The Fourth in Lansing: sun, sans, music, games

By PAULA DIETZ and WAYNE LITTLE

State News Staff Writers

There's nothing like a Fourth on a warm summer day. People of all ages, races and colored toils to have a Somersby know on a backyard of green grass, happy ends, and good food. Everyone was having a good time at the Paces and Lansing's Riverfront Park. Turnout was great, and the weather was perfect for a day at the river. The Fourth in Lansing was a big hit with everyone who attended. The music was great, the games were fun, and the food was delicious. Everyone had a wonderful time. The games included the usual suspects such as tug of war, sack races, and water fights. The music was provided by various bands throughout the day. The weather was perfect for a day at the river, with clear blue skies and a gentle breeze. Everyone had a great time and it was a perfect way to celebrate the Fourth of July.

Committee endorses intensified farming

MICHIGAN (AP) — The Farmer-Congressional Committee of Northern Michigan, a political action committee of Northern Michigan agricultural officials, endorsed President Gerald Ford yesterday after they stumped up efforts to boost farming programs that they say have been "significantly weakened" in recent years.

"This is the beginning of the year," said the committee's chairman, "and we're determined to strengthen the role of the farmer in the government." Ford, they said, "will make a strong statement in his farm bill." The committee's endorsement came after a series of meetings with Ford in which they urged him to support a strong farm bill that would provide a strong start for the program.

First Amendment "chilled" by court ruling

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Supreme Court on Monday struck down a California law that would have limited the broadcasting of indecent language on television. The court ruled against the law.

California's decision in the case of a radio station in New York, which was barred from broadcasting sex-related material on its air, was described by the court as "a decision that affects the future of broadcasting." The court ruled that the law was unconstitutional.

Utility officials study power outage cause

(AP) — Utility company officials said today they were studying why a power failure that left much of the Northern California area without electricity last night struck a residential neighborhood.

"There should not have been the outage," said a spokesperson for Pacific Gas & Electric, which serves the area.

March, rally planned for Plains, Ga.

PLAINES, Ga. (AP) — Supporters of a black woman imprisoned for killing a white man in Georgia plan to march to Plains Tuesday to protest her imprisonment.

A coalition of black activists called the Committee of 100 to bring attention to the case of Ruby Bridges, who is serving a life sentence for the murder.

They said they are "very concerned about her case and believe she should be released." The committee also plans to hold a rally in Plains in support of Bridges.

Firefighters halt Memphis strike

MEMPHIS (AP) — Firefighters voluntarily halted a three-day strike yesterday, ending the protest against the city's newspaper union. Workers returned to their posts after the city's two major newspapers made significant concessions on their demands.

The workers began the strike on Monday, demanding better pay and working conditions. The city's newspapers have said they would not negotiate with the firefighters.

"We are satisfied that our demands have been met," said a spokesperson for the city's newspapers. "We believe a fair and reasonable settlement has been reached." The city's newspapers have said they will work with the firefighters to reach a mutually beneficial agreement.

Black youths’ suicide rates up

By MARCIA BRADFORD

A similar study, done by Beverly House, who recently completed her doctoral work in educational psychology at the University of Michigan, has found that education and self-esteem levels were common among blacks.

Kirk has been concerned that the young people at the state mental hospital are not getting the help they need.

The young people studied tend to achieve a good job as a result of gaining self-esteem, he said.

The problem of suicide among blacks and women is one under greater pressure to be solved.

In the meantime, Kirk is planning a suicide prevention program, which he said is the only thing that has changed in the last few years.

The number of black men who seem to think about suicide is increasing, Kirk said.

The study, which is the first in the country to examine the problem of suicide among blacks, was conducted by the Michigan Department of Mental Health.

Kirk said that the study is the first to examine the problem of suicide among blacks, and he said that suicide prevention programs are needed.

What the Court said, what people are likely to hear

When the decision finally came down, it arrived not with the overwhelming avalanche of disapproval that some, apparently or otherwise, had expected (a fate I have written elsewhere—perhaps too belatedly) — in a majority of cross-pressing opinions that simultaneously acknowledged the Court's doctrine but declared that it was no longer out of medical school, while differing both the constitutionality and the wisdom of the doctrine. The concurrence of Justices Breyer and Ginsburg.

The U.S. Supreme Court as presently constituted is a conservative court, and the members have no reputation for tendentious or imaginative constitutional issues. In general, they are known for their adherence to precedent. The majority of the opinion in the case was written by Justice Byron White, and the concurrence of Justices Breyer and Ginsburg.

The Court, in a 6-3 decision, ruled in favor of Harvard University's affirmative action policies. Justice White, writing for the majority, said that the use of race as a factor in college admissions is constitutional because it is necessary to promote a diverse student body. He also noted that the use of race is limited to a "precisely tailored” program.

Justice Alan D. Goldberg, writing for the dissenting opinion, argued that the use of race in college admissions is unconstitutional because it violates the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment.

The Court also ruled that the use of race in college admissions is a means-ends test, and that the University of Michigan's affirmative action program is narrowly tailored to achieve a compelling interest in diversity. Justice White wrote that the program is "narrowly tailored" because it is limited to a "precisely tailored" program.

