Hormone lawsuit dismissed by judge

DETROIT (UPI) — A circuit court judge has dismissed a lawsuit filed by 144 women who alleged they contracted cancer because their mothers took the hormone DES during pregnancy to prevent miscarriages.

County Judge Thomas Roumell said the case was invalid because the women failed in their suit to identify the product names or manufacturers.

The women, however, said they would appeal the decision.

Although admitting he had sympathy for the women, Roumell said the precedent-setting liability theory "constrained" him from acting in their favor.

The women, joined in the suit by 40 husbands, alleged they contracted cancer because their mothers used the drug DES during pregnancies in the late 1940s and the late 1960s scientists found that the offspring of women who took DES had a developing cancer of the cervix.

All 144 women have undergone surgery to remove cancerous or precancerous areas and some had part or all of their reproductive organs removed.

In the suit, however, most of the women said they could not identify product names or manufacturers. Roumell prefaced his ruling by acknowledging "the injury and suffering of the plaintiffs in this case and indeed, . . . all the many more around our nation who conceivably have endured the same gross and pathetic mishap."

He said, however, that "concern for the individual at this point is out of line." "The requirements of identification of the product and the manufacturer of it are still a prerequisite to finding liability until the day that either by statute or decisional law absolute liability can be attributed to either a manufacturer or an entire industry," he said.

Lawrence Charfoos, attorney for the women, said he was "disappointed but not surprised" by the ruling. He said he would appeal the case.

"It's about what we expected but now's the time to test the law," he said. "I think they (the drug firms) are going to end up in court."

"There's nothing in American history like this, where such a large number of women are involved."

The lawsuit, originally filed in September 1974, contended that the drug companies were jointly liable because DES was manufactured and sold under its chemical or generic name by many firms and never marketed under a brand name.

Michigan, with an estimated 85,000 DES daughters, was a target area for testing and marketing the drug.

Judicial nominations up for board's OK

After a three-step selection process, the All-University Student Judiciary (AUSJ) has decided on its recommendations for positions open on three University judiciaries.

The recommendations to the Student-Faculty Judiciary (SFJ), the Anti-Discrimination Judicial Board (ADJB) and AUSJ will go before the ASMSU Student Board for approval tonight.

Before beginning the three-step process, the candidates filed applications and attended a meeting to discuss the roles of the three judiciaries, said Pete Marvin, AUSJ adviser. The process was also explained to the candidates, he added.

The first step of the process involved the candidates in an introductory interview lasting 15 minutes before an AUSJ panel. Marvin said the interview was relatively informal.

The next step of the process was a group discussion with both AUSJ members and ASMSU Student Board members present to observe. The applicants were divided up and provided with discussion guidelines and topics.

Finally, the preferred half of the applicants were asked to take part in an interview with the entire AUSJ "to try to get an idea where the individual was coming from," Marvin said.

About 20 people were interviewed in this fashion, from which the 19 recommended for positions or alternates were chosen.

Marvin said the AUSJ made its recommendations with two things in mind:

- To compose a judiciary "that reflects a good bit of the diversity that exists in the student body" and
- To select a group that could work well together.

Recommended for the two openings on the SFJ are Mary Kay Henry and Michael Lenz.

Man deemed likely cause of cell woes

DETROIT (UPI) — State and local officials conceded Monday that overcrowding in the world's largest walled prison may have been an underlying motivation for a disturbance in Southern Michigan

Charles Anderson estimated the late Sunday involved between 30 inmates out of 355 in Cell Block 9 of the penitentiary. There were no other than a few bruises, he said, and damage amounted to about $1,000.

Anderson and other officials said a power outage prompted the three-hour incident that caused superficial damage to the area.

Power Co. had cut off power to the building Sunday afternoon for repairs. Officials said work crews were about two hours late in restoring power, and during a guard shift change 40 inmates became unruly.

Mostly a matter of throwing glass bottles, Anderson said. "Some mattresses were burned, and a couple of doors were damaged. Three residents were sent to the infirmary for X-rays, and two had bruises. There were no injuries to the staff."

Police were called to the scene, but the disturbance was quelled by prison guards. Operations were termed normal Monday.

Institution in this southern Michigan is the most glaring example of the overcrowding in state prisons, which has become a political issue.

Zambian head announces 'state of war'

LUSAKA, Zambia (AP) — President Kenneth D. Kaunda, a major supporter of black Rhodesian guerrillas, declared on Monday that Zambia is in a "state of war" with the white regime of neighboring Rhodesia.

Kaunda said he had placed the Zambian armed forces on alert and ordered them to shoot down any Rhodesian aircraft flying over Zambian territory. He said he took these steps after learning that Rhodesia might make preemptive strikes against guerrilla bases in Zambia.

In another sign of a worsening racial confrontation in southern Africa, President Samora Machel of Mozambique dismissed talk of a possible peaceful solution in Rhodesia as "a mistake."

A Rhodesian government spokesperson said of the Zambian declaration that Rhodesia has no aggressive intentions against her neighbors. But he acknowledged that the Salisbury regime had warned of possible "preemptive strikes" against guerrilla bases if insurgent attacks continued.

A spokesperson for Rhodesian security forces said about 50 government soldiers crossed into neighboring Botswana on Monday and clashed with Botswana police. The Rhodesians were searching for guerrillas allegedly responsible for killing an elderly white couple and two blacks in a raid on a western Rhodesian farm Sunday night.

The spokesperson said the Botswana clash was brief. There were no casualties reported.

The new rumblings of a major black white clash in the region came as Vice President Walter F. Mondale and Andrew Young, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, prepared to press a U.S. diplomatic campaign to help end the four-year-old Rhodesian guerrilla war and pave the way for black majority rule in southern are in a state of war with Rhodesia," he said. "We will fight and I have already directed all my boys to shoot any Rhodesian planes on sight using Zambian airspace."

Kaunda's declaration was not expected to lead to an immediate all-out war. Zambia's army, estimated at 5,000 men, is less than half the size of the Rhodesian army, and the Zambian army and air force are under-equipped in comparison with Rhodesia's.

In March 1976, Mozambique, on Rhodesia's eastern border and another base for nationalist guerrillas, made a similar declaration. Since then the Rhodesians have raided guerrilla camps in Mozambique and have charged that Mozambican troops are operating with the guerrillas in border areas.

Machel, opening the U.N. conference in the Mozambican capital Monday, said, "We believe it is a mistake to speak of peaceful solutions when there is war."

The conference, attended by representatives of 80 nations, was called to muster support for the black nationalist struggles in Rhodesia and the South African-controlled territory of South-West Africa.

Machel's speech was an apparent rejection of current U.S.-Britain peace efforts. (continued on page 8)

Two sentenced for rape of Hubbard Hall woman

Two men were sentenced to prison Friday after pleading guilty to charges stemming from the rape of an MSU woman last fall.

