Warrantless probes of FBI still going on

 $\begin{array}{ccc} NEW\ YORK\ (AP) & - \ Assistant\ FBI \\ director\ J.\ Wallace\ LaPrade\ said\ Thursday \end{array}$ that "warrantless investigations" such as those that resulted in the indictments of former acting FBI Director L. Patrick Gray III are still being conducted by the FBI, with presidential authority.

'At the present time, there are warrantless investigations that the attorney general, with the president's executive authority, is having the FBI conduct," he said at a news conference. He did not say whether President Carter had specific knowledge of

Asked what he meant by "warrantless," he replied "I would describe it this way: The activities that are alleged in connection with the Weatherman investigation (in the early 1970s) would categorize as warrant less activities."

LaPrade would not elaborate on what those were, but said "the executive power of the president permits the types of things that we're discussing of a warrantless nature.

In Washington, Justice Department spokesperson Terrence Adamson said at a hastily called news conference that the issues raised by LaPrade involved national security.

Adamson said there were no instances of warrantless surveillance in domestic cases by the FBI or other Justice Department agents except for national security and that the attorney general and his predecessor. Edward F. Levy, had testified to Congress on several occasions about those Adamson said that in fact no American citizen has been subjected to warrantless surveillance with the well-publicized excep tion of Ronald Humphrey, a United States Information Agency employee accused of passing secrets to the North Vietnamese. Adamson said the attorney general, who

Beer keg check will be charged against RHPO

By THE STATE NEWS

A $33 University check sent to four Abbot Hall residents as reimbursement for a keg of beer will be charged to the account of the Residence Hall Programs Office

The students charged that the keg of beer was illegally confiscated by a graduate adviser last term. The beer subsequently spoiled when the adviser refused to either return or ice

The check, sent to the students with an accompanying letter by MSU Trustee Michael J. Smydra, was originally charged to the trustee's expense account

The East Lansing Democrat said in the letter he had read about the students" "plight" in the March 29 State News and was "sorry for any inconvenience

Katny Stepanovich, area director for that dormitory, said Monday that RHPO had planned to reimburse the students but decided not to send another check when they heard

Smydra said Thursday night he had instructed Elliott G. Ballard, secretary to the trustees, to transfer the check from his expense account to RHPC

He said the reason he wrote the check was to get the "mechanisms moving." He added that he assumes his check will simply be charged to RHPO's account "I don't see them (RHPO) reneging on their public statement." Smydra said

Because the case had dragged on and has yet to be heard by the Student-Faculty Judiciary, Smydra stressed that he wanted to reimburse the students as soon as possible Smydra said he believes the issue is not whether the keg was illegally confiscated, but rather that the beer subsequently spoiled. He also questioned the effectiveness of the Mark Ferguson, one of the four students, said Thursday that RHPO had never offered the students reimbursement for the keg. The students' legal counsel, Lon O'Tremba, echoed Ferguson's remarks. "As far as I could tell, they (RHPO) didn't want to get involved in any sort of remedy." he said.

The controversy was sparked when Ford took a keg of beer, which was not registered with the head adviser of Abbot Hall, from a student's room last term Freshmen Ferguson and Mike Dennis, sophomore Gary DeFauw and junior Bob Lezuch claim the unrefrigerated beer spoiled following its removal from the room and that Ford violated their University and Constitutional rights. SFJ has yet to decide whether to grant the students a hearing.

India seeks report on device that may cause nuclear harm

By GENE KRAMER NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The Indian government demanded Thursday that the United States explain reports that a secret CIA mountaineering team abandoned nuclear device on a Himalayan peak 13 years ago. Officials are especially concerned that the radioactive material could contaminate the Ganges River, a vital water-

U.S. Ambassador Robert F.Goheen was summoned to the Foreign Ministry and was told the reports caused "great concern to the Indian government, the Indian Parliament and the Indian people," a ministry spokespersons said Foreign Secretary Jagat Mehta asked

Goheen "to ascertain the truth as early as possible" and told him "it was essential to know what hazards were involved," the spokesman said The foreign minister, A.B. Vajpayee, told an interviewer that, if true, the incident is bound to damage U.S.-Indian relations, which recently have been improving. Legislators planned to air the issue Friday in State Department spokesperson Tom Reston said in Washington the department was checking into the report. The Foreign Ministry spokesperson said Goheen promised to provide further information as soon as it becomes available.

The story was published in Outside, a publication of the American magazine It said a Central Intelligence Agency group in 1965 tried to plant a nuclear powered device atop 25,645-foot Nanda

Devi, one of India's highest mountains, to monitor atomic test explosions inside neighboring China.

Bad weasther halted the climbers 2,000 feet short of the summit and the nuclear powerpack was left in some rocks, only to ecome buried in an avalanche by the time the climbers returned the following year. the magazine said.

It said the abandoned device contained plutonium 238, which remains dangerously radioactive for up to 500 years. Once its outer covering corrodes, it said, the material could contaminate the Ganges watershed with cancer-causing poisons by seeping into tributaries of the giant river. The Ganges is sacrea in the Hindu religion and is the principal waterway of northeastern India.

A U.S. Embassy spokesperson said it was doubtful the embassy had records to show U.S. Himalayan expeditions as far back as 1965. An Indian spokesperson said such a foreign expedition "must have been known to the government," but he could not pinpoint what the records show, if anything, on the expedition described Outside magazine.

The first treaty dealing with the canal's neutrality was passed by the U.S. Senate but with a reservation that America could use force if the canal should be closed. The Senate is now debating the second treaty that deals with the actual granting of the canal to

Cease-fire announced in Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - Syrian peacekeeping forces and Lebanese Christian rightists announced a cease-fire Thursday after five days of fighting in which more than 100 persons were reported

Heavy gunfire subsided in southeast Beirut by midafternoon as Syrian troops halted rocket and tank shell attacks on the city's Ein Rummaneh Christian sector where right-wing militiamen were positioned.

The truce was holding by nightfall, despite sporadic sniper fire in the sector. Occasional mortar shells fell into the adjoining Moslem quarter of Chiyah and leftist gunmen were on the streets and buildings in force. But they were generally holding fire, eyewitnesses reported.

Because of bad blood between Christians and the Syrian troops, both sides agreed to station Saudi Arabian and Sudanese members of the 25,000-strong Arab peacekeeping force on the edge of the Christian sector

Auto exec testifies in Red Brigade trial

TURIN, Italy (AP) — A Fiat auto executive kidnapped and held by Red Brigade terrorists for a week in 1973 testified Thursday that one of his captors told him they had undergone guerrilla training abroad.

