MSU violates the state Liquor Control Act by permitting prior collection parties. The University also violates state law by allowing the sale and consumption of alcohol on state-owned property.

The Michigan Liquor Control Act defines sale as including "... exchange, barter or traffic, furnishing or giving away any alcoholic beverage.

In a private home or dormitory room, this law is not applicable. But in a public place such as a dormitory hallway, any person engaging in the sale of alcohol must be Generally with keggers or progressive parties, residents of the dormitory floor having the party and "designated guests" contribute money before the party towards the purchase of alcohol. This constitutes prior collection.

"You cannot take up a collection or you do have a violation of the law," University Attorney Leland Carr has said.

At a BYO party, if people exchange any of the liquor they have brought instead of only consuming their own, this too violates the Liquor Control Act.

"MSU is probably the most lenient university in the state in terms of its alcohol policy," notes Paul Oliaro, the University's director of the Alcohol Education Project.

Vice-President for Student Affairs Eldon Nonnamaker said he believes MSU is "in the middle" with respect to the alcohol policies of other state universities.

But, in fact, most other universities in the state currently do not allow prior collection parties in their dormitories.

Peter Schock, director of the Housing and Information Orientation Office at the University of Michigan, said prior collection events were halted there after the Liquor Control Commission stopped issuing licen-

"It's a breach of the law when there is a prior collection event," he said.

Western Michigan University allows BYO parties but prohibits prior collection, Residence Hall Director Sally Pippen said.

"In terms of large parties, prior collection is not legal in the state of Michigan."

Sandy McClean, associate vice-president student affairs at Eastern Michigan University, said BYO parties are allowed in the dormitories, but they are for residents only and no outside guests are allowed.

If guests were allowed, that would be elling, he said. Eastern is at a standstill on prior collection events because officials cannot obtain licenses, McClean

McClean added that Eastern's alcohol policy was revised in 1977 and has yet to be approved by the board of trustees.

At Central Michigan University, students and their designated guests are required to adhere to all state statutes concerning consumption, possession and transportation of alcoholic beverages. Central's party of alcoholic beverages. Central's party policy, as stated in the current Residence Hall Handbook, permits only BYO events. Keggers or other parties which include the mass purchase of alcohol from collected funds are not allowed.

"Consumption of alcoholic beverages will be permitted only in student rooms and some public areas on a controlled basis," the handbook states.

"Consumption will not be permitted in the lobby or lounge nor shall it be permitted outside of residence hall buildings on University grounds. Michigan state law is interpreted to mean that the sale, trade or giving away of alcoholic beverages requires license. Therefore, each person employing the privileges of this policy must supply his er own alcoholic beverages.

MONDAY: The question of who is liable for any illegalities, damages or injuries occurring at University approved dormitory parties will be examined.

Postmąster General Bailar resigns

WASHINGTON (AP) - Postmaster Gen. Benjamin F. Bailar resigned Thursday, three years to the day after he took over as head of the financially troubled Postal Service.

Bailar told a news conference that he was quitting to become executive vice president of United States Gypsum Co. in Chicago. He said the effective date of his resignation will be determined by the Postal Service's board of governors. "I expect I'll be here a few

Bailar said he will have a higher salary than the $66,000 the postmaster earns, but did not specify his new salary. Bailar praised the performance of the Postal Service since the postal reorganization of 1971.

"I strongly believe that the process of postal reform that began just six short years ago is paying off . . . We have made solid progress and it is continuing," he said.

In his resignation statement, Bailar repeated his opposition to House legislation that would strip the Postal Service of much of the independence Congress gave it in the postal reorganization of 1971. The bill would restore presidential power of direct appointment of the postmaster general and abolish the Postal Service Board.

Currently, the president appoints the governors, who then name the postmaster general.

Security force agreement reached

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (Zimbabwe) (AP) Black and white negotiators reached broad agreement Thursday on the future makeup of Rhodesia's (Zimbabwe) security forces under their new plan for majority rule, political sources said. The plan, meanwhile, won cautious backing from the British government.

The sources gave no details on the proposed composition of the security forces. They said the agreement came in a 21/2 hour session in the continuing talks between Paime Minister Ian Smith and black moderates based inside the coun-

A preliminary accord on black majority rule was announced by the negotiators Wednesday and was immediately condemned by leaders of black nationalist guerrillas based outside Rhodesia. The guerrillas have been fighting a five-yearold war against the predominantly black, white-led government forces.

A key item in any final settlement will be the mixture of blacks, whites and possibly former guerrillas in the armed forces of the new nation.

China promotes traditional teaching

TOKYO (AP) — China is promoting a return to traditional teaching methods after a so-called dark age of education brought on, the government claims, by China's deposed radical leaders.

Chinese students are being encouraged to learn from the past, borrow from foreign countries, engage in pure research and trade their findings at home and abroad.

A picture of the shift in educational emphasis instituted by the pragmatic new Chinese leadership emerges from newspaper reports and official announcements gathered in Tokyo.

A major change announced recently by the Education Ministry, calls for step-bystep implementation of a 10-year standardized national education system. Under the plan, students will start five years of primary school at age 6, followed by three years of junior high school and two years of high school.

Egypt signs oil agreement

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Egypt signed a $27 million agreement Thursday with three North American companies to explore for oil in the buffer zone that separates Israeli and Egyptian forces in the Sinai Desert, Egyptian officials said.

"It is the first such agreement that has been signed," said Coy Squyres, president of the Continental Oil Co. of Egypt. "Essentially, we are gambling that the Israelis will not hold onto the area for a long time.

Continental and Marathon, both U.S. firms, as well as Hudson Bay of Canada, a Continental subsidiary, have agreed to prospect in an area 20 miles by 70 miles.

