Begin rebuffs interim peace plan

WASHINGTON — Foreign Minister Begin rebuffed a Soviet suggestion Tuesday that the United States might play a bigger role in any peace plan for the Mideast. Prime Minister Begin made the comments in a brief meeting with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko. The two leaders met for about 20 minutes in a session at the White House.

Prime Minister Begin told reporters that the United States had been involved in Mideast peace efforts and should continue to be a participant. "We like the American involvement," he said. "We think the Mideast is a place where the Americans have an interest that is shared by the rest of the world." Prime Minister Begin said he had appreciated the American role in the recent Middle East peace efforts, including the nuclear weapons talks.

Begin also said he hoped the United States would continue to play a role in the peace process and that the American involvement would continue to be positive. "We must continue to have a positive role in the Middle East," he said. "I think it's important for the American people to understand that the Middle East is not just a region of conflict, but also a region of hope. We must continue to work together to achieve a lasting peace in the Middle East."
Undergraduate tax hike faces voters next week

by SUSAN M. FRIES

The Board of Trustees at the University of Michigan approved two tax hikes for next year, one of which would double the undergraduate student portion of tuition. The university also announced its intention to raise graduate and professional student fees. The Board of Regents authorized a 10.3 percent increase for graduate and professional students, bringing the total cost of tuition to $3,440 for the 1979-80 academic year.

The undergraduate tax hike, which was approved last week by the Board of Trustees, would raise tuition by 8.3 percent. The increase is expected to amount to $100 per semester for undergraduate students. The tax hike will go into effect at the start of the fall semester.

The Board of Regents also approved a 10.3 percent increase for graduate and professional students, bringing the total cost of tuition to $3,440 for the 1979-80 academic year. This increase is expected to amount to $150 per semester for graduate and professional students.

The final question will deal with program accessibility by 1980. An MSU senior and wheelchair capper should be able to do anything a person in a wheelchair can do. There have been many improvements in the University's progress in providing handicapper access features with the "wheelchair jock." The University has designed handicapper access for handicappers. Handicappers who met with Carr after the meeting also thought much improvement has been made.

The meeting is open to the public. A film on the stages of personality development will be shown at the council's quarterly meeting to be held at 8 p.m. Wednesday afternoon in the Elliott room, MSU Union. The film is titled "Everyone Rides the Carousel." Carr also heard complaints about building priorities for his use in drafting national building codes. Carr said the law was written with junior priorities for his use in drafting national building codes. Carr said the law was written with junior

The other two issues on the March referendum are a constitutional amendment to provide a legal services program and a proposal to change the name of the board of trustees. The amendments are directed by the MSU constitution and must be approved by a majority of the students. The student board would have the power to name the board of trustees. The referendum date was set at May 24. The referendum is directed by the ASMSU constitution and must be approved by a majority of students. The referendum will deal with the use of federal funds in the university.
Israel

Last week Israel attained the age of 30. Thirty years ago, the standard, the only democracy in the Middle East is but a bale in swaddling clothes. With the birth of the State of Israel, the new entity in the Middle East, the homeland for the Hebrew people, was established. Since then, the state has faced numerous challenges and conflicts, including wars with neighboring countries such as Egypt, Jordan, and Syria.

In its 30th year, peace comes conspicuously by its absence. The state has been involved in a series of conflicts and wars, with the Arab-Israeli conflict being one of the most enduring and intractable issues. The state's security and survival have been threatened by various factors, including military aggression, terrorism, and economic challenges.

Some observers have argued that the state's 30th anniversary is a moment to reflect on the past and to consider the future. The anniversary offers an opportunity to celebrate the state's achievements and to reaffirm its commitment to peace, security, and justice.

Liberals blamed for Kent State

Some observers are concerned about the potential for political polarization and conflict. The anniversary of the Kent State shootings on May 4, 1970, is a reminder of the importance of peaceful and constructive dialogue. The anniversary offers an opportunity to reflect on the past and to consider the future.

Sleuthing sleuths: do-it-yourself detective

The term "sleuth" may bring to mind a crime show or a private investigator. But in the world of Public Safety, of course, "sleuthing" means investigating campus crimes to ensure a safe environment for all students.

That's the job of the campus police, who are on standby 24 hours a day, seven days a week. They work to prevent crimes from occurring and to apprehend offenders.

The MSU police force is made up of 30 sworn officers and 10 non-sworn employees. The officers are responsible for巡逻ing the campus and responding to incidents.

Their duties include enforcing state laws and local ordinances, ensuring the safety and welfare of individuals, and maintaining a safe environment.

The police force is staffed by police majors, captains, and officers. They are trained to handle a variety of situations and to respond to emergencies.

The campus police work closely with other departments, such as Public Safety and student affairs, to ensure that all incidents are properly handled.

Kenny Rodgers: down-home sound

Kenny Rodgers

The first time I met Kenny Rodgers was just after he returned from a week of hard work. He was quite sunburned and a bit downhearted. It was a Friday night, and Kenny had just finished playing a five-night stand at the El Rancho West. He was very tired and a bit disappointed with the response of the crowd.

Kenny Rodgers is not a lot of things — he's not a country music icon, he's not a national celebrity, and he's not a musical genius. But he has one thing that few others have: a knack for writing songs that people can't help but enjoy.

Rodgers, who is 55 years old and was born in East Lansing, Michigan, started his music career in 1976. He first gained attention with his hit song "Lucille," which became an instant classic and helped to establish his reputation as a country music star.

