SADAT READY TO DISCUSS MIDEAST

Egypt critical of Israel

The Foreign Policy Research Institute, a think tank, released a study this week that criticized Egypt's handling of its Middle East peace negotiations. The study, "Egypt's Middle East Peace Negotiations," by William A. Brownfield, a senior fellow at the institute, said that Egypt has failed to make significant concessions to Israel in order to achieve a lasting peace. The study was based on interviews with former Egyptian officials and diplomats, as well as on analysis of official documents.

Estell audit reveals one double billing

An investigation into charges of double billing to Richard Estell, an NCAA president, has resulted in the发现 of a single overpayment of $20,000.

NCAA findings against OSU raise questions

The NCAA has issued a report on the football program at Ohio State University, finding significant violations of its rules. These violations include improper recruitment of players, failure to cooperate with the NCAA's investigation, and violations of the institution's own rules.

Wrist slap

The Big Ten has yet to act on the sanctions against the Ohio State football program, which were announced last month. The NCAA has not taken any action against the Ohio State football program, despite the fact that the sanctions were announced in September. The NCAA's decision to not act on the sanctions has been widely criticized, as it is seen as a failure to hold the institution accountable for its actions.

Nazi march approved without posting bond

The German government has approved a march by a Nazi party in Bavaria, despite protests from Jewish groups and others. The march is scheduled to take place in Munich, and will be the first time a Nazi party has been allowed to march in Bavaria since the end of World War II.

Guilty verdict rendered in Esmail case

Terrorist Fathy Esmail, who was convicted of plotting to bomb a U.S. military base in Egypt, was sentenced to 20 years in prison. Esmail was found guilty of plotting to bomb a U.S. military base in Egypt, and was sentenced to 20 years in prison. The case has been widely criticized, as it has been seen as a violation of international law and an attempt to suppress freedom of speech.

The last time Estell was found guilty of a crime was in 1979, when he was sentenced to 20 years in prison. He has since been released from prison, and is currently serving his sentence in a minimum-security facility.
California debates tax cut plans

KINSHASA, Zaire (AP) — Zaire's new government has been forced to pursue a tax cut and to reduce its budget deficit amid growing economic problems. The government has also been faced with a political crisis, as opposition leaders have been arrested and political meetings have been banned.

The Zaire news agency, ZAPP, said it would not comment on the story.

Jail health project expands to 14 states

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — The American Medical Association announced Monday that it will expand its program to improve health care in jails to 14 additional states.

The eight states already served are Illinois, Massachusetts, Maryland, New Jersey, Virginia, and Washington. The District of Columbia is also included.

The new program, announced Saturday, will be expanded to include additional states that will be announced later.

The program will be funded by grants from the federal government and private foundations.

The program will provide health care to jail inmates who do not have access to health care outside of jail.

Presidential search committee to present package to trustees

By JIM MILLER
State News Staff Writer

The first phase of the 54-page report will be presented to a closed-door session by the Board of Trustees by Oct. 1.

The report was compiled by the University's President's Search Committee, which was appointed by the Board of Trustees following the resignation of President David Salpekar.

The report includes a detailed examination of the candidates' backgrounds, qualifications, and experiences, along with recommendations for the next steps in the search process.

The committee's findings will be presented to the Board of Trustees at its next meeting on Nov. 15.

Foley cites U.S. commitment to help alleviate world hunger

By MARIE LUCCHESI

President William J. Boeing, the 28th president of MSU, has been named the new president of the University of Michigan, officials announced Monday.

Boeing, who has served as chancellor of the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign since 1999, will assume his new position at the end of the 2002-2003 academic year.

"We are thrilled to welcome President Boeing to our University," said University of Michigan President Charles H. B. H. Michelson.

"He brings a wealth of experience and leadership to this position, and we look forward to working with him to continue to build on our reputation as a world-class institution.

"Boeing's commitment to academic excellence and his strong record of fiscal responsibility make him an ideal leader for the University of Michigan.

"We are proud to have played a role in this important appointment, and we wish President Boeing every success in his new role.

Trustees to deal with selection of South Africa and handicappers

A new committee has been established to deal with the selection of South Africa and handicappers.

The committee, which will be chaired by Dr. James L. Anderson, will be responsible for making recommendations to the Board of Trustees on the selection of South Africa and handicappers.

