MSU President Clifton R. Wharton, Jr. will formally propose Winder's appointment to the board sometime today.

"I came to the conclusion that Winder was the best qualified individual for the job," Wharton said in a prepared statement Thursday. "His performance in the demanding role of associate provost, and the respect in which he is held by his faculty colleagues, were the deciding factors in making my recommendation. I am confident that he would provide the strong academic leadership that our University requires in

As provost, Winder will replace Law rence L. Boger, who left MSU earlier this month to become president of Oklahoma State University. Boger had been named provost in August 1976.

A lawsuit may be filed against the Lansing Police Department (LPD) by Helen Edith Weller, the mother of an Owosso man who was shot and killed by a Lansing police officer on while police attempted to arrest him, Weller's attorney said Thursday

Clark Shanahan, who was retained by Weller after she learned of her son's (Michael Smith) death over the radio on May 11, said if Weller did not get "satisfaction" about the way her son's burial and notification of relatives was handled, she may file the suit. Smith was buried at state expense in Okemos on May 9 after police notified his father of the death. Weller has been divorced for 25 years. "The police didn't even notify me of my son's death, and I know they had my pho number because they called me before when he had been arrested," Weller said. "He (Harry Smith) didn't want to have anything to do with Mike, so when the police called him, he said he didn't care what they did with him or how the funeral arrangements would be handled. So Mike was buried at state expense without any family at the funeral." Stemming from action taken by Rep. Francis R. Spaniola, D-Owosso, Smith's body was eventually exhumed and buried in Owosso, also at state expense.

Shanahan sent a letter on behalf of Weller to the Lansing City Council on June 13 requesting the council to look into the handling of Smith's burial and notification of "The needlessness of the death and the thoughtless handling of the burial arrangements

Aid bill bars trade with Cuba

WASHINGTON (AP) - The House voted Thursday to prohibit any U.S. trade or aid with Cuba and backed aid for Korea as it passed a trimmed down foreign aid appropriations bill.

Earlier, the House added Angola and Mozambique to the list of countries it wants to exclude from getting even indirect U.S. aid through international banks. In doing so, it defied the wishes of President Jimmy Carter and its own leaders.

The House rejected an effort to cut $45 million from U.S. aid to Korea after Majority Leader Jim Wright argued that coming on top of Carter's planned pullout of U.S. ground forces, it would "send shock waves through Asia."

He said then that since he had not had the opportunity to go on a honeymoon with his fifth wife since their marriage in 1975, he intended to take a week off to do so.

The mystery surrounding Amin's whereabouts began last Monday when one of Kenya's leading newspapers, the Daily Nation, reported the Ugandan was missing following an alleged weekend assassination attempt. The newspaper quoted Vice President Gen. Mustafa Adrisi as saying Amin was missing and troops and police were searching for him.

USSR stands firm on Helsinki pact

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — The Soviet Union issued a blunt warning Thursday that review of the 1975 Helsinki agreement could break down if Moscow's version of how to proceed is rejected, Western diplomats said.

Chief Soviet delegate Yuri Vorontsov refused to budge on the wording of a proposal the West considers an attempt to minimize scrutiny on the human rights record of Communist Eastern Europe.

The Soviet Union stood firm with five of its Warsaw Pact allies — East Germany, Poland, Bulgaria, Hungary and Czechoslovakia — at the 35-nation meeting preparing for a conference this fall on how the Helsinki agreement is being

The agreement, officially known as the Helsinki Final Act, climaxed an extended conference on European security and included a section promoting human rights and greater East-West contact. It was signed at a summit meeting by the United States and Canada and 33 nations of East and West Europe, including the Soviet Union.

Many Western diplomats were taken aback when Vorontsov warned the conference that if delegates persisted in their "light attitude" toward the Helsinki document, it could lead to "great unpleasantness" and "failure of our mis-

The Commerce Department took the unusual step of denying Control Data Corp. of Minneapolis a license to export a Cyber 76 computer system to the Soviet Union for use in weather research.

