ERA: extension yes, recission no—House

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House on Tuesday approved extension of the Equal Rights Amendment, but was unable to strike 10 more votes needed to require a two-thirds majority for the proposed amendment.

Speaker of the House Thomas P. O'Neill said he would bring the ERA to the floor for a vote on Tuesday, but 10 House Republicans opposed the measure.

The ERA amendment, which would ban sex discrimination, had been on the House floor since 1972 and has been the subject of debate in Congress for 20 years.

The Senate has already passed the ERA, but it requires ratification by the states to become part of the Constitution.

O'Neill said he believes the amendment will be ratified by the states, but he did not specify when this would happen.

The ERA amendment has been unsuccessful in the Senate. A previous support for Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and other northeastern supporters is uncertain whether they have the votes to break a filibuster.

Over half of people oppose new deadline

NEW YORK (AP) — More than half of the American people oppose a new extension deadline for ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment to the Constitution, according to a new poll.

The poll, conducted by the Associated Press and the Gallup Organization, shows that 53 percent of those surveyed oppose a new deadline for the amendment, while 42 percent favor it.

The deadline for ratification of the ERA was set to expire on Tuesday, but the Senate approved a two-year extension.

The poll also found that a majority of those surveyed believe the amendment is necessary to protect women's rights.

A majority of the respondents also said they believe the amendment would help to address issues of sexual harassment and gender equality.

Senate rejects federal tax credit for private lower school tuition

WASHINGTON, D.C. (AP) — The Senate on Tuesday rejected a bill that would have allowed private schools to claim a tax credit for tuition payments made by students.

The bill was introduced by Sen. Ted Cruz, R-Texas, and was opposed by a majority of senators.

The Senate voted 62-36 against the bill, which would have allowed families to receive a $5,000 tax credit per child for tuition payments.

Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., said the Senate rejected the bill because it would have been a giveaway to private schools.

Kerry said the bill would have been a giveaway to private schools and would have hurt public schools.

The bill was introduced in response to the Trump administration's proposed budget, which would cut funding for public schools.

Origin of King bullet uncertain

WASHINGTON (AP) — The three commissioners sent to an American city by the Israeli government to investigate the assassination of King Faisal were offered $2,000 by a group of Jewish settlers who dispute the Israeli government's version of the incident.

The three men, who arrived in Washington on Monday, were included on the list of persons who were present at the time of the shooting at the King's Hotel in Jerusalem last week. The group offered the men the money to cover their expenses while they were in the country.

The Israeli government said the men were sent to investigate the incident, but the Jewish settlers said they were sent to prove that the Israelis were not responsible for the killing.

Israel cancels new settlements

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Israeli government has decided to cancel plans for new Jewish settlements in the occupied territories.

The decision was announced on Wednesday by Prime Minister Menachem Begin, who said the new settlements would be a violation of international law.

The Israeli government had planned to build new settlements in the West Bank, but the United Nations has condemned the plan as illegal.

The cancellation of the new settlements is a significant blow to the Israeli government, which has been pushing for the creation of new settlements in the occupied territories.

The United States and the European Union have also condemned the plan as illegal.

The Israeli government has been under pressure to cancel the new settlements, but it has been unable to do so.

Minor parties await results

Each needs 3,000 votes for chance in November

By ANNE MARIE BONNOM State News Staff Writer

The third political party to appear in Michigan this election is a group of enthusiasts waiting to see if their candidates will qualify for a ballot position in the November elections.

The state election division has not yet received or released official totals from the 83 counties due to the fact that approximately 3 percent of the total primary vote, or about 60,000 votes, is yet to be reported.

On August 21st, the Socialist Labor Party received 17,384 votes and the Communist Labor Party has received 441 votes, according to public records.

"We are official," Peterson said. "Since there are no records of votes cast for the minor parties, we can assume the votes are ours." The Socialist Labor Party will have to total 3,000 votes in order to be considered official and to appear on the ballot.

