

Statewide holiday for King may get Senate OK today

By DAN SPICKLER
State News Staff Writer

Legislators will make history by passing a proposal declaring a statewide holiday in honor of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. if the bill's sponsor, Rep. Vaughn III, D-Detroit, has his way.

Michigan would be the first state to enact a holiday. Vaughn said he is hoping the measure will spark a nationwide observance of such a holiday.

Wednesday the bill was reported out of the Senate Appropriations Committee and, after a short period of floor debate, was advanced to third and final reading status—meaning the bill can be passed tomorrow should the issue be taken up.

House Bill 4001 calls for making the Monday closest to January 15—the date of King's birth—a statewide holiday for all legal, financial and court workers.

"Enactment of this bill will successfully end a ten-year struggle since the death of Dr. King to make his memory and what he stood for into a truly meaningful holiday in the state of Michigan," Vaughn said.

Since King's assassination on April 4,

1968, Vaughn has annually proposed such a holiday, but past attempts failed. The chairperson of the House committee on Colleges and Universities said that such opposition has melted down for a number of reasons.

"A lot of education had to take place about the man and his ideas before such an idea could become strongly supported," Vaughn explained. "Plus a lot of municipalities in the state, including Detroit had to initiate the holiday to show that there is interest."

Vaughn said the creation of a statewide holiday will add distinction to Michigan.

"The measure will place Michigan among the few states with a statewide holiday honoring one of our greatest Americans," he said.

Vaughn introduced the bill on the first day of this year's House session. It was passed resoundingly in the House in April after going through Civil Rights and Appropriation Committees.

While Vaughn expressed confidence that the Senate would pass the bill today, Sen. Earl Nelson, D-Lansing, said he could not be sure such action would be taken.

"I'm in favor of the bill and I do think it will pass, but I cannot be certain of when it will happen," Nelson said.

Rep. H. Lynn Jondahl, D-East Lansing, marched with King in the sixties and has strongly supported that such an observance be enacted.

"The fact is, the man is not just a representative of the civil rights movement, but of a whole way of doing politics—a way which carries a heavy strain of non-violence as its theme," Jondahl said.

"We owe it to ourselves and to society to effectively preserve the memory of this noble man, his works, his beliefs, his ideals and his dreams," Vaughn said.

Oil price progression agreed upon by OPEC

By BARTH HEALEY

Austria (AP) — Oil exporters and Western oil companies agreed at their first joint meeting in four years with a consensus that oil prices will rise ahead of inflation to encourage production.

The agreement calls for a three-day period that oil prices rise at least 15 percent for the next decade drawn from three other exporters and one company. Royal Dutch-Shell, which has the largest share of the world's oil reserves, is expected to keep prices ahead of inflation by running an annual average of 15 percent in Western industrialized countries, emerged from speeches by delegates from companies and members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC).

It did not bind OPEC oil ministers, who were not present here, to impose any increase at their Dec. 20 price-fixing meeting in Caracas.

But the meeting itself began what OPEC Secretary General Ali Jaidan called "the process of defining mutual interests" on which exporters and companies could base future pricing.

The meeting was the first public contact between OPEC and the major companies since October 1973, when their price-setting negotiations here broke down and OPEC members began a series of unilateral decisions that resulted in a five-fold price rise.

Nordine Ait Laoussine, executive vice president of Algeria's state oil company, told the delegates Tuesday that a 15 percent annual price increase was needed to make development of alternate energy sources and new oil exploration economically feasible.

Several officials of the oil cartel's secretariat and some member countries — Libya, Kuwait and Qatar — reacted favorably to Ait Laoussine's proposal in later discussion. On Wednesday, Royal Dutch-Shell's senior managing director, C.C. Pocock, said he "wouldn't quarrel" with the idea.

Delegates from some exporting countries, including Saudi Arabia and Indonesia, refused to comment on the proposal. Pressure by Saudi Arabia, OPEC's largest member, forced the cartel in June to cancel a five percent increase that would have meant an over-all 15 percent price hike for 1977.

Delegates said OPEC had taken a major step toward "detente" with the oil companies and consuming nations by holding the seminar. But A.H. Taher, governor of the Saudi state oil firm, warned against expecting OPEC to cooperate directly with oil companies on price setting.

"We are not consulted about the prices of goods or commodities we buy from the West," he said. "because it is your sovereign right to set the prices for these and our sovereign right to set the prices for oil."

Grant-in-aid will be given to Thomas

Thomas will be at the eighth Pigs-Freaks' football game in Stadium Saturday to present a grant-in-aid to the College of Medicine.

William R. Weil, professor and chair of the Department of Human Anatomy in the College of Human Medicine and Dr. Jim Kiser, president of Michigan Leukemia Children's Hospital, will accept the grant during halftime.

The grant will be used to hire Dr. Roshni Kiser, a specialist in leukemia and related diseases to the College of Human Medicine faculty, and for the further research in leukemia at the hospital.

The grant will be sponsored by the local Order of Police (FOP) and St. Joseph's Research Hospital. The "Pigs-Freaks" team is made up of policemen and members of FOP. Rich Baes and Charlie Thornhill, both former MSU players, will be on the "Pigs" team. The "Freaks" team has no specifications for its members.

The game will start at 1:30 p.m. Tickets are available in advance for $2 at all Quality Mini-Mart stores, Knapps, the Kalamazoo and Okemos locations of Knapps and Marshall Music stores. Tickets cost $3 at the gate.

House OKs abortions for certain conditions

By BETTY ANNE WILLIAMS

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House voted Wednesday to allow the government to pay for abortions under federal medical aid programs in cases where a woman's life would be jeopardized by a full-term pregnancy and in some cases of rape and incest.

But the plan approved by the House is not expected to break a deadlock between the House and the Senate on the question of using government funds to pay for abortions for poor women. Senators working in a conference committee to resolve the dispute with the House already have turned down the plan, approved by the House in a 263 to 142 vote on Wednesday.

The vote came in response to protests from federal employees at the Departments of Labor and Health, Education and Welfare (HEW). Their paychecks will be halved next week unless Congress resolves its dispute over abortion policy.

Labor Secretary Ray Marshall and HEW Secretary Joseph Califano both urged

Congress to adopt temporary funding measures to keep programs running and prevent a salary cutoff for 150,000 employees of the departments and 75,000 workers in state unemployment offices.

The full effect that might result from withholding the appropriations was not known. Marshall listed several examples, however. He said that unless action is taken by Friday, unemployment offices in Kansas, Pennsylvania, Arizona and Delaware will close ending jobless insurance benefits to three million persons.

In addition, he said, "Our safety and health compliance inspections, investigations of equal pay, age discrimination and minimum wage complaints have been severely curtailed except for emergencies."

At HEW, Califano said benefits will be cut off for thousands of poor people, children, the sick, aged and handicapped unless Congress acts by Thursday.

Settling on an abortion policy is the last remaining obstacle to passage of a $60.2 billion bill to provide operating funds and salaries for the agencies in the fiscal year that began Sept. 30.

Abortions paid for through programs like Medicaid and Social Services are the ones affected. HEW estimates that the government paid $50 million for about 300,000 abortions last year.

By a 209 to 206 vote the House abandoned its position that the government should pay for abortions only where a woman's life is in danger because of a full-term pregnancy.

But the Senate's stand is that abortions should be permitted where a woman's life is in danger, in cases of rape or incest or where it is considered "medically necessary." House members have argued that the "medically necessary" phrase could be interpreted in a way that would allow unlimited abortions for poor women under the government programs.

The House plan would only allow the government to pay for abortions in cases of rape or incest if the woman reported her problem to police. Government experts say only about half the rapes in the country are reported.

Discrimination case heard by U.S. Supreme Court

By RICHARD CARELLI

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court was urged Wednesday to decide whether special programs to aid racial minorities are valid and vital to society or whether they should be banned for illegally discriminating against whites.

The view that the courts nine justices take in the reverse discrimination case of Allan Bakke could have a profound effect on the future of so-called affirmative action programs in education and business across the nation.

Many civil rights leaders and constitutional scholars believe the court's decision will be its most important ruling on race relations since it banned segregation in 1954.

The case drew wide attention, and hundreds of people lined up outside the court building beginning Tuesday night to gain admission to the session.

"Allan Bakke's position is that he has a right not to be discriminated against because of race," San Francisco attorney Reynold Colvin argued in urging the court to uphold a ruling by the California

Supreme Court.

The state court ruled that a special admissions program used by the University of California's medical school at Davis made Bakke a victim of racial discrimination.

