Rightists victorious in Israeli elections

By MARCUS ELIASON
 TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Menahem Begin's victorious right-wing Likud bloc extended a peace offering to the defeated Labor party Wednesday in an effort to present a unified nation to the Arab world.

There was no immediate word on whether Labor would accept the offer to form a coalition government, which came as Arabs angrily denounced the Likud election victory Tuesday as a threat to Middle East peace.

Arab state-controlled radios branded Begin a "notorious terrorist" with whom negotiations would be impossible. They said the election would spell disaster for President Jimmy Carter's peace efforts in the Middle East.

Palestinian guerillas threatened to "escalate violence" in Israel, the Israeli-occupied Gaza Strip and the West Bank, over which the Likud wants to retain Israeli sovereignty.

Sources in Syria said President Hafez Assad would use the Likud victory to persuade Saudi officials to finance additional Arab armament programs.

The conservative victory also left deep political divisions in Israel. Yosef Sarid, a top Labor official, said he doubted there could be any coalition with the Likud.

"Such a wagon would quickly sink in the mud, with so many people pulling at the reins," he said. But other Laborites, including party chief Shimon Peres, were noncommittal on Begin's invitation, which carried a quote from Abraham Lincoln about "binding up the nation's wounds."

Election projections from 1,900 of the 3,870 polling places showed the Likud party with 41 seats in the 120-seat parliament compared with 33 for Labor. It was the first defeat for Labor, which has ruled since Israel became a nation 29 years ago.

If Labor decides not to join a coalition, Likud could join with the National Religious party, which was fourth with 12 seats, and other rightist and religious splinters to forge a razor-thin majority.

The key group in the coalition-building process appeared to be Prof. Yigael Yadin's Democratic Movement for Change, which won at least 14 seats, an impressive score for a party founded just six months ago.

Yadin, whose group could provide badly needed coalition backbone for Likud, said he would join any party espousing his faction's principles. But one of the principles is opposition to any move to annex the West Bank.

In his victory speech, the 63-year-old Begin said he intended to invite Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, King Hussein of Jordan and Assad to meet him either in their capitals or on neutral ground for negotiations "to sign peace treaties."

In Geneva, U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance said he was adopting a wait-and-see attitude toward the Likud victory.

Vance, who was in Geneva for arms limitation talks with the Soviet Union, said peace prospects would depend on "what kind of a coalition is put together."

In Moscow, the Soviet press expressed concern at Likud's right-wing reputation.

NEW MEASURE MORE COSTLY THAN ORIGINAL Senate panel revises PBB bill

By MICKI MAYNARD
 State News Staff Writer

In a surprise move, a Senate committee today put aside a much-debated bill dealing with PBB contamination and instead introduced a new measure that would cost three times the amount originally proposed.

John Hertel, D-Harper Woods, chairman of the Senate Agriculture and Forestry Committee, was joined by committee member James DeSana, R-Ann Arbor, in introducing the revision.

The committee has heard testimony for two months on a bill sponsored by Francis Spaniola, D-Corunna, which would lower PBB contamination levels to the present .3 parts per million to .02 ppm.

Hertel predicted his version could cost around $100 million, compared to the $27 million predicted for the original version.

Hertel said the committee's substitute would have major parts. The first would require herds to be tested if even one animal in that herd gave milk with PBB content over .02 ppm. The contaminated animals would then be destroyed.

The bill only required the testing of individual animals suspected to be contaminated and not entire herds.

The second part of the revision proposed by the committee is a stipulation requiring contaminated cattle to be tested in the farm environment rather than being transported to a laboratory.

Some scientists have contended that the controlled laboratory situation was not an accurate one in which to measure true PBB levels.

The third major provision in Hertel's version provides that cattle presently living on farms that were once contaminated but had been cleaned of PBB be tested for the possibility of recontamination.

Other parts of the bill include a section dealing with cattle culled (raised) for slaughter. If these animals are found to be contaminated, they will be destroyed and the farmer reimbursed for the cost of the cow.

The new version of the bill also differs from Spaniola's version in that its lifespan is increased to four years. The old version was only effective for 18 months.

The .02 ppm contamination level proposed by Spaniola has been a major point of contention throughout hearings on the bill. Previous testimony conflicted on the ability of scientists to accurately measure amounts below .05 ppm.

Some committee members in the past expressed a desire to see the level at .05 ppm, but Hertel and DeSana left the level at .02 ppm.

Hertel maintained that the new version of the bill would save the state money because of the provision regarding culled cattle. The market value of these animals is usually less than that of dairy cattle.

The committee talked briefly about the problem of cross-placental contamination. Cross-placental contamination occurs when PBB poisoning is transferred to a calf at birth.

Scientists have said cross-placental contamination is difficult to detect because an animal under the stress of a test may excrete a different amount of PBB than it would under normal conditions.

Hertel said he and the committee plan to work on the bill during the next week and hope to vote it out of committee Wednesday.

Spaniola, as well as aides who worked on the original legislation, were not surprised by the new version, saying they had heard about it "through the grapevine."

Laetrile ineffective in cancer animals, test says

By JOE PIZZO
 State News Staff Writer

Released results of the latest test of the controversial cancer treatment Laetrile found the drug totally ineffective in affecting cancer growth in mice.

The study, conducted last year at the Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Research in New York, compared approximately 80 specially bred "double-blind" research design, eliminating experimenter bias.

Researchers at the institute were unable to determine which mice were treated with Laetrile. The research technique is known as a "double-blind" design.

Laetrile is used to test the efficacy of anticancer agents because extremely large proportions of the mice die of breast cancer which spreads to the lungs, forms tumors and eventually kills the animal.

Laetrile-treated group of mice received daily doses of 2,000 milligrams per pound of body weight by injection, a dose much higher than that used on a cancer patient.

The study was conducted by Dr. Ralph Moss, science writer for the Public Affairs Division of the Sloan-Kettering Institute. The other group of mice received a saline solution in the same amount as the Laetrile group.

A consensus among scientists (at Sloan-Kettering) is that Laetrile is of no value in treating cancer," Moss said.

Meanwhile, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) started machinery in motion to comply with a class action order issued in April by Federal Court Judge Luther Bohanon. He prevented the FDA and U.S. Customs from stopping importation and interstate transport of Laetrile to any terminally ill cancer patient with an affidavit signed by two doctors attesting to the terminal nature of the patient's illness.

Last week Bohanon issued a second order specifying the affidavit submitted by the physician must state, in addition, one of the following:

- Further conventional treatment is not "reasonably expected" to benefit the patient;
- Laetrile will only be used along with other "established and recognized forms of cancer treatment;"
- The patient has decided to take Laetrile after being fully informed of the range of conventional treatments available "and of the fact that Laetrile is considered by most cancer experts to be of no value in combating the disease."

Diane M. Place, Consumer Affairs Officer for the FDA in Detroit, said terminally ill patients could order up to six months' supply of Laetrile in this fashion.

House group OKs bill to defer tuition

LANSING (UPI) — The House Colleges and Universities Committee Wednesday unanimously approved a bill designed to take some of the sting out of rising tuition charges by allowing students to pay in installments, rather than in a lump sum.

The measure will be sent to the Appropriations Committee for a review of its fiscal implications.

As currently written, the bill establishes a $500,000 fund which would be used to loan participating institutions the amount of money they would be short at the beginning of each semester because of a deferred payment plan.

The loan would be paid back to the state at the end of each term.

Each participating institution would be free to establish its own installment plan as long as each term's tuition was paid by the end of that term.

The bill was amended to include nonprofit, private schools as well as public colleges and universities.

The bill originally called for a $300,000 fund, but Rep. Dan Angel, R-Battle Creek, proposed it be hiked to $500,000.

Kent State students protest gymnasium

By STATE NEWS and ASSOCIATED PRESS

KENT, Ohio — The students at Kent State University won't forget what happened May 4, 1970, and the grassy slope where National Guardsmen killed four antiwar demonstrators is dotted with tents to prove their point.

The protest this time is no longer against the war, but is a determination to preserve the site from a prospective gymnasium annex planned since 1965.

The slope where a 13 second barrage of gunfire killed four students, one of them a former MSU student, and wounded nine others, has been dubbed Tenteropolis by the 130 protesters camped there since Friday.

The mood is reverent, dedicated.

"Please, no alcohol or drugs," reads a sign. "Help us — if you want to party, please do it elsewhere. Thank you."

At this year's annual May 4 candlelight vigil, some students went to a trustee's meeting to object to the annex, which would cut a wedge into the hill below where the guardsmen stood. It was the board's final decision last week to go ahead with construction that caused the tents to go up.

KSU President Glenn A. Olds said the decision was "irrevocable."

The students hope not.

"I can't speak for anybody else," one student said. "But I'm going to stay here until they agree to forget the building or until they physically remove me."

Olds said Wednesday that the protesters will not be allowed to remain on the slope once construction begins later this year. He said he hopes they will leave voluntarily, but "they will be removed legally and physically if they do not."

Meanwhile, the students have organized carefully, even setting up a day-care center for children. "Some days we have as many as six or eight," said Deb Ungericht of Dayton, who cared for two children Tuesday.

"We move the tents every three or four days so we won't kill the grass," she said.

Ungericht, 22, said the 130 students, who represent about 1 per cent of the student body, "build no open fires and cook only in hibachis. Each evening we have a community meal. Last night it was a rice-cheese dish. Most of us are vegetarians, and vegetables are cheaper than meat."

"The university has been pretty nice," she said. "They brought us a fire extinguisher."

The campers also have night security patrols. "Over the weekend we had some trouble with motorcyclists riding through the camp," Ungericht said.

Academic Senate fails to make quorum for third straight time

By NANCY ROGIER
 State News Staff Writer

Despite the fact that the Academic Senate meets only twice a year, it failed for the third consecutive time to make quorum Wednesday.