The reason for the decision, the department said, "is the powerful computer's potential for significant military application and the absence of satisfactory safeguards to detect and prevent diversion of the system to such uses."

The sale was rejected after extensive consultation with the State and Defense departments and the Energy Research and Development Administration.

MEASURE NOW MOVES TO SENATE

Panel approves PBB bill

LANSING (UPI) - The Senate Appropriations Committee Thursday approved legislation designed to remove all but the tiniest traces of PBB from Michigan meat and milk, paving the way for final Senate action on the measure.

Most members of the panel said they believe the measure is necessary to restore consumer confidence and to get rid of any risk of possible health dangers.

But most also agreed there was little evidence that a health problems exists from the small amounts of PBB that remain in some of Michigan's dairy animals from a contamination incident that occurred nearly four years ago.

The Appropriations Committee approved the measure on an 8-0 vote with few changes from a version approved earlier by the Senate Committee on Agricultural and Consumer

The Senate version, however, represents substantial changes from a measure approved earlier by the House, and the two documents will have to be reconciled in a joint conference committee if the full Senate approves it. Under the bill, all dairy cows culled from herd for meat production that were born before Jan. 1 of 1976 would have to be tested. If PBB above the level of .02 parts per million were found in the tissue, the animal would be destroyed and the farmer reimbursed at an average cost of $300 to $400.

All dairy cows producing milk with more than .005 parts per million of PBB would have to be taken out of production by their owners.

Appropriations members defeated a move to raise the meat tolerance level to .05 - alevel which proponents said would be more reliable and defensible in court.

Opponents, however, said public confidence would be better served by approving the lowest level possible. In testimony on the bill Wednesday, Gov. William G. Milliken's chief environmental deputy — Natural Resources Director Howard Tanner — had said he believes the greatest danger from PBB is long past and that the measure could be a waste of

That personal stand, spelled out in Tanner's first testimony to the legislature on the PBB issue, puts him in direct conflict with his boss — Gov. William G. Milliken.

Michigan's first PBB trial began a four-week recess Thursday with some participants predicting the four-month-old trial may run through next January.

CINCINNATI, Ohio (UPI) federal appeals court Wednesday vacated a lower court ed a lower court order stipulating that a family planning center in Lansing, Mich., must notify parents before dispensing birth control services to

The 6th Circuit Court of Appeals remanded the case to U.S. District Judge Noel P. Fox of Grand Rapids for reconsideration in light of a June 9 Supreme Court ruling striking down New York State's law prohibiting the sale of contraceptives to minors

At issue in both cases was the constitutional right to privacy.

In a decision handed down March 7, Fox prohibited the tax-supported Tri-County Family Planning Center in Lansing from providing contraceptives and birth control counseling to minors on a confidential basis.

He stopped short of requiring parental consent for such services because of an earlier Supreme Court ruling on abortions for minors, but said parents must at least be notified.

In appealing the case, the Michigan branch of the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) cited the Supreme Court ruling that legalized over-the-counter sale of contraceptives to minors.
"We thought that decision would help us and it did," said Howard Simo executive director of the Michigan ACLU.

"We think this is a victory. We believe they (the appeals court) are saying that Judge Fox is in error and they are giving him an opportunity — pointing specifically at the New York case - to change his mind."

A suit was filed against the family planning center in April, 1975, by the parents of an unnamed 15-year-old girl who had been given contraceptives by the clinic without their knowledge.

Fox ruled that excluding parents from decision-making in granting con-traceptives to their children may in-"in the mind of the child, a deception of parents.

In appealing the case, the ACLU said the constitutional guarantee of privacy grants persons the freedom to make a choice regarding contraception.