Bakke, a 37-year-old Sunnyvale, Calif., engineer with the nation's space program, successfully contended in state courts that he would have been admitted if the medical school had not set aside 16 of each year's entering class for minority students.

The university appealed the California court's ruling, and its attorney argued that such a program is needed to aid persons "long victimized by racial discrimination."

The attorney, former Watergate special prosecutor Archibald Cox, told the justices that "race may be taken into account for proper purposes" such as overcoming the effects of past oppression.

While Cox's arguments focused on the rights of minorities to have a real opportunity for full membership in American society, Colvin's contentions centered on Bakke's rights as an individual to be treated equally.

Both attorneys said the Constitution's 14th Amendment, which guarantees equal protection, favored their positions.

Each member of the court posed questions to the attorneys, the first coming only seven minutes after Cox began his presentation.

Cox was joined by the Carter administration's solicitor general, Wade McCree, who appeared as a friend of the court to urge the justices to overturn the California ruling.

"To be blind to race today is to be blind to reality," he said in arguing that governmental affirmative action programs have not yet achieved their stated goals of equal justice and equal opportunity.

Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justices William J. Brennan Jr. and Byron R. White pressed Colvin and Cox on whether the case could be decided without reaching the constitutional question. If the court takes such a route, the chances of an expected "landmark" decision would decline.

SUPPORT FOR 'AFFIRMATIVE ACTION' PROGRAMS

'U' faculty comments on Bakke

By TERRY PRZYBYLSKI

State News Staff Writer

Though many of them are dubious of the validity of the Allan Bakke "reverse discrimination" case, MSU administrators and faculty members who were contacted on the issue expressed strong support for the "affirmative action" programs which the Bakke case challenges.

The case, which is now before the U.S. Supreme Court, revolves around Bakke's charge that he was a victim of unconstitutional discrimination because of his race. The 37-year-old white man was refused admission to the University of California at Davis medical school. The school had reserved 16 of its 100 openings for "disadvantaged" students, mainly blacks and other minorities, and some of these 16 students had grade-point averages and test scores lower than Bakke's.

University Ombudsman Carolyn Stieber said she feels the school should not have set up a rigid quota system, but also said she supports more flexibly administered affirmative action programs.

"A quota system would be tough to defend," Stieber said. "But universities should have the option to be flexible enough to use race and sex as admission criteria, because that accomplishes some important social objectives."

Stieber said she personally feels the Supreme Court will not rule completely in favor of Bakke or the University of California in the case because "there is too much at stake."

She also commented that Bakke's age and the fact that he was rejected by other medical schools besides Davis could indicate he was rejected not on the basis of his race, but rather his age.

Philip Korth, associate professor of American Thought and Language and former president of the MSU Faculty Associates said he also was opposed to strict racial quotas but supportive of the concept of giving special treatment to minorities and women, similar to the position stated in a friend of the court brief filed by the U.S. Justice Department.

"My personal view is that the Bakke case represents a threat to all affirmative action programs," Korth said, "and I feel such programs are still essential."

Zolton Ferency, associate professor of criminal justice, said he felt that Bakke was not justified in filing a lawsuit against the school.

"I don't believe that Bakke can morally and ethically file suit," Ferency said. "He is a member of the segment of society that benefits from racism. The system we've created benefits Bakke."

Ferency also said that Bakke would not have been admitted to the Davis medical school even if there had been no affirmative action program there. Ferency, however, defended the existence of such programs as a way to combat racism and sexism.

"Bakke is caught up in a social revolution," he said, "and in a social revolution someone always gets hurt."

Lee Winder, University provost and vice president for academic affairs, said he has "not yet read all the material on the Bakke case to make a judgment on it," but said he supports the concept of affirmative action programs.

"I feel there is an imperative need for successful affirmative action programs," Winder said.

Roger Wilkinson, MSU treasurer and vice president for business and finance, echoed a similar view, saying he has not taken a stand on Bakke's particular case, but that he supports affirmative action.

"I believe that universities have to develop programs to assist female and minority students," Wilkinson said.

Urban program increases aid to cities

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter Administration's first new urban program was signed into law on Wednesday, promising billions for ravaged American cities and their poor and out of work residents.

The $14.7-billion housing bill includes an expansion of the Community Development program, with an emphasis on older cities, as well as more money for housing programs and rent subsidies for poor families.

The rent subsidies plus added financial aid to hard-pressed cities will help an additional 345,000 families find housing at rents they can afford, according to the Department of Housing and Urban Development. At the same time, administration officials estimate the measure will provide a half million jobs in construction and related industries where unemployment rates are the highest.

On the heels of his eye-opening tour last week of the South Bronx, President Carter said he signed the legislation that will provide "a giant step forward" in improving urban living conditions.

"The bill is a big improvement in giving more attention to the older, central cities," says Richard Nathan, urban expert at the Brookings Institution. "It will help a lot of big Northern cities, but also the inner-ring suburbs and more than a few Sunbelt cities." New elements in the community development program include a $400-million Urban Action Grant fund for spurring economic development in the nation's most troubled cities.

The bill includes a formula that drastically increases federal aid to cities in the Northeast and the Midwest but also provides a trickle more money for growing cities of the South and West.

Carter said his visit to the South Bronx revealed slums that are "a disgrace to our great country."

In fact, ghetto-marked cities like New York, Detroit and Baltimore will receive millions of dollars more under the Carter housing bill than they were to receive under the expiring legislation. "There is no discrimination against Southern states or any other states," declared Sen. Edward Brooke, R-Mass. "No one loses under this bill. Everyone gains."

Detroit is the biggest winner among big cities, boosting its share of federal community development dollars from $28.3 million this year to $65.7 million in 1980, according to the most recent HUD figures. New York gets a boost from $151 million to $255 million, while cities such as Atlanta and Oklahoma City are held relatively constant in receiving about $14 million and $8 million respectively.

The housing and community development bill, product of a two-month conference between the House and Senate, extends the community development program for revitalizing cities for three years and funds it with a total $10.9 billion, a $2.4 billion increase. Included in the housing bill is $1.2-billion in rent subsidies for low-income families, as well as a variety of subsidies for homeowners and the housing industry. Carter aides expect the measure to spur private investment in distressed urban areas, again where the need is the greatest. The bill also increases mortgage insurance and down payment requirements under the Federal Housing Administration.

North Atlantic alliance disagrees on deployment of neutron bomb

BARI, Italy (AP) — Defense ministers of the North Atlantic alliance failed Wednesday after two days of talks to agree on European deployment of the neutron warhead.

European ministers said the tactical nuclear weapon, which kills humans but spares buildings and objects outside the impact area, was militarily useful, but they considered it politically dangerous. U.S. Secretary of Defense Harold Brown called their fears unjustified.

Brown and six NATO colleagues making up the alliance Nuclear Planning Group met in this Adriatic port city to review military preparedness of NATO against the Warsaw Pact nations.

The delay on the neutron bomb meant another month-long wait before President Carter can decide on its production. Brown said the alliance did not need unanimity on the weapon to be deployed in Europe, but "most weight would go to allies on whose territory the weapon would be deployed."

He reported after the meeting that the European allies also "expressed strong views to keep options open" on the possible European deployment of the Cruise missile, fearing that it may be sacrificed in the U.S.-Soviet strategic arms limitation talks.

A senior NATO official explained that European allies

"put the United States on notice" not to negotiate away the Cruise missile, which he called an "attractive option" against growing Soviet might in Europe.

The senior NATO official, who is in a major position in the alliance but declined use of his name, also warned against renouncing the controversial neutron weapon, saying that it was needed to "provide balancing capability" against the Soviets.

The neutron warhead produces twice the deadly radiation of a conventional nuclear bomb but less than a tenth as much blast power, heat and fallout. Thus destruction of buildings and other objects would be far less.

The deadly radiation produced by a neutron bomb probably would last more than a few hours, compared with months from a conventional atomic bomb. The troops would be able to move into a bombed area

Israeli approval of proposal called move towards peace

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Jimmy Carter said Wednesday that Israeli cabinet approval of the Carter Administration's proposal for Palestinian representation at a Geneva peace conference is "a first step" toward an eventual Middle East peace settlement.

"Every week now is bringing about some progress toward a Geneva conference," the President said.

"I think there has been a substantial alleviation among the leaders of the Middle East nations of their concern about the results of a Geneva conference," Carter said. "I think they're all beginning to see it's not something they need to fear."

Carter spoke outside the Oval Office a day after the Israeli cabinet decided to accept the administration's Geneva conference proposal. The State Department said Tuesday night the Israeli decision was a step forward, but warned that the Arab states may demand changes in the still-secret "working paper" the Israelis accepted.