Rodgers has been a regular on the country music scene ever since, releasing hit after hit, including "The Stranger," "The Gambler," and "Lady." His music has earned him numerous awards and accolades, and he has sold over 100 million records worldwide.

Rodgers is known for his down-home sound, which is characterized by his gravelly voice and his deeply personal songs. His music often deals with themes of love, loss, and redemption, and it speaks to the hearts of millions of fans around the world.

Rodgers has been married twice, and he has three children. He lives in Nashville, Tennessee, with his wife and children, and he continues to write and record music, as well as perform on the road, to this day.

Damn Yankees’ needs heart

By MELINDA MAURER

The success of Damn Yankees rests upon the vocal and acting abilities of the show. Graceful and poised, the cast of the Union Theatre production of Damn Yankees is superb. The lead roles, those of the Devil (alias Mr. Applegate) and the transformed Joe Boyd (played by Don Satterfield) are well performed. Joe Boyd, an enthusiastic baseball fan, has a hero’s heart. The Devil, though bad, has a heart. The union gallery

The premise of The Tempter is typical post Exorcist horror fare, incorporating demonic possession, reincarnation, lots of sex and a bit of sodomy for good measure. Fortunately, this vomit is probably the most nastily viewed of this year’s Halloween bonzes. The screen is filled with scenes of chauvinism and exploitation.

The essential plot of the film, as far as I can tell, is that Mr. Applegate persuades Joe to try to win the pennant for the Senators. Joe's time runs out, with Mrs. Boyd busily hard at work. The show in between the musical numbers fared well, but most the director, Jane Price, seems to have been interested in the music instead of the story. The play's central idea didn't make an impact with the audience. Scenic design was a bit inauspicious, but the production was a bit unclear. The setting was filled with fun, but to a large extent, the director, Jane Price, tried to win the pennant for the Senators.

Rule-bender Veeck one step ahead of baseball

The fact that Bill Veeck would use such a tactic should come as no surprise to anyone who has followed baseball over the years. Veeck has used every trick in the book to make fans of baseball and the Brewers, the minor league Milwaukee team he managed, was no exception. He was known for his flamboyant and unconventional methods, which often involved pushing the boundaries of baseball tradition.

One of Veeck's most famous tricks involved the use of a hydraulic motor to move the fence on the field. When the opposing team had more power than the Brewers, he would lower the fence, but when the Brewers had more power, he would raise it. This strategy was designed to help the team that was losing, and it was a success in many games.

Veeck also used a small organ to play music in the stadium, which was well-received by the fans. He once famously threw a frisbee on the field, and the ball sailed out of the park. The crowd was thrilled, and Veeck's team went on to win the game.

Veeck's tactics were not without controversy, however. The league and the other teams were not happy with the frequent moves made by Veeck, and it caused a rift between him and the league. In the end, the league banned Veeck from the major leagues, which may indicate that things have not changed much in baseball.

Exploding scoreboards and sassy organists have not yet been seen in the major leagues, but Veeck's tactics were a reflection of his belief in making baseball fun for the fans. His methods were ahead of their time, and it is clear that Veeck was a man who was not afraid to take risks to make baseball a more enjoyable experience.

Asher House wheels in first place in muscle-powered cart race

The Indy 500 was never like this. Wheels screamed around West Circle Drive, carts tumbled and stopped. Tents were tossed, a burst of speed, a burst of speed," and "Push, push!"

Instead of Grafitee, runners plowed down Spy Gay beer. A drunk courtesy cart supplied by the sponsor of the race, Rainbow Ranch, dropped all runners off the start line. When the flag was thrown, the cars, a tightly bunched core, took the lead in a panic race.

But when it was all over, the tent and women of Asher walked away with first place trophies in the Junior 500 (Patrick Coglianetti, second in the men's division and third place in the women's division. "That's a long way to push that sucker," one male runner commented. "I can't even see the end of this stretch."

"Well, they won again. What a unit," said a jubilant group of Asher students carrying the trophy home. Apparently, it paid off.

The Ross brothers, senior, said, "Not bad. We're gonna win this one," team members muttering as they readied themselves to a black-taped steering wheel.

Drivers and runners bedecked in colorful T-shirts clustered around homemade carts, perpetually jumping tires. Classic finish, anticipation of their maps.

"Man, am I hung over," an Evans Scholar runner explained. "I can't even see the end of this stretch."

Record basketball bet nets $3,000

By MICHAEL MEGERIAN

Dennis Rosen spent the weekend setting a Michigan State record for basketball bounces.

Rosen became well-known last year after he spent a whole weekend trying to break the record for basketball bounces on the Men’s IM Building. The previous record was held by fraternity member Tim Ruppel, who bounced a basketball for 47 consecutive minutes.

Rosen surpassed the record on Saturday evening. He was in the process of bouncing a basketball while playing a game of backgammon and a game of cards with friends. Rosen said he bounced throughout the night, as well as during the day.

By Monday morning, Rosen had bounced the ball for 69 hours and 3 minutes, breaking the record of 46 hours set by Ruppel.

Rosen began Thursday evening by bouncing a basketball, planning to exceed the record before the weekend was over. He was determined to break the record and proved himself to be a competitive individual.

Heart disease and hypertension.

“Rosen had to do something other than just bounce a basketball,” Kozloff said. “He decided to do something that would be physically challenging.”

This weekend, Rosen spent the weekend playing basketball bounces while raising events for the Michigan State University Heart Association.