It also cited an April 11 study released by the state Department of Public Health, a defendant in the suit, showing that more than 42 per cent of girls between 15 and 19 have regular sexual relations. Of those, the study showed, 75 per cent are unmarried and most are running the risk of unwanted

House votes to prevent tax rollback

LANSING (UPI) - The state House on Thursday narrowly approved legislation preventing a rollback in the state income tax scheduled to take effect next week.

On a 55-49 vote - the minimum number needed for passage — the House sent to the Senate legislation to keep the personal income tax at 4.6 per cent, rather than allowing it to drop to 4.4 per cent.

The state income tax was increased from 3.9 to 4.6 per cent in 1975 to compensate for revenues lost through repeal of the sales tax on food and prescription drugs. At that time, lawmakers provided that the tax rate would slump to 4.4 per cent on July 1, 1977.

For some time, however, state officials have predicated their spending plans on the assumption that the scheduled cut would be repealed.

The controversial bill preventing the rollback was the subject of extended negotiations between the majority Democrats and minority Republicans and of considerable lobbying on the part of Republican Gov. William G. Milliken.

An amendment to the bill provides that the tax will fall to 4.4 per cent if the legislature does not approve the so-called "rainy day" budget fund proposal.

A commitment to that concept by Democrats was the key to Republican support for the income tax measure. The rainy-day fund would force the state to save money during good economic years for use in leaner times.

If the tax rollback takes place, the state stands to lose about $24 million in anticipat ed revenue in the current fiscal year and $85 million in the fiscal year beginning Oct.

State budget officials say that such a revenue loss would have a devastating effect on the state's spending plans

The bill now goes to the Senate where its future is uncertain because of the ambivalent attitude of Senate Finance Committee Chairperson Patrick McCollough, D-Dearborn, whose panel must approve the

Busing: White Might v. The Rule of Law

"(No state shall) deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws. - 14th amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

The road to racial equality in the United States is a torturous one, fraught with obstacles and set-

Legally, this country has come a long way since President Dwight D. Eisenhower articulated his racial philosophy for the late Supreme Court Chief Justice Earl Warren: "These (southerners opposing school desegregation) are not bad people. All they are concerned about is to see that their sweet little girls are not required to sit in school alongside some big overgrown Negroes."

Legal progress notwithstanding, racism and racial segregation still thrive - less tangibly, perhaps, but in many respects more insidiously than ever before. Now, the U.S. House - abetted by increasingly retrogressive Supreme Court decisions and a generally supportive public — has thrown a potentially divisive legal roadblock in the path of school desegregation.

The House has voted to prohibit the Carter Administration from districts that try to circumvent busing orders.

The effect of this legislation (the Senate is expected to pass a comparable bill shortly) is problematic. Nearly all busing is ordered by federal courts on constitutional grounds, and is therefore immune to legislative withholding federal funds to school busing can be prohibited altogether, and will undoubtedly breed further racial animosity.

One member of Congress, peeved at the Carter Administration's apparent pro-busing tilt, accused the president of turning "legalistic sommersaults" to "circumvent the will of Congress.'

Such rhetoric illustrates the public's inability to grasp the underlying constitutional significance of the busing controversy. ment — specifically, the Department of Health, Education and will of Congress," Carter and the busing proponents are seeking to funds from those districts which uphold the legacy of the 1954 Supreme Court decision (Brown v. edicts may raise false hopes that Board of Education) which ordered that schools be desegregated "With all deliberate speed."

In countless cases, busing is the only means of fulfilling this requirement, since school districts in both the North and South have historically been racially segregated as matters of artifice or deliberate public policy.

Contrary to widespread belief, there is absolutely nothing in the Constitution either mandating or encouraging the so-called "neighborhood school" concept. There are, moreover, numerous Supreme Court interpretations of the equal protection clause of the 14th Amendment, starting with the learn to live together.

1954 decision, that call for an end to discrimination where public funds are involved.

