HPR course instructs students in resuscitation, injury treatment

Students at the Spartan Stadium, where 31 students were participating in a practical exam for the CPR portion of the two week course. Barnes explained, If chest and stomach movement or the sounds and feel of breathing are absent, rescue breathing is provided by mouth-to-mouth resuscitation, he added.

After four quick breaths, the rescuer takes a pulse. If a pulse cannot be found, rhythmic pressure on the victim's lower breastbone is applied to force the heart to pump blood.

CPR can be used in any emergency which involves breathing obstruction or heart stoppage, including poisoning, drowning, suffocation, smoke inhalation and heart attack.

But it is heart attack that is "lurking everywhere," Barnes said. At a Tiger baseball game in Detroit last week, a man sitting four rows behind Barnes suffered an attack. The victim didn't stop breathing, but Barnes used the first steps of CPR to help open the victim's air passages and ease his breathing.

"You never know when a loved one will stop breathing for some reason," he said. Barnes taught the "heart saver" level of CPR instruction, designed by the American Heart Association to stress the basic technique in six to eight hours of instruction.

The lecture emphasized "clean" living practices that can reduce chances of heart attack and stroke, Barnes said, including proper diet, exercise and no smoking.

A film, live demonstrations and mannequin training illustrated the procedure.

PLO takes blame for Jerusalem blast

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JERUSALEM (AP) — A powerful explosion ripped through a crowded open-air market in the Jewish section of Jerusalem on Thursday, just one day before the scheduled arrival in Israel of Vice President Walter F. Mondale. Two persons were killed and 47 wounded, officials said.

The Palestine Liberation Organization claimed responsibility for the mid-morning blast that blew apart a vegetable stand at the Mahane Yehuda market as Israelis were doing their pre-Sabbath shopping.

A small concrete building was destroyed and several adjacent stores and sidewalk carts were damaged.

"An underground squad acting inside occupied Palestine planted the heavy explosive charge in the Mahane Yehuda vegetables market in Jerusalem Wednesday morning," a PLO spokesperson said in Beirut. He said the squad "returned safely to its base inside occupied territory despite the enemy's security dragnets."

The PLO spokesperson said the attack "emphasizes the PLO's determination to escalate the armed struggle against our Zionist enemy from within."

Fruit, vegetables, clothing and wooden crates were strewn about the blast area. Police said a number of suspects were detained.

Within minutes of the explosion, the casualties were evacuated to hospitals by a squad of ambulances hastily assembled by the Magen David Adom, Israel's Red Cross, under a special emergency procedure. About 30 persons remained hospitalized Thursday, seven were hurt seriously.

"I heard a boom and then I was thrown back," one witness told Israel radio.

"Everything I was carrying was blown out of my hands. I heard screams and shouts and I got up and ran away."

Israeli police refused to say what type of explosive was used or how it was planted in the market.

Jerusalem Mayor Teddy Kollek, who visited the market after the explosion, said he thought the terrorist attack was linked to Mondale's visit. Mondale is scheduled to arrive in Tel Aviv at 2 p.m. local time 8 a.m. East Lansing time Friday for a four-day visit. He is to meet with Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Foreign Minister Moshe Davan to review political problems involved in resuming Israeli-Egyptian peace talks.

The market is located in West Jerusalem near the busy Jaffa Road thoroughfare and less than a mile from the walls of Jerusalem's Old City. The market is usually busiest on Thursdays as Jewish residents stock up for the Sabbath beginning at sundown Friday.

Mahane Yehuda was the scene of another bloody terrorist attack nearly 10 years ago. On Nov. 22, 1968, a parked car packed with powerful explosives exploded there, killing

Feds hail Bakke as pro-minorities

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
and UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

WASHINGTON (AP) — As the federal government sees it, affirmative action is alive and well. Allan Bakke notwithstanding.

Wednesday's Supreme Court decision, a victory for Bakke, was also a victory for the government's broad array of minority aid programs that can touch nearly every public institution and private employer.

federal officials say.

"This is the first time the Supreme Court has upheld affirmative action, and they've done it in about as strong a way as possible," Attorney General Griffin Bell said Wednesday.

"I believe that any controversy regarding the necessity for race-conscious remedies has been set to rest" by the court's ruling that such remedies are "necessary and constitutional," said Eleanor Holmes Norton, chairperson of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

She added that the affirmative action program used in the Bakke case was "quite untypical, and different from the kinds of programs used by the government."

The Association of American Medical Colleges Thursday greeted the Supreme Court decision in the case as one that should boost, rather than deter, the admission of minority students.

Most of the medical schools are using admissions procedures which we feel fall within the views of the court," said Dr. John A. D. Cooper, association president. Dr. John A. Gronvall, dean of the University of Michigan Medical School, said the decision provides institutions with "the opportunity to continue and expand their diversity. The responsibility is now on the medical schools to increase their opportunities for minority students."

Other educators across the country said Thursday that the court's decision will have little or no effect on their admissions policies. They said they encourage minority enrollment with affirmative action programs, but denied the use of racial quotas.

Most college and university officials believe the ruling will allow them to continue special minority programs, an Associated Press spot check showed.

"This decision probably will not alter the . . . admissions policies one bit," said Dr. Allen W. Mathies Jr., dean of the medical school at the University of Southern California.

Elaine Freeman, the Johns Hopkins University Medical School in Baltimore, said the school does not have a quota system.

Jerome B. Wiesner, president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, also said he believed MIT was in compliance with the court's ruling.

Tentative vindications voted for 'Koreagate'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House ethics committee has tentatively voted to clear several legislators of misconduct in connection with money they received from Korean rice dealer Tongsun Park, congressional sources said.

But the committee, troubled with attendance problems, has delayed a final vote until July 12 and has taken no action on staff investigators' information that four legislators may have violated House rules, the sources said.

tions on possible ethics violations stemming from alleged South Korean influence buying, the committee put off further meetings until July 11.

The sources Wednesday did not identify who may be cleared of misconduct.

Park has said he gave about $850,000 to 29 legislators, including 12 current members of the House, but he has denied he was an agent trying to buy influence for Seoul.

The sources say a 13th current legislator, Rep. William Broomfield, R-Mich., rejected a $1,000 contribution from Park and therefore is not under review by the ethics committee.

No decisions will be final until the committee takes formal votes on whether to begin disciplinary proceedings against any of the 12 legislators according to the sources, who declined to be named.

Rep. John J. Flynt, D-Ga., committee chairperson, told reporters that the deliberations have been hampered by lack of attendance and that the committee has had trouble mustering the seven votes needed for any action.

Flynt said he is writing letters urging all 12 committee members to be present for the vote on July 12.

Crim, Forbes claim to be cleared

By JOANNA FIRESTONE
MSU (UPI) — House Speaker Carl Albert and Rep. Joseph Forbes said today an investigation by Attorney General J. Kelley and the state police "laid to rest" allegations they were receiving bribes.

According to the state police and the general, the matter's been cleared of Crim, a Davison Democrat. "I'm concerned, it's been laid to rest."