The senate, composed of all MSU faculty members, requires 227 members in attendance to take action. Only 110 were present at the spring 1977 meeting Wednesday afternoon.

The last time the senate achieved a quorum was November 1975.

Because of the failure to make quorum and in accordance with the University By-Laws for Academic Governance, all items on the senate's agenda Wednesday automatically passed.

The most controversial agenda item was the proposed revisions to dismissal procedures for tenured faculty members. The proposal came under fire this week by the American Association of University Professors (AAUP) and the Faculty Associates (FA). The revisions passed automatically.

The disputed document outlines the procedure for initiating formal dismissal procedures, conducting hearings on the dismissal and rendering a judgment.

The AAUP voted Monday night to oppose passage of the proposal and urged all faculty members to attend Wednesday's meeting.

Richard Roppel, associate professor of biomechanics who spoke against the measure Monday night, said he would now attempt to appeal the document at the June meeting of the MSU Board of Trustees. The trustees are the final step for ratification of the revisions.

Roppel plans to contact members of the AAUP Executive Council by mail and get their support for an appeal. He said at this point he would not attempt a personal effort, but would rally with other faculty members to lead an appeal at the board meeting if the council declines their support.

Roppel said it was too late to organize a meeting for the May 26 and 27 trustees meeting or to get the revision item on the agenda.

However, the secretary to the board of trustees said that items could be added to the trustee agenda up to and on the meeting date. Items can also be brought up at the meeting.

Zolton Ferency, AAUP president, said he is not optimistic about the trustees taking any action on the proposal.

"We can always make amendments to it (the document) after it passes," Ferency said. This way, he added, improvements could be made and faculty members could be educated about the dismissal process.

Roppel said the revisions had some "glaringly obvious" drawbacks. He said according to the proposal when formal proceedings for dismissal are initiated the faculty member is not notified of the decision. He also said that at the next level of proceedings (where the provost notifies the

U.S. spies may need warrant

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Jimmy Carter proposed legislation Wednesday that would require government spies to be equipped with a court warrant before using wiretaps or bugging devices to watch agents of foreign powers operating in the United States. The President told congressional leaders that the measure would resolve an inherent conflict between preservation of human rights and the need for adequate intelligence for national security.

Under current law, there are two kinds of electronic surveillance. One kind requires the FBI to get approval from a federal judge for taps and bugs used to gather evidence about domestic crimes.

Vance, Soviets hold arms talks

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — New and possibly critical U.S. Soviet weapons talks opened here Wednesday with a "full exchange of views" on conflicting approaches by the two superpowers to a treaty to limit strategic arms.

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko met at the Soviet Mission here following the signing of a convention banning man-made natural disasters in warfare. Their talks will also center on peace prospects in the Middle East.

Bill allows politicking

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal bureaucrats could run for office, be political fund-raisers and manage partisan campaigns for the first time in nearly four decades under a bill expected to be approved.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill told reporters before the vote Wednesday that he expected the bill sponsored by Rep. William Clay, D-Mo., to pass.

The bill would repeal most of the 1939 Hatch Act. That law, an effort to end political arm-twisting of federal workers by their bosses, prohibited government employes from taking part in partisan politics.

Such a bill passed both chambers during the last Congress but was vetoed by then-President Gerald R. Ford. Ford said he objected to the bill because "politicizing the Civil Service is intolerable."

Wednesday's extended session between Vance and Gromyko suggested the process of arranging a compromise may have begun in the deadlocked SALT negotiations.

Pointedly, a U.S. spokesperson said, there was a demonstration of "good faith on both sides" and that after reflection they will resume discussions today, again at the Soviet mission.

"There is no projection at this point how long the negotiations will go on," American spokesperson Hodding Carter told reporters after conferring with Vance.

Since they have yet to touch on the Middle East and plan a second round to consider only the subject of nuclear weapons, Vance said Gromyko could meet beyond the two or three days initially anticipated.

Vance, on his arrival, ruled out any new American proposals. "We are merely resuming discussions," he said.

The legislation, Carter said, has been approved with "almost complete unanimity" by the executive branch, Congress and the intelligence community. But several lawmakers said they foresee a need for some changes in the bill.

The measure stems from recent disclosures about widespread spying on Americans at home and overseas by the CIA, FBI and other agencies.

of the attorney general but not require warrants from a judge.

Carter's bill would require warrants in these circumstances.

Generally, the bill requires that the attorney general obtain a court warrant from seven specially designated strict court judges before approving electronic surveillance of suspected foreign agents.

A judge's refusal to issue such an order could be appealed to a special three-judge court, ultimately, to the Supreme Court.

SENATE APPROVES PROPOSAL, 74-10 Energy agency gets no

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate voted 74-10 Wednesday to create a Department of Energy, a new Cabinet agency sought by President Jimmy Carter to enact the nation's energy policies.

The proposed legislation, one of the largest federal reorganizations ever, now goes to the House, where a similar bill is awaiting floor action.

The proposed department would be headed by White House energy adviser James Schlesinger, and would combine energy pricing and developing programs not entered throughout the department.

Both Senate Democrats and Republicans expressed support for the proposal, said, however, he was concerned whether the department, which would have 20,000 employees and a $10.6 billion budget, might be an "unwieldy bureaucracy."

The approved Senate bill would give the new department powers over energy price development. In addition, the department would have:

- Broad energy data-gathering powers;
- Regional electric authorities now in the Department.

Groups urge withdrawal of plan to ban saccharin

WASHINGTON (AP) — Spokespersons for the diet soft drink industry and the American Diabetes Association appealed to the Food and Drug Administration on Wednesday to withdraw its plan to ban saccharin from food and beverages.

Bernard L. Oser, testifying for the Calorie Control Council, an industry group, said scientific studies showing saccharin causes bladder cancer in laboratory rats are inconclusive. The FDA should await further tests before banning the artificial sweetener as a food additive, he argued.

Two Kansas City, Mo., pediatricians and the parent of a diabetic teen-ager testified that children with diabetes depend heavily on diet sodas, foods and chewing gum and taking away their saccharin products would be dangerous.

Zambia attacks Rhodesian resort

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — Zambian government troops fired mortars and machine guns into the resort town of Victoria Falls on Wednesday in a half-hour daylight attack from across the Zambezi River, military officials said. No damage or casualties were reported.

and the spectacular Victoria Falls form the border between the two countries. Zambia is one of three countries bordering Rhodesia that grant base areas and military aid to black nationalists engaged in a four-and-one-half year guerrilla war to topple the Salisbury regime. The other two countries are Mozambique and Botswana.

The attack coincided with a United Nations conference in the Mozambique capital of Maputo that has stressed a violent solution to the problems of Rhodesia (Zimbabwe) and South African-ruled South-West Africa (Namibia).

The attack on the town of 3,500 persons in northwest Rhodesia, popular with foreign tourists, was the first such action since Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda declared Monday that a state of war exists between his country and white-ruled Rhodesia. The Zambezi River

Sudan expels Soviet military experts

KHARTOUM, Sudan (AP) — Sudan expelled all 90 Soviet military experts in the Sudanese army Wednesday, the Sudanese news agency reported.

It said the experts along with their 57 member families left Khartoum at noon aboard three Soviet planes.

The expulsion decision was relayed to the Soviet ambassador to Khartoum a week ago, the agency said.

An office attached to the Soviet Embassy which has been operated by the expelled experts was also closed, the agency said.

The experts have been in Sudan since 1970.

Sudan's chief ally, Egypt, expelled 15,000 Soviet military advisers in July 1972.

Court rejects judges' pay contention

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Court of Claims on Wednesday rejected the contention of 140 federal judges that their salaries have been reduced unconstitutionally by the effects of inflation.

"The Constitution affords no protection from such an indirect, nondiscriminatory lowering of judicial compensation," the court said in a 95-page decision dismissing the complaint.

The suit was filed by district and appeals court judges from around the country. Their claim was based on Article

III of the Constitution which says judges' pay "shall not be diminished during their continuance in office."

During the period cited by the judges, March 15, 1969, through Oct. 1, 1975, district judges received $40,000 a year and appeals court judges $42,500. They asserted that inflation reduced the buying power of their paychecks by 34 per cent, effectively making the salaries of district judges $26,200 and of appeals court judges $27,800.

Copter inspections recommended

NEW YORK (AP) — Emergency inspections have been recommended for all Sikorsky S61 helicopters after the landing gear on one of the craft collapsed, causing its rotor blades to kill five persons and injure eight others.

Ford slated for home-state visit

LANSING (UPI) — When former President Gerald R. Ford comes to town next week to raise money for Republicans in his home state, he'll also be lobbying for a little something in return.

Ford is expected to attend a private breakfast Wednesday with legislative leaders in efforts to work out some kind of compromise over the construction of a Gerald R. Ford museum in Grand Rapids. Tuesday night he will be the keynote speaker at a fund-raising dinner for House Republicans.

The state is being asked to kick in $3 million toward the purchase of land and relocation of 19 small businesses in downtown Grand Rapids at the proposed museum site.

Arnold Ziffle and a regiment of his squealing colleagues stormed the Livestock Pavilion in full force Tuesday night to perform in the first annual

Alpha Gamma Rho greased pig contest. As the event began, an estimated crowd of 1,100 people screamed and stomped, "Go pigs, go pigs," as the snorting, squealing, smelling 75-pound beauties were marched into the dust-filled arena. Meanwhile, 72 contestants, representing 16 sororities and 20 fraternities, were busily covering their bodies with enough grease to supply an army of adolescent zits. Many of the participants went "hog wild" with the grease and used enough of the vegetable shortening to qualify as oven-ready pizza pans or fast-food French fries.

As the event ended and the dust cleared, Arnold Ziffle led his faithful army of sore sows back to the farm while the now dirt-covered contestants carried their own hurting hams home.

Witnesses describe 'U' attack

By MARK FABIAN
State News Staff Writer
Witnesses to the attack on three people in the MSU Library Tuesday afternoon, allegedly committed by an MSU student, have provided further details about the incident.

