Residents who opted to move into residence halls this fall should wait before signing contracts, according to a meeting of the Resident Hall Association Nov. 10. The meeting was called by James Anderson, coordinator for residence halls, to discuss the contract issues with resident hall residents.

“It's a good idea to wait before you sign a contract,” said Anderson. “The contract is not final, and you can negotiate before you sign.”

Anderson stated that the contract length is negotiable, and that the current process is not finalized. He advised students to wait until the contract is finalized before signing.

Former Nat Sci professor dies

By JOHN WEBB
The State News / Writing

E. Lansing, December 22. D. South Dakota, has passed away at age 74.

Dr. Abourezk was a well-known and respected faculty member at MSU, serving in various capacities and contributing significantly to the university's academic programs.

He was a beloved member of the E. Lansing community, and his contributions will be deeply missed.
MSU and the bosses overseas

They'd called International Programs, and the controversy swirling around them has been intense. Financial and ethical deals with foreign governments are major enterprises here at MSU and at universities around the country. Much of what the University does in this field, and why it does it, is either undisclosed or unknown. So we decided to plow the whole subject under a microscope. In doing this we sprinkled the daily Opinion page with the Friday Pink page. The topic proved too bulky and unwieldy to confine to one story or to traditional story length. What we merged the daily Opinion page with the Friday Pink page. The topic proved too bulky and unwieldy to confine to one story or to traditional story length. What we thought of was what you see.

And we came up with some surprising — even startling — results. You should think again. Michigan State is still wheeling and dealing that internal dissent and politicking contributed to the film project's downfall. We discovered that the thermal dissent and politicking contributed to the film project's drop.

Last week, before anyone believed that MSU's ties to Iran have now been severed, they should have again. Michigan State is still wheeling and dealing with the Shah, and with more than a whiff of other nations around the world. For example, we found out that the University administrators have heard the complaints about more stringent guidelines to judge the worth of overseas endeavors — guidelines evidently established in direct response to the President's speech enjoining American universities to cease financial dealings with the Iran film project. Iran film project gone but unalmented by most

A Change in the Captainship

As the Michigan State University (MSU) staff are now in the early stages of the MSI-Iran film project, the film's director, Professor Ralph S. Mehring, is leaving the project. The MSU Board of Trustees has appointed Professor Mehring as the new director of the project. Mehring, who was previously the assistant director of the project, will now lead the project on educational television.

Professor Mehring has been working on the film project for several years, and his decision to leave the project is due to personal reasons. The project has been facing several difficulties, including financial issues, production delays, and political pressure.

In his new role, Professor Mehring will be responsible for overseeing the production of the film and ensuring its completion.

The project was initially launched in 1981 with the aim of producing a documentary film about Iran's history and culture. The film was intended to be broadcast on educational television and to raise public awareness about the country.

Despite the challenges faced by the project,
Professor Mehring is confident that the film will be completed in the near future.

MSU nourishes folk art

By JOHN GALEN
State News-Wall Writer

In this age of information, high technology, and specialized occupations, American folk art is in a special plight. Theorists write about a new folk art that resembles, however slightly, a relic of old. The creative environment of folk art is being preserved for future generations.

Pierre Auguste Renoir was the creator of this closed environment. When asked why he painted women, he smiled and said, "To show their beauty." He also said, "The world of art is in the women's hands."

Renoir's women, his paintings, are a lasting reminder to us. Unlike artist of his time, he did not create a mere reflection of women. He created a different kind of women: women who were the epitome of beauty.

The film "Pretty Baby" is an excellent example of this. It is a gossamer film, a fairy tale love story of life, pleasure and sexuality. Nursing her infant, the viewers are able to experience her story as if it were their own.

The festival will include a wide array of carvings, paintings, music, and poetry. A puppeteer will also put on a show for the children.

The two main attractions of this festival are the children's garden of sex and the setting in the film "Pretty Baby". The festival will also include a raffle, craft show, gospel music concert, and a grape harvest sale.

The festival will be sponsored by the Lansympohonic Choral Society and the MSU Museum. Together they are responsible for an exhibition covering Michigan folk art from 1941 to the present.

So what exactly is their criteria for classifying something as folk art? One of the curators, Susan Sarandon, interprets Hattie. Violet's other world of romance.

The Michigan State University Museum will be used by the choral group for the second weekend. The festival Will be sponsored by the Art Institute of Chicago.

MSU battles Michigan for title; NCAA tournament on the line

By TOM KIRSCHNER

The Lansing State Journal

It will be youth versus experience in the Big Ten baseball championship this weekend in Columbus, Ohio. The Spartans, led by sophomores Rick Grover, Kevin Leach and Steve Rutherford, will face off against the Ohio State Buckeyes, who have veterans such as Dusty Rose, Dave Hargis and Dave Gerber.

The Spartans, who finished in seventh place in the Big Ten last season, are looking for their first conference championship since 1968. They have a young team, but their young players have been stepping up in recent games.

The Buckeyes, on the other hand, are experienced. They have been to the NCAA tournament twice in the last three years. They also have a young team, but they have had more success in recent years.

In the first game of the series, the Buckeyes will have Dusty Rose, who is batting .350, and Dave Gerber, who is batting .320. The Spartans will have Grover, who is batting .300, and Leach, who is batting .280.

In the second game, the Buckeyes will have Hargis, who is batting .320, and Gerber, who is batting .310. The Spartans will have Rutherford, who is batting .340, and Grover, who is batting .330.

The third game will be the rubber game of the series. The Buckeyes will have Rose, who is batting .360, and Gerber, who is batting .340. The Spartans will have Grover, who is batting .350, and Leach, who is batting .330.

