Israel rejects Egyptian proposal to surrender occupied territory

By ARTHUR MAX

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel rejected an Egyptian proposal calling for Israel to turn over the occupied Arab Bank in Jordan and the Gaza Strip to a new Palestinian monetary authority. A source at the Arab Bank in Jerusalem said the Egyptian government had offered the proposal to the Egyptian Finance Minister in a meeting last week.

The source said the Egyptian proposal was one of several being considered by the Israeli government as part of its overall strategy to ease tensions with the Palestinians. The source said the Israeli government would consider the proposal further, but that a final decision would depend on the outcome of ongoing negotiations.

The Egyptian proposal was discussed after reports reached Jerusalem of a similar proposal from the Palestinian Authority. A spokesman for the Palestinian Authority did not immediately respond to requests for comment. The proposal is part of a broader effort to improve relations between Israel and the Palestinians, who have been at odds for decades over the status of Jerusalem.

Sponsors of pot penalty reductions drop fight for bill after election

By DANIEL HILBERT

The idea of reducing the penalties for marijuana possession, which was introduced by State Senator John Downey, was dropped as a result of the November election. The sponsor of the bill, State Senator John Downey, said he would not pursue the measure in the next legislative session.

The bill would have reduced the penalties for marijuana possession from a felony to a misdemeanor. The sponsor said he was disappointed that the measure was not passed, but that he would continue to work towards its eventual passage.

Partison debate erupts over tax reform plans

By DANIEL HILBERT

The State Senate will have its first debate on tax reform this week. The debate is expected to be heated, with Republicans calling for a broad-based tax cut and Democrats favoring a more targeted approach.

The tax reform proposal, which was introduced by Governor Pat Quinn, would cut most of the state's income taxes, while increasing sales taxes and other fees. The proposal was met with immediate opposition from both the governor and the Illinois Senate, and is likely to face significant resistance in the House as well.

Pollock firing discussed

By DANIEL HILBERT

The firing of State Senate Majority Leader Mark Pollock has sparked a debate in the Illinois General Assembly. The firing was announced by Speaker Michael Madigan, who said Pollock had been "out of line" in his handling of a recent controversy.

The firing of Pollock has raised questions about the role of the legislative leadership in overseeing and disciplining members of the legislature. Some Democrats have called for a stronger role for the Speaker in monitoring the behavior of individual lawmakers.

Groty, responding to a question by Redfield about the effectiveness of MSU's affirmative action program, said that the program was not hitting minorities and women but retaining them.

Groty, speaking to a question by Redfield about the effectiveness of MSU's affirmative action program, said that the program was not hitting minorities and women but retaining them.

The state board of regents voted to end new enrollments in the University's graduate programs in the arts and humanities. The vote was 3-2, with the votes of Groty, Redfield and Douds being in favor of ending new enrollments. The vote was met with immediate opposition from many faculty members, who said it was a blow to the university's reputation and its ability to attract and retain top talent.

Trustee Jack Strock, 88, said he did not need the investigation, saying the University should constantly study itself for possible deficiencies. The University should "be the appropriate source" to analyze the situation.

"U" officials respond to hiring accusations

U of Illinois officials on Thursday described the university's hiring practices as "fair and transparent," but acknowledged that improvements could be made.

"We take these issues very seriously," said Provost Steven Borko. "We are committed to ensuring that all hires are made on the basis of merit and qualifications, and that all processes are conducted fairly and openly."

The university has been under scrutiny in recent weeks following reports of hiring practices that were seen as biased and discriminatory.

Windmills, once a dominating source of energy in the United States, are again being considered as a source of energy for our cities. The latest study on windmills was conducted by a working team in Sweden and England. The research team concluded that windmills could provide about 20% of the nation's energy needs. The study was sponsored by the Swedish government and the European Economic Community.

MSU's millions might move the South African monster

It seems that the millions of dollars MSU has tied up in corporate investments has led to a certain sort of redistributing social value. MSU has not only grown to such proportions that they could be considered a bank, but also in a myriad of other ways. Indeed, MSU might actually corrupt corporate executives or financial managers into a rather shameful quagmire.

In the future, the Board of Trustees will seek to use their power and influence to further the goals of the university. However, the question remains: can MSU really change the world for the better?

Board shied away from obligation

The MSU Board of Trustees refused to approve an agenda change that would have allowed a public discussion of the Marquette Playhouse. Although the recent occupant of the university's programs' directorate, by refusing to discuss the issue at the Board's meeting, has created a situation where the Board's ability to publicly debate this issue is severely limited.