The action in the arena was similar to the many Friday afternoon TGs in East Lansing where desperate barguers try to find a dancing partner before the next number starts.

Delta Tau Delta fraternity was the winner of the men's division and Zeta Tau Alpha sorority took first in the women's contest. Delta Chi fraternity and Alpha Delta Pi sorority took the second places respectively.

In one heat, one of the contestants was able to capture a pig without the help of his partner, but on the trip back to the pen his partner attempted to aid him but ended up tripping him on the hard floor of the arena. The pig immediately squealed in delight as the two male contestants pulled up the concrete couch to sit with the delighted animal.

Many of the heats featured exploding photo finishes when as many as three different pigs were brought back to the pen at the same time. The result was an abundance of bruised bacon and buttocks.

Daniel H. Han, 435 MAC Ave., was arrested and arraigned Tuesday afternoon in East Lansing District Court. He was charged with three counts of felonious assault, police said.

Two witnesses at the scene said they thought Han was armed with a knife while a third positively identified the weapon as a surgical scalpel. The Department of Public Safety (DPS) later said Han had two scalpels.

Deborah A. Pyant, A-309 Rather Hall, said she was on her way to the bathroom on the first floor of the Library when she heard someone yelling "Hey you!" She said she stopped and saw a man pointing at her.

"He told me to go up to the second floor," Pyant said. "He said 'Get up there! Run now or I'll kill you!'"

Pyant then started running up the stairs because the man had what she thought was a knife in his hand. Han chased her up the stairs where she said she fell on the second floor (continued on page 14)

ASMSU committee to hold interviews

AUSJ recommendations not OK'd

By ANZIO M. LUPO
State News Staff Writer
The ASMSU's Student Allocation and Control Committee of the ASMSU Student Board did not approve the recommendations of the All-University Student Judiciary (AUSJ) to the University Judiciary at Tuesday night.

Representative, said the interviews would be held Sunday and the bill would be released at the meeting on Tuesday. The committee also told the Student Board it would separate the three judiciaries into separate bills for approval. The original bill, introduced by Panhellenic Council representative Kirsten Frank and Inter-Cooperative Council representative Stuart Carter, requested approval of AUSJ's recommendations all at once.

The candidates were recommended by AUSJ after undergoing a selection process which included group sessions and personal interviews.

In other action, ASMSU Comptroller Richard Lehrter recommended that the Student Board continue to do its banking with First National Bank of East Lansing. The questioning of First National's student check-cashing policies prompted the Comptroller's Office to look into whether the bank ASMSU used served the student community. "Since the responsibility of student government is to serve the student community in the best way it can, the selection of a bank should be inclusive of all qualitative factors that affect students," Lehrter said in his report.

Prior to last week First National would not cash student checks the last two weeks of a term unless the student had an account at the bank.

His report compared First National to the East Lansing State Bank which allows students to cash checks the last two weeks of the term regardless of whether they have an account there. Lehrter said because the banks now extend equal services to students and First National is closer to the Comptroller's Office in Student Services Building, First National is the best bank for ASMSU. Lehrter said the distance was an important factor because several deposits are made each day and a number of students who obtain loans from the ASMSU loan program or the checks from the ASMSU Book Exchange cash their checks at the bank.

The Student Board also heard a presentation from the Legal Services Cabinet that proposed extending its services.

Budget priorities all fouled up

Billions for defense, but not one extra cent for welfare.

That's the word emanating from the marble edifices of Washington, where Jimmy Carter and the House of Representatives have reached substantial agreement on a budget that will gladden the hearts of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

For those interested in social reform, perhaps a stanza or two of "Pennies from Heaven" would be appropriate.

Carter — whose pietistic approach to government frequently conjurs up images of Heaven on the Potomac — has rained pennies and platitudes on those seeking fundamental social reform, particularly in the field of welfare. In voting on a tentative budget, the House, by going along with Carter's priorities, has evinced a collective narrow-mindedness totally out of step with the real needs of the country.

The $111 billion appropriation to the Defense Department is particularly irksome. Carter has done nothing about his campaign pledge to weed out waste and incompetence in the military establishment. One is reminded of Harry Truman's 1963 vow that at the age of 90 he would run for Senate and, if elected, immediately open an investigation into the Pentagon.

Truman unfortunately died at the age of 88. Carter's entire attitude toward the defense establishment has been remarkably supine and forbearing. The President has refrained from delivering even the mildest public rebuke to Joint Chiefs of Staff head Gen. George Brown, who recently suggested that people who complain about governmental intrusions into their civil liberties deserve to be investigated.

The fact that Carter has ignored such indiscreet bodes ill for the decision he will soon have to make the White Elephant B1 bomber. During the campaign, Carter ridiculed the B1 and effected a promised not to go ahead with it. As President he has backpedaled from this position and, after several months of indecision, professes to be still undecided on whether or not to go ahead with the project.

And why shouldn't he be? During the campaign Carter vowed to cut between $5 billion and $7 billion out of the defense budget and earned the votes of a lot of uneasy liberals because of it. In using a Orwellian doublespeak to justify the administration's subsequent recommendation to increase defense expenditures, Press Secretary Jody Powell said that Carter meant he would save that amount of money by eliminating defense waste and that a hard reductions would never occur.

All this is in contrast to Carter's parsimonious attitude toward social reform. George McGovern's recent denunciation of Carter, in which he asserted that the President's basic philosophical values were more Republican than Democratic, was valid.

The President is committed to balancing the budget by fiscal 1981, something which can only be accomplished at the expense of those very reform programs — national health insurance, welfare reform, aid to cities, public works — that he paid lip service to during the campaign.

As in previous years, administration and congressional budget priorities are all mixed up. Perhaps some day our government representatives will be that the alphabet of America's priorities proceeds from A to Z, instead of the other way around.

Loathsome

With the coming of spring, we see the emergence of two loathsome types of individuals, the litterbugs and the flower pickers. It goes without saying that MSU has a beautiful campus, but perhaps it should be emphasized that both littering and removing vegetation from state-owned land are illegal. The campus is here for everyone to enjoy. Remember that, and we will all benefit.

Keep Women's lounge

The Women's Lounge in the MSU Union was set aside for women in 1948. Since then it has been one of the only MSU facilities where a woman can go to read quietly or socialize with other women. The reasons for maintaining this lounge are clear.

Of course, the lounge has a women's lavatory. It is also a small oasis; a recognition that women have long been denied a "place" in society, both literally and figuratively. This lounge is spacious, has study tables and offers women their own place in a University which, in other ways, is still for men.

Union manager Michael J. Dmochowski has his own ideas about a "women's place" and intends to act on them come next fall. Although he agrees that, legally, anti-discrimination policies allow men and women to have separate gathering places (even the misunderstood ERA would not take that right away), Mr. Dmochowski is getting rid of the Women's Lounge.

He feels it is no longer fair to have a separate place for women, just as he feels it is impossible to make the Union accessible to handicappers.

"I can't please all interest groups, I've got to listen and do what I can. Some men have complained that they can't use the Women's Lounge. So, next fall, I am going to build a sound-proof partition around the bathroom and make the lounge area a general lounge," he explained. He does so snickering, "I don't condone discrimination, do I?"

How sad it is that some middle-aged men, in administrative capacities, do not understand the legal as well as philosophical distinction between discrimination and the right to a little space — space so long denied by that very same discrimination which he now twists because he has the power to do so.

I just wonder if women will let this seemingly small taking back of space really happen. As author Jo Freeman said, it's so easy to lose what little we've gained.

Bicyclist gripes

With the advent of good weather bicyclists abound, to be followed by complaints. Some of these complaints seem a bit overdone. Granted, some bicyclists are selfish slob who would rather ride over a pedestrian than around one. But on the whole, bicyclists are careful, reasonable people. We bicyclists have our own gripes: people who walk on bike paths or who abruptly walk in front of bicyclists make life rough for us. People who would never think of crossing the street directly in front of a car think nothing of walking in front of a biker in the street — we cannot stop immediately! At times bicyclists and pedestrians share the same path; for your own sake, if you hear a bike behind you don't suddenly change direction. We'll stay well clear if you don't surprise us. It'll be a good spring and summer if bicyclists and pedestrians will use a little courtesy and common sense.

Help asked

What can I do? Where can I turn? I have always known that to achieve my ambition I would have to go about it in an unusual fashion and now everything seems to be against me. I felt that by being a part of the system I would move up the ladder — that didn't work! All I have now is my degree, and although that is proving to be a handicap, no one can take it from me. I have run out of unemployment benefits and because of my higher education I am ineligible for Social Security. What can I do? Where can I turn?

Everyone says that this is the land of opportunity, the place where all dreams can be accomplished — Look at me! Although most athletes like me, that does not put bread on the table.

I only stay around here because 1) I like the environment, 2) I feel I gain invaluable experience by attending football practice daily, 3) I am considered a good morale factor by both coaches and players and (I don't like to admit to this) 4) I make a good pest of myself — one of my best jobs! I know what I want, and I won't say no!

I, along with many knowledgeable people, feel that athletics are 10 per cent physical and 90 per cent mental. To me, mental means morale, and I am the first to admit to doing many "strange" things for the athletes of MSU. What has it got me? Most prospective employers are afraid of me because of my previous record (and I can't blame them). What can I do? Who can I turn to?

I feel that all Spartan athletics are on the upswing and I would like very much to be a part of this. I feel that I can be a valuable addition to this program. Every avenue has now run out, but I WON'T SAY NO!

Dog president

Last Friday's fine article about Edward Dog (certainly a seminal figure in recent East Lansing history) neglected to mention his distinguished service as president of the Bogue Street Co-op. Eddie's integrity and grace in the execution of his duties were truly inspirational to those he lived with.