"It's a first step toward a possible final peace settlement, but it's extremely sensitive and extremely complicated," Carter told reporters.

"The national leaders... have made abusive statements in the past. It's hard to correct or modify those statements in a constructive fashion, but they're doing best."

"I don't believe there is any nation on earth that couldn't say it's genuinely serious about convening the Geneva conference for an ultimate settlement," the President said.

Asked whether creation of a Palestinian state would lead to the destruction of Israel, he replied, "I never advocated an independent Palestinian state."

The key point of dispute in bringing the Arab and Israelis to Geneva is expected to be the question of participation by the PLO, the Liberation Organization (PLO) in the Arab-Israeli peace talks.

In announcing the Israeli decision, cabinet Secretary Arien Naor renewed refusal to negotiate with the PLO.

Congress sustains air bag decision

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress on Wednesday sustained a controversial Transportation Department decision to require air bags or other passive safety devices to be installed in all new cars by the 1984 model year.

The Senate voted 65 to 31 to table a resolution disapproving the decision by Secretary of Transportation Brock Adams. The House Commerce Committee earlier prevented the issue from being raised before the full House by voting 16 to 14 to table a similar motion.

The Transportation Department's ruling requires that new autos be equipped with devices that do not demand any action by the motorist to activate.

The two most common devices are air bags, which inflate when sensors on the front of the car indicate a crash is occurring, and automatic seat belts, which automatically wrap around a driver when the car door closes.

The government decision goes into effect unless both houses disapprove it by an Oct. 14 deadline.

Youth charged with Maryland murders

ELVATON, Md. (AP) — A teen-age youth was arrested and charged Wednesday in the stabbing murders of three young girls who disappeared while playing and were found lying by a stream near their homes in this Baltimore suburb, police said.

A spokesperson for Anne Arundel County police identified the suspect as Stuart Kreiner, 16, of the same Southgate community where the girls lived and where their bodies were found Monday.

Authorities said Kreiner had been charged with three counts of first-degree murder. They said they had no other suspects in the case.

Investigators said they had found a knife and jacket that led to the youth's arrest. They also said the suspect's family had been extremely cooperative in the investigation.

"This has been a tragedy for everyone," a police spokesperson said.

Before word of the arrest, police had said they would go door to door through the town with a photograph of a knife sheath — hoping someone could identify one of the few clues in the stabbing deaths.

Ohio residents to vote on school levy

MONROEVILLE, Ohio (AP) — Residents of this rural town vote on a twice-defeated school levy Thursday. If it passes, 900 public school pupils will return to classes Friday. If it fails, the school district may be dissolved.

The Monroeville district is one of about 20 in Ohio that must have tax levies approved to keep schools open for a total of 230,000 youngsters. Districts in trouble are both large and small, and problems range from a national forest to uneven cash flow.

Ohio law forbids school districts from operating in debt, so when funds run out, the districts must shut down. New state money will be available Jan. 2, so school districts forced to close now can reopen then. But if tax levies don't pass to provide increased funding, some districts face permanent shutdown after the schools year ends in June.

Local school funding comes from property taxes. Marietta residents complain that Wayne National Forest takes up much of their tax base, and they want the federal government to sell it so that taxable homes and industry can move into the area. Federal officials have given no indication whether they intend to consider the request

Mystery of Vietnam's underground tunnels uncovered by group of German tourists

By Horst Faas
H. Vietnam (AP) — As Lt. Col. A. Eyster lay dying from Viet Cong bullet wounds on a jungle trail, he said, "Before I go I'd like to talk to the controls those incredible men in the years later I met that man and he the inside of the fantastic tunnel that took 30 years to dig and stretched 150 miles with tentacles sometimes winding right under the chairs of U.S. commanders as they sat in their headquarters. Eyster, a tall West Pointer from Cocoa Beach, Fla., died in a field hospital while his battalion, the 2nd of the 28th Regiment, First Infantry Division, was trying to fight its way out of the vast underground complex 20 miles northwest of Saigon.

The now peaceful tunnels were on the itinerary of a German tourist group I traveled with on a rare two-week trip to Vietnam. One of the briefing officers at district headquarters was Capt. Nguyen Thanh Linh Dressed in an olive drab North Vietnamese uniform and Ho Chi Minh rubber tire sandals, he said in answer to a question that he had commanded the Cu Chi Liberation Battalion during 1966.

from Cu Chi towards Saigon and the surrounding provincial capitals. The tunnels were marked in black lines on a 12 by 12-foot map hanging from a briefing room wall, and my first reaction was that it looked like a map of the New York or London subway system, with dots not for stations but for fighting positions and secret entrances and exits.

The slippery, humid corridors, about two feet wide and two feet high, blocked with wooden trapdoors at underground intersections, spanned the history of the whole Vietnam war, starting from the days when Communist agents hid from the French police. But it was during the American phase of the war, Linh said, that the system was truly tested.

In an unanimous vote Tuesday night, the ASMSU Student Board passed the Legal Services bill as recommended by the ASMSU Policy Committee.

The controversial bill sparked reactions from board members over a clause that stipulates ASMSU cannot sue the University nor can its attorneys initiate such action.

The policy committee had recommended that the bill be passed with some minor revisions, including the removal of the clause which would forbid ASMSU to sue the University.

According to Student Board President Kent Barry, ASMSU is a legal subentity of MSU and cannot sue the university.

Policy committee member and College of Agriculture representative Dan Stouffer added that if ASMSU is a legal subentity of the University then there is no need for a stipulation preventing lawsuits in the legal services bill. "We know we can't sue them, so why have it in there," Stouffer commented.

The policy committee also recommended the hiring of five paralegals and two directors for the Legal Services cabinet.

The board discussed the possibility of re-establishing the popular computer dating service.

Steve Danzig, a representative of the Computer Date and Match service, urged board members to consider organizing the program again.

Danzig said the program eliminates the sexist role involved in dating.

"The sexist role is removed because it is just as much the girls' responsibility to make the date as it is the guys," said

Danzig. "They both get a card with the other's number."

Danzig estimated the costs per person and the possible profit margin of the service.

The board decided to table a decision on whether to support the idea until they hear recommendations from the ASMSU Programming Board.

In other action, the board discussed the status of Jean Riker, College of communications representative. Riker has been a frequent absentee from ASMSU Board meetings.

"The sexist role is removed (in computer dating) because it is just as much the girl's responsibility to make the date as it is the guy's. They both get a card with the other's number."

— Steve Danzig, student representative of the Computer Date and Match Service.

A bill introduced by College of Arts and Letters representative Scott Schreiber suggested taking steps to fill Riker's seat if she continued to miss meetings. Schreiber pulled the bill from the floor after it was recommended the board wait until next week to allow Riker a chance to be present at a meeting to discuss her situation.

ASMSU Student Board meetings are held 7:30 p.m. every Tuesday in 4 Student Services Bldg. The meetings are open to the public.

Gay Jeans Day set for Friday across campus

By REGINALD THOMAS
State News Staff Writer

"Gay Blue Jeans Day" will happen at MSU and on other campuses across the country Friday as part of an attempt by the National Gay Task Force to increase public awareness of the problems facing gays.

The purpose of designating Friday as nationwide "Gay Blue Jeans Day" is to help determine how many gays are on campus and to let forgetful non-gays caught in blue jeans feel the oppression suffered daily by gays, according to ASMSU Gay Council member Dan Jones.

"Closet gays" will be given the chance to "test the water" for the first time by wearing blue jeans, and members of the gay community will be able to identify each other more easily, Jones explained.

A person wearing blue jeans on Friday has the option of claiming that he or she is a forgetful straight, Jones said. The person who is actually gay has a chance to "come out as far as he wishes without being too open."

Jones said he feels that because of the gay council's designation of gay blue jeans day very few blue jeans will be seen on campus Friday.

The idea is also part of Gay Council's attempts to make their constituents and the general public aware of the facilities and continuing programs offered by the council through their office in 310 Student Services building.

Next week, Gay Council will organize a group "rap session" for anyone interested. To keep the session as informal and confidential as possible, it will be held in a residence hall room and participants will not be required to exchange names Jones said.

"The group will be made up of people who are interested," he said "If you don't feel comfortable after the first gathering you don't have to return.

The meetings will not be further publicized. In order for interested parties to obtain more information, they must contact the gay council or check the State News, "It's What's Happening," column Monday or Tuesday.

