

Local bars aid opposition to Proposal D

Last in a series

Inside Dooley's East Lansing, posters, T-shirts, buttons and bumper stickers decry Proposal D on the Nov. 7 ballot, which would raise the legal Michigan age to 21 if passed.

"STOP PROHIBITION. Vote 'NO' on D," a red-and-white bumper sticker says. Throaty disc jockies boom out warnings between songs to "protect your right to drink" and to register to vote before Oct. 6.

Beneath a banner urging voter registration, neatly-groomed men and women sit in orange director's chairs at a circular table. Tapping pencils, sipping drinks, they wait to register another bar-goer.

At Lizard's Underground, 224 Abbott Road, employees deputized to register students sit near the door, armed with anti-21 pamphlets. About 50 such deputies are scattered through East Lansing bars.

If Proposal D passes by a simple majority, the new age would take effect 45 days after the Nov. 7 election. Unlike the legislation to raise the age to 19 in December, the proposal contains no "grandfather clause" to cover people who already have drinking rights.

Lizard's owner Kent Harder said he is donating all of a special 50-cent Sunday cover charge to the Michigan Committee for the Age of Responsibility, the group leading the attack on Proposal D.

The Alle Ey, 220 M.A.C. Ave., has had about 10 employees deputized to register students, manager Bob Stark said.

Gary Foltz, owner of Dooley's, 131 Albert Ave., is the "ring leader" for local bars, and is taking the lead in contributing money to MICAR and blasting the proposal.

With "D" threatening to rattle the economic life of bars, party stores and students in East Lansing and other college towns, voter registration is up in this election year.

And bar interest in voter registration is also up. "It's the first time I've ever seen somebody from the bars show up at a voter registration meeting," said Jess Sobel, Ingham County Commissioner, D-East Lansing, and a voter activist.

Voter sign-up for the three days of MSU fall registration outpaced that of 1976, the last major election year in Michigan, the East Lansing City Clerk's Office said.

New voter sign-up totaled 3,613, compared to 3,152 during fall registration 1976. Another 967 registered as of Oct. 1, figures showed.

A city official in Ann Arbor said registration is "definitely up," attributing it to the ballot proposal. Registration was reported "steady" in Mt. Pleasant, home of Central Michigan University.

Many students interviewed by the State News said they were only registering to vote on Proposal D.

"It's the only reason I'm registering," said one sophomore woman, who asked not to be identified. "We hold every other responsibility as an adult, so we should be able to drink."

But other students disagreed.

"I don't think it should have ever been lowered to 18," senior Heidi Haag said. "I don't think enough of the 18- or 19-year-olds are mature enough to handle alcohol."

Bar owners and students say the proposal will be defeated in East Lansing and other Michigan college towns — but statewide, it will win.

"What we do locally doesn't really matter much," said Eric Craymer, manager of the Rainbow Ranch, 2843 E. Grand River Ave.

Economically, bar owners have the most to lose by the passage of Proposal D. Harder, of Lizard's, said 50 percent of his part-time student employees would be laid

COMPLEX WOULD INCLUDE 'CLASS A' HOTEL

Area may gain convention arena

By KIM CRAWFORD
and BETH TUSCHAK
State News Staff Writers

The dream of a new Lansing-based convention center and arena, which would ideally host MSU basketball games, could become a reality in the not-so-distant future.

But for some area farming organizations, which would like to see an agriculture exhibition arena built with the help of MSU funds, the outlook may not be so bright.

MSU President Edgar L. Harden, who is acting in an advisory capacity to the Lansing committee which proposed the convention center, said Lansing has been in need of a "class A" hotel for some time.

And there may be enough of an untapped market to warrant building one, or all, of the proposed complex, according to a study done by Economics Research Associates, a California-based research firm.

Two possible sites for the arena and accompanying facilities were mentioned — one in downtown Lansing and one in Delhi Township near the I-96 and U.S. 127 interchange.

The feasibility study, undertaken at the request of the Ingham County Board of Commissioners, shows that a new 100,000-square foot convention center would bring to Lansing convention business currently being lost.

A 300 to 400 room hotel would be built adjacent to the convention center to provide food and lodging to those attending conventions, according to the study.

"A convention center and a large, new hotel could make Lansing a leading convention city," Harden said.

The proposed 15,000-seat arena would be geared for entertainment and sports purposes, including rock concerts and MSU basketball games.

Harden said though MSU would not be putting any money into the facility, the arena could be leased for basketball games if it conforms to certain criteria.

"If the arena meets Big Ten standards and gives MSU complete scheduling control, there is a great possibility that the arena would be leased," Harden said.

Another proposed arena, which would house agriculture exhibitions and shows, was also included in the study.

"The results were pretty dismal," said one of the building's advocates.

"What we envisioned was a huge exhibition arena which could be used for livestock and agriculture shows," said Richard Lehnert, editor of Michigan Farmer magazine.