Commend

I feel that the MSU baseball coaching staff deserve to be commended for their warmth and friendliness toward kids from Moore Living Center and House. Last Saturday, the players' and hospitality towards these handicappers really made the day event for all those involved. The kids bust'n their butts with happiness meeting the players of the team. You great bunch of guys and I'm sure you never forget it. Keep it up!

Efficiency

During the past three months I spent a great deal of time at the Placement Center looking for information regarding jobs and, of course, interviews. During this time I was always treated with the utmost efficiency and courtesy by the staff of the center, and I would like to thank them for their help over the past two months. Interviewing is a difficult process and the friendly people there certainly made things go easier. Again, thanks.

Oil imports on rise due to fraud, mismanagement

WASHINGTON — Three presidents have assigned top priority to reducing U.S. dependence on foreign oil. Yet the federal effort to cut the flow of imported oil has been an abysmal failure.

The attempt to tighten the oil valves began with Richard Nixon, who slapped stiff fees on oil imports. This was supposed to discourage overseas purchases and to encourage domestic production. It was left to the Federal Energy Administration to collect the fees.

We have documented in past columns that the program has been a total fiasco, with oil companies demanding and receiving huge refunds from the government. Now we have uncovered new evidence that the oil companies have been ripping off the taxpayers while the energy agency has looked the other way.

The fee system is in such a shambles that confidential internal audit found: "There was no operational system to verify that companies were paying import fees on oil imports." Yet more than $560,000 in contracts had been "awarded to computerize and improve the program."

Atlantic Richfield, for example, asked for and was paid $725,000 in refunds that it didn't deserve. It took the bureaucrats two years to discover the overpayment.

Auditors recently discovered that Exxon owed $49,536 in past import fees. Despite this deficit, the energy agency paid Exxon a duplicate refund of $14,536. The collection process is so haphazard, in fact, that one oil company made out a $23 million check to an agency official instead of the U.S. Treasury.

While some of the widespread violations may be attributed to carelessness, there is evidence that some oil companies have taken advantage of the bureaucratic confusion to defraud the government.

Major Brands Distribution Company of Butte, Mont., for example, doesn't import enough oil to have to pay import fees. So the energy administrators granted the firm an exemption license in September 1975.

But the license was improperly slipped to two other companies, which used it to import oil without paying the required fees. Detroit Edison used the bootleg license to import 56,887 barrels of oil, saving more than $35,000 in fees. Enterprise Oil and Gas brought in an additional 149,560 barrels on the same license and evaded $94,000 in fees.

A spokesman told us the Federal Energy Administration will collect the fees the two firms should have paid but will take no further action against the companies. This isn't likely to deter a practice which agency sources claim is widespread. They tell us that millions of dollars are being lost in even more flagrant manipulations of licenses.

Footnote: None of the companies mentioned in this report would comment, except for Atlantic Richfield. A spokesman told us that the refund was an unintentional goof, that a change in the fee structure threw off the calculations.

WHO'S NEWS Assistant Agriculture Secretary J. Paul Bolduc, imbued with the new White House morality, is incensed over a chain letter circulating in his department. It is a humorous letter, started as a joke, calling for the recipients to send their wives to the top name on the letter. But Bolduc took the letter seriously and fired off a scathing memo to all the department's 11,500 employees. He warned the chain-letter recipients to forward the evidence to the Agriculture Department's records division. There, presumably, the letters will be scoured for fingerprints.

White House aide Midge Costanza, speaking to 100 women executives, began teasing a lone male in the audience. "Hey look," she chirped, "he smokes the same kind of cigar as I do." When she returned to the White House, she found a cigar in her jacket pocket. With it was the young man's business card.

E. L. council passes new fiscal budget

By GEORGIA HANSHEW
State News Staff Writer

East Lansing City Council Tuesday night passed with relative ease the city manager's $11.9 million budget for the 1977-78 fiscal year, amending it only to give more generous portions to four area groups.

Two social service agencies, Tenants Resource Center (TRC) and the Drug Education Center, received increases of $5,200 and $9,050 respectively, while council refused the Listening Ear's $6,000 request for a paid staff position.

The council also agreed to fund two groups which had not been included in the city manager's original budget — the Lansing Metropolitan Development Authority and the Tri-County Regional Planning Commission — for a total of $12,500.

The decision to more than triple TRC's budget from the current fiscal year to fund a paid staff position did not fully resolve councilmembers' reservations about funding the center. Questions had been brought up at an earlier meeting about a possible antilandlord bias in TRC's literature and its approach to counseling. The council has also made clear that it feels other governmental units should share in the center's funding.

The $5,200 increase was made conditional upon a matched amount from Ingham County.

"It still bothers me that this city pays the full fund for a resource of whose clients only half come from East Lansing," Councilmember Mary Sharp said.

Councilmember John Czarnecki said he felt sure that questions about discrimination against landlords would be worked out in the next year.

The council allocated only two-thirds of the total estimated cost of the proposed Capital Area Transportation Authority (CATA)-MSU bus system integration, whereby two CATA bus routes would run from East Lansing onto the MSU campus.

Councilmembers have said they expect MSU to pick up the remaining $9,000 tab.

However, MSU Asst. Vice President Theodore B. Simon indicated in a recent letter to the city manager that MSU has no intention of sharing the cost of the bus integration plan since MSU does not contribute to the self-supporting MSU bus system.

And if MSU continues to refuse its support? "Then the integration proposal is in trouble," Councilmember Larry Owen said.

Some of the changes the newly adopted budget will initiate include the following:

• A planning, housing and community development department will be formed as part of the city government. The present structure has only a planning department.

Federal Community Development funds will be administered from this new department, and housing inspection functions will be transferred here from the building and zoning department.

• The citizen housing commission will be abolished and a housing and community development commission will take its place.

• A finance department, responsible for accounting, purchasing, treasury management, assessing and other financial functions of the city will be created.

• Proposed salary increases for city employees make up the largest budget increase, to be granted on or before July 1.

In other council action:

• Councilmembers approved a $160,000 housing rehabilitation program to assist low income homeowners technically and financially in bringing their homes up to housing and rehabilitation code standards.

• An ordinance to establish a fine arts commission was introduced.

Hiss reminisces on 'witch hunts' of Red Scare

By DANIEL HERMAN
State News Staff Writer

Alger Hiss, a well-known figure and casualty of the McCarthy witch hunts, related his personal observations on the "witch hunts" of the 1950s to a capacity audience in the Erickson Hall kiva Tuesday night.

The program was a segment of an ASMSU "Great Issues" series. Hiss prefers to refer to this period of American history as the "McCarthy" era. He was sentenced in 1948 on charges of espionage after being investigated by the now-defunct House Committee on Un-American Activities for subversive activities.

"The McCarthy era is a misnomer, what we think of as the witch hunt era came before Joe McCarthy," he said. "It would be accurate to call it the 'Nixon-McCarthy' era. Nixon started it and McCarthy just jumped on the bandwagon."

Hiss said that McCarthy was a man without any redeeming qualities.

Dan Acheson (the secretary of state under President Harry S. Truman) once said of him (McCarthy) 'to denigrate him is to praise him.' Hiss told the audience.

Several people disagreed with Hiss, and before the lecture began distributed "an open letter to and about Alger Hiss," which, in Hiss' words, "It is hoped that you will not be well received when you present your fraudulent knife of deceit in the already dead body of America's greatest patriots. . . . Joseph McCarthy."

Hiss described the atmosphere of fear that enveloped the United States during the '50s, as a fear which caused "honorable men" to "betray" McCarthy because of his vote-getting power.

Hiss related a story of how the wife of a diplomat who was a friend of the State Department "China experts" had been invited to the home of then Sen. John F. Kennedy, where she met McCarthy. Hiss described him as being the "guest of honor." He noted by the fact that McCarthy was responsible for getting "honorable and innocent" men, she asked McCarthy "would you do such a thing, McCarthy simply replied, 'Oh, honey, anything personal, it's just politics.'" Hiss said.

Black students sponsor Unity Week

MSU's black student body is sponsoring its annual Black Unity Week. Events start today, in commemoration of Malcolm X's birthday. Malcolm X was an internationally known black political leader who grew up in the Lansing area.

Beginning at 1 p.m. at the Malcolm X Memorial on Logan Street and Jolly Road in Lansing, a service will be held honoring the deceased leader.

Later tonight, at 8 p.m. in Erickson Hall Kiva, continued commemoration to Malcolm X will be carried out in the form of skits and dramatic readings. A play about Malcolm X's life will be presented.

Friday from 3 to 7 p.m. OBA (Office of Black Affairs), is sponsoring a TG at the Rainbow Ranch. Various sororities and fraternities will be holding social functions on campus later that night.

Saturday's celebration of unity week begins with workshops at the International Center, rooms 201 through 204.

From 12:30 to 2:30 p.m. "Blacks in the Media" and "Pan Africanism" will be probed.

From 2:45 to 5:15 p.m. "African Food Products" and "Blacks in Medicine" are topics for discussion.

In the center's Crossroads Cafeteria, an African dinner begins at 5:30 p.m.

At 8:30 p.m. an extravaganza will take place, also in the cafeteria. Tickets for the dinner and extravaganza are $3.50.

Finally, Sunday at 10 a.m. everyone is invited to join in the fun at St. Francis Park in Lansing. A softball game will be organized. Gospel singing by local talent is also scheduled.

Fraser chosen as president of UAW

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Douglas A. Fraser, a liberal social activist in the style of the late United Auto Workers leader Walter Reuther, won the union presidency Wednesday.

The 2,900 voting delegates at the union's national convention gave the job by acclamation to Fraser, 60, a Scottish immigrant who once worked as a metal finisher at a Detroit auto plant.

His long-expected election was briefly delayed by the entry of a last minute opponent in Wednesday's election to succeed the retiring Leonard Woodcock as president of the nation's largest industrial union.

