N council favors Vietnam admission

WASHINGTON (AP) - Congress has taken a historic step toward normalizing relations with Vietnam.

The House voted 313-104 Thursday to declare its "good faith" in the Asian nation and open the door to diplomatic relations.

The vote came a day after the Senate passed a similar resolution. Both actions are expected to pave the way for closer ties with Vietnam.

The resolution, which needs Senate approval, would allow the U.S. to conduct talks with Vietnam on a variety of issues.

The measure, which comes as the U.S. and other nations struggle to find ways to improve relations with Vietnam, has been praised by both sides.

The resolution was introduced by Rep. Richard A. Gephardt, D-Mo., the No. 3 leader in the House. It was cosponsored by Rep. James Oberstar, D-Minn., who chairs the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

The resolution sets a precedent that could lead to greater cooperation between the two countries.

The vote comes as the U.S. and Vietnam are making efforts to improve relations.

In May, the U.S. and Vietnam signed an agreement to establish a "full and frank" dialogue.

The agreement is expected to help the two countries address issues such as human rights, economic development and security.

The resolution was supported by both sides, with some lawmakers expressing concerns about Vietnam's human rights record.

But overall, the vote was seen as a positive step for both countries.

The resolution would allow the U.S. to send a high-level delegation to Vietnam to discuss issues such as trade, investment and security.

The resolution also calls for increased cooperation in areas such as counterterrorism,禁毒, and environmental protection.

The House resolution was unveiled by House Speaker John Boehner, R-Ohio, and Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, D-Nev., who introduced a similar resolution in the Senate.

The measure is expected to be voted on in the Senate next week.

The resolution would be the first of its kind in more than four decades, when the U.S. and Vietnam had diplomatic relations.

The resolution is seen as a key step in efforts to improve relations between the two countries.

17 KILLED IN BORDER CLASH

Thai battle Cambodians

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — The fierce battle off a restive section of the Thai-Cambodian border escalated Wednesday. Thai and Cambodian soldiers exchanged machine gun and mortar fire on the border, and both sides claimed several deaths among their troops.

"We have suffered heavy losses," a Thai army officer, who asked that his name not be published, told the Associated Press. "We have lost several men and many wounded."

Thailand claimed it had killed several Cambodian soldiers and that the Cambodians had made a "stupid mistake" by advancing. "We also received several mortar shells from the Cambodian side," the officer said.

At the center of the Thai-Cambodian dispute are villages near the border that are claimed by both nations. The Thai army said it had launched a "punishment" operation in response to an "attack" by Cambodians.

For the second day in a row, Thai troops have been shooting across the border, wounding several Cambodian soldiers, according to the Thai military.

The border is one of the most volatile in the world, with frequent outbreaks of violence.

President sees solid relations as policy goal

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — President Carter, who has bandied about the possibility of a "megarun" in the next election, said Wednesday he is thinking of running for a third term in 1980.

"I haven't made up my mind," Carter said, "and I don't want to do that now."

But he added, "I'm thinking of it. It's not a pipe dream."

Carter said he is weighing the "realities of politics," and the "realities of a campaign for the presidency."

"I'm not sure," he said, "that it would be realistic for me to run a campaign for the presidency."

Carter, who is expected to announce his decision on whether to seek the nomination in about a month, said he has "thought about it a great deal."

Punishing ‘Chaos’

The students of NEH Holdi Hall who participated in the violent clash deserve to be heard from in a way that isn’t overdone. At the same time, it is urgent that University officials, PU president, and all others responsible for this damage now find themselves on a very long and steep road. This is an apparatus that the floor is named in honor of the President who was deposed from power and destroyed for property reigned there. Such an activity culminated in a few days, and subsequent events have taken us to the point of deciding and diligently the contents of that hall’s fire together, making the points even greater.

The decline is unprecedented, malicious damage in the residence since the hall damage committees were instituted but the encouraging. But, Underwood’s committee and respected administration to alleviate the situation “Chas” proved false. Part of the blame for the horrendous conditions on NEH Holdi be placed on the students who did not directly have a hand in it but delayed a reveal in the news of who did or purpose to the change. However, the punishment in this case outweighs the crime. Alternatives would be for the University to permit these students to have had an hand in the destruction to return to campus housing, more than they are separated in different dormitories. A similar plan arrived at is relevant to the vandalism that plagued NEH Holdi 3 years ago.

These students who committed the vandalism, however, deserve sympathy. If they must on destroying public property, let their antagonism elsewhere.

Rape victims win court victory

Those seeking to legitimize Michigan’s medieval rape laws in the unique history won a significant victory Tuesday when the Michigan Court of Appeals upheld a lower court’s decision to defend lawyers from questioning rape victims about their private affairs. As the court noted, “The rape victims’ sexual activity is in no way productive of the victim’s credibility or veracity.” Rape is a crime of violence, such as murder or assault. Forcing several sexual behavior have been attached to this crime, in the eyes of society and justice, has proven detrimental to the victim’s integrity. A rape victim who is forced to dis- close the details of her sex-life is effectively put on trial herself, and all too often she is portrayed by incompetent defense lawyers as the provocateur and instigator of the crime.

The court’s ruling indicates that this heightened mentality will no longer influence jury deliberations and consequences the laws. We applaud the court’s foresight in this matter.

VIEWPOINT: AUTOMOBILE SAFETY

Government promoting highway slaughter

By BENJAMIN REDMOND

Relatively few months, there are 3,000 automobile-related deaths in the United States. The automobile has become a more important means of transportation in recent decades, leading to increased road traffic. However, the safety of automobile drivers and passengers remains a concern, with many accidents resulting in fatalities or severe injuries. The government is promoting highway slaughter by promoting policies that prioritize the expansion of road infrastructure over the safety of motorists and pedestrians. This includes decisions that reduce funding for road safety measures such as improving signage, maintaining guardrails, and creating designated bike lanes.