The Board has shown a continued lack of commitment to the University's mission. The Board's inertia is a testament to the continued failure of the Board to fulfill its obligations.

U.S. District Court Judge Richard Leon's decision to allow the Nazis to march in Chicago's Marquette Park was wise. He balanced the rights of the Nazis and the safety of the public. The court's decision was clear, and the Board should not be able to overturn it.

Judge shkeded to Nazis

It is unfortunate that the Board of Trustees has chosen to support the Nazis. It is a fundamental violation of human rights to allow such a group to march in a public area. The Board has failed in its duty to protect the safety of the public and uphold the values of the University.

VIEWPOINT: ARGENTINA

Festivities hide travesty

In Argentina, festive events often mask underlying problems. While the government may celebrate, the people may suffer. This is a common phenomenon in many countries.

Amnesty International argues that people in the Argentine President...

The documentation of human rights abuses in Argentina is essential. It is necessary to bring attention to the atrocities that have occurred.

VIEWPOINT: PERRIN'S JOB

A conflict of interests

It is unfortunate that the Board of Trustees has chosen to support the Nazis. It is a fundamental violation of human rights to allow such a group to march in a public area. The Board has failed in its duty to protect the safety of the public and uphold the values of the University.

Hannah Frey

It is not clear what evidence the Office of Human Rights has to support its decision. However, it is apparent that the Office has not been consistent in its approach to similar cases.

The Board of Trustees should be held to the same standards as the university itself. They have a responsibility to ensure the safety and well-being of the students and faculty.

On the other hand, it is clear that the University has taken steps to protect the safety of the students and faculty. The University has implemented policies to prevent similar incidents from occurring in the future.
SUPPORTERS NEED STATE VICTORY SOON

Time running out for ERA backers

WASHINGTON (AP) - With time in the legislative session that ended in a state Senate race down to the wire, Michigan's six Republican leaders agreed to join a primary for Senate leaders that would take place next Tuesday.

The race is the latest in a series of political battles in the state's history. The Michigan Republican Party has been divided over the past few years over the issue of women's rights and pro-choice laws.

In recent weeks, the party leaders have been battling over the issue of whether to endorse the Equal Rights Amendment (ERA), which would give women the same legal rights as men.

The Michigan Republican Party has always been divided on the issue of ERA, with some members supporting it and others opposed. The party's current leader, Rep. John Moolenaar, has been a vocal supporter of ERA.

The Michigan Democratic Party, on the other hand, has been a vocal opponent of ERA. The party's current leader, Rep. Jennifer Lyman, has been a vocal opponent of ERA.

The Michigan State Senate, which is currently controlled by the Republican Party, has been divided over the issue of ERA. The Senate's current leader, Sen. Mike Shirkey, has been a vocal supporter of ERA.

The Michigan State House, which is currently controlled by the Democratic Party, has been divided over the issue of ERA. The House's current leader, Rep. Darrin Camilleri, has been a vocal supporter of ERA.

The Michigan State Supreme Court, which is currently controlled by the Republican Party, has been divided over the issue of ERA. The Court's current leader, Justice Brian Zahra, has been a vocal supporter of ERA.

The Michigan State Court of Appeals, which is currently controlled by the Democratic Party, has been divided over the issue of ERA. The Court's current leader, Judge Michael Fugate, has been a vocal supporter of ERA.

The Michigan State Board of Education, which is currently controlled by the Republican Party, has been divided over the issue of ERA. The Board's current leader, Commissioner Mary Jo Cherry, has been a vocal supporter of ERA.

The Michigan State Board of Regents, which is currently controlled by the Democratic Party, has been divided over the issue of ERA. The Board's current leader, Commissioner Mark Schlissel, has been a vocal supporter of ERA.

The Michigan State Board of Oversight, which is currently controlled by the Republican Party, has been divided over the issue of ERA. The Board's current leader, Commissioner Robert R. Taylor, has been a vocal supporter of ERA.

The Michigan State Board of Ethics, which is currently controlled by the Democratic Party, has been divided over the issue of ERA. The Board's current leader, Commissioner Joan Gadsby, has been a vocal supporter of ERA.

The Michigan State Board of Elections, which is currently controlled by the Republican Party, has been divided over the issue of ERA. The Board's current leader, Commissioner William M. Ford, has been a vocal supporter of ERA.

The Michigan State Board of Law Examiners, which is currently controlled by the Democratic Party, has been divided over the issue of ERA. The Board's current leader, Commissioner Rebecca S. Dallet, has been a vocal supporter of ERA.