"There comes a time when you've got to talk to others who feel the same way. Gay Council realizes this," Jones said, adding that the reason for not publicizing the sessions is to prevent embarrassment for those involved.

Bottle bill controversy rages, beverage price hike predicted

By CHUIS KUCZYNSKI
State News Staff Writer

The controversy surrounding the "bottle bill" passed by Michigan voters last November has not yet subsided and once the smoke clears, Michigan consumers will probably be paying more for beverages purchased in bottles and cans.

The bottle bill will outlaw the sale of non-returnable cans and bottles beginning Dec. 3, 1978. The bill was designed to reduce the amount of litter and save energy.

Representatives from bottle manufacturers, distributors, wholesalers and retailers lashed out at the Michigan Liquor Commission at a public hearing Wednesday, protesting rules suggested by the commission for the implementation of the controversial bill.

Under the proposed rules, all containers for these beverages would have a deposit and refund of either five or 10 cents.

The controversy surrounds a number of issues, including one which questions the authority of the commission to lay down any rules concerning the bottle bill.

"We believe the Liquor Commission does not have the authority to propose rules regarding the implementation of the bottle law," said Richard McClellan, attorney for the Michigan Soft Drink Association.

Rep. Lynn Jondahl, D-East Lansing, stated his opposition to some of the provisions set down by the commission and has introduced a bill in the House which would exempt returnable soft drink containers from certain requirements set forth in the Act. The bill was introduced because soft drink manufacturers already have a deposit and refund system.

There is also the question of who is responsible for recycling the bottles and cans. Manufacturers have stated they are against assuming the responsibility of cleaning bottles because it would entail shipping the bottles across state lines.

Representatives from beverage manufacturers, including Edward W. Frantell from the Miller Brewing Corporation, said the responsibility of recycling bottles was not theirs.

The recycling system should go to the distributor, not the manufacturer, Frantell said.

"It's the least costly method of implementing the law," he commented.

But Tom Washington, executive director of the Michigan United Conservation Club (MUCC), said the responsibility for recycling should fall on the manufacturer.

"We are confident that the only way to assure the cans to be refilled and the bottles is at the manufacturer," Washington said. Rick Jameston, a member of the MUCC, has expressed concern that cans would not be recycled, but instead would be dumped and new cans produced.

There was also concern expressed by representatives of the Michigan Beer and Wine Wholesalers Association about the possibility of illegal bottle trafficking. There is no provision in the act preventing illegal trafficking from occurring.

'It leaves me cold'

"The security of the state," Justice Minister James Kruger of South Africa has asserted, "is the highest law."

It is not surprising that a state built on the rubble of shattered human dignity would subscribe to that maxim. South Africa's system of racial apartheid — which condemns 18 million blacks, 2.5 million mixed-blood "coloreds" and 850,000 Asians to political and social servitude at the hands of an obstreperous minority of 4.2 million whites — is almost universally recognized as repugnant to basic civilized conduct. The Pretoria government, as a result of its decision to make internal security and self-preservation of paramount importance, must now clumsily attempt to explain away the death of civil rights leader Steve Biko.

Biko, a 30-year-old Black man whose career and image was held analogous to that of Martin Luther King, died while in police custody. He had been arrested under provisions of South Africa's controversial internal security law. The Pretoria regime maintains that Biko died of a hunger strike. Medical evidence suggests, however, that Biko — who was in good health at the time of his detention — was murdered.

South African officials obviously feel insecure about Biko's death and the controversy it has stirred. The revelation that Biko was probably murdered came from two leading South African daily newspapers. The government of Prime Minister John Vorster has sought to censor the publications, and continues to suppress results of the autopsy conducted on Biko.

In addition, Pretoria has undertaken a propaganda campaign to link Biko and his followers with the Black terrorist movement that has been operating in South Africa. Biko was no terrorist; he and his followers were practitioners of civil disobedience and passive resistance. He sought to raise the consciousness of black and white alike. Now he is dead.

The death of Biko constitutes a pivotal point in Pretoria's well-documented history of repression and murder. There are those — former Under Secretary of State George Ball among them — who counsel the Carter Administration to practice restraint in dealing with Vorster's government. These partisans of a go-slow philosophy contend that applying excessive pressure to South Africa's white minority will only alienate it further and possibly instigate a bloody and protracted civil war. That may or may not be the case. However, it seems obvious that the only way to topple the increasingly entrenched and defensive white minority government is through the most intensive diplomatic pressure. No rational person would wish civil war on the African horn. At the same time, no civilized person wishes apartheid to continue a day longer than necessary. The decision for war or peace — for racial justice or continued oppression — lies not with the Black majority, but with people like Justice Minister Kruger, who, upon hearing the news of Biko's death, responded, "Dit Laait my koud" — "It leaves me cold."

State should observe King's birthday

Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. was killed almost 10 years ago and every year on his birthday and on the anniversary of his death, Americans have paid passing heed to his greatness.

If the Michigan Senate acts soon, possibly today, this state will be the first in the Union to make King's birthday a statewide legal holiday. More time will be available for celebration of civil rights advances and for somber reflection over what barriers to brotherhood remain to be broken.

Rep. Jackie Vaughn III, D-Detroit, has been pushing for such an observance every year since King's assassination.

Michigan now has a chance to lead the nation in an innovation — the observance of a national holiday for a great black American.

King stands for more than just the advancement of civil rights. His dreams and the ideals his face and voice evoke are much larger even than any of this actual — and many — accomplishments.

Many citizens remember the televised marches from Selma and Montgomery. Many remember the numerous pictures of King standing behind former president Lyndon B. Johnson as one racial barrier after another fell by federal mandate.

Today the struggle to make civil rights real, not just in laws and quotas, goes on.

King paved the way for more than just minorities. His methods and politics of non-violence of the right to protest served models for much of the development of the student movement.

Moreover, King moved Americans to value their own rights along with the Warren Supreme court, brought the Bill of Rights into the national limelight.

It is not a question of whether not Martin Luther King Jr. serves such attention. Rather a question of whether Americans can put such a weight to use in a constructive way.

King

In short, the proposed holiday more than a needed first retaining sensitivity to vitalizing problems that must be confronted.

One of the interesting things about the conflict over the Bakke case is that most of the assumptions held about the nature and effects of discrimination remain unstated, with the controversy continuing at a superficial level that changes no minds.

Those who support a favored admission program to professional schools argue that the effects of segregation are so severe that they continue to harm their victims long after it ceases. Some form of positive action is needed to provide true equality. The people who hold these views seem most concerned with social factors, such as the number of black doctors, or under-representation of women on faculties.

Perhaps it is helpful to look at the problem from the point of view of a deprived individual—when should he be expected to make his own way without the assistance of a help program? Is it reasonable to expect a new black doctor to need help in finding a residency? Is a woman really prepared when she graduates from law school? Is it possible that a graduate of an inferior inner city high school might need special tutoring in college?

On the other hand, should a member of a minority be prepared when he completes college—should all his cultural deprivations be behind him? If you think perhaps not, then Bakke must be wrong in his suit. If you say yes, then he is right.

hot chili and gay waiters to a three-section bar-restaurant serving some of the best food in East Lansing.

Before there was Beggars I remember the greasy steak joint lined with pool tables.

So you can understand my anger at being turned away from the bar I've helped to support now for many years. I, of course, knew there was no one to be angry with — after all, they were only obeying reasonable fire laws.

Besides, there was little way for them to tell who the regulars were as opposed to the tourists—the freeloaders!

Still, I was angry so I looked next door into Lizard's. The restaurant was closed and bar much too packed. So I walked down the street, heading more or less for Moon's. But once there I just couldn't bring myself to go in. I know at some point or another all those football-minded heathens would have launched into the MSU Fight Song and, well, let's just say I've become too weak to hold down my guts at such displays of school spirit.

My companion and I walked the block, but weren't satisfied with any of the alternatives. So I swallowed my anger and pride and headed back to Beggars. The crowd had apparently lessened, though it didn't look it, and we were admitted.

Beggars is often the first choice going out to bars. But it's also the one when somewhere else is preferred never found, in this town not an exception.

Beggars' biggest drawing card for us is, food aside, its relaxed, optional atmosphere. It's East Lansing Bohemia, and has often been accused of being pseudo-Bohemialand.

I've said the same many times. Beggars makes this Bohemia hang-out as pseudo than, say the old artists' hang-outs in Greenwich Village.

The honest-to-God Bohemian has not conceived to that end. They were bars that writers and artists frequented for varying reasons, but they were opened with such a conscious goal.

Beggars was undoubtedly conceived to draw persons who fashion themselves Bohemians. Such a self-conscious effort in my mind, tainted and plastic.

