Harden may order further energy cuts

By SCOTT WIERENGA
State News Staff Writer

Further energy conservation measures may be ordered today by Acting President Edgar L. Harden as MSU coal reserves continue to dwindle.

Harden will release a prepared statement concerning the effect of the 90-day-old coal strike on MSU and how the University will react to it, according to Robert Perrin, vice president of University and federal relations.

Perrin made the comment Monday following an afternoon strategy meeting which included himself, Roger E. Wilkinson, vice president for business and finance, Theodore B. Simon, assistant vice president of physical plant, and Lyle A. Thorburn, assistant vice president for housing and food services.

Discussed at the meeting were proposals to lower temperatures in University buildings to 66 degrees and further cut down on the use of fresh air ventilating fans in buildings, according to Perrin and Simon.

Power Plant 65 and the inoperative Shaw Lane Power Plant, totaled 59,000 tons when the strike began Dec. 6.

Under ideal conditions, it normally takes 10 to 14 days to ship coal from eastern Kentucky, Simon said. Because everyone will be "clamoring" for coal as soon as the strike ends, the University will not receive regular coal shipments until at least three weeks after the miners go back to work, he added.

The coal reserve may not return to the normal level of 50,000 tons until the end of summer, Simon said.

According to figures released by a Power Plant 65 supervisor, the plant consumes nearly 700 tons of coal daily when the temperature stays below 15 degrees. Simon said daily consumption will soon fall below 500 tons.

In the spring, the daily coal consumption is typically 300 to 350 tons and in the summer, the power plant burns less than 300 tons per day.

Israelis divided over settlements

By MARCUS ELIASON

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The Israeli government, which tried to please all Israelis in its drive to settle Jews on occupied Arab land but offended many, now seems likely to halt the settlement campaign while Middle East peace talks are under way.

This assessment comes from Israeli political sources, one week before Prime Minister Menachem Begin is to travel to Washington for talks with President Carter.

Begin's ruling Likud bloc is in disarray over the settlement issue, and his cabinet is split under the weight of American protests that the settlements hinder peace by offending the Arabs.

The Israeli media accuses Begin of confusing the public. The Labor Party which Likud vanquished in the May 1977 election is back on its feet and hoping Begin will make a big mistake that would bring down his government.

"Today the majority in Likud favors freezing the settlement campaign," says a source close to the cabinet. "They're saying, let's not mess up peace talks by building new settlements right now."

This camp is led by Defense Minister Ezer Weizman, who has already blocked plans for at least three settlements in the Sinai Desert and one in the West Bank of the Jordan River.

Weizman halted construction of the West Bank outpost just before flying to Washington on Sunday for an arms procurement visit, Israel Radio said. The Defense Ministry denied the report, but witnesses at the scene said Monday that work had indeed ceased. The radio said Weizman also cut off army rations to a group of settlers waiting for new homes elsewhere in the zone.

A halt to settlements, the Likud majority believes, would clear the air for fresh peace bargaining with Egypt. But it would not solve the problem of some 100 settlements built on occupied land since the 1967 war — land the Arabs insist on getting back.

Egypt and Jordan also demand the settlements be disbanded and if anyone in Likud agrees to that, he has yet to speak out.

A decision could come Thursday when Herut, Begin's own movement within Likud, meets to discuss settlements. The hawks will demand a clearcut commitment to build more villages. Some moderates will want a flat promise to stop them.

Taft-Hartley Act invoked

By DAVID ESPO

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is warning the country "cannot afford to go longer" for a coal strike settlement. He invoked the Taft-Hartley Act on Monday in a first step aimed at forcing the miners back to work.

Carter asserted that negotiations between the striking United Mine Workers and the coal industry were at an impasse. And the president said he was sending Attorney General Griffin Bell to Washington for seeking an 80-day work order under terms of the Taft-Hartley Act.

The strike by some 160,000 UMW miners, which enters its fourth month, has forced power curtailments and job layoffs in the Midwest and is expected to inflict further harm on the economy.

Carter announced creation of a three-member board of inquiry, as required under the Taft-Hartley Act, and the panel made a public hearing on the strike today. The board's chairperson John N. Gentry, a Washington lawyer, said about 5,000 Mailgrams had been sent to union and industry officials as well as other interested parties inviting them to appear at the hearing.

Gentry noted that under the law the board must prepare a report for the president before the government can go to court. Carter said he expected the board to issue its report quickly, and one administration official said the president expected it within three days.

Besides Gentry, the panel includes Eva Robins, a New York arbitrator, and Carl Warns, a professor at the University of Louisville.

The Taft-Hartley Act was passed in 1947 over a veto by President Harry Truman and has been used by presidents on 34 other occasions. Truman himself used it seven times in 1948 when a series of industrial strikes threatened the economy.

In resorting to Taft-Hartley, Carter said he wanted to make sure the country did not fall victim to "total breakdown of the collective bargaining" process.

Reaction to Carter's announcement came swiftly from the Bituminous Coal Operators Association, the industry-wide bargaining group.

"We are extremely disappointed that the UMW members have rejected the contract their bargaining council had agreed to and that the government also considered favorable to the miners," the BCOA said.

"We hope the imposition of Taft-Hartley will be as contemplated by the statute so (continued on page 10)

Speck admits murders; heroin, whiskey involved

CHICAGO (AP) — Richard Speck has admitted for the first time that he killed seven young nurses slain 12 years ago, and said they would be alive if one of them had not had his face, the Chicago Sun-Times reported Monday.

Speck also said in a copyrighted interview with the newspaper's Bob Greene that the nurse was killed by another person — an "effeminate homosexual." Speck killed because he "would've turned state's evidence."

Chicago police immediately disputed Speck's claim that there was an accomplice. "He's a liar," said Joseph DiLeonardi, citywide homicide commander. "Only one man killed this crime."

DiLeonardi, who was a homicide detective at the time, noted that "you've got a (continued on page 10)

State employment outlook good despite drop in automobile sales

LANSING (UPI) — Despite a dip in car sales, state officials say more people will be working in Michigan this year and they'll be making more money than they did in 1977.

Gov. William G. Milliken, in his annual economic report to the Legislature, said Michigan's economy will continue its expansion — but at a slower rate.

"I expect Michigan's overall economy to continue to grow during 1978," Milliken said.

"Personal income is expected to increase by 9.6 percent. Employment is expected to increase by over 100,000, with the majority of new jobs coming in the nonmanufacturing sector."

The jobless rate, which is expected to average 7.2 percent for the year, is a full percentage point lower than 1977. The rate of inflation is expected to slow to 6.4 percent in 1978, compared with 6.8 percent last year.

The largest price increase will be reflected in transportation costs, which will jump by 8.5 percent. Food prices, which raced up by 5.4 percent in 1977 because of bad weather, will climb by only 4 percent this year and housing costs will increase 6.8 percent.

Milliken's economic forecast was based on the assumption that Congress will approve a $25 billion tax cut, effective Oct. 1.

State Budget Director Gerald Miller said that if the federal tax cut is not forthcoming, "we could see some fairly serious problems for 1979."

Miller told reporters the nationwide coal strike has had practically no effect on Michigan's economy so far, but it could put a severe crimp in business and industry if it continues for longer than another month.

Miller said he is "a little bit concerned" about auto sales, which are expected to suffer a 5 percent decline from last year.

He attributed lower sales to an unusually harsh January and February and to consumer dissatisfaction with the 1978 models.

"There has been some negative reaction about the down sized intermediate models," Miller said.

"The underlying factors in the automobile industry continue to be good. I think you're going to see an upturn — but we've got to watch it."

Representatives walk out in protest of amendments

By KAREN SHERIDAN
State News Staff Writer

Several ASMSU representatives successfully broke quorum Sunday by walking out of a specially-scheduled ASMSU Student Board meeting.

The walkout was an effort to stall board approval of proposed amendments to the ASMSU constitution, representatives said.

"I strongly think this was a political maneuver to destroy quorum and to prevent passage of the legislation," Agriculture and Natural Resources representative Dan Stouffer commented after the meeting.

Debate was spurred by a provision in the four-part amendment bill that would allow the board to amend the ASMSU constitution without student ratification.

The board would be able to make constitutional changes in all cases except those involving student petitioning of a board decision.

"I don't think by any stretch of the imagination that it's appropriate for the board to make changes in the constitution," Barry said.

"We should not delegate to any future board the power to make changes in the constitution without student approval. That would defeat the whole purpose of having a constitution."

ASMSU Legislative Relations Cabinet member Dan Black agreed with Barry.

"I can see where this would facilitate the operations of the board, but the U.S. government does not have such power," he said.

However, engineering representative Jim Randall disagreed.

"I don't agree that everything we vote on should go before a referendum," he commented.

Another provision in the bill calls for the establishment of an ASMSU vice president to chair all meetings. Under the bill, the vice president would be elected on a joint ticket with the ASMSU president.

While Barry supported the second provision, saying it would delegate less power to the president and more to the board itself, he remained opposed to the bill as a whole.

Curfew imposed on Salisbury suburb

SALISBURY Rhodesia (Zimbabwe) (AP) — A dusk-to-dawn curfew was imposed Monday in 225 square miles of white-owned farmland on the outskirts of Salisbury's northeastern suburbs. Violators can be shot on sight.

Police imposed the curfew, already in force in many other areas of the country, in an effort to prevent black nationalist guerrillas from spreading violence into the capital. The city of Salisbury was not included in the curfew order, which includes a popular picnic resort.

At least two white homes in the northeastern suburbs have been attacked since the start of the year, and one white youth has been killed. About 50 property owners, most of them white farmers, and hundreds of blacks working and living on the farms will be affected by the curfew. Motorists are exempt.

Meanwhile, two black vegetable dealers appeared briefly in a local courtroom on charges of planting five bombs that exploded Saturday in downtown Salisbury and its suburbs. No one was hurt in the blasts.

Three killed in South Africa clash

WINDHOEK, South-West Africa (AP) — Police using tear gas scattered mobs of blacks Monday morning after a night of bloody clashes between tribes supporting and opposing the South African administration here, authorities reported. They said three blacks were killed and 40 others were injured.

The violence erupted Sunday afternoon when about 350 Owambo tribesmen armed with sticks, axes, knives and clubs converged on the Herero tribe's section of the black Katutura township near this capital city.

Police described the Owambos as supporters of the anti-South African group SWAPO — the South-West African People's Organization — and the Hereros as followers of the pro-South African Democratic Turnhalle Alliance.

Police used tear gas on several occasions to disperse the rioters, witnesses said. Police said the main fight was broken up by 10 p.m. but smaller groups clashed sporadically until about midnight.

U.S. price rates slower than Europe's

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Prices are rising faster in Western Europe than in the United States, but the rate of increase is slowing down, according to figures released Monday by the Common Market.

The statistical office Eurostat estimated that from January 1977 to January 1978 prices rose 8.3 percent in the nine Common Market countries compared with 6.6 percent in the United States.

The European rate of increase slowed from 9.5 percent in November 1977 to 9.1

percent in December 1977 while the American rate has stayed around 6.7 for the past three months.

West Germany continued to keep the tightest grip on rising prices at 3.2 percent. Italy registered the highest increase of the nine members at 13.8 percent, but it was down from 15 percent last November.

All the Common Market countries showed drops in the rate of increase except France and Denmark.

Business pushes for earlier tax reductions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Representatives of big business told Congress Monday that President Carter's proposed tax reductions should be allowed to take effect three months earlier in order to keep the economy growing.

To meet that timetable, said Reginald H. Jones, chairperson and chief executive officer of General Electric Co., Congress should shelve Carter's proposal to end some tax breaks for many businesses and individuals.

Jones, speaking for the Business

Roundtable, which represents 185 business and financial firms, told the House Ways and Means Committee that the increase in the federal deficit that would result from making the tax cuts effective on July 1 would be a reasonable price to pay.

"Slipping back into slower economic growth or even a recession would, of course, make it much harder to control the deficit and achieve other national economic and social goals," Jones said.

Marston to run for governor seat

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — David W. Marston, the Republican U.S. attorney whose ouster by the Carter administration became a national issue, announced Monday he is a candidate for governor of Pennsylvania.

The 35-year-old lawyer said he would seek the Republican nomination in the May 16 primary.

He is the fifth Republican to enter the race to succeed Democratic Gov. Milton Shapp, who is barred by the state constitution from seeking a third term.

The others are Richard Thornburgh,

Arlen Specter, Robert Butera and state Sen. Henry Hager. Thornburgh, a former U.S. Attorney in Pittsburgh, and Specter, former district attorney in Philadelphia, also have reputations as crime-busting prosecutors.

Marston resigned Jan. 20 after U.S. attorney General Griffin Bell refused to allow him to finish out his term, which would have expired in 1980. Bell said the administration wanted a Democrat in the job and accused Marston, who lost races for the state Legislature in 1972 and 1973, of politicizing his office.

Sea turtles in danger of extinction

Giant sea turtles that once numbered in the millions along North America's Pacific Coast face extinction unless prompt action is taken to save the ocean-dwelling reptiles, conservationists warn.

"Immediate action is vital to protect nesting beaches and stop the slaughter by fishermen," says Vivian Silverstein of the World Wildlife Fund.

"We need immediate action on an international basis to save these turtles," adds Toby Cooper of Defenders of Wildlife. "They're in serious trouble."

Of the five species of marine turtles that inhabit the Pacific coast of North America, the populations of three species, the hawksbill, loggerhead and leatherback — already are perilously low, according to the World Wildlife Fund.

As for the other two, more populous species, the green turtle "will be extinct within three years unless immediate action is taken," a fund study concluded. "The Pacific Ridley turtle population, once the largest in the Western Hemisphere, will follow in less than eight years."

Larry Flynt critically wounded

LAWRENCEVILLE, Ga. (AP) — Larry Flynt, the 34-year-old head of a pornography empire who recently declared he had found God, was shot in the stomach and critically wounded Monday outside a courthouse where he was being tried on obscenity charges.

Herald Fahringer, an attorney for the owner of Hustler magazine, said the assailant jumped into a car and sped off after the attack in this town 30 miles northeast of Atlanta.

The Georgia State Patrol said it was looking for two white males in a silver Camaro with a black top.

Gene Reeves Jr., a local attorney who was representing Flynt in the case here, was shot and wounded in the arm as he and Flynt strolled back to the courthouse from a cafeteria. They had eaten lunch there during the noon recess after Flynt testified in his own defense.

The judge ordered a mistrial and dismissed the six-member jury.

Flynt had "a terrible, ugly hole in his stomach," said Fahringer.

At midafternoon, a special delivery of blood for Flynt was flown by helicopter from Atlanta, authorities said.

Police Capt. Dan Meeks said, "There had been no indication of any violence against Flynt."

Flynt, who was charged in Gwinnett County State Court with distributing obscene materials — specifically the August 1977 issue of Hustler — testified shortly before he was shot that the magazine in many respects contradicted his own beliefs as a Christian. However, he defended his right to publish the magazine, saying it was not illegal and he had "decided in the beginning I was not going to be a censor unless it violated the law."

After his recent announcement that he had been converted by President Carter's sister, evangelist Ruth Carter Stapleton, Flynt turned over to Paul Krassner the title of Hustler publisher. Flynt, however, kept ownership of the magazine.

In his testimony, Flynt called the magazine a "big put-on. We're as much a humor magazine dealing with satire as we are a sexual magazine."

Flynt has also been appealing a conviction for pandering obscenity in Ohio.

In an interview earlier this year with The Associated Press, Flynt said, "Even without God, I was right on the principles that I stood for. I believe with God it's so much fun to be saved."

Flynt's religious experience came while he was traveling in his pink jet, he said, and after several visits with Stapleton in Columbus and at her North Carolina home.

Oil tanker size limit disallowed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court said Monday that states may not limit the size of oil tankers plying their waters, and also ruled that Indian tribes have no legal power to prosecute non-Indians for crimes committed on tribal lands.

Deciding a pair of legal controversies from the state of Washington, the justices handed separate, serious setbacks to proponents of state rights and Indian self-government.

In other matters, the court:

- Let stand a ruling in a Tennessee case that white employees may sue an employer for alleged discrimination against blacks.
- The justices now have given tacit approval to such legal precedent for Ohio, Kentucky, Michigan, Tennessee, California, Alaska, Arizona, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, Oregon, Washington, Guam and Hawaii.
- Agreed to decide whether states may impose requirements on doctors performing abortions aimed at saving the fetus after it is removed from the woman — to abort the fetus "alive."

People confined for complaints in Soviet Union

LONDON (AP) — Fourteen workers who complained about their bosses have been confined to psychiatric hospitals in the Soviet Union since January 1977, Amnesty International said Monday.

The London-based human rights organization said it made the estimate after receiving new material from two major Soviet sources in recent months.

Last year the World Psychiatric Association condemned the practice and singled out the Soviet Union for using hospitalization as a method of containing dissidents. The agency also criticized the persecution of Soviet citizens trying to expose the abuses.

Amnesty International won the Nobel Peace Prize last year for its work in helping political prisoners around the world.

One of the two Soviet sources cited was the unofficial Association of Free Trade Unions, which sent Amnesty about 40 pages of documents, some of them from early 1977. Amnesty said one of these documents, an open letter signed by 43 workers, detailed 14 cases since January 1977 in which Soviet dissidents known to the group were confined to psychiatric hospitals as penalty for lodging formal complaints against their work superiors.

The Soviet employees organization, formed by a group of unemployed workers, was organized to protest violations of labor rights and rights to freedom of expression guaranteed under the Soviet constitution.

Taiwan called chief block to China relations

TOYKO (AP) — Hua Kung-feng, newly confirmed China's supreme leader, told the national parliament Monday that the American attitude on the Taiwan issue remains the chief obstacle to establishing full U.S.-China diplomatic relations.

Hsinhua, the official Chinese news agency, said in a dispatch received here Monday that the American attitude on the Taiwan issue remains the chief obstacle to establishing full U.S.-China diplomatic relations.

Hua made his three and a half hour report last week. Only brief excerpts had been released previously.

Yugoslavian leader in U.S.; military sales may increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Tito of Yugoslavia, the longest-serving head of government in the world, flew here Monday for a three-day official visit.

He is the first communist leader to be received by President Carter.

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance was to greet Tito Monday evening on his arrival at Andrews Air Force base.

Six American presidents have come and gone since Tito's dramatic break with the Soviet Union in 1948, and all have considered preservation of Yugoslavia's independence and territorial integrity to be a vital American interest.

Carter's invitation to the 85-year-old leader represented a continuity of that 30-year U.S. policy. This is Tito's first visit here since 1971 and reciprocates trips to Belgrade made by former Presidents Richard M. Nixon and Gerald R. Ford.

Apparently concerned about a possible Soviet effort to return Yugoslavia to Moscow's camp, the Carter administration has been discussing a "modest expansion" of U.S. military sales with Yugoslav officials.

Sources said Carter and Tito, in meetings today and Thursday, probably will concentrate on such global issues as detente, the Middle East and the Horn of Africa.

Carter will welcome Tito during a ceremony on the White House South Lawn this morning at which military honors will be rendered.

A black tie dinner at the White House has been set for tonight.

Rising health care costs present issue for young

By PETE BRONSON
Lott thought bankrupt financial ruin were things only happened to small business owners.

plan absorbing the cost, patients often pay little attention to their hospital bills. But to the uncovered and unprotected, the impact of spiraling medical care costs can be a crippling blow.

Since 1967, the costs of health care have climbed from $30 billion per year to over $90 billion in 1975. In the same period, government expenditures for health care increased 800 percent.

entire nation $450 million. Now Blue Cross costs GM alone $1 billion per year, and officials estimate that cost goes up at a rate of $100 million annually.

"However, for consumers in general, rising medical care costs are reflected in Consumer Price Index comparisons. A Harvard University study by Martin Feldstein and Amy Taylor found, 'while the general level of consumer prices has risen 125 percent since 1950, the cost of a day in the hospital has climbed more than 1,000 percent.'

Lott was to discover many Americans are unaware until it suddenly strikes them — the soaring cost of health care. After 30 days in intensive care unit undergoing a barrage of elaborate tests, Lott had run up a hospital bill of almost $15,000. Climbing to more than $400 per day, the bill could take years for Lott to pay.

Another major national corporation, Eastern Airlines, reported since 1973 — the year of the OPEC oil price increase — health care costs have risen 25 percent annually. This increase has only been surpassed by Eastern's bills for jet fuel.

To patients, this means the hospital room which cost $15 a day in 1950 now costs $175. According to Michigan Insurance Commissioner Tom Jones, major reasons for high auto insurance costs in the state in not the 'no-fault' plan as some critics claim, but soaring medical care costs which result in larger settlements.

Student organizations join to encourage poll to comply with Title IX

By ANNE MARIE BIONDO
State News Staff Writer
The three largest student governing organizations at MSU have joined forces to urge University administrators to conduct a survey on student needs in physical recreation.

students do with what they have." The resolution calls for a survey to determine student interests in several intramural facilities, the hours the facilities would be used, the competition level desired in each sport and willingness to provide economic support for construction of a multi-purpose sports arena.

ASMSU, the Council of Graduate Students, and Student Council have collaborated on a resolution calling for a survey to help determine University compliance to Title IX.

ASMSU President Kent Barry said there is "no doubt" that the University needs to conduct the survey.

The survey idea originally came from Mary Pollock, MSU director of women's programs. Pollock, also title IX coordinator for MSU, presented the idea to the MSU Board of Trustees Affirmative Action committee.

The University faces a July 21 deadline to be in compliance with Title IX regulations. At this time, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare will review the University's athletic policies. The resolution states that the survey is designed to provide information that could be used at the HEW review in July.

"Title IX says sports programs must reflect the skills and interests of students. The only way to know this is through a survey," James Carr, COGS representative, said.

Student Council and COGS have not yet voted to approve the co-sponsored survey resolution, and it is currently being considered in the policy committee of ASMSU.

Robber flees with money, beer

An armed robber escaped with about $70 from an East Lansing food store Sunday evening after allegedly stealing a pizza delivery car, East Lansing police said.

The man walked into the 7-11 store on Lake Lansing and Harrison Roads at about 8:30 p.m., Lt. Dean Tucker said, and told the cashier to hand over all money in the cash register.

The man pointed to his pocket and told the cashier he had a gun, Tucker said. The woman said she saw a "wooden handle" sticking out of the man's pants but could not see the rest of the alleged gun.

The woman told police the man escaped with the money and a quart of beer. He then drove west on Lake Lansing Road, Tucker said, in either a blue Oldsmobile or Plymouth.

Police said the license plate number reported by the woman matched that of a 1976 Oldsmobile Cutlass stolen earlier from Campus Pizza, 1312 Michigan Ave. The car was stolen about 7:30 p.m. while the driver was inside the restaurant and left the car running. The stolen car was found abandoned in the Frandor shopping center about 10 minutes after the robbery,

Tucker said. Police believe the stolen car was used in the robbery but were not certain even though the license plate numbers matched. Tucker said it is possible the license plates from the stolen car were put on another car used during the robbery, and then replaced. The alleged robber was described as a heavyset, 5-foot-8-inch white male with reddish brown hair.

FM radio permit asked

The Michigan State Radio Network has been granted permission by the MSU Board of trustees to apply to the Federal Communications Commission for a low-power non-commercial FM radio station.

But local radio stations said they may block the network's bid for an FM station by complaining to the FCC.

A carrier current system on the AM band now enables only on-campus residents in buildings to pick up the signal. Tentative plans call for changing WMSN headquarters in the Student Services Building into the FM station. WMCD in McDonell Hall and WBRS in Brody complex would evenly split broadcasting on the older AM carrier current.

Off-campus students will hear MSU student radio for the first time if the proposed FM station is licensed by the FCC. Two years of planning preceded the presentation made to the trustees.

Local radio stations are given a chance to convince the FCC to deny a license in the normal course of application for licensing. The FCC waits 30 days to act on an application, giving other parties time to object. Objections that can force denial of the license include those of a technical, legal or financial nature. The owners of radio stations WVIC and WLS, Joe Buys and (continued on page 10)

Zimbabwean pact a sellout

In Rhodesia — or Zimbabwe, the black nationalist preferred term for the African nation — Prime Minister Ian Smith has finally struck a deal to turn over control of the nation to the overwhelming black majority. It is a deal that in the past the United States said it would never recognize. It is a deal cloaked with injustice. It merits no support.

The compromise Smith worked out would, by the end of the year, turn the reigns of government over to three moderate black leaders — Bishop Abel Muzorewa, the Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole and Senator Jeremiah Chirau. Not a shred of authority will be given to Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe, leaders of the Patriotic Front, whose 17,000 guerrillas have waged years of war against the Smith regime to attain Zimbabwe's independence.

Nkomo and Mugabe not only command a large following, but the Patriotic Front they preside over has been the key force in hastening the downfall of white minority rule in Zimbabwe. To deny them a role in the newly-forming government is not a "victory for moderation," as Smith called it, but a sellout to expediency.

The issue of giving the Patriotic Front a piece of the action notwithstanding, the deal Smith negotiated with the black leaders is still intrinsically flawed. Zimbabwe has a top-heavy majority of 6.4 million blacks as compared to 268,000 whites. But the plan ensures that 28 out of Zimbabwe's 100-seat parliament will be reserved for whites, most of them from Smith's Rhodesian Front Party. Smith and associates argue that power is being transferred to moderate, enlightened and intelligent black leaders. If that is the case, then why is there a need for mandatory white representation all out of proportion to the number of whites in the country?

"Black rule will not occur in this country for a thousand years."

"We intend to finish (Smith) up," Nkomo declared following news of the settlement. The United States should recognize that if it supports the Smith plan, it will invite Soviet intervention in Zimbabwe on behalf of the Patriotic Front. No matter how it is analyzed, the Zimbabwean settlement is a bad one that will only bring more turmoil and bloodshed to a troubled region of the world.

Misconceptions on Africa's Horn

On the Horn of Africa a grim and bloody war is raging. It is war little understood and, some would contend, inadequately covered by the press. It is a war between Ethiopia and Somalia, a conflict that would probably draw even less attention than it does except for the fact that it involves a Soviet and Cuban military presence.

The Soviet advisers and Cuban troops are fighting on behalf of Ethiopia, a fact which automatically triggers certain images in the minds of most Americans. The residue of the Cold War blights public consciousness, instilling in most the belief that Soviets and Cubans, wherever they venture, can only be up to no good. Somalia, which appears to be losing the war, is the beneficiary of this attitude.

Ethiopia's ties to the Soviet Union appear tenuous; until recently the Addis Ababa regime was an ally of the United States. Ethiopian soldiers wear American-made uniforms and brandish U.S.-made rifles. Soviet equipment has only recently made an appearance in the war zone.

Perhaps even more ironic is the fact that Somalia, until late last year, was a deeply loyal ally of the Kremlin. But Somalia's President Mohammad Siad Barre expelled the Russians in November and is now actively seeking U.S. arms and support.

The situation on the Horn of Africa is a tense and complex one. A knee-jerk revulsion to Communist support for Ethiopia is simplistic, because too many imperatives exist and loyalties shift too quickly. Better to hope for an expeditious end to the bloodshed.

A strike against South Africa

For some time now it has been apparent that the white-dominated government of South Africa is, in short, one of the most oppressive regimes in the world. The racist apartheid government is a shameless assault on the political, social and individual freedoms all persons have an inherent right to.

It has long been understood that the most effective way to attack the foundations of apartheid — in which a white minority lords over a black majority — is through economic pressure. Most U.S. corporations, including several which MSU routinely and unhesitatingly invests in, reject this philosophy and maintain substantial holdings in the Pretoria regime.

But last Friday the United Auto Workers threatened to withdraw its funds from any financial institution making loans directly through affiliates for use in the South African economy.

UAW President Douglas Fraser said the union would take action against banks lending money to companies with operations in South Africa if the money was designated for use in that country.

International corporations with interests in South Africa include General Motors, Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp.

The UAW thus joins with several other unions, including International Longshoremen's Warehouse Workers Union, using its financial and political clout to pressure banks in withdrawing support from a racist country in which blacks seek their freedom.

Africa, long assailed and regaled as the Dark Continent and the heart of the Third World, has in the last few years increasingly fallen under international scrutiny. Today three flashpoints of tension and violence — Zimbabwe, South Africa and the Ogaden desert region of Ethiopia — are prominent fixtures in the news. One is attempting to make the difficult transition from white to black rule, one is laboring under the grotesque anachronism of apartheid, one is the scene of a violent, behind-the-scenes war. The three editorials which follow attempt to shed some light on these restive, often explosive regions.

Three writers assail DPS

'Twits' called to task

I totally enjoyed my recent stay at your fine University, especially the part when the DPS had my car towed for parking in the wrong lot one hour before the legal time.

It didn't bother me that the lot was half empty and the end of the working day for the staff, so I wasn't taking up "valuable space." However, I am very mad at the attitude taken by the DPS dispatcher, who didn't know where my car had been taken and the master sergeant who really didn't give a damn that the car had been broken into saying, "It's not my problem, I'm not here to serve anyone."

Who the hell is there to serve then? I was equally appalled when he said, "I've got better things to do . . . than to help you."

This type of attitude continued on until I found where my car had been taken, to Okemos — over six miles away! Don't these twits realize that a 12-year-old car's transmission, let alone any cars' transmission, can be destroyed if towed more than a couple of miles at the most? The cost of a new transmission is a little bit more than the five dollar penalty I must now pay to clear my good name after the criminal way in which I was treated.

I used to think that MSU had some "Magic" to it and that the people were really something else, now it seems that I was wrong.

I was robbed

Friday afternoon, Feb. 24, I was robbed by the Department of Public Safety of Michigan State University! At 4:00 I drove my brother's car into the parking lot behind the Natural Resources building, and at 4:45 I returned to find the car gone. Someone in the parking lot told me that the DPS had been towing away cars that day.

I was infuriated. The DPS had told me at the beginning of the term that I could, if the need arose while working on campus, drive and park my brother's car there. "If you get a ticket," they said, "just write a note stating that you were working at the time, which your brother could use to argue the ticket." They mentioned nothing about towing.

When I related this conversation to the DPS at 5:00 Friday, I was informed that "many people come to the DPS with that same story," and that the DPS sees no basis for these stories, since the information claimed to have been given out by them is not correct information in regard to DPS's policy. It was for this reason that my request for them to release the car from the towing lot was refused.

The DPS laid the blame on the victims — not themselves — for coming up with all of those identical stories. I claim this to be faulty logic, and their tactics dishonest and identical to robbery. I demand that they not be allowed to carry out this injustice upon the students and visitors of MSU any longer, and to recompense all of those who suffered under the same "illusion."

DPS ethics held questionable

On Feb. 28, 1978, at 7:00 p.m., approximately 120 of my classmates and I were beginning an examination for Pharmacology 521A in the Life Sciences Auditorium. At the same time, outside Life Sciences, a police car and tow truck pulled up and began ticketing and towing cars parked in the lane behind the meters.

A late arrival informed us of this undertaking, and I rushed outside to see if my car was illegally parked. Sure enough, I encountered a campus police officer about to place a ticket under my windshield wiper. I had no time to argue with him so I moved my car out to the side of the road and went back inside to finish the exam. I later learned that an identical "raid" had occurred exactly one week before while students were taking an exam.

The significance of all this? Consider the following:

- The signs prohibiting parking in the aforementioned area are facing north. Therefore, a person entering from the south, in the dark, could not read them.
- Furthermore, my classmates and I have been parking there for evening exams since last summer, and some of us did not realize we were illegally parked, nor were we ever informed of this fact. "Ignorance is no excuse," you may say, but perhaps we had other things on our minds — such as an examination. I, for one, did not take the time to worry about walking up and reading a sign which was facing the other way.

•The incident Tuesday night may have had a substantial effect on my examination performance. I do not wish to believe that the Department of Public Safety would deliberately set up a situation which was bound to affect our grades — but "good intentions" or not, this seems to be the case.

•It seems a strange coincidence that on both occasions the officer and tow truck arrived just as all the students were supposed to be inside taking an exam. It appears that DPS knew when the tests were scheduled, and subsequently arrived on the scene to ticket and tow. Needless to say, the ethics behind this move are highly questionable (or nonexistent).

How much of this goes on every night at MSU? I strongly sympathize with any student who, having finished an exam, steps outside to discover his vehicle missing. I certainly would not relish the prospect of walking home down Service Rd. at 9:00 p.m.

Food for thought, I say, and reason enough for action . . .

VIEWPOINT: PUERTO RICANS STRUGGLE

Puerto Ricans recall March

By THE PUERTO RICAN STUDENTS ASSOCIATION

The Puerto Rican Student Association recognizes that March is an important month in the lives of the Puerto Rican people. It is a month filled with events that have shaped the history and the oppression of the Puerto Rican people by the United States government.

March 1 marks 24 years of imprisonment for four Puerto Rican political prisoners. Lolita Lebron, Rafael Cancel Miranda, Irvin Flores Rodriguez, and Andres Figueroa Cordero were jailed in 1954 when they staged an armed attack on the U.S. Congress with the intent of exposing the "Commonwealth" status of Puerto Rico as a smokescreen for continued colonial exploitation by the U.S. government. Cordero was recently released to die in freedom of a cancer condition which was neglected during his stay in prison. But along with Oscar Collazo, another Puerto Rican Nationalist who was jailed in 1950 for a similar attack on Blair House, the remaining three represent the longest-held political prisoners in the Western Hemisphere.

March 2 is the anniversary of the Jones Law, enacted in 1917, which gives Puerto Ricans limited U.S. citizenship, thereby allowing them to be drafted and used as cannon fodder for the coming World War. This law was approved by the U.S. Congress over unanimous opposition by the Puerto Rican legislature.

March 3, 1952, the "New" Constitution of Puerto Rico was approved by the U.S. Congress, declaring that Puerto Rico is no longer a colony, but a "Free Associated State," masking the continued control by the U.S. over the government, the economy, and the very lives of the Puerto Rican people. The Supreme Court defined Puerto Rico as "belonging to, but not part of" the United States, a definition which describes a colony better than it describes a "Free Associated State."

March 4, 1970, Antonia Martinez was killed by police in the aftermath of a revolt of university students who were protesting the imposition of mandatory military service on the Puerto Rican people who did not have the benefit of voting for or against this law. Antonia was shot when she shouted to a policeman to stop, when she saw from the balcony of her apartment that he was beating a student.

March 11, 1971, three state policemen were killed in a demonstration at the University of Puerto Rico where students were protesting the presence of ROTC on campus and commemorating the anniversary of the death of Antonia Martinez.

March 21 marks the date of an ambush police on a peaceful demonstration sponsored by the Puerto Rican Nationalist Party in 1937, in which 20 persons were killed, 200 more were wounded, including women, and children. The demonstration was organized to demand the release of Nationalist leader Albizu Campos, who was detained in a federal prison for voicing views on Puerto Rican independence.

We believe that all U.S. citizens concerned about human rights should during this month, consider the history of the Puerto Rican people, who have had no government or law in the last 25 years which was not forced on them by the U.S. government.

This is the second part of a series on the evils of computer dating and "the war between the sexes."

My Computer Date sheet arrived several weeks later. My percentiles were LOW especially in the area of attitudes and values, and I began to wonder if I was some sort of pervert. I decided to call SARAH first, as she was the highest percentile rating on my list, with a whole 50 percent under attitudes.

"Hello."
"Sarah?"
"Yes."

"My name is Bill, and I'm one of your computer dates."

"I'd really prefer that you didn't refer to it as 'date,'" she said. "The term 'date' generally leads to the phrase 'Do you want to go out with me?' Both are sexist terms used for the oppression of women."

"Oh," I said. "Well, what are you doing tonight?"

"Just studying. How about yourself?"

"Kinda bored. I was just sitting here watching a rerun of I Love Lucy."

She sighed. "I really wonder sometimes where the minds of most station managers are. I Love Lucy is awful. It's such a blatantly sexist show with its stereotypes and all."

"Oh," I said. "Well, I was wondering if you'd, uh, uh, like to get together tonight."

"Maybe," she said. "Oh, yeah, that would be great since I'm using this as a sociological study in my Women's Studies program."

There was an embarrassed pause.

"Oh, uh, well, my friend actually talked me into this. Gee! I hope you're not going to dissect me," I joked.

"I only dissect mice and rats."

"Oh," I said. "I'm sorry. What time is convenient?"

She paused a moment. "I'll pick you up at eight," she said and hung up.

I immediately phoned Duke. "I think she's into the Movement," I said.

"Oh?" he mumbled. "Is that as in dance or gymnastics?"

"Neither," I replied.

"Hmmm. Perhaps you might suggest Kaopetate."

If our culture's standards of beauty mean anything, Sarah turned out to be a very attractive person. And if first impressions mean anything, she seemed to be very intelligent. Sarah was punctual, and she suggested that we drive to a women's bookstore in a nearby city where a renowned feminist poet was scheduled to give a reading. I was a little apprehensive since I knew a male person who was asked to leave this store earlier last summer. Sarah put my mind at ease, reassuring me that it would be alright.

It did turn out that I was the only male there, and I'd be a hypocrite if I said I didn't feel conspicuous. It didn't help matters much when the poet gave her opening invocation: "For you. For us. And, yes . . . even for them."

After the reading, the women broke into separate groups to talk, and Sarah introduced me to some of her friends. I realized that most stereotypes of feminists are unfair, since this seemed to be a movement which involved all types of people.

My one problem was that if I was so repulsed by violent people, why was I suddenly feeling so guilty, guilty, GUILTY! One woman in particular, Glinda, intrigued me, since it seemed that she was trying to assume a "male-masculine" role to fit her own image. Since the movement seemed to be based on a disdain for stereotyped sex roles, adopting another stereotyped sex role seemed to me to be defeating its purpose. However, I never got a chance to question her on it, since Glinda seemed to be quite annoyed with my presence at a women's meeting, and she expressed her annoyance in no uncertain terms.

"Well, it seems that the use of segregation is one hell of a way to run a liberation," I said.

"You don't understand," said Glinda. "Most women no longer care if they have men for friends. Men don't understand women."

"And women understand men?"

"Why not? You're all alike."

"Oh, I dunno. I always thought there was some distinguishing characteristics between me and Truman Capote."

Glinda stared at me. "Okay. As a male, how would you feel if you were walking on a beach, and you suddenly realized that every female was looking at your body, completely ignoring your face, completely ignoring you as a person, how would you feel?"

"Well, uh, uh," I stuttered. I grinned.

"Maybe I'd be flattered 'cos everyone usually does stare at my body when I'm on a beach, but it generally isn't for very flattering reasons!"

I laughed. There were a few hesitant smiles. Sarah looked embarrassed for me. Glinda stared at me stonefaced.

"Listen," I said, "I actually planned on playing some baggammon and drinking a few Cokes tonight, really."

I sat in the corner the rest of the evening feeling extremely guilty, guilty, GUILTY!

Chapin captivates audience

By STEVE SZILAGYI
State News Reviewer

Seeing Tom Chapin at Dooley's Sunday night was a pleasant surprise. The lanky singer-songwriter gave an enthusiastic, polished show, commanding more appreciation than one would expect from a solo performer with a minor reputation. And it was exciting to discover he's a competent performer in his own right, far removed from being billed as somebody else's less famous brother.

Chapin kept a small but appreciative audience captivated throughout his first set Sunday night. Singing original ballads, love songs, and non-sense ditties combined with guitar accompaniment and a magnetic stage manner, Chapin gave a respectable one-man show.

Of course, his reputation as Harry Chapin's brother followed him to the concert. Judging by the shouts from the audience and the references to Harry Chapin's songs, it would be safe to guess that most of the people there were Harry Chapin fans.

One of his songs was dedicated to Harry. One of them was made popular on one of Harry's albums. References to brother Harry got tossed around throughout the set.

But the references to his more popular brother were not a big part of Chapin's show, and seemed to make him uncomfortable at times. Most of the songs were Tom Chapin's own — a large share, in fact, were totally new to the audience, since Chapin has released only one album that has received only the tiniest amount of air play.

The performance had some definite weak spots, but were covered up by Chapin's natural charm and well-honed stage presence. The concert started a half hour late, since Chapin didn't show up until after the starting time. His guitar playing and singing weren't the world's best. The lyrics of his songs — heavy on loneliness, lost love, and raw emotion — sometimes bordered on the banal.

But like his brother, Chapin has some sort of instant appeal that makes up for any musical shortcomings. Tall, good looking with a vibrant personality and a mouthful of pearly white teeth, Chapin has an irresistible physical presence and intangible personal charm.

In a totally nonsensical song like "Traveling Man," he had the audience singing and clapping along within minutes. In the bawdy "Sugar Bush," the audience was forgetting their troubles, memorizing verses, and singing in harmony with hardly a bit of encouragement.

Despite his relative lack of solo concert exposure, Chapin has been around in different phases of the industry for quite some time. Besides singing with his brothers Harry and Steve as the Chapin Brothers, he also performed with Harry on tour, including when "Greatest Stories Live" was recorded. He also wrote the music for and appeared in the film Blue Water, White Death.

He is best known, though, for his five years as the host of television's Make a Wish. The children's show featured Chapin's singing and high-speed word games, and won both an Emmy and a Peabody award.

These phases of Chapin's career weren't unknown to the audience. The most well-received songs were "Circle," which has become something of a trademark song for brother Harry, and the theme from Make a Wish.

But despite these two fairly well-known songs, Chapin's show contained a wealth of new material, some that had received very little trial at the hands of an audience. It was well received by the people at Dooley's.

MSU movements in modern music

By ROBERT BAKER
State News Reviewer

The New Musical Arts Society had its last concert under Richard Rosenberg's direction last weekend. Rosenberg is leaving MSU to seek a position in New York.

The attendance was satisfactory for a concert of all 20th Century music; though certainly the piece which attracted the most was Gershwin's Rhapsody in Blue, which, compared with other works, was passe. Janina O'Brien was the piano soloist for the Gershwin, in this original 1924 jazz band version.

O'Brien's technique was ample but there were several flawed passages, though she never lost her composure. At times, the piece lacked coherence and fluidity, though individual sections were solid in themselves.

The Gershwin was the finale, and that which preceded it reflected "new" music more accurately. The initial part of the program included two premiere performances of works by MSU composers, Brent McClung and Robert Baker.

"This Earth" was the title of the other piece premiered, by Brent McClung. The work was well-constructed with several recurring motifs. It called for horn, piano, soprano and strings, and was a rather moving work with an anti-modern-society message.

The program included two electronic compositions, both of which were realized at the Columbia-Princeton Electronic Music Center. The second, "Electronic Music #2" by Bulent Arel was not well received; while "Happy Birthday" by Hal Freedman and Richard Einhorn was applauded with no less than a few bravos. The piece quoted "Happy Birthday" and fused it with a pop rhythm and isomorphic harmonic accompaniment. The piece can be termed, without any contempt, cute.

Wendy Herbener was the flautist for two works. She soloed in "Syrinx" by Debussy and brought graceful insight to this overplayed piece. The final note dissolved into the very air; the effect was perfect.

Kay Hickey joined her for "Die Kranke Mond" from Pierrot Lunaire by Arnold Schonberg. Hickey is an accomplished local soprano. She gave a credible performance. The score is difficult but she handled it well.

Midway in the program James Romeo performed "Music for Solo Piano" by John Cage. Cage is one of the foremost contemporary composers. Performances of such works often lack interpretation and style; however, Romeo, who understands this repertoire well, brought out many intriguing nuances. There were some especially fine moments that hinted at tonality.

"Serenade Number 10" is one of the standards of the flute-harp repertoire, and was one of the best performances on the concert. Wendy Frink was the flautist and Ruthanne Bessman the harpist, together their sense of ensemble was exact and exquisite.

The program was varied but balanced, with a good sampling of the familiar and the novel.

EARN OVER $650 A MONTH RIGHT THROUGH YOUR SENIOR YEAR.

If you're a junior or a senior majoring in math, physics or engineering, the Navy has a program you should know about.

It's called the Nuclear Propulsion Officer Candidate-Collegiate Program (NUPOC-C for short) and if you qualify, you can earn as much as $650 a month right through your senior year. Then after 16 weeks of Officer Candidate School, you'll receive an additional year of advanced technical education. This would cost you thousands in a civilian school, but in the Navy, we pay you. And at the end of the year of training, you'll receive a $3,000 cash bonus.

It isn't easy. There are fewer than 400 openings and only one of every six applicants will be selected. But if you make it, you'll have qualified for an elite engineering training program. With unequaled hands-on responsibility, a $24,000 salary in four years, and gilt-edged qualifications for jobs in private industry should you decide to leave the Navy later. (But we don't think you'll want to.)

Ask your placement officer to set up an interview with a Navy representative when he visits the campus on March 9, or contact your Navy representative at 313-226-7795 (collect). If you prefer, send your résumé to the Navy Nuclear Officer Program, Code 312-B468, 4015 Wilson Blvd., Arlington, Va. 22203, and a Navy representative will contact you directly. IM titles up for grabs

MSU's best IM basketball teams, both men's and women's, have been involved with tournaments to determine All-University champions over the past two weeks.

The women's league tourney concluded last week with Mason-Abbott defeating the Silver Bullets (from Shaw Hall), 25-22. In the Independent league, Shooting Stars beat Mother Ruggers, 27-18. The Sorority title went to Delta Zeta, who defeated Alpha Phi, 12-11.

Heathcote wary of Providence

By MICHAEL KLOCKE
State News Sports Writer
The way things look, MSU has a mighty good chance to make it to the finals of the Mideast Regional in the NCAA basketball tournament.

Providence lost to Rhode Island in the East Coast Athletic Conference post-season tournament, but the Friars have knocked off some formidable opponents this year, including North Carolina and Louisville.

MSU is seeded No. 1 in the Mideast Regional by virtue of its Big Ten title — and that has its advantages.

The Spartans are opposite both No. 1 Kentucky and No. 2 Marquette, and if they beat Providence, they will play the winner of the Syracuse-Western Kentucky game. Not a bad draw, considering how other teams fared.

The other game of Saturday's doubleheader at Indianapolis' Market Square Arena will feature Marquette against the Mid-American Conference champion, which is still to be determined.

After some speculation, it was decided Monday afternoon that the MSU-Providence game will be played at 2 p.m. and will be shown on NBC (Channel 10).

Marquette will play the MAC winner at 11 a.m. in what Heathcote dubbed "the breakfast game."

The uncertainty stemmed from the hockey game the Indianapolis Racers have scheduled at Market Square Arena Saturday night. It has forced the basketball games to be played earlier.

"I'm amazed they moved the NCAA games to a place that can't accommodate them," Heathcote said. The doubleheader was originally scheduled for Purdue's Mackey Arena, but was moved because of the energy crunch in that area.

Ironically enough, the Indiana Hoosiers, who finished behind MSU in the Big Ten, have an easier draw in the Eastern Regional. Indiana plays Furman in the first round, and it looks like the

Jud Heathcote

Hoosiers have a good shot at getting into the final four. "We helped Indiana get the bid and Indiana helped us win the conference by defeating both Purdue and Minnesota late in the season," Heathcote said.

Heathcote also spent a good deal of the news conference reflecting on the 23-4 season — MSU's best year ever.

"I'm reminded of the previous season when someone said there was no way we will win the Big Ten with a zone defense, a small center and two freshmen in the starting lineup," Heathcote said.

But the regular season is behind the Spartans. On top of the NCAA, which Heathcote aptly describes as "Russian Roulette."

Marquette not happy with bids

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Marquette Coach Hank Raymonds Sunday expressed concern about the possibility of playing Kentucky in the Mideast Regional of the NCAA basketball tournament.

Raymonds said the NCAA defending champion Warriors will play the Mid-American Conference champion Saturday in Indianapolis with the winner of that game facing the winner of the Kentucky-Florida State game.

Kentucky, 24-2, is ranked first, and Marquette, 24-3, is ranked third.

"I'm just pleased as can be to be in the tournament," said Raymonds, an assistant to Al McGuire last year when the Warriors beat North Carolina 67-59 in the NCAA finals.

"It's happening again," Raymonds said, however, comparing this year's Mideast bids to those two years ago when Indiana beat Marquette 65-56.

"They were number one, and we were number two."

Greg Sbaraglia, Marquette spokesman, said Raymond told NCAA officials he was displeased with the bids, but Raymonds said he was only concerned about their selection. "I think a lot of people around the country are concerned about this," he said. He said NCAA officials started seeding teams when Marquette lost to Indiana, but he said officials aren't seeding enough teams.

