Pollock to join staff of rep as affirmative action adviser

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - Beirut's Christian community will protest the ruling of the Lebanese Supreme Court, which upheld a decision to admit two Muslims to the University of Beirut. The court ruled that the university had the right to exclude Muslims from its faculty. The decision comes just four months after the Supreme Court upheld a similar decision made by the University of Notre Dame. The court's decision was seen as a blow to the country's efforts to promote diversity and tolerance. The Christian community has long been opposed to the idea of admitting Muslims to the university, and they have been protesting against the decision. The court has also ruled in favor of two Muslims who were denied admission to the university in 1990. The decision has been criticized by many who argue that it is discriminatory and goes against the country's constitution, which guarantees equal rights to all citizens. The Christian community has vowed to continue their protests until the decision is reversed.

Beirut rioting 1982

The riots in Beirut started on July 23, 1982, and lasted until August 1, 1982. The rioting resulted from a protest by Christians against the decision of the Lebanese Supreme Court to allow Muslims to enroll at the University of Beirut. The protest turned violent and resulted in the deaths of several people. The government of Lebanon declared a state of emergency and imposed curfews in order to quell the rioting. The government also deployed military forces to the affected areas.

The riots and protests continued throughout the week, with clashes between Christians and Muslims escalating. The situation was exacerbated by the presence of Israeli forces in the area, which were involved in the Lebanon War. The Israeli forces were accused of supporting the Christian cause, which increased tensions and led to more violence.

By JULIO MEDIANO

Lebanese Christians are demanding the withdrawal of Israeli forces from the country as a condition for their participation in the upcoming election. The Christians, who form a significant portion of the population, have been excluded from the political process and suffer from economic hardship.

Lebanese Christian leaders have called for a boycott of the election, which they view as rigged against them. The Christians have also demanded that the Israeli forces leave the country and that their rights be protected.

The situation has escalated into a full-scale civil war, with Christians and Muslims engaging in a brutal conflict. The war has resulted in the death of thousands of civilians and the displacement of millions. The international community has been unable to intervene effectively, and the conflict continues to this day.
Israel rejects Sadat land plan

The talks between Israel and Egypt, which have been going on for several weeks, have reached a deadlock. Despite the efforts of the United States and other mediators, the two sides have failed to reach a comprehensive agreement on the future status of the Sinai Peninsula.

The Israeli government has refused to withdraw from the Sinai Peninsula, which it captured during the 1967 Six-Day War. Egypt, on the other hand, demands the full withdrawal of Israeli forces from the peninsula.

The U.S. government has been trying to broker a peace deal between the two countries. However, recent developments have cast doubt on the prospects of a peace agreement.

In a statement, Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon said that his government would not withdraw from the Sinai Peninsula until a final peace agreement is reached. He added that Israel would not be bound by any agreement that would compromise its national security.

Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, on the other hand, has expressed determination to continue the peace process. He has called on Israel to honor its commitments under the Camp David Accords.

The situation has become more complex with the recent escalation of violence in the region. Israel has launched air strikes against Hamas targets in Gaza, while Egypt has launched air strikes against militant targets in Sinai.

The U.S. government has called for a cessation of hostilities and urged both sides to return to the negotiating table. However, the recent developments have raised questions about the viability of the peace process.

The situation in the Middle East remains volatile, and the international community is watching closely to see if a breakthrough can be achieved.
Tax request debate

Developers of East Glen Apartments, a proposed low-income housing project in East Lansing, named board members for townships

Mediation Management Company and Federal Taxation Group have asked the East Lansing City Council to approve a proposal allowing them to use annual service charges to the city rather than property taxes for the construction of the 71-unit housing project.

Other East Lansing property owners calling the proposed tax bond a "fair" tax would raise the funds needed to build the project. The new apartment complex would be targeted at low-income people among the city's população.

The project was approved by the citizens of the township as part of a bond issue to build the new school district. In the bond issue, the township has agreed to enter into a bond act with the state and the city for the purpose of paying the construction and maintenance costs of the schools.

Community College. "This type of project is a way of making the project more feasible," Harrington said. The new facility will allow students to work while attending classes and will provide a way for the city to address its educational needs as well.

The new facility will provide new educational opportunities for students and will be a means of providing a more comprehensive educational program. Harrington said.

Bourne broke the rules, but no need for a purge

Probably the first item on a list of "What President Jimmy Carter needs most" would be for the White House to stop coming out with especially concerning citizen drug use. That on the heels of the recognition of thedot, Peter, it's just hard to find drug abuse, which is allowed to have a white paper, a consequence. It works could be just what is needed by the White House is the threat. Both statements about the other hour or drug use of White House sources have sent the usual mouth of mailers, clusters, druggies and non criminals in the attack on the White House.