Over the years Beggars has become firmly rooted in its image and now it's a point where it really doesn't matter anymore (as if it ever really mattered). Beggars' Bohemialand sometimes leaves a stale taste in my mouth precisely because of the pretentious customers—not so much the managers anymore—bring in.

VIEWPOINT: GAY RIGHTS

National Gay Blue Jeans day promoted

By DAN JONES

Don't forget to wear (or not wear) your blue jeans tomorrow. It is National Gay Blue Jeans Day, proclaimed by the National Gay Task Force. Gay people will wear blue jeans. MSU's Gay Council is supporting the event on a local level. Council members will be wearing their blue jeans and hope all gay men and women will join them by wearing their jeans.

Non-gays who forget and pull on their usual attire will be forced to stop and consider, "What if everyone thought I was gay?" The fear and uncomfortableness experienced is felt by gay people all the time.

Very few blue jeans will be seen around campus tomorrow, unfortunately. Most gay people feel the need to hide their sexual preference because of peer pressure, employment, housing and the list goes on. Why should gay people be visible anyway? Gays are forever confronted with blatant heterosexuality. This is not what gay people object to—it is the inequity. Gays are harassed for holding hands in public. What if they carried on in public the way many straights do? Actual threats would follow.

How would a straight person feel if a guy were always talking about this guy and that guy and how attractive they were? Pretty uncomfortable. Gay men are deluged with comments from avid girl-watchers. Lesbians hear all about women's hot dates. The annoying part of all this is that gay people cannot openly comment on someone they feel is attractive.

Gays can use jeans day as a test. If they are questioned about wearing jeans, they can always claim absent-mindedness. Or they can take that initial, scary, satisfying and rewarding step of being gay and proud.

This brings to mind the involved concept of "coming out" (of your closet). The idea can be very scary for gays and straights. It shouldn't be. By itself, coming out means nothing. The meaning is whatever an individual places on it. Anyone can come out of any phase of anything and grow to another level. Because of all the pressures society places on individuals, the process is more involved for gays.

Coming out can be self acceptance. Some gays have a painful experience dealing with their sexual preference. Another step is discussion of your sexual orientation with friends. This is another move which takes a great deal of energy and courage. It is not something gay people should feel compelled to do or guilty if they don't.

Then there is the public stance some gays take. This is really scary and satisfying at the same time. The move is one of anger. There are so many injustices in this society that some people are driven into being public in an effort to bring about change.

For men and women interested in coming together to discuss personal feelings, an informal discussion group is starting on campus. Check the "It's What's Happening" column next week for more information.

Finally, let me say that I would be very content to sit back and live my life. It would be much easier than dealing with all the prank calls and harassment I'll receive because of this viewpoint. I know I annoy many people (scare is a better word) by being so out in the open with my opinions. I'd love to keep them to myself, but how can I when I see so many people being hurt by gay oppression? Not the visible injustices that most people see. My sympathy is with gay people who don't feel they can live the way they want because of what other people will think.

Barroom Boogwabazh

By FRED van HARTESVELDT
State News Reviewer

Being in the men's "rest" room at Papa Geno's is like being in a bomb shelter — one where the bombs explode inside the shelter rather than outside.

The bathroom walls, what remains of them at least, are bright red (possibly the blood of the victims). The sink sags from the wall, the plaster collapses.

About half of the total floor space, an area of maybe six by ten feet, is dedicated to an alcove housing the urinal. The ceiling of that alcove is at best a tremendous six feet, three inches above the floor. If a patron is much taller than six-three, he treads water.

Outside, Papa Geno's is something like its bathroom. Like a lot of north Lansing, it looks as if it has survived a war. Not quite as if it had been through a trash compactor, but almost.

Dull grey paint covers most of the two story building housing Papa Geno's. A rear door entrance used to be pink. Now it is dirty. In front, above the door there, is a giant red neon martini glass flashing sporadically the message "beer wine."

The front door itself is wide enough to throw two people out... simultaneously, and thick and heavy enough to keep four from trying to bust in. Both events may very well have occurred.

Inside, Papa Geno's somewhat redeems itself. With a flat black ceiling, a red carpet floor, three-foot high green lights at the ends of the bar, and half a dozen yellow colonial style lamps lining the walls, the decor is not war zone, but puzzlingly entertaining.

Even more entertaining is a wasted attempt to beautify the walls by covering them with plastic imitation oak grain paneling. The "oak" has more of a shine to it than dishes washed in Joy.

Roughly two-thirds of the way into Papa Geno's, the red carpeting gives way to a dance floor and, beyond that, a live band. The bar itself, which runs along one wall, also ends at the carpeting, giving way to the (kaboom) bomb shelters and a couple of tables.

All in all, thirty to thirty-five tables, each seating four, fill Papa Geno's. For those who like their music loud(est), three tables are squeezed in a three-foot wide strip between the band and the dance floor: a nice, cozy, non-quiet place to be crowded.

On the front wall of the barroom is a single large window. The only other glass in Papa Geno's lies behind the bar itself (in the form of mirrors and bottles) and on customers' tables.

Oddly for a bar, no pinball machines or pool tables are to be found in Papa Geno's. There is, however, a juke box to accompany the band; it spins country-western as much as anything else. "You picked a fine time to leave me, Lucille."

Similar to the juke selections, the patrons are also country-western as much as anything else. Some spin even faster than the records, despite beer not being sold by the pitcher. The customers are of mixed ages, occasionally as willing to fight as they are to flirt, and generally rate quite high on the WITLometer.

Geils echoes its past in empty hall

By BILL HOLDSHIP
State News Reviewer

I'm not sure what the motive behind dropping the initial was, but Geils (with or without the "J.") has always been foremost a dynamic performing band, and many Michiganders have fond memories of hot Detroit nights in the early '70s when the band would drive their SRO crowds into a state of organized hysteria.

After a series of poor albums that followed Full House, the band retired from the road for a year to record Monkey Island which has proven to be the greatest effort of their rocky career. The old magic was back, Geils recently had the honor of blowing Peter Frampton off a stage, and the band's Tuesday night concert at Metro Stadium seemed destined to be a winner.

Unfortunately, sometimes destiny has a habit of playing strange tricks. Lansing audiences never fail to amaze me. In the past several months, I've seen Metro overflowing with people to see mediocre and/or atrocious bands. With the possible exception of Blue Oyster Cult, Geils is the first band of any sort of musical substance to play the stadium since it reopened last spring. So what happens? Hardly anyone shows up, a situation which had an adverse effect on the performance.

It must be disheartening for a band who once played only to full houses to have to now face sparse crowds. That isn't to say that Geils didn't at least try. In fact, they often cooked much like they did in the old days. After a slow beginning with "Motor City Shakedown," Geils proceeded gradually to four songs from Monkey Island; "Surrender," "Somebody," "I'm Falling," and the title cut. Though it may have been better to space the songs out to involved. Everyone, except the people in the very front, looked bored or indifferent, and it made me wonder whatever happened to the hardcore Geils fans of yesteryear? Even the call for an encore was a far cry from the days when the audience would tear down the walls. And, as the Full House LP demonstrates, a Geils concert without audience participation is like a day without human rights and sunshine.

Which leads us to the Geils philosophical question of 1977. Is this actually the fault of the audience or the band? The biggest responses were to the old numbers like "Whammer have died. Geils now comes across as a band in concert, just like a hundred other bands. They seem to have lost their old intimacy with the audience. It can best be symbolized by Wolf who opened a bottle of champagne on stage to toast the audience. All fine and dandy; but today's rock audiences can hardly afford beer, let alone champagne, a classic example of what happens when bands lose contact with their fans.

Mention should be made here of the Rockets who opened the show. If the audience was cool towards Geils, they were downright cold to the opening act, even offering a few "Boos" and Geils now comes across as a band in concert, just like a hundred other bands. They seem to have lost their old intimacy with the audience.

Jammer" "Looking For A Love," both of which created an eerie sense of deja vu. One realizes that, with the exception of the hit singles "Give It To Me" and "Where Did Our Love Go," Geils' creative output following those earlier songs was zilch.

The band spent 'too much time on the road and not enough in the studio. Peter Wolf got fixated with his "Geez, I wish I was black" persona. A lot of bad albums were released. Above all, The J. Geils Band began as a glorified epitome of the raunchy R&B bar band. As their popularity declined, a whole new breed of innovative bar bands, most notably Southside Johnny's Asbury Jukes and Graham Parker's Rumour, rose up to take it from where Geils left off.

