — would be more convincing if the two superpowers were to live up to the treaty commitment they made to cut back their own nuclear arsenals.

SFJ RECOMMENDS AUDITS IN FUTURE

Appeal denied in 'Spartan' case

By NUNZIO M. LUPO State News Staff Writer

The Student-Faculty Judiciary (SFJ) has denied an appeal by the All-University Elections Commission (AUEC) charging that three Spartan Spirit candidates overspent in their campaign for the ASMSU Student Board.

In addition, the SFJ recommended that future overspending charges be settled by an audit rather than judicial proceedings.

an audit rather than judicial proceedings.
The appeal was based on the decision of the All-University Student Judiciary

(AUSJ), which ruled earlier that only Eric Heard, who lost in his race, overspent his individual limits within the slate total.

That AUSJ decision determined the difference between what the slate reported and what it actually spent and assessed the difference to the individual slate members. The decision to invalidate Heard was based on this.

In denying the appeal SFJ said the "computations on which AUEC based its appeal are in error." The Elections Commission double-counted certain expenditures, it

The elections commission based its accounting on the decision of the AUSJ. Certain expenditures not specifically listed by AUSJ in its slate total of $147.58 were added into each individual's total by the elections commission in its appeal.

SFJ concluded that though the expenditures were not specifically listed, they were included in the AUSJ decision.

A memorandum from the AUSJ to the SFJ, included in the denial, verified this.

The SFJ ruled that "when these expenditures are not double-counted none of the candidates spent over the limit."

The AUEC's method of accounting indi-

The AUEC's method of accounting indicated Kent Barry, slate presidential candidate; Sue Lalk, College of Human Ecology candidate: and Thomas Lammy, College of Natural Science candidate, overspent their individual limits within the slate total.

The expenditures the elections commission maintains are not listed include the categories of "letters and postage — Greek houses" and "other."

The category of "letters and postage — Greek houses" were campaign letters sent by the slate to fraternity and sorority houses. Barry said in the AUSJ hearing that items such as staples, pins and tape are included in "other."

Both AUEC Chairperson Barry Griffiths and AUEC Counsel Heidi Renn and Timothy Cain were unavailable for comment on whether the decision will be appealed to Eldon R. Nonnamaker, vice president for student affairs.

To estimates obtained from an erral home, the total cost of t from East Lawn Memorial Okemos would be $720.

According to police statements issued the day after the shooting, two uniformed Lansing officers approached the front door of the residence while a third remained in the rear of the property.

The account of the shooting given May 5 by Lansing police said that Smith left the back door of the house with a crowbar and ran toward the officer who was in the back vard.

The office then told Smith to stop, police said, at which point Smith made a "slinging motion" with the crowbar toward the policeman. A second time, Smith was told to stop and the officer who was in the backyard fired a shot into the ground, missing Smith, police said.

After the shot was fired, Smith turned around and began to run toward the front part of the property, the original police statement said. One of the officers who had been at the front door, according to the statement, was John Hersman. Hersman intercepted Smith at the side of the house while he held a raised crowbar and shot the suspect in the front midsection, police said.

After the incident, Lansing police officials conducted a two-day investigation of the shooting and then handed a report over to the county prosecutor's office for further consideration.

Peter Houk, Ingham County prosecuting attorney, concluded the following weekend that the police handling of the incident was proper.

On May 9, new evidence of the shooting was presented to Houk's office after the State News obtained a signed and notorized affidavit from a secret eyewitness who swore he gave the statement by his own "free will with no coercion or threats."

Upon receiving the affidavit, Houk reopened the investigation.

Hersman, who was scheduled to return to work the week of May 9 after a routine suspension for the duration of the investigation had Monday off.

Additional information which further supported the secret witness' testimony was uncovered by The State News May 9 and strengthened the possibility that the police may have been mistaken in their original statement.

In an updated and apparently corrected account of the shooting, Houk said at a news conference last Tuesday that by "the facts that are known to us at this time" Smith left the house with a crowbar and committed an assault upon Off. Jon Thelen at the bottom of the back porch steps.

Thelen fired a warning shot at Smith,

Houk said.

Smith approached Hersman with Thelen in pursuit with his gun pointed at the ground in a position where he could not fire it, Houk said.

Smith then turned on Thelen with a crowbar in one hand and reached toward him with the other while Hersman fired the fatal shot, Houk said.

Last Wednesday witnesses at the scene of the shooting confirmed their statements that only one officer was in a 20-foot radius of Smith when he was fatally shot.

The witnesses said they were "positive" only one officer was within 20 feet of Smith at the time of the shooting and that the second officer was not within grasping distance of the burglary suspect until after Smith was shot.

Those witnesses which were interviewed by the State News represent vantage points from four key areas, three of which were standing within a 50 foot radius of Hersman and Smith.

PREP COURSES FOR TESTS SPARK QUERIES

Programs forecasting potential: are they investment or ripoff?

By DANIEL HERMAN State News Staff Writer

Spurred by the hope of getting the high scores necessary for admission to many of today's professional schools, students pay as much as $350 for courses which promise preparation for the LSAT, MCAT, DAT and other such tests.

The LSAT, MCAT and DAT are aptitude tests which attempt to forecast a student's potential success in law, medical and dental schools.