The land borders the Gulf of Suez, and some of the concession is offshore, Squyres said. He said the companies would pay the $27 million for concession rights in stages, and final payments would not be made unless they get access to the land.

Banks levying new credit finance charges

WASHINGTON (AP) — Many banks that issue credit cards are levying new finance charges but few consumers can wade through the legalistic language that tells them they're paying higher rates, the staff of a House panel says.

The banks are devising "new schemes to reap more revenue from credit card users," the staff of the House banking subcommittee on consumers said in a memo to Chairman Frank Annunzio. D-III. A copy of the memo was obtained by The Associated Press.

The memo cited this section of one disclosure statement as an example of the confusing language consumers sometimes confront: "The Finance Charge at periodic rate for purchases is computed by i) multiplying each portion of the Purchases Finance Charge Balance shown on the face of the statement by the number of Days in Billing Cycle, ii) applying to the resulting products the applicable daily periodic rate of .04109 percent, iii) adding these products

Court reverses charges in sex suit

SANTE FE, N.M. (AP) - The New Mexico Supreme Court has reversed a lower court decision in which one judge said intercourse between a 23-year-old woman and a 15-year-old boy was part of the boy's essential "sex education."

The high court's ruling Wednesday reversed a state Appeals Court decision dismissing an indictment against Ernestine Favela for contributing to the deliquency of a minor.

Writing a concurring opinion for a divided Appeals Court, Judge Lewis Sutin had said "a consensual act of sexual Favela had been indicted by a Curry County grand jury for having sexual intercourse with the youth last Feb. 12.

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) -Southern Bell Telephone Co. was fined $310,712 plus court costs Thursday for a falsified expense voucher scheme that provided money for political contributions in the early 1970s. The prosecution, disappointed, appealed.

Superior Court Judge Lacy Thornburg levied the fine without explanation. He said the state Utilities Commission must decide whether shareholders or consumers will bear the costs of the fine.

Though no decision has been officially reached, Stieber said unofficial reports say the bureau may force other groups to use census figure accounting. This would enable CATA to get back the $72,000, he said.

John Czarnecki, an East Lansing CATA board representative, said the possible 150 percent increase would also allow transfers from East Lansing routes to Lansing routes.

"We will try to hold that proposed rate for the next three of four years," he added.

If the appeal is not successful and the rate increase is necessary. Czarnecki said, the transportation commission will be asked to review the hike and make a recommendation for action to city council.

Councilmember Larry Owen, another East Lansing representative to CATA, also agreed with the increase, Czarnecki said. Owen was out of town and unavailable for comment Thursday.

In addition, Czarnecki said he would like more routes extended onto MSU's campus, but with CATA picking up the entire tab.

CATA routes on MSU's campus are currently subsidized by a special grant the transit group received.

"I don't think East Lansing by itself can afford it," Czarnecki said.

Municipalities also members of the CATA group include the city of Lansing and Delhi, Delta, Meridian and Lansing townships.

RHA Judiciary says tax does not violate document's preamble

The Residence Halls Association's new movie program moved a step closer to implementation Thursday by clearing another constitutional hurdle. The program is not out of line with the RHA constitution, according to an RHA Judiciary

The decision came after a judiciary hearing Monday on a case filed by Wonders Hall resident Bruce Guthrie, who said RHA's new movie program violated the preamble to the Guthrie argued that the movie program will violate the provision of the preamble, which states that RHA's objective is to encourage campus activities. The movie program does not promote campus activity and is therefore illegal under the constitution, Guthrie said.

The judiciary ruling held that a preamble cannot be violated because it is a statement of the group's goals and purposes. The "body of the constitution provides for the structures and/or procedures for their achievement," the ruling stated.

Since RHA established the program as an amendment to the constitution, "it cannot be argued that the movie program violates the preamble," the ruling continued.

Gerard Miodus, an associate member of RHA, wrote a dissenting opinion recommending the halting of the program. Miodus said he thinks the preamble lends legitimacy to the constitution. If the preamble is violated, "it is the responsibility of the judiciary to provide a remedy," he said.

The program will have a "detrimental effect on the operations of alternative movie." groups by denying them the patronage of a large segment of the University community, said. "The outcome will be the eventual demise of the RHA's competitors, leaving the pricing structure and the content of campus movie programs to the descretion of a monopolist."

It is unreasonable for the "judiciary to sit idly by until irreparable damage has been done," Miodus said in response to RHA arguments that the effects on the alternate film groups are speculative.

The judiciary voted 5-1 in favor of RHA.

The RHA board feels "that RHA made the right decision A preamble is not a binding part of the constitution," RHA president Robert Vatter said.

"It's the first judiciary case we've won and we're very pleased," he added.

Guthrie said he is "very disappointed" with the decision. "They (RHAJ) avoided any responsible decision," he said. There are two questions. One was whether the movie program violates the preamble.

The second was if the preamble can be violated," Guthrie said.

He added he filed the case questioning if the movie program violated the constitution, but "RHAJ totally ignored the first question.

On the coal strike, MSU and Taft-Hartley

day. President Carter has summoned to the White House officials of the coal industry and representatives of the United Mine Workers in an attempt to hash out, undoubtedly over brandy, cigars and some man-to-man jawing, a settlement to this increasingly grave situation.

In attempting to negotiate a settlement satisfactory to union members, UMW President Arnold Miller has spent vast reserves of his authority and esteem. Miller negotiated a contract that was an insult to the mine workers and was rejected as such.

hiked miners' average pay from $7.80 to $10.00 an hour over three fits cut off during the strike and restructured the union's pension

The problems with the pact, however, are fundamental. Under its provisions, cost-of-living increases would have been eliminated and wildcat strikers would have been subject to fines of up to $20 a day. No union should have to put up with such restrictions, particularly the UMW.