Inasmuch as schools are publicly funded institutions, it would actually be unconstitutional not to bus in cases where deliberate segregation has been proved. That is the crux of the matter, and the reason why busing is, in most cases, both constructive and ne-

In 1974, the Supreme Court, by a vote of 5-4, effectively banned cross-district busing as a means of rectifying unconstitutional segregation. This judgment was an exceedingly poor one, since many districts - the city of Detroit, for example - are predominately black. Busing within the boundaries of that city would obviously do little to break the tenacious segregation stranglehold.

In February, the U.S. Civil Rights Commission issued a report calling for busing across city, county and even state lines to desegregate schools. The commission documented historical examples of policy-makers effecting deliberately segregated housing patterns, and asserted "We have come too far toward vindicating at last the promise of equal justice under the law to turn back now.

We agree. Unfortunately, the Supreme Court, public demeanor and politicians more attuned to their own fluxing political fortunes than the bedrock principles of constitutional law do not. The school buses will continue to roll, but only after evading more and increasingly cynical legal roadblocks

Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall perhaps summed it up best: "Unless our children begin to learn together, there is little hope that our people will ever

Wise council decision

The decision by MSU's Academic Council on June 7 to reven Student Council vote that would have deleted guaranteed mind representation for at-large council representatives was commended.

As the University's major academic governing body, it is only fit and proper that Academic Council — which includes Faculty Cou Student Council and the Steering Committee — tap the broa possible reservoir of student interests and talent. Since the Unive community is predominantly white, there is good reason to believe whites have the best chance to be elected to the at-large position.

There are those who reject this proposition, pointing out that stu apathy, coupled with the fact that a vast majority of students would it impossible to associate names of candidates with faces, makes it that a student, no matter what his or her ethnic or racial persuasion as good a chance to be elected as anyone else.

In addition, proponents of deleting the minority guarantees a that these provisions constitute reverse discrimination against

There may be a grain of validity in this allegation, and it is cert true that most students are ignorant of the backgrounds of candidates. Consider, however, the fact that the power structure of University — indeed, of society as a whole — is still dominated by males. This is true despite valiant efforts at implementing affirm action programs and at raising the public consciousness to a fundamental appreciation of the plight of minorities.

Deleting guaranteed minority representation, while potentially subversive of minority rights, would certainly not assist progress in way. Keeping the guarantees will in no way hamper the inclusi white males into Academic Council, except in those seats designat belonging to minorities.

Students oppose film project

By THE COMMITTEE TO STOP THE MSU-IRAN FILM PROJECT

Once again the student movement is on the rise. Campuses around the country have erupted in solidarity with the struggle of people in the Third World to oppose the involvement of the U.S. government and universities in the maintainance of corporate investments in these countries. At Stanford, Berkley, the University of Massachusetts and many other schools, the focus has been on South Africa. Here at MSU, the focus has been on South Africa or Iran: We recognize our interests as American students intertwined with the interests of Third World people - one common struggle for social justice.

At MSU, thousands of students have opposed the Iran film project through petitions, demonstrations and demands to the board of trustees to terminate the contract. When the board of trustees ignored the demands of over 7,000 students, it identified tself with the most repressive government in the world. Over 40,000 political prisoners fill the Shah's prisons, inhuman torture is commonplace and vast oil revenues are squandered on military hardware while most of the Iranian people scrape by with little or no food, housing or health care. The Shah's economic policies have allowed the transnational corporations to bleed Iran of its wealth. People around the world are significantly denouncing the Shah's reign or terror, making the regime increasingly isolated. Any involvement with the Shah (such as the film project) not only expresses support for his dictatorial rule and lends to its legitimacy, it also weakens the attempt to isolate that regime.

On Saturday, June 11, we, The Committee To Stop The MSU-Iran Film Project, attempted to expose the hypocrisy of the board of trustees and publicize the University's support of the Shah's regime to the thousands of people who attended graduation ceremonies and heard Andrew Young. We felt that this was an appropriate time to show our objection to this University, which professes a concern for academic freedom, and then turns around and supports a government which tramples all academic freedoms. The same holds true for the Carter Administration. It talks h rights while it supports what Amnesty International calls "the most repressive regime in the world," Iran.

