Israel calls peace pact too 'rigid'

By ELMAN AYAR

CAIRO (AP) — Israeli and Egyptian officials said Friday that they would try to work out the details of a three-day truce in the occupied territories later this month. The talks were aimed at the difficult task of turning an agreement into an effective cease-fire. The talks were called to discuss the implementation of the plan, which the Egyptians said would be aimed at reducing tensions between the two sides.

The Egyptians have been pushing for a truce in the occupied territories in recent weeks. They have said that they are willing to accept a truce that includes a withdrawal of Israeli forces from the territories. The Israelis have said that they are not prepared to withdraw from the territories until a final agreement is reached on the status of the territories.

The talks were held in Cairo and were attended by representatives of both sides. The Egyptians said that they were willing to make concessions in order to reach an agreement. The Israelis said that they were also willing to make concessions, but that they were not prepared to withdraw from the territories until a final agreement is reached.

The talks were said to have been very difficult, with each side pushing for its own interests. The Egyptians said that they were willing to make concessions in order to reach an agreement, but that they were not prepared to make any major concessions until a final agreement is reached.

Judge to rule on petition validity

By ANNE MARIE HINDO

U.S. Attorney General Robert Ruben is due to publicly meet with lawyers this week to deliberate over a voter petition seeking to force the recall of Michigan Governor James Earl Jones. The petition, which was submitted by students from Michigan State University, seeks to recall the governor because of his handling of the state's budget crisis.

The attorney general will hear arguments on the petition and then decide whether to grant it. If granted, the governor would be forced to resign or face a recall election. The attorney general has 30 days to make this decision.

Center selects director

By ROBERT O. NOLAN

The Michigan State University Board of Trustees has selected Robert O. Nolan as the university's new president. Nolan is currently provost at the University of Michigan.

The appointment comes after a nationwide search for a new president, which included candidates from both inside and outside the university. Nolan was chosen from a group of finalists who were interviewed and evaluated by a search committee.

The search for a new president began last year after the unexpected resignation of the previous president, James Earl Jones. The search committee, which included faculty, students, and alumni, conducted a thorough review of candidates and ultimately recommended Nolan for the position.

The appointment of Nolan as president is expected to bring stability and continuity to the university, which has faced several challenges in recent years.

Correction

It was incorrectly reported in Monday's Michigan State News that the new president, Robert O. Nolan, had a background in educational administration. Nolan has a background in both higher education and business administration, with experience in both public and private sectors.

Israel should not be in the U.S. at all, simply because the U.S. and the U.S.S.R. are the only two countries that have the power to destroy the world. The United States has been a very rich country for many years, but the Israeli people have been very poor and have lived in very harsh conditions. The United States has been helping Israel by giving them military and financial aid, but this has not been enough to make their situation better. The Israeli government has been very corrupt and has been doing things that are not in the best interests of the people. The Israeli government has been responsible for the deaths of many people and has been very violent. The United States should not be helping Israel in any way, because it is not the right thing to do.

However, the United States has been helping Israel for many years, and this has been very unfortunate. The United States should not be helping Israel, but it is doing so because it is afraid of what might happen if it stopped helping them. The United States should stop helping Israel and should not be involved in any way.

Social Security file safeguards need tightening, GAO reports

WASHINGTON (AP) — Safeguards for the Social Security Administration's $792 billion in benefits are inadequate, a government auditor said Tuesday.

The Social Security Administration, which distributes Social Security and veterans' benefits, is the largest recipient of personal information, the General Accounting Office said. The report prompted a response from the department's Inspector General, who said the agency was already working on the problem.

The GAO report, released Tuesday, found that the agency lacked a comprehensive plan to safeguard Social Security records and that its response to a 1978 strike by Social Security computer operators was inadequate.

The report also found that the Social Security Administration had not implemented a system to track the use of Social Security numbers.

The agency said it had taken steps to improve its safeguards, including hiring more auditors and increasing its spending on computer security.

Romantics single features fine Motor City power pop

by BILL HOLLENDAY

San Francisco Chronicle

Almost everyone in the rock world knows something about Motown, but few know much about the Motor City. That's why this week's release of "Telstar," a single by the Romantics, is an important event. The song is a cover of the classic 1960's hit, and it's a reminder of the Motor City's contribution to the pop music scene.

The Romantics are a Detroit-based band that has been active since the late 1970's. They have had several hits, including "Carol," "Lipstick on Your Collar," and "What I Like About You." "Telstar" is their latest release, and it's a departure from their usual sound. The song is a pop rock number, with a catchy melody and driving beat. It's a fun, danceable number that should appeal to fans of 1960's rock and roll.

The Romantics have been around for a long time, and they've built a solid reputation as a live act. They've played all over the country, and they've built a loyal following. "Telstar" is a great addition to their repertoire, and it's sure to be a hit with fans of 1960's rock and roll.

The Romantics are not the only Detroit-based band that has made a name for themselves. Other Detroit bands like the MC5, the Stooges, and the New Lords have all contributed to the Motor City's music scene. "Telstar" is a reminder of the city's rich musical history, and it's a testament to the Romantics' ability to carry on that tradition.

The Romantics are playing a series of shows throughout the Midwest this summer, including a stop at the01979 Motor City Music Festival. Be sure to check out their show if you're in the area. They're sure to put on a great show, and they'll have you dancing in the aisles.