Recently, over 34,000 students world wide took the American College Testing Program's new MCAT. Though many preparatory programs claim to be able to prepare students to take the new MCAT, Robert Elliot, a spokesperson for the American College Testing Program in Iowa City, Iowa, said all the information that these companies use is available to the public.

One source of preparation that has been called a "swindle" is the many pretest services offered through the mail with prices that range anywhere from $6 to $25.

"The new MCAT is 100 per cent different from the old test, and unlike the old test, will never duplicate questions in future tests," Elliot commented.

He further explained that the test prerequisites and 80 sample test questions are contained in the "New MCAT Student Manual," which sells for $3.25.

Study says U.S. lacks U.N. posts

WASHINGTON (AP) Though the United States pays the largest share of the cost for the United Nations and its agencies. Americans are underrepresented on the U.N. staff, a congressional study says.

And the U.S. influence on the way these international agencies operate is in danger of being diminished further, the General Accounting Office (GAO) warns.

Americans make up only 13 per cent of U.N. employes but pay 25 per cent of the organization's costs, the study said.

Developing nations are pressuring U.N. officials to hire more of their citizens, while the U.S. government fails to "aggressively recruit" qualifed Americans to work in the U.N

agencies, the GAO said.

Last fall the United States Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim of bowing to political pressures in hiring U.N. staff members.

A U.S. delegate charged that under the guise of seeking equitable geographic distri-bution, the U.N. was hiring underqualified staff members.

At its upper reaches, the U.N. staff includes some of the world's highest-paid bureaucrats. Professional salaries range up to $71,000, with thousands of dollars more in benefits.

Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., whose Senate Governmental Affairs committee released the GAO report Sunday, said the State Department should conduct a nationwide recruiting effort to find more Americans suited for U.N. service and encourage them to apply for jobs.

"We spent over $1 billion in 1975 for all international organizations. In addition to providing these funds, the U.S. should be contributing as much American expertise and know-how as possible," Ribicoff said.

He warned that unless the United States makes the recruitment effort now, "there is a very real chance that there will be even fewer Americans working for the organizations

The study, which follows a similar report by Ribicoff's panel in February, was one of five released at the same time on the U.S. role in international organizations. Their findings generally showed that the United States lags badly in showing leadership or initiative in world agencies.

The reports dealt with the U.N.'s Food and Agriculture Organization, the World Health Organization, the World Food Program and the International Labor Organization.

The studies found shortcomings in each of the agencies that make it difficult for the United States to play a larger role or to furnish expertise, but American efforts also were said to be lacking or misdirected. One report said, for example,

Senate to vote on energy department

Edison and state officials have worked out a painstaking and complex agreement by which the company will gradually reduce the sulfur content of the coal it burns by 1985 far beyond the commission's 1980 deadline on the use of low-sulfur coal.

It was generally felt the mutual agreement to limit sulfur dioxide emissions at Monroe would be acceptable to the commission, even though the head of one environmental group said he believes the agreement "stinks."

Calculators, Hill said, provide a way of looking at problems with a lot of numbers and allow a student to sift through parts of a formula to better understand it.

Hill said an advantage of using calculators is that they eliminate use of tables and interpolation "which is a real pain in the

'I hate teaching it and the students hate learning it," he said. However, Hill said that some disadvantages are possible as well. We don't know what kind of detrimental effects it (using calculators) will have," he said. Another disadvantage - "and it's a good disadvantage." Hill added — is that calculators, by being "very unforgiving," help a student remember that they will not remove that "helpless feeling" one gets when one only half understands something.

"You look at all this stuff and it looks weird," Hill said, gesturing. "You must remember that feeling. When students only half understand something, they don't know which buttons to push." He added that this was an unexpected finding.

Hill said the findings of the study are beginning to give a possibility of doing things that usually couldn't be done in math. Calculators are making it possible to ask more interesting questions, he said.

"At this level, if it's handled properly, it'll be a big advantage. Roughly, it'll lead to handling bigger questions without worrying about bigger numbers."

Hill's students, who have been responding favorably all term. heartily approved of the section but pointed out that "you still have to know the theory."
"It (a calculator) doesn't do the homework for you," Barb

Schmidt said.

Students agreed the study broke the monotony of the classroom, clarified and speeded up the work and was also a lot of fun.

They praised the book as "much clearer" and easier to understand. They also termed the class a valuable addition to learning about calculators, as the information may be helpful in other classes and in real-life situations.

The smoke from the two boilers is currently being fed through anti-pollution precipitators which frequently clog up. The $450,000 hot electrostatic precipitator serving the third boiler, added in 1975, captures 99.8 per cent of the ash in the hot gases before they go out the west stack of the power plant. Accessibility needed for Union

Thursday's protest by members of Students for Total Integration through Greater Mobility and Accessibility (STIGMA) over the inaccessibility of the Union to handicappers will unfortunately have little immediate impact, but was worthy in its symbolic intentions.

The Union, built in the 1920s, is an anachronism plunked down in what used to be the hub of campus. The task of making it accessible to handicappers will be difficult, but MSU should endeavor to rapidly rectify the problems.

The Union is one of several buildings on campus primarily older ones — that are still inaccessible to handicappers. The problem goes beyond whether or not the Union facilities will be made available to wheelchair-users and extends to fundamental issues of integration and discrimination.