Mine workers are in a position unique from other members of the labor force. They must work under conditions that, by any standard, are unsafe, unsanitary and frequently degrading. In 1960, John F. Kennedy toured the coal mines of West Virginia during that state's presidential primary and expressed astonishment and distress over what he saw.

Political observers still believe that much of the concern Kennedy evinced for social issues during his time in office was colored by the perceptions he drew from the rugged dark hills of Appalachia.

But even today, conditions in that area of the country are still about the same as they were in 1960. Perhaps worse.

The president has issued ominous rumblings about invoking the Taft-Hartley Act, a law passed in the late 1940s that empowers the president to force striking workers back to their jobs. Regrettably, Carter should carefully weigh this possibility. The coal strike, longest of its kind in history, is beginning to have a

The coal strike is now in its 74th severe effect on the nation as a whole.

Here at MSU, Acting President Edgar L. Harden has ordered cutbacks in University heating and has stressed the need for voluntary conservation measures. Harden's requests were prompted by the fact that shipments of coal to MSU from Kentucky were sabotaged by pistol-wielding strikers. One can only speculate about the consequences if the strike lasts much longer.

The UMW is presently a divided and dispirited organization. For years it suffered under the corrupt leadership of Tony Boyle, and now The vetoed pact would have it is enduring the disorganized timidity of Arnold Miller. The coal industry evidently feels that it has years, guaranteed medical bene- the mineworkers under its sootsmudged thumb. When Carter invited industry officials to the White House, he was almost ignored.

It is a sad situation indeed when any industry can rebuff the president and thumb its nose at the consequences such intransigence could impose on the rest of the nation.

Now both industry and labor are sitting at the same table, and that table is in the White House. If Carter ultimately feels it is his duty to invoke the Taft-Hartley, neither he nor the public should expect enthusiastic service from miners working under dismal conditions and without a contract.

We fervently hope a just resolution to the fractious coal strike can be reached quickly, not only in the interests of the nation but for the well-being of mineworkers all across the country.

Farewell (?) Bella

Bella Abzug has lost, perhaps for the last time.

On Tuesday Abzug was defeated in a special congressional election by Republican William S. Green. The defeat was her third electoral setback in 18 months, and might spell the end of her career in politics. That would be a loss, not only for New York but for the rest of the nation as

In a press conference following her defeat, Abzug lashed out at newsmen, asserting that a "male-dominated press has not allowed a fair reporting of women like myself." She declared that her opponent used 'scurrilous literature" against her and that he conducted a "terrible campaign.

Abzug's assault on the press smells of sour grapes, and it is unfortunate she could not go out with the decorum befitting those very real contributions she has made to progressive public policy. However, it should be noted that another prominent politician threw a tantrum after losing the California gubernatorial race in 1962, only to make a resounding political comeback.

Maybe Bella Abzug can duplicate that feat. If she does, we trust the end result will be far more appealing.

NPHC vote lauded

The Office of Black Affairs extends its gratitude to the many students who supported the referendum which will enable the National Pan-Hellenic Council to vote on the ASMSU Student Board. The voice of the black Greeks is one long overdue.

The new status of NPHC represents a stepping stone, as well as a progressive outlook for black students at MSU. How ever, the black Greeks by no means should be held responsible for the many needs affecting black students. It would be inconceivable for one entity to adhere to such a diversifaction of needs and provide adequate services. We need more groups to work towards bettering the relationship of black and white students at MSU. Further, Ira Combs. President of NPHC should be commended on the showmanship he has provided in advancing the council to governing status. The representation of NPHC on the ASMSU Board will provide a greater scope of interest and concern for the black student body at large. Let's hope that the National Pan-hellenic Council will provide sound judgment regarding the concerns of MSU students as a whole.

Gwendolyn Hubbard Office of Black Affairs

Voting to pay self called wrong

After suffering through five different ASMSU Student Board presidents and their administrations. I have become an avid proponent of financial remuneration for these offices. It has always been my contention that participation in the student government is restricted to persons who do not have to earn money to support themselves and their education, thereby enabling them to devote the necessary time to perform an adequate job. Unfortunately. the system has precluded the involvement of many competent and responsible students who are otherwise preoccupied with their job and studies. From the standpoint of expanding the number of potential condidates, I applaud the action of the ASMSU Board in its recent decision to offer monetary compensation for participation in student government.

Nevertheless, the board has erred terribly in the procedure it employed for this purpose. It was not so many months ago that the U.S. Congress received national scorn and condemnation for demonstrating the same lack of good judgment and responsibility by voting themselves a raise. Naturally, their procedures were modified to prevent this from occuring again.

Yet, our student representatives have demonstrated a very myopic attitude and lack of hindsight by voting to give themselves a salary for their work. I repeat, I have no qualms with the principle of salaried positions, but it is quite arrogant to assume that the student constituency would also concur with this concept.

I respectfully submit that Kent Barry and his colleagues reverse their decision and place the question before the student body in the form of a referendum. Only with the consent of the students can the government rightfully spend our taxes for their own salaries. The irreparable harm done to the prestige and integrity of the current administration can not be reversed, but at least Barry and the board can demonstrate a willingness to acknowledge an error in judgment and act quickly to correct any injustices incurred by the students at Michigan State University. ### Never again

Last Friday night I went to see the movie, Julia. It is a true story based on an American woman's struggle in Europe as she works to wipe out the rapid spread of fascism there. Julia was killed by the Nazis for her efforts to save Jews, Catholics, and political prisoners.