The winner of the series will likely advance to the NCAA tournament as the Big Ten champion. The loser will likely be eliminated from the tournament.

Tracksters get chance to qualify in open meet

The track team will have a chance to qualify for the NCAA championships in the open meet this weekend at Kobs Field. The meet is being held to determine the 10 individuals who will represent Michigan at the NCAA championships in the spring.

The meet will feature a variety of events, including the 100, 200, 400, 800, 1500, 3000, 5000, 10000, 4x100, 4x400, 4x800, 4x1500, 4x400 relay, and the triple jump.

The team will be looking to qualify individuals in as many events as possible. The top 10 individuals in each event will advance to the NCAA championships.

Correction

It was incorrectly reported in Thursday's supplement to the State News that J.P. Lipkin, State News Photo depart­ment manager, was one of the three final judges in the annual State News Photo Contest. The third judge was Lon O'Connor of the Detroit Free Press.

Mountaineering

Mountaineering is an old tradition. For the past 30 years, it has been passed down from father to son, package store owner to customer. As a result, a folklore—almost a mytholog­y, if you will—has formed around the mountains of Busch. You, being a student of mountaineering, no doubt, wish to acquaint yourself with these truths and half-truths. These stories both accurate and apocryphal. A wise deci­sion. And, as luck would have it, this ad is just the ticket.

One of mountaineering's earliest legends is Bennington Baxter-Burkington, Adven­tion International's top scout and inventor of the phrase "your check is in the mail," he was the first to descend the final peak of expedition financing. While other mountaineers resorted to such bizarre extremes as a successful operation, Burkington substituted assaults on the Busch mountaintop with creative economies. An amalgam of paper schemes, falsified dreamy department corporation statements and corporate dummies kept him in closer for 40 or 50 years. Asked at the culmination of his "adventure," Baxter-Burkington replied, "Another frequent subject of mountaineering lore is the wildlife. Numerous tales abound, but perhaps the most famous story is that of the 1973 Mountaineers Convention. All 78 produced, with kids and bearded gentlemen initiated an after-hours expedition. It began harmlessly enough. But soon, the Busch moun­taineers reached the Mojave Strip, a rocky high interest area. Before the evening was over, several of them were bending the stride rules. Others were smoking big cigars and telling every woman in sight they were agents with an eye for figures, claiming that you can make you a math­ematically inclined but idle horse." But, when looking at the more obvious story numbers, W. Baxter-Pool's must rank high in lore among the top mountain­ers. Ford of saying, "The road to truth goes through bad neighborhoods." Pool stopped jotting down other dangerous and approached mountaineering as a test of survival skills. In his most famous challenge, Pool equipped only with 30 water-proof matches and a major credit card, parachuted into a remote area known as Cleveland. He was up to the task. Within 24 hours, Pool was back­on the hot sun of Anheuser, downing the smooth, cold refreshing mountain of Busch Beers. A credit to his colleagues and a tall image of credit. What becomes a legend most? That.

Views on Zaire, S. Africa given during program

By JEANNE BARON

A delegation of students from Michigan State University visited the Congo, along with Kalamazoo College, to observe conditions in aid from outside. "The economic grievances are more

If U.S. support is withdrawn, the state department fears the situation in Zaire could be worsened. "It could make sense for the rebels to get involved in a possible international conflict in the future," he said.

Mobutu is overthrown. How gaininfluence in Africa between rebels and government troops. However, serious danger exists in Zaire's Shaba province and the capital.

The invasion seems unbelievable because the action would be contrary to the interests and local policy in Zaire.

It's not sure this is an invasion, he continued. It's more a local conflict.

"It is important for the U.S. State Department and the president to create an atmosphere of crisis so it has to go into and support Mobutu," — William Pruitt, Kalamazoo College history professor.

If the United States supported Mobutu, it would support an anti-American movement in the region, where it makes sense." He said South Africa is a totally contradictory society because it does not make sense. It doesn't make sense for the people of Zaire and their problems.

"It doesn't make sense for the Cubans to get involved in a struggle with the U.S. and its allies. A conflict of interests is going to be created. The aim is to divide the region," he said.

Center offers counseling to sexual assault victims

By MICHAEL MICHIGAN
A three-year rape crisis training program at the University of Michigan is expected to give women great office access to the General Avenue.
According to a recent report, a three-year rape crisis training program at the University of Michigan is expected to give women greater access to the General Avenue.

Although it changed a couple of years ago, the Center for Women and Gender Studies, a community center where counselors do not oversee cases, is to open in East Lansing next fall. The training is conducted under the auspices of the East Lansing Community Development.

Husband files suit in wife abuse case

DETROIT (AP) — Jeffrey Campbell was the Michigan Department of Social Services and an advocate of Social Workers, who was working with his own wife and children.

The 30-year-old father of two, Brian, Gary, had left his three-year-old daughter, Susan, to see his wife, wife and children.

Robin L. Miller, Campbell's attorney, said Campbell had been the center of the family until the latest incident.

Emotionally, the process by which Campbell communicated the sense of the situation, the only one of the situation, in the technique used the SAF training when providing therapy. Each victim must be taught 12 to 18 hours of therapy training as well.

In addition, two weeks of training in two hours and training are required in Michigan.

Such a rapid accidental or a lack of skills across the country, the only case it found for every 12 incidents.

Rape victims who contacted 20% would usually be referred to the health center. Campbell said he had no problem with a medical center in the final months.

Medical attention is free, Campbell said. That's why we can't talk to the victims and try to give them a sense of the situation. We are not concerned if they don't do that. We do the best we can to be a part of the situation.

The SAF training is conducted under the auspices of the East Lansing Community Development.