Handicappers have been objects of discrimination - subtle or otherwise - for many years. The inaccessibility of the Union - theoretically a ${\it gathering place for all students-is a prime example}$ of this discrimination. STIGMA Vice President Pam Kanaar is quite correct in her contention that installing a lift in the back of the building is equivalent to the "old segregation thing"

The mind set which perpetuates discrimination against handicappers is somewhat different than that which fosters racial prejudice. Whereas racial and most other forms of prejudice are fueled by overt and malevolent dislike of the object of the prejudice. handicappers historically have been victims of benign neglect. Since they constitute a distinct minority, an "out of sight, out of mind" mentality has been directed their way

Such neglect and apathy must end. Handicappers have the same rights to the benefits of society as anyone else. To that end, the Union and all other campus buildings must be made fully accessible, in accordance with the intent and spirit of state and federal regulations.

Carter welfare program a dud

President Carter's recent grumblings about welfare reform were, to borrow a phrase, full of sound and fury — but extremely thin on substance.

In putting forth his welfare reform proposals, Carter presented a package of tired rhetoric which harkened back to the Nixon era. His plan is offensive with its lack of specificity, outright reneging on campaign promises and spewing forth of phony idealism.

Carter has already backtracked on a campaign pledge to federalize public assistance, a move which would loosen the localized welfare stranglehold that is plunging our cities, most notably New York, into financial oblivion. This reversal will only guarantee, with the growing complications of administering welfare, that our metropolitan centers will be saddled with this sad burden until their financial structures disintegrate beneath the load.

The rest of Carter's plan is incredibly vague. For instance, Carter said the programs would provide a "decent income" for those who cannot work, but did not say what that decent income might be. He said there should be incentives for recipients to be honest and regulations to eliminate fraud, but did not say how this would be accomplished. He said incentives should be provided to encourage job creation in the private sector but no plan was given to achieve this.

The President should realize he is not running for office anymore: he is running it. We don't need vagueness. We need answers.

Carter is preoccupied with the idea of providing jobs for those that the initial cost of his well have no public program will he no assistance if prospective or present recipients refuse to take up available employment. This approach, however, will only affect a minority of those on welfare.

Out of the 11.2 million Americans presently on welfare, only 700,000 are not children or mothers. Most of these 700,000 are elderly or handicappers. One can readily see how false are the claims of those who characterize welfare recipients as lazy bums or chiselers. The vast majority of those on public assistance need help — lots of it.

What Carter should question is just why public assistance is not taken up entirely by the private sector.

The answer is simple: welfare is inherently inefficient. If this were not so, public assistance would have been on the New York Stock Exchange years ago. Under the circumstances, for Carter to assert program will be no greater the present cost is absurd.

Before the election, Carter talking about welfare reforms early years of his administra Now he has told us that fundamental reform of the we system must wait until 199 conveniently after the electric People cannot eat promises Gordian Knot of the welfare must be undone and made something sensible - else knot will be slashed altogethe some future conservative dential demagog, to the ever ing detriment of the poor dispossessed.

Save the dolphins

Rep. John Murphy, D.N.Y.. on behalf of the American Tunaboat Association, has initiated an intense effort to pass his House Bill 6970, an amendment to the Marine Mammal Protection Act which would permit tuna companies to drown tens of thousands of dolphins and porpoises in their massive nets this summer. While tuna interests are making nation-wide news with interests are making nation-wide news with claims of reduced profits, job losses and threatened shut-downs, there is another side to this story.

Faced with a 1972 law (the Marine Mammal Protection Act) which required tuna fisherman to reduce their incidental killing of dolphins "to insignificant levels approaching zero mortality and serious injury rate" researchers have successfully injury rate researchers have successfully developed improved equipment and handling methods which can greatly reduce the dolphin drownings without a significant detriment to fishing operations. Tuna fleets adopting the new techniques. adopting the new techniques cut their dolphin mortality by 50 fold last year and clearly demonstrated the applicability of

Despite this, in an effort to rack up ever higher profits following a "bumper harvest" in 1976 most tuna captains stubbornly in 1946 most tuna captains stubbornly refuse to accept any modifications in their methods. The most notable are four of the 19 major tuna ships which accounted for nearly half of the dolphin kill — "slob fishermen" in the true sense of the word. fishermen" in the true sense of the word. Perhaps if the tuna business would spend as much money informing its crews on the new fishing methods now available as they have spent on public relations this month, we could end the dolphin killings and concould end as the price for tunal transfer and as a batter price for tunal country. sumers could pay a better price for tuna products now believed to be overstocked by canneries.

Unfortunately, the friendly dolphins may be the real losers in this issue. As natural associates of the yellowfin tuna these animals have been severely depleted by tunaboats which can make no use whatever of them. The Murphy bill would permit the 'incidental killing' (i.e. accidental but convenient) of 160,000 dolphins and porpoises over the next two years. Scientific advisers have recommended that this number should not exceed a maximum of 30,000 ner years if wayne to recident. 30,000 per year if we are to avoid serious damage to the species. These animals could be rendered extinct for the sake of a sloppy

Rep. Murphy has hopes of rushing his bill through within two weeks, before the public can become aware of its devastating consequences. As concerned citizens we must urge our congressional representa-tives to immediately reject this power play and to support the Marine Mammal Protection Act as it now stands. The very safety of these beautiful creatures may well depend, again, upon a strong public mandate to "let them live."

