Lebanon close to 'collapse'

By GEORGE A. KRIMSKY

Associated Press Writer
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — President
Elias Sarkis said Monday fighting between Syrian troops and Christian soldiers has pushed Lebanon to "the verge of collapse." He promised a new effort to end the battles that have killed and wounded hundreds in

As the president spoke, rightist soldiers were pressing a day-long campaign to wrest two bridges from Syrian control and gain a supply route to the north from embattled East Beirut.

Police sources said 39 Lebanese were killed and 189 wounded Monday most of them during a heavy barrage of artillery, mortar and rocket fire from Syrian positions in the early morning hours.

The Syrians laid down the blanket of fire power to cover an assault that rescued a unit of 50 of their comrades trapped for two days inside an East Beirut pharmacy. The rightists conceded the Syrians broke the siege and said the army lost eight soldiers.

Sixteen buildings were demolished and 61 apartments set afire as the Syrians advanced Monday after the barrage. Ali routes into Christian East Beirut were blocked by Syrian roadblocks and sniper

The Christian president, appearing worn and depressed as he spoke in a nationwide broadcast from the presidential palace, blamed both the Christian rightists and the Syrians for the turmoil.

"The situation that emerged from a provocation on one side and the mass violent retaliation on the other has inflicted nany innocent casualties, which saddens us beyond description," Sarkis said. "The latest events have left almost no family without a casualty and have ruined nearly every house. There is no hospital left in East Beirut that can extend adequate medical care to the wounded."

The fighting continued into daylight hours as militia bands tried to pry Syrian troops from two bridges leading into the Christian sector of Beirut. The bridges control the militia's supply lines.

The right-wing "Voice of Lebanon" claimed the militia destroyed 12 Syrian artillery batteries in the hills overlooking the capital. The Syrians had no comment on the claim, which could not be independently Police estimated 222 civilians killed and about 500 wounded in fighting since Wednesday.

East Beirut's morgues and hospitals are reported clogged and blood banks drained. The Christians reported more than 30 bodies were pulled from the rubble of collapsed buildings in one area during a lull in the fighting.

In his address, President Sarkis promis to come up with a new government and a new security plan within 10 days to stem fighting. Government sources said the president needed time to talk with Syrian President Hafez Assad, due to return to Damascus from East Germany and Moscow at the end of the week.

Sarkis said he would bring opposing politicians into his new government, a plan he tried unsuccessfully last spring. Sarkis did not give details of his new peace plan, or to say he forsaw 'a new Lebanon better than before and much better than now.

Last spring, Prime Minister Selim El Hoss and his cabinet resigned because they were unable to deal with the clashes between rightist Christian militia bands and the Syrians. Hoss and his cabinet stayed in office, however, because political leaders could not agree on the composition of a new government.

The Syrians intervened in the Lebanese civil war late in 1976 to prevent the Christians from being defeated by the left wing Lebanese Moslems and their allies, the Palestinian guerrillas. But the Christians refused to disarm their militia and when their areas to Syrian control and submit their areas to Syrian contro because the Syrians would not disarm the

The Syrians were angered further by the Christians' alliance with the Israelis in southern Lebanon to prevent the Pales-tinians from taking control there. Now the Syrians are trying to bring the Christians under their control.

awaits Milliken's OK

State News Staff Writer Gov. William G. Milliken is expected to sign into law a lobby reform bill passed by the state House of Representatives last week, but some last minute amendments

"There are no indications from the governor that he will veto," Peter Ellsworth, assistant legal advisor to the governor, said. "I really don't have any reason to think he's not going to sign it."

But, Ellsworth said, some last minute amendments tacked on the bill when it was passed Tuesday could create some signing

The House passed what some opponents called a "watered-down" version of the bill when they altered it with deletions and amendments. It cleared the House last week in the Legislature's final session before recessing for elections. The bill, designed to regulate lobbying in the executive and legislative branches, requires lobbyists to register with the cretary of state and report semi-annually their activities.

"It really has changed considerably,"

Some changes that may create problems for Milliken are the bill's definition of lobbying and a provision that may affect the governor's staff.

In the original version of the bill, lobbying was defined as "communicating with or soliciting others to communicate with an official in the executive branch or the legislative branch . . . for the purposes of influencing legislative officials." The addition of the word "directly" presents one set of problems, Ellsworth said, because it allows for indirect commun

With the definition, an organization could ask, or pay, another party to approach a legislator. The organization would not have to report expenditures involved in the communication, he said.

Ellsworth said another potential trouble was a multi-client clause formerly included in a fall 1977 version of the bill. He described the section as allowing one lobbyist to represent more than one group.

"If they have recreated that loophole I think he (Milliken) will be very disturbed by it." he said. "He was before and I assume he will be again.

A final problem for the governor could be a provision which describes state depart ment employees as lobbyists. State depart ment employees include those on the governor's staff. If a governor's aide or legal counselor tried to influence ad ministrative or legislative action, it would be considered lobbying. The "lobbyist" would then be required to record what was determined inadequate for destruction of PBB contaminated cattle by the Department of Natural Resources.

In October 1977, the MSU incinerator

The incinerator does not generate the 2,000 degrees Fahrenheit necessary to destroy PBB, state officials said.

PBB burned at temperatures less than 2,000 degrees can vaporize into dangerous dioxins or remain in the ashes, state officials say.