James Edward Johnson, 23, of Flint, pled guilty to third-degree criminal sexual conduct and was sentenced to seven and one-half to 15 years in prison.

Lucius Lee Oden Jr., 28, of Flint, pled guilty to assault with intent to commit criminal sexual conduct including sexual penetration. He was sentenced to five to 10 years imprisonment.

Both men had originally been charged with first-degree criminal sexual conduct but had plea-bargained to the lesser charges. Capt. Ferman Badgely of the Department of Public Safety (DPS) said the two men probably would have received similar sentences had they been found guilty of the original charges.

First-degree criminal sexual conduct involves either a threat with a weapon or the involvement of more than one person. Third-degree criminal sexual conduct is assault with sexual penetration.

The rape occurred December 4, 1976, in South Hubbard Hall shortly before midnight. (continued on page 8)

Handicapper sexuality explained

By ROXANNE L. BROWN
State News Staff Writer

Well listen good, cause I don't lie
Perhaps you have the answer why
It fills my midget soul with hate
The way that people will not differentiate

As the words to Dorie Previn's song about differences and stereotypes played, a woman busily moved her hands to interpret the words for a deaf student, while the other persons, most of them handicappers, listened.

As part of a two-day conference on the social, attitudinal, and physical integration of handicappers, Joanne Tagge, education and counseling coordinator of Sparrow Hospital's spinal cord unit, focused her workshop on human sexuality and the correction of sexual myths concerning handicappers.

Tagge stressed that she must also instill feelings of capability in male spinal cord patients who have lost their ability to have an erection.

"Society reinforces the myth that a handicapper (male or female) cannot have a sex life and this is untrue," she commented.

According to Tagge, there have been no inroads in the medical field concerning handicapper sexuality and this, too, is an obstacle in eroding myths. "Two years ago when I lost the use of my limbs, the doctor assured me that I would be able to rear children," Tagge said. "I told him that my concern was whether or not I would ever experience sexual pleasure again. He did not know," concluded Tagge.

Many myths were named by Tagge as factors contributing to the problem handicappers have of underscoring their own sexuality. Some 14th century literature claimed that "cripples," (women) having lost sensations in the legs, had them all channeled into the genital region, she said.

Tagge refuted such myths and advised her young audience not to listen to theories such as "if you are handicapped at 20, you should try to maintain your sex life, but if you are over 40 there is no sense in thinking about sex, anyway."

Tagge said that a lot of handicapper women simply throw out the fact they are women. "You have to come to grip with yourself. If you see yourself as a woman then that's how men see you," she said.

Tagge urged the group to step outside the perimeter society has set for handicappers.

The conference, held at Kellogg Center, was sponsored by the Handicapper Council and the Office of Programs for Handicappers.

Congress gives OK to tax-cut measure

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress gave final approval Monday to a bill cutting taxes for 46 million low- and middle-income couples or individuals and simplifying tax returns for 95 per cent of Americans.

The Senate approved the bill by voice vote. The House vote was 383 to 2 with only Reps. Andy Jacobs, D-Ind., and Charles Wiggins, R-Calif., voting against it.

The bill, stripped of the $50-per-person rebates President Jimmy Carter once proposed to stimulate the economy, now goes to the White House. It would provide tax relief totaling $34.1 billion over the next 28 months.

By permanently raising the standard deduction, the legislation would result in annual tax cuts averaging $111 for 46 million who do not itemize deductions. But the process of simplifying the standard deduction would mean a tax increase averaging $52 a year for 2 million single taxpayers.

The higher standard deduction — a flat $3,200 for couples filing a joint return and $2,200 for single persons — would result in a $139 tax saving for a typical family of four earning $15,000 and a $110 cut for a single person making $10,000 a year.

Single persons earning more than $13,750 a year who use the standard deduction will get a tax increase of about $52 a year.

Most taxpayers affected by the change in the standard deduction would see the results in higher take-home pay after June 1.

In addition, the measure extends through 1978 the general individual tax credit of $35 per person or 2 per cent of the first $9,000 of taxable income, the special tax credit of up to $400 a year for poor working families, and $2.3 billion worth of lower corporate tax rates first enacted in 1975.

Unless those tax cuts were extended, 70 million couples or individuals would face tax increases averaging $170 next year. For millions of taxpayers, an important section of the bill would mean an easier job filing federal income-tax returns each year. This simplification provision would allow the bulk of individual taxpayers to figure out their taxes with virtually no mathematical computations.

New tax tables would be created by combining the standard deduction, the $750 personal exemption and the general tax cut. In most cases, the only variable would be the number of members in a family. Thus, a family of four using the standard deduction could determine its tax bill simply by looking at the tax table four exemptions.

IRA announces execution of officer

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Irish Republican Army (IRA) guerrillas said Monday that they had "executed" a 29-year-old British Army captain abducted near the Irish Republic border.

Despite the claim by the IRA 1st Battalion in Armagh County, site of the kidnaping, British troops and police on both sides of the Irish border continued their day-and-night search for the missing officer, Capt. Robert Lawrence Nairac.

If the "execution" is confirmed, Nairac would be one of the highest-ranking British officers to be murdered in eight years of sectarian conflict in the British province. Six soldiers were killed earlier this year and 266 have died since 1969.

Basil Cardinal Hume, the archbishop of Westminster and head of the Roman Catholic Church in England and Wales, had appealed to the mostly Catholic IRA to release Nairac, whom he knew when Nairac was a student.

"This is a terrible blow to his family and I am shattered to hear the news," the archbishop said.

British rush to beat nuclear ban

LONDON (AP) — British nuclear scientists are rushing to finish work on a hydrogen bomb and a warhead to beat a ban on hydrogen bomb tests expected from President Jimmy Carter. London's Daily Mail said Monday.

The conservative daily said the projects will give Britain a weapons system independent of the United States. It said the British cabinet "ordered the rush because it believes the 20-year-old nuclear cooperation treaty with the U.S. is unlikely to be renewed by President Carter when it expires next year. That would exclude Britain from the underground testing base in Nevada.

A scheduled Nevada test of an advanced British H-bomb has been brought forward several months and is expected soon, the report said.

Postal rates may jump, officials warn

WASHINGTON (AP) — You probably will pay higher postage charges and receive mail only five days per week by early next year, the Postal Service said Monday.

Postmaster General Benjamin F. Bailar said the price of a stamp for first-class letters will rise from the current 13 cents to at least 15 cents. It will be 16 cents if six-day delivery is maintained, he warned.

Bailar told a Senate panel that the Postal Service board of governors probably will act within two months on the proposals.

Both steps have been under consideration for months, but Bailar's pronouncement was more definite than previous statements and shed new light on the timing of the proposed changes.

Several procedures still must be carried out before the moves could be put into effect, Bailar said.