Lease-signing

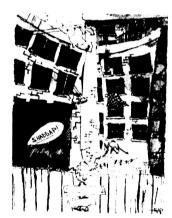

Now that it's apartment lease-signing time of year, I would like to extend a caution to any of you who are even thinking of renting at River's Edge or Water's Edge Apartments. Think twice.

I was asked to move because I own a cat. Fine. I realize she could ruin our luxurious carpet that comes complete with rips, burn holes and a missing 4 foot by 2 foot swath in living room (due to water seepage and the living room (due to water seepage and rot). And she would certainly destroy our collapsible couch, wobbly lamps, gouged table, etc. Funny thing, though — the manager's own cat seems to have been

Repairs often get overlooked, also. They Repairs often get overlooked, also. They promised to have our leaky sliding glass door fixed before we moved in. Seven months later it's worse than before. We lost good meat and had to threaten escrow before we could get our dead freezer replaced with an almost dead one. They got five days free rent from us to "clean" before we moved in. I guess the smeared five days free rent from us to "clean" before we moved in. I guess the smeared mosquitoes and filth on the walls appeared spontaneously between the time they left and we moved in. Whole bathrooms are crumbling, whole balconies are ripping away from apartments, etc., etc. Check the list of violations the city building inspector has on the place. It's great reading.

However, if you still end up at the Edge, remember to get all promises written down and signed before you sign the lease. They will promise you the sky until you sign, then good luck.

RA selection

Well, it's that time of year again. Students are signing up for new dorms, new floors and — oh, yes — the new resident assistants have already been chosen for the 77 78 school year.

Perhaps you tried to become an RA. Well, if you didn't make it, maybe I could give you a few pointers on how to become an RA — better known as how to succeed in housing without really trying.

The biggest requirement is that you can't afford to come back to school without having your housing paid for by the people in the dorm. You must also want your own room more than anything else in the whole world. This will insure that your motivation is in the right place.

Secondly, you must be able to make tremendously cute signs for the johns to inform the persons on your floor about all the activities, which, of course, someone else will have to plan.

You must be bubbly and smiley and oh-so-happy-go-lucky, so that when someone on the floor wises up to your game, your friends will defend you, thinking of your feelings, your pride and your housing money. They won't have the eyes to see, or the balls to say that you haven't done a thing all year.

You must be a confident person...and well you should be. After all, RA evaluations are sent out to persons on your floor during fall term, and who could possibly judge you after only one term?

Last but not least, you must have no conscience. You must not have any qualms about stealing the dorm residents' every term. After all, you deserve to be there after faking your way through the intensive RA selection process. Besides, it's hard making all those signs for the johns every term.

So, for those of you who missed out on the handout this year, please give some thought to my ideas and better luck next

And for those of you who made it...congratulations!!!!!

COMMENTARY: The role of the ruminant in the future and the world food crisis.

The world food crisis has sparked much debate over our future food needs and production. There seem to be two major problems: 1) population growth and 2) food for the population. Whether the scientific community can develop food production for the ever-growing population has prompted the following question: "Isn't it wrong to feed grain to animals when so many people are starving in the world today?" answer to this is often clouded by people and organizations that are overstating the amounts and proportions of grain used in beef or milk production.

Many of the problems associated with world food shortages today are based to some extent on economic, cultural and political considerations. There are people who argue that livestock production should be eliminated, which implies that plant and animal products are essentially equivalent nutritionally and that both man and the ruminant are in direct competition for

This is not true. In the United States today approximately 2 percent of the U.S. soybean crop and 3 percent of the U.S. corn crop are directly consumed by humans. This is not true worldwide, and the possibility of transporting grain for human consumption is inevitable. In the case of many developing countries, the very real problem of who is going to pay for planting, care, production, harvesting, transportation and distribution of the cereal grains exists. It might also be wise to consider the possibility that supplying needy nations with U.S. grains will simply encourage them to remain dependent upon outside sources

So what is the role of the ruminant in the future? Does it have a role in feeding the hungry world? The answer is yes. The ruminant, by virtue of having a fourstomach-fermentation-vat system, can digest many forages and other complex carbohydrates that humans cannot and will not eat. Ruminants certainly are less efficient converters of dietary energy in the production of animal products for human onsumption than are monogastric animals. However, if you compare efficiencies of dietary energy utilization for various aniyou'll remember that man is also not 100 percent efficient Ruminants can utilize forages and other roughages to meet their energy require ments, and not compete for grains that can be directly consumed by humans. Ruminants can convert to energy corncobs stalks, straw and such wastes as cardboard boxes. Wastes from the U.S. milling, brewing and sugar industries equivalent to 9.3 million metric tons of grain were recycled through ruminants in 1973.

It has been estimated that 150 pounds of cellulose waste may be produced each day for each of the world's four billion people. The majority of this waste can not be economically collected. However, if only 5 percent of the total cellulose waste could be collected and processed economically, this would provide enough energy to produce the world's current protein needs through ruminant animals.

There are several other questions to consider. Why, if the ruminant is such a good digester of forages, is it eating so much grain? Prior to 1973, energy was relatively cheap, so grain was inexpensive to produce. This, coupled with the surplus of grain made grains an economical energy source. Farmers chose to market their grain through livestock rather than to humans so as to receive their highest return. The selected advantage of the ruminant (digesting forages for energy protein production) was bypassed.