Calling your loved ones

by ART BUCHWALD

Art Buchwald has always wanted to talk to his wife, the woman who is always there for him. He wants to make her feel special and unique. He wants to tell her how much he loves her and how much she means to him. He wants to know what she is thinking and how she is feeling. He wants to be with her every day, to hold her hand and to talk to her. But, he knows that she is not always there. He knows that she is busy, that she has other responsibilities, that she has to take care of herself. He wants to make her feel special and unique, to make her feel loved and appreciated. He wants to show her that he cares, that he loves her, that he needs her in his life. He wants to make her feel special and unique, to make her feel loved and appreciated. The Triangular Cell: IMHO, but honest failure

By JOHN WALKER

I must confess that my first reaction to the Royal Oak Civic Theatre's production of "The Triangular Cell" was one of curiosity. How could anyone possibly stage a play about a murder trial in a way that would be both entertaining and informative? After all, the plot is based on a true story, and the characters are not exactly sympathetic. But I was determined to give it a fair hearing.

The play begins with the trial of a man named Riccardo, who is accused of murdering his wife. The defense team consists of two attorneys, one of whom is played by a student named John Smith. The lead plaintiff is played by Ms. Linda Johnson, who is the murder victim's sister. The trial takes place in a courtroom, and the audience is asked to sit in the defendant's box.

As the trial progresses, we learn more about the murder and the personalities of the participants. We also see how the defense team is trying to create a sympathetic image of their client, even though he is clearly guilty. The lead attorney, played by Mr. Charles Brown, is particularly persuasive, and he manages to get the jury to vote for acquittal.

But the true story of the trial is more complex than that. The defense team also succeeds in getting the judge to declare a mistrial, which allows Riccardo to escape justice. It was a shock to the audience when we realized that this was the true outcome of the trial.

The play ends with a scene in which Riccardo is seen walking out of the courtroom, his arms outstretched, and his attorney standing next to him. The audience is left to ponder the implications of the verdict, and the fate of Riccardo and his family remains uncertain.

In conclusion, "The Triangular Cell" is a well-written play, and the acting is superb. But the true story of the murder trial is so tragic that it is hard to enjoy the play. I would recommend it only to those who have a strong interest in true crime stories.

REDACTED

Redacted

The redacted text cannot be read.
The play is about loneliness and the frustrated violence of suppressed emotion. But the single unsettling wind that brings the house of cards toppling down is that underneath these crucial contemporary issues is a simplistic answer that is so unsound and perhaps even unhealthy that it colors the whole experience for me in a negative way. This is a play that hates women. In the course of the play's two scenes, Hutson manages somehow to burden women with the blame for all of the ills of these three outcasts, and extension, all our woes. The play's only female character, Jamie's mother (Judy Ulrich), is an insufferable, smothering, manipulative, controlling exemple of femaleness, and the prisoner's speech is peppered with sexual hate-mongering. I wonder how many of my fellow students will see this play, nod their heads, and mutter, "Yup. That's what life is all about. He said it all there." All right, life is tough, and you can't really live it without feeling pain. But this, for me, does not justify self-indulgent, imitative, self-pitying pretentiousness like The Triangular Cell. Gebbie's performance as Jesus is competent, but Voland was badly miscast and misdirected as Joe. Voland is simply not frightening enough, nor is he able to build his portrayal through two scenes without letting his energy dissipate in weak gestures and line deliveries. Beem, on the other hand, promises to be an actor of poise and strength with his performance as Jamie. With some stronger direction, his performance might have helped salvage the evening.

Cheerleaders get Spartan spirit

"Flies through the cloudless sky..."

Mirror, mirrored, the sun shone; birds began to grow stronger.

"Now these roses are in bloom..."

People and white persimmon fruits against the cloudless blue sky. Across by and legs kids with skis in back sit straight.

"Get it together, get it close..."

A multitude of colors—green, blue, yellow, red—flown on the fine green carpet of Spartan Stadium.

"It's about to the sky..."

1977 may not be "summers" year for the Spartans, but the last two weeks have been quite a winning experience for participants in the MSU cheerleaders program.

Cathy and Mary of the MSU cheerleaders program, in an annual event, participants under the watchful eye of present and former MSU cheerleaders, perfect their moves during two separate times and a half-hour session, one in the morning and one in the evening.

"We want to develop a high caliber of skill among the girls, and we have created several avenues that are geared for getting the crowd to respond."

The two-week course, offered by MSU's Winter Sports School program, is an annual event. Participants, under the watchful eye of present and former MSU cheerleaders, perfect their moves during two separate times and a half-hour session, one in the morning and one in the evening.

"Now that they are running around outside, practicing competition, chanting and cheering."

The program is divided into two weeks sessions, each session training a different group of girls. One hundred thirty-equal cheerleaders practiced their kicks and chants during the second week, about twice as many as participated in the first seven days. It's a tough new experience for many. The MSU football game is on this time, one of the instructors said.

The cheerleading program is not all fun and enthusiasm, though. Hard work and enthusiasm. But most of all, the students are working on the team. Over the course of the season, the program helps the girls to stay in shape, get stronger, and develop the skills needed to become competitive and successful in competition.

"They compete in individual and squad competition, and the competition is held on the last day of the season. Twenty six girls made their way to the end of the first week.

Next year's program will be held in August. Those interested in participating and their applications to the Winter Sports School program at MSU's Westside, next year are due.

In the words of one girl from Saline Creek: "This is not a competition. Everyone needs help. We are giving them the opportunity of learning what it means."

Another instructor summed it up this way: "We try to get the girls to work together. They would like to have known we taught them that."