Power failure hits southern Florida

MIAMI (AP) — A massive power failure shut off electricity to a 15,000-square-mile area of South Florida Monday, shutting down air conditioning in homes and offices, stranding people in elevators and snarling traffic at busy intersections.

The power went out at midmorning and remained out for periods ranging from minutes to hours. Temperatures rose into the 80s, but by midafternoon about 99 per cent of the region had lights again.

Florida Power & Light Co., the state's largest utility, said that more than one million of its 1.8-million business and household customers were affected.

Roughly two-and-one-half-million people live in the area that includes the state's densely populated east coast, from the upper Florida Keys to Miami, Fort Lauderdale and the Palm Beaches. The outage extended west as far as Naples on the Gulf of Mexico.

National industrial output increases

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite a decline in auto production, the nation's industrial output increased eight-tenths of one per cent in April, the third month of healthy growth, the government reported Monday.

The increase in industrial output compared with gains of 1.4 per cent in March and 1 per cent in February.

The Federal Reserve Board said gains in output were widespread throughout the nation's industry, with the exception of autos.

It said auto assemblies, which had shown sharp gains in previous months, declined 4 per cent in April to an annual rate of 9.3 million units. It said the decline reflected strikes at some auto plants and an apparent reluctance by automakers to add to their existing large inventories of small cars.

Kelley criticizes compensation group

Lansing (UPI) — Atty. Gen. Frank Kelley said Monday the State Officers Compensation Commission exceeded its authority last year when it decided that the lieutenant governor should not receive extra pay when acting as governor.

The opinion was issued at the request of Lt. Gov. James Damman.

Kelley said the state's 1963 Constitution requires that all state officers receive a salary equal to the governor's when they are acting as governor. He said the constitutional amendment which created the compensation commission does not modify that requirement.

The commission is an independent body charged with setting the salaries of the governor, lieutenant governor, state lawmakers and state Supreme Court justices.

PREDICTS OIL SHORTAGES IN 1981

Panel urges fast action on fuel

WASHINGTON (AP) — An international study panel, saying world oil shortages could begin as early as 1981 if OPEC nations maintain their current production, Monday urged the free world to move with "war-time urgency" into developing other fuels and conserving energy.

The forecasts by the panel basically paralleled those by Carter Administration officials. And the goals proposed by the President are similar in most cases to what the panel predicted could be done.

The report, "Energy: Global Prospects 1985-2000," was prepared by the Workshop on Alternative Energy Strategies, an international panel of 35 representatives of governments, universities and energy-related industries. All of the participants were from major non-Communist industrialized nations.

The panel said the key to when the shortages occur is Saudi Arabia, which holds about a quarter of the known oil reserves. It said if that country maintains its production at about 9 million barrels a day — slightly more than it currently produces — and if the demand for energy rises at the fairly high rate of 4.4 per cent per year, the shortage could turn up as early as 1981.

If it doubles production, to about 20 million barrels a day, the shortage should not show up until eight years later, the panel forecast.

Reducing the growth of demand should postpone the shortages, the panel said. It said its best estimate of when demand will outstrip supply is somewhere between 1985 and 1995.

And it says the oil shortage could grow, depending on when it starts, to between 15 and 20 million barrels a day by the year 2000 — about the amount consumed daily by the United States.

The study concluded that solar energy, nuclear fusion and other advanced energy sources cannot contribute substantial amounts of energy before the year 2000 but could become important after that time.

The panel said the prospective oil shortage should occur even though coal production is more than doubled, nuclear power output is multiplied 15 to 25 times, the growth rate of oil is cut in half and the real price of oil rises by 50 per cent. "Behind all the prospective energy gaps and imbalances that appear beyond 1985 is the inescapable fact that the time when the production of oil plateaus and then declines clearly in sight," the study said. "In every case (studied) production peak or plateau occurs before the end of the century — in some cases before."

The study noted that governments and business plan no farther than five years ahead and said, "basic danger of the energy situation is that it becomes critical before it is serious."

The study focuses only on outlook for the free world, does not attempt to forecast what the forecast for Communist countries will be, study by the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency, however, forecast that the Soviet Union would become an oil importer in the early 1980s, bringing anticipated worldwide oil shortages a few years closer.

Loan plans discussed by Mondale, Portuguese

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — Vice President Walter F. Mondale met with top Portuguese leaders Monday and discussed plans for $700 million in Western loans to Portugal, one of the poorest nations in Europe.

After a 40-minute talk with Premier Mario Soares, Mondale said there were no problems between the two countries but there were some "technical concerns" that needed quick resolution.

Mondale did not mention specifics, but they were believed to involve details of the loan, which both U.S. and Portuguese officials consider essential if Lisbon's 10-month-old democracy is to survive.

The plan calls for the United States to provide $300 million and urge other Western governments to contribute the rest.

Mondale also discussed the loan with President Antonio Ramalho Eanes, who received him at Belem palace, a glittering 19th century tile and marble residence with wooden ceilings and footmen in blue suits with gold stripes.

Mondale, who flies to Spain today, was visiting the Iberian Peninsula in a show of U.S. support for the emerging democracies there.

"This nation stands as a symbol, perhaps one of the most outstanding in the world today, of leadership that is moving dramatically toward the principle of democracy and toward the closest possible observance of human rights," Mondale said after his scheduled 50-minute chat with Eanes was extended by half an hour.

Tris controversy prompts criticism

WASHINGTON (AP) — Angry members of Congress criticized the Consumer Production Safety Commission on Monday for "inordinate delays" in reaching its decision to ban Tris, the flame retardant used in children's sleepwear.

A House Commerce investigations subcommittee complained that long before the commission issued the ban last month, it knew about studies linking the chemical to cancer.

The commission's chairperson, S. John Byington, said a 1975 study linking Tris to cell mutations and birth defects was inconclusive.

When asked if the commission had acted in the consumer's best interest, Byington replied, "Absolutely."

Rep. John E. Moss, D-Calif., the panel's chairperson, said, "The chronology on Tris is one of the most graphic that I have seen of the failure of the commission to adequately utilize its existing powers."

Twenty-five prominent Michigan residents from journalists to judges to disc jockeys joined together Monday in support of legislation decriminalizing marijuana use in Michigan. The state advisory board of the National Organization for Reform of Marijuana Laws (NORML) was announced at a Detroit press conference as NORML members geared up support for the measure.

Members of the advisory board range from MSU Professor of Criminal Justice Zoltan Ferency to Detroit Free Press Columnist Bob Talbert, as well as state American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) Director Howard Simon.

Michigan NORML coordinator John Sinclair said the advisory board would serve to show people that "the people that support it (decriminalization) are not all crazy people."

Sinclair said that though some of the board's members are only "hobbyists," others will be advising the group as it pushes legislation.

Prominent residents back marijuana bill

The Detroit Sun editor is perhaps the state's most prominent marijuana user, having spent several years in prison on marijuana convictions. He now heads the statewide effort in support of the bill sponsored by Rep. Perry Bullard, D-Ann Arbor.

