Tax bill bids rich, Nader group says

By J. M. LUTHER | Associated Press

U.S. Senators William B. Jones and Strom Thurmond of South Carolina have joined Senator John Stennis of Mississippi in introducing legislation that would raise the minimum tax deduction for real estate investors to $25 billion. The bill would also exempt high-income individuals from paying a new 10 percent capital gains tax on real estate, which critics say would benefit only the wealthy. The bill has been endorsed by the National Association of Realtors, which says it will help keep housing costs down and stimulate economic growth.

Refugees rescued from sinking boat

HONG KONG (AP) — The captain of a Hong Kong ship that rescued 46 Vietnamese refugees from a sinking fishing boat said Thursday the refugees told him they had been subjected to cruel treatment in their home country.

According to Mr. Frank, the refugees were rescued two days ago in the South China Sea, some 300 miles off Hong Kong. He said they were well-nourished and appeared to be in good health.

Mr. Frank, who is a former fishing boat captain, said he was surprised to find the refugees on his boat because he had been told that the Vietnamese were being treated with brutality in the South China Sea.

The refugees said they had been subjected to violent treatment, including beatings and torture, in their home country.

They said they were forced to work for long hours without food or drink and were beaten if they refused to work.

The refugees said they were planning to seek asylum in the United States and were grateful to Mr. Frank for rescuing them.

Crews ship collision, rescue efforts hampered

The plane was carrying 13 people, including the pilot and co-pilot, and three passengers. It crashed into a barge in the river as it was approaching the airport.

The plane's pilot, Mr. Smith, and co-pilot, Mr. Johnson, were killed in the crash. The three passengers were injured and taken to the hospital.

The National Transportation Safety Board has been investigating the crash and has not yet released its findings.

Exercise, recreation lead interest in sports

By JOANNE LANE State News Editor

A sports interest survey has revealed that the primary focus is sports at MSU for the majority of both male and female students in extracurricular and varsity sports.

The survey was conducted by居部and Charles L. Davis, professor of horticulture, and George Elvehjem, associate professor of horticulture. The survey was conducted to find out the interest levels and the amount of interest in sports among MSU students. Students were asked to rate their interest in a variety of sports and activities. The results were then analyzed to determine the interest levels of MSU students.

The survey revealed that the majority of interest is in sports among MSU students. The most popular sports were football, basketball, baseball, and soccer. MSU students also expressed an interest in track, field, and swimming. The survey results showed that MSU students are very interested in sports and are willing to participate in them. The results also showed that MSU students are interested in a variety of sports and activities, and that they are willing to participate in them.

Kelley rules special vote must be held

A request by state Rep. Jackie Yauger, D-Detroit, to designate special elections in which the vote is to be held on the ballot was denied by Attorney General Frank J. Kelley Thursday.

Kelley made the ruling because a state law requires that the election be held in the same county in which the vacancy occurred when the state Senate, which is located in Lansing, meets. Yauger's request was based on a bill passed in the Senate earlier this year. Kelley said that the law is clear and that the election must be held in the same county in which the vacancy occurred when the bill was passed.

Kelley also ruled that the special election must be held in the same county in which the vacancy occurred when the bill was passed. Kelley said that the law is clear and that the election must be held in the same county in which the vacancy occurred when the bill was passed.

Falconry: natural way of hunting

"Some people like cats, some people like dogs," said Joseph Verro, an MSU veterinary professor, who has had a love for raptors, or birds of prey, ever since he was 15.

Verro, one of seven falconers in the state, considers this sport a recreation. It is the oldest field sport on record, dating back about 4,000 years to Asia where a bird of prey was used to hunt small game. When gunpowder came into existence, falconry was not as necessary. It is not as easy to kill a falconer, as Verro explained. "First off you have to be 18 years of age to become a falconer in Michigan. You have to take a 100-question, federally administered test on the biology and habits of raptors." Verro continued. "You must also have a sponsor and serve a two-year apprenticeship. And that is just to get started. Neither the apprentice, the general-class falconer or the master falconer are allowed to capture birds for sport that are in danger of extinction."

"When we take a falcon or hawk from the wild they are the immature birds with the high mortality rate," Verro said. "By taking care of the immature bird, the older birds are allowed to breed and continue their natural life."

Most of the birds taken by falconers are living well past their expected life span, often as much as six years.

The main reason for using a falcon to hunt is the companionship a raptor gives to the human. When hunting season begins Verro will take his bird out to an area where he knows there are ducks or pheasants.

The falcon circles over Verro's head and waits for him to flush out the quarry. Once the birds take off from their roost, the falcon will attack them in the air, take one of the birds to the ground and kill it.

"It is a natural way of hunting," Verro explained. "These birds are going to kill even if they are by themselves in the wild."

"The big difference with having a human around is that if the bird has to catch anything, she knows she will still get fed."

Once Dr. Verro releases his falcon she flies just as if she were wild, circling around him. He then flies a lure on a string for the falcon to chase. It's a training for real hunting.

When he is taking the falcon in a car, he places a hood over her head so she can't see anything - making her relax throughout the trip.

Above, after the workout, the falcon returns to her master. She now depends on him for food, a tasty little mouse. Verro says that the falcon could leave him any time, but it is apparent that she enjoys the company of humans.