Meanwhile, just like U.S. foreign policy, MSU supports through its international programs — other repressive govern-ments around the world, including Brazil, Uruguay, South Korea

Until the termination of the Iran Film Project and all MSU projects with the repressive regimes — as well as the severing of ties with all repressive governments — MSU's talk of academic freedom and Carter's "concern" for human rights are just empty called "the force," the story maintains its own distinct logic. "Star Wars" isn't really a science fiction movie. Indeed, Lucas has intimated that his film has more to do with disclaiming science than anything else. The narrative is mostly told through the experiences of young Luke Skywalker (played by Mark Hamill, late of "The Texas Wheelers" vidseries) of the arid and barren planet Tatooine. His life is tedious, and he yearns for the adventure of the stars. He gets his opportunity — in spades — when he encounters two robots: C-3 P O, a tall, spindly and talkative machine sporting a British accent (he is, after all, programmed for diplomacy), and R 2-D 2, a squat 'droid about the shape and size of a 55 gallon drum, which communicates via expressive electronic boops and

The latter robot carries a vital holographic message from the beauteous Princess Leia (Carrie Fisher, who propositioned Warren Beatty in her big scene in "Shampoo") for the legendary old wizard Obi -Wan Kenobi (Alec Guinness, who gives the role weight and stature), who is rumored to live somewhere in the wasteland hills of Luke's planet.

The message is a plea from the freedom-loving rebel sanction of the galaxy for old Kenobi to come out of seclusion and help stop the evil Darth Vader (a seven foot-tall figure cloaked in metallic black) and the Grand Moff Tarkin (Peter Cushing, a splendidly evil presence) of the dictatorial Galactic Empire from gaining total control of the solar system. But the Princess has been captured by Vader and his Stormtroopers, and is being held in the Empire's gigantic space station, the Death Star.

Luke, Kenobi and the two oddly personable robots resolve to act, and hire raffish soldierof-fortune Han Solo (Harrison Ford, who played Bob Falfa in Lucas' "American Graffiti") and his huge, hairy Wookie co-pilot to skipper them to the scene in Solo's hyperspacecraft, the Millenium Falcon.

And, friends - that's only the beginning of the story.

The film is sumptuously produced. Production designer John Barry (who designed "A Clockwork Orange" for Stanley Kubrick) constructed 45 sets over eleven sound stages, as the "Star Wars" company virtually took over England's Elstree studios, as well as doing location work in Tunisia. Barry's imaginative neo-futuristic designs (often refreshingly weathered and beaten-looking, in welcome contrast to decades of shiny, polished movie space sets and vehicles) are at once fantastic and realistic appear-

Gil Taylor's photography is hard-edged and luminous, but the really stunning aspect of the picture's visual scheme is the special effect work by John Dykstra and his Industrial Light & Magic company. Though the effects in "Star Wars" are possibly not as utterly perfect or clear as those in "2001: A Space Odyssey," there are more of them, and they are more elaborate. The highlight spacecraft dogfight that climaxes the film has no peer in motion pictures. Aided by a complex computer programmed camera system, Dykstra's animation of models is flawless, and the editing by Marcia Lucas, Paul Hirsch and Richard Chew is precise and

The performances are functional, but the film's thrust is toward a visual interpretation of its narrative. In truth, the visuals are so vivid and rich. that one wishes Lucas could dwell upon some of his vignettes for awhile longer. An entire picture might have been wrought from a sequence set in a cantina near a spaceport, wherein the detritus of the galaxy's pilots — weirdly shaped denizens of the lower depths of the universe - come to drink and brawl.

The Twentieth Century -Fox release is at the Meridian 8 Theatres.

helpful advice, in the Boarshead Theater's production of Woody Allen's "Play it again, Sam", directed by Phil Heald. The play runs through July third, at the Ledges in Grand Ledge.

