Israel president appeals to Sudan

Jerusalem (AP) - Yitzhak Navon, a former politician and playwright once opposed to peace, was today elected President of Israel. It was the first time in the career of Israel's Prime Minister, Menahem Begin, that he has been free to choose his own candidate. The announcement that Navon, the son of a Yemenite immigrant, had won a majority in the Knesset by 113 votes was broadcast over the national radio. The 64-year-old Navon was also Prime Minister of Israel from 1974 to 1977.

Navon's victory over Yitzhak Shamir, a former defense minister and leader of the opposition, was a surprise to many politicians. Shamir had been favored in the campaign, which began on Monday.

Sudan's Ministry of Information said that the election was a clear victory for the principles of democracy and the rule of law. The ministry also said that the election was a sign of the country's commitment to the principle of non-interference in the affairs of other countries.

Navon is a former journalist and a member of the Israeli parliament, where he served as a member of the Israeli delegation to the United Nations. He is also known for his writings on Israeli history and culture.

Navon's victory is expected to bring more stability to the country and to signal a new era of cooperation with other countries. The new president is expected to work closely with the government and the Knesset to ensure the country's continued progress.

While the election was a clear victory for Navon, it was also a setback for the opposition leader, Shamir. The opposition leader has been a vocal critic of the government and has been pushing for reforms that would bring more transparency and accountability to the country's political system.

Navon's victory is seen as a win for the country's democratic institutions and for the rule of law. It is also a sign of the country's commitment to the principles of democracy and non-interference in the affairs of other countries.

Navon is expected to be sworn in as president on Friday, and he is expected to work closely with the government and the Knesset to ensure that the country's progress continues.
Lansing city workers seek union bargaining vote; new pay plan

In a move that won't surprise those who have followed the development of Lansing city workers' collective bargaining rights, city officials are considering a proposal to allow union bargaining for city employees.

The proposal, which was presented to the Lansing City Council last week, calls for a vote by city employees on whether they want to be represented by a union. If a majority of employees vote in favor of union representation, the city would negotiate with the union on issues such as wages, hours, and working conditions.

The proposal is modeled after similar proposals in other cities, where unions have been able to negotiate better pay and benefits for city workers. Lansing city officials say they believe a union bargaining agreement would be beneficial for both the city and its employees.

The proposal will be discussed at a future City Council meeting, and a vote is expected to be held within the next few weeks. If the vote is approved, negotiations with a union would begin.

The Lansing City Council is expected to vote on the proposal at its next meeting, which is scheduled for [date]. If approved, the city would then begin negotiations with a union to represent its employees.

In the meantime, the city continues to work on other issues, such as the ongoing budget crisis. The city has already made cuts to services and programs, and is looking for ways to further reduce spending.

The proposal to allow union bargaining is seen as a key step in the city's efforts to improve the working conditions of its employees and reduce its budget deficit.

The U.S. Supreme Court has ruled that government inspectors cannot enter businesses and workplaces in order to inspect health and safety conditions unless they are admitted voluntarily, or they have first acquired a search warrant. This decision was apparently based on the provision made in the Fourth Amendment of the U.S. Constitution that protects "unreasonable" search. It is not because of rapes, thefts or murders, but it was decided that the special unit are unfit to take up the vital inspection process and to place the health and safety of American workers in jeopardy.

Safety suffers a setback

The Oregonian Safety and Health Administration, which oversees the state's health inspection process, makes about 95 percent of its inspections on-site, and about 5 percent of the inspections are made by the state's health inspectors. The inspections are made by the state's health inspectors, and the state's health inspectors are responsible for delivering the safety standards upon which workers' health and safety are based. To be in the government's hands for categorizing unsafe work practices is an unacceptable wealth of death and destruction.

Sonics lead series, 2-1

Hitters drop first two games

By TOM MACHAJ
Seattle Times

The Sonics say they are going to go on their way to the finals with a 10-0 win over the Spurs Tuesday night. But San Antonio was able to make a closer game of it than that when they lost 97-90 Wednesday night. Seattle leads the series 2-1.

Ponzi, a big man in the middle of the Sonics, had a 24-14 performance, and Hill had 18 points. But the Sonics had the lead early, led by 58-31 at the half, and by 96-69 at the end.

Despite the win, the Sonics say they are not satisfied with their game. "We have to improve," said Coach Dean Nichols. "We have to play better, especially in the second half."
