Bill may allow tax credit for fees

By STATE NEWS
and United Press International

Taxpaying parents of Michigan college and university students could save $65 million on next year's tax bill if proposed legislation is passed. Legislation by Rep. John Mowat, R-Adrian, would allow parents to write off 25 percent of direct education expenses for public and private schools on their Michigan income tax. Middle income families will be most affected. "These are people who generally earn too much money to qualify for scholarships based on need, but certainly don't earn enough money to really be able to afford a higher education for their children at today's costs," he said. Direct education expenses include tuition and some required fees, Mowat said. Tax credits would not be allowed for expenses related to room and board, he continued. The tax credit proposed by Mowat would result in a $65 million loss in tax revenues to the state during the first year according to current enrollment figures, he said.

To compensate for the loss in revenue, Mowat proposes a cutback on welfare programs. "Far too much of our money is spent on remedial social concerns," Mowat said. "Education is a better long-range investment." He said some of his colleagues would probably object to the bill on constitutional grounds. The argument could be that the tax credit should not be applied to private schools, he said. The Michigan attorney general and the courts upheld the constitutionality of the $200 tax allowance for donations to schools of a citizen's choice in the past, he said. "The die has been cast," Mowat concluded. For the first year the deduction could not exceed $800 per family, but would rise to $1,200 by 1978. "If we are truly committed to the concept of higher education — and I believe we are — then it is within our power to make that education available to as many of our citizens as possible," Mowat said, "without penalizing some because they neither earn too little or not quite enough."

South African police arrest 626 blacks

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — Police arrested 626 blacks, including 198 schoolchildren, in a house-to-house sweep through the Atteridgeville-Faulsvalle black township near Pretoria Thursday. Police threw a cordon around the township Thursday morning and stopped cars and buses going in and out of the township. The six-hour raid was supervised from the air by police in a helicopter. Brig. H. L. Abbott, division commissioner of police for the northern Transvaal province, said the raid was to combat criminal elements in the township. He said 410 blacks were arrested for passbook law violations and the 198 schoolchildren were detained to determine whether they were "children in need of care." Another eight blacks were charged with possession of stolen property, five were charged with public violence, four were arrested on possession of marijuana charges and one for illegal possession of gasoline. The passbook law requires blacks to carry an identity book and to obtain government permission to live and work in white areas. The law is used by white-ruled South Africa to control the movement of rural blacks in urban areas. Abbott said the raid outside of Pretoria had nothing to do with student unrest that has erupted intermittently in black ghettos over the past 16 months. The mass arrests Thursday followed a government crackdown Oct. 18 in which 18 organizations were banned, two major black newspapers were shut down and more than 60 black leaders were detained. Police said the arrested children would be investigated individually to determine if any should be referred to an institution. South Africa operates welfare homes for homeless black children. A local reporter at the township saw police seal off all four entrances to it and ordered bus and taxi passengers out of their vehicles at the main entrance. Male residents were ordered to produce their passbooks. Meanwhile, pupils continued boycotting school examinations in the township. The school boycott began last August. There are more than 300,000 black students boycotting classes and exams across South Africa in protest against separate black education and the Bantu system.

Merrill Lynch named for securities fraud

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Securities and Exchange Commission accused Merrill Lynch, the nation's largest stockbroker, of securities fraud Thursday for promoting the sale of a stock without adequately researching the potential of the company. After a four-year investigation with more than 300 witnesses, the SEC censured the brokerage firm and ordered it to pay $1.6 million to customers who suffered losses when the stock plummeted in value. Seven stock dealers were ordered suspended. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith Inc. and others named agreed to the administrative action without admitting or denying the allegations. The SEC's action effectively ends the case, which was not taken to court. A number of stockbrokers affected have reached an out-of-court settlement with Merrill Lynch's for $1.45 million. The accusations involve Merrill Lynch's promotion of Scientific Control Corp. to its customers between March 1, 1968, and Nov. 21, 1969. The SEC said Merrill Lynch told customers that the stock would double in a short period and compared it with gr-wth of such companies as IBM or Xerox. Instead, the stock fell from $70 per share on June 4, 1968, to $11.50 by June 21, 1969. Scientific was a small Dallas-based corporation which designed, manufactured and sold computers and data processing equipment. "When a brokerage dealer recommends a security to its customer, it represents that it has conducted a reasonable investigation of that security," the SEC said. "It is clear that an unseasoned company such as Scientific requires a more thorough investigation than a well-established company." The SEC said Merrill Lynch traded in more than 1.4 million shares of Scientific with a total dollar value of nearly $100 million and sold more than 4,000 shares of the stock. The SEC said that since the violations, "Merrill Lynch has improved the quality of its research capability by increasing the number of security analysts the firm employs." The commission dismissed proceedings against 19 of the accused employees, while 29 submitted offers of settlement.

'BB syndrome' found: doctors

By STATE NEWS
and United Press International
Doctors found in 24 Michigan residents in two separate studies have led researchers to say they have uncovered a "BB syndrome." PBB-exposed patients at the University Hospital in Ann Arbor and eight patients at the Henry Ford Hospital in Detroit had both mental and physical illnesses. Mental symptoms included poor memory, absence of personality changes. Physical problems were weakness, numbness in feet and fingers and frequent falls. Researchers will ultimately study a total of 50 people from a project funded by the state Department of Public Health. "Every appearance of a PBB syndrome," said Jeffery K. Stross, assistant professor of internal medicine at the University of Michigan, "has been associated with PBB exposure." Yet researchers have not positively identified the agent causing the symptoms, he said. Owsley, a University of Michigan spokesperson, said researchers definitely believe the people are sick. He said farmers could not pick up bales of hay. However, researchers cannot prove PBB is the cause of the illness, he said. Patients were highly exposed to PBB, no traces of the PBB could be found, Owsley said. "The use may very well be PBB syndrome," he said. "Now (the researchers) cannot find evidence to support it." He said further studies will continue. Henry Ford Hospital's Robert Nixon presented their findings at the Michigan State Medical Society conference this week in Lansing. William B. Weil, chairperson of MSU's Department of Human Development, attended the conference and reported that the studies differed in two aspects. In the Henry Ford findings, six out of the eight people studied had liver enlargement. Stross's studies showed only one person having a liver enlargement. University of Michigan psychiatrists also thought the mental illnesses may have been caused by an organic basis (outside influences), but the Henry Ford Hospital staff is not sure that those influences may be the cause. The differences in results, Weil said, are due to the different methods of research done by the two staffs. "There is no way to decide who is right," he said. "Maybe they're both right. At this preliminary stage, it's hard to decide. It's an important study to be done. Whether it can be related to exposed people in general is hard to say from this date so far." Dr. Kenneth R. Wilcox, chief of the disease control and laboratory services bureau of the state health department, said he is not surprised by the findings. He said the people chosen for the studies were previously involved in the PBB episode and were known to already have health problems. "It isn't surprising the symptoms were found," he said. "The studies were done on people we expected to find illness." It is not striking in terms of news that new people are being detected as suffering from PBB-related symptoms, Wilcox said. He added that some of the people examined were involved in a 1976 study conducted by a team led by Dr. Irving J. Selikoff, of the Mt. Sinai School of Medicine in New York. Selikoff's study of 1,029 Michigan residents uncovered symptoms which he suspected are PBB-related. "What we are looking for are some ways of determining in more detail what is wrong with the people and what to do about it," Wilcox said.