Bars usually equate with parties, and that pretty much describes past Geils concerts — one big party. However, the party atmosphere seems to fill in the gaps, Geils is very proud of the new LP, and their pride could be seen in concert renditions of the material.

"Go home's." This was unfortunate since The Rockets were one of the best backup acts I've seen in quite some time. The members all hail from Detroit, and their musical backgrounds read like a "Who's Who" of rock 'n roll; Mitch Ryder's Detroit, Edgar Winter Band, Little Feat, Jimi Hendrix, and Siegal-Schwail, to name a few.

The band played a tight set of combined melodic heavy metal, blues, and good ol' pure rock 'n roll. The double lead guitar duels and pyrotechnics were simply dynamic. The Rockets debut LP on RCA, Love Transfusion, is scheduled for release next week, and if their act was any indication of what to expect, they definitely have the potential of making it much further than just another warm-up act.

One final good note on Geils: Despite the mild reception, the band still did two encores (God bless 'em). This makes you want to respect them.

Lead singer Peter Wolf is almost as charismatic as he used to be, still crowd pleasing with a lot of dancing, weird hat changes, and even jumping from the stage into the pit on one occasion. Magic Dick still looks like he just escaped from an insane asylum as he spasmodically blows his harp, and J. Geils can still squeeze the hell out of a guitar. However, it often appears as though they're just going through the motions these days. Wolf seems to have mellowed considerably. Whereas he once screeched his between song Muhammad Ali poetic raps, he now mumbles a lot, making the statements almost inaudible, and one wonders if it isn't perhaps a result of boredom due to too much Hollywood. (Wolf is married to actress Faye Dunaway.)

At first, the concert's problem seemed to be the small crowd who wouldn't get in-

Bloody British punks

By DAVE DI MARTINO
State News Reviewer

Of all the English punk bands, the Stranglers have it made. Not only are they ugly, loud and offensive — and who wouldn't be singing "I Feel Like a Wog?" — they have capabilities far beyond those of normal punks: they can play their instruments.

The Stranglers' newest album, No More Heroes, has just been released by A&M, and it's great. It really is. Following their earlier Rattus Norvegicus LP, which virtually every critic around compared to the Doors during their "L.A. Woman" period, this new effort shows a lyrical evolution on part of the band.

Listen to these lyrics: "Whatever happened to all the Heroes. All the Shakespeares." And of course, the aforementioned "I Feel like a Wog" is a classic in its own right, outdone only by "Bring on the Nubiles," which contains lyrics guaranteed to bring it virtually no airplay. Ever.

But the Stranglers can play their instruments. And the "Doors sound" has hardened with this new LP, becoming vaguely reminiscent of yet another "stupid" British band, Hawkwind, particularly during that band's "Doremi Fasolado" period. Interestingly, the Stranglers seem to be the only current punk band playing DOWN to their audience. They purposely don't show their capabilities to the fullest, and don't really need to. Their songs contain very few solos — certainly very typical with current punkstyles — and those few solos are somewhat understated, particularly in view of what might be going on lyrically at the same time.

Initially the Stranglers were strongly resisted in Britain mainly because they weren't "punks." So true. As it happens they are ex-schoolteachers (a fact made quite apparent in the closing "School Mam" on this new LP) and all in their mid twenties. All for the better, musically speaking, because they've had more time to practice their instruments. Enter, another typical British punk band has four group members whose average age is fifteen.

Another critical count against the Stranglers is their much-flaunted sexism, which in this case has become a vital part of the group's present artistic contribution. It's not that guys don't sing "Someday I'm Gonna Smack Your Face" to their girlfriends very much that endears this band to me, it's the fact that primal urges are stated so bluntly, in a musically monotonous setting, one that brings to mind the Troggs, among other bands.

While few would contend that calling a woman a "piece of meat," as the Stranglers did on their first album's "London Lady," will win them feminist support, such behavior has contributed to the group's controversial image. Rattus Nor- vegicus has been the largest selling punk LP in Britain at this point (though undoubtedly the upcoming Sex Pistols album will quickly change that), and their chauvinistic stance has certainly proved no hindrance. Occasionally the banality present in the Stranglers' work is overwhelming, as in "Bitching," on the new LP, which contains a sweet-sung chorus of "I'm Bitching" while a drooling voice shouts "I'm telling you the gospel truth/ Why don't you all get screwed!" It sounds even more contrived than it looks, and is indicative of an element of parody that the Stranglers should work to keep out of their music. A vital fact in art: Never parody a parody.

Otherwise, the Stranglers are in top form. With two American LP's and a tour on the way, the Stranglers could easily become this country's favorite group of British punks. Watch out for them.

Guitarist Richard Stover will feature the classical guitar music of Latin America in a concert and lecture appearance, today and Friday.

Stover will perform the music of such Latin American composers as Lauro, Brouwer, Bonfa and Villa-Lobos tonight in the MSU Music Auditorium at 8:15 p.m.

Friday at 8 p.m. Stover will give a lecture that will feature slides and music tapes in 103 Music Practice Building.

Stover, who has played the guitar for 16 years, has lived and studied guitar in Spain, Mexico and Argentina. In 1975 he completed his BA in a special interdisciplinary major at American Ethnomusicology. Today, in addition to performing, writing, and editing music for guitar, Stover teaches classic guitar and Latin American music at the University of California at Santa Cruz.

The guitarist's appearance on campus is sponsored by MSU Music Department and the Classical Guitar Society of Lansing. Tickets for tonight's performance, which is partially funded by the Artisan Council for the Arts, are $2.00 and $1.00 for students with MSU IDs, and are available at Marshall Music Instruments and at the Health reps speak

A pre-professional open house for those interested in health careers will be held at 8 tonight, sponsored by the College of Natural Science. Fourteen representatives from state medical and dental schools will speak in various rooms in Bessey Hall.

The speakers will explain admission requirements and answer questions about four-year health programs.

"There will be people from all over the state," said Dr. Julius Hoffman, assistant dean for undergraduate counseling for the College of Natural Science.

"The speakers are volunteers from the admissions offices of the various schools. They'll discuss what their offices look for in admission applications, and what kind of competition exists, and what it means to the applicant," he said.

Careers in dentistry, osteopathic and human medicine, nursing, veterinary medicine, optometry and related fields will be discussed by representatives from MSU, University of Michigan, Wayne State, University of Detroit and Ferris State College.

"Anyone interested is invited to attend, especially students from MSU," Hoffman said.

The speakers will be in ten different rooms, with guides available to locate specific subjects and speakers. There is no admission charge.

Open house will inform MSU faculty

An open house on collective bargaining for MSU faculty will be a major feature of the annual meeting of the Michigan Conference of the American Association of University Professors (AAUP) to be held Friday and Saturday at Kellogg Center.

The informal discussion, to be held between 1 and 3 p.m. Friday, is to provide an opportunity for MSU faculty to discuss collective bargaining with colleagues from other institutions, including those with AAUP collective bargaining contracts.

Dr. Frank Blatt, president of the MSU chapter of the AAUP, said the open house was an attempt to inform MSU faculty about the collective bargaining issue before the MSU collective bargaining election.

The AAUP will be competing in the election with the MSU Faculty Associates to be the sole bargaining unit of MSU faculty members.

Featured speakers at the conference will include Dr. Morton S. Baratz, general secretary of the national AAUP, and state senator Gary G. Corbin (D-Clio), a member of the Senate Education Committee.

Conducting discussions on state government and higher education will be state representatives Dan Angel, (R-Battle Creek), Mary Brown (D-Kalamazoo) and Jackie Vaughn, III (D-Detroit).

Workshops and luncheon sessions will be held Saturday morning, followed by the luncheon and business meeting at 12 p.m.

The Michigan conference is a federation of AAUP chapters at more than 100 public and private colleges and universities in Michigan.

Series focuses on high-risk lifestyles

UNZIO M. LUPO

said Ronald Ruskjer, director for "Lifeline"
series.

The series is designed to help people change their high-risk lifestyles, Ruskjer said. Last year 750,000 people died as a result of heart disease, 350,000 as a result of cancer and 215,000 as a result of a stroke, he said.

The program is beginning on Sunday, Oct. 20 with a risk evaluation in parlor A Union from 7 to 11 a.m.

Another risk evaluation session will be held Thursday Oct. 20 from 7 to 11 a.m. in the lobby of the East Lansing City Hall, 410 Abbott Rd.

Ruskjer said the Lifeline series had a 70 percent success rate among the 156 participants in last year's program. They stopped smoking, lost weight, reduced their resting pulse rate and reduced their intake of high risk foods, he said.