The court is trying jailed leaders of the Red Brigades, Italy's most feared urban guerrilla group, whose members have held former Premier Aldo Moro hostage for four weeks.

They are accused of trying to overthrow the government.

Ettore Amerio, personnel manager of the giant Turin-based car maker when he was abducted, said the hooded terrorist who questioned him in a "people's trial" quoted slogans by Mao Tse-tung and described the Soviet Union as a "deviationist" regime.

"I was kept secluded in a cold room with the Red Brigades symbol of a five-pointed star in a circle on the wall behind me. They alternated questioning with sort of ideological lessons about their group and their strategy." Amerio said at the 19th day of the trial

He said his interrogator did not say where the guerrilla training base was.

Israeli army denies Syrian explosion

Two presidents call for Mideast talks

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter and Romanian President Nicolae Ceausescu called jointly Thursday for Israel to meet with Palestinian representatives in renewed Middle East peace

In a joint declaration signed at the White House, the two presidents said they both are determined to encourage peace in the troubled region based on Israeli withdrawal from lands occupied in he 1967 war, insurance of future security for Israel and other states, and "respect for legitimate rights of the Palestinian

To this end, they expressed themselves in favor of negotiations among all the interested parties for solving the Middle East situation, with appropriate representation of the Palestinian people," the joint declaration said.

Trapped miners presumed dead

GRUNDY, Va. (AP) — Three miners were trapped by a slate fall deep in a coal mine near this far southwest Virginia town Thursday, and a spokesman for the mining company said all were presumed dead.

Dennis Hardy, an official of Island Creek Coal Co.'s Beatrice mine just east of here in Buchanan County, said efforts to reach the miners were being made, "but we haven't reached them yet.

"It was a slate fall from the roof of the mine, and I'm not sure how long it will be before we get to them," Hardy said late Thursday afternoon, several hours after the accident.

Another Island Creek spokesperson. Mike Muslin, confirmed that three men were trapped beneath or behind the fallen roof, and added:

"It now seems that they were killed." He said representatives of the coal company, the United Mine Workers union, and "government inspection people" were in the mine Thursday afternoon, attempting to remove bodies of the victims.

Novices promenade in Union Ballroom

Nearly 70 students discovered Wednesday night what 50 MSU Promenaders already know: that square dancing is fun, good exercise and a great way to meet people. Beginners learned basic dance patterns, terms and calls from members of the MSU Promena ders at a special square dance session at the Union Ballroom. Wednesday night was the third beginners' session taught by the club this term. Bill Chase, a caller for the club, led the beginners through the basics and chanted different patterns for the group to practice. During the remainder of the session, the students shed their title of beginners and promenaded their way to being novice square

Chase, an MSU senior, taught the group the meanings of do sa do, allemande, right and left grand, courtesy turn and promenade. He also taught students line and folk dances including the hustle, the troika and the polka.

After beginners got their first taste of square dancing, club members took the floor to show and how long-time dancers swing and step.

"It's good exercise," one student said. "It's a social activity that involves a lot of people "Of course, it's fun to be grabbed by a guy and be twirled around," she added. "It's something more than sitting at home listening to records. It's making your own entertainment.

"It's a challenge because you have to remember so many calls," junior Ron DeRoche said. "It's not just disco dancing, where you just move your arms and legs."

He said he thinks square dancing is more fun than disco because of the number of people involved in each dance.

"In square dancing, every dance you meet at least six different new people," he explained.

Though club members are not required to wear traditional square-dance outfits, many students donned petticoat skirts and gingham shirts to dance.

"It makes you feel like a girl when you're out there dancing," said one petticoated woman.

The students danced to recorded music, but callers used a public address system and a microphone to provide live calls. The club uses women as well as men for calling steps, Chase said, adding that several callers are University professors and staff members.

One club caller is Fred Nurnberger, assistant professor of agriculture engineering. Bernadine Mesick, an office assistant in the Laboratory Animal Care Service, also calls for the Promenaders. Richard Cole, assistant professor in the fisheries and wildlife department, has called for the MSU Promenaders and several other square dancing groups. Chase said.

Council? Quorum? | letters or nothing at all?

The selection of a University president. Minimum English language competency requirements for teaching. The physical recreation needs of MSU students. These are some of the issues being kicked around by student government - kicked because the Student Council members do not appear interested enough in them to show up at scheduled meetings.

Student Council is suffering from lack of interest, a disease unfortunate among the student body but unconscionable when found among elected representatives. For the third consecutive time the council failed to make quorum Tuesday, meaning no business could be acted upon, no student interests could be pursued.

Quorum for the 34-member council means 15 people, graduates and undergraduates, who are expected to assemble once every other week to deal specifically with those issues germane to students before they are taken up by the full Academic Council.

The failure of these elected representatives - some from their colleges and other at large representatives of women and minorities to take their positions seriously is a great disservice to the campus community. It takes more than the same core of concerned individuals, the perennial committee members, the doers, to effect change.

When councilmember Anne Crowe stood to give her report on the presidential search and selection committee, 19 students were not there to hear it. Those 19, the missing, are denying themselves and those they represent the opportunity to express an opinion, an outrage or a suggestion to a member of that committee.

Those same 19 were not present to discuss the unfortunate plight of the students who cannot understand their math teaching assistants because their English is so poor. This was a central theme in the major disputes over Math 108 last fall. It is no less a problem now.

Presumably Student Council members are elected because they see the need for student representation in academic governance. If they do not see it, and do not intend to fill it, we must demand that they remove themselves and allow other, more concerned individuals to take over.

Devaluing the currency of words

The Sami Esmail case has, if nothing else, dramatically spotlighted a defect which hinders rational public discourse. It is called the trivialization of language. Words and phrases normally reserved to describe and make prominent unique circumstances are these days being passionately — and often irrationally — employed to identify situations of significantly lesser import. The currency of language is being devalued as surely as the worth of the dollar is plummeting on the international money markets.