President Clifton R. Wharton Jr. applauds as the MSU Marching Band sings MSU Shadown outside Cowles House Thursday evening. It was the last band practice of the season and the final Spartan band practice Wharton will witness prior to his departure to Albany, N.Y., in January. The band presented Wharton with a photograph of the band on the practice field, adjacent to Cowles House, in appreciation for those countless hours the Whartons had to listen to the band practice since Wharton became president in 1970. But Wharton said he and his wife Dolores enjoyed every minute of their playing because "they're the best damn band in the land."

SCHOOLS VIE FOR TRADITIONAL, NEW STUDENT MARKETS

Enrollments to dip; recruiting battle looms

By RALPH FRAMMOLINO
State News Staff Writer

MSU, like any college or university, feasted on the glut of students during the 1960s. It built no less than 17 buildings between 1961 and 1974, and three building additions. Nine of those structures were dormitories in the East and South Complexes. Now, like any college or university, it must find a way to keep feeding itself with students, or suffer a financial coronary because of its size. Students will become scarcer. The number of "traditional students" — those between 17 and 25 years old pursuing undergraduate degrees full-time — is waning in most parts of the country. TRADITIONAL STUDENTS DECREASE In Michigan, educators and government bureaucrats expect a 25 percent decrease in the influx of traditional students within the next 20 years. Translated, this means tomorrow's high school graduate can save the cost of a query letter; the colleges will be coming to them. And trends indicate that will not be enough to stave off financial malnutrition. Institutions like MSU will turn to other "markets" of students, most likely the burgeoning market of older, part-time students. "The number one major issue for the next decade is what I term 'cannibalism' — competition for a finite number or mix of students," said Ron Root, who analyzes higher education funding for the state House Fiscal Agency. The Fiscal Agency advises Michigan legislators on appropriations decisions.

"You can't rely on the integrity of the institutions, because in most cases they don't have any." — Rep. Gary Owen, D-Ypsilanti.

"In the next ten years, we're going to have a tremendous problem," he said. Private schools don't see themselves as fighting for students. "I think it's obvious there's going to be competition for students," said John Gaffney, lobbyist for Michigan's private schools. But he added this caution: "Remember that the independent colleges in this state are about as large as they ever want to be. We are pretty well equipped for an era in which there are less students." It appears that the contest for the old and new student markets will match the MSUs against the U-Ms and the MSUs against the Lansing Community Colleges (LCC), of the state. Competition for the precious student comes after a heady 12 years when college and university enrollments jumped 54 percent. Community colleges gained substantially. Their total admissions rose 76 percent between 1964 and 1976. Eleven of the state's 29 community colleges were built during those years. Public four-year schools — like MSU, U-M and Central Michigan — scored a more modest gain, with a 42 percent increase in that time. The trend in enrollment is reversed, however. The spectre of immense cost (continued on page 5)

Millionaire kidnapped in Vienna

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Vienna's millionaire "stockings king" was kidnapped near his home in a luxurious Vienna district and a note found at the site demanded $3.1 million for his return, police sources said Thursday.

They said Walter Palmers, 74-year-old owner of a chain of women's apparel shops across Austria, was dragged from his car during the night near his villa in the fashionable 18th district. The unidentified kidnappers spirited him off in another car.

Palmers is reportedly suffering from a heart ailment and asthma, and family members were said to be concerned for his health.

Austrian press reports said Palmers' Swedish-born wife Gunilla became suspicious when she saw his car outside their villa late Wednesday night hours after he said he would be home. The reports said she found a brief note demanding that the ransom be paid by Saturday.

Police would not confirm the reports. But they ruled out any political motive for the kidnapping and hauled Palmers' car to headquarters to comb it for clues.

Soviet Union expels two Swedes

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union announced Thursday that it expelled two Swedes arrested at the Polish border June 9 for allegedly trying to take "slandering" written material out of the country.

Tass, the official Soviet news agency, identified the two as Bengt Gunnar Soreld, 32, and Nils-Erik Engstrom, 26. They were detained by Soviet border authorities in Brest, Byelorussia.

Tass said the men were freed in view of "the request of the Swedish government and humanitarian considerations and in the interests of the development of Soviet-Swedish relations."

The report said the men were "freed from confinement Nov. 10 and expelled from the Soviet Union." It gave no details of how they were sent out of the country.

Tass accused the two men, who are both Pentecostals, of ties with the Swedish "Slavic Mission." Tass said the mission has regularly sent representatives to the Soviet Union "posing as tourists, bringing in by contraband means... foreign currency, goods and hostile literature."

Carter signs paycheck resolution

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter Thursday signed a resolution assuring paychecks for thousands of employees at two Cabinet departments and smaller related agencies, jeopardized because of congressional wrangling over abortion.

The resolution, the second in as many months, provides money for Nov. 30 payrolls in the Departments of Labor and Health, Education and Welfare and related agencies. It also provides funds for the District of Columbia government.

Because their funds are in a $60.2 billion appropriations bill that includes federal money for abortions, held up because of a protracted dispute between the House and Senate, the agencies have curtailed travel, overtime, purchases and other expenses.

Safety commission to study cellulose

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Consumer Product Safety Commission, concerned about the safety of home insulation materials, directed its staff Thursday to concentrate on the alleged fire hazard of cellulose, a common type of insulation.

Cellulose accounts for about 30 percent of the insulation market, the staff said, and is made by shredding up cellulose products, including old newspapers, cardboard and wood pulp. Chemicals, usually borax mixtures, are added to make it fire-resistant.

The commission voted unanimously to instruct its staff to prepare a federal flammability standard for cellulose.

The cellulose insulation industry has voluntary flammability standards, and the federal government has specifications on material used in government buildings.

School lunch specifications considered

WASHINGTON (AP) — Even if the Agriculture Department decides to let processors add finely ground bits of bone to some meat items, the bone probably will not be allowed in government-donated hot dogs eaten by children in school cafeterias, a department official said Thursday.

Assistant Secretary Carol Tucker Foreman told reporters "we probably will not rewrite the specifications" for school lunch donations to permit the use of "tissue from ground bone."

"I haven't made that decision yet, but I basically don't anticipate that we'll rewrite those specifications," said Foreman, who oversees food and consumer services in the department.

Current federal regulations do not include specifications for the purchase of ground-up meat, bone and connective tissue for donation to schools. But Foreman said if the process is approved, local school systems probably could buy such products made from the mixture with their own funds if they wished.