Society has conditioned its memory to forget unpleasant occurrences. Apparently, the ACLU and members of the court who overturned the ruling to let the Nazis march in Skokie, Ill. also have short memories. There are reasons the Jewish people do not want the Nazis to march there. Perhaps they are not speaking loud

I think the State News made an unjust analogy when they compared the Nazis marching in a predominantly Jewish com-munity with blacks marching in a predominantly white community. At no time in American history has there been a black holocaust equal to that to which the Jews

I think we are dealing with survival here. The survival of a group of people that was almost entirely wiped out by the descendants of the people who want to march down their streets. Why should they even have to be reminded? I am ashamed to think that those Nazis still exist in our world. But even more ashamed that they do not feel they hurt the Jews enough. When will it

Blacks marched in white neighborhoods, and although there was tension and violence, none can compare to the tensions between Nazis and Jews

I grew up in a town neighboring Skokie. I have heard the sentiments of the Jews and felt it myself. I have also seen the Nazis and the Jewish Defense League in a number of clashes throughout the years. The hatred that exists is almost indescribable.

I can only tell you that too much blood has been shed. On April 20, Hitler's birthday (yet another disgrace) when the Nazis march, not only the JDL but survivors of the holocaust and residents of Skokie will be there to meet them.

I cannot condone the actions of the JDL, but then again can you blame them?

It is obvious that the Nazis will march. However, there is something that the Jewish people can do to help alleviate the situation. They should stay home. We should recognize the rights of individuals but also set limitations. If we close our eyes to the demonstration, and not to the past, it will be easier for the Jews and the Nazis will not have gotten what they came for. NEVER AGAIN . . . NOT EVEN IN SKOKIE.

National Improvidence

"Among the many questions of national gnificance which have recently been brought to the public attention, there are few which compare in importance with that of conservation. "Not many thoughtful Americans will deny that extravagance is one of our distrinctive national faults. At the first thought, it may seem strange that the nation which has sprung from the thrifty settlers who founded Plymouth and James town, and were schooled in the rough adversities of an unusually strenuous pioneer life, should have developed that very improvidence which the circumstances surrounding the life of the early settlers strictly forbade. Not alone in the beginnings of the nation, but for many a decade of its early existence, the conditions of life were exceedingly hard. Never, surely, did a race of men so literally earn its bread by the sweat of its brow as those resolute pioneers, who had to coax the means of life from the rock-encumbered hills and valleys of New England, or endure the prodictions toil of clearing away primeval forests before they could lay bare a patch of arable land from which to raise the food and feed for man and beast.

"It was in later years, when the van of pioneer conquest had been pushed out into the rich and unobstructed prairie lands of the West, that the American people began to realize with what lavish abundance nature stood ready to pour forth her treasures. When the cattle multiplied upon a thousand hills and the crops burst forth in luxurious abundance from the virgin soil, the pressing need for careful husbandry of resources was no longer felt. Hence it has come about that nature herself is largely responsible for that later extravagance, which led the American people to squander resources which they have come to regard and speak of as 'practically inexhaustible.

"Unfortunately, the habits learned on the farm have been carried into those great industrial activities, whose magnitude one of the wonders of our modern life. If the riches of the soil were 'inexhaustible,' so also seem to be those of the forest, of the mine, and of the rivers and lakes and seas with their teeming millions. Hence it has come about that in our effort to gather only the riches which are immediately and easily accessible, we have been using up nature's storehouse of raw material, ruthlessly destroying or letting go to waste thousands of square miles of forest and millions of tons of coal and precious minerals. Year after year crops have been sown upon the once virgin lands, until, in sheer exhaustion, they have refused to render the plenteous yield of former years, or even to yield any crops whatsoever - at least until the husband man shall have restored some portion of those nutritive elements which are neces to germination, growth and full fruitation.

We have all heard and read a great deal during the past few years about this subject of conservation; but it is a question whether many people have any just conception of how great has been the wicked waste of the past and how pressing is the need for future economy. The present issue of the Scientific American is published in the hope that it may put this whole question in its true light."

*The title and the preceding essay are quoted verbatim from an editorial in the Aug. 12, 1911 issue of Scientific American about the same time that Liberty Hyde Bailey was writing The Holy Earth, Parts of the editorial have since been used very recently to support the proposition that the United States should implement a permanent oil rationing system in which rights to oil consumption are bought and sold in a white market" as an integral feature of President Carter's "moral equivalent of war" on energy use.

This essay raises many questions, some of which are: why didn't the conservation ethic take hold in 1911 (or since the beginning of recorded history for that matter) and how does its failure reflect upon our present predicament? What are the relationships between public opinion and resource availability? What lessons are to be learned?

Second quote of the Week from a Book of the Century, Beyond the Crisis, edited by Norman Birnbaum, Oxford University Press, 1977: "An eclipse has covered modern society; its horizon is darkened, and its shadows are more visible than its light. By dint of burrowing as if it were not there, have reached the bedrock of nature. And we ask: 'Is it true that nature is not unlimited?' 'Is there really a human na-

Huesing, a sophomore, is seeking the position of ASMSU Student Board president primarily to work with students. He said he wants "things to get back to the way it should be." Interested in politics, he would like to get the necessary experience in the political field.

"I would just like to see what happens,"

ASMSU student for two years, Huesing said he would like to see a change in the way ASMSU is organized. The present form of government is too far away from the students, he said. He said there should be more concern for students.

Huesing criticized ASMSU's position of not taking a stand on the case of suspended Williams Hall resident assistant John Furbush. He said by not taking a stand board members were acting like federal

"ASMSU is not a federal government and should not be run like one," he said.

Huesing said he would spend as much time as he could if elected ASMSU Student Board president. Though much of his time is presently spent with the MSU hockey team, most of his evenings are free, he said.

"I would spend as much time as is sufficient." he said.