However, as the world populat However, as the world popular creases, the most favorable aspects grain and ruminants must be a Should forage-producing land with ports ruminants be then conser grain-producing land instead? America is trying to forget. The man in the White House wears blue jeans and assures us every now and then that no, Vietnam wasn't such a good idea after all. One of the prime architects of the Indochina carnage, Richard Nixon, pontificates on national television about how ending the war was one of his greatest accomplishments. One reads all this with a deepening sense of futility. Is there something innate in American culture that leaves a person — specifically, left Kovic — morally obtuse and psychologically unprepared to deal with something like Vietnam? The environment that molded Kovic made him anxious, at the tender age of 18, to enter the Marine Corps — an organization which, to borrow Kurt Vonne gut's description of West Point, "turns voung men into homi cidal maniacs for use in war.'

very real scenario of Kent State, My Lai, the domino theory, "peace with honor," Americans fleeing Saigon and a baby lift to assuage a national conscience. There was also another side to the war, a side in a strange country halfway across the world, in another time zone, almost another era.

That side was the Vietnam that Emerson saw. The hand of the trembling Vietnamese nurse handcuffed to an equally trembling 16-year-old girl. The 11- and 12-year-olds who pimp ed in Saigon streets. The South Vietnamese families, who like some of their American counterparts, sought to keep their eldest sons from joining a marching column of ragtaggy men with American weapons.

and hopefully will do, is undo. Undo a myopic perception of history, a perception that backfired when Gerald Ford announced the end of America's "little war" on May 7, 1975. Undo a perception grounded in Wilsonian ideals, in the Cold War, the domino theory, the Marshall Plan and, less drasti cally, provide hindsight and foresight for ourselves as human beings.

Nationals next for softball team

By JOHN SINGLER State News Sports Writer

Despite stumbling to second place in this weekend's regionals, the MSU softball team will be in Omaha, Neb., next week to defend its national championship.

By finishing second to Western Illinois, plus the fact that one of the nine regions nationwide will not send a team to the World Series, the Spartans got the nod to return to Omaha.

They opened play Thursday, blasting West Virginia into the loser's bracket of the double-elimination tourney, 11-4. MSU had a three-run third inning and iced the game with five more in the

Laurie Zoodsma started both rallies, reaching base on an error in the third, and doubling in the fourth. Center-fielder Ann Anderson capped both rallies with run-scoring hits, including a double in the fourth. Carol Hutchins, Carmen King, Diane Spoelstra, Kathy Strahan and Anderson paced the Spartans at the plate with two hits apiece. Gwen White was the winner, walking three and striking out

MSU next faced Southern Illinois and notched a 2-1 win, in extra innings, banging out 10 hits in the process.

The Spartans scored in the first on a single by Gayle Barrons, a double by Zoodsma and when Spoelstra reached base on an error, Barrons scored.

SIU rallied in the top of the seventh, tying the game until the bottom of the ninth. Strahan walked, Nancy Green singled, Barrons singled and Zoodsma was safe on an error, scoring Strahan with the winner.

Sheri Sprangel got the win, allowing only three hits. Barrons was a perfect five for five at the plate.

MSU met Western Illinois next, and lost its first game, 5-0. Earlier in the season, the Spartans played Western and, with Laurel Hills pitching, won 8-2.

The Spartan junior had her hands full this time out, victimized by a five-run sixth inning. MSU succumbed easily enough in its last at-bat, going down one-two-three and entering the loser's bracket.

The Spartans next played Southern Illinois and enjoyed the same results as before, a 2-1 win — in regulation this time. MSU again scored early. Strahan led off the first with a walk, Anderson sacrificed her to second, a wild pitch moved her to third and she scored on a sacrifice fly by Barrons.

The Spartans plated the eventual winning run in the third. Strahan walked, Anderson was safe on an error. Barrons lined into a fast double play, moving Strahan to third. She scored on a double by Zoodsma.

SIU had a triple in the seventh and the run scored on an error, but that was all as Nancy Lyons shut the door. The Spartan hurler gave up only four hits, and struck out two.

In their final game, the Spartans watched a 6.2 lead disappear in the final three innings. Strahan paced MSU with two hits, including a home run with the bases empty in the fourth. King, Hutchins and Barrons also added two hits each Sudden death playoffs are becoming a way of life for MSU's Sheila Tansey.

Two weekends ago, the Spartan junior failed to win a playoff for second place individually and last weekend she fell short again.

When the Spartans and Ohio State locked up for the team title at the Bowling Green Invitational this weekend, it was Tansey's eight foot birdie putt on the first playoff hole which handed the MSU women's golf team its fifth straight tournament win.

The Spartans and Buckeyes had concluded the regulation 36-hole tour of the Bowling Green layout tied at 620. The first extra hole was a par five, and Spartans Laurie Everett, Sue Conlin. Joan Garety and Sue Ertl parred it. Karen Escott took a six and Tansey's birdie made the

"The kids made some mental errors this weekend and they were in the water quite a bit,' said Mary Fossum, Spartan head coach.

Ohio State's Judy Ellis and Ertl had the outcome of the tourney in their hands Saturday, since they were in the last group of golfers to finish regulation play. Both double bogeyed the final hole, prompting the playoff.