The talk of the drug as non-drug is even more difficult. In this way, than the dangerous and sometimes will be the phrase used by alcohol and government officials.

We are not suggesting the use of drugs to access them. We simply maintain that what is done by individuals—no matter what their status in society—is private, and which does not affect the public in their own business. We recognize the fine line involved, especially with top government officials, but nevertheless the line exists.

Cartier at the crossroads

Carter's detriments will inevitably make the investment between Watergate and Nicaragua, a situation in the situation in which, to be separate. Watergate involved the case of a situation in the White House in plan and execute crimes of wine tapping, breaking and entering and the destruction of paper. Nicaragua, as it has so far unfolded, involves the private use of Green drugs by White House-staffers. The facts are that both drugs are enjoying increased popularity among all segments of society. These are facts which we neither condemn nor condone. The fact that this new use has extended even into the White House is not surprising or unexpected.

The charges against Bourne are a totally different story. He is accused of misusing his position as a White House official to help two individuals in pursuit of their personal interests. The only summed-up for action is the White House is taking responsibility for actions taken by staff during their White House activities; but with all the scrutiny limited to the president and the president he cannot be expected to babysit them in their new job.

The use of illegal drugs is different, from our view, than the extensive and sometimes will be politicians used in alcohol and government officials.

Scouts survive on (ugh!) snake dinners

The menu will include snake as the main course, well garnished with various wild plant matter.

That, along with rabbit, fish and may bugs—otherwise known as wild leeches—will be the diet for 48 girl scouts as they undergo a week of survival exercises on an uninhabited island in Lake Michigan.

The girl scouts, who are 15 to 18-years-old and are from 23 states, took a four-day condensed version of wilderness survival at MSU. The PRR 300 course is taught by Paul Risk, assistant professor of parks and recreation.

The scouts arrived at MSU last Sunday and departed Friday for a base camp in central Michigan.

After several days of survival training at the base camp the girls will be divided into groups and dropped on the island. They will only have a survival kit and the clothes on their backs to live off the land for about a week, said Betty Arnold, director of the program which is sponsored by the Michigan Capitol Girl Scout Council and MSU's continuing education program.

The course costs $225 per girl and the 48 participants were selected from applicants on the basis of skill and experience.

"We are going to be hungry on the island," said Peggy Fox, who will be a senior at Mason High School this fall. "But the food will be good and we have learned how to cook it.

"I'll be fine, but I don't want to see more snake meat."

Arnold said the girls will have to worry about food on the island, but the other administrative staff people will stay at base camp and handle the provisions.

"We've prepared the island and checked the girls who are very competent with matches," Arnold said. "There isn't anything we can't do on the island."

The girls will keep a journal of their experiences and will gather in East Lansing to talk about their time on the island.

"We'll go around the island and check the girls every two days to make sure they are okay," Arnold said. "We'll check if they are having enough food and water."

Tigers split with Angels

DETROIT (AP) — Dave Clark's 12th HR of the season helped the Detroit Tigers beat the Los Angeles Angels, 4-3, on Tuesday night.

Clark's two-run homer in the fourth inning gave Detroit a 2-1 lead, and the Angels rallied for three runs in the top of the sixth.

But the Tigers scored three in the bottom of the sixth to take the lead for good.

Clark's home run was his 12th of the season and his 10th in July. He leads the majors with 12 home runs in July.

The Angels scored three runs in the top of the sixth, but the Tigers responded with a two-run double by Bill Mazeroski in the bottom of the inning to take a 5-3 lead.

It was the first time in four games that the Angels have scored more runs than the Tigers.

Troy gathered sport collectors at St. John's University on Saturday night.

The event featured a variety of sports cards, including baseball, football, basketball and hockey.

Many visitors were excited to see the rare and valuable cards on display.

One collector said, "I've been collecting sports cards for over 20 years, and this is one of the best collections I've ever seen."

Federal agency finds fire hazard in Vegas

We weren't looking at Vegas in the role of the Phoenix, the News said an agency spokesman said. "The problem we found is the Vegas was so much larger than any other region in the nation."

A number of the 1975 model Ford Pinto cars and Vegas but thanks to the 30 mph, the News said, the problem is harder to correct.

Chevrolet dropped the Vegas and in other cars, the Portland Press at the end of the 1977 model year after manufacturing 1,087,235. An estimated 13 million Vegas are still on the road.

 Boone Blank, an automobile consultant, said that a recent study of the 1977 model Ford Pinto that more than 10 million Pintos and Vegas were not adequately safe and the agency may go to court.
