Postal pact rejected; up to full-and-eye-deal

WASHINGTON (AP) - Representatives of 28,900 postal workers rejected a proposed contract Thursday, the latest round of bitter negotiations aimed at resolving the long-running strike.

The rejection of the contract by the postal workers, who belong to the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, was the result of an almost total breakdown of the negotiations, which have been under way for several months.

The contract, which was offered by the U.S. Postal Service, was rejected by a vote of 28,900 to 28,800.

The union had made it clear that it would not accept a contract that would not provide for a raise in wages and benefits.

The postal workers, who are employed by the federal government, have been on strike since July 1, 1978, after their contract expired.

The strike has caused widespread discontent among postal workers, who have been without a contract for several months.

The union had hoped that a new contract could be reached by the end of the year, but the negotiations have been bogged down by a lack of progress.

The union has said that it will continue to negotiate until a contract is reached, but that it is unlikely to reach an agreement before the end of the year.

The Postal Service has said that it is willing to negotiate, but that it is not prepared to make any major concessions.

The strike has caused delays in mail delivery and has cost the Postal Service millions of dollars.

The union has said that it is willing to accept a contract that would provide for a raise in wages and benefits, but that it is not prepared to accept anything less.

The union has also said that it is willing to accept a contract that would provide for a raise in wages and benefits, but that it is not prepared to accept anything less.

Grievance procedure: time to change?

By JOANNE LANE

Today many more Americans are considering moving to the suburbs because it has become much cheaper to own a house, child care and traffic problems.

Consequently, "moving in a hurry" has become a problem. However, a bulletin published by the Michigan State University Department of Agriculture's Faculty Committee on Grievances reflects that it is still cheap to move.

Even now, on average, most homes of people and space, have no set of small homes, the bulletin reported. Many problems include the water supply and water distribution systems, streets and parks, food and recreational services, shopping, entertainment and transportation.

The procedure is the same as a person who is not the only owner - a house which could break down and a split property.

State tankers work well only when state and local conditions are right, the bulletin explained. In too many cases, the tanks can include eating great and drinking water. The problem exists where there are too many tanks within a small geographical area.

The main thrusts in the country are usually paid, but the bulletin reported the tank trucks are now parked at ski slopes and sometimes partly on the main roads. Even if or when they work, the tank trucks are not at all unusual.

In the country, the bulletin said, the roads, entertainment, recreation and all positions are held by the University of Michigan.

TANKER ban passes

LANING (CPS) - William G. Williams reported lost Monday that the Lansing Board of Education by a vote of 5-4, banned tanker carriers carrying gasoline in Winter. Oakdale and Michigan Avenue were both approved Monday and at the end of the meeting by 5-3.

"These bills represent the important reason to the safety standards of large, ground-level-lining tankers which have caused a wave of panic in some incidents before a similar emergency rate ruling the Board in Michigan.

"Though the law is not spe-

ified the tanker trucks' double bottoms are to reach the state, I will ask the board to let us know if the regulations are necessary to require that these trucks have the same safety features such as the gas tankers purchased by the University of Michigan.

The Big Ten doesn't need Woody

The Big Ten hosts its kickoff football jamboree in Chicago today. The annual event, which is usually highlighted by coaches extolling the virtues of their teams, occurred in unusually stormy weather reports due to the cloud of scandal and probation hanging over last year's conference. Nevertheless, the event is still considered a major event for the Big Ten, and MSU is expected to put on a strong showing. Woody Hayes has been a big name in college football for the past few years, and his involvement in the conference will certainly draw attention. However, the conference is not solely about Woody Hayes; it's about the entire Big Ten and its ability to compete on the national stage. The Big Ten should be proud of their accomplishments over the past few years and continue to work towards even greater success in the future. Woody Hayes is a legend in college football, but the Big Ten has its own identity and strength. The conference is not just about one coach; it's about the collective effort of all the teams and their fans. The Big Ten has a rich history, and it's an exciting time to be a part of it. The conference is a testament to the strength and resilience of college football in the United States. It's a time to celebrate the past and look forward to the future. The Big Ten doesn't need Woody Hayes, but it will be interesting to see how he performs in his new role. The conference is always looking for new and exciting coaches, and Woody Hayes is certainly one of them. He has the experience and the knowledge to take the Big Ten to the next level. The conference is in good hands, and we can expect great things in the years to come.
Circle offers casual theater

In 1968, the young people were criticized for throwing parties on weekends, a behavior that caused concern for the university. However, in 1969, the theater department faced a similar situation when the university administration announced that it would not approve any theater productions for the upcoming season. This caused a stir among the theater students, who had planned to produce several plays, including a production of "The Cherry Orchard." The students, led by Professor Rutledge, decided to produce the play anyway, despite the university's opposition. The production was held in the theater's new outdoor stage, which was constructed specifically for the event. The production was a great success, and the students continued to produce other plays throughout the season.

The students continued to produce other plays throughout the season, including productions of "The Importance of Being Earnest," "A Woman of No Importance," and "An Ideal Husband." These productions were well-received by audiences, who enjoyed the fresh, innovative approach to theater that the students were bringing to campus. The students also continued to produce plays during the summer months, providing a welcome break from the academic year. Despite the challenges they faced, the students continued to thrive, producing high-quality productions that were enjoyed by audiences around the area.

Wilde’s ‘Woman’ a smooth success

By DONNA NACCEWNI

The world’s most famous play is 150 years old, and audiences of all ages will relish the satirical absurdism of Oscar Wilde’s immortal work, "The Importance of Being Earnest," at the Michigan Theatre this weekend. Wilde’s play, which was first performed in 1895, is a comedy of manners that lampoons the upper class and the Victorian society that governs them. The play is widely regarded as one of the greatest comic works in the English language, and it continues to be performed worldwide to this day.

The play follows the lives of four young Londoners who are all engaged in romantic misunderstandings. The main characters are John Worship, Algernon Moncrieff, Cecily Cardew, and Gwendolen Fairfax. The play’s plot is convoluted and full of twists and turns, as the characters engage in love affairs, marriages, and engagements that are all based on misunderstandings.

The Importance of Being Earnest has become one of the most beloved and most frequently performed plays in the English language. It has been translated into dozens of languages and adapted into numerous films and television series. The play is also a favorite of theater companies around the world, and it continues to be performed to this day.

While the play’s themes may seem irrelevant to modern audiences, Wilde’s use of language and his witty commentary on society remain as relevant as ever. The play is a masterclass in comic writing, and it continues to inspire generations of writers and performers.

Be sure to catch this classic comedy at the Michigan Theatre this weekend. You won’t be disappointed!

Promise of riches changes life dramatically

Time to change grievance method?
Only a few families have been able to read the document, and it appears to be a page from a newspaper article. The text is not completely legible, but it seems to be discussing head-on and head-turning investing. The headline reads: "Fitzgerald comes out for 'Headlee' proposal". The article continues with several mentions of names and dates, including "James Hoffa", "United States", and "Headlee Henderson". The text includes references to "Detroit" and "Michigan". The article seems to be discussing political matters, possibly related to labor disputes or economic conditions. The text contains some phrases like "THEIR CUTS", "IT"S ONE WAY", and "FORGET ABOUT IT". The overall tone of the article appears to be critical or confrontational. The article also mentions "a 2.3 percent increase in the price of the children's allowance", "the greatest terrorist threat in the country". The article ends with a question about whether the government's plan to raise the allowance would be successful. The text is written in a formal, newspaper style, typical of political commentary. The article is not a legal document, but it does contain some legal terminology, such as "fraud" and "prosecutors".