Justice Stephen G. Breyer, writing for the dissenting opinion, argued that the use of race in college admissions is unconstitutional because it violates the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment.

The Court's decision was met with widespread criticism from both supporters and opponents of affirmative action. Supporters argued that the decision would harm the prospects of minority students, while opponents argued that the decision would harm the prospects of white students.

The decision was also met with significant public reaction, with many people expressing shock and surprise at the Court's decision. The decision has been widely criticized by civil rights groups, who have argued that the decision will harm the prospects of minority students.

Rolling Stones rock in Cleveland

By BILL HOLDING

The world's greatest rock band performed last Saturday at Cleveland Stadium, in one of the most anticipated rock concerts in the city's history. The Rolling Stones hit Clevel and, however, it was more than a concert. A Rolling stones tour has always been one of rock's biggest events, and it was easy to see why there were so many people there.

To get to a Rolling Stones concert in the '70s is to become immersed in a culture that defines rock in a modern context. A Rolling stones concert is a place to see and be seen, a place of adventure and discovery. A Rolling stones concert is a place to experience the music and the story of a band that has defined rock for a generation.

On this particular evening, the Rolling Stones were in Cleveland, and the city was ready.

The concert was held at Cleveland Stadium, a huge, outdoor venue that was perfectly suited for the Rolling Stones' performance. The stage was set with a backdrop of towering trees, and the crowd was massive.

The Rolling Stones, led by Mick Jagger, put on a show that was nothing short of amazing. The band played for over two hours, and the crowd was completely engaged throughout the entire performance.

The energy of the crowd was palpable, and the sound was incredible. The Rolling Stones' music was perfectly suited for the stadium, and the crowd responded with enthusiasm.

The Rolling Stones' performance at Cleveland Stadium was a moment that will be remembered for years to come. The band's commitment to their craft was on full display, and the crowd was treated to a truly unforgettable experience.

THINCLAD CHOSEN FOR TRIP

Flowers off to Europe

In NoA, Wilkens

WILKENS, Frank—The Michigan State Athletic Department has announced that Frank Wilkens has been chosen to represent the U.S. in the 11th annual Thindclad Singles World Championship to be held in Amsterdam, Netherlands, in late 1979.

Wilkens, who has been a two-time All-Big Ten selection and a two-time All-America selection, has compiled a 76-14-2 record in his 11th year of collegiate hockey. He was named to the All-American first team in 1977 and 1978.

Wilkens was the first player ever to score 100 points in a single season at the University of Michigan, and he has compiled a 42-16-2 record as a collegiate player.

The World Championships are held every four years and feature the top players from all over the world. The event is considered one of the most prestigious in international hockey.
Controversial play still irks Stanley

NEW YORK (UPI) - With Bob Gasley's comeback still on the line, the focus of fans and Scotland's Channel between New York and Detroit, joined hitter Mickey Haines, Tiger right fielder Mickey Stanley and right fielder Davey Johnson in the middle of the line. "I didn't see it," Yankee manager Billy Martin said of the play that helped turn the game in the 11th inning in the opener. "I thought it would have been a foul if the ball hadn't hit our shortstop."

"I think the umpires made a mistake," said Johnson. "They should have called it a foul ball."

Stanley, who was hit by a pitch near his hand in the first inning, was 0-for-2. He got his base hit of the day in the 11th inning, he reached first on a wild pitch in the first inning, and he grounded out to third in the 10th inning.

"I was irked by the decision," Johnson said. "I thought it was a foul ball, and I told the umpire."

C.G. Bartow, Violin Maker, presides at the tiny simple hang at 551 W. Washington Ave in Lansing. Artist, teacher, listener and performer might as well describe this man of diversity — and the life force on and on.

Literature of Mozart, Schubert and Lancing pass as mere music to Bartow and his fine students at the peppers studio home entitled the Institute of Professional Violin Maker. Bartow presides over a full orchestra comprised of electro-acoustic instrument makers, cancer specialists, physics institute, and the Midwest demand his instruments.

Bartow supports his large working group with the latest in electricity. His shop is the largest in the Midwest. He says it's two miles south of his house, but the two-mile drive picture has been described as indescribable and subject to custom order.

By coincidence, mathematics and physics with workshop techniques in the trade, Bartow instrument repair and organization.

Instructs a minimum of two hours daily, creating an instrument for each year of instruction. They provide their own materials and are free to test the finished products.

Bartow studied violin-making in Detroit for four years, and then moved on to Rochester for two years. Past graduates work is truly qualified for his service in Lansing, which he started in 1900.

He also has a storage room 'full of instruments' needing repair and for orders from customers all over the Midwest demand his instruments.

Bartow has been in business since 1936. As a liles, master propeller from his Porterfield airplane made one a year, a versatile array light aircraft. He has built the prototype, a prototype, a vintage, issues still and drops all propellers, he flies it with reading.

Along with Ewbank, hangar and home coming back Bartow says Bartow doesn't advertise his institute, but attributes his international reputation and esteem to the fact that "people like great artistry."

"People can come to the business and be getting wrong. Bartow may put price himself right."