Esmail's "human rights," we are told again and again, have been violated. His encounters while in prison have been cloaked in the buzz word "torture." It will make no difference to some if it is shown that Esmail's "torture" amounted to nothing more than harsh interrogation, or if it is demonstrated that the "human rights" imbroglio is really a consequence of differing interpretations of the law and governmental authority. To some, Esmail will always be a martyr,

To crusade for human rights is an eminently worthwhile endeavor. but what proponents of this goal sometimes fail to comprehend is that justifying any and all protests on the pretext of "human rights" and moral justice" tends to diminish their credibility in the minds of the public at large. Violations of human rights can be distinguished from violations of the law and violations of fair play. Mixing the three in some metaphysical blender produces only a flavorless rhetorical milkshake that is an innocuous and common as the kind McDonald's serves. To cry "the sky is falling" when in fact the heavens are intact makes it that much harder to persuade most people that danger is imminent when the sky really is falling.

The lexicon of exaggeration poses a threat not only to useful discussion but, more importantly, to the goals and methods espoused by committed activists. Most liberal thinkers embrace human rights, and it would be a shame to imperil those rights by embracing the phrase so undiscriminatingly that all meaning is squeezed out of

Alfredson letter

Kris Alfredson's letter on Tuesday was so liculous and ignorant that I'm not sure whether it should be taken seriously or rhetorically. On the off-chance that someone bigoted enough to write that letter seriously is running around loose, a reply

It is inconceivable to me that someone vith your narrow-minded outlook could still be functioning in today's society. The suggestion that "expense, discomfort, or agony should not deter blacks from doing everything in their power to correct their condition," is appalling. If "black" is a condition, then so is white, yellow, red and brown! What are you going to do — dye the whole world to suit your tastes?

I can't think of anything more boring and natural than having a world of people looking the same, speaking the same and coming from the same background. What's rong with you, can't you see everyone is beautiful the way they are? Kris Alfredson's letter constituted satire It was not meant to be taken seriously, but rather to underscore the shallowness of Ira Combs' outlook on homosexuality. In his letter to the State News, Combs sought to justify his decision to resign from the ASMSU Student Board on the grounds that he could not participate on an elective body chaired by Dan Jones, who is gay. Combs asserted that homosexuality is a matter of choice, and gave therefore cannot be viewed a minority in the sense blacks can.

Alfredson, evidently believing that sexual preference is no more a matter of choice than is color of skin, attempted to ridicule Combs by contending that, with sufficient innovation and determination, skin color and racial-cultural background can be altered as surely as homosexuality. What Alfredson is really saying is that it is as ridiculous to believe or expect that blacks have the ability to change what they are as it is to believe or expect that gays can change what they are. In no way is Alfredson contending that blacks can or should try to become or even imitate whites. She is merely attempting to demonstrate the fallacy of Combs' stance on

IM foul-ups

The intramural situation at Michigan State is in bad enough shape in terms of providing enough facilities for all students to use without having the IM supervisors setting double standards concerning who is allowed to use them. For some reason, certain supervisors feel they have the right to permit a friend or roommate to use a gymnasium and, at the same time, turn other students away while claiming the

I am referring to an incident when myself and two friends attempted to use the upstairs gym at Jenison fieldhouse to play basketball. After checking out both intramural buildings to find they were closing at eight o'clock, we were happy to find the gym open and fully lighted at Jenison. Since we saw two guys playing we figured we would shoot at another basket. Upon entering, an intramural supervisor quickly approached us: "Sorry guys, the gym is closed. It closes at six thirty, you'll have to

"If the gym is closed then why are those other guys playing?" I responded. "Uh well they're my friends, its alright

By this time my friends and I were getting upset. Being the outspoken person I am, I tried a little scare tactics. "I don't think it's too cool letting them play and telling us to leave, we all pay the same

"Yeah, but I don't know you guys." "Well, that's too bad, maybe you will after your boss finds out about the double standards you're using here.'

"He said I can do it" replied the boy in the supervisor shirt.

We left Jenison after our little confrontation and I began to wonder what goes on around this University with such terrible administrative action. It's not only the ex jock supervisors they hire that are

Briefly, the letter said that Abbot Hall Graduate Adviser Cary Ford and Mason Hall Head Advisor Tom Hadzor entered heir room and confiscated a keg of beer. The party had apparently not been registered with the authorities, so the beer was grabbed and left to spoil overnight in the adviser's office

I even took the letter with me to Chicago, hoping to find time for some kind of response. But my own lackadaisacal nature held me in check and the letter emained piled beneath other papers, for which I am now sorry.

The Abbot Hall keg incident (took place on the night of MSU's basketball championship game) has become a campus issue.

MSU Trustee Michael Smydra, an East Lansing Democrat and the sole student on the board, sent a check earlier this week to the four apparently wronged students. The $33 check was charged to his board expense account and, he says, will later be hanneled to the proper office. (Point of information: Smydra consistently has the highest trustee expenditures, and the questions. First of all, what right has Smydra to dip into his private University account to reimburse these students when it hasn't been proven that any impropriety has been before any kind of formal investigation. When and if the advisors are found to be in the wrong, then they should pay for the beer they spoiled. And actions should be taken against them for their inappropriate and possibly illegal action.

Though the students involved appealed to Smydra for help and though he probably operated in the best interest of students. Trustee Symdra's hasty response proves not so much his senstivity to students but a desire to make quick, effortless moves that may ingratiate himself in the hearts of knee-jerk liberals and easily-fooled stu-

Hey! You guys have been fooling us all this time! Here you almost got us to believe that you had really responded to all the criticism charging the State News with being too liberal by running columns by some ultra-conservative named Ed Lion. Now we find out that there really is no Ed Lion and that his columns have been nothing more than sarcasm a la National Lampoon Letters page

But surely you could have come up with a better name than "Ed Lion." I mean, I see the symbolism (Lions and Christians and all) but how about something a little more obvious, like . . . "Lily White?" Maybe you didn't have any spare photos of females lying around? Speaking of photos, whose pic is that? I mean, I've never seen him around campus. The Mood

Mood: a conscious, subjective state of mind; a predominant emotion: a prevailing attitude; a distinctive atmosphere or emotional context

Philosophers and moralists instinctive corners in all our minds - tend to stereotype campus populations as sharing a common mood. In the '60s the assessment was "radical." Today it is "apathetic." If the mood of the campus has changed, it has moved away from generalities and toward specifics. It is unfair to say that the protestors of the '60s were not motivated by at least some selfinterest, since many a marcher was spurred by the realization of impending draft notices or the death in combat of relatives and childhood friends.

But what is going on today? As the stories and columns on this page tend to show, "apathy" is not really an accurate description of the prevailing atmosphere. There

The shadow of protestors and police loomed over the late '60's landscape.