Bullard is among the members of the advisory board, as are Rep. George Cushingberry, D-Detroit, and three Detroit Recorder's Court judges: Susan Borman, Justin Ravitz and Myron Wahls. The decriminalization bill will lower penalties for possession of marijuana, as well as legalize the private use of small amounts. The bill is currently before the House Civil Rights Committee, which Bullard chairs. The committee will hear testimony on the bill this morning at 11 in 420 E. Capitol.

Among those testifying will be Pat Horton, a district attorney in Eugene, Ore. Oregon decriminalized marijuana in 1973 and Horton was one of the proponents of that move.

Bullard's committee is expected to wind up hearings on the bill this week. However, the measure will probably not reach the House for a vote until several changes are made.

The bill in its present form faces opposition from Rep. Bill Bryant, R-Grosse Pointe Farms, who said he plans to offer an amendment deleting the legalization of marijuana use in private homes.

Support for the bill has been garnered by NORML, which has several chapters on college and university campuses, including MSU, across the state.

Sinclair said he was surprised and pleased at what he termed "enthusiastic" support for the measure and added he felt the bill's chances were good.

EARDLEY 'HIGHLY IMPRESSED' WITH CITY Wyoming, E. L. switch mayors

By GEORGIA HANSEW
State News Staff Writer

East Lansing Mayor George Eardley said he was "highly impressed" with the city of Wyoming, Mich., who was in town Monday for the Michigan State University (MSU) Exchange Day.

Eardley was referring to the two General Motors plants in the Grand Rapids suburb of Wyoming, where 67 per cent of the taxes are paid by the city's business and industry.

"We can't send you back with a little money," Sharp said. "But we'd be glad to send you some of its..."

Eardley, who was laughing from about 25 other officials, gathered for a steak luncheon at the Wyoming Club, made it unnecessary for him to finish her sentence.

Eardley said East Lansing Mayor George Eardley got a little model car, as he had jobs with Eardley for the day and the night of Wyoming.

After the luncheon, Eardley said he was impressed with what he's seen so far in Wyoming, which included several city blocks and the Whitehills subdivision. Slated for later in the afternoon was a tour of some of East Lansing's lower income neighborhoods, the campus and a concluding reception at Eardley's home.

Eardley said in his talk with city officials that East Lansing accidentally referred to the city of Wyoming as "Lansing," he was promptly corrected and informed that Lansing is a suburb of East Lansing.

Eardley said the theme of big city-suburb relations between East Lansing and Wyoming were "steadily improving" in the last 10 years, since a major in cooperation caused Wyoming to build its own 54-inch water pipeline to Michigan even though Grand Rapids had one that could have been used.

Eardley said he was glad to see Grand Rapids area mayors and city

Mayor Thomas Eardley

State News Scott Bellinger

managers now meet at least once a month, he said, and cooperate in purchasing and in police and fire services to reduce costs.

Wyoming has a population of 56,000, compared to East Lansing's 47,000.

As a suburb of the second largest city in the state, Wyoming has "an identity problem," Eardley said (though, at 25 square miles, it is the eighth largest Michigan city in area).

"You always have a problem of identity in a situation like this," he said. "East Lansing has overcome this because the college brings it an identity of its own."

Lacking a university, Wyoming has formed a group called Wyoming Promotions, Inc., whose major annual project is a summer rodeo. The rodeo drew over 300 contestants last year and stirred up a controversy among local residents when an outdoor rock concert featuring Edgar and Johnny Winter created a little too much excitement in the quiet community.

Some problems Eardley said he noticed in East Lansing that his city shares were a need for street and road repair, traffic problems on the main street (28th Street in Wyoming) and some housing which is not up to code standards.

"I noticed riding around this morning that East Lansing has some housing that is in need of repair," Eardley said.

Eardley, who is up for reelection this fall, is in his ninth year as mayor of Wyoming and served seven years before that as a city councilmember. He spent two years as a Michigan Department of Corrections commissioner and is a former Michigan Municipal League president.

Domestic issues deemed central in Israel election

By MARICE RICHTER
State News Staff Writer

Establishing a lasting peace and solving domestic problems are the two primary issues affecting the outcome of today's election in Israel, Director-general of Israel's Ministry of Education and Culture Elad Peled said.

In a press conference Monday, Peled outlined the problems facing Israel and the pressures the government must work within.

"Our degree of freedom in international affairs is small. We are under pressure to negotiate for peace from the Arab countries and from the U.S.," he said.

"Domestically, we have more freedom to make decisions — like whether to have a socialist system or a free enterprise system — but we have to solve the problem of equalizing the society and filling in the social gaps," he said.

Peled also said the accountability of government officials to the public is another major issue which will sway the outcome of the election's votes, especially in light of the recent scandal involving the foreign bank account of ex-Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin.

Peled speculated the final result of the election will parallel a recent New York Times poll. The poll indicated a fairly even split between the Labour party and the Likud (right-wing) party with a marginal advantage for the former.

He also said he expected the newly formed Dosh party — a democratic party promoting change — to occupy some of the seats in Israel's parliament.

"If Dosh gets even 10 seats out of the 120, it is a very substantial achievement, considering the party is only a few months old," he said. "The new party is especially attractive to Israel's young people. It sides with the Labour party on the matter of peace, but is more right-winged in its approach to domestic problems."

The Labour party has been the major controlling party in Israel for the past 29 years. The coalition government allows for representation based on vote percentages. There are 23 factions competing for seats in the Parliament.

Before occupying his current position, Peled was a division commander during the Six-Day War and retired from the military as a major-general in 1968.

In regards to the issue of surrendering land for peace, Peled said he follows moderate lines — to give back land in order to create a lasting peace.

"The real problem is guarantees to assure peace. I think the proposal of President Jimmy Carter to bring about peace gradually over a number of years is a good one."

he said.

Peled also commented on the issue of the Palestinian refugees: "No one in Israel denies the right of a people to have a nationality. But the question here is not the right to exist, but rather of how to establish an international, balanced peace within the existing framework."

He said if a Palestinian state is created on the Gaza Strip, it needs to be aligned with a larger body of land containing more resources, such as Jordan. However, he explained, the Jordanian government is unacceptable to the Palestinians, which creates political problems.

Peled visited MSU Monday to present a seminar on education in Israel. He is currently on leave of absence from his government post to pursue a doctor of philosophy degree in politics and education at the Teachers College of Columbia University.

City Council will decide new budget

Tenants Resource Center, the Drug Education Center and other area social service agencies will learn tonight whether their requested funding increases will be included in the 1977-78 East Lansing city budget, scheduled for approval at the City Council meeting at 7:30 in city hall council chambers.

The council will also hold two public hearings: one on a proposed housing rehabilitation program to spend $160,000 of federal Community Development funds on nonrental housing; and another to consider a new Community Unit Plan to replace the existing zoning code plan.