The committee will meet on a regular basis to review and assess the progress of the search process.

President Boeing will be responsible for implementing the recommendations of the committee.

MSU building evacuated after chemical explosion

A small explosion occurred inside a lab refrigeration at Chemistry Building North, 813 W. Redford St.

The explosion occurred in the office of chemistry professor Dr. William J. Boeing, who was at the building at the time.

There were no injuries reported, but the building was evacuated as a precaution.

The cause of the explosion is under investigation.

Police still seeking MSU woman

Details surrounding last Wednesday's disappearance of an MSU student person are still sketchy, but police said Wednesday night that they are continuing to search for her.

Gina Green, 19, was last seen in the area of the MSU campus near the student union at 4:30 p.m. She was last seen wearing a black shirt and blue jeans.

"We are still working on this case," said Officer John Miller of the MSU Police Department.

"We have been interviewing several people who were in the area at the time, but we have not yet located the woman.

"We are asking anyone who may have seen Gina to please call the MSU Police Department at 432-1234.

"We are keeping an open mind about what happened to her, but we are not excluding any possibilities at this point.

"We are doing everything we can to find her and bring her home safely.

"We appreciate the help of the community in this case, and we are grateful for any information that may help us locate her.

"We will not give up until we find her," said Officer Miller.

"We are hoping that someone may have seen something that could help us in our search.

"We want to thank everyone for their support and encouragement.

"We will keep you updated as we continue our investigation.

"We are committed to finding Gina and bringing her home safely.

"We are asking for your help in this search.

"We are offering a reward for information that leads to her safe return.

"We are doing everything we can to bring Gina home.

"We are asking anyone with information to please call the MSU Police Department at 432-1234.

"We are working around the clock to find Gina.

"We are not giving up.

Perrin's purge of Pollock a setback to AA and MSU

Now Mary Pollock, MSU's di-rector of women's athletics, is the Tithe IX coordinator. has been purged. There is a clear dissection of one Robert Perrin, view of the secretary for federal” "female" relations. Now MSU's commitment is affirmative action, and that's to both a substantive and affirmative level, is up to the air. And now several questions need to be asked, and, we believe, several course steps taken to rectify this disturbing set of circumstances. Indeed, it is just time for the University to undertake a comprehensive reappraisal of the way Perrin himself has handled his duties.

Perrin, whose name for affirmative action is well documented, fought to avoid releasing his report to the request of his secretary. Once Pollock was dismissed was that she was not "producing the kind of effective dialogue and response from the campus community that lasting progress requires."

"Perrin's refusal to give it to her commitment to equality of opportunity to women, her ex-ception of her authority did not agree with the kind of professional staff function assigned to the director of women's program run, and the results were becoming increasingly disturbing." It is no surprise that the partners in a football program that was "Perrin's" a perspective read during the season and other women's issues or, to weren't to the air, have said Perrin "just could not get along with Pollock."

During her temporary appoint-ment to the position — which lasted a little less than a year — she was apparently critical of MSU's failure to aggressively pursue affirmative action. She was particularly concerned over the fact that Perrin is meeting Title IX commitments. The Title IX statute which is the basis for the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, far and away, among other things, is discrimination, in athletics, and "quasi-sports" — "fraternal" sport for men and women athletes. Here at MSU, widespread disapproval still exists between the sexes in athletics programs, coaching, and funding.

MSU can demonstrate to the federal government, not just progress in bridging these gaps but also in its consistently high status. The University stands in low places of $10 million in revenues and with 150 million in expenditures that much progress has been made, but Pollock disagrees. One of Perrin's main duties is to oversee the University's affirmative action programs, he is on record as opposing such programs. In a 1975 point of view article in the Washington Post, Perrin made the starting assertion that the policy of compensating for higher cause of employing the recruitment of students who are in socially deprived groups — is an "ideology of equal opportunity". This article is a leading article in the University's local point of view in the University's local paragraph of an article, that is, where no one adequate passage must be furnished. MBS's "certificates are correct, this will not be accompanied automatically by the kinds of social action groups to be formed, or by the efforts of a single lower level administrator (who can be freed)." Many program leaders have expressed their support Pollock without Harman's support. enters the record Elliot Hurdir is responsible for his employees. Pollock apparently does not, as the Board of Trustees, make his "stipulation."