The cattle burned were contaminated field animals and animals intentionally fed the fire retardent for research purposes. Kenneth K. Keahey, director of the animal health diagnostic laboratory said.

Animals burned included 61 caives, 78 cattle seven bovine cattle fetuses, 20 chickens, 10 pigs, four lambs, two minks and one dog, according to clinic documents.

It is still not clear what, if any, action will be taken by state agencies concerning the incinerations at MSU.

"I believe this may be a DNR or Department of Public Health matter, said Tim Shireman, PBB information specialist for the state Department of Agriculture. "It is over and done with as I understand it."

A spokesperson for the Department of Public Health said the matter would come under the jurisdiction of the DNR.

MSU will investigate possible PBB traces

A team of MSU personnel will be created to investigate the existence of possible PBB traces left over from the burning of contaminated animals at the MSU Veterinary Clinic, a University official said Monday.

John Cantlon, vice president for research and graduate studies, said, "We will be doing ome analysis on the incinerator area. If this analysis is positive, then we will follow up by some analysis on the incinerator area. It disalants as possible the control of the looking at people involved at the clinic on a daily basis."

The State News learned last week that animals containing PBB were cremated at the MSU Veterinary Clinic since 1974. State agency officials have said they were unaware that the incineration of contaminated animals was taking place.

Cantlon also said the University would look back into the veterinary clinic records to determine the amounts of PBB that were in animals which were sent to MSU. He said amounts of PBB reported in news stories were not accurate because "some of the people who were looking at the figures" did not correctly calculate the amount of fat in samples taken from the contaminated animals. Cantlon said the actual amount of PBB in the animals "was substantially less" than

FAA releases air crash tapes

Associated Press Writer

SAN DIEGO (AP) - A doomed pilot's calm advisory that his jet was going down was the only interruption in routine pilot-controller conversations before the nation's worst air crash, tape recordings released Monday showed.

"Tower, we're going down. This is PSA," the pilot of Pacific Southwest Airlines Flight 182 told Lindbergh Field controllers just before the crash last Monday in which at least 144 persons died.

The transcripts, released by the Federal Aviation Administra tion, show no evidence of joking or inattention on the part of the PSA crew as had been claimed in some news reports, but only routine transmissions between air and ground.

The PSA jet and a single-engine Cessna collided three miles east of Lindbergh Field, raining flaming debris and bodies on the city's North Park residential area. All 135 persons on the PSA jet died, both persons in the Cessna were killed, and at least seven persons on the ground were killed.

The transcripts cover transmissions between controllers at Miramar Naval Air Station, Lindbergh Field and several planes, both on the ground and aloft. There is no hint of any trouble until controllers at Miramar, which handled the PSA jet until it was handed off to Lindbergh controllers for the final approach, noticed a low altitude alert sounded as the jetliner fell below a minimum

Spokesperson Rudolph Kapustin of the National Transportation

Safety Board told the Associated Press on Sunday that the cockpit conversation would be made public at a hearing that may be held in November.

The paper, with a circulation of about 20,000, was silenced Monday by an order signed by Bishop Abel Muzorewa, one of three blacks joined with Prime Minister Ian Smith in the transition government.

The ban was announced two hours after Monday's edition appeared. The paper had been ritical of the government and supported Anglo-American ef-forts to open settlement talks between Salisbury and externally based guerrilla leaders.

Contract approval urged

By CATHERINE RAFTREY State News Staff Writer

After a week of picketing and protest, members of MSU's clerical-technical union are being asked to put down their placards and consider ratification on a tentative two year contract.

Keith Groty, assistant vice president for employee and labor relations, and Barbara Reeves, president of MSU Employees Association, announced that a tentative agreement was reached Monday at 2:30 a.m.

Last Wednesday, union management negotiations had broken off before any progress toward a settlement could be reached on a contract which was to expire at midnight Saturday.

The new agreement came, while an extension of the old contract was in effect, after an 11 and a half hour marathon bargaining session which began at 3 p.m. Sunday.

Linda Johnson, an office assistant in the College of Natural Science and member of MSUEA, said a major disagreement of earlier negotiations was that the association demanded parity with the state of Michigan employees for its members.

MSUEA also charged the University with wage discrimination against women. They claimed that their wage levels had historically been lower than those in male-dominated professions

The association argued that because of this men within the MSUEA bargaining unit had also been forced to suffer since they had careers traditionally held by women.

In a statement released Monday morning, Groty said specifics o the new contract will not be released until they can be communicated to the union membership. Reeves said she is not "ecstatic" over the new contract agreement, but added, "It's one I can certainly live with.

Alternative co-op bookstore will fill need for variety and give members a discount

By MICHAEL MEGERIAN

A new book store, whose organizers say will fill the gaps currently existing in the cal book market, is surfacing in East Lansing.

The Book Co-op, located at 201½ E. Grand River Ave., is a mere empty room now, said coordinator Bruce Roth, but will soon be stocked and is hoping for a grand opening round the middle of October.

Roth said the coop wil not be another outlet for selling textbooks, but may occasionally stock certain novels required for classes.

"It is not our intent to compete with the other bookstores," he said. "We want to fill a need for some areas lacking in the other bookstores. Books on the feminist movement, minorities, alternative lifestyles and readings for children will constitute most of the inventory, said Roth, who added the co-op will also stock a selection of records manufactured on obscure labels.