The cost of the program is $15 per person or $25 for two members of the same family. Ruskjer said the fees pay for such things as the laboratory analysis required for the risk evaluation.

An optional seminar syllabus can be purchased for $10. The program is sponsored by the Seventh-Day Adventist Church in conjunction with the Michigan Heart Association and the American Cancer Society. It is endorsed by the Ingham County Health Department and the MSU University Health Center.

Interested persons must first pre-register by calling 321-0580.

Ruskjer advised people to drink nothing but plain water 12 hours prior to risk evaluation.

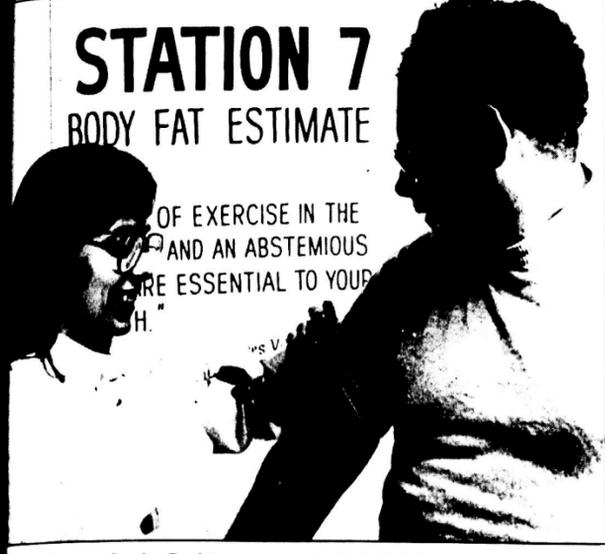

Following the risk evaluation a group consultation will be held Wednesday, Oct. 26 in the community room of the Seventh-Day Adventist Church, 149 Highland St.

The group consultation will include an interpretation of risk data and a question and answer period.

Following the consultation several seminars will be held to help people change their high-risk lifestyle.

These include:

- Smoking Cessation, Oct. 31-Nov. 4 from 7:30 to 9 p.m. nightly.
- Weight Control, Nov. 7 from 7 to 9:30 p.m.
- Physical Fitness, Nov. 8 from 7 to 9:30 p.m.

MSU's women harriers can count on Wadsworth

By GAYLE JACOBSON
State News Sports Writer

Cynthia Wadsworth enjoys being known as a runner. In fact, she wouldn't have it any other way.

The willowy sophomore runner has been the mainstay of the women's cross country team for MSU this year. So far this season she has led the harriers in both of their victories.

In their first meet against Wisconsin, she finished with a time of 18:56 for the 5,000 meter course. Last weekend in the invitational with Central Michigan and Hillsdale she cut her time by eight seconds, completing the wet course with the winning time of 18:48.

It was at Farmington High School (Connecticut) that she first began running. In her freshman year she went out for track, running the mile. Originally, it was just to give her something to do. She wanted to get involved with something in high school. As Wadsworth put it, "I wasn't serious about it at first..."

In her junior year, Wadsworth took first place for the state in the mile event, and in her senior year she placed first in both the mile and the two mile race. She finished the two mile event with a record time of 11:03.

When it came time to check out colleges, she said the most important factor was what kind of track and cross country teams the universities had to offer. She turned down a scholarship at the University of Southern Illinois to come to MSU.

Wadsworth, 5-foot-5 and 115 pounds, runs throughout the year and begins her training for fall cross country three weeks prior to the start of fall registration. She says she is basically on her own as far as the pre-season training goes.

After cross country in the fall, there's still indoor track to occupy her time during the winter months and outdoor track in the spring.

Wadsworth has proven herself to be a valuable asset to MSU's women harriers. In her freshman year at MSU she was among coach Mark Pittman's top three runners. At the AIAW National Championships held in Wisconsin last year she placed seventeenth in the nation and came in first for the MSU team. During the Big Ten Championship competition Wadsworth finished second.

Every tenth day is an active day off for the team members when the women aren't running, but engaging in some other type of physical activity such as swimming. The team's training program also includes lifting weights twice a week under the guidance of MSU's new weight lifting coach, Bill Thompson. And of course there are always those meets on Saturday.

Wadsworth doesn't get nervous before a meet as she did in high school. "I just look at it as going out to do the best I can now," she said. It's different when you're running for a team than when you're out for yourself."

Wadsworth says she's not a jock; in fact, she doesn't even like the work.

"I bet other people think of me as a jock — but I hope not. I don't like being considered a jock. It isn't a very nice stereotype. I consider myself more of a runner, an athlete."

Cynthia's interests don't stop with running. Outdoor sports such as hiking, bike riding and tennis are also a part of her lifestyle.

Someday she says she wants to run in the Boston Marathon. In the meantime, her summer months are spent running in road races up and down the New England States. The road races are sponsored by towns along the east coast and open to both sexes. The runners generally cover a seven mile stretch of road in the races.

Saturday's upcoming meet against Penn State in University Park, Pennsylvania has been foremost in her mind this past week. The team will leave Friday for what will be their toughest race, in coach Pittman's estimation. Wadsworth's main competition will be Penn State's top runner Kathy Mills. Mills recently set a new home record for the school's 5,000 meter course at a time of 16:46.26.

In running and competing throughout the year, Cynthia has had the opportunity to choose which sport she enjoys most. For her, cross country surpasses track.

"Cross country is nice because it's over so fast... I get more nervous in track sitting around watching everyone compete."

Wadsworth feels that running will be a part of her life for a very long time to come. It's in her blood.

New York's Thurman Munson tags out Los Angeles' Steve Garvey in the fifth inning of game one of the World Series. The Yankees won 4-3 in 12 innings.

Garvey played football and baseball at MSU and was also in the 1974 World Series. Story on page 11.

A MAN'S REACH SHOULD EXCEED HIS GRASP...

When you think about it— isn't the point of life reaching out? Only when people are secure, brave and open enough to reach out to others does life begin to yield the joy, the fulfillment, we expect from it.

Most of us think we are reaching out: for the job, the future, others in need, the ones we love. But if we're honest, we aren't reaching out at all. We're simply grabbing for security, a life that's safe, predictable, and only goes so far... limited, and perhaps, limiting.

THE PAULISTS believe in reaching out, to people who need to hear The Gospel, people who are lonely and confused, people searching for truth, for something to believe in—in colleges, on city streets, in slums, in suburbs, or wherever they may be.

We reach out because we're missionaries of the Catholic Church, a group of priests dedicated to proclaiming The Gospel in our times because we believe God is reaching out to every one of us.

If you think you can reach out as we do, if you think God may be calling you to a life of service as an inventive, modern, dedicated priest, write THE PAULISTS—a group of men who share a holy vision and live that vision in a free and friendly way.

Rowekamp put together leadership and ability

MSU's Kim Rowekamp injured his knee in last year's game against Michigan, a lot more than just the best guard in the Big Ten was lost.

Leadership is a quality in athletes that is often overlooked. It is just as important for an athlete to have leadership as it is for him to have physical talent.

Rowekamp is one of the few people who have both.

Rowekamp lettered in three sports at Kalamazoo Central High School and I played on the basketball team that he coached. Since I never got much of an opportunity to play, I had a lot of time to observe; and I've never seen a person for whom his teammates had more respect.

In all indications, it has been the same way for Rowekamp also.

Rowekamp's defensive tackle Larry Bethea, who has played next to Rowekamp for much of his college career, was unusually glum about the loss of Rowekamp.

"If you lose a Rowekamp, it's got to hurt," Bethea said. "A great player and he provides the leadership for the guys on the team."

Rowekamp's way he started out against Michigan, he was going to be one hell of a day," Bethea added.

Rowekamp was injured in the second quarter, he had made six tackles and knocked down a Rich Leach pass. The play he was hurt on was a sack of Leach.

Rowekamp is while going up against Walt Downing, Michigan's

All-American center. "He owned Downing in that game," said head coach Darryl Rogers.

Rowekamp has always played his best in MSU's big games so his performance in the one-and-a-half quarters against Michigan was not surprising.

In MSU's memorable 16-13 upset of Ohio State in 1974, he knocked down a Cornelius Green pass to stop one drive and he also helped stop fullback Pete Johnson at the goal line on the game's final play.

In another big game, he was named Sports Illustrated's defensive player of the week in a 10-3 win over Notre Dame in 1975. Rowekamp came up with an interception on Notre Dame's final possession to clinch the win.

Rowekamp will undergo surgery on his right knee Friday for cartilage damage. He missed part of 1975 and all of the 1976 season with an injury to his left knee.