Kelley said a lie detector test conducted on a former lobbyist concluded there is no substance to allegations that bribes were given to Forbes and Crim.

State Rep. Ernest Nash, R-Dimondale, told a federal grand jury that ex-lobbyist George Behrends told him nearly three years ago that $100,000 was given to Crim and Forbes to secure passage of a bill for chiropractors, whom Behrends represented.

"I can say little about it, other than they proved exactly what I knew they'd prove," Crim said of the investigation.

Kelley said Behrends, during the lie detector test, denied Nash's claim that the former lobbyist said he could "buy" legislation and knew of bribes.

But Nash also has undergone a lie detector test that showed he was telling the truth when he said Behrends made those statements to him.

Crim and Forbes were critical of "some members of the news media," whom they claimed smeared them by publishing Nash's statements without supporting information. "I'm still in shock by the allegations and these statements made by an individual," said Forbes, an Oak Park Democrat. "I'm sorry this has caused anguish to my family and anguish to the speaker's family."

"It's a sad commentary that two fellows like the speaker and myself, who've dedicated our lives to working in the service of the people and trying to do a good job, had to be treated this way by certain members of the press."

Crim said he did not fault Nash for going to the grand jury, but said Nash should not have spread the story to reporters and the news media, in turn, should not have repeated unsubstantiated hearsay.

He said news reports of Nash's statements were "played out of proportion." The investigation by the attorney general and state police was requested by Crim, Forbes and Gov. William G. Milliken.

Woman's body found near Holt

Lawrence Hospital officials have positively identified the body found Tuesday in a parking area east of Holt as that of Marita Choquette, 27, who had been missing from her Grand Ledge apartment since June 11.

The exact cause of death could not be determined, the autopsy report said. Choquette was the victim of stab wounds.

Lawrence Hospital pathologist Lawrence Choquette estimated the time of death was on Tuesday, June 14.

Lawrence County officials said the body was discovered by a farmer Tuesday morning. The body was badly decomposed. A dental identification came from dental records and a ring found on the body. Tracy Choquette, a receptionist at WKAR-TV where Choquette worked, identified the ring as belonging to the missing woman.

Lawrence County police currently have no leads in the investigation which began Tuesday when Choquette's parents reported her missing. Choquette did not show up for work that day, though police found her abandoned car in the WKAR parking lot.

Choquette began working at WKAR-TV as an editorial assistant two months ago. She had previously worked at the MSU Library for about eight years.

Choquette, an MSU graduate, was an active member of All Saints Episcopal Church in East Lansing and the Episcopal Ministry at MSU. She was a member of the choir and devoted a lot of her time to youth activities, fellow church members said.

She was the daughter of Henry Choquette, an Episcopalian minister in Fremont who retired about two weeks ago.

MSU woman attacked and raped

A 21-year-old MSU woman was awakened and sexually assaulted early Thursday morning by a white male who entered her east-side apartment, East Lansing police said.

The woman was bound at the wrists and ankles, gagged and blindfolded as she awoke just before the attack, which came at approximately 4 a.m. The man fled from her apartment immediately after the assault.

The victim was then able to free herself and contact police. She was taken to the Ingham County Hospital emergency room for examination and released shortly thereafter.

Police did not disclose the name or location of the victim's apartment complex.

The woman remained "quite calm" while relating the incident to authorities, police said. But because of the blindfold and the darkness of the room, she was unable to give police any further description of the attacker.

Michigan State Police tracking dogs were led into the victim's apartment, but could not turn up any evidence, police said.

The man is being sought on charges of breaking and entering and first-degree criminal sexual conduct. Police are continuing their investigation.

Hanoi, U.S. may begin business trading

HONG KONG (AP) — The first American business delegation to visit Vietnam since the 1975 communist takeover says Hanoi wants to put politics aside and start trading immediately if the United States lifts its trade embargo.

The five-member delegation from the American Chamber of Commerce said top Vietnamese officials repeatedly stressed their desire to deal with the United States when the five made a week-long trip to Hanoi and Ho Chi Minh City, formerly Saigon.

Chamber President Michael Emmons said the organization, which represents 390 American corporations, does not believe "that past and present political differences between Washington and Hanoi should prevent American companies from doing what we are supposed to do — free trade unencumbered by political restrictions."

The delegation met with Foreign Trade Minister Dang Viet Chau, Deputy Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach, Secretary-General of the Vietnam Chamber of Commerce Do Wuan Phuong and senior representatives of the various national import-export corporations and Vietnam's foreign trade bank.

Vietnam denies it launched invasion

BANGKOK Thailand (AP) — Vietnam denying its forces had launched a large-scale invasion of Cambodia said Thursday that Cambodian troops had made new forays across the border in the past few days and several hundred were killed in fighting with the Vietnamese defenders.

Western and other sources continue to maintain, however, that Hanoi's troops were engaged in stepped-up military activity inside Cambodia as well.

A Voice of Vietnam broadcast monitored here said the Cambodians committing crimes against the Vietnamese people had penetrated as far as six miles into southern Vietnam in the latest attacks and still held areas of Tay Ninh, An Giang and Kien Giang provinces.

Besides inflicting heavy losses the broadcast said the Vietnamese troops took many prisoners and captured a large number of weapons.

The official radio broadcast said Western and Asian news reports of an invasion by 70,000 to 80,000 Vietnamese troops were fabricated.

Entrepreneur refutes currency charges

MOSCOW (AP) — American business executive Francis J. Crawford said Wednesday he is innocent of the currency violation charges against him and he does not know why he was hauled from his car and held for two weeks in a Soviet prison.

But the International Harvester representative said he was well treated during his ordeal and is back at work in his firm's Moscow office, "trying to sell tractors."

"I fully state I am innocent of all charges the Mobile Ala. native dressed in a baggy brown business suit told Western correspondents at a news conference in the company offices.

"I do not understand nor maybe never will as to why I was detained in prison during this investigation. However I was treated satisfactorily during this period of detention. In all my years here I've considered myself in accordance with Soviet law," he declared.

30 people arrested in nuclear protest

WASHINGTON (AP) — The police arrested about 30 persons today who were protesting use of nuclear power in the United States.

In the tradition of street theater demonstrators feigned death from radiation and laid down on the sidewalk in front of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission's headquarters.

One protester announced to a crowd of nighttime sightseers that the deaths were symbolic of what would happen if a nuclear reactor melted down.

After singing "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" and explaining the actions to follow, a young woman cried, "Nuclear melt down — no evacuation!"

The protesters then wailed, waved their arms in mock agony and laid down on the sidewalk. About 30 protesters faked death, while another 150 watched.

Those who laid down were arrested and taken away in paddy wagons.

Senate Cuban diplomatic plan rejected

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department rejected on Thursday a Senate call for the United States to break its limited diplomatic relationship with Cuba until Havana pulls its military forces out of Africa.

A statement issued by department spokesperson Hodding Carter said the U.S. interests section in Havana is there "to protect U.S. interests, not Cuban."