Fraser had been the lone candidate for the $47,600 a year post since January. But a local union leader placed his own name into nomination to provide token opposition. But after the floor vote began Henry Wilson, 41, president of the local representing workers at a Ford Motor Co. assembly plant in Dearborn, Mich., withdrew. He said he entered the race in protest against the lack of blacks in top leadership positions.

There are two blacks in the 26 positions on the executive board. Woodcock, who placed Fraser's name in nomination, hailed him as a man with a "deep devotion to principle and a commitment to the social causes for which this union has always stood."

Fraser had been a vice president for the past seven years. The 1.4-million-member union has had only two other presidents since World War II.

The UAW was led for 24 years by the flamboyant Reuther until his death in a plane crash in 1970, when Woodcock took over.

Woodcock, 66, has been selected by President Jimmy Carter to be chief U.S. envoy to China.

In the Reuther and Woodcock tradition, Fraser has said the union should both pursue better contracts for its members and champion social causes for the working class and underprivileged.

He is regarded both by union associates and auto industry bargaining adversaries as a tough, creative negotiator who has achieved important contract improvements for union.

Three council members elected to UCAG posts

Three new Student Council members elect have been elected to serve on the University Committee on Academic Governance (UCAG) for next year. They are: Ann Crowe, James Madison College; Frank Marazita, College of Human Ecology; and Frank Lessa, College of Social Science.

Alan Wegienka, College of Agriculture and Resources, and Kathy Leonard, at-large representative, are tied for the fourth Student Council position for UCAG.

Current members of the committee met Wednesday to decide how to break the tie and the results will be announced in Friday's paper.

Only 17 students have applied for all University positions on the six Academic Council standing committees. Roughly 60 people are needed. People with questions about running should call or stop by the Office of Academic Governance, 10 Linton Hall.

Applications are available until 5 p.m. Friday. The positions are open to all students.

CATA plans renovation

In an unanimous vote Wednesday afternoon, the Capital Area Transportation Authority (CATA) approved the plan to renovate a building at 4615 Tranter Ave. and turn it into a new garage and administrative office.

The facility, to be used by the CATA bus system, is budgeted at $2.2 million.

But the original cost of the facility was estimated at $700,000, and some CATA officials estimate that costs may run as high as $3 million.

Ronald Stieber, assistant director of CATA, said the reason for the large discrepancy in cost projections was because the original plan was upgraded and the architect failed to consider the changes.

In its meeting two weeks ago, the Lansing City Council recommended that the Tri-County Regional Planning Commission approve the plan for the new facility. The commission has since done so.

The new facility will house both a new garage and new administration facilities. The structure is part of a 15-year CATA improvement plan in the Lansing area.

Eighty per cent of the project will be funded by the federal government and the other 20 per cent will come from the Michigan Highway and Transportation Department.

Reception to highlight opening of Pump House

An open house will mark the official opening of the Orchard Street Pump House tonight from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m.

The Pump House, located a block from Bailey School, has already begun programs for pre-schoolers as well as a crafts and a conversation group. Among activities planned for the future are a story-teller, group singing and a Coronary Pulmonary Resuscitation workshop sponsored by the Michigan Heart Association.

A ribbon-cutting ceremony is scheduled for 7:30 p.m., with remarks from East Lansing Mayor George Griffiths and Jeremy Mattson of the Pump House center board of directors.

Everyone is encouraged to walk or ride bikes to the open house.

Now comes Miller time.

Spartans peaking for conference

If the Spartan trackmen surprise the rest of the Big Ten by making a run at the conference track and field championships at Indiana Friday and Saturday, you can bet their coach knows why. "We're peaking right now," Jim Bibbs, acting head coach, said. "We're right where we want to be. "I'm not saying we are going to win," Bibbs continued. "But I have figured that we could take 100 points. And if we do that Michigan and Illinois might have some worrying to do." The reason for the team's optimism stems from a dual meet against Eastern last Saturday. The Spartans registered personal bests almost across the board to upset a favored Marv squad. "Indoors Eastern was one of the toughest teams in the Midwest," Charles Byrd, senior captain, said. "The coaches kept telling us that Eastern would peak earlier than we would, but we just didn't listen," he said. "I went into the meet thinking we were going to get beat. "But after the results on Saturday I'd have to say we can be right in the money at the Big Ten.

Jim Bibbs

"We're starting to understand what the coaches were trying to tell us." One freshman who is peaking right on schedule is sprinter Ricky Flowers. Flowers won the 220 Saturday over Randy Smith in 21.3 seconds and finished second to Smith in the 100-yard dash with a personal best of 9.5. The sprinter from Saginaw High School has given Bibbs hopes of slamming the 100- and 200-meters at the Big Ten. "If we can get first and second, or even first and third, I'll be ecstatic," Bibbs said. A possible reason for Bibbs' qualification is defending 100- and 200-meter champion Lawrence Johnson of Wisconsin. Johnson won the Big Ten indoor 300-yard dash this year, but did not qualify for the 60-yard final, which Smith won. Flowers did not run either, since he was coming off injuries and was kept in the longer distances. The Spartans have one defending champion going into the meet, all-American Herb Lindsay. Lindsay added the 1,500 meter crown to his accomplishments last year and ran second in the 5,000 meters for a grueling double. The senior from Reed City is the other captain of the team and has a total of three Big Ten titles indoors and outdoors. Two other Spartans coming off top performances are Paul Schneider and Tim Klein. Schneider is approaching his indoor form when he threw 56 feet 2 1/2 inches to set a varsity record. Saturday against Eastern he heaved the shot 55 feet 6 inches, just missing the outdoor record of 55 feet 8 inches held by Marv Roberts. Klein was runner-up the last two years in the 400-meter intermediate hurdles, but appears ready to break that string. Klein blazed a 50.8 second race against Eastern which qualified him for the nationals. Senior Howard Neely also popped off a personal best in the intermediate hurdles Saturday with a time of 51.4. Neely placed sixth and fifth in the Big Ten meet. The Spartans finished seventh last year with 12 points and last won in 1972, a team which featured Herb Washington and Marshall Dill. U-M is the defending champion.

BREAKS RBI RECORD

Weston salvages doubleheader split

By MIKE LITAKER
State News Sports Writer

Al Weston goes MSU baseball squad. At nightcap Wednesday to power the Spartans past Oakland, 6-2, after dropping the opener, 5-1, in the twinbill at Kobs Field. Weston did it in a big way, too, by breaking the season run batted-in record with a two-run triple and a solo homer.

The senior slugger broke Shaun Howitt's five-year-old RBI mark by upping his total to 47 and came to within one homer of Howitt's 22 roundtrippers by lifting his seventh blast of the year over the fence in left.

The homer, his 21st as a Spartan, ties him for second with Rob Ellis and Ron Pruitt.

Weston banged out three singles in the first game loss as the Spartans were able to score only one run in the contest. The lone tally came when Pioneer pitcher Dave Jones dropped a throw at the plate after tagging Ken Robinson in the sixth.

MSU jumped on Oakland southpaw Gregg Iffinger early in the second game with four third-inning runs.

Tony Spada led off with a double down the line at third and after a single by Robinson, scampered home on Cliff Northey's single.

Weston cleared the bases with his triple off the fence in center before scoring easily on Jerry Weller's sacrifice fly.

The Spartans added single runs in the fourth and fifth on Spada's RBI single to score Ty Willingham, who had walked, and the homer by Weston.

Spartan coach Danny Litwhiler steeled by his game plan to use six pitchers in the twinbill. Mark Sutherland picked up his first win with four innings of relief work after starter Rob Campion went out at the end of the first frame. Brian Wolcott worked the final two innings.

Sherm Johnson started the first game but was forced to exit in the middle of the second inning when the patella tendon in his right leg popped out of place, causing a slight knee sprain.

Johnson had been slated to hurl one of the games this weekend against Michigan with Todd Hubert in the season finale.

"There's no way I'm going to miss that," assured Johnson, who will ice his knee the next three days. "When I came down on it in my follow-through I felt something pop but the doc says I'll be back by Saturday."

Larry Pashnick followed Johnson to the mound and yielded the first two Pioneer runs in the fifth after two were out.

Oakland's Henry Washington dribbled a grounder down the first base line but Pashnick missed him coming down the line with a lunging tag and then had his throw to first hit the runner for a two-base error which allowed the first run to cross the plate.

A single and an error by Robinson in center caused the second run to score and saddled Pashnick with his seventh loss of the season in 10 decisions, to tie Dick Kenney's dubious 1967 record for most setbacks in a year.

BUNTS AND BOOTS — Left-handed hitters Mike Moore and Kirk Haynes made their varsity debuts in the first game in a move by Litwhiler to get some lefty hitters ready for Michigan. Moore drew a pair of walks as the designated hitter.

They'll have to ask the umpire for a decision on this play. Over 300 IM softball teams are pursuing a title in either the independent A, fraternity or dormitory leagues in the play-offs that began Sunday.

JOHN SINGLER Where are the people?

There's something going on here at the big school, something that everyone can be a part of. The MSU women's sports program is at the summit of its drive for a more significant share of the University's attention. It's gotten it from the administration, i.e. the initiation of a program of athletic grants-in-aid for women athletes.

It's gotten it from Leanna Bordner, a woman of infinite energy and enthusiasm, and the women's varsity club. There is now a booster club solely for the support of women's sports at MSU.

... which leaves the fan or potential fan. For those attending Saturday's alumni football game, that's a start. Proceeds from the sale of tickets will be channeled to women's athletics.

The money will be well spent. Bordner and her colleagues from the varsity club will be buying bumper stickers at the ballgame Saturday. This is one of the group's fund raising forays for the benefit of women's sports.

... should run into Bordner, or vice-versa, odds are you will get away without buying a bumper sticker.

... raisers are too often passed off as just so much public relations. Besides donations, one factor critical to the growth of women's athletics, at MSU and elsewhere, is the fund-raiser. Monday's banquet was nice, but something still hasn't settled the right. Joanna Davenport, featured speaker, said, "It will take concerted effort to create programs comparable with the men's."