'Play it again, Sam' encores to applause

By JOE PIZZO State News Reporter

Woody Allen's "Play it again, Sam" is the story of a neurotic in search of consensual validation - emphasis on the sensual This Broadway stage hit chronicled the misadventures of a cinephiliac schlemiel Allan Felix (familiar to all his film fans) who searches for fulfillment and a satisfactory sex life - not necessarily in that order - with the assistance of his fantasy 'mentor, Humphrey Bogart. The Boars Head Theater's production is faithful to Allen's play in nearly every respect.

B. Douglas Schriner is an example of good casting, both in physical type and dramaturgically. He brings the character of Allan Felix — the neurotic, eternally-analyzing Valium-gulping mass of anxieties, fears and inadequacies - not only to life, but to proper emotional ill-health as well. He is joined i.. this dramaturgic folie a deux by Linda Christie, played ably and with just the right touch of vulnerability by Kristie Thatcher.

In the course of the play, with Bogie in the background in tableaux, Felix becomes a sort of Eliza Doolittle to Bogev's

Henry Higgins. And while he never becomes a "tower of strength", a "battleship", or the fit consort for a crowned head of Europe, he does realize he can be accepted for what his is - analyst, anxieties, and ataractics. Not every production of this work projects this, and it is to the credit of the repertory mpany and their guest artists effectively. His production is marked by brisk pacing, well-coordinated blocking and appropriate lighting. However, Dolly Porter's costumes lack the look of late sixties chic that characterizes the play's era.

The Boars Head production will run through July 3 at the playhouse in Grand Ledge. Curtain is at 8:30 p.m. Tickets may be reserved

Steele chasing 3rd Superstars title

By TOM SHANAHAN

State News Sports Writer The third annual Brandywine Superstars competition Saturday and Sunday is on as scheduled, despite its organizing problems in the spring.

And the only defending champion the Superstars competition has known, former MSU trackman Bob Steele, will be back looking for a third first prize. Steele was also a twotime NCAA champion in the 440-yard hurdles in 1966-67. He has competed internationally and made a bid for the 1972 Olympics.

Steele has taken home two cars for his Superstars wins, but this year he and the 46 others entered will be pursuing the first prize of $1,200.

Other big names and supporters of Superstars are Detroit Lions cornerback Lem Barney, Detroit Pistons guard Ralph Simpson, MSU sprinter Herb Washington and New York Giants, linebacker Brad Van Pelt. Simpson played basketball for the Spartans, while Van Pelt was a two-time all American at MSU.

MSU all-American hockey player Steve Colp, now playing in the U.S. hockey league, is also expected to compete.

The dominance by MSU ath letes may be a sign of the future of Superstars as it looks for a new home next year:

"The Superstars have be come a chance for the athletes once a year to compete for prizes and have a lot of fun," on-site Coordinator Don Bolhuis said. "What we'd like to do with it is take it to the University as a competition for MSU athletes who have been gone for a few years. That's where our hearts lie because it's a natural for them with their set-up and facilities,"

Bolhuis said that he would like to work out an arrange-connected with the future Superstars, Bolhuis will stay on the coordinator. Bolhuis praised Brandywine for getting Superstars off the ground, especially the first year when it

Last year the money raised from the Superstars competition was donated to Alsac, which was approximately $500 to $1,000. The first year set Brandywine back $2,100.

The 10-event meet gets started Saturday morning at 7 a.m. at the Royal Scot Golf Course. Other events are swimming. tennis, pool, bowling, rowing, half-mile run, weightlifting, 60yard dash and the obstacle

Each contestant picks seven of the 10 events in which to compete.