Roth said the co-op will offer a membership program, for which there is a $2 fee. Membership will entitle persons to a 10 percent discount on all merchandise, as well as say in what books go on the shelf. Members will be eligible to join the co-op's collectives, said Roth, which are presently

The collectives will be responsible for determining which books the co-op will stock and will be open to any interested persons who wish to join

Roth said about 50 people pitched in to start the co-op, many of whom came from Roth said the co-op will include a board of directors responsible for the overall policy of the organization Student demands for another bookstore have not been currently voiced, but compared with other towns, Roth said he feels East Lansing is short on bookstores.

"In Ann. *clor there are 30 or 40 of them," he said.

One of the "givens" of Latin American politics is that they seem to defy understanding by Americans. A cursory reading of American press reactions tends to give one an impression that are only two groups of people in Latin America: Marxists rebels holed up in the mountains and capitalist generals living in palatial retreats.

This glossed-over presentation of news has tended to divide Americans into three camps — those who see the creeping acceptance of communism" by peasants as cause for U.S. intervention, those who see the people's struggle for economic freedom as one of the most noble causes in the world, and those people who quite frankly acknowledge that the situation doesn't make any sense and because it doesn't the U.S. should stay out of it.

Unfortunately, there is much truth to all three views. But there is also something beyond the superficial that needs be examined

When the Somoza family was put into power during the 1930's with the open support and encouragement of the United Štates, the move made sense for both American vested interests and for the people of Nicaragua. Forty years have passed, however, and the needs of both the U.S. and the Nicaraguan people have changed. The family of Somoza has not changed. They are still the dictatorial, elitist family that was installed in power back in the '30's.

What has changed about the Somoza's is their sophistication in controlling the Nicaraguan people. That gross understatement is more than borne out by Somoza's recent atrocities committed on innocent civilians. One American correspondent who experienced the rout summed it up with an expression that had not been used since the height of the Viet Nam war: Overkill.

Not that Somoza is on our side, but what are people of Latin America to think when they see Green Beret-trained soldiers firing

American bullets from American rifles and tanks?

It would be entirely unrealistic for President Carter to suddenly reverse American policy and call for the installment of Commander Zero in Somoza's place. In fact, it is not even his place to call for the resignation of Somoza - even though past American presidents have done much more.

But the United States cannot hide its head in the sand on this or other Latin American flare-ups. The fact is that in the past the U.S. has been very instrumental in shaping right-wing Latin American politics. If the U.S. as a nation is currently politically embarras sed at past involvement, it should be big enough to acknowledge its

Even if the acknowledgment did nothing to ease the Nicaraguan situation - it would do wonders for the credibility of the U.S. government in the eyes of Third World people.

when adjusted for inflation, U.S. funding for space has decreased 50 percent

Two questions arise: Why the disparity in investment, and what can be done to correct the situation?

In the U.S.S.R. conditions are favorable for long-term projects. Public opinion and taxpayer support are not the problems they are for American politicians. If Soviet leaders reach a general concensus that pace is worth investment, the funds will be Here, where bureaucrats must face the public periodically, projects that yield no short-term benefits are political suicide. Taxpayers can no longer afford to under-write anything but the basics. With a record trade deficit, government is being pressured to cut corners wherever possible. The United States is lagging in its commitment to space because of social and economic pressures that show no sign of abating. The Soviet space program is not tied to these vagaries. The difference is inherent in the systems.

There are ways in which the United States might again reassert itself in space. Increased NASA funding is the obvious answer: given government inertia, only a grassroots movement can bring this about How likely is such support?

In early September, the National Space In early September, the National space Institute, in conjunction with NASA and 14 other organizations, launched the Chicago Spacewatch. The purpose of the month-long project is "to stimulate public awareness, interest and understanding of space and the Lacking widespread popular support, a government-run space effort cannot succeed in the United States. But America is more than government America is business. In fact, the lines between the two are often nebulous.

Historically, the West has moved to ominate frontiers because of the profit that could be realized there. Capitalist imperialism has been the dominating force; in space, as well as on earth, it is the only thing that can resist the totalitarian imperialism of the Soviet Union.

Business must be made to see space as

VIEWPOINT: OIL RESERVES

Do not be fooled by optomistic projections

By DAVE ROITMAN

By DAVE ROITMAN

According to the Rand Corporation report summarized in last Friday's State News ("Discovery of Future Oil Looks Bleak", Sept. 29 issue), the world supply of oil "would run out in between 30 to 45 years if world consumption continues to grow at past levels... Future oil discoveries will have to come from fields... in expensive environments, from fields with lower... productivity... or from the application of enhanced recovery". This quote contains the two most vital links in the "resource base" argument for energy conservation, the concepts of "exponential growth" (doubling) and "net energy use". Take a little time to consider the implications of these two concepts; they're going to have a big

When someone tells you that "we've only used about one half of our oil reserves, we've

When someone tells you that "we've only used about one-half of our oil reserves, we've still got one-half left", that sounds like a lot left — until you realize we've been increasing our use of oil since the turn of the century, so that we've doubled it every 20 years or so. With one-half left, and the same growth rate, that means in 20 years... pool. But it won't be "pool" it's going to be "sputter, sputter, fizzle", because of that second concept, net energy use. When you figure the total cost of a fuel, you've got to subtract the amount of energy it takes to develop and produce that fuel from the amount of energy output you obtain. That energy use increases exponentially it's doubling" as the fuel resource gets more scarce. In other words, we're burning the candle at both ends — the doubling concept is operating in both consumption and production. When you read about a "30 year supply of oil," you can expect to be paying an incredible amount for that oil as it

By then we hope that some of the energy alternatives will be in common use. But right all of the proposed alternatives have problems, problems that take fossil fuel energy

In closing, I'd like to make a connection between exponential growth, net energy use, and the proposed Dayton Hudson mall. When all the dust has settled on the other issues, the fact remains that building another mall continues the momentum of "sprawl" planning — and sprawl depends on gasoline. As an alternative to building new malls, we could be putting our money into improving public transportation and existing downtown areas. The long-term costs of continued sprawl need to be considered — if we plan new development with energy efficiency as a high priority, we are less likely to see a lot of suffering in our later years, and less likely to leave our kids with one heckuva mess.