The critical word is model, not mirror image. As long as it's kept in the proper scale, the powers that be in women's athletics can, and should, build their programs around the many experiences the men have lived through in their sport.

... they must be careful. It's OK to go ahead and build a scale model of an automobile or a ship, but if you were to construct a model of identical proportion to the real thing, it would have a tendency to fall apart.

... to tell how these things will work at other schools, but MSU's women's program has taken off and reached the point where it can no longer grow without spreading itself too far.

... program has to start reinforcing what it now has. More exposure and fan interest should be channeled into the areas that now exist. These areas can only be strengthened. Women's athletics now have scholarships, a booster club, a fund-raiser and some of the finest facilities in the land.

... and raiser can be effective in that it not only breeds interest but also harvests it. The logical starting point. Women's sports no longer have the growing pains they suffered through in the past. The way beyond that.

... have to find ways to get people to attend the games. Only by getting these people out to the playing fields and arenas can women's sports develop the clientele necessary to support the programs.

... don't charge admission for women's athletic events at MSU as a reason for it, the best guess is that people will have another excuse for not showing up.

... sports fans like to follow a winner and on the collegiate level, a successful program in any given year means continued success for some years ahead, a perpetuating thing.

... women's teams this year have lost only 20 of 154 dual meets. No doubt, respected in the state, Big Ten and the Midwest.

... have more money, improved coaching, thorough administrative backing. . . now they need someone to fill the seats.

Netters try to improve Big Ten position

By TOMSHANAHAN
State News Sports Writer

MSU's tennis team started playing its best tennis of the year when it blasted Indiana off the court, 7-2, two weeks ago after having just been upset by Western Michigan.

But coach Stan Drobae would prefer that the real turning point of the year be one that he can look back on after this weekend's Big Ten tourney that begins today in Ann Arbor.

"Western Michigan beat us and I was disappointed," Drobae said. "I didn't have to say much to the team and they came back and beat Indiana. For the first time they played with confidence and aggressiveness, but I want the turning point of the season to be this weekend."

Drobae plans on his line up of senior Tom Gudelsky at No. 1 singles (6-8) and junior Kevin McNulty at No. 2 singles (9-4). The pair will also play No. 1 doubles together (9-5).

Juniors Tighe Keating (11-3) and John Boukamp (6-8) will play No. 2 doubles (7-2), while playing No. 3 and No. 4 singles, respectively.

Freshman Steve Carter (6-4) at No. 5 singles and junior Dee McCaffrey at No. 6 singles will make up the No. 3 doubles unit (4-0).

"Our whole season is geared for these last three days," Drobae said. "If you get by the first round and win three or four matches you'll be a Big Ten champion," said the still enthusiastic coach of 20 seasons at MSU.

Drobae tagged Michigan the favorite — a team that has won the last nine Big Ten titles and is currently coming off a five-match road trip to Texas.

"Michigan is the favorite, but you can't count out Ohio State, Wisconsin, Indiana and Michigan State," he said. "I'm pleased with the improvement the guys have made — now they have to prove it on the courts."

Though the Spartan netters only finished with a 7-7 dual record, and only 3-6 in the Big Ten, Drobae points to the fact that MSU was in the same position last year.

MSU was 2-7 going into the Big Ten tourney, but the netters pulled some upsets in the early rounds and gathered enough points to finish fourth.

"The whole season comes down to the draw and the opening round Thursday," Drobae said. The draw was made late Wednesday night and play began at 8 a.m. today.

Drobae said the season has been a preparation for the conference championship. As an experienced coach of an inexperienced team that only has two veterans, Drobae said he has to make sure the size of the tourney doesn't awe the four players who have never been to it before.

"My job is to make the guys feel confident and tell them what to expect," he said. "They have to feel confident and believe that there isn't anybody they can't beat."

The 68th Big Ten tennis championships conclude Saturday.

NET ACTION: The women's tennis team is also in action this weekend at Columbus, Ohio for the Regional tournament that will qualify the winners for the national tourney. MSU is sending Cindy Bogdonas and Diane Selke in doubles and Jodi Ross in singles.

Women take off for LA to compete in nationals

By GEOFF ETNYRE
State News Sports Writer

Head women's track coach Cheryl Bridges said that planning a strategy for the AIAW (Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women) is not the easiest thing in the world.

While her team looks forward to the Los Angeles sunshine today on the UCLA campus, she is still somewhat in the dark.

"Since the AIAW doesn't place any restrictions on switching schools, you never know who's going to show up where," Bridges said.

"I don't know what other coaches are going to do with their runners until I get there. Then I can decide the best event for mine."

Half miler Sue Lattar is a good case in point. Lattar won the Big Ten half mile this year and also the 440 yard dash. Whether she will run the 440 in the nationals could depend on her competition, Bridges said. And if she does enter the 440, there could be conflicts with the relays she runs on.

"We don't really have a good communication service available so we don't know how the West Coast schools are doing," Bridges said. "The California schools know what the California schools are doing and they don't really care about the rest of the world."

Bridges' philosophical approach differs radical ly from what she termed the West Coast style of training.

"They really waste their athletes out there," Bridges said. "They're overworked, overtrained and overused. They have no longevity."

Bridges, who trained in California, said that the weather is good all the time and the runners never really get a chance to take breaks.

"Everybody is always gunning for everybody else," Bridges said. "There is no let up."

"I like the naive stance where you are friends with the other team."

As Bridges was making last minute preparations for her team's flight to LA Tuesday, she commented on the future of women's track and field in the United States.

"The problem I see is that the club runner can survive out there but she can't in the Midwest," Bridges said. "Here she spends most of her time searching for a meet."

"That's why our Olympics are suffering. It's those club runners who we are going to have to survive off of."

"We just don't realize what is important."

By now Bridges is on the UCLA campus and probably still planning the strategy that she hopes will make a name for her 15 runners in the AIAW nationals. The three day competition ends Saturday.

IM Notes

The IM All-Nighter gets started at 2 p.m. Friday with canoe one-pitch and slow pitch softball. The canoe races begin at 4:30 p.m. at the Red Cedar Canoe Livery.

More events get started at 7 when play begins for euhre, pinocle, checkers and back gammon in 203, 215 and 219 Men's IM Bldg. In gym III is indoor soccer, while gym II has three on three basketball. Paddleball play will also get underway.

There's freethrow competition in gym II at 7:30 p.m., while gym I has volleyball at 8 p.m. The Green Splash will put on an exhibition of synchro-nized swimming at the indoor pool at 8 p.m., also. At the same time there will be a dance workshop in the turf arena and a women's racquetball tournament at the men's IM courts.

At the indoor pool at 9 p.m. will be open innertube water polo. There is a Frisbee demonstration in the turf arena at 9:30 p.m.

Men's racquetball and women's paddleball begin at the respective courts at 10 p.m. There will also be more dancing in gym III.

At 10:30 p.m. there is an Okinawa Karate Demonstration in the sports arena. Fencing and badminton will be taking place in gym I at 11:30 p.m., while mixed racquetball will be the final event to get underway at midnight. There is also an opportunity to swim under the stars all night in the outdoor pool that opens today.

Club Sports

The MSU men's and women's rugby club teams will be in action this weekend. Saturday the men travel for a match with a Battle Creek club team. Sunday the men's and women's squads play Kalamazoo in games that will start at 1:30 p.m. on the rugby field behind the Veterinary clinic.

The MSU crew club will meet the University of Chicago Sunday at 1 p.m. at the Grand River Park in Lansing. The following weekend the team will finish its season in Grand Rapids at the Michigan State Championship Regatta.

PETER J. VACCARO

Growing accustomed to Shaw's pen

Community, professional and university theaters in the East Lansing area have acquired certain distinct reputations based on the regular patterns of their season offerings. The Okemos Barn Theatre tries for a mixed season of generic types — musicals, comedies, "straight dramas" — usually American and with Arthur Miller a particular favorite.

The Lansing Civic Players keep rather exclusively to "family fare," again primarily American and with a clearly defined intention of "not offending anyone." Their offerings are nearly always comedy, with the frequent occurrence of Neil Simon and of American melodrama.

Performing Arts Company seasons are usually marked by "safe" selections, popular favorites that attract audiences by the simple familiarity of a title. More esoteric offerings are usually reserved for the University's Arena Theatre.

Such "campus" theater groups as The Company and the Players Gallery, while sporadically attempting "difficult" dramas, most frequently choose box-office standards, and nearly always plays with obvious appeal to young student audiences.

The single theater whose seasons are conspicuously different from others in the region is the BoarsHead Theater. Its current mounting of George Bernard Shaw's "Pygmalion" follows the BoarsHead's successes with two other Shaw plays in recent seasons: "Mrs. Warren's Profession" and "Misalliance." With the exception of the Performing Arts Company's recent production of "Major Barbara," the Boars-

Head proves the only theater in the area that, it would appear, considers Shaw a playwright worth performing with frequency.

This "Pygmalion" is, as have been the other BoarsHead stagings of Shaw, adequate in every respect, and at moments exquisite. Phil Heald's direction regards the play as a strong and powerful battle of the sexes, and his Eliza Doolittle and Henry Higgins are absolutely worthy opponents.

Kristie Thatcher, as Eliza Doolittle, is radiant. She is a brilliant comedienne, with the great beauty, grace, charm and strength of personality to raise her high above the rank of "duchess." Her Eliza is evenly matched by Richard Thomsen's Higgins, strong nearly in spite of his pensive brooding.

The supporting company is as well strong. Though Carmen Decker and Robert Miller are curiously cast as Mrs. Higgins and Alfred Doolittle, both offer thoroughly convincing and intriguing, if unorthodox, interpretation of characters. Nancie Kammer deserves a special nod for her endearing yet forceful Mrs. Pearce. John Peakes is a complete delight as a lovable and honorable Col. Pickering.