But this observation deals only Protesters: into the system

By CAROLE LEIGH HUTTON State News Staff Writer

The System. It is massive, confusing, often unwieldy. It offers few explanations and fewer encouragements. Why then are students choosing to work within it?

Effecting change has always been the goal of those students we label activists. In what we now call the "turbulent '60s" the avenues to pursue change of even a lesser magnitude were limited. Eighteen-yearolds could not vote and could not run for public office until after 1971.

In 1978 we have a student on East Lansing City Council, two on the Ingham County commission and a person closely identified with students on the MSU Board of Trustees. Students, by and large, are turning to the system because it represents the next logical step toward bringing about social change.

"The decrease in student activism has been overrated," believes Alan Fox, the first student elected to East Lansing City Council. "I don't think people have become apathetic. Voter participation is still surprisingly high."

Despite the fact that it has been legally possible to elect a student to city council since 1971, Fox represents a triumph of "working in the system," an accom-plishment beyond those within reach of groups which seized campus buildings in

City Councilmember Larry Owen, an activist of years past at MSU, sees the shift from outdoor demonstrations to indoor politics as one involving complex forces.

"As people began to get involved with the serious issues," he said, "they learned how to get the results. From a long-range point of view it makes more sense to have a strategy of organized pressure groups that are going to have continuous life. That is the way to build up influence.

Most of today's successes stem directly from yesterday's protests. The same stu dents - the committed core - have permeated the system they once rebelled against - often bloodily - in the streets.

Mark Grebner, a long-time MSU student elected to the Ingham County Commission in 1976, said the activism of the '60s and early '70s served to rescue the flailing

"It was really too large to ignore," he said of the massive student protest movement that characterized anti-war sentiment "Suddenly government wasn't an obstacle anymore. Student activism played a large role in bringing this about.

Michael Smydra, elected to the MSI Board of Trustees at age 27 - just two months after receiving his master's degree from the University - echoed Grebner's observations. "In general, the level of sensitivity has level of consciousness.

In 1972, you partied in your room on Saturday night and canvassed for McGovern Sunday night. Everyone did it. After Bobby Fischer it was chess. Shortly after that the rage was cross-country skiing. It's relatively inexpensive, easy to do . . . The same applied to the demonstrations.

sees himself and his popularly-elected counterparts in the off-campus political arena as students of the whole process who learned to adapt to the system

I think that we all started out working more outside of the system and then eventually switched to working within it," Sobel said. "The demonstrations were not bringing immediate results, but the war was winding down and people were beginning to give the system a try.

Fraternities: beer parties (like the one at left), tug- ofwars, chug · a · lugging Homecoming floats, block parties and similar activities have long been associated with campus Greeks. Today the image is changing — at least somewhat. Greeks are being called more "student service oriented," and both fraternity and sorority houses have experienced an increase in membership since the dearth days of the late 1960s.

Fraternities seen service-oriented

How do you get involved? This question is heard everywhere you go, yet the avenues available to students who want to become involved are unlimited. Today most of the University continues to appear unaffected by the need for community volunteers. However, the reason for this lack of action is poor programming and lack of communication. Rather than blame the students who remain relatively uninvolved, point the guilty finger at those organiza tions which have failed to motivate concern for their group.

Regardless of which cause you support there must be a clear understanding of the accomplishments to be reached. The widespread apathy that is being suggested by many just doesn't appear as great as reported. For example, the students at Michigan State are willing to participate. However, they're not being reached.

The decline of fraternities during the late 60s resulted from a lack of response to the contemporary needs of the existing com-While other student organizations offered challenge, experience, and meaning, fraternities concentrated on a good time. present form resulted from the mature, elf-motivated individual who chose to help shape a more responsive fraternity.

Increasing membership system-wide allowed this enthusiasm for achievement to be carried over to various University activities. This dedication by fraternity members to fulfill the needs of the University community satisfies their appetite for involvement.

The campus community is seeing fraternities as they really are: community-oriented. The new image has not come about because students have changed their standards. Rather, the fraternity system has more effectively presented itself through community service and responsibility. The fraternities have reached out the University community, and invite their input. The Greek system is looking to concerned people of the University to participate and be an active force in its

Hard work placed the fraternity system into a position to serve the community more effectively. Through charity projects the system is stimulating interest in many members of the University community. At open house the guests observe first hand the level of organization and coordination necessary to maintain the group. Further interaction shows the student the potential for involvement created by the fraternity.

Involvement can be the most rewarding experience that anyone could hope for. A multitude of opportunities are open for students to exercise their desire for achievement. The participation causing the increased growth in fraternities is only paralleled by the increasing awareness of the University community. Fraternities know the challenge, and their members

Making a generalization about 45,000 eople can be pretty risky. Always, here are those who do not fit the description, and often the generaliza ion is just not an accurate portrayal of he situation. So many things can be aid about a situation, a campus, an era. We hear how despairing it was to live through the Depression from one source while another will say what a glamorous and creative period it was.

Who can say with certainty what is curate? We look back at an era and do to the same conclusions. The ame paradox occurs in trying to ne what sort of mood exists on e college campus of today. Everyone has their own opinions, but all are subjective. So many factors get in the way that it becomes easy to distort the

Their ultimate goal in life is to satisfy petty material The social and political desires. problems of the world do not find their way into the minds of these people. At the risk of meeting with great outrage, I say the average Greek would fit into this category.

Moving on, I see people who are at least aware of some problems. But even this awareness is usually restricted to complaints about DPS ticketing and towing procedures. Don't get me I strongly agree that DPS should be out on foot patrols and dealing with more serious problems that illegally parked cars. But these people only get outraged when they have been personally wronged. Their social commitment to more serious problems is

In the middle there is a class of people who will really get involved and be of service to a progressive social system, as soon as their own problems are dealt with sufficiently. These are people who are concerned but not overwhelmingly committed. They need to first get their own houses in order before they can clean someone else's windows.

Next we have the doers, people like Mark Grebner, an Ingham County Commissioner; Jesse Sobel, also a commissioner; Alan Fox, the first student to be elected to East Lansing City Council and Larry Kestenbaum, long involved in campus and East Lansing politics. This group believes in working through local government channels to accomplish change. These students see the problems that exist and are determined to rectify them. A

The most important people by far are those involved in groups like PIRGIM. the Committee to Stop the MSU Iran Film Project, the South African Libera tion Committee, Gay Council and Women's Council. While not as vocal or visible as their counterparts of the '60s, they are, nevertheless, vital to the process of social change.