The Michigan State Board of Medical Examiners, which is currently controlled by the Republican Party, has been divided over the issue of ERA. The Board's current leader, Commissioner Robert W. Califf, has been a vocal supporter of ERA.

The Michigan State Board of Pharmacy, which is currently controlled by the Democratic Party, has been divided over the issue of ERA. The Board's current leader, Commissioner Peter H. Durieux, has been a vocal supporter of ERA.

The Michigan State Board of Optometry, which is currently controlled by the Republican Party, has been divided over the issue of ERA. The Board's current leader, Commissioner Catherine A. Copel, has been a vocal supporter of ERA.

The Michigan State Board of Osteopathic Medicine, which is currently controlled by the Democratic Party, has been divided over the issue of ERA. The Board's current leader, Commissioner Mary Jo Cherry, has been a vocal supporter of ERA.

Brezhnev hits ‘Chinese card’

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Premier Leonid Brezhnev and President Jimmy Carter opened a major summit this week without much public fanfare, but the one, two, three of nuclear weapons are lurking in the background.

Brezhnev wrote to Carter in May, suggesting that the two leaders meet. That meeting was held Monday in the presence of a media select audience. Carter said today that he would not comment on the meeting, and Brezhnev said he would not comment on the outcome.

Carter said the meeting would be a "productive" one and that he would not comment on the outcome. Brezhnev said he would not comment on the outcome.

The meeting was closed to the media, but the two leaders are expected to discuss a range of topics, including arms control and economic cooperation.

Brezhnev’s reference to the Chinese card is not new. He has made similar references in the past, but this is the first time he has specifically mentioned it in a meeting with Carter.

The Chinese card is a term used to describe the idea of using China as a bargaining chip in negotiations with the United States. It suggests that the Chinese are willing to make concessions in exchange for the United States taking a more moderate stance on other issues.

Carter and Brezhnev are expected to discuss the possibility of a new round of arms control negotiations, which could be a significant step towards reducing tensions between the two countries.

Carter is also expected to discuss the possibility of a new round of arms control negotiations, which could be a significant step towards reducing tensions between the two countries.

"I believe in Carter; Tanzanian leader says"

WASHINGTON, D.C. — President Jimmy Carter has urged the United States and Soviet Union to work towards a nuclear arms reduction agreement.

The United States and Soviet Union have been engaged in a long-standing nuclear arms race, and both countries have said that they are willing to negotiate a reduction in nuclear weapons.

Carter has expressed concerns about the nuclear arms race and has called for a reduction in nuclear weapons. He has said that the United States and Soviet Union should work towards a nuclear arms reduction agreement.

‘Footlight’ for being a star! A hit for the mirror scene - As the Saturday Night News went to press - The Best of the New York Times - The Most Amazing...-

The Last Waltz documents the Band’s final performance at the Winterland Auditorium in San Francisco on March 30, 1976. Performing with the Band was a constellation of luminaries: Bob Dylan, Joni Mitchell, Emmylou Harris, Van Morrison, Dr. John, Jerry Garcia, Ron Wood, and Ringo Starr.

The Band’s final performance was part of the film “The Last Waltz,” which was released in 1978. The film captures the band’s farewell concert at the Winterland Auditorium in San Francisco, featuring guest appearances by some of the most famous musicians of the time.

Musically, the Band demonstrate that they are truly worthy of their international fame by taking the viewer on a musical journey through their own roots.

The film reveals the influence of New York rock and roll on the Band’s music, as well as the Band’s own influence on later rock musicians.

The Last Waltz was a very special event for the Band, and it is a treat for viewers to see the musicians who made music history on this night.

Neil Simon’s ‘Sunshine Boys’ is a superb new BoarsHead effort. The play features legendary actors Eli Wallach andSSID Abe Vigoda, as well as newcomer Brody Stevens.

Wallach plays the role of Vincent, a black and white nightclub owner in New York City in the 1940s. Vigoda plays Benjamin ‘Benny’ Greenberg, a detective for the New York Police Department.

The play explores the relationships between these two men, as well as their interactions with other characters in the play, including Daisy (played by Judy Kaye), who is a singer at the club, and Mr. Davis (played by Hal Linden), who is a policeman.

The play is set in the 1940s, and it captures the spirit of that time through its dialogue and setting.

The play received critical acclaim, with many reviewers noting its exceptional performances and its entertaining exploration of race relations and the social issues of the 1940s.