Notwithstanding the University's firm position on the issue, the facts of Perrin's decision to extend the deadline for Pollock's time to submit materials on the issue, to allow the deadline to pass have been noted. Indeed, the University's local measure of its success must be "whether or not such a positive measure can be done."

Sami lost, Langer won

The six month-long saga of the inauguration of Sami Eshel is finally over for those of us who have sat thousands of miles away and wondered on the merits of his case — a third judge court Israel. Eshel's guilty, on June 7 of membership in the KLPF, an organization sworn to overturn the state of Israel. Case closed. But Eshel's presence is just a beginning. Specifically, the begin-nings of the six month legal battle.

Nine months in a jail cell for some of the Intelligence Agency, Sami Eshel will undoubtedly mean nine months in jail for him. His identity, however, is the only true measure of the choice of Feltzic Langer as defense attorney.

Many opponents of Eshel be-came his opponent only after the choice of Langer as an attorney had been made. These people have painted an angry finger and shouted "communist sympathizer" — a charge which hangs on many but means nothing.

Lawyers can sympathize with whatever they choose — they have prerogatives too — but when a lawyer paints a picture of interest in favor of creating an "image" of a defendant is not per-and the "cause" loses out. Such is the case with Langer and Eshel.

The fact of the matter is that Eshel's visit to Libya in an idi-o-matically that he did go to Libya and he did participate in some part of participatory training — despite nine on affirmative Efforts that he was in Libya or else. Even his own brother, Jami, swear he was in Libya. After his sentence was under, disputed his brother's conviction, although he did say he was on "terrorist" involvement in Libya.

Langer, a notoriously known orphak client and unscrupulous per-son, proved during the trial that others who were charged with similar crimes was to Israel never had been acquitted or had been granted suspended sentences because of the vagaries of the system, the truth is, Langer did not take into account, however, that none of the prior cases had received anywhere near the national publicity that Eshel's case received. The media, however, did not make a difference in his clause. When I was in prison, in 1978. When I was in prison, in 1978. When I was in prison, in 1978. When I was in prison, in 1978. Burial price info asked

WASHINGTON (AP) - An effort to avoid repeating the funeral fracas of Robert Fonda's funeral study suggested funeral homes should be required to post and honor price information.
Most of the country's million people who pay funerals each year could save several hundred to more than a thousand dollars, congressional study conducted by the FCC Monday.
A spokesman for the National Funeral Directors Organization and the spokesperson in the Congressional study released the FCC
Monday:
"It's been suggested that even though consumers may not be aware of the ability to choose the cost and form of arrangements they desire, the study said. The proposed regulations would make it easier for a funeral director to notify in families that they have not enough money to pay for their arrangements, which could lead to confusion or other problems."

Study examines film critic's role

In REWIND, an article by a critic from the New York Observer, who says that film critics are often writing about movies that they have not seen, and that this practice is still prevalent. The critic examines the role of the film critic, and the impact of their reviews on the public. The study also explores the influence of film critics on the film industry, and the relationship between critics and filmmakers. The article mentions the film "RECORDS," which is a documentary about the music industry. The critic argues that film critics should be held accountable for their reviews, and that they should have a more active role in the film industry. The study also discusses the role of film critics in shaping public opinion, and the impact of their reviews on the box office. "Raw Meat" culture: down at the drive-in

If I were older, I could get all of the drive-in. No bigger, no better, just as they were. But the place has been on and off for a while, don't think that the drive-in is dead. Not with a movie like "Raw Meat," where the drive-in is a perfect spot for that kind of movie. It's a great place to see a movie, especially at night.

There's a difference in the drive-in experience. At night, you can feel more relaxed and enjoy the movie more. I really enjoy the drive-in, especially during the summer months when the weather is good and you can spend time outside.

But the drive-in has its problems too. The sound quality isn't always the best, and sometimes the weather can be a problem. But overall, I think the drive-in is a great way to experience movies.

She said Pollock got the position because the University’s affirmative action program guarantees. She said the search for a director of women’s programs was advertised in the fall of 1975, and the 1976 affirmative action report showed that 2,500 students were women, amounting to 20 percent of the student body. The application of this program guaranteed Pollock a position.

Pollock got the position because of her knowledge of the University’s affirmative action program, she said. She said she would have had a better chance of getting the job if she had not been a women’s director.