Fine choreography marks Repertory Dance Company

State News Special Reviewer

One of the main purposes of the MSU Repertory Dance Company, a group of aspiring young dancers, is to bring the efforts of its members in choreography and live performance to the attention of the University community. According to Dixie Durr, director of the company, such performances would ideally benefit the audience as well as the company. Durr and the company realized this goal in their latest performance at Fairchild Theatre.

The most impressive performance of the evening was given by Larry Buck and Jeanette Leabu. Their "A Still Point in Time," choreographed by Durr, was a stunning exercise in calculated grace. The pair combined elements of ballet and acrobatics in a breathtaking performance of controlled fluidity. They moved with a lightly studied precision that left the audience hushed and attentive.

Laura and Paul Koverman, artistic directors of the Lansing Ballet Company, performed an energetic rendition of the Peasant Pas De Deux" from the ballet "Giselle." While these two performers portrayed a young couple announcing their engagement with admirable believability, their best performances were their solo spots. Paul Koverman is a particularly energetic performer; his portrayal of a newly engaged oung man had all the stateliness and powerful assurance that such a role demands. Laura Koverman is likewise a gifted artist; while her with an impressive series of "Petits batements.

Other highlights of the evening included "Energies," choreographed by Eric Johnson, and "La Fiesta," the work of choreographers Durr, Jennifer Lane and Janey Niles Winkelstern. Particularly impressive in these numbers were the ensemble performances. "Energies" com-bined acrobatics, floor exercise, nonsense mumblings and humor into a delightful piece that delighted the audience. "La Fiesta," accompanied by the brilliant jazz of Chick Corea, was for all the world a study of children playing in the sun. The freshness and "spanking newness" of these works illustrated the versatility and imagination of the Repertory Dance Company. And the dancers themselves obviously loved their craft. Almost without exception, performances here, in both ensembles and spot solos, were energetic youthful and clean.

Credit must be given to those technical directors who were sensitive to the nature of this program. The bare stage, simple lighting and costume design all foiled the dancers and added a clean simplicity that matched the tone of the

Stylized bass, vibraphone bind exquisite jazz team

The instruments of their skill make them unique in what they offer the world of jazz. Satur-day night's ShowcaseJazz presentations in Erickson Hall kiva were no exceptions in repre senting the Gary Burton Quar tet's sound of distinction.

Burton's highly-stylized fourmallet method on the vibraphone, together with the exquisite bass work of original Burton quartet member Steve Swallow and drummer Danny Gottlieb, slates the quartet among jazz' most prolific musi-

The quartet's 12-string electric guitarist Pat Metheny has recently been replaced by guitarist Mitch Coodley. Metheny quit the quartet three days before the MSU appearance to work on his own with jazz pianist Lyle Mays. Both musicians were featured with Yusef Lateef in a winter term Showcase concert. Coodley's guitar playing added a vital component to the quartet's sound, but Metheny's outstanding musi-cianship was missed.

Burton, presently a faculty member of Boston's Berklee College of Music, gained national prominence as a soloist with George Shearing in 1963 and Stan Getz in 1964. He formed his quartet three years later.

Burton's association with Weber over the last couple of years led to their album. "Ring," and a national tour with the ECM Festival of Music. Their MSU performance is part of the tour to back up the quartet's new album, "Passen-

Audience welcomes return of Doc and Merle Watson

By MARTI BENEDETTI

One cannot actually find fault with the clean, polished guitar picking of singer-guitarist Doc Watson. His performances hold a guarantee of quality, achieved through the long-time cultivation of his inherent talent.

Doc and his son Merle Waton, whose skill at slide guitar is as proficient as ever, have not been around Lansing for some three and a half years, and their audiences at Thursday night's Mariah presentation were, indeed, glad to have them back.

Doc Watson is one of the first of a long line of country swing musicians. And as he says, they take a number and play it like nobody else: "We play it like Doc and Merle."

This brings to mind the unique stage rapport which exists between the father and son. The manner in which these two complement each other as musicians and entertainers was both rare and refreshing. Though Doc and Merle Wat.

Doc Watson's special rapport with his son can only be equaled by his skill as an eloquent storyteller. He weaves tales between numbers throughout his act with a natural flair and his distinct sophistication. Doc Watson cannot be imitated or compared. He is an initiator, a

The 27th running of the Lambda Chi Alpha Junior 500 had its share of excitement Saturday on West Circle Drive. Right, Sherry Engelhardt from Alpha Phi Sorority took a spill after passing the cart off to teammate Anne Stimson whose sister, Sue, was driving. Below, the women of Asher House reap the spoils of victory after a grueling race.

. . and victory's sweet sap for Asher House once more

Butterflies were not only floating around the sun-filled MSU campus Saturday, but were lodged in the stomachs: of the 208 anxious contestants entered in the Junior 500 cart race.

Pushing four wheeled contraptions which resembled the NASA moonbuggy, 38 different teams of men and women busted their behinds on the grueling .94 mile West Circle Drive course to taste the sweet sap of victory.

The power behind the carts, which were driven by jockey sized drivers, was supplied by four runners from the 22 different men's teams and eight for the 16 different women's teams.