The 60-yard dash will prove interesting with Washington. Steele and Barney entered, among others. It will be run at 2 p.m. at the Brandywine Apart-

Tickets are $1 for all events and this year the money raised will go to handicapper children and the Special Olympics. The Superstars have already donated $1,278 to the Beekman Center from the money already

"We have some of the top athletes in the state coming, Bolhuis said. He said that winners of similiar superstars competition in Muskegon, Bay City, Grand Rapids, Flint and another from Chicago are expected this weekend

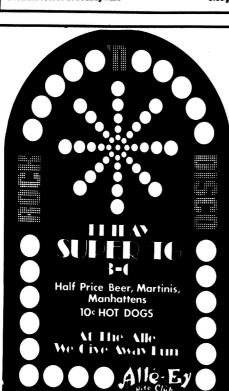

Another MSU all-American that is presently uncommitted is Spartan hockey star Tom Ross. Ross has been having knee problems, while playing minor league hockey this past winter. Bolhuis added that the Su-

Superstars' potential exists with alumni

The State News sports page will be weak

There just aren't any national champion-bips being decided in the college ranks wing the summer. Also two of the best ports writers that State News has had, polition of the production of itaker reached that magical MSU figure of

That leaves local sports to be covered in he summer since deadlines prevent any kind adequate coverage of the Tigers.

And one of Lansing's most interesting numer events, the Brandywine Superstars mpetition, may mean even one less story ext summer if it can't find a new home.

Coordinator Don Bolhuis wants to take the rent to MSU next year and athletic director le Kearney has shown an initial interest. If it is run professionally it could become a mer classic in the Lansing area because it as all the ingredients.

It could become a classic because it is not ordinary sporting event. Now that it's coming dominated by MSU athletes, it's a hance for those athletes that knew each ther in school to compete against each other.
After all there are a lot of all-Americans that MSU has turned out in all sports. The nrsity alumni football game showed that here's always a lot of interest by alumni to ome back to the campus.

And there are a lot of Lansing area novices at like to get in on the act with the MSII

But probably who it's the most fun for is ctators who come out to see the superstars, and particularily the young

It's an opportunity for them to get close to athletes, talk to them and get autographs because of the informal atmosphere surrounding the Superstars competition. The athletes are usually out mingling amongst the crowd in the same type of setting a track

But the stars do take the events seriously and train hard to get ready for what is now the third annual Superstars.

Last year the Lions' all-pro cornerback Lem Barney, jumped off the top of the 12-foot obstacle wall. Usually the athletes hang down the wall before dropping to the ground, but Barney got caught up in the fun at Superstars and risked an injury to catch up even though it was just a couple of weeks before the Lions opened practice.

If the meet can run smoothly after some of its organizing problems it should be another interesting Saturday and Sunday at Brandywine Apartments. It might even be more interesting if Bob Steele doesn't run away from the field for his third straight win.

This year Superstars is emphasizing getting as many people out as possible and has reduced the price of tickets to $1. But there will be concessions to try to make up the lost charity revenue at the gate since tickets were higher priced previous years. And they're also handing out frisbees with the $1 tickets which makes it all the more an informal picnic atmosphere in the sun (if it

Ramirez, who used a pain-killing spray on an injured stomach muscle, saved eight match points against Gullikson, before folding on the ninth when he caught the wood.

Gullikson, ranked only 45th in the United States, should have wrapped it up in the fourth set. But he rushed two backhands at match points to set up a tie-break, where he had two more only to put forehands long and lose it 9-7.

By the end of the match, the American was suffering badly from cramps but Ramirez was possibly in worse shape and though he played the big points well in the final set, Gullikson was always in charge and the Mexican's defeat was inevitable.

Arts workshop offers classes

Dance instructors Donna Kost and Darcy Brown lead a demonstration of aerobic dancing.

Various forms of dance, yoga, crafts and music were dis-played Wednesday night at the open house of the East Lansing Arts Workshop, held in the old Marble School building.

The workshop held the open house to publicize its fifth year of offering arts instruction to people of all ages in East Lansing.