The current plan, termed "poorly written" and "overly restrictive" by City Planner Scott Radway, specifies standards for the development of new subdivisions and several single-family zones.

Discussion of alternative fire station sites will continue, and council may select a site tonight.

A plan for a work-study agreement between MSU and East Lansing to provide summer jobs with the city for MSU students will be introduced. MSU has agreed to pay 80 per cent of the students' compensation, with East Lansing contributing the remaining 20 per cent.

If the plan is approved by council, it will go before the MSU Board of Trustees for the final go-ahead. The city will then begin hiring students for the 40-hour-a-week jobs.

Academic environment concern of group

Classroom facilities, safety major topics

Note: On May 24 the Student Council will hold elections for students to serve on the six Academic Council standing committees. This is the third of a series of meetings to explain the functions and responsibilities of each committee.

Concerned about below-standard safety conditions in dilapidated University buildings, the Student Council is worried about the quality of classrooms. Tired of inaccurate University statistics messing up your schedule?

Board slated to discuss election bill

MSU Student Board will discuss a proposal to appoint students to serve on the three judicial committees when it meets in the Student Services Bldg. at 7:30 p.m. Monday.

The Student Board will also discuss a bill to amend the University's election procedures last week to provide a means to elect a communications commissioner. The bill provides that should an election be held before the All-University Student Council, a special election will be held in the office of the vice president for student affairs.

Environment (UCAE) next year may act to improve these and other academic problem areas. Two seats are open on this committee to students at the all-University level.

The responsibility of the UCAE is dealing with "anything that helps or hinders the academic process," Committee Chairperson Leo G. Erickson said.

Thanks to a year-long effort made to define more exactly the committee's role and purpose, students next year may be checking into potentially hazardous laboratory conditions, helping to improve classroom facilities (such as the installment of more left-handed desks) and handling various faculty and student complaints.

The committee has "spent an awful lot of time" with the University Committee on Academic Governance to find out exactly what areas the committee is authorized to act upon, he said.

The outcome of the meetings is a compromise for a new operating procedure. Basically, the compromise calls for the committee to remain acting as a whole but also extending its interests to three areas within the University environment.

These include administrative buildings, sanitation and safety. If the compromise is accepted, the committee will have a voice in the operations of each area.

"We're going to actually participate," Erickson said. He added that committee representatives will sit in on administrative meetings and insure that decisions on sanitation, buildings and safety will have the "net effect of furthering the academic process."

Erickson also said the committee would act as a communications liaison between the administration, faculty and students.

"We're encouraging faculty and students to put in some input of their own," he said. Mark Widrechner, Student Council committee representative, said the new procedure should be approved by the administration by the end of this year.

Widrechner will give a presentation on UCAE at today's Student Council meeting. Student representatives from the other five standing committees will also speak. The meeting is set for 3 p.m. in the Con Con Room of the International Center. Presentations are tentatively set for 4 p.m.

Students interested in serving on the academic environment committee should pick up applications in 10 Linton Hall. They will be available until 5 p.m. Friday.

MSU builds a wall

The not-so-imaginary line separating the two worlds of the city of East Lansing and MSU has been reinforced by University stubbornness.

As the city contemplates its budget, the disgusting reality of MSU's responsibility shuffle becomes apparent. City councilmembers were altogether justified in blasting MSU for its refusal to help finance a Capital Area Transportation Authority (CATA) bus extension into campus.

The city is seriously thinking about boosting CATA's appropriation by 45 per cent. Part of that increase — $32,270 worth — would fund a bus plan to swing faculty, students and staff onto the campus from the city for 10 cents a ride. This would in no way interfere with the present MSU bus set-up. The city asked MSU to pay $9,139 toward the project.

The University's response was a typically pompous "no." Reasons for MSU's noninvolvement, as put forth by MSU Asst. Vice President Theodore B. Simon, ranged from the evasive to the picky. Simon said CATA should simply raise its fare. MSU can't be bothered by such things, he implied. In addition, he added that money from students on campus should not be used for services to off-campus students.

Simon and the MSU brass should be reminded that on-campus students are a minority of the MSU community, comprising roughly 35 per cent of the student population. Furthermore, a cost breakdown on a per-student basis would put MSU's contributions at 21 cents per student over a three-term period.

It is a shame that, for this pittance, MSU is again playing the bully across the street. East Lansing should not be snubbed again.

Unfortunately, MSU's attitude pervades most of the interaction between the city and the University. For instance, MSU refused to offer financial support to erect new street lights along Grand River Avenue at an initial cost of $10,600. East Lansing would have matched that with federal funds. MSU responded with silence.

The city has waited over a year now for a University appointee to a Housing Advisory Committee. Again, official silence.

The University also took $156,000 from the city this year in one fell swoop by instituting a Campus Parking Violation Bureau, leaving the municipality with a gaping budget hole. The bureau is a good thing, but its cost reinforces the fact that MSU should reciprocate by offering its own funds for other programs.

With its snobbish refusal to give money for these programs, MSU assures that Grand River Avenue will become more than a busy street. It will become a wall.

Slicing the budget pie

Councilmember Mary Sharp's criticism of the Tenants Resource Center's (TRC) budget request at a recent East Lansing City Council meeting was unfounded and should be ignored, but her criticism of the Listening Ear crisis intervention center budget request had some merit.

TRC — an organization geared to providing information concerning tenants rights and the limitations of landlord authority — has requested $6,000 to maintain its operation, but will probably receive one-third of this.

Listening Ear has requested $16,000 — $6,000 of which would be used for a "part-time person to search for applicable state and federal grants." This request is excessive.

Sharp's criticism of Listening Ear appears justified, but her contention that social service organizations should find other sources of revenue is ignorant.

The City Council should reassess its stand and allocate TRC a larger portion than that proposed. We also urge that Listening Ear be provided the necessary funds to continue operation, but not $6,000 to establish a bureaucratic and possibly worthless position.

Ford-South Africa

Once again I am ashamed of my fellow students here at MSU. Once again I am astounded by the apathy portrayed in our community of over 40,000. Is there no limit to our carefree "who gives a damn" attitudes?

I am referring to the recent approval by MSU of Ford Motor Co. investments in South Africa. Quite honestly, I am not surprised that the administration would openly display a double standard with regard to the rights and responsibilities of students here in the United States vs. those in South Africa. But I am appalled that the students, faculty, and staff would further condone these actions by remaining silent!

Acceptable reason. Commitment to a policy which guarantees support of management is unacceptable. I reject out of hand any reasons offered by the administration which support racism. What I will accept is a public apology for the embarrassment caused to our institution and a speedy resolution condemning the apartheid policies of South Africa.

I believe that I reflect the feelings of the majority of people at MSU and I look forward to a strong outcry against this and many other areas where the University is sacrificing basic moral convictions in the quest for dollars and political gain.