Whether he will be able to recover well enough to play again is questionable. Rowekamp's eligibility at MSU is over and pro teams are usually not too high on players who have had both knees injured.

After his first injury, Rowekamp said he would not suit up again if he felt he could not play up to the ability he had before he was injured.

Rowekamp came back from that injury and, personally, I wouldn't be surprised to see big No. 43 in uniform for someone in the near future.

YANKEE SUBSTITUTES WIN MARATHON New York wins Series opener

NEW YORK (AP) — Paul Blair drilled a 12th-inning single into left field to score Willie Randolph with the winning run as the New York Yankees nipped the Los Angeles Dodgers 4-3 Tuesday night in a thrilling opening game of the 1977 World Series.

Sparky Lyle retired 11 consecutive batters after surrendering a game-tying pinch single to Lee Lacy in the ninth and nailed down the victory in relief of Don Gullett, who pitched a courageous 8 1/2 innings in a tough duel with the Dodgers' Don Sutton.

In the 12th, Randolph opened with a double on the first pitch from Rick Rhoden, the fifth Los Angeles pitcher.

Rhoden walked Thurman Munson, who had doubled home what seemed to be the winning run four innings earlier. That brought up Blair, who had replaced Reggie Jackson in right field in the ninth.

Again, the Yankees tried to bunt, but Blair simply couldn't get the ball down. When the count went to 2-2, the veteran outfielder got the hit sign and that's exactly what he did, lining a pitch into left field to bring Randolph dashing home with the decisive run.

It was the longest opening game in the World Series play and the 100th Series triumph in Yankee history.

WHAT'S AN NSA CAREER?

It's different things to different people.

For some, all employees at the National Security Agency have certain things in common: they are employees of the Department of Defense; they are engaged in technical projects vital to our nation's communications security or a foreign intelligence production mission; and they all enjoy the benefits that accompany Federal employment. However, the differences between our career opportunities are just as interesting as their similarities. For example...

TO THE COMPUTER SCIENTIST (BS/MS): It means applying his or her knowledge in a wide range of sub-disciplines such as systems design, systems programming, operating systems, computer applications analysis, and retrieval systems.

TO THE MATHEMATICIAN (MS): A career means defining, formulating, and solving complex communications-related problems. Statistical mathematics, matrix algebra and combinatorial analysis are just a few of the tools applied by the NSA mathematician.

Interested in learning more about the difference in an NSA career? Schedule an interview with us through your Student Placement Office today. If we do not recruit on your campus, send a resume to the address given below. U.S. citizenship is required.

THE ELECTRONIC ENGINEER (BS/MS): An NSA career means delving into unique projects which can span every phase of the R&D cycle. An engineer may design, develop, test and manage contracts on communications, recording, and information storage systems and systems whose capacities and speeds still considered futuristic in most quarters.

'Free U' reorganized, offers no-credit classes

By CATHERINE RAFTREY The classes are free, the atmosphere is relaxed and there are no exams. No, you haven't died and gone to academic heaven. Free University, an East Lansing community group offering free no-credit classes, is being reorganized by MSU students after being dormant for several years. "Free U" was originally introduced to the Michigan State campus and East Lansing community in 1966 with the goal of sparking new interest in learning by offering free education involving academic and non-academic courses. Several years ago, Free U had been successful in creating support for the classes held. The program's success was credited to professors, students community members and even state representatives who volunteered to teach classes free of charge to the public. Free University also received some funding through Associated Students of MSU. Many of the classes offered were so popular that more than sixty people attended at one time. Peter Coughlan, an MSU senior and acting Free U coordinator, said that the organization has suffered a gradual decline for the last few years. Coughlan blamed lack of strong leadership for the problem and said he believes hard work and dedication can rejuvenate Free U.

This fall, over thirteen student groups are being offered through Free U, including a television production workshop, yoga, bike repair, the history of the anarchist movement, writing, poetry and cooking. Most classes are completely free. However, a few require a minimal charge for material use. Coughlan stated that he is hopeful of starting new classes and is open for suggestions. He said Free U is also planning a film festival and coffee house later this term. Free University's first meeting this fall received only a sparse turnout, according to Coughlan. He attributed the small number to a lack of publicity and said he is confident of gaining more support as people become aware of the program.

Assistance provided to protect drivers

The best way, however, to safeguard against problems first place is with "preventative maintenance," George believes. Tools that most car owners should have for car maintenance include a 3/16" X 9" screw-holding type straight-blade driver, and a #1 X 8" Phillips screwdriver.

It is also good to have an 8" combination (slip joint) pliers, grip pliers, 10" channel lock pliers, and a set of end cutters combination (one end box (closed), one end open), a 16" hammer, and one 10" adjustable crescent wrench. Necessary odds and ends that are important to put in the trunk include electrical tape, spare fuses, spare fan belts (one of each size), a flashlight, rags, a jumper cable, and a jack under the wheels when changing tires, so the car stays level. It is also important to always carry a first aid kit, a chemical fire extinguisher.

For long trips it is always less expensive to carry your own tools.

One shot at an insulator can drop a city in its tracks. I know, because I'm a Consumers Power Lineman, and it's my job to search for the cause of a power failure. People who shoot out insulators forget that a single shot can bring down a house, a factory, a hospital or even an entire city. That's why Consumers Power offers substantial rewards for information resulting in either the arrest and arraignment or the apprehension of persons responsible for damage to our property. So, if you have information concerning such an incident, please contact a local police agency or call Consumers Power. TEN THOUSAND WORKING PEOPLE BRINGING ENERGY TO YOU. Women who smoke face greater risk of spontaneous abortion, study says

BOSTON (AP) — Women who smoke during pregnancy are nearly twice as liable as nonsmokers to lose their babies through spontaneous abortion, a study says.

The researchers recommended that women give up smoking to increase their chances of having full pregnancies with normal childbirth.

This study, conducted at New York's Columbia University adds another argument to the growing case against smoking during pregnancy. Earlier studies have shown that babies of women who smoke are smaller than normal and more likely to die at birth.

A report on the latest study was published in Thursday's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

The researchers were not sure why women who smoke have more spontaneous abortions, but they said there are two main theories. One is that smoking women eat less than nonsmokers. The other is that fetuses of smoking women do not get enough oxygen.

Researchers compared the smoking habits of 574 women who aborted spontaneously to those of 320 who delivered after full pregnancies.

They found that 41 percent of the women who aborted were smokers, compared to 28 percent of the women who had normal pregnancies.

Cross-multiplying figures for the number of women in both groups who smoked and didn't smoke, the researchers calculated an "odds ratio" of 1.8 for "the highly significant association with smoking." They said that meant a woman who smoked was 1.8 times as likely to have a spontaneous abortion as one who did not.

"My recommendation is that one shouldn't smoke during pregnancy," Dr. Jennie Kline, one of the researchers who conducted the study, said in an interview.

"There are certainly other reasons besides spontaneous abortion for not smoking," she said. "It's also related to low birth weight and increased risk of perinatal death" during or shortly after childbirth.

A spontaneous abortion — as opposed to one that is induced artificially — is defined as one in which a woman naturally loses a fetus less than about 20 weeks old. The researchers did not distinguish between a spontaneous abortion and a miscarriage, which is generally defined as loss of the embryo or fetus during the first three months.

Mystery of Vietnam's underground tunnels uncovered

"As more and more American soldiers arrived to occupy the surface above, the more we extended our system below," said a senior officer at the briefing, Col. Duong Long Sang. "At the end we had a three-tier tunnel system and everything was underground — the toilets, the hospitals, all our soldiers, many civilians and even our water buffalo."

The colonel continued: "We literally dug for 30 years, usually in the dark, squatting down. We carved out about a meter every eight hours, and women distributed the earth on the surface, hiding it under fallen leaves."

The tunnels crept under some U.S. positions. "Several times we knew that American field commanders would sit like this on their metal chairs directly above us," said Linh with a grin. The Vietnamese took our group for a visit, and as noisy swarms of mosquitoes buzzed around our heads we pushed ourselves through the narrow corridors, obviously built by and for slender Vietnamese. "We always moved in the dark, saving our candles and torches for emergencies," said Linh. "Our amputees lay in the dark, sometimes for months."

But eventually the Americans figured out the counter-attack.

The Americans tried to find the tunnels "and we had men until we constructed a tier escape level," said Linh. "The greatest problem those days was to not breathe air," said Linh. "I climbed into our vehicles and ride back to Saigon. I let him take a gulp of the humid and undisturbed air hangs over peaceful today."