Petitions all in: nine try for top

Petitioning for ASMSU provident and board positions closed Feb. 10 with nine candidates for president and 25 for college representatives.

Elections will be held during sering agree agreementatives and top vote-getters will begin one-year terms of office at that times.

Following regulations of the ASMSU short times code, petitions for representative seats were signed by 15 students from the college the candidate is enrolled in. Presidential petitions were signed by 15 undergraduates.

Students were allowed to sign only one petition for a presidential candidate.

Petitions will be shacked for acceptance by the All-University Commission. An official Petitions will be checked for accuracy by the All-University Commission. An official list of the verified nominations will be released Feb. 25.

Students whose petitions are invalidated by the commission may appeal to the All-University Student Judiciary at least 19 days prior to the election, according to the Gode.

Rome candidates run individually, while sthers run on common tickets called "slates." Generally, all slate members campaign on the same platform. They may request that the slate name be printed next to their names on the ballot.

Campaign expenses are limited as $100 per presidential candidate and $50 per college candidate for students not running on slates.

Expenses allowed for students running on slates are determined by a sliding scale outlined in the code. The total amount depends on the number of persons running on the slate.

All students are expected to document sources and uses of their campaign funds and file a spending report to the elections commission within three days after the election, according to the code. In the past, saliure to submit campaign information on time has caused candidates to be invalidated.

Undergraduates carrying 10 credits or more are allowed to vote in the college of their major, according to the code. Secondary education majors may vote in the College of Education on the college of their declared major, but not in both. No-preference students may vote for the University college representative.

The ASMSU Student Board is the policy branch of MSU undergraduate government.

The Student Board is comprised of 10 representatives from University colleges and the presidents or designees of six major governing groups.

Eight of the nine candidates for ASMSU student board president were interviewed about current student issues and the future of the board. One candidate, Janice Ashmore, refused to answer questions. The interviews were conducted and edited by State News Staff Writers Michelle Chambers and Karen Sheridan.

Wider representation on Dan Jones' list

Daniel P. Jones, a 21-year-old landscape horticulture major, is currently an usher supervisor for the MSU Series and director of the ASMSU Gay offering consultation services and sensitiv ity training to residence hall staffs, he said.

The MSU junior has also been a Residence Hall Programs Office staff re-

While Jones is not running on a primarily gay rights platform, he said he is seeking the ASMSU presidency because he does not think ASMSU is currently representative of most students.
"ASMSU now appeals to a very small group. For instance, to look at the student boad or the office allocations you would think the entire student body was Greek," he said. Jones explained that as ASMSU president he would propose, through a student referendum, to change the current student board composition. He said students would be better represented under a system of representation by geographic location rather than by college. Under his proposal the student board would consist of six on campus and six off-campus representatives, he added.

'ASMSU does not deal with academics — Academic Council does," he stated in a prepared position paper

"Representatives by living location would provide students with an easily recognized representative," he said.

Jones, an MSU student for three years, said he expects to devote about 40 hours

Meyers strives to be significant to students

versity Student Judiciary, 21-year-old, Jeff Meyers, is now an alternate member of the MSU Anti-Discrimination Judicial board. Meyers political experience includes an internship last year for Sen. Patrick McCullough, Dearborn. He is also a registered member of the Democratic party. Meyers said he is seeking the ASMSU presidency because he is "frustrated with the seemingly ineffectual way in which students have been represented by "I think negativism had permeated ASMSU for a long time. Students don't see ASMSU as doing anything for them," he "As president, I am only going to expend my energy on issues that students are truly concerned about '

Meyers said if elected, he will try to make ASMSU significant to the students.

"I'd like to see ASMSU mean something next year to the general person, whether he lives in Brody Complex, Shaw Hall, Spartan Village, or on Bailey Street," he said.

"Without the preception of power by

The former Chief Justice of the All-Unithese individuals, ASMSU will not have the power that it needs to invoke any substantial change," he added.

Meyers, a junior majoring in Economics, said that if elected he will devote at least 35 hours per week to the position.

Tindall sees need to take positive action

A political science major, Tindall said his adacemic field helps qualify him for the position because it is the study of politics.

He has made several trips to Washington D.C. through a federal internship program called Close-Up. In Washington, he said, he met and talked to the president and Tindall is seeking the position of president because he said he feels the current student board takes actions that are "totally negative" and that create apathy among the students.

Tindall said ASMSU is trying to eliminate things instead of taking positive

He cited as examples ASMSU's fall term suggestion to revoke Gay Council's status and funding and deny office space to the black newspaper, People's Choice.

"I think ASMSU as it is now composed is a total waste of time," he said.

An MSU student for two years, Tindall said he would like to see the student board establishing new projects rather than acting in negative ways.

He would also like to try and make ASMSU more accountable to the students, with a possible creation of a review board to evaluate the actions of the student board.

Action must be taken to stop the attempted violence on campus, he said. He suggested a recoordination with the DPS.

"ASMSU has got to become the voice of the students," he said.

If elected, Tindall said he will devote as much of his time to ASMSU as is needed, depending on the needs of the students. He will probably take only one class and possibly a night class, he said.

Fred Jones wants 'accountable' council

Fred B. Jones, a 24-year-old political science major, has been involved with government since his freshman year in 1975 when he was a representative to the Holmes Hall student government.

He is currently social science representa-tive on the ASMSU student board and a voting member of the ASMSU Programming Board. He also ran for president

Currently the director of Great Issues, he has been a staff member of the program for

Jones, a sophomore, is seeking the position of president to form what he considers a more accountable student government at MSU. He said he does not believe the current ASMSU organization constitutes à "real" student government because it is not representative.

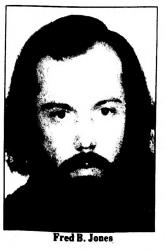

Jones said he wants student government to represent MSU students and not merely operate as a forum for potential lawyers to practice dealing with people.

