Mark Grebner: push for investigation into debatable programs

Ingham County Commissioner Mark Grebner has been one of the county's most vocal critics of the district's handling of health care issues. Grebner has repeatedly called for the formation of a task force to investigate the effectiveness of the district's management of contracts and the impact of its current financial situation on the county's overall health care costs. Grebner has also been a strong advocate for the district to provide more transparent and accountable financial reporting.

Jo Anne Pierce sees need for rape crisis center as paramount

Jo Anne Pierce, a member of the Ingham County Board of Commissioners, has been a passionate advocate for the need for a rape crisis center in the county. Pierce has expressed concern that the existing services for victims of sexual assault are insufficient and that a dedicated center would provide much-needed support and resources for survivors.

Phillip Elliott: assist constituents as they run across problems

Phillip Elliott, a member of the Ingham County Board of Commissioners, is known for his commitment to helping constituents with problems that arise as they navigate the county's services. Elliott has been particularly active in addressing issues related to the county's health care system and has worked to ensure that constituents have access to the services they need.

Richard W. Kinkade says programs should be more accountable

Richard W. Kinkade, a former member of the Ingham County Board of Commissioners, has been critical of the way the district has managed its programs and services. Kinkade has called for more transparency and accountability in the district's operations, including a focus on the cost-effectiveness of programs and the quality of services provided.

Larry Gordon would press commission to adopt code of ethics

Larry Gordon, a member of the Ingham County Board of Commissioners, has expressed interest in pressuring the county to adopt a code of ethics for its members. Gordon has noted that such a code could help ensure more ethical behavior and promote trust among the public and the county's elected officials.

Gina Tortioli intends to work full time to be better informed

Gina Tortioli, a candidate for the Ingham County Board of Commissioners, has pledged to work full-time if elected. Tortioli has emphasized the importance of being fully informed and has expressed a desire to be a strong advocate for the county's residents.

Confused? Political arena in summary

The Ingham County Board of Commissioners is composed of five members who represent the county's four districts and the county as a whole. The board is responsible for setting the county's budget, approving contracts, and making decisions on a wide range of issues. The board members are elected by the county's residents and serve four-year terms. The county is divided into four districts, each represented by a commissioner. Each commissioner is responsible for their district and for issues that affect the county as a whole. The board meets regularly to discuss and vote on a wide range of issues, including budget matters, contract awards, and policy decisions.

The Iceland was really bumpy.

On the island, where the streets are paved with the best kind of asphalt, the people move so slowly that it's a challenge to keep up with them. The sidewalks are made of concrete, and the streets are filled with cars. It's a place where you have to be careful where you step, because the sidewalks are made of concrete, and the streets are filled with cars.

The Iceland was really bumpy. It was so bumpy, in fact, that we had to stop at every intersection to let the cars pass. It was a real challenge to keep up with the people, who were always moving so slowly.

Eventually, we made it to the airport, where we boarded the airplane and took off. It was a long flight, but we arrived safely and were able to get back to the mainland. It was a real relief, after all the bumpy roads and steep hills of the Iceland.
Langeland calls camp a "bonus"

By MIKE LOCKE

State News/Reporter

A year ago, Debra Langeland of Wyoming, Mich., participated in the women's basketball camp at Michigan State University. This year, she caught the eye of MSU's women's basketball coach Karen Langeland, in Trumpple, will be a junior next season. "I'm like 11/2 older coming through the senior year. It's a great opportunity to improve and express my skills that I have," Langeland said. "I've not had an opportunity to really participate in the game." Langeland said that she is not at a disadvantage in her skill level, but has the speed to be an effective player.

There are a few more restrictions and required equipment for the summer camp than for the regular season. "At first, I was a bit afraid to come back," Langeland said. "I thought I'd be more prepared for the summer camp, but now I'm really looking forward to it. I've been working on my fundamentals and I've been working on my shot." Langeland said that she is not at a disadvantage in her skill level, but has the speed to be an effective player.

"It's great to have a chance to play and be around other players," Langeland said. "I haven't had a chance to practice with the team this summer, so I'm really looking forward to it. I'm really excited about being there." Langeland said that she is not at a disadvantage in her skill level, but has the speed to be an effective player.

WORKERS CAN SEE RECORDS
Employers’ files opened

Dispute over what can be seen

LANSING — Gov. William J.�. Miller said Thursday that he will ask the Legislature to enact a law allowing workers to see their employers’ personnel files.

The Governor said he will make the proposal during his annual State of the State speech next week.

He said the proposal is part of a broader plan to strengthen workers’ rights in Michigan.

"We have a responsibility to all workers in this state, not just those who are employed in our own government," Miller said. "This legislation will give all workers the right to see their files and to know what is in them.

The Governor’s announcement comes just weeks after the Michigan Civil Rights Commission released a report that found employers had violated the rights of many workers.

The report said that employers were engaging in "prohibited conduct" by denying workers access to their personnel files.

"We cannot allow employers to keep secrets from their workers," Miller said. "This legislation will ensure that workers will have access to the information that is important to their jobs.

The Governor’s announcement comes just weeks after the Michigan Civil Rights Commission released a report that found employers had violated the rights of many workers.

The report said that employers were engaging in "prohibited conduct" by denying workers access to their personnel files.

"We cannot allow employers to keep secrets from their workers," Miller said. "This legislation will ensure that workers will have access to the information that is important to their jobs.

The Governor said he will ask the Legislature to pass the bill during his annual State of the State speech next week.

He said the legislation will give all workers the right to see their files and to know what is in them.

Caucus to form

A local chapter of the National Black Women's Political Leadership Project is being formed here in Lansing. The leadership group, focusing on issues of women in the political arena, will meet at 8 p.m. Thursday in the Breslin Center.

The group, which was inspired by the same-name organization in the District of Columbia, is being formed here to work with black women and is the November election.

The black women in Lansing are the organization's founder and several members.

The organization was organized in 1971, and the mission of the group was to support black women who were running for public office. The group also works with black women in the political arena.

If interested, contact Cathy Wilson, or Jaki L. Hunter, or any other interested black women.

East IM playing field being improved

By CATHARINE BARTLEY

Students fear that the current piece of the East Lansing High School's football stadium will not have a turf field for the fall season.

The area, which is located in the new seating, is currently unfinished.

The football field is expected to be completed by August.