Commission OKs baby rattle regulation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Consumer Product Safety Commission approved on Thursday a regulation designed to eliminate the hazard of infants swallowing and choking on baby rattles.

At least eight children in this country and two in Canada are known to have died as a result of suffocation from rattles, the agency staff said. Some of the incidents involved babies pushing the rattle down their throats or falling on the small rattles and ramming them down their throats.

The commission approved a rattle size standard that was adopted last June in Canada. In the United States it will become effective 90 days after promulgation of the final rule, expected soon.

Under the standard, a rattle is banned if the whole or any part of it will fit into a cavity five centimeters, or 1.97 inches, long; 3.5 centimeters, or 1.38 inches wide; and 3 centimeters, or 1.18 inches deep. The concern is about the end of the rattle, whether it has a lollipop, telephone, clothespin or some other shape.

Carter aide says government should develop safe cigarette

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's chief health assistant said Thursday that programs intended to stop smoking are not working and that the government should help develop a safe cigarette.

"No matter how much we may favor the prohibition of tobacco products, we are 300 years too late," said Dr. Peter Bourne, special assistant to the president for mental health and drug abuse.

"Many people who honestly do not want to smoke cigarettes cannot stop," Bourne told the anti-cigarette American Cancer Society. "To them, smoking is a relaxing, tranquil experience which gives them pleasure and relief at times of stress."

Speaking to the society's ad-hoc committee on tobacco and smoking research, he said development of a safer cigarette should be a high priority.

The presidential adviser urged cigarette makers to cooperate. Their advertising expenditures for the promotion of low-tar and low-nicotine cigarettes indicates that at least some of them would be willing to cooperate in the development of a safe product," he said.

Bourne advised the researchers not to assume that tobacco use is all bad. "It may be that certain of the chemical breakdown products of tobacco have beneficial or mixed effects," he said.

He also had soothing words for smokers who get angry at elevators, stores, planes and buses — even restrooms — where smoking is sometimes prohibited.

"Research regarding the effects of smoking in confined areas should not automatically begin with the answer that smoking should be prohibited," he said.

"It is essential that the strategy be one that will work and is acceptable to the American people. Better ventilation may provide a better and easier answer in some instances..."

The number of non-smokers whose health is adversely affected by the cigarette smoke of others may be very small."

However, Bourne said the government should determine exactly what the danger from tobacco smoke is smokers. "It should be a high priority for us to pursue the research, because we find some direct effects of others people's breathing dramatically bolsters the measures against medical advisers said. Bourne also questioned programs aimed at ing smoking or making "If it is true that the nicotine in cigarettes increases the number of cigarettes smoked, low-tar may increase the tobacco smoke reduce them," he said

Secret vote outweighs judicial expediency

The decision of the Michigan Court of Appeals that two women must disclose how they voted in a past election is an inexcusable denial of their constitutional rights.

The two Ann Arbor-area women, Susan Van Hattum and Diane Lazinsky, refused to reveal how they voted upon orders of a judge and were cited with contempt of court.

One of the women was even handcuffed and taken into custody. The issue sprang from Republican Louis Belcher contesting the Ann Arbor mayoral election last April 4 in which he lost to Mayor Albert Wheeler, a Democrat, by one vote.

Belcher claims that 23 illegal votes were cast. When the voters were asked in court how they voted, in an effort to get a legal tally, Van Hattum and Lazinsky did not divulge the information.

The two women, along with 21 others, were allowed to register and vote because city officials believed their addresses were within city boundaries. When it was discovered that these people technically did not live in the city, it was decided they cast illegal votes and were therefore denied the constitutional protection of a secret ballot.

But the fault does not rest with these two voters. Rather, it was a mistake of city officials. These two women should not be made to pay for the errors of their city government.

The balance of the 23 voters who did reveal their votes before the court did so of their own volition, but should have had the right to withhold that information if they so desired.

The constitutional rights of all citizens must be preserved at all costs. The election was an exceedingly close one, and obviously the fact that 23 people voted illegally could change the outcome. However, there is a much more viable solution to the problem than forcing innocent citizens to forego a basic constitutional right.

A new election should be held. The cost of such a venture would be high, but certainly not prohibitive. In any event, what is greater — the cost of holding a new election, or the cost of violating — in however small a way — the Constitution?

Another election would maintain voters' rights and clarify Ann Arbor's choice of mayor. The cost of a new election is academic. The right to a secret ballot is priceless, and should not be discarded because of judicial expediency.

A good sex ed bill

The state House Wednesday took a step out of the past by approving a bill lifting Michigan's long-standing ban on the teaching of birth control in public schools.

Until now, Michigan and Louisiana were the only states to prohibit the teaching of birth control.

The new bill will allow, but not require, Michigan schools to instruct students. But parents will have the prerogative to remove their children out of the classroom if they do not approve of what is taught.

Teacher-parent advisory panels will be established to review material, and abortions as a means of birth control will not be taught.

Gov. Milliken is expected to sign the bill into law and a speedy approval.

The rate of teenage pregnancies is on the rise, and finally schools will have the opportunity to alter this dismal pattern by the best means possible — education.

Though ideally sex education should — like all education — be at home as well as at school, evidence shows that parents sometimes turn away from the subject, to their later regret.

We approve of this long-overdue bill and hope all Michigan schools will make the legislation reality.

A wise decision

The ASMSU Student Board treated the matter of retaining the Council with proper decorum at its Tuesday night meeting, because public pressure made it difficult to act otherwise.

We suspect the board's uncharacteristic display of concern for a heretofore ignored group was not so much the result of genuine concern but because intense pressure was put on ASMSU Student Council representatives and the media.

In fact, Barry made remarks at the Tuesday meeting to the effect that he would have liked more board members to express the views of the community in their public statements and votes.

It is obvious Barry and several board members were well aware of their position in the public eye.

Regardless of the reasons for Tuesday's decision, the retention of the Council as part of ASMSU with attendant funding and allocation of space is both commendable and gratifying. The council provides services to the sizeable minority of gays on campus that are as good as affirmative action programs are to other minorities. These services deserve the unqualified support of all.

'Begins to barf'

I hear the alarm clock ringing, shuts it off and stumbles to the bathroom with the day's State News in hand. I open it up to the editorial page to see what Ira Elliott has to say about Soul. I scan the paper and find Lash Larrowe's ever-present column full of babble. And I begins to barf. In my semi-conscious state, I contemplate the inanity before me.

I wondered how a university the size of MSU can permit such an egotistical and witless educator to consume any space in a student publication of the State News' caliber. Surely an incoming freshman could stimulate scholarly discourse more effectively than this pseudo-intellectual. Please revoke this juvenile's license to bore in an otherwise enlightening editorial page.

Band lauded

If you were a fan at the Homecoming Game on Oct. 29, you would have seen two teams emerge victorious... and both were on our side! The football team looked great. But, it was evident that another "team" won the hearts of the fans also. That "team" was the MSU Marching Band.