Poison center a fine but late idea

The Center for Environmental Toxicology, the University's organized attempt to study the problems of chemical contamination of the environment, is a good idea. A team effort by all University departments involved will provide a more thorough and accurate analysis of problems than any independent efforts could.

John Cantlon, vice president for research and graduate studies, was probably right when he said existence of such a center would have aided research in the PBB fiasco. But in order to prove that, the center will have to examine more than just the old questions about PBB. It will have to cause breakthroughs in that research, asking questions that have not been asked before. Questions should not be ignored just because they're obvious, like "when MSU burns its cattle, what happens to the PBB?"

The center will also have to be aware of breaking areas. It is too late to prevent PBB problems, but not too late to prevent similar incidents in agriculture and industry. The academic community should not wait until the political arena demands answers. Information should be provided about contamination of the air, water, soil, plants, food, and people whether the Legislature cares to hear evidence at this time or not.

Action must be initiated to prevent barrels of buried chemicals from ng the land as happened in Montague.Corporate/political excuses like "there aren't many people there" should be attacked by the academic community with the realization that the area may someday have more residents

The Center for Environmental Toxicology will surely have its hands full with current problems. But attention must also be paid to preventative measures and future trends. No area of study - past, present, or future - should be ignored because the center lacks operating funds or personnel. The University and the state should guarantee adequate staffing and financing of the toxicology center. The benefits accrued will far outweigh any cost factors.

The center is being established now with $170,000 from the Agricultural Experiment Station's budget. This amount may be adequate for the search for a director and establishment of office space, but once research has begun there will have to be more money appropriated. A separate budget for the center would be appropriate when the Legislature chastises the University for requesting budget increases it should be pointed out that such research is both expensive

The benefits of toxicology research will not be apparent to most people. They will see PBB research at this point as mainly academic. They will probably see research into the future as speculative and a waste of tax dollars. But the need is great. MSU should be commended for stepping into this area of social welfare on its own.

Carter names 'U' dean to commission

By JOANNE LANE

State News Staff Writer

The Dean of the College of Urban Development has been named by President Carter to serve on the U.S. National Commission on the International Year of the Child, 1979.
Robert L. Green said the commission's purpose is to look at ways to enhance the status of all children in the United States.
Green said the commission operates on international states. Green said the commission operates on international, state and local levels. He is involved at the national level.

"The national level serves as a liaison between individual state projects," he said. "The national commission has a budget and a staff, whereas the others don't."

Green, who was responsible for the development of programs for MSU's Center for Urban Affairs, explained that the commission's main areas of concern will be education, health. untrition, housing and the proper care of children who are incarcerated in public institutions.

"We want to find out about novel and incentive programs that certain agencies have and give our recommendations and support to those programs. We also plan to reinforce already existing programs," he explained.

Green said the commission is also concerned with children around the world as well as here in the United States.

"We realize that a nation like India may not have the same amount of resources to serve their children as the United States," he said, "but the commission hopes to find ways to alleviate these problems.

The commission was set up in May and consists of 23 persons. It operates along the same lines as the Department of Health, Education and Welfare or UNICEF, Green said. It will meet in sessions during 1978 to plan U.S. involvement, he said, and will finish its work on Dec. 31, 1979.

Green will spend much of his time speaking on the commission's concerns. He has already spoken to a group of individuals at a Chicago convention on how the commission may be able to help children whose mothers are victims of drug

Green said one of the commission's projects is a vaccine campaign, especially among the poor, where children in need of vaccinations are identified and given shots.

Michigan to be first in test program for identifying residues in livestock

LANSING (UPI) - Michigan will be the first state to initiate a LANSING Program to identify residues of antibioties in slaughtered animals, under an agreement worked out by the state and federal agriculture departments.

All livestock tested under the emergency slaughter of the state's PBB law also will be tested for antibiotic residues in kidney and liver tissues.

Antibiotics are commonly used throughout the United States in Antibiotics are commonly used throughout the United States in treating animal ailments and as an additive in medicated feeds. But there are specified withdrawal periods intended to prevent their use just prior to slaughter, so residues are eliminated from the animals' systems before they enter the food chain.

George Whitehead, deputy director of the Consumer Protection Bureau, said testing by the MDA and USDA has revealed the presence of antibioties in up to 10 percent of tested animals.

Les McCann. "The Man," is probably one of MSU's favorite artists, certainly in terms of longevity. He's been in town virtually every year since 1971, and if anyone really deserves the "perennial favorite" label, he wins it hands down.

A jazz artist? I don't know. Whatever McCann's origins, the music he played Sunday night at Dooley's was pretty far removed from the classical definition of "jazz." Don't know if that really means much though. MeCann packed Dooley's for both his Sunday shows, and I'm sure those who paid to see "The Man" weren't interested in questions of terminology.

McCann's music really escapes any sort of simple classification. A mixture of straight jazz, real '60s soul, fusion and more than a touch of gospel, it blends into a category all its own — and the audience, as always, responds in full. Though his rise to prominence in the jazz field came through his keyboard abilities. McCann now devotes as much if not more time to vocalizing. As a vocalist he has his faults, true—his voice is a bit gruffer than standard, for instance—but his lack of technical prowess is easily compensated for by his contagiously spirited delivery

Most in attendance Sunday night had probably seen McCann once or twice before, so they knew what to expect. There was no need for McCann to coerce them out of their seats: they were more than willing to join in the fun. McCann's showstopper — the same tune done so well when Showcase Jazz brought him last year — involves singling out members of the audience and asking them to "testify." Called "Song of Love." the tune was perfectly expected by McCan, who was the sudience singling. The step orchestrated by McCann, who got the audience singing "Let's see what love can do" until he picked out a willing "testifier" and hushed the audience to allow the person to sing out the chorus aione. Though it looks a little hackneyed on paper, the effect in live performance was stunning. McCann's control of his audience clearly can be rivalled by few.

McCann's band was extremely tight, as always, giving him the leeway to interact with the audience as he pleases. Bassist Jimmy Rowser, a longtime McCann associate, had no problems keeping time and providing a strong foundation for McCann and guitarist Nick Kirgo's rapid fire soloing. Kirgo was especially good Sunday night, of all the McCann band, he seems the most fluent in the fusion style, sounding at times like a cross between Bill Connors during his Return To Forever days and ex-Billy Cobham guitarist

McCann is touring to promote his latest LP. Les McCann The Man, which sounds considerably slicker than his live show, and quite a bit more commercial. The commercial success that met McCann during his Swiss Movement partnership with Eddie Harris in the late 60s really has yet to be equalled, and his "Compared To What" tune — performed to a highly-enthused Dooley's audience Sunday night — really doesn't have a 70s counterpart. Maybe that's what he's hoping to do with the new LP: whatever instrumental fusion highlights his live show is replaced by polished, almost Boz Scaggs-Johnny Bristol-type R&B produc-

Whatever McCann did his job Sunday night, the audience loved it, and there's no doubt whatsoever that he'll be back within a year doing the same thing again. Who can tell if that's good or bad? Not me, and certainly not the people at Dooley's Sunday night. To them, Les McCann is 'The Man,' and that's the way he'll stay.

Les McCann brought his band to Dooley's Sunday night for two performances that blended jazz, R&B, and gospel and almost brought down the house

Disco is not just for 'discoids'

By MICHAEL FLANAGAN
EDITOR'S NOTE: Bill Holdship's "Disco:
if this is culture, I want out" column, run in if this is culture, I want out "column, run in the Sept. 26 State News, has generated more controversy than one would expect from such a cut-and-dried topic. In keeping with our sense of fair play — and the repetitious nature of disco itself — here again is yet another column on disco, which hopefully will serve as the last word on the subject. In his column in last Translay's State Naws

In his column in last Tuesday's State News. In his column in last Tuesday's State News, Bill Holdship derides disco music as narcissistic, non-emotional music, listened to by a group of people he refers to as "discoids." These "discoids" are portrayed as being "machine-like, decadent, inherently bored, rustrated and apathetic." We are told that the "true discoids" cannot appreciate "meaningful" music (i.e. punk, the Stones, etc.).

It is interesting to note that people who would negate disco music in the 70s use the same type of emotionalistic arguments that people in the '50s used against rock 'n roll music (it's meaningless, noisy, evil). Attack-ing musical forms from an emotionally egocentric position of "I'm right, you're sick" leaves no room for listeni enjoying, musical forms other than those you we chosen as "proper."

What is more insidious about this article, however, is the stereotyping of all people who listen to or dance to disco as some homogeneous group. These people are both "narcissistic" and "anesthetized" (no mean feath). These descriptions leave me wondering just where Bill goes on the "several occasions" he has been to discos. What is the common factor between the Garage, Trammps, Dooleys, Covello's, and the Rainbow Ranch except the music and dancing? But these are the "generation of mechanical, machine-like robots" dancing with them selves in mirror walls. Beside possible homophobic and racist implications (ask yourself: who are these people this man talks about?) this description shows little understanding of what dance is. If you don't watch what you are doing when you dance, how are you to control or replicate movements? Or are we to see people at the ballet barre in the same narcissistic light? Bill Holdship's scoffing attitude toward dancing leads me to wonder if he ever dances himeself, or watches dance. Denying one art form as valid by comparing it to another is pretty messy der if he ever dances himeself, ogic.

Is disco black music? Well, probably not if you are talking about classical black music (jazz, blues, and gospel), but it would be hard to say that such performers as Parliament, Rick James, and Loletta Holloway are not involved in black music.

Is disco emotionless? When Sylvester belts
"You Make me Feel (Might Real)" you really wouldn't think so. Donna Summer seems quite emotionally convincing when she sings "Last Dance."

You see, Bill, before you judge this music emotionless you have to know about more than Saturday Night Fever. Then you have to listen to it. If it is so emotionally repulsive to you that you can't do that, fine. Don't hang out at discos, you won't be sorely missed. But don't bore us with the details. To para-phrase Vince Aletti (talking about the same thing in Rolling Stone in '74) "If you don't dance, who asked you?"

Amazing how hard it was to stop. I downed a total of 13 plastic glasses of beer in one hour, deciding only then that I'd had enough. And now I was ready and she was still by the wall, only now she was sitting in a chair all alone. I wove and staggered through the crowd of dancers until I was in her clear view, and gave her a big wave and a smile.

I tried to think of something to say, but before I could utter a word she came up and shouted in my ear: "Hold on a second, I'll be right back!" . . . and headed straight for the ladies' room, right in the middle of the song. I stumbled after her to wait by the door. I waited maybe 15 minutes. People kept that ladies' room door swinging, going in and out out and in.

As I say, after 15 minutes, I saw Betty come back out. She was being carried by four other girls who handed her to three guys my age who picked her up and carried her out of the room, her heavy-lidded eyes closed, her mouth open; and I've never seen her since, never found out just what happened that night (though I did hear somebody on the scene utter the word

The rest of that evening I can hardly remember except that I went back to drinking and later went back upstairs and to bed and fell asleep as soon as my head hit the pillow.

Even Thor would like the Rezillos

By JOHN NEILSON State News Reviewer

When I was a kid. I just LOVED comic books.

I bought 'em, traded 'em, hoarded 'em, and re-read them until the covers fell off and the tattered remains were rele gated to shoeboxes in the closet. I was a fanatic — but I was choosy, too. I read any-think with the word Marvel on it, like Daredevil, Spiderman, Captain America, the Hulk, Sgt. Fury and the Howlin' Commandoes (and later, Nick Fury — Agent of S.H.I.E.L.D.), and perhaps my favorite, Thor.

Well, times change, and after a couple of years I found that my interest in comic books waned as I started to get involved with more serious stuff — like rock 'n roll. But I still loved the larger-than-life action, exaggerated drama and primary colors of the comics, and so I naturally gravitated towards rock music with a similar feel.

For example, I bought all of the Snoopy vs. the Red Baron records, and when Arthur Brown's 'Fire' came out I used to hang out at the house of this friend of mine who had gone out and bought the album. Then in the early '70s I was a Hawkwind fan (their albums from In Search of Space through Space Ritual are Marvel-rock classics drone - often with the assis-tance of science fiction writer Michael Moorcock), Still later, I fell in love with the loony derangement of the first Ramones album. I mention all of this by way of introducing the newest comic-rock gem, Can't Stand the Rezillos (Sire SRK 6057). The Rezillos (they get extra points for the name) are a brand new group from Edinburgh, Scot-land, and this, their debut LP displaying no pretensions but an awful lot of imagination.

Like the Ramones, the Rezillos demonstrate perfectly the close relationship between punk/power pop music and the world of the comic book. A good comic book packs more energy and excitement into 20 pages than most novels do in 100, much like the way new wave bands inject more adrenalin into their singles than more "progressive" bands put into double LP concept sets. Both genres rate low in subtlety and profundity - high in imagina these guys, the Ramones seem tion, excitement, and pure en- to plod in comparison tertainment value.

Both genres are also disposable in the long run. They're meant to be enjoyed NOW — and by the time you tire of the latest thrill there'll be another latest thrill there'll be another to take its place. The Rezillos recognize this, and they address this aspect of their livil, hood on "Top of the Pops," where they say, "There's one born every day/same song, then they fade away/ding dong what's your future in the pop. - what's your future in the pop music industry?/All right, so you made the grade/hold tight to the buck you've made . .

charging bassrun that intro-duces "Flying Saucer Attack." Soon vocalist Fay Fife leaps in with some manic singing that evokes the controlled hysteria of the best '50s UFO flicks, "There's a threat approaching from the stars/all the powers of Venus and Mars/everybody better be on guard/when the flying saucers land./Watch the skies above the horizon for the spies who have no flies n/when they appear through ne stratosphere/better lock yourself inside."

The album opens with the

The pace never lets up. Each and every song is crammed full of inventive hooks, Zap! guitars and Ba-Da-Doom! bass, and between songs there is barely enough time to gasp. Next to Can't Stand the Rezillon three English singles - "Can't Stand My Baby," "(My Baby Does) Good Sculptures," and the afore mentioned "Top of the Pops" -- are naturally among the album's best moments. Other highlights include the Blondie ish "It Gets Me." "Get ting Me Down," and "Cold " which features some excellent guitar breaks.

In addition to the band's original tunes, Can't Stand the Rezillos also boasts a pair of fine covers. "Glad All Over" sound like Dave Clark Five's version played at twice its original speed, while their remake of Gerry and the Pacemakers' "I Like It" is delightfully infectious. Both tunes would be indistinguishable from the band's own songs if you weren't aware of their origins.

I probably won't be listening to Can't Stand the Rezillos in 10 years, but then again, when was the last time you put on a Herman's Hermits record? Or even "Are You Experienced", for that matter. I don't mind the fact that pop records grow old after a few months. I just wish that I got a couple of records as good as Can't Stand the Rezillos in the mail every month. Just like my comic books.

Hazlett gives MSU experience

Mitzy Hazlett

By JERRY BRAUDE

State News Sports Writer

Playing in her final year of eligibility, Mitzy Hazlett has only one regret in being with the volleyball team: she can't continue playing with the young squad when they improve in the future.

"I just wish I could play one more year with the team," Hazlett said. "If the team concentrates and works hard, they should be super next year, and I just wish I could be there when it happens."

But when Hazlett, who is entering her second year as the team's cantain does leave the Spartans at the close of the year. MSU will captain, does leave the Spartans at the close of the year, MSU will have a spiking void that won't be easy to fill.

Unlike last season, there are other good spikers on the team besides Hazlett, which makes the six foot senior out of Grosse Ile's job a little easier.

"The opposing teams can't key on me anymore and put two players on me," Hazlett said. "The setters have been doing a good job of mixing the setups. I can now go up for a fake spike and draw

During her year's under coach Annelies Knoppers, Hazlett has seen the best and worst days of MSU volleyball. In her sophomore year, the Spartans were seventh in the nation. Last season, however, MSU suffered through a 7-34-2 season.

"Last year, we did have the skills, but our team timing was off," Hazlett said. "This year we all know each others skills and limits. We play much more together. Everybody gets along well on the "Other teams have commented to us on how well we work together as a team," Hazlett continued. "We really enjoy playing together and nobody puts any pressure on anybody when they make a mistake."

This year's team has six newcomers and Hazlett is the only senior on the 10-player roster.

"We may have a lot new players on the team this year, but we've been so comfortable in playing together that it seems like we've been playing together for a long time," Hazlett said. Hazlett feels confident in her hitting and blocking part of the game, but she still wants to work more on her defense.

"I'm working on my defense because I'm more into the game when I'm participating in all aspects instead of just hitting and blocking."

Hazlett's biggest goal for the season is to win the Big Ten tournament, Oct. 27 and 28.

"We have won it every year except last year," Hazlett said. "I'd like to win it again this year and make our name known again." Hazlett finds the Big Ten tournament in her sopho-more year to be her favorite

BOSTON (AP) — The New York Yankees edged the Boston Red Sox 5-4 in a thrilling playoff game Monday to win their third straight American League East division championship.

With the Red Sox ahead 2-0 in the seventh with the Red Sox anead 2-0 in the seventh inning, Bucky Dent hit a three-run homer to put the Yanks ahead for good. But Reggie Jackson's eighth-inning home run, which made the score 5-2, was the winning blow. The Sox rallied for two runs in the bottom of the sighth.

In the ninth, with one out, the Red Sox put two men on base against New York pitcher Rich Gossage. But Jim Rice, the major league's home run and slugging champion, flied to right, and Carl Yastremzski, who homered earlier, popped out to end the game.

Starting pitcher Ron Guidry earned his 25th victory against only three losses. Mike Torrez was the loser.

The playoff was necessary because the Yanks and Red Sox finished the regular season with identical 99-63 records. Boston had blazed to a big lead early this season, then saw the Yankees pass them, but came back to tie in the last few weeks. Dack to tie in the last few weeks.

Kickers travel to Grand Valley

By JERRY BRAUDE

State News Sports Writer
When MSU faces Grand Valley State College in its first road game of the season today, they will be up against a program that is years only in its third year.

Yet, MSU coach Joe Baum still sees the contest as a key one in preparing for a tough Notre Dame team Saturday.
"It's important for us to rebound from our last game (a 2-1 loss to Calvin College). Baum said. "Losing to Grand Valley would make our record 2-2 and would put us in a very difficult position." The Spartans won two of their first three games at home to open the season, but they only scattered one goal in each of the games In hope of putting the some additional punch into the scoring attack, Baum made some changes after the Thursday Calvin loss by "moving the better players further up in the line-up."

The Spartans will have Tom Coleman, whom Baum says has sibly played the best on the team so far this year, move up from possibly played the best on the team of the defense to the midfield position.

Also, Soleman Younes will move from midfield to weak forward and Baum plans on having forward Mike Price put more emphasis on offense instead of playing back. Bruce Wilden was removed from the starting line-up to make room for these changes. "We're taking a chance of sacrificing some defense for more scoring opportunities." Baum said scoring opportunities," Baum said.

"We were fortunate that we didn't have a game last weekend so that we could have more time to work on the changes. We had a couple of excellent practices. The loss against Calvin may have pushed the players to work even harder. The loss was an eye opener and brought us back down to earth. It showed us that we're not that special of a team at this point of the season."

Although Raum feels (NSC) is one of the later severies and town.

Although Baum feels GVSC is one of the less experienced teams on the Spartans' schedule, he still expects them to put up a good "Grand Valley State gets a lot of players from the Grand Rapids Youth League, which is an excellent league," Baum said. "The same thing holds true with Calvin. The players are well coached and are experienced in the fundamentals of the game. I expect them to put a good team on the field."

Taylor continues swim

RIMINI. Bahamas (UPI) - Marathon swimmer Stella Taylor stroked her way into the Gulf Stream Sunday night just at sunset and vowed to keep swimming despite painful jellyfish stings.

She called for more petroleum jelly to ease the pain and a special supply of the ointment was air dropped to the "Big O," the lead boat in her facility.

At 10 p.m. EDT Sunday, Taylor was estimated to be 18 miles due west of Orange Cay. The water was calm and the halo of lights from Miami could be seen on the horizon. At about 9 p.m., an 8-foot shark had been seen swimming through the area,

She began her swim at 10:41 a.m. EDT Sunday, diving into the water at Orange Cay and heading toward Florida.