The statement added that important U.S. interests would be damaged if the administration went along with the proposal approved by the Senate Wednesday by a surprisingly lopsided 53-29 vote.

Since the interests section was opened last Sept. 1, it has had "considerable success" in such areas as protection of U.S. citizens in Cuba and in organizing the repatriation of American citizens and their families, according to the statement.

Carter spends "nice day" fishing

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (AP) — President Carter spent the day deep sea fishing Thursday aboard a 50-foot power boat piloted by an admittedly nervous young skipper.

The president, wife Rosalynn, daughter Amy and Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus boarded the blue-and-white craft Gannet shortly before 9 a.m.

The president and Amy waved to crowds along the shore as the Gannet moved out of narrow Rudee Inlet for the open ocean, escorted by an 81-foot Coast Guard utility boat and a pair of 41-foot Coast Guard boats.

Carter, dressed in a denim shirt, jeans, and white shoes, told reporters, "There is no way we'll be back before 3 o'clock." "So you can soak up a little sun," added Andrus.

Coast Guard Lt. Fred Simpson said at midday that winds were 12 to 18 knots and waves two to three feet in Carter's general vicinity. "It's a nice day for fishing," Simpson said.

E. Europe involved in Africa

BERLIN (AP) — Communist East European countries are joining the Soviet drive for more influence in Africa and are pouring money, technology, weapons and military training into the area, an Associated Press survey shows.

Some experts say East European nations are used as surrogates in areas where the Soviets don't want to become directly involved.

In other areas of Africa, East European aid projects seem to stem from self-interest rather than an attempt to boost Soviet fortunes.

The survey, on two continents, found East European involvement in aid to both Marxist leaning and non Communist countries, and to guerrilla movements of the Third World.

East Germany is reported setting up security police organizations in Angola, Mozambique, Benin and South Yemen and is training glider pilots, maintaining military vehicles and providing youth organizations with "preliminary" training.

Poland is building a Libyan power station and has promised Nigeria some 300 geologists and technicians.

Czechoslovakia is lending Ethiopia $46.5 million to modernize and expand a variety of industries.

Hungary is loaning Tunisia $35 million mostly for agricultural development and is exporting whole factories to "less dependent on former colonial powers."

Bulgaria is expanding Mozambique's Limpopo Valley irrigation area from 75,000 to 785,000 acres and is building a hydroelectric dam at Massingir.

Romania is providing experts to help find and export gold and precious stones in the Central African Empire and to help find lead ore in Kenya and oil in Nigeria.

Western experts say East Germany apparently is taking care of Africa's badly wounded, just as it once provided hospital space for wounded North Vietnamese.

Some Western analysts see strong signs that staunchly pro-Soviet East Germany is becoming Russia's main helper in a long range move to build influence in Africa through satellite surrogates.

There is adequate evidence, one West German Africa watcher says, that Moscow and East Germany are teaming up "so that East Germany becomes active in areas where the Soviets don't want to burn their fingers."

Not all the projects promote the Soviet Union. Romania has the most independent foreign policy in the Soviet bloc and many of its aid projects serve its own interests.

Yugoslavia, whose Communist government has been independent since it broke with the Soviet Union in 1948, also aids African countries. It is reopening Angola's richest iron mine, closed since the Portuguese left in 1975, and has loaned Egypt $10 million for rural electrification.

Western analysts agree even East German motives in Africa include a dash of interest, including efforts to counter West German cultural and political influence.

East Berlin's first contacts included rebel movements in Angola and Mozambique. In both cases, the rebels took over and now are fighting anti-government forces of their own.

Justice William H. Rehnquist wrote for the court.

"To prove that he had pursued a course which would both enable him to achieve his own business goal and in addition allow him to consider the most important applications," Rehnquist said.

Rehnquist added that a racially balanced work force does not immunize an employer from liability for specific discrimination, use of statistics "is not enough" on the issue of intent when the issue is yet to be decided.

It is apparent that the burden which shifts to the employer is merely that of proving that he based his employment decision on a legitimate consideration, and not an illegitimate one such as race.

good Marshall and William J. Brennan Jr., qualified their support.

The court ruled that once a person establishes an initial showing of differing treatment, the employer may defend himself against bias charges by arguing that he had no discriminatory motive and that statistically he has not discriminated against that person's race.

The court ruled Thursday that once a person establishes an initial showing of differing treatment, the employer may defend himself against bias charges by arguing that he had no discriminatory motive and that statistically he has not discriminated against that person's race.

Washington (AP) — An employer charged with illegal racial discrimination may use an array of defenses, including its own statistics, to prove that minorities are well represented in its workforce, the Supreme Court ruled Thursday.

In a decision giving significantly increased weapons to employers sued for alleged employment bias, the justices reversed a lower court's ruling that a Chicago masonry firm discriminated against black bricklayers.

Though couched in a technical interpretation of a portion of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, the court's ruling could have a substantial practical effect for blacks and other minorities seeking employment equality.

It could, as well, affect the mounting numbers of job bias lawsuits filed by women.

The court's main holding in the case drew the support of all nine justices, but two, Thur-

Court says federal officials accountable

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, rejecting the Carter administration's "absolute immunity" arguments, ruled Thursday that federal officials may be sued if they deliberately violate a person's constitutional rights.

The decision could have an immediate effect on a series of pending civil lawsuits against top ranking officials of the FBI and CIA accused of violating constitutional rights by approving illegal wiretaps and break ins.

"It makes little sense," Justice Byron R. White wrote for the court, "to hold that a government agent is liable for warrantless and forcible entry into a citizen's house in pursuit of evidence, but that an official of higher rank who actually orders such a burglary is immune simply because of his greater authority."

Voting 5-4, the justices held that all federal officials except those who function essentially as judges rather than administrators can be held accountable for unconstitutional ac-

Business deals not fair for women, Carter says

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter has accused the government, educators and financial institutions of bias against businesswomen.

He promised action on a task force report urging increased government help for women business owners, saying they face discrimination when they attempt to borrow money to finance their ventures.

"I don't think there's any doubt that a federal agency or private lending institution, an institution of higher education, has an almost innate feeling that a business investment would best be made through a man rather than a woman," Carter said Wednesday. "It's not fair. It's not deserved. There's no reason for it. But it exists."

The task force urged a Census Bureau survey to count female-owned businesses. It also requested a computerized directory of them, and suggested increased federal purchasing from them.

Tisch leads state tax drive

Group seeking reforms by calling for amendment

By PATRICIA A. EISELE

California taxpayers dumped tea, "right well," sums up the cries of those who are in favor of the coalition property tax reform in Michigan headed by Dr. Robert Tisch, Michigan Drain Commissioner.

The non-partisan group has been circulating petitions to amend the Michigan constitution. About 300,000 signatures are needed for a referendum. At last count the signatures exceeded half of those needed.

In the past five years, Tisch has been urging legislators to "cut this tax monster off at the pass." Legislators have told him they cannot because of the law.

This year, with his own money and that of supporters, Tisch decided the best way to change the system was to make change constitutional amendment rather than legislative refusal to pay taxes in Michigan.