Pollock’s application was complete, she said. She said she had submitted a detailed resume, a letter of recommendation, and a statement of goals. She said she had been interviewed and had met with University officials.

Carter goal postponed

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Jimmy Carter will ask Congress to authorize $15 billion next year to balance the federal budget.

In his budget address today, Carter said the country may have to spend $40 billion next year to balance the budget, but that it is "an absolute minimum" of what will have to be done.

The president said the United States could not either "defund" or "denationalize" Social Security, Medicare, and various other programs.

Carter's speech was met with a standing ovation in the House Chamber.

Mexico markets provide bargains

SAN DIEGO (AP) - Bargains are not far away in Mexico, where prices are 20 to 25% lower.

According to the latest statistics, consumer goods and clothing cost from 50% to 75% more in the United States than in Mexico.

In addition, Mexican imports are tax-free.

These factors have attracted thousands of American tourists to Mexico.

However, some retailers say the low prices have not translated into increased sales.

"We've lost sales because we have to compete with the imports," said one retailer.

AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) - Carter said he has changed his mind about whether to run for re-election.

"I am now convinced that my role is to stay in the White House," he said.

Carter noted that he had previously said he would not run.

"But I have changed my mind," he said.

Carter also said he would donate his presidential papers to the Library of Congress.

In his budget address today, Carter said the country may have to spend $40 billion next year to balance the budget, but that it is "an absolute minimum" of what will have to be done.

The president said the United States could not either "defund" or "denationalize" Social Security, Medicare, and various other programs.

Carter's speech was met with a standing ovation in the House Chamber.

Abortion pay approved

TRUMBULL, N.L. (AP) — New Jersey's Governor Richard J. Hughes has signed a bill Monday ending the state's ban on abortion, despite the objections of some church leaders.

The bill takes effect on Thursday, and by then, Hughes will sign the measure, which will allow abortions to be performed in the state.

The bill was signed by Hughes, who had previously said he would veto the legislation. Hughes's veto was overturned by the state Legislature.

The bill also makes changes to the state's Medicaid program, which covers about 1 million people. It will provide funding for abortions performed under certain circumstances.

Waste planning urged

The House voted 207-199 Monday to cut off debate on a utility and Commerce Department bill that would create a 9-member panel to study the 78-page utility bill introduced by Rep. James Oberstar, D-Minn. The measure heads to the Senate, which has until March 1 to act on the bill. The panel would study existing statutes related to waste management, including the nuclear waste program, the Superfund, the Clean Water Act, the Clean Air Act, and the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act. The bill also would establish a federal program to provide financial assistance for states to develop waste management plans.

House approves appropriations

The House Appropriations Committee approved a $43.8 billion budget for current fiscal year for operation of the federal government. The panel rejected Democrats' proposal to cut the budget by $4 billion and instead approved a measure that would provide $9 billion for defense, $5 billion for education, and $5 billion for health care. The panel also approved a measure that would mandate a $3 billion cut in defense spending and a $1 billion cut in health care spending. The measure now goes to the Senate, which is expected to approve it.

EPA requires sewage clean-up

The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) has ordered several cities to clean up sewage spills that have contaminated nearby waterways. The EPA said the cities, including New York, Los Angeles, and Chicago, failed to comply with federal regulations. The EPA has given the cities until December to submit plans for cleaning up the spills, which have affected millions of people. The EPA said it would continue to monitor the cities' progress.

Powerful quake strikes Greece

A powerful earthquake struck the city of Thessaloniki, Greece, on Monday, killing at least 15 people and injuring hundreds more. The quake hit at 11:02 a.m. and was centered in the city of Thessaloniki, which is located on the eastern coast of Greece. The epicenter, which is located about 10 miles offshore, was registered by seismometers in several European countries.

The quake was felt across much of Greece, including Athens, which is located about 150 miles north of Thessaloniki. The shaking was strong enough to tear down buildings in the city, and many people were trapped under the rubble. The death toll is expected to rise as rescue workers continue their search for survivors.

The quake was the result of a fault that runs along the northern coast of Greece. This fault has been active in the past, and scientists have warned that another major earthquake could strike the region, which is located on the Aegean Sea. The region is also home to a number of nuclear power plants, which are run by the state-owned Greek Electricity Authority.