Lights from the Big O were turned on and divers armed with high-powered rifles were positioned on the stern of the boat to protect Taylor from sharks. She is swimming without a shark cage.

Spotters said Taylor, 46, was maintaining a pace of 70 strokes a minute. She is wearing a red one-piece bathing suit and red bathing cap, a white T-shirt and goggles. The crossing from the Bahamas to Florida was

The crossing from the Banamas to Fioriaa was expected to take between 30 and 40 hours.

This was the second attempt to swim the Gulf Stream for Taylor, who was dubbed the "swimming nun" in her first try because of the years of study at a convent. She left before taking her final vows.

Emerging from the Valley Farm tournament with two wins and a tie, the MSU field hockey team has much to be excited about as the season gets underway.

The first of the three games, a tie against Kent State University, was a bit slow and sloppy. "It was a typical season-opener," coach Sam Kajornsin said. "We improved in the second half," he stickers' play added. Nancy Lyons scored the goal for the Spartans.

Against Illinois State, MSU had control

throughout most of the contest, and won 3-0. Jennie Klepinger scored two of the goals, while Nancy Babcock scored one defensively from a short corner.

The big surprise to everyone was the 3-2 Spartan upset of Southern Illinois, last year's Illinois champs and national tournament partici-

U.S., German students share common problem

By JOANNE LANE State News Staff Writer

German and American universities share the German and American universities snare the mutual concern of having too many graduates and not enough jobs, the chancellor of the University of Freiburg in Freiburg. West Germany, told a group of MSU students Monday. Friedrick Wilhelm Siburg, speaking in tl. German library in Wells Hall, said he believes German universities need to have less yogational.

German universities need to have less vocational ly-oriented courses and more of an interdiscipli nary curriculum.
"West Germany has too many lawyers, doctors and teachers," Siburg said. "Originally in the time of Hitler only 5 percent of the population attended college and now that figure has jumped German students pay no tuition, Siburg explained, but are financed by the government.

Under the 1948 constitution, students are allowed the freedom to study in the field of their choice with some guarantee of a job.

However, since the number of students has risen so quickly. Siburg said, entrance into the university is no longer as easy as it was

The student must now pass entrance exam and are not guaranteed a position in the field of their choice, he said.

"I have friends in Germany who have passed the entrance exams and have waited as long as three years to get into their chosen fields," Geoff Bodeau, a junior majoring in German, said.

Siburg also told the group that though there are now too many students the problem will reverse itself by 1985. He explained that with the declining birth rate, enrollment in the universities by 1985 will be at an all-time low and the university will be overstaffed.

Consequently, German university adminstra-tors, keeping in mind future problems, will not allow the purchase of currently needed materials to combat the overcrowded situation.

"The German universities have many internal problems with very few answers," Siburg said.

Siburg is visiting MSU in connection with the German department's exchange program where students enroll at the University of Freiburg for

The program has existed for 10 years and each year seven to 12 MSU students take 45 credits in liberal arts and sciences at the University of Freiburg and receive MSU credit.

No Freiburg students as of yet have come to MSU but an exchange is being considered.

The University of Freiburg has 17,500 students and is located in the southwest corner of West Germany in the Black Forest region.

MSU currently has seven students enrolled at Freiburg for their junior year.

Acting chairperson of the Department of German and Russian Mark Kistler said, "We are grateful the Freiburg officials are here cement-ing relations between the schools so that the

How Do You Learn To Read Faster? With The Same Comprehension?

At the Mini Lesson you will find out how the Evelyn Wood course eliminates the habit of read ing only one word at a time. How you can learn how natural this is, look at the dot in the middle of this phrase

Try as you may you can't help but see the other words. With training natural, but un used potential. You learn to see groups of words simultaneously. This will double triple, possibly quadruple your present ability

This concept is diametrically opposed to the old fashioned speed reading technique of picking out key phrases. In the Evelyn Wood course, skimming is a dirty word!

Is there a positive value in reading faster? Ask the honors student how fast he reads. Chances are he doesn't know either. Test him and you may find out he's one of those rare birds who has learned to read faster by accident or more likely by his sheer drive to succeed. That's what Evelyn Wood discovered in 1945.

Why Do So Many Enroll?

This question was posed to several thousand college freshmen who had just enrolled in the Evelyn Wood course. The answers were varied. but mostly on the same wave length: 1) They wanted to reduce their study time. 2) They wanted to feel more confident in class, more in control, and 3) They wanted to learn more, to achieve better grades

At the end of the course, each student was isked if his goals were met. Over 95% said yes. The other 5% received their tuition back (but more of that later.) Look at these statistics, compiled from a list of 43 college campus classes where the Evelyn Wood course was taught

No of times comprehension speed increased 10.2% 408

Read what the University of Illinois student paper said (Ed Seiud) "If a student avails himself of all the facilities by the (Evelyn Wood) Institute and attends all the class sessions, the price boils down to only about $2 an hour, cheaper than any private tutoring you'll ever find. Spread over four years, the course can save thousands of study hours and can probably affect a boost in a student's grade point average. Assignments which once took days can be accomplished in a matter of hours. leaving much more time for other pursuits. The Institute estimates that it can save average students 350 hours of study time each semesterprobably an understatement

What Happens If I Flop?

If you fail to increase your reading ability at least 3 times, you receive a full tuition refund. No catches, no hassles. We put it in writing