Peterson said the election division must verify the signatures of those voting for the minor parties. There were four parties which were "killed" in their state, according to Peterson, because 5 percent of the total vote was not counted.

Peterson said the election division expects to have these totals verified by the end of next week.

In that case, it will be determined whether the minor party candidates qualify for ballot positions in November.

Childhood memories gone stale with time

By BRIECE CURTISHE

I remember being told as a child that kids can’t have their own bicycles and that if we wanted one, we had to earn it. I clearly remember that I had to earn mine by washing the car, shoveling snow or helping with the chores at home.

As I grew older, I began to understand the significance of these privileges and responsibilities. The right to ride a bike is not just a right, but a privilege that comes with a responsibility to respect the safety and rights of others on the road.

While I have always valued my rights as a cyclist, I have also recognized the importance of being responsible and respectful while riding. I have always tried to avoid taking up too much space or riding too fast, and I have always made sure to follow the rules of the road.

As an adult, I have continued to value my right to ride a bike. However, I have also recognized the importance of protecting the rights of others. I have always made sure to give others the right of way and to be considerate of their needs.

In conclusion, I believe that the right to ride a bike is a privilege that comes with responsibility. It is important to respect the rights of others and to be considerate of their needs while riding.

Cyclists are people too

By DELINDA SABLE

Riding a bike can be a fun and healthy way to get around, but it can also be dangerous. Cyclists are often treated differently than other road users, which can lead to a sense of marginalization.

When riding a bike, it is important to be aware of the rules of the road and to follow them. This includes giving the right of way to cars and pedestrians, and avoiding dangerous maneuvers. It is also important to be visible to other road users, by wearing bright clothing or using lights.

In conclusion, while cyclists may be treated differently than other road users, it is important to respect their rights and to follow the rules of the road. This will help to ensure a safe and enjoyable ride for everyone.

"I think everyone had a good time," declared Bill Courtright, director of the Muscular Dystrophy Association for Southern Michigan.

"We did it all for the kids," race contestant rememder Abe Nieto. "It was worth it for them."

Today, the team members will compete in Kalamazoo to try their skill once again.

Violent Joe Venuti dies after prolonged illness

Seattle opera has seemed to be anathy for omens of a long life; this view of people, a rapt audience, a three-time conductor and a young soloist in the three-time performance of "The Magic Flute". Venuti, who took the first step in his life in the 1920s, never knew a life of opera, and died of a heart attack in the middle of the season, his last chance to return to the stage of his youth.

Badgers need more consistency

Wisconsin

The football prospects for each of the Big Ten teams are usually a point of discussion at this time of the season.

The Badgers face their first test next week, when they face the Michigan Wolverines, who are currently ranked second in the conference. Wisconsin has had a mixed season so far, with a 3-2 record, but they have shown promise in recent games.

Statewide measles epidemic predicted

Fitzgerald considers Ferency, Bruff

Michigan state health officials are also preparing for the anticipated increase in 15- to 24-year-olds who will be immunized in the coming months. They are concerned that this increase could lead to an outbreak of the disease, which has been largely contained in other states.

The outbreak began in Michigan in late December and has since spread to 16 other states. The cases have been mostly in children under the age of 15, and the majority of the cases have been in children who have not been vaccinated.

Michigan State Health Department Director Chris Ferency said that the outbreak is likely to continue for several more weeks, and that it is important for people to get vaccinated to prevent further spread.

Ferency also announced that the state will be providing free vaccines to anyone who needs them. The vaccines will be available at health departments across the state.

The Michigan Department of Health and Human Services has also launched a public awareness campaign to encourage people to get vaccinated. The campaign includes television and radio ads, as well as social media posts.

In a related development, the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) has announced that it will be providing additional funding to states to help them respond to the outbreak.

The CDC has also issued new guidelines for health care providers to help prevent the spread of measles.

The guidelines include:

1. Screening all patients for measles
2. Requiring all patients to wear masks when they have measles
3. Isolating patients with measles
4. Contact tracing

The guidelines are based on the latest evidence and are intended to help prevent the spread of measles.