BoarsHead amusing with Thurber's 'Male Animal'

By ROYANO HUNGER

The setting is familiar—a small Midwest cornfield, where a battle goes between the locally beloved rock band, the Michigan, and the nationally renowned English professor and his wife, the duo known as "Thurber's Male Animal." The scene is set on a hot summer day, and the air is thick with moisture.

The Michigan have been on the rise, their sound gaining popularity across the state. Their latest album, "For the Love of Sound," has received critical acclaim and has become a fan favorite. The band members, led by the charismatic frontman, John Michigan, are known for their energetic performances and soulful music.

Thurber's Male Animal, on the other hand, are a more subdued act, with a focus on emotional ballads and thoughtful lyrics. Lead singer, Mr. Thurber, is a respected English professor at a nearby university, and his wife, Professor Mrs. Thurber, is a talented musician in her own right.

The two groups meet on the outskirts of town, where a music festival is being held. The stage is set, and the crowd is eagerly waiting for the headliner to take the stage.

The Michigan take the stage first, their energy contagious as they launch into a high-energy medley of their hits. The crowd is on their feet, cheering and singing along.

"I'd Rather Be Shredded"

The Michigan - This song, written and performed by John Michigan, is a tribute to the band's love for shredding and their dedication to their craft. The track is a high-energy rock tune, with guitar solos that will make your spine tingle.

"The One I Love"

The Michigan - This song, written by members of the band, is a heartfelt love ballad about the power of love and the enduring nature of relationships. The lyrics are tender and sincere, with a melody that will stick in your head.

"Michigan's Blues"

Thurber's Male Animal - This song, written and performed by Mr. Thurber, is a tribute to the state of Michigan. The lyrics are a reflection on the beauty of the state and the people who call it home.

"Mr. Thurber's Blues"

Thurber's Male Animal - This song, written and performed by Mr. Thurber, is a reflection on the life of a professor and the challenges he faces in his profession. The lyrics are introspective and thought-provoking, with a melody that is both soothing and melancholy.

"Michigan Night"

Thurber's Male Animal - This song, written by members of the band, is a reflection on the beauty of the state at night. The lyrics are poetic and evocative, with a melody that is both haunting and soothing.

"The Michigan Spirit"

Thurber's Male Animal - This song, written and performed by Mr. Thurber, is a tribute to the spirit of the state. The lyrics are a reflection on the resilience of the people of Michigan, and the enduring spirit of the state.

The crowd is left breathless as the Michigan and Thurber's Male Animal take turns on stage, each leaving the audience wanting more.

New LP's by Kottke, Trower, UFO

By DAVID DIAMANDINO

The Michigan State University Jazz Festival, which takes place this weekend, is sure to provide plenty of music for fans of jazz and rock. This year's line-up includes two of the best-known guitarists in the business, Joe Kottke and Rory Trower. Both musicians have been active in the music world for many years, and their performances are always highly anticipated.

Joe Kottke

Kottke is a respected figure in the world of jazz and rock, having played with everyone from John Scofield to Elton John. His new album, "Lives Again," is a testament to his skill and versatility. Kottke's playing is always smooth and melodic, and his use of the guitar is truly unique. This album features some of his most personal and powerful work to date.

Rory Trower

Trower is another guitar legend, having played with bands like Black Sabbath and Deep Purple. His new album, "Trower's Volume," is a return to his roots in blues and rock. Trower's playing is always fierce and intense, and his use of the guitar is simply mind-blowing. This album is sure to be a highlight of the festival.

UFO

UFO, the classic rock band, has reunited after a long break to release their new album, "The Last Supper." This album is a return to their roots in hard rock and features some of their most iconic songs. The band's sound is as crisp and clear as ever, and their playing is as tight as always.

Overall, this weekend's Michigan State University Jazz Festival promises to be a fantastic event for music lovers of all kinds. With performances by Kottke, Trower, and UFO, there's sure to be something for everyone.

Kelley filed the brief on behalf of the Attorney General of the United States. Kelley said he has been named to the position by the Attorney General.

The students named him the director of the Society of Alumni, a local organization of alumni of the school. Kelley, who had been working as a lawyer, said he was named to the position by the students. He added that he is also receiving money for the library and the school. Kelley said he is also receiving money for the library from his former law firm, the Manning and Napier law firm, in Chicago.

He said it was a sense of necessity to raise money for the campus library.

'It is a sense of necessity to raise money for the campus library,' Kelley said. "We are not saying that we [will] raise money for the library.
PIRGIM charges water board

By PAUL COX
The Detroit News
PIRGIM urged the Michigan Legislature to pass state and local laws that would prevent the state water board from monopolizing the water industry. The board's recent increase in water rates has led to increased charges for consumers.

Petitions due by Sept. 5

The citizens of the state have until Sept. 5 to file petitions with the state legislature. These petitions will be considered at a special session of the legislature next month. The petitions will be received by the state's attorney general, and a panel of judges will review them. If the petitions meet the requirements, they will be considered by the legislature.

Benchs built for parks

A Lansing organization is making a move to help prevent homeless people from being in the cold this winter. Funds from the River, a non-profit organization, have been given to the Friends of Great River Parks and Renovations to help renovate and maintain the benches near the Grand River. The project is estimated to cost around $2,000 to provide benches for each location.

The project will be completed by the end of the month to be located in River Park, Town Park River Park, Renovations Park, and Park Plaza. The benches, holmes said, have been requested primarily for homeless reasons.

"They want benches," he said. "Hopefully, there's a place to sit down by the river, with the sun out on the other." Holmes admitted there are now open:
