"I wouldn't view such a measure unless the situation becomes more critical than it is now," Harden added. He said it was too late to extend the break because of

scheduling problems

Provost Clarence L. Winder said the ossibility of extending spring break had been discussed at meetings with top MSU administrators but not recommended as a

Winder, who would not deny the break extension rumors outright, said he did not believe a vacation extension would be approved. Recommendations that thermostats be reduced to 65 degrees from their present 68 degree readings and a reduction ventilation hours were recommended by the administrators.

A request for more stringent conservation efforts by all University persons were also recommended, the provost added.

University buildings, which have already had their ventilation time cut by several hours, would be cut again by half, Winder

The meetings, which reportedly included Roger Wilkinson, vice-president of business and finance, Jack Breslin, executive vice president, and the provost were called to assess MSU's energy situation and possible solutions, Winder said.

University personnel and students will be urged to shut off lights in rooms not in use. Winder added.

Harden said the power plant is capable of burning natural gas if coal reserves become depleted. However, a company which can supply the gas has not yet been found, according to Theodore B. Simon, assistant vice president of physical plant.

Natural gas piping still remains from when the plant was burning gas several years ago. If a gas supplier is found, all that would remain to be done is open a gas valve that was locked shut in October 1976, Simon said

About 24,000 tons of coal remain in the MSU reserve, according to physical plant figures, enough to last over one mont

A diminished coal pile at Power Plant 65 on Service Road is the result of the extended nationwide coal strike. Several administrative sources estimate the remaining supply at 45 days or less. The plant generates steam to produce electricity and heat for all campus buildings. Non-union mines which supply the University have been unable to maintain regular coal shipments to MSU.

U.S. asks Rhodesian guerrilla role

By BARRY SCHWEID

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration ruled out lifting U.S. sanctions against Rhodesia on Wednesday, insisting on a role for guerrilla leaders in any final settlement that turns control of the African country over to its black majority.

Calling the transfer of power plan arranged by the white minority's Prime Minister Ian Smith and three black nationalist leaders a "proposal," Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance said it amounts to no more than "a significant step" that would have to be measured against the yardstick of a more comprehensive Anglo-American approach

We remain committed to working with all of the parties to achieve a peaceful solution and majority rule in 1978," Vance "That's essential.

While insisting that the guerrilla Patriotic Front be brought in, Vance said there is no reason yet for the United States to try to remove international economic sanctions against the breakaway British colony where blacks outnumber whites by about 20 to 1.

He dismissed Smith's appeal for an "American helping hand" with a terse: "No." Emerging from a hastily arranged meet ing with David Owen, the British Foreign cretary, Vance praised the plan's provision for open elections and an independent judiciary, but said "there are a number of things yet which have not been decided with respect to the transitional arrangement."

Owen pointed out that the plan does not provide a U.N. role in monitoring the

But immediately afterward, the department said the United States and Britain will keep working with the Patriotic Front in an attempt to bring its guerrilla heads together with Muzorewa and his allies.

Approval of the proposal came after presentations by members of MSU's Students for the ERA, and by Ingham County Commissioner Jess Sobel. "We've got until March of 1979 to have the ERA ratified, and economic boycott will be the most effective means of getting it passed," Sobel told the board. Arguments against the proposal by student Edward Karlinski were supported by some board members and by ASMSU President Kent Barry. "An economic boycott may well be effective, but it hurts people in the pocketbook," Karlinski said. "It forces people to vote yes not because they agree with what they're voting on, but because they're being economically black mailed," he said. Karlinski added that he is not opposed to the ERA itself, and said he also opposes economic sanctions on businesses in South Africa for similar reasons.

Agricultural and Natural Resources re presentative Dan Stouffer echoed the opinion of several board members, saying he supports the ERA but does not necessarily agree with the boycott.

"I am in favor of the ERA but I have reservations about the economic boycott," Stouffer said.

"States that have already ratified the amendment have done it on the amendment's merits and I don't think we have a right to force other states to support it.

Soviet police disperse women protesters

MOSCOW (AP) — As Soviet officials celebrated International Women's Day by lauding the "epochal successes" of women's liberation in the Soviet Union. security police Wednesday broke up a demonstration by a group of Jewish women who want to emigrate.

"Soviet authorities have demonstrated again what women's rights in this country really mean," the activists said in a statement prepared for the protest in downtown Moscow near the Kremlin

Dozens of agents moved in quickly to break up the small gathering. Dissident sources said six women were seized by plainclothes agents and taken away during the demonstration, organized to protest the Soviet government's refusal to permit the women to emigrate. Most of them want to go to Israel.

Four other women who had planned to take part in the protest were detained by police at their homes and then driven away, the sources said.

Italian political parties agree on pact

ROME (AP) — Five political parties agreed Wednesday night to a political pact put together by Premier-designate Giulio Andreotti in which Italy's Communist Party would be a member of the majority in Parliament for the first time.

Argentine prisoners missing, group says

LONDON (AP) - Political prisoners and some persons recently freed are being killed in Argentina and thousands have disappeared over the past two years, Amnesty International charged Wednesday.

The London-based human rights organization in a news release said 15,000 persons have "disappeared without trace since the March 1976 military coup, and fears for their lives must now be extended to those prisoners in official

Amnesty put the number of persons in official detention at 8,000, compared with 3,067 officially announced last December and the names of 2,699 published since then.

Amnesty called on Argentine authorities to investigate four killings it said took place last Feb. 2 on a railway line near La Plata prison in Buenos Aires

It said the victims were released from the prison earlier that day and one, 26-year-old university student Gonzalo Carranza, had just ended a three-year term for collaboration with the illegal People's Revolutionary Party (ERP).

Miller installed as Fed chairperson

WASHINGTON (AP) — Industrialist G. William Miller was installed Wednesday as chairperson of the Federal Reserve Board but outgoing chairperson Arthur F. Burns got the first standing ovation at a White House ceremony.

Miller, former board chairperson of Textron, Inc., also received standing applause after he had taken his oath from Chief Justice Warren Burger and had forecast "a recognition of self-confidence" throughout the nation.

President Carter, host for the affair, brought a crowd of governmental and congressional dignitaries to its feet when he saluted Burns, a Republican appointee, for "absolute integrity, competence, courage." He said the country owes Burns a "deep debt" and expressed personal thanks for the retired chairman's work.

After citing Miller's accomplishments, Carter said the chairmanship of the central bank ranks second only to the presidency and the White House as "most influential in shaping our economic strength in the future."

Agriculture committee seeks $6 million

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Agriculture Committee asked the Senate Budget Committee on Wednesday to add $6 billion to President Carter's proposed budget for price-support and farmincome programs.

Carter seeks $4.17 billion for such programs in the year beginning Oct. 1 after a record $7.9 billion this fiscal year.

The committee, under pressure from the striking farmers represented by the Colorado based American Agriculture group, agreed that it "anticipated some type of unspecified legislation to boost farm income," clerk Nelson Denlinger

The costs are tied directly to market prices and surpluses, and the administration said it based its cutback request on its forecasts of higher grain prices from this summer on and farmer cooperation in acreage-reduction and reserve programs.

The panel also recommended restoration of about $250 million in cuts Carter. had made in research programs that emphasize better ways to produce or store crops, especially tobacco.

Voters consider tax proposals

Lawmakers and voters across the country are considering a wide range of proposals dealing with how much money states should be allowed to spend and who should bear the tax burden.

An Associated Press survey showed that proposals dealing with taxes and spending are pending in 27 states.

A growing number of states are limiting spending. On Tuesday, voters in Tennessee approved a measure linking state spending to growth in personal income. The proposal was aimed at heading off future tax hikes. One supporter, state Rep. David Copeland, a Republican from Chattanooga, said that the fact the plan drew the support of 65 percent of the voters indicated "an absolute taxpayers' revolt."

Similar measures are under consideration in half a dozen other states. including Delaware, Iowa, Massachusetts, Arizona, Michigan and Illinois. As in Tennessee, most of the proposals involve amending the state constitution, and would have to pass two legislative sessions, then win approval of the voters.

Helsinki talks end in accusation

Yugoslavia (AP) - After five months of often strident debate, the 35nation Helsinki review conference, drew toward a close Wednesday with a parting shot by the United States at the Soviet Union for attempting "to squelch the truth."

Consensus was denied and this I profoundly regret," said Arthur J. Goldberg, head of the American delegation, referring to the conference's failure, because of Soviet resistance, to mention human rights in its final statement.

"Efforts to squelch the truth at Belgrade or at home in any country will not change the truth," the former Supreme Court justice said in a closing speech. "Progress in the area of human rights and human contacts as well as disarmament and economic, scientific and cultural cooperation are inextricably linked" in the 1975 Helsinki agreement on European security and cooperation.

"A detente relationship which betters the lot of individuals and smooths contact between them is also certain to improve the ties between states," Goldberg said.

After a final compromise, the conference approved a vaguely worded statement containing only a brief reference to detente, making no specific mention of how countries have lived up to the Helsinki accords and setting another review meeting in Madrid in 1980.

Malta backed down on its demand for a detailed review of Mediterranean issues, includ-in Cyprus and the Middle East. Malta's threat of a veto had blocked the conference, already a month behind schedule, for nearly a week.

The conference will close after a final round of speeches

Defect detection to lose funding

WASHINGTON (AP) - The March of Dimes is phasing out its support of programs that can diagnose major birth defects amid pressure from anti-abortion groups that say parents have no right to decide whether a deformed child should be born. Tthe programs are practically the only sources of the special prenatal diagnostic procedure in the United States.

Spokespersons for the National Foundation-March of Dimes denied that pressure from the National Right to Life Committee Inc. was responsible for the decision.

Anti-abortion leaders, who first claimed to have driven the March of Dimes out of pre-natal screening, testing and counseling. say they are not satisfied with the decision to phase out - instead of to abruptly terminate - funding. They say they continue to oppose giving volunteer help or money to the March of Dimes

Dr. Arthur J. Salisbury, medical services vice president of the National Foundation, denied that the phaseout was the result of pressure from anti-abortionists, saying the decision follows a ong-standing policy of limiting foundation support to five years. He also said the board of trustees wants to concentrate m improving health care for pregnant women and newborn babies.

Some March of Dimes officials, who asked not to be named, said the phaseout is designed in part to pressure Congress into funding a federal program on genetic diseases. The decision caught a number of recipients of foundation money by surprise.

The foundation's latest direct mail solicitation carries the newly adopted slogan, "March of Dimes to protect the unborn and the newborn." That slogan, along with the decision to get out of pre-natal testing, has caused pro-abortion groups to say the foundation is trying to curry favor with the heavily Roman Catholic "right-to-life" crusade.

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) - A Norfolk man who vas arrested in connection with the shooting of Hustler magazine owner Larry Flynt was released Wednesday after police said he admitted hoaxing authorities in an attempt to obtain a reward for solving the Flynt shooting case.

Police Capt. B.H. Blannott of Gwinnett County, Ga., said Teddy Morris, 20, admitted that he telephoned Gwinnett County police and offered to provide information about the person who had shot Flynt.

It was later determined that Morris had no such information, Blannott said. He said Morris "admitted it was all a hoax" during questioning in his jail cell here Wednesday by Blannott and other Gwinnett County authorities.

Blannott and Norfolk Police Capt. Don McManus said Morris apparently hoped to receive a reward for the information he intended Blannott said it had been "definitely established" that Morris was not in Lawrenceville, Ga., Monday when Flynt, 34, and his lawyer, Gene Reeves Jr., 47, were shot outside the courthouse where Flynt was being tried on a charge of distributing obscene material.

Flynt was removed from the critical list Wednesday, and his condition was described as serious. Reeves was listed in satisfactory Blannott said two warrants were issued for

After filling out a long form called a "problem-oriented medical record," the patient of the future may sit back and anxiously await the diagnosis from the doctor.

The physician could be a large gleaming computer which will spew forth tapes of information, determining in seconds the nature of the illness and the best type of treatment.

No part of the health care system has been ignored in the search for solutions, and it appears patients, doctors and the federal government all will have a role in determining the final answer.

Higher out-of-pocket patient costs for health care have been proposed by many experts as a means of limiting over use of health care. By forcing patients to pay a part of their hospital bill, unnecessary visits would be discouraged according to backers of

But opponents point out that such plans do not focus on the true consumer of medical care — the physician. It is the doctor, who decides on the length of hospital stay and the types of tests and treatment. Also, such a plan obviously does not appeal to the consumers footing the higher bill.

Administration proposals to limit the number of hospital beds to four per-thousand persons could mean drastically reduced quality of care in some areas according to a Michigan Hospital Association spokesperson. The reason, he said, was that "national standards on't always apply locally.

Whatever the eventual federal program, nothing will be passed before 1980, and the final plan will be woven with compromise, according to Wilbur F. Cohen, a public policy administrator who has served under every president since Franklin Roosevelt.

You have to lose a few times to win. It takes a lot of built-up steam to finally pass legislation," Cohen said. "It would have been much easier to pass a national health insurance program in 1932 when it was first introduced."

In the meantime, health care cost increases are being dealt with on a local and state level.

Though statistics indicate Michigan ranks among the top 10 states in cost per day for a hospital bed, the state has become recognized as a leader in cost reducing programs.

One program rapidly gaining acceptance among Michigan hospitals is the "shared services approach." By combining to purchase food, drugs and other necessities, hospitals can get better prices and cut overall costs. Shared services also include city-wide sharing of accounting, computer, linen and other

According to Michigan Hospital Association figures, at least 60 percent of the state's hospitals are now involved in shared services of some kind.

e rates remained virtually steady from 1975, the first two years of no-fault. Since rate increases have averaged 25 to 30

n rate since 1975 which brought a 91 increase in auto crash repair costs and an of 49 percent in medical care costs, main coverage costs. These coverages increased from 50 to 99 percent for four companies located in Dearborn and Detroit.

No-fault advocates admit that any reductions in no-fault bodily injury rates are more than offset by rate increases in the optional coverages.

Without the no-fault related reduction in bodily injury rates, rate increases for full coverage would have been substantially greater," Commissioner Jones said.

Proponents of no-fault said they adhere to the belief that although premium rates have not decreased because of no-fault, expenditures have shifted from legal fees, claims adjustment costs and other related expenses to better compensation for seriously injured auto accident victims.

There are indications that while no-fault has cut down on so-called "nuisance claims" in the courts, a 1974 State Appeals Court ruling which made it mandatory for a jury to decide whether someone has suffered a "serious impairment of a bodily function" has left the court dockets full.

Studies undertaken by the Department of Transportation in the late 1960s and early 1970s indicated that less than 50 percent of the economic loss of seriously injured auto accident victims was recovered prior to no-fault. Legal costs amounted to as much as 30 percent of all tort recovery.

Data collected by the Michigan Association of Insurance Companies (MAIC) from its members indicates a substantial reduction in private passenger automobile bodily injury claims since 1973. Liability claims decreased from 163,369 in Race relations.

Two spare words, but they represent a broad range of social interactions that cut across social, political, and economic lines. Ten years ago America was, according to the now-famous Kerner Commission report, splitting into two nations: one black, one white, separate and unequal.

The first editorial on today's page examines the generalities of 1978 race relations as they relate to the Kerner report. The second examines a specific case in which a badly-needed affirmative action program has been struck down by a narrow-minded judicial ruling. The reality of 1978 race relations is, sad to say, still painful.

Nation still split ten years after Kerner

Ten vears ago America was a nation torn by racial strife. A decade later the violence has subsided, but its legacy is seared in the history books and the memories of those who lived through that period.

A decade ago, the riots which jolted U.S. cities became the subject of intense scrutiny and debate. A commission, enpaneled by President Lyndon B. Johnson and chaired by Illinois Gov. Otto Kerner, concluded that the nation was moving toward "two societies, one black, one white, separate and unequal — unless massive and costly remedies are begun at

Ten years later the remedies recommended by the Kerner Commission have, by and large, been ignored. The institutionalized racism and economic disparities condemned by the commission still exist, but in varying degrees.

The commission suggested, for example, that federal subsidies for on-the-job training of hard-core unemployed be implemented. Ten years later the proportion of hard-core unemployed is larger than it ever was, and in 1977 the black unemployment rate hit a record high. In some urban centers unemployment among black teenagers exceeds 40 percent.

The commission recommended the creation of low-cost housing units for low-income families, and to some extent this has been done. But proposals to locate low-cost housing in relatively affluent suburbs have been met with bitter and effective resistance by suburban residents.

Federal aid was suggested as a means of eliminating de facto segregation in the nation's schools. Today urban schools are in scandalously poor condition, and busing programs designed to integrate schools have been battled cases in 1978.
So: what can be said about the angry whites.

Kerner's panel called for income assistance programs to provide each American family with an income at least equal to the poverty level, with the federal government accounting for 90 percent of the cost. By 1968 the income gap between blacks and whites had closed significantly, but in the last 10 years it has opened again. Worse, the corrosive effects of inflation have made those who were considered relatively well off in 1968 poverty state of the two Americas, 10 years after the Kerner report?

The United States still exists as two nations, one white, one black, separate and unequal. In many ways blacks are worse off now then ever before. However, it is also true that a significant proportion of blacks have attained middle-class status. Affirmative action programs have infused the legal and medical professions with more minorities at any time in the past. In the major cities, blacks now make up a substantial percentage of police and fir ments. Black politicians visible and successful, a

The ruling by Judge Fred Kaess - if it withstands appeal - will move America back toward the danger of having two societies.

Opponents of the plan - a predominantly white officers group - argued that it violated the constitutional right of equal protection under the law for whites in the department. They asserted the plan allowed less qualified blacks to be promoted over whites. Kaess agreed.

But as Roger Craig, head of the city law department pointed out, the judge overlooked two important factors. First, affirmative action programs have been traditionally implemented to counteract past discrimination.

Secondly, the judge failed to consider practical business necessities. The police department is hired to protect the public. To fulfill that task it must have a rapport with the public. A predominantly white force in a largely throw bricks at officers n

Trustees vs. speech

We, as students of MSU and/or citizens of the United States are largely responsible for the repression and exploitation of black South Africans. American corporations in South Africa aid in the maintenance of the status quo, which is minority rule. Investments in corporations perpetuate the dominent position of the white regime in South Africa.

Michigan State University has substantial investments in South Africa, in apartheid. Of the University's corporate investments

- $21 million - five million dollars are invested in corporations doing business in South Africa. This University's investment committee is having a "public" meeting to discuss its South African investments. The meeting is to be held at 7:30 on March 23, during spring break.

A public meeting should be scheduled the public can participate. The scheduling of a meeting concerning so sensitive an issue at a time when the majority of the University public is unable to attend is a clear case of repression. The students' right to express their views on University policy is being disregarded. The meeting should be postponed until a time when the University community, the public, can attend.

Students should take this opportunity to ddress their responsibility to the people of South Africa. Concerned students should write or call Raymond W. Krolikowski, the committee chairperson, at 3806 Wedgewood, Birmingham, Mich., 48010. His telephone is (313) 647-5369. Students should demand that their right to present their views on University policy be respected. Margaret M. Vascassenno

Fred Jones supported

A good source once told me you can't trust anything connected with the State News, and I'm not about to make a value judgment one way or the other. However, when it comes to something as crucial as an endorsement for ASMSU Student Board President, I'm always skeptical of the news media. Consequently, I've made my own endorsement based on personal experience I've had with many of the candidates, ASMSU. and the State News. For president, it's a tough one, but I'll probably vote for Fred B. Jones. Fred's a hard worker who has been around ASMSU long enough to see both sides of the story and not be fooled by a political front like some of the candidates. He's an aggressive individual who believes in opening up ASMSU to all segments of the student body instead of the limited type of involvement that's been shown in past governments.

For Representative of the College of Arts and Letters, my old seat, I'm strongly behind Julie Maki. Julie's also a hard worker who is familiar with many aspects of the ASMSU policy and budgeting process and whose voice would be a welcome addition to ASMSU on a regular basis.

Vatter for president

My name is Dan Stouffer and I'm currently the ASMSU Student Board representative from the college of Agriculture and Natural Resources, and am presently running unopposed for that seat next year.

Last year I swore that if I was elected I would represent my college and the undergraduate students of this University the best I could. To date I've placed my every energy into this promise.

My involvement has taught me many aspects of this community, but the most important part is that one which the students play. This last year has seen many improvements in ASMSU, believe it or not. To keep these improvements going, the student board needs a strong leader. I've met and worked with many people in ASMSU and it's my strong belief that Bob Vatter would, because of his sincerity to work for the students and his strong abilities as a responsible leader, be the best person to fill

Ask Brazil about the refrigerator, Bruff

By MILTON TAYLOR

At the last meeting of the Board of Trustees on Friday, Feb. 24, Vice-Chair person John D. Bruff, D-Fraser, introduced a motion to terminate the public comment session, which was passed by a vote of 5 to 3. This motion curtly silenced the supporters of Sami Esmail and the members of the Women's Survival Coalition after they had been waiting for hours for an opportunity to speak. The lame excuse for this insensitive vote was that several trustees, including Trustee Bruff, had personal commitments which precluded their presence on campus during the afternoon. These commitments could not be broken? In the week following the Board meeting, it was announced in the State News on Wednesday, March 1, that Trustee Bruff had departed on a two-week inspection tour of the Brazil project and other MSU programs in South America, appropriately escorted by Ralph Smuckler, Dean of International Programs.

If it appears somewhat incongruous for Trustee Bruff to be too busy to spend one day per month on the campus, but to have the time for a two week jaunt to Brazil and other Latin American countries, he is in good company. Incongruity also characterizes the returning veterans of the Brazil

Professor Clarence W. (Bud) Minkel. Brazilian resident pro consul of the project for the past two years and now Associate Dean of International Programs, has returned with glowing accounts of the efficiency of the Brazilian system.

"There is no place in Latin America that impresses me as much in terms of dynamism," said Dean Minkel in an MSU News Bulletin interview of Nov. 17, 1977. He also claimed that he "never saw one example of repressiveness." Ms. Tamara Brunschweiler, MSU international bibliographer, who is responsible for spending $1.3 million for stocking Brazilian libraries with books which are unquestionably censored, claimed in the State News of Jan. 6, 1978, that she "did not feel her work was supporting human rights repression.

Professor Dale Harpstead, head of MSU's Department of Crop and Soil Sciences, said that he spent a lot of time talking to Brazilians, and said they had a strong feeling of support for the government.

What does all this mean? Does it mean, in fact, that we have been misinformed by Amnesty International, by the U.S. Department of State, and by the International ommission of Jurists?

Does it mean that there is no political torture? Does it mean that Brazil, indeed, has a democratic government that is supported by the mass of Brazilian people? Unfortunately, despite the hyperbole of our returning consultants, it means none of the same old Brazil, all that is necessary is to read the Brazilian newspapers. In preparation for a phoney election in 1978, when one general will succeed these things. For evidence that Brazil is still another as head of state, the Brazilian regime is relaxing its censorship. As a result, a Brazilian newspaper recently published a letter from a group of 15 political prisoners which detailed the extent and nature of their torture.

These 15 prisoners claimed that they had suffered from all the routine tortures: beatings, whippings, electric shocks, sexual violation, and psychological torture.

But Dean Minkel is right in one respect -Brazil is technologically efficient and dynamic in a unique way. The 15 prisoners claimed that there is now a new form of torture called the refrigerator, a box of concrete of 1.50 X .50 X .50 meters with walls of acoustic material. The box is closed by a door similar to one on a domestic refrigerator.

The victim is set inside the box naked. shackled with the hands at the back or hung by handcuffs, and then drenched with cold water. An electronic system emits strident high-frequency noises. The movements and the reactions of the victim are monitored from the outside by way of a closed circuit

One prisoner, Souza Lemos, reported that after three days in the refrigerator, a prisoner would confess to anything, even ccusing his or her own parents.

Actually, the easiest thing in the world is to document the political torture practiced in Brazil, the nature of the economic ripoff of the poor, and the rape of the Indiana What is inexplicable is how it is possible for some 45 U.S. consultants under contract to visit Brazil and either be oblivious to all of this or remain silent in

Will it be any different with Trustee Bruff? One must admit that the odds are not good, but the stakes in terms of the humane world that all of us want are so high that the same old questions must be asked. The questions still beg for an answer.

Why does MSU assist and strengthen a foreign government that is a military dictatorship, that follows a repressive economic policy, and that practices political torture as a matter of public policy? In effect, why do we as an institution support and strengthen frscism,

That morn Mr. Esmail asked to see his brother, Sukri, and on that same afternoon, was allowed to meet him as requested. He also had a meeting with the American consul that afternoon at 4:30 p.m. on the initiative of the police. On Dec. 26 during his investigation, Mr. Esmail said he wished to compose a written confession. He was given a fes sheets of paper and a pen with which he wrote a nin-page confession which he then signed. It is to be stressed that Mr. Esmail was alone in his cell while writing his confession. On that same day, at the early hours of noon, Mr. Esmail complained of a feverish cold. A doctor attended him at 1:15 p.m. and prescribed aspirin to reduce the fever. Asked by the police, the doctor decided that Mr. Esmail was fit to stay in detention. On Dec. 27, at 1:30 p.m. Mr.

Ferency, Zalman misread column

Zolton Ferency and Marvin Zalman have apparently misread "Lash" Larrowe's Sami Esmail column. It does not say or indicate except with the most laboured misreading "that a sovereign state has no right to arrest or try the citizen of another state for crimes." Nor does it say "That the First Amendment of the U.S. Constitution in all its specifics applies to the Esmail case." Niether does the column say "That membership in the PFLP is not or should not be a crime in Israel." Finally, neither does it say "that acts committed in the United States or Libya cannot . . be crimes in Israel."

What the column does say is "that acts committed in the United States or Libya . . . should not be crimes in Israel." Lash does not say "that acts committed outside of a country" aren't "a crime in that country." He was merely saying that they shouldn't be. He was questioning the basis of the international law that allows this to take place.

The aforementioned criminal justice professors have every right to disagree with "Lash," but before they do so they should themselves be sure what it is that they disagree with. Admittedly, the question of "should be" was raised; but, it was never really dealt with. The defense of the law's "should be" was always presented amidst and between the defense of the law's "cannot be." The latter of which should never have been in question in the first place.

Finally, the last paragraph, in which "Lash" is known to be "a generous, liberal-minded person with an instinct for righteousness," is uncalled for. It is not "Lash's" fault that he's a "generous, liberal-minded person with an instinct for righteousness." Even "generous, liberal-minded person(s) with an instinct for righteousness" have a right to express their beliefs about what they believe "should be" without being attacked for something they never said.

"Lash" "knows that accuracy, clear thought, and the truth are our best weapons against repression.

Dan Jones

On the surface, this year's ASMSU campaign has proved surprisingly calm. No major controversies, no particularly outspoken candidates. But underneath it all, petty politics persis, unfounded accusations abound, shameless tactics prevail. All in all, in the fine spirit of contemporary American politics.

Candidate A staples his poster over the face of Candidate B, while Candidate C accuses Candidate D of writing inflammatory remarks across his campaign litera-

At least one candidate has received threatening phone calls, and at least two have been telephoned by persons muttering slanderous statements while purporting to represent a particular candidate, when, in actuality, they have represented no one but

These are to be ignored. In all walks of life we are confronted with the diseased, twisted, ugly mind and, under the circum stances, it would be ignored. All internal fighting between candidates should be ignored also, for its only design is to cloud the issues and confuse the voters.

Above all, however, vote. Vote A. B or C. as your conscience and intelligence dictate, but vote. Vote. ASMSU, like most student governments, borders on vaudeville, which, when staged, is splendid. But in the political arena it's detestible. Only the student monies under the control of ASMSU legitimizes its existence.