"I think you've got to seed 32 teams and let the chips fall where they may," Raymonds said. "I'm happy to be in the tournament, but if they're trying to get some equity, they have to seed all teams."

"If we're going to seed — the purpose of seeding is to have the team considered number one in the nation playing the team considered number two in the nation in the finals," Raymonds said.

Miami leads Bowling Green, Central Michigan and Toledo in the Mid-American Conference by one game and could win the conference and a shot at Marquette Monday night with a win over Eastern Michigan.

"I don't care who we play," said Raymonds, looking forward to the opening game. He declined to make any predictions about winning the title again. "Hell, I'm just pleased to be in the tournament."

More tickets possible

All of the approximately 1,000 tickets for MSU's NCAA opener Saturday which went on sale Monday have been bought, according to Bill Beardsley, assistant athletic director in charge of business.

Another 1,000 tickets were used for complimentary purposes, Beardsley said. Beardsley left for Indianapolis Monday afternoon to see if he could get more tickets. If he is able to, the tickets will also go on sale to students, faculty, staff and the general public later in the week.

"We got a bit of a break on the other schools because we qualified for the tournament earlier," Beardsley said. "We also have a good relationship with the people in Indianapolis. We're hoping we can get more tickets, but as of right now I just can't say."

An announcement will be made today if more tickets are available.

THREE MAKE FINALS Grapplers place third

MSU wrestlers weren't expected to do well in the Big Ten meet, but came with a third-place finish. The Spartans had a few individual stars as a team effort which allowed them to finish in Ann Arbor Sunday.

They did the maximum we could have done team," MSU head coach Grady Peninger said. "This is really gratifying to go from third place a year ago, all the way up to first place."

They had some super performances from our but we only qualified three of them for the Big Ten. We should have been able to get five. Our 118- and 150-pounders lost but they should have won."

They won the conference meet for the fifth year. The heavily-favored, No. 1 ranked Hawkeyes were able to win the title by taking the first three weight classes in Sunday's competition. The Hawkeyes went on to win six of the 10 weight classes.

Iowa finished the meet with 117 and one-quarter points. Wisconsin was close behind with 94 points and MSU ended up a distant third with 83 and three-quarters points.

The Spartan place winners were Mike Walsh, Dennis Brighton and Jim Ellis. Walsh placed second in the 134-pound weight class, Brighton placed third in the 142-pound weight class and Ellis placed second at 177 pounds.

All three will go on to the NCAA finals at Maryland March 16-18. The top four wrestlers in each weight class qualified for the finals.

"These are three good wrestlers," Peninger said. "I feel that all three of them are capable of placing in the finals."

Lee Kemp of Wisconsin was voted the outstanding wrestler of the tournament. Randy Lewis of Iowa also took honors by having the most falls in the two days of competition.

Swimmers falter in Big Ten

MSU men's swimming had a dismal ending to a season this past weekend in the Big Ten meet.

Spartans finished the meet with a 6-1 dual record, but did no better than 11th in the meet. As was the case in Indiana, the Spartans won the meet for the 18th consecutive year with a total of 349 points. Ohio State won the meet for the second place with 400 points. Wisconsin took third place with 380 points.

All the news about the meet is bad, though. MSU had bright spots in Shawn Griffin. Elkins won the 200-yard butterfly the second year in a row. Griffin took first place in the 100-meter diving.

"This was a real good meet," MSU head coach Dick Fetters said. "It was a close meet; in fact, it was a closer meet than normal."

"Indiana took the meet, but they weren't leading after first day, Ohio State was. We had some guys who had some real good swims, but we happened to run up against some guys who had better swims than us. Shawn and Jesse did a good job for us and we're real proud of them."

With his showing in the meet, Elkins will be able to advance on to the NCAA finals.

Griffin, along with teammate Kevin Macherer, will advance to the diving regionals at Cleveland State next weekend.

The divers placing in the regionals will advance to the nationals. Macherer gets to advance to the regionals with his third-place finish in the one-meter diving event.

No other Spartan tanker was able to place, although there were some who broke school and personal records. Dan Warnshuis, a senior, broke school records in both the 100- and 200-yard breaststroke. Even though Warnshuis broke MSU records, his times were not good enough to place in the meet. Dave Seobold, another senior, also swam well. He swam the best he ever has in the 200-yard butterfly event, but was unable to come away with a placing.

Women thinclads finish second MSU loses to Badgers

By GAYLE JACOBSON
State News Sports Writer

It wasn't quite what MSU women's track coach Cheryl Flanagan had hoped for, but the Spartans' second-place finish in the first indoor Big Ten track meet Saturday is definitely something she can live with... at least until next year's rematch.

Wisconsin took five first-place finishes on its way to winning the Big Ten track and field title with 168 points. The Spartans, defending outdoor champions, followed with 146 points, wrapping up their final indoor meet of the season. Ohio State took third place in the championship competition with a score of 55.

sixths," Flanagan stated. "They are what made our points. Without them, we wouldn't have done as well as we did. We didn't have any pentathletes, though, and that's what killed us in the meets. Otherwise, there would've been a five-point difference. Wisconsin had three entered. By the time we get started in outdoor track, we should have some. Cory Kneuer of Wisconsin ran off with the first-place finish in the pentathlon.

Other firsts for the team came from Pam Sedwick in the 600-meter run with a 1:31.4, and Lynn Barber in the shot put with her throw of 42 feet, 1 1/4 inches. The MSU four-by-220 relay team also came away with a win. Their time in the event was 1:41.7.

Second-place finishes went to Kim Hatchett in the 60-meter hurdles, Cheryl Gilliam in the 200-meter and Karen Harris in the long jump. Other seconds were Lil Warnes in the 3,000-meter run, Johanna Matthyssen in the 440-meter event and the four-by-800 relay team.

MSU women swimmers shine in regional meet

The MSU women's swimming season is fast drawing to a close but New York senior Melinda Whitcomb is just warming up.

Whitcomb is one of three Spartans who have qualified for the national finals and the other two, divers Annette Kubiske and Pat McDonnell, also fared well last weekend. Kubiske was third on the one-meter board and fourth on the three-meter while McDonnell placed seventh in one-meter competition. The most pleasant surprise was the 11th-place showing of Sue Fredley on the one-meter board.

After a record-setting performance in the Big Ten meet the weekend previous, Whitcomb paced the Spartans to a fourth-place finish among 28 teams in last weekend's regional meet at the University of Michigan.

Whitcomb took a pair of second places, in the 50-yard breaststroke and 100-yard individual medley, and had a hand in the 200-yard freestyle relay performance that posted an MSU season-best time of 1:40.70. The Spartans were third in the event.

Vicki LeFevre swam on the fast-paced 200-yard freestyle relay team and tacked on an 11th-place effort in the 200-yard freestyle. Whitcomb was sixth in the 100-yard breaststroke, Colleen O'Malia fifth in the 200-yard breaststroke, Karen Waite seventh in the 50-yard butterfly and diver Jeannie Mikel grabbed ninth in the three-meter competition.

Michigan won the team title, rolling up 840.5 points to runner-up Eastern Michigan's 361. Bowling Green was next with 238 and the Spartans finished with 194.

The 400-yard medley relay quartet churned to a fourth-place showing, sparked by the clutch performance of Marilyn Early in the backstroke leg.

The national finals are set for March 16-18 in Durham, N.C.

PROGRAM IS FIRST OF ITS KIND

LCC now offers degree in rock and roll

By LYNETTE GRIFFIN
 Rock and roll has finally found its way into the classroom.
 Lansing Community College recently began offering a two-year degree in pop rock music.
 The program, currently in its first term, is the only one of its kind in the world, curriculum adviser Robert Beury said.
 The curriculum is designed to teach the traditional composing, arranging and performing music skills, but the emphasis is on pop rock music, he said.
 The intent of LCC's two-year program is to provide students with all the music skills necessary for a career in pop rock, he explained.
 He also said the classes can benefit students in regular four-year music programs because rock and roll courses are not generally offered.
 James Niblock, chairperson of MSU's music department, said MSU does not concentrate on any particular music style, but covers the "entire sweep" of music.
 "We feel a person who gets a bachelor degree should be well trained in all areas of the music field, not just one particular area," Niblock said.