Again I must stress that this is an abbreviated list and in no way attempts to represent a complete treatment of the components that work together to shape the mood of the campus.

Trying to determine a prevailing mood from these few types of people is, as I said before, risky. It is easy to see how outsiders might think that college students today are apathetic since the actions of contemporary activists are less visible. We no longer see full scale demonstrations being staged, buildings being taken over, etc. There isn't the visibility of students united, en masse attempting to direct social change. The impression left is that students are no longer rebelling so it follows we all must be apathetic.

But does it necessarily take large crowds of people and massive demon strations to accomplish change? I think not. The efforts of the few individuals involved in local governments and those handful belonging to activist groups are far more effective and instrumental in establishing an atmosphere on campus than are actions of the overwhelming numbers of unconcerned persons.

Groups like the liberation committee which was instrumental in the recent Board of Trustees decision to divest holdings in companies doing business in South Africa, account more for setting a mood than do the many people who do not care. These group members are the ones who will determine what direction our society is going to take.

Work is being accomplished, and it is the result of efforts by people who care who are involved and who ultimately determine the mood.

More tape bootlegging

By DAVE DIMARTINO State News Staff Writer

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the third in a series of articles about record and tape bootlegging and its effect on the American record

A comparatively minor form of bootlegging is currently thriving, one that isn't quite the mass production bootleg LPs presently are, but is no less interesting.

Tape bootlegging - not the low-budget sort, the truckstop 8-track specials, but of a new and higher grade - is now spreading throughout the country at an unusually rapid rate.

A "tape bootleg" differs from any other sort of bootleg because anybody who owns a cheap cassette machine and a blank tape is fully qualified to produce one. By and large, such bootlegs are the spawning ground for actual bootleg LPs, which use a tape source (of any quality) and eventually become actual pieces of vinyl.

The final sort of tape bootlegging is certainly the most interesting, and probably the most productive in the long run. Such tapes are made by music fans actually IN the recording industry — such as band members, recording studio engineers, soundmen for various groups, and even simple "friends of the

Such bootlegs are made in three ways.

The first type is simply called an "audience tape." Logically, it is made at a concert by a member of the audience, who usually has with him a compact cassette recorder and a microphone. When the band emerges onstage, he turns his machine on until finally, at the concert's end, the entire show is taped.

Unfortunately, as easy as the process is, it rarely results in a tape of outstanding quality due simply to its unavoidable low fidelity. Usually crowd noises and echo — and the natural limitations of microphone technology — make the tape unlistenable to all but the most ardent of the band's fans.

The second type of bootleg tape is now growing at the fastest rate, and with good reason. Due to the proliferation of "live" radio shows such as the King Biscuit Flower Hour, Rock Around the World and the BBC's live concert series, listeners can tape live shows in the privacy of their own homes, and usually with the highest grade of stereo equipment. Such radio shows take great care in mixing the sound of their featured band, thus what comes across the airwaves is usually as good as, if not better, than today's

The final sort of tape bootlegging is certainly the most interesting, and probably the most productive in the long run. Such tapes are made by music fans actually in the recording such as band members, recording studio engineers, soundmen for various groups, and even simple "friends of the

As a result of such people, tapes are now circulating of unreleased LPs by such artists as Big Star, Arthur Lee, and the Nazz (post Todd Rundgren, with Cheap Trick's guitarist Rick Nielson) Even a few unreleased demos by the Volvet Underground are available. These thoroughly wet the appetites of fans for such bands, who never reasonably expected to get their hands on such items.

After such tapes are made, there's an obvious question. How do they circulate?

Typically, such tapes can be had through tape dealers, whose methods of advertising are extremely low-key due to the legal ramifications of their work.

One such dealer, who asked to go unnamed, is based in the Detroit area and currently has a library of more than 500 tapes, which he both sells and trades. While he has managed to derive a sizable income from the sale of such tapes, he stresses that he is more interested in expanding his library than in making money.

"I'd much rather trade tapes than sell them," said the dealer, "since with every trade I make, my list of tapes gets bigger, I'm not really losing anything except a blank tape, and I always get a new one back after the trade."

The dealing procedure, he outlined is considerably less formal and quite a bit more involved than a simple mail-off transaction Usually, a trade offer or money order comes to him at his post office box, after which he returns home to make a re-recording of whatever tane might be desired

After buying a few cases of cassettes at a wholesale price, the dealer says he simply transfers the music from one cassette to another by using two tape recorders.

"The really big dealers use multi-speed cassette dubbers," he said. "But once you start using expensive machinery like that, you have to start worrying about the legal aspects of what you're

The dealer said that he feels the legal risks he takes by selling bootleg tapes are relatively small, since he hasn't really developed any system of mass production. And, he says, he doesn't want to. 'I don't really care about making money, so much, I just want to be able to keep my tapes, and keep on doing what I'm doing. I'm not going to risk everything I already have in order to make

Neglected by critics and audiences alike at the time of its 1974 theatrical release, Terrence Malick's Badlands to be shown on campus this weekend by Beal Films - is a remarkable film; a haunting, powerful study of violence, psychopathology and American Partly inspired by the wave of primarily random murders committed across the Midwest by the late Charles Starkweath er in the late '50s, Badlands is much less a dramatized re creation of the adventures of a mass murderer than it is a subjective, poetic depiction of disturbed sensibilities adrift in the debris and aimlessness of the culture of the 1950s.

Kit Carruthers (played by Martin Sheen) is a 25-year-old sanitation worker in South Dakota in 1959. He looks a little like James Dean, and speaks slowly and enigmatically. He is attracted to 15 year-old Holly Sargis (Sissy Spacek), a quiet, almost backward waif shunned by her schoolmates.

After a while, the two be come lovers of a sort (Holly's reaction to their couplings: "Oh gee . . . is that all there is to it?). When Holly's widowed father (Warren Oates) learns of the realtionship, he attempts to break it up. Kit - a strange walking mass of mental contradictions, clearly visible in his speech, his eyes, even his posture - shoots her father. and begins a murderous fugitive run across the quiet and ghostly badlands of Montana.

Holly, who comes along for the ride, narrates the film in a faraway, ironic manner. At one point, she blandly interjects: 'At times I wished I could fall asleep and be taken off to some magical land, but this never happened." Not at all . . .