"I want to create a group that can take stands on the student's side in arguments over issues with the administration." he

Jones, who has been at MSU three years, said he would like to see the ASMSU structure changed to resemble congression al districts where geography, rather than academic interest, determines representa-

"The first and primary responsibility of an ASMSU president is to represent the students," he said.

Jones, running on the Students for a Democratic Society slate, said he plans to devote all of his time if elected as president. He said he would take only a single one-credit class each term.

Vatter says ASMSU needs 'more input'

Currently president of MSU's Residence Halls Association, Bob Vatter, a 20-yearold junior, has been involved in dormitory student government since his freshman Vatter was elected floor representative to Bryan Hall student government during his second term at MSU. In rapid succession, he became Bryan Hall's representative to RHA, Bryan Hall president, and was elected to his current position during winter term, 1977.

Vatter said his past experience fully qualifies him for the ASMSU presidency.

"I think I've proven that I can handle almost any situation that can arise," he said. Among the changes Vatter proposes for ASMSU is for the organization to become more involved in Academic Council, he said. "ASMSU should be more involved in issues that will have a direct impact on students - for instance, in what classes will be offered," he said.

Vatter added he would also like to see minority councils become more involved in ASMSU's decision making process, "Pre sently councils only answer when called upon - rarely do you hear anything from them," he said. "They should have more input.

Vatter, majoring in political science, said that if elected he would devote 50 or 60 hours per week to the position.

THE HOUSE OF ING (4113 S. Cedar)

Some of the strongest memories of my dorm days are about Sunday nights, when the dorm cafeterias were closed and whole gangs of dorm demons would scrounge all over East Lansing trying to dig up a cheap bite to eat. And like the proverbial bearded fools, we'd end up either in some cheap-jack junk food hole, spending our parents' hard earned money on Coke and carbohydrates and never really enjoying our substitute dinner, or in some too-loud, too-crowded bar where the "Sunday night special" didn't taste all that good and we washed it down with more quarts of beer than we, our parents/financiers, or our academic careers could afford.

Gourmet

We led just such a life of sin and uncertainty until one Sunday night a buddy and I decided we didn't want to eat garbage anymore. We decided on finding someplace nice within driving distance, and turned to the restaurant section of the Yellow Pages. Holiday Inn. Holly's Steak and Four. Hong Kong Harry's. House of Ing. House of Ing? After due deliberation, we took the trek to X Lot, warmed up my vintage Vega, and left for the hitherto unknown world of South

To make a long story short, we kept going back to the House of Ing long after that one Sunday evening. While the other guys ate their dinner at McDonald's at 7 p.m. and were arguing by 8:30 about whether or not to order a pizza, my buddy and I would spend a lot of time and very little money at the House of Ing making ourselves fat and satisfied.

The House of Ing looks like any other typical Chinese restaurant. Maybe it's just a tad bigger, or a little fancier, but it looks like any other. There are paintings of dragons hanging around, golden shields on the walls, and red lanterns — probably came from a supply house in Chicage - hanging from the ceiling.

As for the food — well, I'm no judge of authenticity, but it certainly is good. After eating at the House of Ing frequently for the past three years, I can say I've tried just about everything on the menu and there's not one bad dish in the house.

The egg rolls have got to be the best in Lansing, and among the best anywhere. They're always crisp, but not greasy, and are filled with little bits and pieces of meat and shrimp as well as the usual

A person never has to worry about going away hungry at the House of Ing, because it seems they never stop feeding you. There is no such thing as a small portion at that place. An order of chow mein is always enough for two people; a plate of sweet and sour wonton covers up most of your end of the table.

And all of it is not that expensive. For a dinner that included a relish tray, an egg roll, a main course, a fortune cookie, and all the tea we could drink, my buddy and I would each go away about five dollars poorer. That's about as much as we used to spend on burgers, pop, and pizza on a Sunday night, and we wouldn't be

By BYRON BAKER

State News Reviewe There are, alas, only a handful of genuinely funny moments in Mel Brooks' new comedy, High Anxiety (Twentieth Century-Fox; at the Campus Theatre). The film never really redeems the promise of its basic comic thrust — the spoofing of Alfred Hitchcock's classic manner of suspense filmmaking - and is Brooks' weakest effort in

In the picture, writer-producer-director-star Brooks clearly intends to simultaneously honor and parody Hitchcock's work, but he seems remarkably ill-equipped for either task. The essence of Hitchcock's genius is his ability to intelligently use the language and dynamics of the motion picture medium to create mood, tension and suspense. The essence of Brooks' genius is his ability to make people laugh.
Despite his obvious growth as a filmmaker over the making of his previous pictures, Brooks has yet to achieve significant mastery of his chosen medium - even his best pictures have a rough, almost crude feel to them

In the picture, writer-producer-director-star Brooks clearly intends to simultaneously honor and parody Hitchcock's work, but he seems remarkably equipped for either task.

That rough feel is fine for something like The Producers or Young Frankenstein (and don't get me wrong - I am very fond of those two pictures), but all wrong for an intended elaborate parody of an artist whose best work reflects an almost complete understanding of the complex grammar of film. Brooks doesn't seem to have sufficient grounding in Hitchcock's cinematic style (or in the basic language of film) to be able to work within its bounds to parody it effectively. Somewhere along the screenwriting trail Brooks and his collaborators (Ron Clark, Rudy DeLuca and Barry Levinson) apparently realized this, and shifted some of the film's focus to a plot which seems an uneasy pastiche of Hitchcockian narrative lines blended with some satiric shots at psychiatry, a subject which reportedly holds much interest for Brooks.