Sweet Alice’ first-rate film

By BILL DEFRANCISCO

Peter Medak’s ‘Sweet Alice’ is a first-rate film. The film stars Jodie Foster as Alice, a young woman who becomes involved in a series of dangerous situations.

Medak’s direction is masterful, as he skillfully guides the audience through the film’s twists and turns. Foster’s performance is outstanding, as she brings a depth and complexity to Alice’s character.

The film’s story is compelling, with a plot that keeps the viewer engaged from beginning to end. The film’s themes of identity, self-discovery, and the search for meaning are explored in a way that resonates with the audience.

Overall, ‘Sweet Alice’ is a first-rate film that should not be missed. It is a powerful and thought-provoking story that will leave a lasting impression on the viewer.

Gibson takes first step

BY MIKE BOCKO

The New York Yankees have an outfielder in Steve Gullett who is leading the league in hitting. Gullett, a native of Lansing, Michigan, was the Big Ten conference baseball player of the year for Michigan State University. Gullett is batting .353, with 10 home runs and 36 runs batted in. His batting average is second only to Lou Gehrig of the New York Yankees. Gullett was named to the American League All-Star team after the first half of the season. Gullett was also named to the All-American team by the American Baseball Writers Association. Gullett is expected to be a star in the major leagues for many years to come.

Grades take their toll; Spartans lose Russell

BY MIKE BOCKO

The Michigan State University baseball team lost to the University of Michigan, 5-3, in the semi-finals of the Michigan State University baseball championship. The Spartans were led by pitcher Dan Becher, who pitched a complete game and struck out 10 batters. The Michigan State University baseball team is now 26-13 for the season. The Spartans are expected to make a strong run in the Big Ten conference baseball championships.

HOSPITALIZED WITH BLEEDING ULCER

Mantle’s condition still improving

BY MIKE BOCKO

Mickey Mantle, the New York Yankees star outfielder, is now hospitalized with a bleeding ulcer. Mantle has been bedridden for the past several days. The ulcer is located in the stomach and is causing the player to feel weak and nauseous. Doctors are monitoring the condition closely and are hoping that Mantle will make a full recovery soon. Mantle has been a key player for the Yankees for many years and is expected to return to the lineup soon. The Yankees are currently leading the American League in the standings and are in a strong position to win the pennant this season.
Costume workshop held

BY DARLENE M. ENGLE

Artists, art lovers, students and others were invited to participate in the second Costume Workshop held June 20 at 10 a.m. in the Holding Center for Continuing Education at Michigan State University.

Costume area faculty at the Department of Human Environment and Design and History major students helped to prepare for the workshop.

Each topic was taught by a faculty member who was responsible for the research and guidelines of the historic art objects, and the director of the workshop helped to ensure that the correct information was taught.

The workshop was held in cooperation with others in the Exchange and Exchange collections with students of the Exchange and exchange collections.

The purpose of the workshop was to introduce people to the research and guidelines of the historic art objects, and to teach the workshop participants how to use them to create an accurate and useful workshop. \n

Nazi incident has implications

Shokie, ACLU suffered: Court battle may be real winner of court battle

A Chicago area Nazi sympathizer may be the real winner of a recent court battle, and the legal implications may be significant.

Shokie Stole, an East Chicago, Indiana man who had been convicted of violating the federal anti-cross burning law in a case involving swastikas on his lawn, was able to demonstrate in a recent court ruling that he had the right to express his views in a manner that others might find objectionable.

The court, in a recent opinion, held that the swastikas were not a violation of the law because they were not part of a larger act of cross burning.

Shokie's case is seen as a significant victory for those who believe in the right to express unpopular views, even if those views are offensive to others.

However, the case is also seen as a reminder that there are limits to the right to free speech, and that those limits must be carefully balanced against the rights of others.

The case is expected to have significant implications for the First Amendment, and for the future of free speech in the United States.

The ACLU and other groups are likely to continue to fight for the rights of those who wish to express unpopular views, even if those views are offensive to others.

The Shokie case is a reminder that the right to free speech is not absolute, and that there are limits to what can be said without infringing on the rights of others.

The case is expected to be closely watched by those who believe in the right to free speech, and by those who believe in the importance of protecting the rights of others.

The Shokie case is a reminder that the balance between the rights of the individual and the rights of the community is a delicate one, and that it must be carefully managed.

The case is expected to have significant implications for the future of free speech in the United States, and for the future of the First Amendment.

The ACLU and other groups are likely to continue to fight for the rights of those who wish to express unpopular views, even if those views are offensive to others.