I publicly applaud the students of Stanford University, Hampshire College and the University of Massachusetts for having the courage and awareness to actively defend human dignity. Further, I challenge the MSU community to prove me wrong and speak out forcefully against the University's support of racism abroad. We deserve an explanation by the board of trustees to clarify the difference between human rights for South African blacks and human rights for American blacks.

Protection of investments is an unac-

Canada ripped

I'm writing in response to a number of articles which have been printed in the State News over the past few months. These articles at first presented, and now continue to restate an attitude of the Canadian government towards the environment and environmental issues. This attitude is one of inconsistency and blatant hypocrisy.

The latest in this series of articles told of the Canadian government's call for a moratorium on pipeline construction in an area of Canada's northern wilderness. The basis for this moratorium, as given by the Canadian government, is the preservation and protection of the environment.

The hypocrisy surfaces when one reads the entire series of articles. The real reason for the moratorium, and the Canadian government's entire objection to the pipeline, seems to be based upon economics and greed. The Canadian government wants to use the moratorium to give them more power to bargain where the pipeline will go and how much they'll get for the land.

The inconsistency becomes evident when one realizes that the Canadian government has, with increasing frequency, ignored environmental protection in favor of economic betterment. A case in point is the brutal

You can't go home

By PHIL FRANK

Does a fair wind blow over MSU these days? I certainly hope that is the case, as it's a pleasant breeze that's blowing today here at our houseboat community in Sausalito, Calif.

I was looking at my stack of unanswered mail and pigeon-holed projects and realized that I had some unfinished business at hand. I had spoken with a State News reporter awhile back about possibly doing some MSU cartoons to augment the general cartoons that MSU gets along with the 200 or so other college papers now running "Frankly Speaking." Back when I went into syndication eight years ago, I was doing 32 cartoons a month, while most of the papers were only using a dozen a month because most college papers don't publish as often as the State News. Five years ago I cut back to 24 a month, then 16 and now only eight. This has caused a problem with the few dailies that run the panel.

For those of you who don't know, I got my start in cartooning as an undergraduate at MSU in the early '60s doing a daily panel cartoon for the State News. That experience did a lot to shape my ideas towards humor and communications and their effect on society and politics. I've gone on since those days to other aspects of communications, including book illustration, commercial work and now my comic strip "Travels With Farley," which is running in a number of dailies.

murder of hundreds of thousands of baby harp seals each year in northern Canada, a practice that is actively financed and defended by the Canadian government.

It seems that the only green the Canadian government wants is the type that can be found in bank vaults, and not on an Arctic tundra or in a mountainside forest.

I am by no means in favor of the proposed pipeline, but I do not like the use of a popular issue such as concern for the environment to hide a growing government's lust for money and power. What really upsets me is that the Canadian government is waving a "I am a defender of the environment!" banner in one hand and is beating a baby seal to death with the other.

Active ASMSU

Amidst the recent campaigning for ASMSU, many political opinions arose. All the candidates spoke out on issues, relaying similar ideas and enthusiastic promises. Students, reporters and faculty alike said these are nothing but the same glorified generalizations again, just high-falutin' promises they will never do anything about.

This ASMSU Student Board is not just sitting around waiting for things to happen. The ASMSU Committee on Public Safety has already organized an open Public Hearing on Rape and Assault to be held Thursday at 7 p.m. in 328 Student Services Bldg. A select panel of representatives from the East Lansing Police Department, the Department of Public Safety, Olin Health Center, crisis centers, Kitty Genovese, ASMSU Women's Council, an attorney and the Women's Advisory Committee will be presenting recommendations and ideas. The session will encourage input of ideas and concerns and questioning of the select panel.

Everyone is encouraged to attend. During the campaign we received emotional and serious responses from MSU students on this important issue. You have shown us your support by electing us, now let us show you our support by meeting the needs of you, the students we represent.

Rep slurs Martin Luther King, blacks

WASHINGTON — Startled witnesses recently overheard Rep. John Ashbrook, R-Ohio, in a reference to the late Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., object to spending the taxpayers' money "investigating the murder of some nigger."

Similar outbreaks of foot-in-mouth disease got Earl Butz fired as secretary of agriculture and almost ended Gen. George Brown's career as Joint Chief of Staff. Both made insensitive remarks that offended minorities.

Ashbrook's alleged indiscretion occurred during the recent crossfire between ex-House Assassinations Chairman Henry Gonzales, D-N.M., and his chief counsel, Richard Sprague. A few congressmen got together over chicken dinner at Washington's Oakland Inn to hear Sprague's side of the controversy.

Sprague argued the need for an investigation of the John F. Kennedy and Martin Luther King assassinations. The reference to the venerated black leader, according to witnesses, brought a snort from Ashbrook. Time and money "should not be wasted," he grumped, "investigating the murder of some nigger."

Ashbrook denied that he had ever said anything of the sort. He would never use language like that, he told us, "even in joking." Yet others who attended the dinner recalled the remark clearly.

"Ashbrook denied that he had ever said anything of the sort. He would never use language like that, he told us, 'even in joking.'" — United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

It is against the unwritten rules of the House for one member to disparage another in public. Most of the witnesses, therefore, didn't want to be identified. Only Sprague was willing to be named. When we questioned him, he acknowledged that he had heard Ashbrook's derogatory remark about the slain civil rights leader.

We learned that Sprague had also kept notes of the dinner meeting, so we pressed him to consult his notes. His notes verified that Ashbrook had made the remark. Others confirmed that they had also heard the same thing.

Others said they had not heard the controversial crack but couldn't deny that Ashbrook had made it. They explained that sometimes several conversations were going on at the same time at the dinner table.

Rep. John Rousselot, R-Calif., who attended the dinner, told us that he had not heard the remark and that it would have been uncharacteristic of Ashbrook to make it.

Actually, the Ohio congressman has a reputation for making candid remarks and taking defiant stands. On racial issues, Ashbrook has voted consistently against the civil rights measures that black leaders have supported.

Return To Forever cog crafts second solo effort

By JOHN CASEY
State News Reviewer
AL DI MEOLA: Elegant Gypsy (PC 34461)

Conspicuously absent from the newest edition of Chick Corea's ever-changing Return Forever (RTF) is former guitarist Al DiMeola. After the release of "The Romantic Warrior" in the spring of last year, RTF—consisting of Corea, Lenny White, Stanley Clarke, Lenny White and DiMeola—disbanded after two years and three albums.

The transitions between "Have I Known You Before" and "No Mystery" and "The Romantic Warrior" effort were abrupt changes in music texture. To go from a breezy jazz approach to a heavy metal-edged style and then to a medieval sound takes confidence and understanding of the musical pulse. It proved that artistic and commercial did coexist happily. Al DiMeola proved to be an essential cog in the RTF mechanics until the mysterious breakup.