In a marching season when a "Star Wars" theme was to be expected, never have I been so amazed at a halftime show. Everyone was giving 100 percent to make those very difficult "patterns in motion" drills look like starships and intergalactic phenomena. It proved to me once again that MSU has the best marching band in the country.

It was with a sad shaking of the head that I read the Viewpoint concerning the Department of Public Safety (DPS) written by Laureen Beale. For those readers who have forgotten their eighth-grade civics, the police in this country do not make the laws, they enforce them. The DPS does not have the authority to make new rules or change the old ones. This authority is in the hands of the All-University Traffic Committee and the MSU Board of Trustees. The traffic committee, consisting of faculty, staff and students, formulates new rules and policies and submits them to the trustees for approval.

In the past eight years I have read many letters in the State News concerning the parking and driving problems on campus. Like a broken record they describe the conditions we are all aware of. Unfortunately, very few contained any proposals to make the system work better. To make the campus a better place to live and work, donate your concrete, workable solutions.

Those who would like to become more involved can become members of the traffic committee, thus having a voice and a vote where it really counts. The problems are not insurmountable but it will take the efforts of concerned people and often lots of money to overcome them.

Oppose Shah

Vietnam, once known to few Americans, was thrust into the limelight by media coverage of U.S. imperialism and war in that country. The work of several groups has begun to raise the issue of ongoing U.S. imperialism in Iran. There are several reasons Iran was chosen for U.S. domination and CIA intervention in 1953, and aid to strengthen the Shah's reactionary regime is increasing. Most of the reasons are related to protection of economic interests of the big industrial corporations and oil monopolies. Because these investments are still very lucrative, they want "stability" and to crush the struggle of people trying to gain control of their own means of existence and natural resources. The United States supplied the Shah with offensive weapons and about 40,000 "military advisors." Does this sound like Vietnam?

The people of Iran are being exploited, and their living conditions are deteriorating as oil revenues go to an elite minority. There is a tremendous growth in the military or Iran which is purchasing 60 percent of U.S. exports. Naturally, the Iranian people are organizing and arming to fight the Shah and establish an independent and democratic Iran.

The New American Movement supports the struggle of the Iranian people. Part of that struggle is the organization of Americans to protest the state visit of the Shah this month. Military and economic support must be withdrawn from the Shah. This Friday there will be a rally at Beaumont Tower at 11:00 a.m. and a march to the capitol to protest the Shah's visit and the repressive regime in Iran.

Clearly, the Iranian people's struggle will be eventually victorious. Let's act together to ensure rapid change to independent self-government in Iran.

Capitol rally underscores gay rights

This term, the State News has given a lot of play to human rights, and gay rights in particular. As a result, my beloved opinion editor has put up with countless emotional letters, phone calls, and people coming in to complain about the paper running too many editorials on gay rights. No one has ragged about too much coverage of South Africa, or Carter, or any other major issue. But gay rights hits home, and there is more anti-gay sentiment in a community that I thought was fairly liberal in its thinking than I could have ever imagined.

The Lansing Gay Liberation Front, a new and promising organization, sponsored a rally on the steps of the Capitol Wednesday. It was a well-prepared program, with several intelligent and distinguished speakers giving all the rational points that prove gays are a minority and deserve the same rights as everyone. I was quite disheartened to see people have to fight for something they have technically been guaranteed in the Constitution, yet denied all through history. The stereotypes are still vivid in the minds of the majority — the limp-wristed, effeminate hairdressers and dress designers. People seem satisfied with this twisted misconception, and continue to push the closet door tight with fear tactics.

What people don't realize when they push homosexuals into the closet is that it is not only the loss of gays, but their own. I have extraordinarily intelligent and sensitive friends that happen to be gays. I love them very much, and cry inside when I see the abuse and humiliation they go through daily. Because I am willing to stand behind them, to do what I can for them, I am called a dyke, a fag hag, despite the fact that I am an intelligent, heterosexual woman. I must not be normal if I stick up for all those faggots.

People don't want to remember that Socrates, Plato, Percy Bysshe Shelly, Leonardo Da Vinci, and countless others were either homosexual or bisexual. God knows how many more great minds they impose hardship on, that are trying to grow and live fully today.

And heaven forbid any normal, well adjusted person should walk into one of those decadent cha-chas palaces on Michigan Avenue known as the "gay bars." Well, people, you sure are missing out. I can't even convey to you the friendly, warm atmosphere that surrounds you. You will meet some of the most interesting, intelligent members of the community. It's absolutely disgusting that there are so few places where they can be themselves without the threat of abuse.

I wonder how straight, anti-gay people would cope with the thought that they must not act freely, that they cannot assume that this society gives them any rights. You can't hold hands with the one you love on the street. You must hide who and what you are from employers, landlords, everyone you are forced to deal with each day. You are constantly faced with the threat of losing your job, being beaten up and harassed.

Homosexuals aren't out to "recruit" children, or to rape people in bathrooms. They just want to live with the rights that most of us take for granted. This is obvious in any gay you happen to meet, and in the rally last Wednesday. After the rally, the participants went to one of the gay bars to celebrate, with much due cause. It is difficult to realize the courage it takes to stand up and say, "Yes, I'm one of those people you call sick, decadent, and immoral. But I'm not, I'm a person just like you. I let you live your life, and I want to live mine." Those who spoke at the rally will most definitely face abuse for speaking whether straight or gay. It's fantastic yet amazing that shouting for equality. With so little and so much abuse, they are strong individuals who are demanding change and proud is a painful thing to be in society, but I admire them for courage. Attitudes are changing, and continue to change. Anger is replacing the cause is solidifying, and that's coming.

PART-TIME, OLDER MARKET TAPPED.

Schools scurry for scarce students overruns will confront administrators, legislators, taxpayers and students alike.

"Years ago you used to be able to sit back and wait for students and when the classes got full, that was it," said a harried Wayne State University, (WSU), admissions officer. "It's becoming more competitive to attract students to come to school."

MSU Assistant Provost Ira Polley said the University's recruiters are no busier today than they have been in the past. "We have plenty of work to do to fulfill our present mission. We have no battle plans (for the future)," he said.

HIGH SCHOOL GRADUATES DECREASING

The pool of high school graduates from which colleges draw their enrollments will shrink 34 percent by 1994, according to two

MSU professors.

Stanley Hecker and Frederick Ignatovich derived these projections by feeding birth-rate data into computers for a state Department of Education report released this year.

"There's no doubt there will be a smaller pool of students that will potentially go to college," Hecker said. His figures project a drop from 155,400 to 102,000 students by 1994.

Educators hope the percentage of high school graduates going to college will increase, even if the entire pool shrinks. They say this may counter the problem.

ADMISSION STANDARDS DOWNGRADED

However, Root contends that schools like MSU are actively wedging into the dwindling market by rolling down admissions standards.

"Don't let MSU fool you," he said. "They're an open door institution. Since 1970, the way four-year institutions maintained their enrollment levels was to reduce requirements."