John Peakes is Col. Pickering and Kristie Thatcher is the irascible Eliza Doolittle in the BoarsHead's "Pygmalion."

If this year's season at the BoarsHead has been a success, it is precisely because of mountings like the current "Pygmalion." Strong drama is popular theater. The BoarsHead Players continue to remind of that, "Pygmalion" will continue its run through Sunday.

Players to produce 'Glass Menagerie'

"The Glass Menagerie," Tennessee Williams' first produced work, will be presented this weekend by the Players Gallery at 8:15 p.m. in Wonders

Hall kiva. Under the direction of David Kropp, the cast includes Roger Haley in the role of Tom, Lisa Hodge in the role of Laura, Walter Kozicki in the role of Jim and Diana Royce in the role of Amanda.

The spun-silver prose and breakable characters of "The Glass Menagerie" make it one of Williams' most resilient works.

Tickets are $1.50 for students, faculty and the public and are available at the Union Ticket Office or at the door. A special matinee will be performed at 2:30 p.m. Saturday, with Wonders Hall residents admitted for $1.

Elvis' mansion up for collateral

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Elvis Presley is using his Graceland mansion as partial collateral for a $2 million divorce settlement reached in 1972 with his former wife, Priscilla.

Presley's father, Vernon, said Graceland was selected by the singer as collateral because it is the one piece of property that Presley has no intentions of selling.

The elder Presley said his son is up to date on divorce and child support payments, but under law in California, where the decree was filed, he is required to cover the outstanding balance of the settlement.

MSU State Singers, Chorale sing Verdi 'Requiem' piece

The premiere of a new work and a section from an upcoming Verdi "Requiem" production will be the features of a free concert of the MSU State Singers and the 31-member University Chorale.

Robert Harris will direct both groups in the "Sanctus" from the "Requiem" which will be presented in its entirety on June 3 and 5 by the MSU Symphony Orchestra and Symphonic Choir.

The University Chorale will feature the premiere of "Go Lovely Rose" by Einar Nisula of the MSU Humanities Department. Four motets by Bach and Palestrina, and two contemporary composers, will complete the Chorale's repertoire.

Benjamin Britten's "Hymn to St. Cecilia" and an English Renaissance work, "Ascendit Deus" by Peter Philips, are additional features of the State Singers' performance.

The concert is scheduled for 8:15 p.m. in University Lutheran Church, 1020 S. Harrison Road.

SUMMER WORK

'The Late Show' a sensitive study of aging

Lily Tomlin gives a sensitive portrayal of Margo Sperling in Robert Benton's character study, "The Late Show."

By BYRON BAKER
State News Reviewer

"The Late Show" was originally intended as an affectionate comic reflection upon the traditional private eye genre movie, and to an extent, it functions as such. But for the most part, writer-director Robert Benton has molded his film into a vehicle for the prodigious talents of stars Art Carney and Lily Tomlin.

The result is not nearly as much a detective movie-sensu as a warm character study of an aging quietly, semiretired private dick's relationship with a hyper, talkative habitue of the lower depths of Hollywood. It's a kind of love story.

Ailing former gumshoe Ira Wells (Carney) is living in stasis in a Los Angeles rooming house. Plagued with a recurring ulcer, his memoirs languishing in his typewriter, Ira has retreated from the world. At least, it feels like he has until one-time colleague Harry Regan (Howard Duff, in an effective cameo), appears one night — mortally wounded — at his door. This final encounter leads him into the lives of small-change grifter Charlie Hatter (Bill Macy, of CBS' "Maude") and his some-time business acquaintance, nervously-hip Margo Sperling (Tomlin), who wants Ira to find her stolen cat.

After unwillingly accepting the job, Ira becomes involved with strange underworld intrigues, chiefly founded in a dispute between affable, if murderous, fence-of-all-products Ron Birdwell (Eugene Roche) and his wandering wife (Joanna Cassidy).

The plot is choppy and murky, but "The Late Show" is not very concerned with its problematic narrative. The picture is mostly about Ira and Margo, and the extraordinary comic perception with which these characters are acted by Carney and Tomlin.

Carney seems mated to his role: one can feel the ravage of the passing years, the ulcerated stomach, the gippy leg. Yet the patient and determined will of the investigator, the man's spirit, is clearly, quietly intact. Ira Wells may be a reclusive, reclusive sort, but Carney makes his presence strongly felt.

Margo Sperling is Tomlin's first full-blown film portrayal. Her delicate, intelligent work in Robert Altman's "Nashville" displayed only a fraction of her possibilities as a film actress. Her character Margo draws much more broadly on her flamboyant, but on-target nightclub performances. Shril, spacy, acting-out, Margo's persona seems the quintessence of the LA scene — yet with an insecure, reluctant heart.

Benton has beautifully put his cast through their paces — letting them go, giving them their heads. Benton believes that dialog defines character, and his dialog is brilliant. Crisp, sparkling and clever, the lines do much to restore the lately-tarnished reputation of film literacy. The film is splendidly edited by Lou Lombardo and Peter Appleton, and Ken Wannberg has contributed an atmospheric score. The Warner Brothers picture is at the Michigan Theatre.

Art Carney makes his presence felt as Ira Wells, a former detective-turned-recluse in "The Late Show."

Robert Benton's 'The Late Show' found its way out of a daydream

By BYRON BAKER
State News Reviewer

"I started writing movies because it seemed to me that writing movies isn't like writing. Robert Benton, writer-director of "The Late Show," was in a March conversation in his screenplay is only a blueprint for the movie, and it's really any more than that. I don't ever have to get right about writing," he

Before "The Late Show," Benton had never written a screenplay on his own. Previously he had collaborated with David Newman on "Bonnie & Clyde," "There Was a Frisco Kid," "What's Up, Doc?" and "Bad Company," which Benton directed. He returned to screenwriting as "A Delicate Balance" way to make a living. "The Late Show" is the beginning of a new stream during a meeting with another film: "My mind wandered — as it often does — and I remembered one of my favorite pictures, a Sam Peckinpah film called "Ride The High Country." The picture is set in a lawman in 1900 and how the West changed between 1880 and 1900 and left him behind.

"I thought, what would happen if you took that principle and applied it to a private eye — and showed how this country and Hollywood (the setting of 'Late Show') had changed and left that kind of character in the backwash," he said.

While his partner went off to France to direct a picture, Benton sat down and began to work on his concept. "I think I drew a lot from my father — the major character of Ira himself, and then it was just a matter of sitting there and trying to learn how to write by myself after all the years of collaboration."

Benton reread Raymond Chandler and all of Dashiell Hammett and a good deal of Ross MacDonal — the masters of the hard-boiled detective novel — before starting to write. "I would take down phrases; language has become very important to me, and I wanted the language to always let you know how separate the two leads were." He said that as important as it was for Margo to talk incessantly, it was just as important for Ira to speak minimally.

The script was a long time in development, and there were many setbacks: "The theme of (Robert Altman's 1973 film) 'The Long Goodbye' is very similar to this film, and I thought, 'Well, Altman's done it,' and put the script away for two months."

Eventually, he went back to work on it. "Then 'Chinatown' came out," he continued. "Well, that's the definitive private eye movie, I can't do anything else, so I put it away again," he added with a shrug. "Then (Arthur Penn's film) 'Night Moves' and then 'Farewell, My Lovely,' (were released and) each time I thought, 'Well, that's the end of the genre,'" he said.

Finally he finished the screenplay and his agent sent it off to director Robert Altman, who had begun producing other directors' films. Altman liked the script and suggested Lily Tomlin for the role of Margo.

Benton describes Altman as "very, very supportive." "We only got into one fight," Benton said, "and that was toward the end of the editing process. (continued on page 10)

College hopefuls may lack financial info study

By NANCY JOHALE
State News Staff Writer

About 50 per cent of all high school graduates in Michigan feel they need further study and about 40 per cent of those who go to college apply for financial aid, according to a Michigan Department of Education report.

But those same students may lack information about where to go and how to afford it, the report indicated.

"Some schools are doing an adequate job and others are not," said Ron Jursa, director of Student Financial Assistance Services with the Michigan Department of Education.

Problems are especially apparent, Jursa said, in schools that had to eliminate counselors because of millage losses.

Fewer school counselors one cause

In response to frequent queries from confused parents and students concerning college options and financial aids, the Michigan Department of Education has developed a proposal to channel such information in secondary schools.

The proposal, if approved by the Michigan Board of Education, will be presented to secondary schools on an optional basis.

"We don't want to foist it," Jursa said, "just present it as a possible means of help."

The plan suggests inclusion of information about colleges and financial aid in already existing classes, mini-sessions, and field trips as possible ways schools can help students. Existing resource materials and personnel within Michigan that can help high schools are also included in the proposal.

"We really need help, especially about financial aid," said Jane Treves, junior and senior division counselor at East Lansing high school. "The amount of forms and red tape is so overwhelming."

Treves, who along with one other counselor is responsible for serving the needs of 450 students, has been considering running workshops on financial aid for students and parents.

"With the increasing costs of college," she said, "it is important that people are made aware of options."

Students also must become organized themselves in pursuing information and deciding if college is even a viable choice for the Treves said. MSU's department of financial aid currently helps high school counselors with information.

"Every fall we have meetings with counselors to give them an update on financial aids," said Henry Dykema, director of financial aids.

Dykema said that financial aid is very complicated and confusing to students, parents and counselors.

"Anything that can be put in the hands of counselors to help students is a plus," he said.

Financial aid terminology is something that especially needs to be taught, he said.

"Some students who don't know what work-study is say, 'I'll work like hell studying.'"

City job program passed by council

By GEORGIA HANSHEW
State News Staff Writer

MSU students could earn $3.50 an hour doing clerical, drafting or "general landscaping" work for the City of East Lansing this summer under a work-study program approved Tuesday night by the East Lansing City Council.