Several times the carts came in contact with high speed accidents, after bouncing off curbs and avoiding other runners and carts. There were no serious accidents but the screaming crowd reacted as if a firey wreck had indeed occurred.

Both the men's and the women's race were won by teams from the Asher Student Foundation in blinding speeds of 3 minutes and 21 seconds for the men and 3 minutes and 48 seconds for the women.

Evans Scholars and Delta Tau Delta fraternity took second and third, respectively, in the men's race and Kappa Alpha Theta and Delta Gamma sororities took second and third in the women's.

In 1961, four football players pushed a cart around West Circle

Drive in a time of 3:01 minutes to set the speed record for the Junior that were not, the race was a severe tax on their physical abilities. Sponsored by Lambda Chi Alpha Fraternity, the Junior 500 was originated in 1947 after a group from the fraternity built a crudely constructed cart and challenged other fraternities to race around

In the late '60s the event became what the Detroit Free Press called "the largest independently sponsored student event in the country" after 14,000 spectators filled West Circle Drive in 1967 to

When interest fell in the early '70s the race was scrapped for several years, but was reinstituted by Lambda Chi Alpha last year.

Afterwards the contestants' once butterfly-filled stomachs were soon relieved by the accomplishment of racing and the distinct effects of cold beer.

controversial cancer drug Laetrile should not be placed on the market because there is not yet sufficient proof of its effectiveness, the principal investigator for the National Cancer Institute said Thurs day night.

Speaking at a public forum at Lansing's Provincial Hospital Dr. William G. Tucker said he would not even recommend Laetrile to a terminally ill patient.

"There have been investigators sent to Mexico to look into the cures claimed by Laetrile enthusiasts. Out of 400 cases presented as regressive, none were found to be regressive at all," he said.

Tucker said that the patients receiving Laetrile in Mexico did not know that they were receiving an automatic dose of radiation at the same time.

The application of radiation was a variable factor in the effectiveness of the Laetrile. It caused an apparent improvement which was only temp-

Tucker suggested that proponents of Laetrile experiment with a controlled comparison at a reliable institution in which one individual is given Laetrile and another given a placebo a sugar pill.

"I don't believe you'd find any regression with the Lae-trile," he commented.

As for giving Laetrile to a terminal patient. Tucker cited a case in which a doctor informed a patient that he had only a certain amount of time to live:

"The patient then went out, sold his business, spent his money and when he didn't die on schedule, he sued the doc-

However, more research is necessary before a final decision on the effectiveness of the drug can be made, he said.

DETROIT (UPI) — Philip Van Dam has refused a request from his superiors to step down as U.S. attorney in southeastern

Van Dam said he refused the Justice Department request for his open-ended resignation Friday.

The former aide to Sen. Robert Griffin, R.-Mich., has vowed to fight to keep his $39,000-a-year job despite a change in administration. Van Dam was appointed last June by former President Gerald R. Ford.

Sen. Donald Riegle, D-Mich., has said he wants Van Dam out of the post and has suggested Detroit attorney, James K. Robinson, as a replacement. Traditionally, the U.S. attorney's job has been considered a

"I'm not aware of any requirement mandated by law for a resignation and I have no intention of resigning," he said.

Van Dam said he refused the call for his resignation because he believed that President Jimmy Carter's campaign pledge not to politicize the Justice Department meant Van Dam would not lose

Weather, reserves affect coffee price

ON (AP) — International experts say two factors will the future cost of a cup of coffee: the weather in Brazil this July and the rate at which world coffee continue to dwindle.

frost hits Brazil — like the one in 1975 that almost wiped intry's coffee-growing potential — the coffee trade is in its worst crises ever.

perts watching the coffee business are apprehensive oce 1975 the world trade has been living on stockpiles ted in the years of plenty before the Brazilian frost. 1, these specialists predict, world stocks will be down to 3 million, 132-pound bags of green (unroasted) coffee. nly about 5 per cent of the amount of coffee traded in a these 3 million bags are, no one knows for sure. But one thing does seem certain: Brazil will have none left by year's end In the past, stocks in producer country warehouses, amounting to at least a year's supply, took care of partial crop failures. In the past two years, however, besides the frost in Brazil, other factors cutting into the coffee supply were civil strife in Africa, disrupting Angolan, Ugandan and Ethiopian production, and a drought in Colombia that this year lopped off 500,000 bags from the expected crop.

Barring another frost, the Brazilian Coffee Institute predicts a crop of 15 million bags this year, while the U.S. Agriculture Department estimates a 17-million bag crop from Brazil.

Brazil consumes 6 million bags domestically, with the remainder available for export.

In normal years, Brazil has produced as many as 25 million bags

A major London trader said it would take at least two successful crop years in Brazil for that country to return to its normal export

This means that any steady decrease in prices is not likely before 1979. But consumers should not expect to see a return to the low, pre-1975 prices, the experts here say.

General Foods Corp. and Procter & Gamble Co. announced 25-cent-a-pound cuts in wholesale coffee prices in the United States last week. General Foods' Maxwell House brand was cut to $4.21 a pound and Procter & Gamble's Folger brand to $4.18 a composite daily price — the world average of one pound of green coffee landed dockside in New York — slipped from $3.26 a pound on April 14 to $2.67 a pound Friday. At one time earlier this year it was as high as $3.30.