The proposal accepted by legislators would increase tax assessments next year in Michigan to two and one-half percent, and increase the state income tax to 5.6 percent. A 1 percent surcharge would be levied on special programs.

was using the "meat ax" approach Tisch quickly responded, "Hell no, all I want to do is take a pipe wrench and tighten up the leaks. I want to peel off the fat." He continued, "Layers upon layers of people duplicate each others' job, not to say hate people who work for the government, but hate all of us paying for them doing nothing."

Tisch said he feels compassion for the aged, handicapped, and the young people, but continued, "Most people working for government can work for private industry if laid off."

Tisch said California banks have computed average mortgage payments for the state's residents. Results showed that Californians pay $50 less per month than residents in Michigan, Tisch said.

He continued that when comparing the two states, Michigan residents pay property taxes which fall into the second highest group in the United States.

Tisch said he wants to know if Michigan is going to continue to have taxation without representation and if the state's residents will continue to "be as sheep before the Milton C. Tim wolves."

The media has reported that California is supposed to be in horrible shape, Tisch said. We Michigan citizens have been convinced that we aren't in bad shape," Tisch complained.

As former school board president, city assessor, city judge and police officer, Bob Tisch said the state commission is not complying with their own rules.

He doesn't feel his views are drastic or controversial in any normal common sense. Tisch said, "For information, I just want to take what the House of Representatives says is the minimum reform package and then square it with the law because I know there are some laws."

'U' programs attract most money ever

By DANIEL HILBERT
State News Staff Writer

The $72 million in state money for money the University has received in gifts, grants and scholarship positions over the last year in its history.

John W. Wilson, president of research and grants, said the total amount of money received in the last year was $72 million, which is a record for the university.

He emphasized, however, that money must be used to support research, also helps support other programs.

Wilson said that about a third of our grants are given to support their graduate research programs.

He reported that in spring 1978 there were 1,100 grants to students on research scholarships. With an individual half-time grant of $8,000, that's a total of $8.8 million in extra money for those students.

Wilson said that the amount for scholar-ship and fellowships was about $7.5 million, which brings the total amount spent on students to $12.5 million of the $72 million in total gifts.

He noted that funds from federal sources are used to support the cost of some student and MSU educational programs.

Grievance hearing to be closed

MSU faculty member Michael Blatt was notified in a letter sent April 6 that Jost would be dismissed from his position at the MSU plant laboratories.

Blatt, an associate professor of botany and genetics, was notified in a letter sent April 6 that Jost would be dismissed from his position at the MSU plant laboratories.

Blatt said he felt Kinsinger did not have the power to reassign Jost, who is a tenured faculty member.

- Request medical leave.
- Voluntarily resign.
- Face dismissal by the associate provost.

Blatt said the dismissal involves violation of due process. He claimed Jost never received reason for his dismissal.

Blatt also said he felt Kinsinger did not have the power to reassign Jost, who is a tenured faculty member.

Under the rules of the interim faculty grievance procedure, either party in a grievance case may close the hearing to the public simply by request.

Patric Larowe, faculty grievance officer, said he did not have the power to open the hearing.

"I feel restrained by this procedure," he said. "But those are the rules."

Jost said he felt Kinsinger's move was a violation of due process.

'U' energy program saves money and fuel

By PAUL COX
State News Staff Writer

MSU has experienced a 35 percent reduction in fuel consumption over the past seven years because of an energy conservation program. Howard Wilson, director of MSU building services, said.

The 35 percent savings comes from total fuel burned "as a function of weather, space and population," Wilson said.

The savings is not only beneficial from a conservation aspect but from an economic standpoint as well, he said. Wilson attributed most of the energy savings to building services programs.

"Most of it the energy reduction is from things we have done to control the system. We are also getting a good degree of campus cooperation, but we could get more. We want people to eliminate waste," Wilson said.

A coal burning central power plant provides MSU buildings with electricity and steam for heating and cooling. Wilson said coal prices rose 20 percent this year, adding $1 million to the MSU fuel bill.

If MSU had not implemented an active and successful energy management program over the past several years, our fuel cost would have been another $2.5 million higher,"

Affirmative action should not need legislative prod

Despite the trend of self-reliance the University seems to be pursuing as a means of existence, such as the $17 million Enrichment Program and the MSU Foundation, we are still Michigan State University. That concept is embodied in the land-grant philosophy upon which the University was founded. We are of and for the people of Michigan. The state Legislature theoretically speaks for the people. Thus, the people of Michigan want to know why MSU's hiring statistics are not in line with the expressed goals of the people — goals the University is obligated to follow by virtue of the fact that it gratefully accepts every annual appropriation.

When the Michigan Legislature's Joint Committee on Affirmative Action asked MSU representatives that very question last Friday, the only response that they could make was a rather understandable, "we don't know." Of course those weren't their exact words, but in effect, what else could they have said?

Institutional discrimination is a phenomenon that does exist — at MSU and everywhere. But the very nature of it having been institutionalized makes it a nearly impossible thing to point to. Combating it would be hard even if it could be defined and isolated. Robert Green, dean of the college of urban development, said as a spokesperson for black faculty in 1969 that, "We will bring down and stop any racism that exists in this University." A noble goal if ever there was one, but nothing was ever closed down. And institutional, racial and sexual discrimination does still exist.

Rep. George Cushingberry Jr., D-Detroit, never really questioned the intention of MSU to meet affirmative action goals. He merely looked at the figures provided to him by the University and concluded that "they don't look good." We also believe that as an institution, MSU is committed to equal opportunities but we cannot be quite so diplomatic in our conclusion. The figures are terrible.

Ralph Bonner, assistant vice-president and director of human relations, lamented to the Committee that, although a "reasonable percentage" of minority students enroll as freshmen, many fail to attain a degree or continue into graduate school. Cushingberry we might not look so bad compared to all the rest. We should be putting the rest to shame. Our experience should be one that can be waved like a flag — a banner under which all else should strive.

But sadly, that is not the case. Instead of proudly pointing out our accomplishments, we have to put our tail between our legs and whimper. We don't even have an excuse.

Ralph Bonner

countered — and we agree — that the focus of combating institutional racism and sexism should start at the dean level instead of the administrative level. It is one thing to have a stated policy that complies with stated goals — it is quite another thing when the policy becomes an end in itself and the realities that exist are ignored.

Cushingberry hit the nail on the head when he chastised the University with, "If (MSU) is really serious about affirmative action, you will take extra steps." How true. MSU should be leading the fight for affirmative action, not explaining to the Legislature why goals haven't been met. The University should be setting an example for all other Michigan universities instead of hoping that Cushingberry's final request to Bonner was that the University prepare a report for the Joint Committee to explain the University's procedure for hiring and placing of administrative positions. MSU was given until the beginning of next week to submit the report, which is a fine idea, but we seriously doubt that any insightful answer to the problems facing MSU will come of it. Instead, we feel that it will simply be a re-affirmation of the obvious; on paper there is nothing unethical about the University's policies.