"When (MSU President) Clifton Wharton is hired at MSU, he's not hired to make his institution smaller or even keep it the same size," he continued. "He's hired for the same reason any corporate president is hired: to make his institution bigger and better."

Even lowering the requirements, however, may not be enough to entice the fickle recruit to the door of a megaversity.

Price is a factor. The cost of attending a big school may far outweigh the benefits for some who opt to attend a community college.

COST AS A FACTOR

Price comparisons in selected areas show a drastic difference between the costs of four-year schools and community colleges for freshman and sophomore classes.

For instance, a full year at LCC costs in-district students $397 for tuition. MSU charges $967 for freshman tuition alone.

Washtenaw Community College charges $420 a year while U-M asks for $1008 in tuition and Eastern Michigan University's rate is $755. WSU's fee of $978 is challenged by Macomb Community College's $445, Henry Ford Community College's $370 and Highland Park Community College's $390.

The cost factor apparently does not

Michigan's campuses.

He said the state may want to coordinate the direction of higher education, but not control it.

It remains to be seen whether the schools want to make such a distinction. The intense feeling right now is that they do not.

Whether legislators who hold the power of the purse will allow colleges to go on their merry way is also open to debate.

Legislators have never relished haggling with their more sophisticated counterparts in higher education. Rep. Gary Owen, D-Ypsilanti, indicated a resentment towards the high-handed way administrators beg for money and then insist on autonomy.

The political system dictates one harsh reality: those with the money have the power.

If the enrollment depression becomes severe, the legislature, through its power to cut funds, may have the bigger club.

Then the cries for autonomy from the lips of educators will be futile noises.

out the state for each school.

The second report will project enrollments for the future and walk the precarious line of policy recommendations.

How the education community receives the report is, of course, yet to be seen. But there are indications the response will not be too warm.

One university administrator took a dim view of the state's concern.

He confided that the "brouhaha" about enrollment is probably another attempt by the government to infringe upon schools' autonomy.

Dr. Jim Weber, director of the Department of Education's Higher Education division, acknowledges the enmity from when it initiated its new school of continuing education in early January.

The school faced a $2 million deficit and hoped the move would be a major source of new revenue. It also expanded on part-time graduate work.

MSU REORGANIZES

Likewise, MSU is drawing in the strings. The administration discontinued the "Life of Inquiry" program at Justin Morrill College (JMC), a small, liberal arts college, to devote more resources to continuing education.

Former Provost Lawrence Boger said JMC's programs were discontinued because its costs were high and enrollments were plummeting. JMC cost MSU almost double the amount a credit per student compared to other university colleges, he said.

Now, the non-traditional student is the target, and expanded adult education programs will begin next fall.

These will be added to the 340 courses offered at night to part-time students; MSU offers classes in 45 Michigan institutes.

COURSE TITLES OFFER INCENTIVE

Schools are enticing older students with softer courses, or those with jazzed-up names.

Astronomy becomes "Autumn Sky-Watching" at MSU's Evening College. Courses are offered in American antiques, bicycle touring, creative off-loom weaving and Chinese brush painting.

Community colleges offer mushroom hunting, microwave cookery, sailing techniques, a zipper clinic (an LCC offering) and handwriting analysis.

This is not to say more traditional subjects are taking a back seat. Schools still push graduate courses. For instance, Detroit is fertile soil for business and management courses.

In fact, lines of off-campus courses from schools like MSU cross the state, tangling with other four-year schools and encroaching on the ground of the community colleges.

Figures from the National Center for Education Statistics indicate that the number of those going back for some sort of adult education is swiftly outstripping the growth of the adult population itself.

Participation in adult education has zoomed upward, nearly 31 percent between 1969 and 1975 while the number of people 17 years and older has increased 12.6 percent.

The number of MSU students ages 23 to over 50 has grown 20 percent between 1971 and 1975. Community colleges like LCC have also enjoyed an increase in older student enrollments.

MSU COMPETES WITH UNIONS
Unlike the traditional student market, however, schools like MSU have to contend with unions, companies and private firms that are all too willing to provide education for the older student.

And if the new student market is absorbed by non-university or college suppliers of education, MSU and LCC could be tracking an enrollment collision course.

"That would be a logical and normal expectation," said Armand Hunter, MSU's dean of life-long learning. "Right now, we don't find we have that kind of competition, even in the courses for part-time students."

"I expect it to happen in some degree," he added. "Only time will tell."

So does LCC's President Philip Gannon, but only to a limited extent.

"Some competition is appropriate," Gannon said. "As long as all of the partners included don't abuse each other."

"I'm enough of a believer in people and in public boards and faculty and administrators that we will do our best to handle our responsibility in a mature and honorable way."

At least one person is unconvinced.

"You can't rely on the integrity of the institutions because in most cases they don't have any," said Rep. Gary Owen, D-Ypsilanti. "I know full well they won't mediate themselves. Most of them are self-centered and self-motivating."

Owen is chairperson of the House Appropriations Subcommittee on Higher Education and deals with school presidents each year when they ask for money.

TAXPAYERS MAY BEAR COSTS

He thinks taxpayers will pay for poor planning by schools through increased subsidies to higher education.

Whatever the cost — and who bears it — MSU and its educational cohorts will likely have to tighten their belts and search for new students. Clearly, the situation is no laughing matter.

As one WSU admissions officer summed it up, "Unless something happens (like a new influx of older students), we're dead."

Lansing attorney held on drug charges

DETROIT (UPI) — A prominent Lansing attorney and his wife were among 34 people indicted by a federal grand jury Thursday for conspiracy to import and distribute cocaine, hashish and marijuana.

H. Eugene Bennett, his wife Judy, and 13 others have already been arrested, federal and state authorities said.

The indictments charged members of three separate drug rings from Michigan, Ohio and Toronto, Canada. Edmund Amaya of Lansing, who is serving a prison term for tax evasion, and John A. Schneider II of Lansing were identified as the leaders of one of the rings.

Vaughn, all were charged with conspiracy to distribute large quantities of marijuana.

Amaya, who also was charged with engaging in a continuing criminal enterprise, allegedly purchased the marijuana and brought it to Michigan from the Mexican-Texas border.

Another indictment charged the Schneiders, plus a third brother, Mark, along with David and Mary Jane Shue of Kalamazoo, with conspiring to import and distribute large quantities of hashish, hash oil and marijuana from Jamaica into the U.S. and Canada. John A. Schneider II was identified as the ringleader of this operation and also was charged with engaging in a continuing criminal enterprise — an offense which carries a sentence of 10 years to life without parole upon conviction.

A third indictment charged the Bennetts, Fred Sunderman, who is in jail in Lajara, Mexico, jail in Santana of Detroit and Hildegard, with conspiring to import and distribute hashish, hash oil and marijuana into the U.S. and Canada. This organization is operated between San Diego, Calif., and American photography class offered

Students can focus on the impact that photography has had on American culture in a course to be offered winter term in American Studies.