The proposed work-study agreement now awaits approval from the MSU Board of Trustees before the city can begin hiring students for the full time, 12-week jobs.

Administrative Asst. Michael Benedict said five city department heads have indicated thus far that they are interested in hiring a total of 12 students.

They are the engineering, planning and building departments, the district court and the city assessor.

Under the terms of the work-study agreement, MSU would pay 80 per cent of the students' compensation and the city would pay the remaining 20 per cent.

The number of students hired will depend on how much federal work-study money MSU can spend on the program, Benedict said.

If the board of trustees signs the agreement, the city will begin making arrangements with MSU's work-study office. Students will apply for the city jobs through that office.

In past years, Benedict said, the city has only been able to hire about five students, all in the engineering department, to do mowing and weeding in the city parks, spreading tar and filling in chuckholes in the streets.

In addition to these kinds of jobs, some students would do clerical work in the district court and building department, and drafting technician work with the planning department.

Students in this program would "get a good-paying summer job," Benedict said. "They would be close to school and wouldn't have to relocate."

"Plus, the job may come in handy in whatever they're going into, especially if they're interested in government."

A summer job as a rubbish-packer gave him a worthwhile experience, he said, even though he is now in an administrative position.

"I know what it is like to work out there and be involved in that kind of activity," he said.

Benedict added that the board of trustees will probably make its decision on the program within "three weeks to a month."

Rightists victorious in Israeli election

Some Likud officials said the West Bank platform was not as tough as it seemed. Likud official Zalman Shoval said his party would agree to a referendum on whether the West Bank should remain under Israeli occupation if withdrawal became a realistic prospect.

But if Likud follows through on its election platform, it could mean increased Jewish settlement in the West Bank, in defiance of U.S. objections, and refusal to discuss withdrawal on the other fronts for less than a full peace treaty.

In the West Bank, Arabs received the news of Begin's triumph glumly. "Begin is a man of war, not of peace," said Kerim Khalaf, mayor of the West Bank town of Ramallah.

The diplomatic community here reacted with amazement at Begin's victory.

"We are as surprised as anyone," said a U.S. diplomat. But he added that he felt no mood of crisis.

"Obviously Begin has different views, but there is a feeling that no one wants the situation in the Middle East to deteriorate," the diplomat said.

At MSU Mordechai Kreinin, professor of economics and a native Israeli, said he sees the outcome of the election as undesirable. "Likud takes a hawkish position in Middle East peace and will give back as little land as possible."

Kreinin said the Likud bloc would probably give back the Sinai Desert for peace, but the party's position on the West Bank territory for peace is questionable because a settlement depends on the coalition government the party forms and U.S. pressure.

Under Israeli law, President Ezer Weizman, who introduced the bill to legalize the use of force by licensed physicians in Michigan, said Monday's action "takes some ferent views, but there is a feeling that no one wants the situation in the Middle East to deteriorate," the diplomat said.

He must then appoint one of the parties to form a coalition.

The Premier designate has a maximum of 42 days to form a ruling alliance.

In other unofficial election results announced Wednesday, ultraorthodox Jewish rabbis took five seats, the same as in 1973.

The Sheli group, an alliance of leftists, managed two seats, the same as in 1973.

The Independent Labor Party plummeted from 14 to 14 seats, the same as in 1973.

The Civil Rights Movement for Peace lost one seat.

Successful daydream results in 'The Late Show'

(continued from page 9) when I still wanted to make a series of changes. Bob got furious, and he said, 'If you try to cut out the mistakes, you will cut out the heart of the picture. Your mistakes are as vital a part of the picture as the things that work, and if you try to eliminate them, what you will really do is destroy the energy this picture has.'"

Benton conceded freely that Altman was right, adding that with free rein he would have probably just finished cutting the film: "It would be a wonderful 20-minute short subject."

The director spoke with great feeling about his cast. He described Art Carney as "the American Ralph Richardson" and referred to Tomlin as "the great American actress of this time — I think there is nothing she cannot do."

"I always viewed the actor as the person who comes in and ruins your lines," he said, stressing that he had learned that "the people connected with the film have the most creative input because they're the ones that get up in front of the camera and make the ludicrous believable."

Benton characterized his job of directing the two as "keeping out of the way."

He admits to the unwieldiness of the film's plot, calling it "incomprehensible."

"The Late Show" started out as a private-eye movie, and it became a love story. I didn't want the plot to get in the way of the movie," he said. Benton confessed that he became so intrigued with the relationship between Ira and Margo when Carney and Tomlin came on to the project, "I stopped caring about it being a private-eye movie."

Next for Robert Benton is "Stab," a modern-day yarn about a female Jack-the-Ripper, which he's writing with David Newman for production this fall. The two have also worked on the script for the $25-million

Study says laetrile ineffective

 The drug would be detained at the point of entry by customs, which would notify the intended recipient. The recipient would then inform the designated recipient of the drug. The recipient would have to submit to the customs an affidavit to get the drug released. The recipient would be required to register with the FDA and be subject to periodic inspection by the agency. What would happen if an FDA inspector found a Michigan drug manufacturer producing Laetrile? The drug manufacturer would be in violation of those parts of the Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act and its amendments which would require filing a New Drug Application the push off the bill." Place said Wednesday even if Welborn's bill passes, Laetrile would not necessarily be produced in Michigan in accordance with federal law. Every Laetrile manufacturer would be required to register with the FDA and be subject to periodic inspection by the agency. What would happen if an FDA inspector found a Michigan drug manufacturer producing Laetrile? The drug manufacturer would be in violation of those parts of the Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act and its amendments which would require filing a New Drug Application

(NDA) and submitting proof of Laetrile's safety and efficacy to FDA, according to Place. "We could probably prove interstate shipment," she said, adding that a drug can only legally escape FDA regulations if there is no importation of ingredients or precursors from other states. "The apricot pits (ingredients for Laetrile production) have to come from somewhere else," she said, adding that Michigan probably does not produce enough apricots for Laetrile production. She said Laetrile could then be legally seized by the FDA and the manufacturer could face prosecution in federal court for violations of the Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act. If brought to trial and found guilty of violating the act, a maximum penalty of one year in jail and a $1,000 fine could be imposed for each count of the indictment.

use of Laetrile last week and Gov. Dolph Briscoe said he would sign the measure within a few days. These legislative actions — along with Welborn's bill — have prompted prominent physicians and scientists to take public stands on Laetrile. Dr. F.J. Ingelfinger, editor of the New England Journal of Medicine, considered the nation's most respected medical journal, wrote in the May 19 issue that as a cancer patient himself, he "would not take Laetrile under any circumstances."

Jay I. Goodman, MSU associate professor of pharmacology whose area of research expertise is cancer chemotherapy, called the Welborn bill "an example of politics in the worse sense. It's based purely on emotion and goes so far as to ignore scientific fact." He also expressed the fear that patients might opt for Laetrile therapy in lieu of conventional treatment. Dr. William G. Tucker, an oncologist (cancer specialist) formerly associated with the National Cancer Institute and now director of the Michigan Cancer Treatment Center, said he felt Laetrile should be put to double-blind efficacy studies with human subjects. "That would put the matter to rest," he said, adding he feared some subjects might be put to rest along with it.

ing violations of the Code of Teaching Responsibility and proposed amendments to the Bylaws For Academic Governance. Both measures were approved by Academic Council May 3.

Hopes of Laetrile proponents grew around the country this week as state Houses of Representatives in Illinois, Washington and Delaware passed bills aimed at legalizing the use of the substance in those states. The Texas state legislature approved the manufacture and

'U' student attacks 3 in Library; arrested, arraigned

According to Pyant, one of her friends told Han to leave Pyant alone. Han stopped, Pyant said and she ran to the librarian on the second floor.

Barb Papazian, a librarian, said she then called DPS.

"I heard a lot of shouting in the stairwell," Papazian said. "A student ran to me and said a man was threatening her and that he was carrying something that looked like a knife. Some other people said he was threatening people in the study area."

Randy Rutkofski, 177 Mc-

Donel Hall, said he was on the phone on the second-floor landing during the incident.

"I heard screaming and heard someone yell 'Bitch.' He was hollering in Japanese or something, but I heard him say 'Bitch,'" Rutkofski said.

Rutkofski said he then saw a woman run by him into the Undergraduate Library on the second floor followed by a man who had a blade in his hand.

"She ran over to the librarian at the reference desk," he said. After the librarian called DPS, Pyant said some of her friends on the second floor hid her from the man who had threatened her.

Sophia Tsilimigras, 351 N. Case Hall, said she was studying on the second floor of the Library when she heard someone yelling, "You! You! You!"

She said an Oriental man came up and told her to turn around and read her book. She said he grabbed her head.

"He rambled something about American customs," Tsilimigras said. "He had a knife at my neck and was yelling stuff."

Keith MacKay, 428 Grove St., said he was on the second floor taking a study break when he saw Han walk in. MacKay watched Han because he recognized him. He said Han was rambling about something when he started yelling at a woman who was studying.

"He yelled, 'Don't look at me,' and he grabbed her head, shoved it in the book and said 'Read this book!'" MacKay said. "Me and two other guys went over and told him to cut it out when he pulled two scalpels.

He said Han then went downstairs where one person tried to take the scalpels away from him. MacKay said a DPS officer, armed with a shotgun, entered the north side of the Library and told Han to "put the knife down."

"He took off between the card catalogs toward the reference desk," MacKay said.

Han stopped at the reference desk, put the scalpels down and started running again.

Police at the front of Library drew their guns and told him to freeze, MacKay said. Han finally stopped and was handcuffed by police.

Han was remanded to Ingham County Jail with a set at $15,000.

Hiss talks at Erickson K

During the McCarthy era the House Un-American Activities Committee served as a forum by which McCarthy interrogated witnesses. Hiss said many witnesses acted "on the premise that demagogues cannot stand ridicule."

McCarthy, Hiss said, had a very high opinion of himself and did not stand to be questioned in any way.