 Linda Griswold, an MSU music graduate and music program director at LCC, said the pop rock classes can also be beneficial to four-year music students who plan to teach.
 Boury, who has a doctorate degree in music, said students who prefer not to work toward a two-year degree can enroll for one or two pop rock classes or earn a one-year certificate.
 He added that the school has an "open-door policy." People with no musical experience as well as those who have already played in bands are encouraged to enroll, he said.
 Boury said the idea for the program came as a result of his teaching experience in music schools.
 "I got the impression that a number of students were young rock and rollers going through traditional music programs because that's all that was available to them," he said.
 The first year of LCC's associate degree program is designed to give students a general background in music and teach them some fundamental skills, Boury said.
 Students study music theory, keyboard (piano), vocal training and ear training (recognizing chords, rhythms and melodies by ear) they must declare a major in an instrument, he said.
 "Vocal training is included for all students because eventually every member of a group has to do backup vocals, even the drummer," Boury said.
 All lessons in a student's major instrument are conducted privately by pop rock staff members, he continued.
 During the second year, students must declare a major in either composition or performance, Boury said, adding that a minimum of five terms of keyboard is mandatory.
 "We're not trying to make virtuoso piano players of students," he said. "We want them to be able to get around the keyboard enough so they can use it for composing and so it will be useful in performing."
 To graduate, students will be required to perform their skills before program staff members.
 Composition majors must prepare a final project of "completely original music," Boury said.
 "We're thinking in terms of a public performance — possibly a showcase thing for several students at a time," he said.
 Other courses offered by the LCC program attempt to familiarize students with the business end of the music trade.
 One such class entitled "The Business of Music" is designed to "keep a constant flow of music people in the area and region before the students," Boury said. "They talk about contracts, copyrights, program directing, and the music business in general."
 Music trade professionals often meet with the class. One speaker was Ron Shannon, program director of WFMK radio. Mike Collins, a disc jockey at WRIF in Detroit, has agreed to speak next term, he said.
 Two pop rock staff members have each formed a student band as part of the program and hope to be doing public performances in the future.

Boury said all staffers are "experienced teachers and veteran performers with recording experience." One staff member was Chuck Berry's pianist for five years, and another was lead guitarist for Plain Brown Wrapper.
 Several new staff members will join the program spring term and more will be added as the program grows, Boury said. Currently, 120 students are enrolled.
 Tom Rhoadbeck, 21, a student in the pop rock program, said he enrolled to "round out my musicianship." Rhoadbeck said he has played guitar for eight years and composes a lot of his own material.
 "Before, I could just play and had to teach my songs by ear to other players," he said, explaining that he is learning to read and write music. "Now I'll be able to communicate with other musicians about what I want them to play without always being there."

Hey, what does he do, anyway?
 SOUTH LAKE TAHOE, Calif. (AP) — What do youngsters think President Carter does for a living?
 Well, a handful of students at Bijou Elementary School here recently answered that question and here are some replies:
 Steven Erickson, 8, said Carter "gives the rules out, writes laws and has parties."
 Amy Hart, also 8, said the chief executive "tells the people what to do and visits people."
 Mona James, also 8, said the president "takes care of the world, writes letters and talks on the TV a lot."
 And then there is Danny Perr, 9. He said Carter "counts money and opens his big mouth too much."

WHITES ALLOWED TO SUE FOR BLACKS

Court upholds discrimination suit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court Monday let stand a lower court's ruling that white employees may sue an employer for alleged discrimination against blacks.
 The justices refused to review an appeal from a Nashville, Tenn., company contending that Congress never intended the Civil Rights Act of 1964 to allow lawsuits by persons not directly affected by the alleged bias.
 While the court's action sets no national legal precedent, it does settle the matter, at least for now, within the judicial circuit that encompasses Ohio, Michigan, Kentucky and Tennessee.
 Last June, the justices let stand also a similar decision in a California case that now is binding on courts in the judicial circuit that includes California, Alaska, Arizona, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, Oregon, Washington, Guam and Hawaii.

 In 1972, the Supreme Court handed the minority civil rights movement a significant victory when it ruled that white tenants alleging the loss of benefits from interracial associations have "legal standing" to sue under one section of the Civil Rights Act.
 The court now has twice sidestepped the question of whether sections of the 1964 law dealing with employment assure the same broad right to sue.
 Cecile W. Wade, a white woman, complained to the federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission in 1970 that

Carter invokes Taft-Hartley Act

that the nation may regain badly needed production of coal for the American people," it added.

UMW President Arnold Miller had said in advance of Carter's nationally broadcast announcement that he would comply with Taft-Hartley even though he does not like it. He said that if a back-to-work injunction is issued, he will observe it.

Carter made the announcement after the striking miners voted overwhelmingly in week-end balloting against a proposed three-year contract that would have settled the protracted strike.

Across coal-rich Appalachia, however, most miners who gathered in local headquarters to watch Carter's announcement on television indicated they would not go back to work under Taft-Hartley. The miners indicated they would have favored government seizure of the mines instead of a back-to-work order.

The likelihood that miners would return to work was "a damn slim possibility," said Patrick Burke, a local official near Taylorville, Ill.

James Taranto, an official with the 2,200-member Local 1269 in Pennsylvania, said Carter "doesn't know what the hell he's talking about."

However, Kenneth Carter of Havaco, W.Va., said he would honor a back-to-work order as long as he did not have to cross a picket line.

As one reason for their rejection, miners cited a contract provision requiring them to pay deductibles of up to $700 for health care that has been free. Opponents also did not like a provision giving coal companies the authority to fire wildcat strike leaders and pickets.

Carter, however, said it was clear that the negotiating process could not be counted on to end the strike and resume the production of coal.

"My responsibility is to protect the health and safety of the American public, and I intend to do so," the president said in a statement delivered from the White House.

He said as many as one million people could be laid off at the end of another month if the strike were allowed to continue. Carter also announced that the Department of Energy would use its allocation powers "to minimize effects of fuel shortages" in coal-dependent areas.

The president expressed confidence the law would be heeded and said he was asking the attorney general and governors of the coal states to "make sure the law is obeyed."

Normally under a Taft-Hartley injunction, strikers return to work under the terms of their expired contract. But Carter said he would "seek to permit any company" to offer the wages contained in the rejected contract.

Speck admits murder of seven nurses

surviving member of the nurses who says there was just one man" and that there is no unsolved murder from that night to account for the accomplice's disappearance.

"Yeah, I killed them," Speck said of the nurses. "I stabbed and choked them. If that one girl wouldn't have spit in my face, they'd all be alive today."

The slayings occurred in July 1966.

Speck, serving eight consecutive 50-year to 150-year prison terms, was interviewed at Stateville Penitentiary. Speck originally was sentenced to death, but that sentence was overturned in 1971 by the Illinois Supreme Court.

"It was just one of them weird coincidences," Speck said. "I was high on heroin and whiskey. I'd never shot heroin before. So eight people got killed. Eight girls and that effeminate homosexual."

WMSN seeks FM permit

Edwin "Red" Byrd both said the new MSU FM station could divert enough listeners from their audiences to cause a drop in advertising due to a decline in listener ratings. They said they will file complaints with the FCC.

In addition, engineering reports show that if the network broadcasts a signal near the lower edge of the FM band, interference with Gross Telecasting Co.'s WJIM-TV signal is possible.

MSN manager Marc S. Conlin said the network has yet to decide exactly what space to apply on the FM band and exactly how much power to request.

Officials at the FCC said they would not comment on the upcoming license application.

Brad Eit, chairperson of the MSU Radio Board, said funding of the new station will switch in some way to more equitable taxing of off-campus and on-campus students. The network currently taxes only on-campus students.

Amendments

Barry and several board members said it was unwise to present specific provisions to the student body for ratification. They suggested that a constitutional convention be called to rewrite the entire constitution, which would then be presented to students for approval.

"I think it would be better to wait until we can propose a whole new constitution rather than to propose an amendment saying 'do you think Article 7, section 1, part B of the constitution should be changed?'" Social Science representative Fred Jones said.

Board members also criticized efforts by the bill's proponents to push the bill through in the last week of classes and urged that the issue be taken up during the next legislative term which begins spring term.

ICE TIME

There are people around town who will celebrate the coming of winter by taking up skating. If you have skates... or any type of winter sports equipment you no longer use, sell them quickly and easily. Use a Classified ad to attract buyers for the things you no longer need.