At the precocious age of 21, Al DiMeola was far from being a washed-up musician. He began playing the guitar in his Jersey City home at the age of 8; three years later he was the leader of his own band. He journeyed across the Hudson River to inhabit the jazz clubs in Manhattan, hooked up with Larry Coryell's group and began to jam with it. He also ran into Corea, but circumstances had it that DiMeola at the age of 16 enrolled in the Berklee School of Music in Boston. After two years there, the young guitarist left his studies in Instrumental Performance to join the Barry Miles Quintet. Six months later DiMeola succeeded Billy Connors as the RTF guitarist. It is during this time span that DiMeola's guitar playing garnered much praise from leading jazz critics and laid the foundation for future solo endeavors.

Sandwiched between the release of "The Romantic Warrior" and the announcement of the group's parting, DiMeola launched his solo career with "Land Of The Midnight Sun." With the help of ex-RTF percussionist Mingo Lewis (currently with The Tubes), sessions drummer extraordinaire Steve Gadd (now with Stuff), Barry Miles, Alphonse Mouzon, Jaco Pastorius, Corea and Clarke, the young DiMeola exhibited a passionate musical approach. His guitar licks were distinctive on electric flashes of brilliance ("The Wizard") as well as quiet acoustic passages (Bach's "Sarabande From Violin Sonata in B Minor").

The second solo album from DiMeola, "Elegant Gypsy," is as marvelous as its predecessor. This time around the influence on DiMeola by Corea is strikingly evident: the similarity between Corea's latest solo offering, "My Spanish Heart," and this effort, both sharing a Spanish flamenco flavor, is obvious.

Songs like "Flight Over Rio" and "Race With Devil on Spanish Highway" zoom along with an air of elegance as DiMeola's exciting guitar leads the way.

10cc: getting the 'Bends'

By MARCP. DIMERCURIO
State News Reviewer

(10cc: Deceptive Bends — MERCURY SRM1-3702)

Though the bulk of its popularity has come from overseas, 10cc is not to be dismissed as a credible talent in the States. It is a recognized band with a respectable, though often schmaltzy, style. Its acceptance in the United States has been slow with previous releases such as its debut album, "10cc," "Sheet Music," "The Original Soundtrack" and "How Dare You," providing band members with ever-increasing recognition.

Another way to point out this slow start is the fact that though their first single "Donna," released in '73, earned them a top five spot on British charts, it was not until the single "I'm Not In Love" earned them a place on any U.S. charts in '75.

Their fifth and current album, "Deceptive Bends," is a long-awaited release that was slowed in part by the loss of two members of the band to solo careers. While this split definitely stunted the band's output for a period, the nucleus of the group remained intact. Graham Gouldman and Eric Stewart, who have coauthored hits like "Wall Street Shuffle" and "I'm Not In Love," decided to hang in there and release "Deceptive Bends," a product of mostly their effort, anyway.

Unfortunately, some of the best work by 10cc consists of songs you will never hear on the airwaves, as is usually the case, and this is no doubt a contributing factor in its slow start here. "Modern Man Blues," "People In Love" and "Good Morning Judge" are good songs, with the latter of the three 10cc's attempt at punchy rock. Though the punch is weak, the humor helps bring the song off with a snappy cuteness that is likable.

One of the more impressive tracks on "Deceptive Bends" is "Feel the Benefit," a three-part finale to the whole record. It starts with "Reminiscence and Speculate," an orchestrated ballad combining smooth music and good vocals by Stewart. It then slides into "A Latin Break," which is just what the title implies—a break with some upbeat percussion and colorful guitar. The end is a return to the ballad, with some nice, bluesy guitar provided by Stewart. It is an exciting solo, but far from one of "the finest ever recorded" as it is billed.

10cc has added Paul Burgess as permanent drummer of the group. He has been second drummer to Kevin Goodley, one of the members who left the group. The addition of several other musicians "for touring only" seems to indicate that 10cc is preparing to take it to the people. If 10cc works on its more meaningful and artistic material and less on prepubescent love songs, it may attain the creative force it had originally strived for, quite possibly to the surprise and enjoyment of us all.

Prison problems compounded

trouble, officials said.

Prison personnel at first said the crowded conditions were not to blame for the incident. But State Corrections Director Perry Johnson later said frustration from the overcrowding helped spark the disturbance.

There's a lot of discontent about men having to sleep on bulkheads," Johnson said.

"When we had the outage, they were not secured in a cell and were free to involve themselves in a disturbance. But we're stuck with the bulkhead situation, and it's going to get worse before it gets better.

"I don't view this as that major a situation. It was just one of those disruptions you can expect from time to time when you have overcrowded facilities. I don't think it's a harbinger of things to come," he said.

Johnson and Anderson also said the trouble was not proof that prison officials are facing a rough summer, although the warden said "the potential increases with greater inmate frustration."

Gov. William G. Milliken, who is out of the country this week, has voiced concern about prison overcrowding and has proposed creation of four new state prisons.

High court upholds point system

WASHINGTON (AP) — Motorists who run afoul of the law too often may have their drivers' licenses taken away without a chance to defend themselves first, the Supreme Court ruled Monday.

The justices voted unanimously to uphold a point system for traffic violations in Illinois calling for automatic license suspension or revocation after a certain number of violation points.

Many states have similar systems.

The court's decision overturned a ruling by a three-judge federal court in Illinois in the case of truck driver Dennis Love. He challenged the law after his license was revoked in 1975 following his third speeding conviction in seven months.

On an active day following a two-week recess, the court also:

- Let stand a lower court's ruling that a Louisville, Ky., manufacturing firm violated federal bans against sex discrimination by firing a pregnant, unmarried employee.

- Agreed to consider claims by the Santa Clara Pueblo Indian tribe that its laws on tribal membership are immune to discrimination suits.
- Cleared the way for a new trial for former Gulf Oil lobbyist Claude Wild on charges he made illegal corporate contributions to the 1972 campaign of Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga.
- Turned down a government request that it decide what discretion federal agencies have in releasing to the public under the Freedom of Information Act certain data received from private firms.

- Sent back to federal trial court the appeal of Rep. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., who wanted to force Congress to vote on its pay raises.

Pressler's suit was filed last year in an attempt to get Congress to vote on a $12,900-a-year raise it received last February.

'State of war' announced

He also rejected the possible participation of Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith's government in any conference writing a new Rhodesian constitution, and he accused unnamed Western powers of allowing their citizens to fight as mercenaries for the Smith regime and of supplying arms to South Africa in "active support" of white-supremacist regimes in southern Africa.

Owen, backed by the United States, has been trying to gather support from the nationalists, Smith and other black and white leaders in the region for a constitutional convention aimed at ending the Rhodesian conflict by transferring government control from the 272,000 whites to Rhodesia's 6.5 million blacks.