Interest in photographs and photography has skyrocketed in the last ten years, according to Justin Kestenbaum, associate professor of history and former commercial photographer, photo lab technician and photography instructor.

"Photography is an important part of both popular and serious culture," he said. "Some museums are spending more money on photographs now than they are on paintings."

The invention of the camera is comparable in importance to the invention of movable type, said Russel B. Nye, distinguished professor of English and co-teacher of the course with Kestenbaum.

Photography has had an impact on people's ideas of reality, on their memory and sense of time, Nye said.

The visually-oriented course will combine the study of the development of photography as technology with the study of the camera's effects on social, cultural and artistic life in America.

Topics will include cultural nationalism and the photo, the emergence of photography as an art form, photography as an element in the development of modern communication, and major photographers.

American Studies 301 — Issues in American Civilization: Photography and American Culture — will meet on MWF from 9:10 to 10:00 a.m. in 112B Morrill Hall. There are no prerequisites for the course and enrollment is not limited.

SMAB, with a $50,000 yearly budget, lost four members over summer break. Last week chairperson Terry Riley also resigned.

"One of the big reasons this happened was because a lot of people that made a commitment to SMAB just weren't responsible enough to go through with it," Vatter said. "Either that or they've been suffering from extremely poor leadership," he said.

Student publications are supported by yearly or tri-yearly allocations from SMAB. According to Vatter, publications that must reapply for funding each term, such as Rhapsody, are most affected by its internal problems.

Rhapsody is now indebted to staff, photographers and typewriter and telephone companies. It may also not be able to continue publishing, even though it still will have to pay the remainder of a printing contract.

'I, Claudius:' a majestic failure

Derek plays the title role in BBC's adaptation of Robert Graves' I, Claudius on WKAR, channel 23.

Richard Pryor hospitalized

PEORIA, Ill. (AP) — Comedian Richard Pryor was in good condition in a hospital's intensive coronary care unit Thursday after suffering what his grandmother said was a heart attack.

The 36-year-old star of such films as Car Wash and Silver Streak was admitted to the Methodist Medical Center's emergency room about 8:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Pryor, a former Peoria resident who now lives in Beverly Hills, Calif., suffered chest pains and was taken to the hospital in a private car, according to his grandmother, Marie Bryant.

By KATHY ESSELMAN
State News Reviewer

I, Claudius, Jack Pulman's adaptation for the BBC production of Robert Graves' poetic evocation of the Augustan Age, wallows in the dissolute splendor of the early Roman Empire.

Graves' I, Claudius and Claudius the God, published in 1934, chronicles the rise of the Empire and the implementation of the absolute rule which replaced the Roman Republic after the acclamation of Augustus by the Senate.

His narrative celebrates humanist values and seems influenced by existentialism. His work was woven from Suetonius' Lives of the Caesars, affected by contemporary Augustan poets Horace and Virgil.

Graves' work is characterized by measure, wit and the fine flowing phrases that distinguish graceful translations of well-turned Latin prose. Unfortunately, Pulman, in his adaptation for the BBC, has seen fit to modernize the language. He approaches Augustan Rome in the same spirit that the Enquirer pokes into Elvis' bedroom.

Herbert Wise directs with a lip-smacking enthusiasm that indicated that he perceived the Lady Livia as having closer kinship with the Brothers Grimm's wicked stepmothers than her Claudian antecedents in Republican Rome. Graves' sinuous, eloquent prose is here supplanted with Puritan preachment more befitting a 19th century melodrama.

Sian Phillips gives an elegant performance as Augustus' wife, the Lady Livia who hesitates at poisoning no one in order to insure that her son Tiberius succeeds. Augustus as Emperor. She gives a convincingly chilling performance as this wolfish monster in woman's garb. Yet, Wise has overdirected her at the price of the drama.

She rolls her eyes malevolently each time she spies one of the possible contenders for the title, like Marcellus, son of Marc Anthony, whom she handily dispatches with slow poison in the opening episode. She will continue wreaking havoc until Tiberius takes the throne, and her performance in the opening episode indicates that she will be the focal point of the action for a while. Her portrayal is meticulous, but overdirected and underwritten. Jack Pulman's script is by any standard too facile, idiomatic, and unsubtle for his material.

This version lacks the subtlety and eloquence of the unfinished version of the epic, undertaken by Alexander Korda in 1937, directed by Joseph von Sternberg and starring Charles Laughton. That version drew directly upon the text of the book, resulting in a more sophisticated approach to this material.

The BBC version, in 13 episodes, is part of Public Television's Masterpiece Theater broadcast locally on WKAR-TV, channel 23, at 9 p.m. Sunday, with a weekly rebroadcast on Friday at 9 p.m.

The BBC has mounted this production with its customary care. It is opulent, but not excessive, and the women look as if they had emerged from the wall paintings of Pompeii. Their care to detail extends to the proper intense shade of blue in the correctly restrained wall decorations of Marcellus' bedroom. This is a lavish, but unsatisfying adaptation of I, Claudius.

Lian (Sian Phillips) lulls young Lucius (Russell Lewis) and Gaius (Earl Rhodes) into allying any suspicions of her evil intent with her pretense of motherly devotion in I, Claudius, episode two.

'Allegro Non Troppo' innovative animation

By BYRON BAKER
State News Reviewer

Italian animator Bruno Bozzetto's recent feature Allegro Non Troppo is an often charming and beautifully innovative cartoon work to be seen in some years.

Ostensibly, Allegro Non Troppo is a broad parody of sequences of a stuffy impresario introducing a pompous and his all-old-woman orchestra playing selections of the Great Music, which are then interpreted in animation by the animator and his artists. The live-action scenes are reminiscent of the animated sequences from Fellini's The White Nights.

Bozzetto and his gifted colleagues have here attempted the same sort of ambitious fusion of musical mood and imagery that Disney and company pioneered in the late 1930s. The accompanying live action footage is intended as the animation — the bulk of the film — seems more like the earlier film. The animation is smooth and elegant, features a distinctive feel for use and styling of color.

Bozzetto and his gifted colleagues have here attempted much the same sort of fusion of musical mood and animation that Disney and company pioneered in the thirties.

Of the six pieces of music animated by Bozzetto and his colleagues are Debussy's Prelude to an Afternoon of a Faun, Dvorak's Dance #7, Ravel's Bohème, Sibelius' Valse Triste, Vivaldi's Four Seasons, and Stravinsky's Firebird, three stand out as successful blendings of symphonic music and animation. The adaptation of the Debussy is reminiscent in tone of "Pastoral Symphony" sequence from Fantasia, but with a ribald humor. Bozzetto's faun is elderly and corpulent, enamored of beautiful women, pursuing them around a sylvan setting.

The Bohème is in the mode of Fantasia's "Rite of Spring" sequence — regarding evolution, and the commencing of life with an imaginative and reflective difference. Bozzetto's are weird variations upon the dinosaurs and behemoths carefully researched Disney opus. Throughout, there is a change of time passing, of the endless adaptation of the but what curious, striking creatures!