Brooks plays Nobel Prize winning(!) Harvard psychiatrist Richard Harpo Thorndyke (his mother, it seems, loved the Marx brothers), who has become the new director of the world renowned Psycho-Neurotic Institute for the Very, Very Nervous (akin to the hospital in Spellbound). John Martyn, to the casual observer seems worlds away from the progressivism of Eno's crowd. Originally a British folk guitarist, Martyn has gradually evolved into a progressive, jazz-based artist with a silkysmooth voice and some simply stunning guitar technique. His newest LP, One World (Island Import ILPS 9492), continues in the fine tradition of his most recent work and, again, explores musical territories few other artists find the time to appreciate.

One particularly fine cut of the LP, "Small Hours," features a quiet throbbing bass, some extremely tasteful guitarwork by Martyn and some appropri ately spacey synthesizer playing by longtime Martyn associ ate, Steve Winwood. Martyn's obsession with the echoplex machine continues on World, yet Martyn has admirably tamed its usage to the point where it would be no exageration to say he's probably the most-skilled guitarist presently using it.

While One World desn't

If you're a fan of the late British folksinger Nick Drake - and a growing number of listeners are, thanks to his recent Antilles reissues - than you should be suitably familiar with John Martyn's work. If not, be advised: John Martyn's about the best there is.

LAS VEGAS (UPI) - Muhammad Ali grew old in the ring at the age of 36 and in a split decision reluctantly bequeathed his heavyweight championship to 24 year old upstart Leon Spinks. Relentless Father Time was in Spinks' corner

Every punch Spinks threw. Father Time was there to double it. Every dance Ali began, Father Time was there to stop the music: Ali aged 10 years in an hour.

really felt my age holding me back." Ali said moments after the fight, the blood still fresh on his lower lip and his brow swollen. Spinks, virtually unmarked, fought an inspired 15-round bout, attacking Ali with unleashed fury, completing his rise from a St. Louis ghetto to sport's richest prize.

Only 18 and one-half months ago Spinks won the Olympic 178 pound gold medal and now, 20 pounds heavier, he scored one of the greatest upsets in ring history.

The world is his playpen and he wants to frolic.

"I want to relax, enjoy myself and blow a few dollars," Spinks said as he hugged his friends and relatives in the tumultuous

"I've had two dreams - to be the Olympic champion and to be the world heavyweight champion. I've got them both now. I've got everything.

Ali didn't argue with the narrow decision. He didn't claim he'd been robbed. Instead, he sat somberly with his wife and close friends and spoke in whispers with an almost vacant expression on

"I don't know if I can come back again," he said softly. "I'm tired. Very tired. I want to have a rematch. I want to be the first man to win the title three times.

"People said to me, 'You were robbed.' I wasn't robbed. The man was agressive. He landed some of the best punches. I was on the defense, he was on the offense."

An estimated 70 million viewers across the United States saw the fight and countless millions more watched it throughout Europe, the Middle East, Latin America and Africa. The shock waves of Ali's decline were felt around the world.

Ali was not merely another heavyweight champion - he was a symbol of black pride, an unofficial ambassador to the Third World, a hero to Muslims. He has one of the most recognizable faces and voices on earth.

Even if Ali retires now following the loss, he will still go down in boxing history on a plateau by himself. People will always argue who was best - Ali, Joe Louis, Rocky Marciano or a few others but Ali brought the sport back to life in the 1960s and carried it into a new era of higher prices and greater popularity in the 1970s. "He's still the greatest," Spinks acknowledged. "I'm just the Spinks, 197, gave away 27 pounds to the 224-pound Ali, plus two inches in total height and four inches in reach. Ali seemed to dwarf him as they stood next to each other, but Ali's 12 extra years and hundreds of extra rounds were too much for him to carry, especially toward the end of the fight.

Spinks won the final three rounds on all three official cards to become the first challenger to capture the heavyweight title on a decision since Jim Braddock defeated Max Baer in 1935.

Judge Art Lurie gave Al' a 143-142 edge, but Lou Tabat had Spinks comfortably ahead, 145-140, and Harold Buck scored it 144-141 for Spinks. Ali needed to win two of the last three rounds or knock Spinks out to gain the victory and this time, he just didn't Ali received $3.6 million before expenses and taxes, while Spinks earned less than one-tenth of that at $320,000. If there is a rematch, their purses will be a lot closer together

The fencers will host Notre Dame, defending NCAA champions, and Ohio State, defending Big Ten champions, Saturday at 10 a.m. in gym three of the Men's IM Building.

Coach Charlie Schmitter said his only concern before this weekend's meet is the flu bug that is going around. Other than that, the coach is hoping for two fine meets.

The Spartans will see Ohio State again in two weekends (March 3-4) when the Buckeyes host the Big Ten championships. And if any MSU fencers make it to the NCAA meet March 23-25, they will be sure to see the Fighting Irish there.

State News Sports Writer When talking about Denver, this weekend's opponent for the MSU hockey team, coach Amo Bessone had a lot to say, but he didn't know where to start.

First there's the offense, but then there's the defense, and how about the goaltending?

The Pioneers are tied for first place in the nation with Boston University for the second weekend in a row in the college coach's hockey standings. Denver also lead the Western Collegiate Hockey Association (WCHA) with 22-4 record and won't be gracious hosts tonight and Saturday to the last-place Spartans, who go into the game with a one game winning streak (which is a rarity this season).

Denver leads the WCHA in goals scored (153), and in goals allowed (87). Goalie Ernie with a record of 11-1 and a goals against per game average of a hamstring pull and probably won't play this weekend, but his replacement, Jim Bales sports a 11-3 record with a 3.86 goals against average.