Kaunda, who is regarded as a moderate among black African leaders, said he had received a letter from Owen in which the British foreign secretary said

Smith had told him the Rhodesians believed that a guerrilla offensive was about to be launched from Zambia that they might have an alternative "but to attack guerrilla bases in Zambia."

Black insurgents based their attacks since early year. In the latest, guerrillas fired mortars and machine guns at a police post in northern Rhodesia over the week wounding a sergeant and black civilians.

Besides Zambia and Mozambique, three other southern "frontline" black states — Angola, Botswana and Tanzania — have been providing shelter or other aid for Rhodesian guerrillas.

Kaunda said he has a "friendly nations" for arms called on the United States, Britain to help prevent a desian attack by stopping companies from supplying desia.

MIKE LITAKER
Give Nevin full-time job

Sports writers are supposed to be an unbiased lot, calling the shots in print the way they took place out on the playing field. But seeing how it's close to graduation and my days in East Lansing are numbered, I figure this is as good a time as any to be biased as hell on behalf of a friend of mine.

What prompted this was the annual MSU-Alumni lacrosse game at Old College Field Sunday. It's always a good feeling to see old friends and Sunday was no exception when some of the guys who I used to play lacrosse with came back to play. There was Ben Saylor on leave from the Marines; Jim Street, who had his career ended prematurely by a knee injury; and of course Nevin Kanner.

Nevin Kanner isn't exactly a household name in Spartan athletic circles. But just in case it may have slipped your memories, he's the acting head lacrosse coach at MSU.

Did you all get that? ACTING. That's a big word around the athletic office. Just ask Jim Bibbs. He has been acting head track coach for two years now. Maybe someday they will let him quit acting so that he can get down to the serious business of coaching.

The word acting is particularly disturbing to me because it allows the athletic department to play footsies with a man's career by stringing him along.

You see, Nevin has been a good friend going back to when we played lacrosse together and he is probably one of the most dedicated people in the coaching ranks at MSU. His job is considered a part time position by the University.

That's a laugher. He spends close to 20 hours a week on the practice field alone, add to that his administrative duties of scheduling, making travel arrangements and the time he puts in traveling around to area schools and residence halls promoting his sport.

His part time job has already cost him four full-time ones in the Lansing area, because his employers refused to schedule his work around his so-called part-time work at MSU.

He's now on his fifth job as a personnel counselor for an employment agency. But he was only able to hold this one by scheduling lacrosse practice winter term between 6 and 8 a.m. every weekday.

But none of this was allowed to take place until the athletic department said he could act as coach, five weeks before the start of the season this spring. And that wasn't until his assistant, Boku Hendrickson, who was originally named to the job, was asked to resign his position because of personal difficulties.

Yet through all the acting, Nevin took the team to a respectable 6-8 record.

This is something that didn't happen overnight either. When I heard that Nevin was in line for the coaching job I had been a little skeptical. I just couldn't figure out how he could command respect from varsity athletes when he had been one of the boys himself only a year ago.

On the road trips Nevin could spot a party across campus and sniff out the women's dorm even without the aid of a full moon. So how did Good Times Nevin become Good Coach Nevin?

First of all, he spent most of last summer attending coaching clinics and lacrosse schools on the East Coast as a dedicated student of the game. But most of all, he wanted to help change the image of lacrosse at MSU from its former losing attitude to a hopeful future. And he's done it.

Now it's your turn, Dr. Kearney. Cut out the acting and deal in good faith. Offer Nevin a full time contract. He's earned it.

MSU stickmen optimistic

By JOE CENTERS

The MSU lacrosse team ended its season Saturday by losing to Ohio State, 13-3, but first-year acting coach Nevin Kanner said this year's team is vastly improved over the lacrosse teams of previous seasons.

Kearney, Rogers help raise money

Patrons of Dooley's and other MSU college bars get a chance to sip a few drinks with such MSU athletic officials as athletic director Joe Kearney, head football coach Darryl Rogers and former MSU all-American quarterback Earl Morrall Thursday night.

Kearney, Rogers and Morrall will be at Dooley's then as a fund-raising kick-off for Saturday's Varsity-Alumni game. There will be a special auction at the bar Thursday of two autographed footballs, two MSU season football tickets, two tickets to the U-M game and four MSU football players' jerseys.

All proceeds raised will go to MSU's Ralph Young Fund, which is a vital money-producing part of the MSU athletic program.

"Our team finally gained respect this year," Kanner said, "were 6-8 this year but we were close in a lot of our losses." Year's team mark tied the MSU record for most wins in a season.

The Ohio State game was a rough one in which the Spartans three players to injuries. Ken Davis was forced to leave the when he hurt his knee, Kevin Willitts was cut badly on his face Stan Ludwig sprained his wrist.

Mike Waring led the Spartans with two goals and Davis the final tally.

Sunday many of the one-time MSU lacrosse players made way back to East Lansing for the annual alumni game. The squad came out on top, 11-9.

Joe Polotowitz, who is a transfer student and was ineligible spring, scored five goals for the varsity and three of those in a 45-second span in the first quarter. Polotowitz is planning to play for the Spartans next year, which could be an asset to the team. "I'm sure we will be better next year," Kanner said. "Everyone was in shape this year and everyone played together as a team wasn't like that last year," Kanner said.

Kevin Willitts finished the season as the scoring leader for Willitts ended up with 38 and possibly 39 points, depending on official statistics for OSU in the game Saturday. It is believed that Willitts got an assist on the play that he was hurt on, but official word on credit for the assist will come from OSU later in the week.

If Willitts does get the assist, it would give him the record for total points with 39. Tim Flanagan and Waring were second in team scoring with 17 points each.

IM All-Nighter sign-up available

The intramural office is preparing for Friday's second IM All-Nighter by having teams sign up for events early in the week to prevent a rush at the end of the week.

Teams can sign up any time in 201 Men's IM Bldg. for volleyball, badminton, indoor soccer, paddleball, racquetball, three-on-three basketball, squash, canoe races, softball, euchre, pinocle, backgammon and checkers.

The IM All-Nighter begins at 2 p.m. Friday and lasts until 2 a.m. Saturday. The event is open to all students, faculty and staff members at MSU for a $1 admission fee. The money raised will be used to support the IM sports operation.

Debat
By MIKE MACKSOOD
State News Staff Writer
debate over the value of lacrosse has been raging for so long that it has become a household word.
The debate may not be sold as a drama in the States or Canada because of the laws requiring that the sport be played before they can...
There has been no significant evidence to convince Federal Administration scientists that lacrosse is treating cancer.
The debate rages on, and through Florida and Indiana state laws legalizing the sport when prescribed by physicians introduced last Friday in Michigan. Michigan the fourth state to legalize the drug.
The chemical amygdalin is naturally in peach pits, apricots and in other plant material.
A California physician, Ernest Krebs, was the person who first used amygdalin as a cancer treatment.
Krebs' son, Ernest Krebs, Jr., developed a pure form of amygdalin which was safe for injection.