Demonstrations were given in many different art forms. including guitar playing, pottery, zinc and copper etching, glass cutting, printmaking and

The workshop will offer 48 different arts classes to adults this summer, as well as special classes and programs for children, including an art media exploration program for pre-schoolers and a fine arts camp for children aged 6-12.

Dorothy Wells, president of the workshop, said she expects that over 300 students, including children, will be enrolled in the workshop's programs this summer.

The response this year has been much better than we at first anticipated," she said.

Wells noted the teachers are all working artists, and have a large degree of latitude on exactly what they will teach in their classes.

They're independent contractors," she said, "and we don't tell them how to teach. They teach what they want, in the way they want."

Wells noted the workshop has faced financial difficulties ever since its founding in 1972. but that community support has kept it going.

"The community has been very supportive," she said.

The workshop is headquartered in the old Marble School building at Burcham and Hagadorn roads. The building was closed down some years ago, when a larger new Marble School was opened across the street. The East Lansing school district, however, has rented the old building to the arts workshop at the rate of only one dollar per year.

"We are also now working under a city grant of $8,000 per year," said Tina Oxer, secretary of the workshop.

A city arts commission, recently created by East Lansing voters, will also oversee the

College Week stresses leadership as annual program ends in success

By LINDA BRAY State News Staff Writer

College Week, a four-day continuing education program stressing leadership development, ended Thursday with favorable reactions from

One 32-year veteran of the annual program claimed College Week gets better every year. Initiated in 1924 as a short course for women, the program now offers courses ranging from "Presidential Religion and American Self-Understanding" to "Making Marriage Better."

Participants attended daily mini-classes and lived in dormitories. Most of the 1,240 registrants planned a schedule of three courses from

Ages of participants were as varied as the program, including women from 18 to 83.

The family oriented program enabled women from the Upper Peninsula, the inner city and the wealthy community to rub shoulders while attending classes, eating together and living in Eighty-one of the 83 counties in Michigan participated in the program. Costs for the week were $60 for live in students, $18 for commuters and $9 for one-day visitors.

A typical day of College Week started with an "Eye Opener" breakfast in Akers or Hubbard dining room and continued with classes until lunch. Demonstrations on how to paint china, clinics on blood pressure and diabetes testing and filmstrips on breast cancer and self-examination were some of the additional attractions which were interspersed throughout the day-long Campus tours and field trips were held after class activities. Nights were often spent on bus trips to the Okemos Barn Theatre or in bull sessions in the dormitories.

Wilma Miller, program coordinator of College Week, said much of the learning is done in the

"The women share a lot from their classroom speriences and from living in dorms with different types of people," she said.

The program was sponsored by Family Living Education of the Cooperative Extension Service.

Clinton County deputy suspended

LANSING (UPI) - A Clinton County Sheriff's deputy has been suspended following the shooting death of a 20-year-old Bath Township man officers were trying to arrest on a felony warrant.

A sheriff's department spokesperson said Spencer Stull was shot and fatally wounded Tuesday night when officers from the county and Bath Township went to a home in Bath Township about eight miles north of city limits to arrest Stull.

Police said several shots were fired at the officers. The deputy who was suspended, as is customary when a fatal shooting occurs, was not immediately identified.

Stull was taken by ambulance to Sparrow Hospital and died about two hours after being wounded. The man was wanted for larceny.

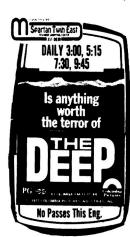

No policemen were wounded. The incident was being investigated by state police and the sheriff's department

Milliken says he will battle abortion foes

LANSING (UPI) - Gov. William G. Milliken says he will fight the powerful anti-abortion bloc in the legislature over the issue of state Medicaid funds to pay for abortions on poor women.

"What we would really be doing in this case is discriminating against the poor." Milliken said Wednes-

Abortion foes in the legislature began moving to out-law state Medicaid payments for abortions in the wake of this week's U.S. Supreme Court ruling that states aren't required to mother's life is in danger.