Glandville leads the WCHA Glandville is recovering from

The Pioneers have three of the top ten WCHA scorers. Doug Berry is fifth in the league with 20 goals and 31 assists. Mark Davidson is sixth with 18 goals and 27 assists eighth with 19 goals and 21

Denver enters the series with a nine-game winning streak. The last four wins have come over third-place Michigan Tech and second-place Wisconsin and the Pioneers have lost only once at home this season. After last weekend's two losses to the Pioneers, Wisconsin coach Bob Johnson con-ceded the WCHA championship in Denver. "We went out like champs (the Badgers are the defending WCHA and NCAA champions)," Johnson said. "We are now going for second place. "You never know what's going to happen," Bessone said of MSU's chances. "We'll just do our best." The Spartans will be without the services of Ted Huesing, Paul Klasinski and Jim John-Huesing bruised his knee in last Saturday's game with North Dakota and skated this week, but according to Bessone, couldn't stop and push off with the knee. Klasinski is still recovering from a leg injury that he received in Wisconsin four weeks ago, and Johnson, who skated Wednesday, was taken to Olin Health Center after the practice because of stomach pains. The senior from Bloomfield Hills was scheduled to have his appendix removed

Rocky road lies ahead for icers

Bessone said that the season vas probably over for both Klasinski and Johnson because of the seriousness of both cases. MSU will have three new faces on the road in Denver. Dean Miller and Brad Wilkinson, who both have seen limited action at home, and Brad Dredge, who has yet to see varsity action, will all be suited up for the Spartans.

Mark Mazzoleni, who has been voted MSU's player of the week in the WCHA for the last two weekends, will start tonight's game and possibly Saturday's game also if he has "the hot hand" tonight, according to Bessone.

Both games will start at 9:30

The board voted to amend its constitution to comply with the University's Tax Collection Criteria. The decision came after the Student-Faculty Judiciary upheld a ruling earlier this week by the All-University Student Judiciary, which said the RHA tax collection proce dures were not consistent with the University tax guidelines.

The judiciary ruled the RHA constitution does not have specific provisions for change or removal of a tax, which the criteria required.

For a constitutional amendment to take effect, it must be approved by two-thirds of the residence hall governments. Each dormitory government president will send a letter to RHA expressing approval or disapproval of the amendment.

RHA president Bob Vatter said if the amendment is not passed by next Wednesday, the RHA tax, including the new $3 movie tax, will not be collected at spring registration. If it does not pass, RHA will try to find another way to collect the tax. he added.

MSU Vice-President for Student Affairs Eldon Nonnamaker said last week the questions surrounding the tax must

BUT BEAL IS SHOWING IT UNCUT, NOT A SINGLE FRAME HAS BEEN DELETED! THE BEST, MOST BUSTED PORNO COMEDY OF 1977!

"Well. I can finally say I've seen a porno flick that has it all. "Joy" is an absolute joy, not only to watch, but to appreciate. It's the best film I've seen in a long, long time. Put a little 'joy' in your life and catch it." —Mark Stevens, SCREW MAG. "Much of the shooting occured in locations where crew and actors could have been busted such as subway cars, airport men's room, back alleys, and the Wall Street area. It's a comical farce that upgrades the porno genre. Bright, titillating entertainment for couples. See it!"

The current fascination with Stars Wars and Close Encounters of the Third Kind was the stimulus for a conference on American Mythology and the Christian Faith, in East Lan-

The search for individual identity within a culture, based in the "roots" phenomenon, may be another indication of the need Americans have for a story in which they can identify themselves, Lacey said.

"There is a lack of ethnic structure in America," he said. "People are beginning to look for this structure.

• If your car has an automatic transmission (most American cars do) check the transmission fluid reservoir. Hard steering and squeeling while turning a corner are two signs of low fluid. The reservoir has a dipsitely (usually near the fire wall) similar to an oil dipstick. Fluid can be bought at a service station or automotive acces (continued from page 15) of worn engine gaskets and buying oil on the road is more expensive. An engine can overheat and seize up if you run out of oil and are not aware of it. Don't take a chance.

Although we had to alternative, traveling by the good graces of our thumbs enabled us to cover thousands of miles and have a memorable time while spending day. We occasionally slept on the beach with the stars, the sand crabs and the soothing sound of lapping waves, but were careful to avoid the commercial districts where the beach patrols scour the sand at night in search of "vagrants."

We originally planned to feast only on instant soun and oatmeal, but too often our angry stomachs demanded attention and we gave in to fast foods. We learned to ignore the "munchies" and took handouts wherever they were offered.

wherever they were offered.

One morning a widow from the Daytona area awoke us on the beach and gave us a breakfast of grits, eggs, toast and tea.

During our stay with my friend in Fort Meyers, food was no problem — he fed us. At other times, we'd hop a fence and pilage an orchard. Our stomachs eventually shrank to where hunger pains were few. But fasting had its price. I lost 12 pounds in the two weeks.

The easiest place to overspend limited funds is in Florida. We avoided this as a result of the good nature of the people who fed us or let us sleep in their homes and hotel rooms. Staying with my friend also saved money. Most of our time was cheaply spent on the beach. Taking pot saved us money on partying. If we drank, we bought cheap brands. "How long 'til we get there?"

For parents traveling with their children, that one seemingly innocuous question can become as annoying as a dripping faucet.

"How many miles 'til dinner?," they invariably asked at 9:30 a.m. only a half hour after breakfast. "Don't ask that question again," I sternly answered. "Why not?," Timmy bravely retorted and the daily mobil quiz show was on again.

Finally tiring of procedural queries, children inevitably turn to the philosophical questions they love to ask. "What happened to all the dinosaurs?," Billy asked.

Seeking the quick way out I replied, "They killed each other off." "On yeah, then who killed the last one?" Bill quizzed right back.