The film's highlight is a careful mood piece drawn from the of Sibelius' Valse Triste. The haunting waltz music and simple narrative of a lonely, starving cat's return to the home of his former home and his recollections of his masters and happiness with an elegiac feel matched by the animation hues.

Allegro is altogether a worthy animated film, and deserves to be seen by anyone interested in the lately revived art of animation. The Specialty Films release is being shown on campus by RHA is accompanying Allegro Non Troppo with a fine collection of Mickey Mouse cartoons entitled Milestones for Mickey. The compilation includes the very first Mickey cartoon, Plane Crazy, as well as The Band Concert and an excerpt from The Sorcerer's Apprentice from Fantasia.

and Indians.

Kopit has created a word... play; play on sound and sense of the complex interrelationship and the region between consciousness, communication and self-consciousness. The stroke shatters the protagonist's speech processes and smatters her memory. Her stroke is aurally communicated by heavy breathing and the sound effects of flight.

The literal flight recorded by the sound effects in the opening moments becomes a painful flight into renewed self-consciousness as the woman reassembles the scattered pieces of her memory, attaching them to her memories of flying and wing-walking in her youth. By the end of the work she has reconstructed her consciousness, and in full awareness can accept the enclosing darkness with patience and without undue fear.

Mildred Dunnock portrays Mrs. Stilson in a cool, detached performance characterized by exquisite control. She is by turns angry at the impersonally goosy nurses who tell her to "be a good baby and eat it all up," frustrated by her lapses into Jabberwockese, and absorbed by her wily stratagems to maintain a semblance of control over her mind and her self.

Donnock's voice becomes an instrument — clever, forceful, insinuating, stubbornly alive, the melody-line in a fugue.

Throughout, Kopit plays on sound, counterpointing voices and sound effects, contrasting the woman's painful ventures into her own memory with the cool voices of the doctors and her therapist Amy. The experimental technique requires the listener's complete attention and a good radio.

The investment in attention and time is well worth it. Wings is an exquisitely crafted elegy to youth, experience and the act of existence.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

PEKING RESTAURANT and Lounge

At the Peking Restaurant, 1515 Center Street in Lansing, dining is a family affair. The minute you enter the restaurant you're aware of the friendly atmosphere. Mrs Wang, as hostess, greets you with her wide, warm smile to seat you in a dining room complete with a fireplace and Chinese lamps.

Behind the scenes Mr. Wang prepares the special Mandarin Cuisine dishes. His father, also in the restaurant business, taught him the art of cooking. Mr. and Mrs. Wang's children are involved with the business as Dora waitresses and son Charlie is the daytime bartender. Their menu offers family style dinners with a variety of tempting dishes to try.

For dramatic dining try the deep fried rice dropped into soup which steams and sizzles as it's served at your table. Chinese pancakes, the counterpart to tortillas, are rolled with slivered pork and sprouts. They specialize in Polynesian drinks with Mai Tais, Scorpions and Singapore Slings, some of the favorites.

The Peking Restaurant offers banquet facilities that will seat up to 130 guests. Reservations are accepted, and on weekends this might be a good idea. The restaurant is located on the corner of Center and North Street. It's easy to get there from MSU if you follow Grand River (Oakland) to Center Street. The hours are 11 a.m.-10 p.m. Monday thru Thursday; 11 a.m.-11 p.m. Friday and Saturday; and Noon to 9 p.m. on Sunday.

Know-it-alls
look wrong

Darryl Rogers and his improving football team are making things easier for me.

Through Rogers' first season and a-half, the Spartans have struggled with the new concepts in Rogers' program. They've been up one week and down the next.

Now they have been up three straight weeks with big wins over Wisconsin, Illinois and Minnesota. It's not just the fans calling MSU the third best team in the Big Ten, it's also the rival Big Ten coaches like John Jardine at Wisconsin, Cal Stoll at Minnesota and John Pont at Northwestern, Saturday's opponent.

Rogers seems assured of being named Big Ten coach of the year after finishing second last year despite the final two-game collapse against Northwestern and Iowa.

It's easier for me, because people are finally happy and enthusiastic about Rogers and his team. No more are his critics coming up to me asking me to be their mouthpiece.

These experts who know more about football than Rogers were always complaining to me about something, hoping they'd get their point across and I'd pick up on it.

"Get Smith out of there."

"Get McGee out of there."

"When is he going to get someone to play defense?"

I had to listen to all this as if I didn't have anything better to do than talk about a football game all day.

Fortunately I never picked up on it or I'd sure look stupid now. It's a good thing Rogers didn't wait until next year to get things rolling or I'd have to listen to it all winter and spring.

One reason MSU is starting to click is the same players are playing together every week.

MSU has the front-line talent to play with any team in the Big Ten. But when people started getting injured and new players were slipped in and out of the lineup, it hurt. It was too difficult an adjustment.

Fans are saying if MSU hadn't tied Indiana, then MSU could have tied for first.

As long as they're pointing out "ifs," what if:

Defensive linemen Kim Rowekamp and Angelo Fields hadn't been hurt?

What if defensive back Mike Marshall could have played and Tom Graves had been at full strength all year?

What if a couple of passes hadn't been dropped or a couple of crucial drives hadn't ended in a fumble?

You can say "what if" all day.

But the most interesting "what if" is: Where would MSU be during the holiday bowl season if it hadn't been for the NCAA probation?

Wildcats attempt MSU upset — again

By MICHAEL KLOCKE
State News Sports Writer

Darryl Rogers is cautious going into Saturday's final home game against Northwestern.

But how can he be cautious about playing a team that ranks last in the league in scoring, scoring defense and total offense?

How can he be cautious about a team that scores less than five points a game?

How can Rogers be cautious when the Spartans are playing a team that is winless this year, and that has won only one of their last 25 games?

Rogers' apprehension is understandable since that lone Wildcat victory came last year against MSU, 42-21. That loss shot down MSU's hopes of a winning season — and the same thing could happen this year.

"The fact that they beat us last year means we're going to be playing with a lot of emotion," Rogers said this week. "We'll have to be prepared."

The kickoff time for Saturday's game has been shifted back to 1 p.m. A crowd of 55,000 is expected for the family day encounter in which all family members coming as a group will be admitted for $4.

The Wildcats have been hapless this year. Northwestern is a private school and that has obviously hurt their athletic program. Some people have said it's time for Northwestern to leave the Big Ten.

But Rogers has the utmost respect for Johnny Pont's squad.

"All the coaches seem to agree that Northwestern is a much better team than their record indicates," Rogers said. "I've seen them on film and they've got some good football players."

"They've never been out of a game in the first half yet this season. It's been in the second half that they haven't been able to hold up."

Northwestern's loss to Michigan last week is an example of Rogers' point. The Wildcat's led Michigan 7-0 after the first quarter, and they trailed only 14-7 at half. But in the second half they were blown out of Ann Arbor and the final was 63-20.