The problem, as Cushingberry pointed out, is personnel. Only a concerted effort by administrators to weed out weak links will make affirmative action succeed.

Begin must start bending

Israel's Premier Menachem Begin, with his stiff stand and hard line, is suffering an alarming drop in support both in his home country and in Washington. His refusal to moderate Israel's policy on possession of captured Arab territory in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip is perhaps the most important factor contributing to the current breakdown in relations between the U.S. and Israel, not to mention between Israel and Egypt.

Two months ago, Washington asked Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan to indicate whether Israel might be willing to commit itself to settling the final status of the occupied territories within five years. After a time — presumably in which Begin's government tried to come to an agreement on an answer — Israel sent to Washington a muddled worded message to the effect that it was unwilling to give up the territories at any price.

Even in Israel, this move was blasted by the public, the press, and even members of Begin's own cabinet. Defense Minister Ezer Weizman, of the opinion that the decision would only bring on more war with the Arabs, fumed out of the Knesset shouting, "I will go and prepare the army for the next war."

Begin's position constitutes, for all practical purposes, a refusal to negotiate control of the territories. It seems apparent that the only way he will give them up is if they are forcefully wrestled from Israel. Given the adamant position of, for instance, the Palestine Liberation Organization — which Begin has refused to recognize as a potent Arab voice — the situation could conceivably enough pressurize into the outbreak of war.

From a sympathetic standpoint it is perhaps difficult to criticize Begin's staunch idealism, for there is no question that his intentions are honorable and that he has a deep feeling for the welfare and safety of his people. But his recent misguided decisions are being made blindly. If the real safety of the Israeli people is to be secured, Begin must learn to bend a bit to the growing force of the wind.

RENALDO MIGALDI

Eyebrows and time. easy come, easy go

Wow, we're having a good time up here in the State News Bluesroom high atop the beautiful Stupid Services Building on a lovely sunny June afternoon when the birds are out and the ducks are quacking and the bodies are bronze outdoors — I should be out there, but instead here I am typing a column that my editor is expecting me to have finished by two p.m. which is roughly one half hour from now.

(Keep typing, Renaldo, you're doing fine.)
A former staffer who quit at the end of spring term is up here hanging around and giving us all a hard time. Ha, ha, ha. He has just told a female staffer, who is in a weary mood and working hard on her story for tomorrow's paper, that she plucks her eyebrows too much. Wow, she's laughing. It evidently broke some tension, hey? I'm reminded of the time I told a certain highschool classmate of mine that her eyebrows were plucked too much. It was at a party and we were both a bit inebriated. She slapped me in the face. Honest! That was over five years ago.

Five years!
Good lord, where has the time gone?
And isn't that a horrible cliché? "Time flies." But, as a very wise friend once told me, "All the old clichés are true. That's why they're clichés."

I read something interesting the other day in a back issue of Psychology Today. It said that the reason why time seems to pass faster and faster as we get older is that the part of our mind which perceives and measures long stretches of time uses a very basic yardstick to do so: the length of our own life. Hence, when we are seven years old, a year represents one seventh of our lifetime and seems like a lot more than it does when we are twenty — at which time it represents a mere one twentieth of our lifetime. And when we're sixty, a year is practically nothing for us.

Once I told my father that I was sometimes haunted with feelings about one day getting old and dying. He seemed to concede he may have been right about that. But the fact was that I won't be 21 forever. Time doesn't stop.

When I am thirty, I hope to be financially secure, to have a good writer. When I am forty I hope to be eminent among acquaintances, dearly loved by a few close friends, and a better writer than I was at thirty, a masterful snapper of heart, to make them shed tears and/or laugh hysterically at which could well turn out to be as cold and sterile as the steel surgeon's scalpel.

It's two p.m. and my editor is glaring at me. Excuse me a count how many lines I have.

I long for some kind of basic freedom. I long to be able to mesh minds with another human. I long to eat a complete dinner for three at Imperial Garden all by myself, and still room for the enchilada plate at El Azteca. I long to be able to indulge myself in endless hedonistic sexed delight every day a week. I long to be able to give it, and everything else, up.

I long to have God come down in all his power and glory and me exactly what to do with my life. And for his part, I'm 100 percent compatible with my own piddly wishes.

Cutting taxes will cut off education

Much as I agree that the expected effects of Proposition 13 are as welcome as a stampede of black cats on Friday the thirteenth, 13's ramifications for us, the MSU students, bear more than a few lines in the State News.

It is aggravating to note all that can be said is tax reform is needed, the significance of "Idealistic libertarianism," and the "scary reality" of Howard Jarvis, in a matter that concerns the future of human beings here and now.

It is almost certain that tax limitation will be on the November ballot in Michigan. In many ways it is worse because the measure not only seeks to limit property taxes but also state sales and income taxes.

When a limitation is placed on state taxes, or funding as is the case, a limit is automatically placed on state programs, because a state cannot deficit spend for long. To avoid overspending generally means a cutback in programs. A catch phrase if ever there was one.

First, the cutbacks hit the welfare programs, but this doesn't hurt the program. What isn't alive can't hurt. But it decides how well the most powerless element in American, the poor, exists. These people will hurt.

Next the taxpayers will hit education programs. If tax limitation passes in Michigan, the potential victims will include the students of MSU. The people who can't meet rising costs will be hurt by the abrupt end of their college career goals.

But as a student I'm not supposed to be powerless. There are many student organizations that supposedly represent me. Some feel that this is going to be an easy summer because there isn't that much that needs to be done. Such as with ASMSU.

We don't encourage that view, unless of course, MSU wants a Michigan version of Proposition 13 to pass in November.

The black faculty noticed it first

They say the cow meets its tail more than once and it looks like MSU has met theirs a second time. The Joint Committee on Affirmative Action has finally discovered what the Associated Black Faculty of MSU learned months ago.

Rep. George Cushingberry has the crackdown on MSU's lax affirmative policies is necessary. He's also appropriating funds to MSU via Legislature hasn't helped remediate situation. MSU still sits back and haunches, with Bonner in the lead course, and neglects the steps required to actively recruit, maintain, and promote women. It's too bad my alma mater be caught with its pants down in an embarrassing situation but I'm surprised.

With 9.5 percent of minorities and lower non-academic levels of employment out of 40 people employed in the administrative professional level, only 1 minority and no women employed. It's no wonder the government itself hasn't sent Bonner needed stringent notice he received Cushingberry. I agree with Cushingberry when he says "If MSU is really serious about affirmative action, they'd take steps."

Not being an impossible task, Bonner been requested to submit to the commission a report on the total amount MSU spending on building contracts and the percent of used in contracting with minority companies. Cushingberry might find out "minority companies" is a new term. Bonner, Bonner has been given 10 days to submit the information, had it been he'd only been given five.

Perrin refutes editorial with accusation

Without bothering to refute the many distortions in the polemic published on the editorial page of the State News June 21, I must call attention to a particularly shameful violation of journalistic ethics. It was truly deceitful to attempt to "prove" that I am opposed to affirmative action by extracting two sentences from a lengthy article I wrote for the Washington Post nearly three and one half years ago.