The price cuts prompted a meeting Friday in El Salvador of Central American and Colombian coffee officials to see what they could do to halt the downward trend.

The 59-cent loss about equals the average price of a pound of green coffee in July 1975, before the frost.

Where's a great place to learn all sorts of things about the inner workings of the University? According to Steve Politowicz, without a doubt it is the University Committee on Academic Policy (CAP). Politowicz, who has been an active member of CAP for three years, called it "the most important committee within the University" and good for students who have interests in education. CAP has six student member positions open for next year. Two must be graduate students, four must be undergraduates and two out of the total membership must also be Student Council members.

Committee activities cover a wide range of University operations. CAP consults with the provost on undergraduate and professional academic programs, acts as an advisory board on policy pertaining to curriculum and instruction and counsels for undergraduate and graduate students and programs.

CAP's responsibility as a consultant to the provost also extends to admissions and retention policies, financial aid and how educational and research resources are distributed and used on the undergraduate and graduate-professional level.

All other matters on academic policy include CAP, as does policy on research development. The committee also works in Mondale is scheduled to meet with South African Prime Minister John Vorster in Vienna Thursday to discuss the southern African situation, and the vice president is expected to press Vorster for change in South Africa's racial policies.

Mondale said there is no connection between Young's South African visit and his own sessions with Vorster.

He said he would enter the discussions with the South African leader "in a constructive frame of mind" and without preconditions.

Vorster, meanwhile, warned in a newspaper interview that other nations would not be able to change the way South Africa handles its domestic affairs.

"South Africa is an independent country and certainly nobody from the outside can dictate how it should run its country or its domestic affairs," Vorster told Vienna's Kronen-

Stanley Kaplan, who runs the "Stanley Kaplan Educational Centers," feels that prepara-tory programs like his "try to review the information offered in the test for the student," even though he admitted "some students can do this on their own."

Kaplan explained that many students have "anxiety problems" and that his course helps give students confidence in themselves.

Though in some cases Kaplan has been able to boost the MCAT scores of students who have taken the test a second time, he still concedes that his program can only help students reach their own potential.

The general consensus of three Michigan medical schools polled by the State News was that careful preparation and study was all that is necessary for preparation of the MCAT.

Judith A. Krupka, the acting associate dean of the MSU College of Human Medicine, said that since the test itself has been revised, the primary source of preparation for the MCAT is the manual published by the American College Test-

Krupka also pointed out that "more than just grades and MCAT scores are considered' for entrance into medical school. Mary Hanna, an admissions officer at the University of Michigan medical school, echoed other medical school officials, saying there was no evidence to substantiate claims of improvement by taking a preparatory course, and that the U-M medical school did not recommend any such courses.

Joseph Dog admissions at Wayne State University medical school, said "people who take these courses need structure, structure you can get by yourself, if you have drive and initiative.

Generally most medical schools maintain that if a student has the drive to get into medical school, that student should be able to study for the MCAT successfully alone.

Elliot, at the American College Testing Program, summed up the situation by saying, "These preparation courses, in many cases, just feed on the paranoia generated by the fact that people know that two out of three students making application to medical schools won't get

'U' apartment students 'plotting' to supplant high costs of food for the gardeners

By PATRICIA LaCROIX State News Staff Writer

Saving money in these days of perpetually rising costs is often easier said than done especially when nebulous plans for keeping more of the green stuff tucked safe in pockets fall short of optimistic aspirations.

However, several MSU students are taking direct action in saving money through their 25 square foot rented garden

The plots have been rented out to students and faculty members living in University Apartment complexes for $4 per year through the family housing resident's council. Kathy Jacobs coordinates the rental program.

The students will reap a variety of vegetables, fruits and other fresh food products at harvest time, which will mean a sizable savings on

Even Trigger would't watch

DENVER (AP) -- Cowboy star Roy Rogers says most of today's movies aren't fit for human consumption and are so bad he wouldn't even let his horse Trigger watch them -- if the palomino was around.

Some of the pictures I've seen in the last 10 years I wouldn't even want Trigger to watch," the 64 year-old King of the Cowboys said.

Too many films are dominat ed by sex and violence and fail to include the entertainment and moral messages that marked the more than 90 s he made between 1938 and 1954. Rogers said.

marked increase in the number of persons interested in the gardening program this year, so much that additional land is being sought by the group for next year.

"This is the first year that all the plots have been rented,'

The land used by the gardeners was originally donated by the University about four years ago. It was through the residents' suggestion that the program was begun.

Kasey Knight, a master's degree candidate in social work, said she went into gardening this year for the first time with three of her friends.

She said it would be impossi ble to determine how much money will be saved until the harvest takes place, but she has invested "very little" in the planting of the garden

"With the plot rental fee and the seeds, I'd say it was close to $7 or $8," she said.

The group has planted "just about everything that you'd ever want from a garden, Knight said, including corn, peas, carrots, leeks, eggplant, tomatoes and onions. A portion of the plot and a half of the four students rent is used for a compost pile and a "few experimental projects.'

One of the major problems that the four are encountering is the lack of rain in Michigan so far this year. The group has been carying water out by hand to their plot in an attempt to keep it watered.

"It will be particularly rough we have a dry June and July," she said.

One of the improvements to the plots will be the installation of an irrigation system in July easing this difficulty, she said. Marsha Jean Falco, another