So we are obliged to vote for the person of our choice, the person we believe would best represent our needs. We should devote next year, perhaps, to restructuring the board. This year, like it or not, we're with it. So vote for the best person to fill the president's office - a person with ears, eyes, dignity, courage, sensitivity, under standing and administrative talent.

The current board president is a Greek, nd he and his underlings move about the third floor of the Student Services Building, stomachs swelled with self-importance Even a simple statement like, "I'm going to the bathroom," uttered from their mouths can sound like a campaign speech or some sort of code for, "I'm going to Harvard Law School. Where are you going?" Remember, men of high stature were involved in student government when they were kids - men like H.R. Haldeman, John Erlichman. Herbert Kalmback and Donald Seg-

Alas, the 1977 administration has been no worse than those that preceded it -Michael Lenz, J. Brian Raymond and Tim

But vote. Vote for A, B or C, but vote This year one candidate could make a difference. This year ASMSU has a chance And that chance is Dan Jones, Vote, Vote with me for Dan Jones.

He is not a man of wide experience or an arresting political intelligence. But he is a man with the ability to listen and work through problems effectively.

Dan Jones will not, in the course of a year, singlehandedly turn ASMSU into the viable, effective kind of student government it could be. But he will make a start probably quite a good start at that toward turning ASMSU into a serious organization that works for students and ot a handful of its ambitious members, the achievement-oriented law school clique

Dan Jones has run a clean and somewhat innocent campaign. Take, for instance, his campaign posters that read "ASMSU Needs Rebirth" and shows a newly-hatched chicken, or his white stickers with the green letters "DJ." His campaign pledge to work to keep University offices open for the 12-to-one lunch hour seems trivial. Yet, it also indicates a realistic attitude toward ASMSU and the board presidency. Jones recognizes the limits of student government as presently constructed, the limits of his power should he be elected, and the necessity of dealing with some of the smaller problems that students face daily.

Thus far, Dan Jones has been honest and realistic with us. He has not promised the world, nor even the MSU community. Interesting as it might be, he hasn't to my knowledge outlined plans for ousting the board of trustees and implementing student rule - a credit to his personal values and a fair sign that he hasn't some arrogant notions of absolute power.

Neither, though, is Dan Jones simply the lesser of several evils. Dan Jones is a good choice for ASMSU president, and it's not just because he promises only little things. He has shown his interest in the more basic issues, exhibiting a rare concern for the major needs of MSU's mammoth student

He backed John Furbush, the RA suspended for admitting he'd smoked dope once in his room; he asked for further information on the controversial appointment of Ken Smith as ASMSU attorney, and supports a reorganization of the scandal-ridden legal services cabinet; he hopes to rewrite the ASMSU constitution to include six guaranteed seats from on-campus to the student board; he wants to make campus a safer place by instituting safety foot patrols, improve lighting and install emergency call boxes; he understands the need to make the student union

Other candidates have taken similar stands. But what impresses me most about Dan Jones is his sincere, undying and even passionate fight for the rights of oppressed minorities and of all persons. Such a concern goes beyond the bounds of mere politics, exceeds the usual scope of the public arena and, therefore, transcends the very position to which he aspires.

When the current ASMSU administration was looking to push Gay Council back into the closet, Dan Jones fought the small-minded and won. Under much the same circumstances involving the Women's Council and the black-oriented newsmagazine, People's Choice, he defended those groups with similar vigor and spirit against the insensitive and callous power structure.

Dan Jones has proved his willingness to stand up for people's rights even under the most adverse personal conditions. As an ASMSU council director, he has demon strated a special talent for bringing people together, for drawing circles around groups otherwise in opposition to one another.

Dan Jones is able to administrate a bureaucratic mess with efficiency and can hear the individual voices through the dissonance of the madding crowd. The election of Dan Jones as ASMSU Sudent Board president would help return honesty and statesmanship to politics, too long forgotten in this post-Watergate age of Dan Jones is not a miracle worker, but then I don't believe in miracles. He is, however, the only viable future for ASMSU. And I do believe in the future.

'Get the cash!'

By MICHAEL FOLEY

A glance at my daily New York Times recounts a story of an Internal Revenue Service ruling that would have saved Gulf Oil some several hundred thousand dollars in back taxes. Unfortunately for this blue chip multinational, it seems that the ruling was actually written by a gulf attorney who then duped some mindless IRS bureaucrats into believing that it somehow was their own work.

Last week it was an executive for the Southern Bell Telephone Co. who got belted by the Justice Department for his futile attempts to provide a fat $25,000 kickback to a half-dozen North Carolinean politicos.

And the week before it was J. Ray McDermott Inc. who pleaded "guilty as charged" before a Security & Exchange Commission grand jury to no less than seven counts of racketeering, bribery, and fraud.

The progress reports are now beginning to trickle in on the Koreagate congressional influence buying scandal and word has it that executives for Anheuser-Busch and Kellogg's were up to their grubby necks in political skullduggery as deeply as was Tongsun Park. With the media bombarding us daily with more stories of corporate malevolence than any rational being could possibly stomach, one can only wonder where our corporate wizards have developed such an appalling neglect for simple morality and integrity.

By and large, the indictments being handed down today to the rogues of corporate officialdom are being served on men whose academic credentials represents the very best of what money can buy in America. These individuals have never been deprived or divested of anything they ever sought and yet they continue to shanghai and bilk the American public at every turn. They are our nation's "best and brightest;" soured into becoming the shame of our society; they shall now haunt our collective conscience.

This is not to suggest that all or even most corporate executives fit neatly into this mold. Certainly this would be far from the truth. But the plain and simple facts speak loudly and clearly. Corporate morality in America leaves a lot to be desired. Why?

As a second year graduate business students here at MSU, I don't pretend to have all the answers and I shall not seek to wrap myself in self-righteous indignation at these revelations. I will suggest, however, that there has been and continues to be a missing element in my business education at this University.

The post-Watergate mentality has influenced us to the extent that dozens of our nation's top law schools now require courses in professional ethics as a prerequisite to the prized law degree. And scores of medical and business schools across the country are now Under the heat of competition, many of my fellow MBA candidates now find solitude in an academic life of collusion and duplicity. One can only speculate as to the level of integrity that we will bring to our prospective employers.

I propose that Michigan State University implement a mandatory course in corporate ethics in the graduate business school curriculum. Not that this would purify and cleanse an imperfect system, but it would serve to fill an academic vacuum in our professional

Until that time, I shall borrow an often-turned phrase from one of the more distinguished professors of finance at this institution. Although used out of context here, I believe it to be a description apropos to our graduate business school.

Ferency and Zalman score 37.5 percent

By ROBERT O. BARR, Jr.

Exempoint article of Feb. 22 by Professors Zolton Ferency and Marvin Zalman

Israel has a right to arrest and try American citizens for crimes committed srael's borders tertain lawful acts committed in the United States can and should be crimes in the First Amendment of the U.S. Constitution does not apply to the Esmail membership in the PFLP is and should be a crime in Israel.

the authors are correct on point (1), wrong on (2) and (3), and half-right on (4) score of 37.5 percent.

is an acknowledged governmental power that is easy to illustrate by such as burglaries and assaults committed in Israel. Even if the crime no immediate harm (e.g., carrying a concealed firearm, carrying burglar's lempted murder) the point is still true.