Taking those words out of context was dishonest and a flagrant abuse of editorial license. The least you could do would be to reprint the last five paragraphs of the article and let your readers judge it for themselves.

Robert E. Perrin
Vice-president for University and federal relations

Editor's note: The quotes we used were taken from the first paragraph of the Washington Post viewpoint. Below are the last five of the same.

By ROBERT PERRIN

Here, then, is the real danger of the federal government's blanket approach to the problems of "excluded" groups.

The over use of affirmative action is devaluing the currency of equal opportunity commitments. As employers attempt to draw up, and then carry out and defend, plan after plan dealing with the recruiting, hiring and upgrading of such diverse categories as minorities, women, ethnic and religious groups, the handicapped and now veterans, the necessary moral commitment will become lost or impotent in a bureaucratic maze.

As a result, the effectiveness of endeavors to meet the very real employment problems of these groups can only diminish. The people covered by the plans will continue under the illusion that they have some special assistance until, inevitably, expectations collapse. The collapse will be especially hard as rising unemployment shrinks the job market.

Up to a point, affirmative action has had its beneficial effects. It has forced employers to review the means by which they recruit, hire, promote and establish job qualifications, with the result that many artificial barriers and attitudes affecting women and minorities have been removed. Certainly, the quaint academic hiring procedures long indulged in by higher education have undergone a welcome modernization, and the colleges and universities are the stronger for it. If nothing else, the requirement that job vacancies be posted has opened up many new opportunities for those long disenfranchised employment market.

But it also can be argued that the enough laws now on the books, such as the Civil Rights Act of 1964, the Employment Opportunity Act, the Pay Act, the prohibition against discrimination because of age, sex, together with enforcement arms, as strong legal foundation for equality and compliance.

So before affirmative action is cast the ultimate absurdity with, say, a plan required for WASPs and "all of it is time to refocus on the real problems and their solutions. These will not come from statistics or a preoccupation competing goals and plans, but from a as well as a legal compunction to act

'U' prof named to post

ST. LANSING (UPI) — Smuckler, professor of science and dean of international studies at MSU, has been named director of the planning office for establishing the Foundation for International Technological Cooperation.

The foundation was announced by President Carter in a speech to the Venezuelan Parliament in March as a means of improving technological cooperation with developing countries.

Smuckler's appointment, effective Aug. 1, was announced Thursday in Washington.

He will take a year's leave from his dean's post at MSU.

MSU passed the $52 million mark at this month's MSU trustees meeting when the trustees accepted over $5 million in grants and scholarships.

For 1976-77 was $48 million, with $41 million the year before.

MSU attributed the boost in contributions to the effective MSU Enrichment Program for the construction of a new Arts Center and additions to the library and museum.

The importance of many of the programs MSU is sponsoring also helped to garner funds which put MSU past the $50 million mark, Cantlon added.

Health, environment and food programs are being expanded that they helped attract a great deal of financial aid from outside the University.

Two years ago to predict what contributions might be like next year, Cantlon continued, but he said there have been cuts in budgets for programs that allocate funds to MSU.

Two Achilles are too alike

MIAMI (AP) — Here's a tale of two Achilles "Augie" DeVitas. Both are 64 years old, non drinking, non smoking, non related. In addition, they're both natives of Paterson, N.J., who moved to South Florida 20 years ago.

"Our lives are so parallel that sometimes I wonder what the guy upstairs is doing. I think God is having some fun," says the first DeVita, who is a rubber company president and a Hallandale resident.

The second DeVita, who lives in Hialeah, lives, eats and preaches from a tricycle. He carries all his belongings on his bike and in a two-wheel trailer he pulls behind it. "DeVita" means way of life. This confusion has been our way of life so I'm used to it," he says.

For more than half a century, the similarities between the two men have caused embarrassing mixups.

Love's living legend returns

By DAVE DIMARTINO
State News Reviewer

Who is Arthur Lee? Arthur Lee is a true hero, a rock star who's produced a large volume of superb recordings as a legacy and then seemingly vanished off the face of the earth.

Lee was the founder of Love, a Los Angeles based mid 60s band that first hit the airwaves with a sizable hit, Burt Bacharach and Hal David's "My Little Red Book." Aside from "Seven and Seven Is," a regional hit in various parts of the country, the band never had another radio hit, though they certainly deserved one.

Love did, however, produce several albums that were exceptionally fine. One of them, Forever Changes, happens to be my personal favorite of all time; the others, despite a continuing series of personnel shifts that changed the band with every LP, were never less than superb.

Lee was and is a fascinating figure. A black man born in Tennessee, he came to Los Angeles and for all intents and purposes spent a great deal of time trying to be white. He straightened his hair, bought suitable hippie garb and started a rock 'n roll band.

Lee's maladjustment to his life situation made him the perfect rock 'n roll hero, a real rebel with a cause whose anger only showed on recordings and during live performances. His "drug problem" — in quotes because Lee's creativity never seemed especially hindered by his exotic appetites — only enhanced his reputation as a true rock 'n roll thug.

ARTHUR LEE

*I do wonder. Just us.
Do you know the secret? Happy you.*

After Forever Changes, what was left of the original Love broke up, leaving only Lee to form a new band. Keeping the same name, he did so, and the new Love produced three albums — Four Sail, Out Here and False Start — which, while not quite as interesting as the original band's music, were by all means excellent.

After False Start — an LP which Hendrix fans should be aware of, as the guitarist is featured on the album's first cut — Lee disbanded Love and released Vindicator, his first and only solo album, on A&M Records.

All of this took place during a period of roughly eight years. With 1974's Reel-to-Real, Lee signed to RSO Records with a newly formed Love and produced a disc that was probably the low point of his career. Some of the album's selections were excellent, but a general air of patchiness — aided by the presence of three re-cut Love tunes and a remake of William De Vaughan's "Be Thankful For What You Got" — made the LP less than inspirational.

And now, four years and several strange stories later, Lee is back. Maybe.

Some of the stories: In an interview with Trouser Press magazine, no less a cult hero than John Cale told an interviewer about his attempt to produce an Arthur Lee album for Warner Brothers several years back. His comment, if I remember correctly, went something like this: "Arthur Lee is the kind of guy who'd probably stick a knife in your back in a second if he could."

And finally, best of all: Lee is supposed to have reformed the original Love — or at least gotten back together with Bryan MacLean, the vocalist and guitarist who helped make the original Love so great. Word is that the band is looking for a new label, and I, for one, hope they don't have far to look.

As for the subject at hand, Lee seems to have returned with a brand new EP on Da Capo Records (Da Capo being the name of Love's second album) which contains four excellent songs that sound very much like Lee during his Out Here period.

As the first new release by Lee in four years, the EP has much to recommend it. I'm not quite certain about its general availability — I got mine in an Ann Arbor record store — but it's very much worth searching out.

One way or another, Arthur Lee is going to make a triumphant re-entry into the music scene. This EP certainly won't do it for him, but if it puts him back in the public eye for even a few minutes, it'll have done its job.

This Weekend:

By JOHN NELSON
State News Staff Writer

So here we are, at bicentennial-plus-two-and-counting. With a holiday weekend ahead, no doubt many of you have made arrangements to take off on some sort of gala excursion or other — camping, visiting friends, or just goin' home.

What sort of good times remain for those of us left behind? I'm glad you asked me that (to quote the patron saint of aluminum siding). The answer, unfortunately, is "not much." Aware of the tendency for people to leave town for the holiday, few people or groups are willing to sponsor events, which sort of leaves the rest of us hanging.

THEATER — Neil Simon's The Sunshine Boys is being presented again this weekend by the BoarsHead Theater group. Their plays run Wednesday through Sunday, with ticket prices ranging from $3.75 to $5.50.

Another Neil Simon classic, Barefoot in the Park, is being presented by the Black Sheep Repertory Theater in Manchester. For ticket prices and showtimes call (313) 428-9280.

A little closer to home, the High School Workshop in Theatre is presenting a selection of ten short plays on campus tonight and Saturday. The plays are derived from such popular fables as The Robber Bridegroom and The Bremen Town Musicians, and will be staged in the courtyard between Kresge Art Center and Fairchild Theater. Performances begin at 8:30 p.m., and the admission is free.

MUSIC — Rock 'n rollers take note. WILS-FM is sponsoring a free outdoor concert on July 4 in Riverfront Park. The bands will be Emphasis and Straight Light. The music will start at 2 p.m.

Members of the Memphis Chapter of the Women Against Violence picketed outside the 12,000-capacity Mid-South Coliseum Wednesday evening shortly before the Rolling Stones performed there. The women's group was protesting what members said was the band's portrayal of women as masochists in their songs.

Dunkin' Donuts
2323 E. Michigan Avenue

*nightawks at the dinner at Emma's 49er, there's a real crowd of strangers around the coffee urn tonight
all the gypsy hacks, the insomniacs
now the paper's been read*

Every time I enter Dunkin' Donuts (the one on Michigan Avenue; the one in Okemos is a completely different story), I expect to see a jazzman tickling the ivories, to hear a blues saxophone come blaring my way, to see Tom Waits, cigarette and coffee cup in hand, sitting at the counter reciting his pseudo Beat poetry. You see, Dunkin' Donuts is right out of Tom Waits song, but for those of you unfamiliar with the man, better explain.

Despite the 52 varieties of donuts available, the tastiest one you can get at Dunkin' Donuts is still the great shoe of life. I never go into Dunkin' Donuts during the day. It just isn't as much fun. In daylight, it's the same but different — you like the daily "regulars" gathering, meeting Lou and Betty, and down the street for a cup of java and a round of BS. Besides, decadence is never as clear when the sun is shining.

Dunkin' Donuts is a 24 hour establishment, and its Michigan Avenue location often makes it look like a room moon glowing the lonely wee hours of a Lansing morning. This is the best time to go to Dunkin' Donuts. This is the time when a strange bird misfit aren't we all? often referred to as nighthawk bugs gather — many of whom seem to have nowhere else to go except to a room full of empty dreams and lost hope.

After midnight, Dunkin' Donuts is a very depressing place. It's so depressing that it often makes me feel good, and we leave it to the psychologists to figure that statement out.

*the classified section offered no direction it's a cold caffeine in a moaning cloud with the touch of your fingers lingers burning in my memory
I've been 86'd from your scheme
I'm in a melodramatic nocturnal scene
I'm a refuge from a disconcerted affair as the lead pipe morning falls and the waitress calls*

The weathered looking waitresses at Dunkin' Donuts seem to smile. Their faces never appear to express any sort of emotion whatsoever, and you realize they'd rather be somewhere (anywhere) else than at this job. Puffy faced men sit drinking their coffee as they read the paper or stare into space.

The younger men, waiting for their chance to run for nowhere to nowhere, sit pondering why they never see "chicks" like the Lansing playmate in this month's issue of Playboy. And even I wonder why Princess Caroline didn't go until she met me. An on duty cop is always drinking coffee Dunkin' Donuts, taking time off from protecting the people outside from God knows what there is to protect them from there.

As a gourmet, I should tell about the quality of the donuts coffee, but, to tell the truth, I don't remember. You see, they're good, but the only time I usually enter Dunkin' Donuts is late Saturday night after one too many drinks and one too many cigarettes at a local bar. My mouth feels like a desert, but at the time, I often feel like (in the words of Tom) I'm "the one who's sweeping up the ghosts of Saturday night."

And, in the words of State News residential poet Renato Migaldi (because he understands): "Play, saxman. PLAY!"

Assistant coaches give support

JERRY BRAUDE
News Sports Writer

Jud Heathcote was at the MSU basketball game for a 25.5 season and Big Ten title, he had support from assistant coaches on the bench — Don Monson, who was constantly pointing out, and Bill Berry, who was always flashing cue-cards to players.

"I think I have the two best assistant coaches in the country," Heathcote said. "They complement each other very well."

Although Monson and Heathcote have been close friends for 20 years, they didn't start coaching together until Heathcote came to MSU two years ago.

"Our coaching philosophies are almost the same," Heathcote said. "He is my right arm, so to speak."

Monson believes the similar outlook on coaching he and Heathcote share is a definite plus to the program.

"Through the years, we would get together and exchange coaching philosophies," Monson said. "Yet, it seemed like I was getting more from him."

Berry joined the Spartan staff last year, after serving as assistant basketball coach at California-Berkeley since 1972. The former MSU guard and forward also was a graduate assistant for the Spartans' basketball team in 1969.

"Bill has done a tremendous job," Heathcote said. "He has been very personable and has done a fine job in coordinating the recruiting."

After coaching in the Pacific Eight Conference for five years, Berry wanted the opportunity to coach in the Big Ten and work with Heathcote and Monson.

"Coming back to MSU was like coming home again," Berry said. "I have learned a lot from them, and, hopefully, it has been a two-way street."

Berry almost went back to California-Berkeley at the end of last season as it came down to him and one other person for the head coaching job. But Berry didn't get it.

Neither of the assistants have any specific assignments, but they strive to work together as a unit.

"We work together in all areas, except in a few detailed things like travel arrangements," Monson said. "Jud does work all of us pretty well."

Berry, though, does excel in the areas of scouting and recruiting.

"In recruiting, I look for players at a particular position and ability, which is pretty much what everyone else does," Berry said. "This year, we were

The NCAA tournament has been narrowed down to eight teams. The Spartans have a chance to go to the final four for the first time in 21 years. But what is head coach Jud Heathcote (middle) concerned about as he watches his team against eventual NCAA champion Kentucky? That his socks stay up. But Heathcote was selected Big Ten coach of the year for more reasons than just playing with his socks. And he gives a lot of credit to his assistant coaches, Don Monson (right) and Bill Berry (left), who did more during the season than just hold up cue cards.

Leagues won't merge

UPI Sports Writer

DETROIT (UPI) — The presidents of both professional hockey leagues scrapped Wednesday to add four World Hockey Association (WHA) teams to the National Hockey League (NHL) for the 1978-79 season.

But their amicable first time joint appearance indicated another try might be initiated by the WHA at the conclusion of next season.

Within the time frame imposed upon us, said John Ziegler of the NHL, said, "we did not find that common ground we hoped there will be no expansion of the league this season."

"I still believe in the one league theory," said Howard Baldwin of the WHA. "We are not going to concern ourselves for a while."

Edmonton, New England, Quebec and the WHA had applied to join the NHL, which decided the best legal way to get the situation was it would expand. There was a deadline of 4 p.m.," Ziegler said and in order to accomplish all the things that would have had to be accomplished there, just wasn't enough time."

Cincinnati of the WHA had granted the four clubs applying to the NHL an immunity from prosecution — provided the older league took action by 4 p.m. Wednesday.

"Our ability to continue past the deadline disappeared," he said. "We put our best effort into this. It isn't going to work. Now we're going about our own business."

"If we had continued, we just would have met in another week knowing that we would have had to meet again the week after that," Baldwin said. "The WHA is going to go about its business."

"Each team is committed to open this season," he said. "We have seven teams for sure, with the Houston situation still unresolved."

There were just too many issues in contention to be resolved in too little time. The emergency session of the NHL Board of Governors was convened Monday morning, with representatives from the WHA in attendance.

Students 'adopt' grandparents for 'U' program

By SANDY HOLT

Julie Harrison visits her "adopted" grandfather every Saturday. But he has some difficulty communicating, she said, because of a stroke that left him with hearing and speech impairments. "I've found that it's not the rapport that's so important," Harrison said. "It's when he squeezes my hand and looks up at me and says, 'You're coming back next week, aren't you?' That's what makes it worth while." Harrison smiles when she thinks of the four years she's spent participating in MSU's Adopt A Grandparent program. She spent the first three years with Pearl, an elderly woman whom Harrison said poured out her thoughts and feelings when they first met. "We became really close," Harrison said. "She got involved with my life, asked about my family — she called me her granddaughter." Pearl died a year ago and Harrison immediately filled the gap in her busy life with her next "grandparent," the elderly man who also looks forward to the weekly visits from his "granddaughter." Harrison will become one of the coordinators for the Adopt A Grandparent program this summer. Janice Buerker and Mary Arnoldi will join Harrison in the fall, when the three volunteers will become directors of the grandparent program at MSU Volunteer Services.

Current coordinators of the program, Debbie Kline and Dan Shapiro, have been training the three recruits to take over directing the 80 pairs of volunteers and grandparents. "Debbie and I thought they were specially responsible and all three have been volunteers for quite some time," Shapiro said. "At the present, we have more grandparents than volunteers," he continued. "Our volunteers pestered out on us when a lot of them had to leave for the summer. The grandparents are getting anxious on the waiting list, looking forward to meeting their volunteer."

Shapiro said the directors are looking for volunteers who are willing to make at least a one-year commitment. "But they usually stay with their grandparent for two or three years, until they leave the area," he said. "Hardly anyone drops out. We try to make certain the volunteers will continue as long as they will be living here." Prospective volunteers are interviewed and matched with grandparents sharing similar interests, Shapiro said.

Shapiro said senior citizens join the program because they are alone, have no family or just desire the long-term companionship offered through the unique program. "Sometimes the grandparents are skeptical and think that this is just another one of those social service programs," he said. He stressed the importance of a long-term relationship, which is something rarely offered through other senior citizen programs. "A lot of the grandparents just don't see anyone else except for the volunteer," he said. "If nobody visits you, you lose a lot of self-respect and pride. We help them feel like people again, get them back into the swing of things."

home, Shapiro said. The volunteers and grandparents become mutually supportive of each other, he added. The result is that the age group segregation often found in a college town is broken down and seniors and youth are brought together, says the program's literature. The grandparent program was started in 1972 by Marg Hartosek, who was inspired after attending a conference on aging in Washington. The program grew each year and in 1975 was presented the "National Volunteer Award" for an outstanding volunteer program by the National Center for Voluntary Actions. "They liked it because it could be easily developed into a nationwide program," Shapiro said. "And that's what happened."

Following an article in Woman's Day magazine in August 1976, MSU Volunteer Services was deluged with 700 requests from groups and agencies in 48 states, requesting information on how to start a grandparent program. A packet of information was sent to the social service oriented groups in response to the surge of interest. Shapiro said a follow-up questionnaire, designed to evaluate the new programs is planned by MSU's Volunteer Services for mailing in the fall. "We're anticipating another batch of requests," he said, noting that a short follow-up

School personnel confer at MSU to review skills

By JOANELANE

Over 600 maintenance and bus service employees came in all shapes and sizes Monday through Wednesday to Hubbard Hall to upgrade their professional skills.

The attendees at the School Plant and Transportation Conference were mostly men dressed informally in sport shirts and slacks with everything from white shoes to steel-toed work boots.

Bellowing laughter filled the hallways as brush cuts and beer bellies seemed to be the order of the day.

Ed Farmer, coordinator of the program, said the conference idea started about 45 years ago by 15 Michigan men. Those men, he said, were interested in improving the status of the school custodian.

"We have school systems here from Upper and Lower Michigan and even Indiana and sometimes Canada. The total fee for the program is $41 which includes room and board and a registration fee," said Edward Prins, who has attended the conference annually for 40 years.

"During the day group classes are held such as Floor Preparation, Heating and Ventilating, Air Conditioning and Summer Maintenance. Then at night we have bus tours of the campus or other entertainment for the groups."

The opening session of the conference included a welcome to the group by Howard Wilson, director of building services for the Physical Plant.

Wilson told the group the biggest problem facing schools today is the need for a good energy conservation program. He said costs have almost doubled in the last five years and in the future custodians will have to do more with less money.

A group prayer session and a reading of the "School Custodians Pledge" also opened the conference.

Earnie and Jerry Whiteley, brothers from Bronson, Mich., near the Indiana border attended the conference for the first time.

Jerry, 28, said, "The thing I found most interesting about the conference was that it had a lot of self-involvement. The classroom instruction was very helpful and the instructors were serious, but funny, too."

Both have been working less than a year but plan to attend next year's conference.

"I work in a high school and see the kids for about a half hour before they go home. I talk to them and just generally try to be a friend," Earnie, 21, said.

"I like the job," he said, "since no one is standing over me constantly telling me what to do or when to do it. The school system treats you good and since I have no real future plans I may be here for awhile."

Although the majority of the conference was male, approximately 50 women were present.

Shirley Perkins, from Woodhaven, Mich., said, "It doesn't bother me that I'm a minority here. I guess maybe, at times the men do get a little prejudiced, but it doesn't make me feel any less secure."

Perkins, a mother of five and grandmother of 10, said she especially likes working with kindergarten children. She said they love to help and often ask her if they can wring the mop and empty wastebaskets.

The conference ended with presentations of certificates of merit to each association member who has completed 300 hours of training in school plant maintenance courses.