Writer · producer · director Malick is here interested in conveying the feel and flavor of dislocation, of detachment. Neither Kit nor Holly seem to belong to our society. They both operate just outside its barriers, befuddled by its rules, customs and tailings. Malick neither condones nor endorses their actions - he merely presents them, in a carefully distanced, almost dreamlike cinematic approach.

Motown launches mellow discs

By REGINALD THOMAS State News Reviewer

Motown has always been one of the leaders of solo artists. Some of the best artists were part of their repertoire of solo performers. Marvin Gaye was a tremendous standout as was David Ruffin when he first left the Temptations. Eddie Kendricks, Shortly Long, Edwin Starr and a host of others were the mainstay of the recording Motown is trying to perpetu ate its solo market. But with Ken Gamble and Leon Huff writing hit after hit tune for Teddy Pendegrass, Billy Paul and Lou Rawls, it will be extremely hard. But Motown does have the talent needed in Cuba Gooding.

Gooding has completed his first solo work, The First Cuba Gooding Album (Motown M7-897R1), and shows signs of bringing back some of Motown's market.

Gooding is an accomplished singer who has performed lead on such million sellers as "Everybody Plays The Fool" and "I Just Don't Want to be

Two of the most mellow tunes are "All I Can Give You is Love" and "Where Would I be Without You." Despite the fact most of the cuts on this album are slow, Gooding can sing upbeat tunes as demonstrated the Main Ingredients' Euphrates River.

With his voice and Motown's claim to launch his solo career with the expertise associated with Diana Ross' then Godding should become a household name in R 'n B.

Other solo artists to release new efforts were Jermaine Jackson and the legendary Smokey Robinson

This album shows Jermaine Jackson's talent as a bass guitarist and singer. He opens the album with a quick upbeat tune entitled "Let it Ride."

'Castles in the Sand.") His association with the maestro of ballads Barry White is having a noticeable affect on his music. His version of Stevie

Wonder's "Isn't She Lovely" lacks that element that made it a success for Wonder.

The only good thing about his version of the Wonder tune is the saxophone and piano solos. Jackson has tried to do what many performers before him failed to do - justice to a Stevie Wonder cut.

Jermaine Jackson's new release will be a welcome addition to the collections of the thousands of screaming females who idolize this young musician's While Jermaine Jackson's al-

Robinson's new effort is lackadaisacal and unmotivating. His talents as singer, composer and producer are wasted on this work. There are only three tunes that deserve mention off this album.

"Love So Fine" a snazzy finger popping show tune. "Daylight and Darkness" mellow love song and possibly "I'm Loving You Softly" appear to be the only ones worth listening to as the others lack the qualities needed to bring Motown back. Motown will need more than

'Starsky and Hutch' back on streets

State News Reviewer

Starsky and Hutch has a well earned rep as an action-adventure cop show with the emphasis on action, skreeling tires and male

When Starsk preemed three years ago, it epitomized Spelling-Goldberg Productions' formula for a ratings winner. It starred blond David Soul and dark Paul Michael Glaser as goodhearted, good looking, honest cops whose professional careers were spent helping their friends and rescuing each other from death or fates worse than same.

It adhered to the well-trodden paths forged by such Spelling-Goldberg forerunners as The Mod Squad and The Rookies. These series spotlighted youthful, integrated casts in glossy fast moving B picture plots with lots of chase scenes and plenty of action. The dynamite budget alone on The Rookies and S.W.A.T. probably exceeded that apportioned for guest stars.

S and H's first season was marked by dissension between the stars and everyone involved with the show, the second by battles between the stars themselves. During the first two seasons, the series specialized in "get' em" plots which focused on the relationship between Starsky and Hutch and presented far fetched romantic syntheses of macho Western motifs.

However, this year Starsky and Hutch began the season handicapped by the network Standards and Practices restrictions on acts of violence. For instance two punches equals one gunshot or a squealing tire car chase equals one fight scene. You can have one but not both. Such a rule has certain limiting effects on the producer of an "action-adventure" series. In spite of, or because of this restriction, Starsky and Hutch has improved enormously this season. Forced to eschew old modes of resolving their story lines, they turned to a radically new approach to story telling — plot and character development. Such an approach was almost unheard of in TV active cop shows, but it worked surprisingly well for them. Early on in the season, they broadcast a searingly realistic episode dealing with child abuse "The Crying Child" by James Schermer.It offered a painfully accurate portrayal of the web of pain and deceit that ensnares victim, abuser and material witnesses, usually parents and siblings alike. Schermer's script reflected accurately the painful case histories most of us are familiar with. The abusing parent was herself the victim of sexual and physical abuse, repeating the pattern imprinted upon her. "The Crying Child" underlined the inability of overworked juvenile units to deal with a child abuse case until the injury is grievous or the victim dead. The episode examined and exploded most of the common myths and misconceptions surrounding the syndrome. It was intelligent, evocative episode. Wednesday night's rerun, "Manchild in the Streets," story by Steve Fisher, teleplay by Rick Edelstein (story editor) and Fisher. The story dealt with the murder of a black bus driver, S and H's friend, and his son's adjustment to his death. Although the kid is, temporarily at least, saved from committing a street crime in angry defiance against his father's fate. The rookie cop responsible only gets a 90 day suspension: this despite eyewitness's testimony, and the fact that the victim was unarmed and a socially upstanding citizen without a record. It was a powerful, intelligent document of institutionalized brutality and has been entered for the Humanitas

In both these episodes, the direction was cool and distancing. David Soul directed "Manchild." The directors sought for intellectual impact, as opposed to emotional involvement - to change people's heads, not their hearts.

Whether the series will continue with intelligent, relevant episodes next season is anyone's guess. It's already been renewed but the continuing soapy strife between the stars continues unabated. However, the summer reruns of Starsky and Hutch are worth looking at.

Men's track opens at Dogwood Relays

After a layoff of over a month, it's back to business for Jim Bibbs' MSU men's track squad with the Dogwood Relays in Knoxville, Ten., on tap this weekend.

Bibbs won't be sending his whole squad, in fact, MSU will enter only four relays and four individual events in the prestigious meet. MSU should fare the best in the spring medley relay. Bibbs will enter four of his top performers — Tim Klein, Randy Smith, Ricky Flowers and Keith Moore - in the event.

Smith, Flowers, Fred Parker and either Ken Eaton or Tony Taylor will run in the 400 and 800 meter relays. Parker, who is also an outstanding long jumper, became eligible just this term. Klein, Flowers, Tyrone Williams and Steve Young or Gerald Cain will run the mile relay

In individual events, Smith will run in the 100-meters; Dan King the high jump; Paul Schneider in the shot put; and Williams, Klein and Eaton in the 400-meter intermediate hurdles.

One unfortunate aspect of the men's outdoor season is that Spartan fans will be able to see the team only once all spring Despite having a fine track facility (Ralph Young Field), the only home meet scheduled is the Michigan State Open, May 13.

Bibbs' squad will be keying for the Big Ten Meet, May 19-20 in Evanston. MSU finished fifth in the indoor Big Ten Meet.

Losing skid continues as stickers stay home

By JERRY BRAUDE State News Sports Writer

The frustrations kept building up for MSU's lacrosse team, 4.5, as it blew a five goal lead to Notre Dame in a 1211 overtime loss for its third consecutive loss.

Trying to recover this weekend will be a different task against Ashland Saturday and Northwestern Sunday. The games will be at Old College Field, where the Spartans will play the rest of their home games at 2 p.m.

Ashland is one of the top teams in the Midwest Lacrosse League, and co-head coach Nevin Kanner plans to slow it down.

Trying to recover form two weekend losses Wednesday's Notre Dame game, the Spartans dominated nearly the first three quarters, holding a 10-5 lead with 3:30 left in

But then everything fell apart. The Irish gradually scored four straight goals to close the gap to one. Joe Politowicz scored to give the Spartans some temporary breathing room with 5:45 left in the game. With 1:35 left, Notre Dame scored twice within a span of 25 seconds to tie the game at 11 at the end of regulation play.

Notre Dame's Tim Michaels then scored with 1:11 gone in the overtime for the victory.

"We just let the game slip away," co-head coach Boku Hendrickson said, "We also couldn't capitalize on the man up.

Joe Politowicz' five goals gave him 24 for the season, tying him with Kevin Willits for the record of most goals scored in a season.

Politowicz, a junior from Mt. Clemens, lead the team in points with 28.

Tim Flanagan is second with 18 goals and assists for 27 total points.

After the first quarter, MSU led Note Dame 3.2 on the help of two goals come from Politowicz and Richard Omel.

Notre Dame tied the game four minute into the second period. But the Sparts rebounded for three straight goals by Gre Brinkman, Mark Pinto and Politowicz for Notre Dame came back with two goals its own to close the gap to one. But MSU once again, pulled away with four straight goals by Politowicz, Duane Anderson, in two by Flanagan, before Notre Dame can back for the victory.

Kanner doesn't know what to expect from Northwestern except that it is only a di sport. It will be the first time the two school have met in lacrosse.

The game with Ashland will be the Spartans' second Midwest Lacrosse Learn contest of the year. Their first league gan was a 15-13 loss to Oberlin, last Saturday

Ashland defeated MSU 8-1 last year, the fifth loss for MSU in seven meetings with the Eagles. Ashland took third place last yer with a 4-2 record. Last year, MSU was last Saturday and Sunday MSU will host the men's and women's Big Ten Invitational Tournaments on the Veterinary Clinic and East IM fields. The MSU women are scheduled for a 9 a.m. game Saturday and the men will play Northwestern at 10:30 a.m. Saturday. The championship games will be played Sunday with the men's B game starting at 12:30 p.m., the women at 1:45 p.m. and the men's A team at 3 p.m.

Co captain Jenny Redner has Wisconsin picked to take the women's title with Ohio State a close second. Indiana has won the trophy three years straight, but according to Redner, has "had a bad season. They lost a lot of their people. Iowa and Michigan are favorites in the men's championship, but

"Iowa and U-M are contenders," said Wayne Robel, a player and ex-president of the men's squad. "But we've got a good shot at it, expecially with the home field advantage. MSU is definitely in the top three. Robel volunteered to organize the men's Big Ten Tournament The women's is a much looser outfit; they won't know their tournament pairings until Saturday morning.

The rugby season begins fall term, the teams practice inside winter term, and resume a game schedule spring term. The men were 4.5.1 fall term and are in a rebuilding year according to Robel. The women were less experienced, posting a 3-6 record.

Redner and captain Mary Kay Roth have been the driving forces behind the women's club. They try to teach the basics of the sport to women who are new at it. Redner joined the team last fall while Roth has been involved with it for three years. "No experience is necessary to get on the team." Redner

We start from scratch. Most of our players have one year's experience. Rugby is a new sport and we want people to realize we are here. You don't need well developed skills."

Roth said that rugby is "not that rough. Most guys have played tackle sport before, so their game looks rougher. Most won have never played, though. The object is to get the ball, and the what we aim for. Rugby can only be learned by playing it. It have to constantly think ahead." So what's the attraction to the game? "The social aspect of rugby is great," Robel said. "After en game both teams get together and drink beer. Its the 'third hall the sport,' and the players take it serious.' Redner said, "I play for the people. I like the sport but I but friends all over the United States. The social aspect of rught why I play. Its a good way to travel."

Since rugby is a club and not a varsity sport, the teams prof their own transportation. Redner's van is used by the women the players bring a bottle of wine, pour it in a barrel, and then is downhill. This year it will be played June 3 in East Lansing Anyone who would like to try rugby are welcomed by Ro Roth or Redner at practice sessions. The women practice from to 6:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday. The men price Tuesdays and Thursdays from 5 to 6:30 p.m., both on a

Jackson led the New York Yankees to the world championship last fall with three home runs against Los Angeles in the final game, but he had a hard time in New York's series in Milwaukee

Jackson took a hefty swing in Tuesday's game, but his bat broke at the handle and flew to second base. Jackson was thrown out when the ball only made it to the pitcher on the ground. Jackson also had problems Wednesday when he struck out

Meanwhile, Koosman, who teamed with Tom Seaver in the New York Mets winning days, was ejected from Wednesday's game against the Chicago Cubs. Koosman was ejected in the seventh inning after throwing at Chicago pitcher Rick Reuschel, but he also sent Bobby Murcer up and down with wild pitches in

It may be the early, cool, spring third of the baseball season, but it didn't stop baseball's throwing battles as Reuschel also was warned for throwing balls too close to Mets' heads.

Usually an impending resource shortage would automa-tically raise its market price, Trivoli explained. The price increase would lower consumer demand, prompting businesses to invest in alternative energy sources, he said.

But current government regulation of oil and gas prices at low levels has impeded domestic production and made the U.S. economy more dependent en foreign oil, Trivoli said.

He cited a recent Federal Energy Research and Development study which showed that deregulated natural gas prices would provide the United States with enough domestic production for another 1,000 years. The study also showed that natural gas is this country's most abundant natural

"It exists in every part of the country," he said. "If we deregulate natural gas and petroleum we would have plenty to carry us to the year 2000."

Freedkin disagreed with Trivoli, saying oil and natural gas were too polluting and that the United States does not have a 1,000-year supply, as the govsolar energy is the solution to the energy crisis.

"Solar energy is constantly supported by the public in opinion polls," he said.

He said coal and nuclear energy could not maintain the annual four percent growth in energy consumption.

"Even under the best conditions they could not even support a one percent energy increase," he said.

He also said it is a myth that there is a 1,000 year supply of natural gas.

"It would take more energy to get it out of the ground than we would get from it," he said.

to a more responsive position. Grebner recalls that the war was still raging when govern-ment again began to listen to people. It had reached a point, he said, where those in power actually stopped listening, and a deaf ear to the widespread protests.

"Government wasn't method of dealing with the problem, it was the problem," said Grebner. "The feeling about the Nixon White House was that the federal government was the enemy.

And this systematic deafness was a catalyst for a closer look at government, ultimately spurring protesters to involve themselves in what they had been fighting. "The next logical question in light of this," Smydra said, "was 'is the government makeup, the composition, such that it might not be improved?'."

The answer, of course, was resounding support for improvement. And the focus slowly began shifting from a dwindling war to an unresponsive government.

In any discussion of campus activism in the '60s, the influence of Vietnam can hardly be ignored. It can, however, be overrated.

But the argument that to day's student is more self-interested because of the specific, organizational bent of activism is shallow in the face of a closer look at the war protests.

"It's an oversimplification to say that everyone in the '60s was out marching for causes," Sobel maintains. "It was very easy to get involved with the war. There was the immediacy of the draft and friends getting killed.

Yet Grebner sees an even flimsier commitment on the part of thousands of campus followers who bolstered the protest movement through something much less than selfinterest.

There was a core, a central group of committed individuals who viewed the war as a horrible drama with no purpose save the glorification of a frightening president. These were the people who, as Greb-ner said, "came of age politically in that type of situation and committed their lives to changing the world - a martyred class."

But there were the followers. "Everyone was into politics then," Grebner said. "At football games! It was the socially acceptable thing to do.

"In 1972, you partied in your room on Saturday night and canvassed for McGovern Sunday night. Everyone did it. After Bobby Fischer it was chess. Shortly after that the rage was cross-country skiing. It's relatively inexpensive, easy to do and there's a lot of snow around here. The same applied to the demonstrations.

In many ways the elected student officials of 1978 are heirs to the marching student protesters. Sobel, Fox, Smydra and Grebner all marched and chanted when that was the avenue they saw open to them. Now they are traveling a different avenue, struggling for much the same results.

"It's not that any of us are Smydra said. "It unique," could've been someone else. The remarkable thing was that it was possible to put it all together. The climate allowed us to do it.

"We're a reflection of the time, and I don't think any one of us could have been elected in

"We're trying to think of ways to go over to the dorms and give them a reason to come over here," he said.

Membership requirements for fraternities and sororities have slackened considerably in recent years in an effort to revitalize dying

"Fraternities just change with the ting "Fraternities just change with the line like everything else," said Wayne Czupe ski, former Delta Chi president. "We have requirements for members, only what the guys in the house want." Delta Chi membe ship has doubled in the last four year making present membership 90.

Joyce Boyd, president of the Intercooper tive Council, sees the change in Green membership reflected in prevailing attitude and community relations.
"There's a lot less hostility on the Grey part," Boyd said. "They don't take the selves to be the only thing in the work they're not as self-centered as they used;

Smydra owes bank; credit card revoked

Smydra, D-East Lansing, has lost a default judgment brought by the Bank of Lansing and had his Master Charge credit card revoked.

the action because Smydra had not paid bills on his Master Charge account. He owes the bank approximately $1,697. Court costs will also be levied against Smydra.

did not respond to the collection suit filed by the bank was because, "I'm broke."

"I don't think my financial result of his being a college student and not related to his position on the board.

He also responded to the writ of garnishment that the bank has brought against the University to collect on his wages.

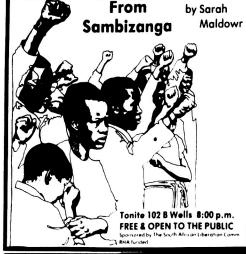

"As a member of the board I am not paid anything by the University. I don't think they can do it," he said in reference to the writ.

All trustees receive reim bursement for expenses incurred in board-related business. Smydra predicted the bank would be unable to collect from his expense account.

Nazis' rights to be subject of meeting

A debate on defending the rights of groups which deny others their rights will be the main event of the American Civil Liberties Union annual membership meeting at 7:45 p.m. Saturday a Valley Court Park Commun ity Recreation Center in East Lansing.

David Goldberger, lega director of the ACLU of Illinois, and Bill Goodman, of the National Lawyers Guild, will debate the question of the ACLU defending the American Nazi Party, the Ku Klux Klan and groups which advocate denying others their civil rights.

Dems plan expulsion resolution

State News Staff Writer

Split over what to do about convicted embezzler Rep. Monte Geralds, House Demo crats set up a committee to draft a resolution of expulsion Thursday.

But it is likely a resolution will not garner the full support of the caucus, which has wrestled with the future of the Madison Heights Democrat for about nine hours over the past two days.

The Democratic caucus will meet today at 10 a.m. to consider the resolution, which Majority Floor Leader Joseph Forbes, D-Oak Park, said will be an individual decision.

The caucus will also discuss what procedures should be followed if a resolution is introduced since no member has ever been expelled.

Milliken frees Lizzy

LANSING (UPI) - Lizzy Williams is free again to conduct streetcorner revivals without the fear that some day she will be returned to Alabama to serve the remainder of a 218 year prison term she fled from in

Gov. William G. Milliken Thursday denied an extradition request, filed by Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace, that would have sent the 60 year old woman back to jail.

While I am mindful of Alebama's legitimate interest in securing the return of escaped prisoners, I have concluded that the ends of justice will not be served by Miss

Williams' return," Milliken said in a letter