Try Zalman's arguments in favor of point (2) involves two illustrations: the Eichmann trial by Israel for acts committed in Germany and a ruling by the Wrene Court that aliens who committed a conspiracy to violate U.S laws while in country could be prosecuted whenever subsequently found in the U.S. The in trial bears no relevance whatsoever to the Esmail case since the defendant hand by direct act committed crimes so horrendous and in such numbers as to first in line for trial in every governmental jurisdiction on the globe. consider the second Ferency Zalman illustration involving alien conspiracy. acy is cited by Ferency-Zalman as rightfully criminal, though requiring no and bringing no immediate harm. They also point out that "a court must be in applying such laws." We should first ask: "Why be cautious?" Isn't it a conspiracy may involve plans, intentions, feelings, etc. which reside in mind rather than an overt act? Prose, however, that we encounter a genuine conspiracy planned in the U.S. deriminal acts such as bombings in Israel. Does this provide an example for Alman's point (2)? No, such a conspiracy is not lawful in the U.S. or in Israel. errorism and conspiracies to commit acts of terrorism are criminal in all les. Thus, both arguments of Ferency-Zalman fail to establish point (2). oes the preceding discussion have to do with Sami Esmail? Is he charged with The direct answer is no; he is charged with "belonging to a terrorist alion (PFLP)" and "contacting a PFLP agent." These allegations have not been shown to be true and we are very hopeful that the trial in Israel in mid-March will in fact show the charges to be false.

Consider Ferency-Zalman's point (4) involving membership in the PFLP. I agree that such membership "is" a crime in Israel; I have trouble with the "should be" part. The problem focuses on the semantics of the words "belonging to" and "membership" (Undoubtedly, the same difficulties occur with the Hebrew translations of these words.) It is possible to construe the phrase "belonging to an organization" to mean an irreversible commitment to all goals, activities, and responsibilities of the organization and its leadership.

If this is a commitment to acts of terrorism, such membership is clearly abhorrent and criminal. However, it is also possible for "belonging to" or "membership" to mean nothing more than having some loose connection or association with. Does attendance at a meeting make one a member? Does appearance, race, sex, orientation, attitude, or sympathies make one a member? Does a person who discusses the literature of an organization thus become a member?

Moreover, it is certainly possible for valid dues paying members of an organization to disagree fundamentally with some of the ideas, goals, and actions of anorganization and to work from within to change the objectionable portions. To presume that someone connected only indirectly or circumstantially with an organization is a member, and then to state that all members are criminals or conspirators is an insidious form of evil. America's scandalous history involving communist "members" in the early 1950s

Point (3) of their article states that the U.S. First Amendment doesn't apply in Israel. They reason that the specifics of criminal procedure (Miranda warnings, etc.) are not applicable in Israel. However, I submit that the First Amendment contains far more than the specifics of criminal procedure. It is here that the spirit and essence of basic American constitutional freedoms are exemplified. This spirit, consistent with the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, defines "the basic rules of a fair trial."

One's fears are heightened by the U.S. State Department's Jan. 31 statement that "documented reports of the use of extreme physical and psychological pressures during interrogations, and instances of brutality by individual interrogators cannot be ruled out" (Newsweek, 2/20/78, page 37), the beating of the Bir Zeit University student Khalid Rabboh in January 1978, the massive allegations of torture in Israel in London's Sunday Times 6/19/77, reports on Israel's denial of human rights by United Nations and U.S. National Lawyers' Guild committees, and concerns expressed by Amnesty International and the international Red Cross.

This is exactly what eventually happened. All over the U.S. and U.K. magazines began to appear that were devoted exclusively to new wave rock 'n roll. Led by "Punk," a New York-based fanzine, and the English "Sniffin' Glue" (which I was unable to obtain a copy of), these fanzines acted as if the stodgy world of contemporary rock did not exist, and chose their own heroes instead.

The quality of the punk fanzines varied from magazine to magazine and from issue to issue. They came in a variety of formats ranging from semi-professional slick-covered papers to hand-scribbled Xerox-copied newsletters. Like the music they covered, these fanzines stripped down to basics instead of following the established formats of their more conventional predecessors.

They also adopted a new graphic style - the conspicuously pasted-up look popupaste graphic tricks. The articles are almost a hard rock who's who, and the groups are not limited to the new wave Given a little time, this could be the next mainstream rock mag-

This kind of fanzine would have been impossible in pre-Xerox days, and it's the closest thing I found to a real grassroots production. probably doesn't matter.
"Punk Rock" — This a professional production that does its best to look and sound Punk. That in itself is bad enough, but the ridiculous articles ("How to look like a Punk") are the pits. "Punk Rock" also has the dubious distinction of being the magazine that sponsored a trite special edition about the Sex Pistols which didn't hit the stands until after the group broke up. Features the same kind of back-patting stories as "Circus" magazine, only infinitely worse.

Worshipping the Blue Oyster Cult

State News Reviewer
ROCK 'N ROLL RULE #78: Original heavy metal music died in the early '70s. To be successful today, a heavy metal band must a.) make a lot of noise; b.) use a lot of feedback; c.) try to impersonate Led Zeppelin; d.) forget that even Led Zeppelin hasn't been able to impersonate Led Zeppelin since their fourth LP.

Lansing was treated to an exception Tuesday night when Blue Oyster Cult took the stage at downtown's Civic Center, bringing with them the most spectacular rock extravaganza to hit town this

What distinguishes BOC from most other bands is that there is very little about rock 'n roll that they don't understand. By building on the flash guitar technique perfected by Pete Townshend and the satanic lyricism of The Stones, Velvet Underground, and Black Sabbath, among others, BOC has musically personified Lou Reed's mythological vision of the New York Children and State York City Rock Guitar Army - "the guitars that destroyed the

In the past, it has been said that BOC's major concert flaw is that they visually fail to portray the demonic image perpetuated by their music. Their "Cities On Flame With Rock 'N Roll" stands as one of the most artistically terrifying songs in rock history. Yet, despite Eric Bloom's black leather and shades, they never see pectacular to say the least, and it's a hell of a lot of fun to watch The important thing to remember is that the light show is a nice - and not a neccessity. Blue Oyster Cult doesn't need gimmicks. Their music is good enough to stand on its own.

The Cult gave Lansing over an hour and a half of their very best Tuesday night, and only a glutton could have yearned for more. They demonstrated that they obviously enjoy what they're doing not to mention their overwhelming devotion to the rock genre.

Any band that covers heavy metal classics like the MC-5's "Kick Out the Jams," Steppenwolf's "Born To Be Wild," and The Animals' "We Gotta Get Out Of This Place" — and makes them sound as good or better than the originals — knows exactly where they're coming from. And any band that can top it all off with a number as aesthetically pleasing as "Don't Fear The Reaper" should realize that their position as heavy metal kings is quite MSU's Pam Steckroat, the first woman gymnast at MSU to earn All-American honors for her performances last winter, performs on the balance beam in a recent meet at Jenison Fieldhouse. MSU hopes to qualify for the national tournament at this week's Regional tournament in Columbus, Ohio.

State News Sports Writer

Believe it or not, the MSU women's gymnastics team still has something to prove. After rolling to State of Michigan and Big Ten championships this season, the Spartans still have one more world to conquer before going after a national championship the first

"MSU has never won the regional and this year we have a good chance of doing that," said head coach Mike Kasavana. "We're still trying to prove ourselves in the region and put

The Spartans are one of four teams rated as co-favorites to win this weekend's regional meet at Ohio State. Indiana State has posted the top qualifying score, followed closely by MSU, Kent State and Bowling Green, with perennial power Southern Illinois not far off the pace. The Salukis are the team that most concerns Kasavana.

"We've always felt our competition to be Southern Illinois," he said. "Their high score this season has been 144, ours 145. Their low score has been 128, ours 133."

Spartan All-American Pam Steckroat is still suffering the effects of an injury suffered earlier this season, with a stress fracture on her left shin and nursing a tender left knee. Her status as an all-arounder is doubtful but, at the very least, Steckroat will compete on the uneven parallel bars. The Spartans' all-around line-up will be comprised of Beth Eigel, Lori Boes, Amy Thompson and Diane Lovato, providing Boes won the balance beam competition at Clarion, scoring a career-high 9.35.

The tentative specialist line-up includes Cheryl Bellaire and Joann Mangiapane in vaulting, Sara Skillman and Steckroat on bars, Laural Lavlin and Pam Harris on beam and Mangiapane and Steckroat in floor

Skillman (8.95 on uneven bars), Bellaire (9.45 vault) and Mangiapane (9.20 in floor exercise) also scored career highs against the Golden Eagles.

The seventh-ranked Spartans will draw some benefit in competing in the last session Friday evening, in which team and individual all-around titles will be decided. Saturday afternoon's individual finals begin at 1:30.

The Spartans need a win this weekend to assure them of a berth in the nationals the first week of April. Regional champions get automatic berths before team scoring averages are used to fill out the field. Kasavana is oncerned about getting one of those wildand berths since scores in the Midwest have peen consistently lower this season than in other areas of the country.

Jenison Fieldhouse and the Men's IM will be the showcase for the No. 1 women's basketball teams in the midwest the next three days. MSU hosts the seventh annual Midwest Regional tournament beginning tonight.

A total of eight teams make up the field of competition in this year's MAIAW championship. State champions Ohio State, seeded first in the tournament, West Virginia, Wisconsin-Madison, Illinois State, Indiana State, and defending MAIAW champions MSU, seeded second. Rounding out the tournament are two at large teams -Wisconsin-LaCrosse and Southern Illinois-

The first round of the tournament opens up with two games at 6 p.m. when the three-time Big Ten champion Ohio State Buckeyes, 20-6, meet West Virginia, 17-9, at Jenison. Wisconsin-LaCrosse, 20-3, clashes with Indiana State, 11-7, at the Men's IM Building Sports Arena.

At 8 p.m. Wisconsin-Madison, 12-9, and Illinois State, 11-11, will also play in the Men's IM. The Spartans, with a 21-6 record, meet Southern Illinois, 13-8, at Jenison in the first round. Despite what the Salukis' won-loss record indicates, the match-up is going to be a tough one for the Spartans.

"Southern Illinois' front line is six-feet-three. six-feet-two, and six-feet," MSU coach Karen Langeland said. "So they are big. They have a freshman forward, (Sue) Fabber, who is an excellent shooter. She has very good range. Kathy (DeBoer) will probably be guarding her."

The leading scorer for Southern Illinois is center Bonnie Folley. She is averaging 16 points per game and also leads the Salukis' in rebounding with 11.5 per game. Folley will probably be one of the Spartans' biggest threats throughout the

At Jenison Fieldhouse, strains of the MSU Fight Song ring out above cheers as the Spartan basketball team runs on to the court for warmup.

A hot Afro-Cubana drum rhythm punctuates the tension leading up to a Kelser slamdunk. A snappy "Eat-Em-Up" sends the Spirit block into a frenzy, as the half ends with a 10-point lead for MSU.

At Munn Ice Arena, a crowd of over 6,000 has just seen Notre Dame score two goals in a row, and sits in dispirited silence. Then, the hockey band strikes up their "Bandstand Boogie" cheer, and sounds of clapping and "Let's go, State!" spread around the arena.

Down on the ice, the puck slips in for an MSU goal, and the crowd goes wild as the Fight Song is heard once again.

The music-makers at varsity basketball and hockey games are two sections of the Spartan Brass ensembles of student musicians. They have been part of the MSU winter sports scene for many years — at least as long as MSU Director of Bands, Kenneth G. Bloomquist can remember.

"There was a basketball band long before I got here in 1970," he said, "and the hockey band was formed at the request of the Athletic Department when Munn Arena was built, to replace the old organ."

Both bands originally were a continuation of the marching band, playing the same style of music. The hockey band con-tinues this tradition, but the basketball band was turned into a jazz ensemble two years ago, at Bloomquist's sugges-

Griffin captured the title in the three-meter diving event and finished third in the one-meter event. Machemer became eligible for both events by placing second in the one-meter and fourth in the three-meter.

The regionals are just a stepping stone to the NCAA finals. The hard part was getting into the regionals. To qualify for the finals you have to be one of the 18 qualifiers in the one-meter and one of 16 qualifiers in the three-meter event.

Spartan divers enter regionals

The region that the Spartans are in consists mostly of Big Ten teams, with a few smaller schools also involved. So for Griffin and Machemer, it will be like diving in the Big Ten meet

With this in mind, both of the divers should make it out of the regionals and into the finals.

The regionals are used as a means to qualify for the finals," Machemer said. "I should be able to qualify for both events, but I will be stronger in the one-meter.

"All you have to do is to be the top 18 in the one-meter, or one of the top 16 in the three-meter to qualify. It doesn't matter where you finish as long as it is in one of those places.

"It would be a good psych up to your opponents if you were to place up real high in the regionals."

Griffin gained All-American honors last year by placing seventh at the nationals in the three-meter event. Of the six people that finished in front of him, five have graduated. Be-cause of this, Griffin feels he has to be ranked in the top three in the nation in the three meter event. It puts Griffin in a position to become an NCAA All-American in the three-meter diving event.

1973 to 21,553 in 1975 — a decrease of 87 percent. The shift in the system from tort liability claims to first party no-fault Personal Injury Protection (PIP) claims is also evident in the MAIC study, which represents about 50 percent of the private passenger insurance business in Michigan. PIP claim frequency increased 161 percent in the first two years of no-fault.

The number of auto negligence cases filed in Michigan's Circuit Court between June, 1975 and June, 1976 were 20 percent fewer than the number filed the previous year.

A possible flaw in the new system, which may be worked out in future court cases, is the fact that loss of work due to injury is now broadly defined as a "loss of income from work the injured person would have performed had he not been

A study done by the Michigan Trial Lawyers Association showed that "55 percent of the persons injured in auto accidents are not wage earners at the time of the accident (housewives, for example); thus they are deprived of benefits other people are receiving.

The trial lawyers contend that the law is unconstitutional because it discriminates against the poor and members of minority groups, and the lawyers have insisted that in order for no-fault to work, car manufacturers are going to have to begin making stronger and more crashworthy

Trial lawyer arguments have been predominant in the argument against a national no-fault plan which is now being studied in Congress. Supporters of no-fault contend that lawyers are trying to undermine the law so that they can continue reaping huge fees for their services in disputed accident cases.

Earlier this week, the Senate Commerce Committee agreed to review findings of Michigan's no-fault insurance law before proceeding further on federal legislation since state stan-dards are most like those being proposed

The trial lawyers' own figures show that there has been a reduction of one-third in legal fees since no-fault was enacted, and they argue that poor people have dropped insurance coverage

The uninsured motorist fund has been slowly phased out of existence with the new law equiring that all auto owners must have at least limited coverage. It has been estimated that the number of uninsured drivers presently on Michigan highways is between 6 and 10 percent by the Insurance Bureau's count, and up to 25 percent or more according to unofficial tabulations by the trial lawyers.

Public sentiment toward no-fault in Michigan can be correlated with the fact that accident involvement, rather than responsibility, can now affect premium rates.
"Michigan motorists don't like the idea that someone can bang into their car and they can't make that individual pay or sue for damages," Harry V. Ruth, assistant insurance commission-

Agreed upon manimously by both sides, the program is reported to be in the United States. words, if the set rate of cost increase for the coming in the coming at only increase in costs will get 2½ percent back. If another requires a 15 percent increase to operate, it must prove the need to the review board to get the additional funds.

In the past, hospitals simply submitted the total of last year's costs and Blue Cross paid up.

One possibility which could be used to reduce future health care costs is the Health Maintenance Organization. The HMO approach is getting new support at the federal, state and local levels. Studies show HMOs to be cost reducers.

HMOs have been around for years, but few have met with uccess. John C. McCabe, president of Michigan Blue Cross-Blue Shield, said the reason is that "people are not prone to leave the classic delivery techniques easily.

But the first HMO in mid Michigan, Lansing's Health Central, is well ahead of its enrollment goal for the first year and its organizers are "extremely optimistic" according to administrative associate, Joan Hunault.

One of the eight HMOs in Michigan, Health Central, like most HMOs, is made up of a group of doctors and other health care workers who band together to provide health care for an annual fee fixed in advance.

The emphasis in HMOs is on "health maintenance" and preventive care through regular checkups. By stressing family practice, organizations such as Health Central provide subscribers with the kind of care long associated with general practitioners.

"Many of today's doctors have learned how to be good at acute care in hospitals, but not how to do what the G.P. (general practitioner) used to do," Hunault explained.

What the general practitioners used to do was encourage patients to take better care of themselves, Hunault said. Through nutrition counseling, stop-smoking clinics and frequent physical exams, Health Central will attempt to do the same, she said. But the HMO plan doesn't stop at preventive care. Expensive referrals, surgery, office visits, drugs and even extended care at home or in institutions are covered under the Health Central plan. And membership rates often cost less than other types of health

health care

"An Oldsmobile employee spending $130 per month for Blue Cross-Blue Shield could be covered by Health Central for $100 and get better benefits," Hunault said.

HMOs operate on the principle of providing more benefits for less money by saving on technology and eliminating "middle-man" insurance groups. Since the HMO is a direct doctor-patient arrangement with salaries fixed in advance, doctors have no incentive to order unnecessary use of technology and needless hospital stays, HMO ogranizers say. With earnings dependent on HMO efficiency, there is a cost-saving incentive at work which has led some to label the HMO the "free enterprise answer to health care cost control."

HMOs also consistently send fewer of their patients to the hospital, according to HEW studies. One study found hospitalization rates among HMOs to be 27 percent below those of Blue Cross. Such rates can lower hospital costs throughout the health care system by less utilization.

Also, since HMOs like Health Central provide only outpatient care, relying on hospitals for surgery and extensive tests, they spend little money on technology. Only the barest essentials are needed in the HMO where outpatient care is the main function.

Health Central is young but growing, and is "an idea whose time has come," Hunault said. "The HMO concept is more workable than the third-part insurance system," she added.

As more HMOs are established, their competition with traditional methods has reduced costs of commerical insurance programs, hospitals and physicians, according to a recent FTC

Though the hospital may still be the safest and most efficient place for surgery and intensive care, if more hospital services were absorbed by HMOs, earlier screening of patients might further streamline the hospital system.

Also, HMO emphasis on preventive care coupled with inroads on the third-party insurance system will mean a cleaner bill of health for each of us. and a smaller bill for health nationwide.

Chief Jeremiah Chirau and asked for an American "helping hand" to remove international sanctions against Rhodesia.

The pact sets Dec. 31 as the target date for a transfer of power from Rhodesia's white minority of 268,000 to the black majority of 6.3 million.

Muzorewa, talking with reporters, said he does not look forward to a civil war but that if the Patriotic Front refuses to accept the agreement "then the people of Zimbabwe (the African name for Rhodesia) must have guts enough to defend themselves and fight as hard as they can.'

The Patriotic Front, led by gabe, are conducting a guerrilla war against the Smith government from bases in Zambia and Mozambique. The two men are in New York for the United Nations debate on Rhodesia and are meeting there with U.S. Ambassador Andrew Young.

"A lot of people," Muzorewa said, "are asking why we have talked to Mr. Smith and not to the British from whom Rhodesia broke away in 1965.

'A lot of you know that Mr. Smith has been in power the last 13 years or so. He is a reality And if we are going to talk about the decolonization of that country you cannot just talk to the British and exclude him.'

Spokesperson Reston said the

Both the U.S. and Britain would prefer to delay U.N. action on the plan, hoping to sidetrack any resolution con-

Britain might have to veto such a resolution because the plan has generated solid support at home. That would leave the Carter administration, which takes a more skeptical view of the arrangement, in an awkward position.

Without saying what the United States might then do, spokesman Reston commented: 'I don't think there is anything signed in blood between the the union's top leadership favors company-by-company contract settlements because of the uncertainty it would mean for their organizations.

"I've come to the conclusion that a collective bargaining impasse has been reached, declared John N. Gentry, chairperson of the Taft-Hartley board of inquiry, after the board concluded its six-hour closed-door hearing.
After listening to 50 witnesses, mostly UMW officials, Gentry said there were "deep divisions" within the union.

"The problem is their union concerns vary all over the lot . . it would be difficult to see any settlement" in the next few days, Gentry told reporters. At the hearing, both Joseph

P. Brennan, a spokesman for the Bituminous Coal Operators

Association and IIMW vice president Sam Church, criticized the administration handling of the strike.

For those who have never seen her perform, ANNA RUSSELL is a multi-faceted wonder who tells stories at the piano, plays bagpipes, French horn. She sings, writes, composes and arranges her own music for her shows. She's a madcap musical institution who has charmed audiences around the world for several decades with her rodies of every musical cliche. At MSU, her concert will feature old ANNA RUSSELL favorites, plus some hilarious new musical