Although their record doesn't show it, the Wildcats do have some strong areas, most notably their offensive line. Rogers said Northwestern's offensive line is "as good as most of the other Big Ten teams have."

The Wildcats also have a couple of standout running backs behind their fine offensive line. Freshman Dave Mishler and senior Matt Reitzug are both averaging over four yards a carry.

Defensively, the Wildcats have been crippled by the loss of middle guard Paul Maly. He was in contention for All-Big Ten honors and he is still the team's leading tackler. Linebacker Scott Duncan and tackle Marty Szostak are two other top defenders who will try to compensate for Maly's loss.

MSU will go into the game healthy, as no major injuries occurred in last week's win over Minnesota. The win over the Gophers put MSU at 4-1-1 in the conference. The Spartans are favored by three touchdowns Saturday, as they attempt to keep a stronghold on third place.

"We'll take all the victories we can possibly get. Every win is a big one," Rogers said. "Win over Purdue in the opener was vital."

"Our program has long way this year, but to Northwestern, we all that."

After throwing two touchdown passes against Minnesota last week, MSU quarterback Ed Smith may have to warm up his arm if the snow continues Saturday.

Smith launches this pass in his duel with Washington State's Jack Thompson earlier this year.

KEY SERIES FOR SKATERS

Spartans meet Michigan

By JOE CENTERS
State News Sports Writer

of the hockey season comes around in March, and Bessone looks back on the season to see if he can point, this weekend's series with the University of Michigan.

MSU is ranked No. 1 in the nation by a college hockey poll. MSU will take its 2-2 Western Collegiate Hockey Association (WCHA) record and 2-4 overall mark to Ann Arbor to meet Michigan Saturday at home in Munn Ice Arena. The Spartans will finish in the top three of the series could give MSU the lift that it needs to become a contender. But a loss could be a setback.

Michigan Tech and Notre Dame are the always tough Michigan Tech and Notre Dame. The Spartans will have to take the next two weekends, so they have to take the opening series with Michigan last year, but the Spartans will have to take the next two games and go on to the top of the NCAA tournament.

season, and senior Frank Zimmerman, who is ranked fourth this season among WCHA goalies.

Bessone plans to use the same lineup as last week. The only change might be Pat Betterly, who was selected as "Spartan of the Week" following the Minnesota series, because of a wrenched back.

Ron Heaslip, who missed Saturday's game with Minnesota because of the game misconduct penalty he received in Friday's game, will be back in action and he's ready for Michigan.

"They'll be good but we'll be tough," Heaslip said. "I'll play my same game, a rough game."

Heaslip said that it bothered him not to play in Saturday's game, but he said that it was everybody's job to stick up for their teammates. Heaslip got his penalty when two Minnesota players ganged up on freshman Ken Paresken, and he moved in to help out his teammate.

Bessone said he plans to use Dave Versical, ranked second to Minnesota's Steve Janaszak among goalies in the WCHA, Friday — and to go with Mark Mazzoleni Saturday.

This may be just the third weekend of WCHA play, but the Spartans' whole season could take a giant forward with two wins over Michigan.

MSUINGS: About 100 tickets are still available at the Jenison ticket office for Saturday's game, and standing room tickets will go on sale at 6:30 p.m. Saturday at Munn.

Both games can be heard on WMSN and WKAR radio stations, with broadcasts to begin at 7:25 p.m.

The one millionth fan to attend an MSU hockey game will pass through the turnstiles Saturday night. That person will receive a memento of the occasion from Bessone and the hockey team.

Since MSU hockey teams started playing indoors when the sport was revived in 1950, 999,363 people have attended contests in either Demonstration Hall or Munn Arena.

Injured women runners needed in the nationals

By GAYLE JACOBSON
State News Sports Writer

MSU cross country action has come to a standstill this weekend, as the teams are both taking some time off from running meets.

For the men, the season has come to an end this year and they won't have to worry about another meet until the track season.

Their regular season record was a lowly 1-5. Last Saturday's performance at the Big Ten meet culminated their disappointing season, as the harriers' final gasping effort of the year produced no more than another last-place finish.

The Spartan women, on the other hand, are taking a much deserved weekend off from competition to enjoy some simple pleasures, rest and relaxation.

Women's cross country coach, Mark Pittman, has given the runners a partial break from their usually rigorous training program. The squad will be taking it easy for a while, slowing down and resting up their legs.

The team is resting in preparation for the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (AIAW) national championships which are scheduled for November 19 in Austin, Texas. This is the meet they qualified for last weekend by taking a third place in the regional meet at Wisconsin.

It was in the regional meet that the women temporarily lost the services of runners Mary Ann Opalewski and Cynthia Wadsworth. Both harriers injured a foot while participating in the meet.

Wadsworth and Opalewski are each suffering from the same type of injury. They pulled some heel muscles, creating a strain. Opalewski should be out of action for about five days.

Wadsworth's sidelining, which will have her sitting out for about a week, comes as an especially crucial blow to the team. Up until her injury last Saturday, she had been the mainstay of the harriers, taking four individual victories and leading MSU to a 4-1 season.

These injuries were just what Pittman had been fearing might happen all season long, and definitely something he had hoped to avoid. Unfortunately for him, there is no way of knowing at this time whether either one of the runners will be ready to participate next weekend in Texas.

"I'll just have to wait and see. I don't like doing that, but that's all I can do right now," Pittman said.

In the meantime, training must continue for the remainder of the Spartan harriers. Pittman is following his previous regimen of training used just prior to the regionals.

"I'm still concentrating on doing the quality work... not many miles. The same type of thing we were doing before regionals," he said. "We'll have a hard workout and do a little jogging over the weekend... but that's all. No formal workouts."

before all the tablets are translated.
He said each of the tablets is important because of the dates and places they were found.

"The quantity of tablets found is staggering, though not unique, and the quantity guarantees their authenticity," he said.

The quantity also tells a great deal about the area in which they were found, Freedman added.

About 90 percent of the tablets are business and trade records covering between 100 and 150 years, he said. They show that Ebla was a manufacturing center and merchants traded with outlying areas for raw materials.

"The tablets identify routes salesmen used and help to pinpoint cities that are in the news today and mentioned in the Bible," he continued.

A number of the cities referred to are located in present-day Syria and along the border of Israel, Freedman said. Jerusalem and a city called Sinai are mentioned.

"The tablets say Sinai is located in what we now call the Sinai Peninsula," he said. "I believe this means Mt. Sinai is located there, instead of elsewhere, as some Biblical scholars believe."

Though there is some controversy over exactly how old the tablets are, Freedman said they are probably not later than 2250 B.C., making them the largest collection of the oldest tablets.

"This pushes the horizons back and some startling things are emerging," he said.

"The degree of culture, specialization and wealth of Ebla all show that the area between the Tigris-Euphrates and Nile rivers was not a backward area in the third millennium."

In addition, he said the age also pushes the area where researchers will look for sophisticated ancient civilizations further west, where much Biblical lore is oriented.