Lehnert said the original plan was for the arena to be built on MSU land, with the help of University funds.

"A group of us representing the farming and agriculture community met with President Harden and he made it painfully clear to us that University funds could not be used for this project at this time," Lehnert said.

He said the agriculture committee did not have the same influence with state legislators and the community that the convention halls planners did.

Money for the convention center would be generated through tax revenues, federal grants, bonds and city and state funds.

"The University will certainly be supportive of plans for an agriculture center," Harden said, "but not responsible for funds."

But some county and township officials are not pleased with the moves by the city of Lansing to locate the arena with a convention center and hotel in the downtown area.

Debbie Stabenow, Ingham County Board of Commissioners chairperson and Democratic candidate for the 58th district House seat, said she fears the spirit of cooperation may be fading.

"It's not my intent to say they (Lansing) don't need a hotel downtown," she said, "but we've got to look at agricultural needs too."

She said Lansing city officials have "mixed feelings" about discussions with other local governments and parties in the county about an agricultural exposition center.

"We wanted to take a community approach so we wouldn't have the local units of government fighting each other," Stabenow said.

She said she is "concerned about the way they (Lansing participants) went off on their own."

Billie Dowell, Delhi Township supervisor, expressed her dissatisfaction with recent discussions with the Lansing citizen committee which is working on the arena-convention center idea.

"I thought it was starting out with intergovernment cooperation for the whole community," she said. "I think it's getting too political. Delhi can't compete with Lansing."

Dowell said she dropped out of the talks after members of the Lansing citizen committee started to move independently on matters concerning the proposed downtown location.

"The city of Lansing representatives

Gay rights return to Miami ballot

MIAMI (AP) — The Miami area is in for another gay rights battle.

The fight opened Wednesday with petitioners, led by a homosexual rights advocate, forcing onto the Nov. 7 ballot a broad new equal opportunity ordinance that would ban discrimination based on a wide range of factors, including "sexual or affectional preferences."

In including those four words, this proposal would be similar to a measure repealed in a bitter and well-publicized referendum in 1977.

The new proposal, however, would also include other categories of forbidden discrimination — for example, against students, pregnant women, union members and people whose native language is not English.

Robert Kunst, who helped lead the homosexual rights movement here during the 1977 campaign and helped write the new proposed ordinance, said that "this is not a gay issue or a gay rights ordinance but rather a full equality of opportunity law."

Senate hopefuls' debate low-key

By KIM GAZELLA
State News Staff Writer

The two candidates seeking election in the race for the 24th district Senate seat aren't doing much running.

Instead, they are walking side-by-side on most of the issues addressed in their campaigns.

Democratic candidate Larry Owen and Republican William Sederburg both agree the Senate needs cleaning up, MSU faculty should get higher salaries, and the state needs a strong energy policy.

The two hopefuls also agreed Legislature should require state universities to divest stock holdings in corporations that have interests in South Africa.

The only disagreements between the opponents were over Medicaid funding for abortions and tax limitation proposals.

Sederburg opposes Medicaid funding for abortions, saying state funds should not be used to encourage abortion as a means of birth control.

"Funding is an incentive for abortion," he said, while maintaining that the matter is one of personal choice. "We should instead make birth control more available to all citizens."

Owen responded that the encouragement of abortion is not the issue but it is one of equity and fairness.

"Women have the freedom of choice," he said. "We can't treat some women differently than others."

On taxes, Sederburg supports the so-called Headlee proposal because he said it will force the Legislature to make higher priority decisions to prevent future growth in taxes.

PBB exposure may lower mental abilities

LANSING (UPI) — Health officials said Wednesday a preliminary study shows children with high levels of PBB in their bodies received lower grades on developmental tests than those with less exposure.

The finding prompted State Public Health Director Maurice Reizen to appoint a special panel for a follow-up investigation.

The study, carried out by child psychologist Elizabeth A. Seagull, involved standard tests on block building, puzzle-solving, word knowledge, drawing a design and drawing a child.

Health officials stressed that the study compared test scores of farm children whose mothers were heavily contaminated with PBB in the initial mishap in 1973.

There were no reported differences in overall performance on the standard developmental tests between the 25 PBB-exposed children and a control group of 19 children born to unexposed mothers.

The significance was in the way test scores broke down within the PBB-exposed group. Further investigations by the panel are expected to attempt to determine if heavy exposure to PBB hurts educational development.

"Results of the study did show a deficit in the developmental performance of children with greater than .100 parts per million body levels of PBB on four out of five tests," Seagull said.

"While this study is not definitive, it certainly suggests that the state of Michigan should pursue this particular line of research to see if the results hold up.

HUD grants $1.16 million for housing

By BRUCE BABIARZ
State News Staff Writer

The MSU Student Housing Corporation has been granted a $1.16 million reservation loan from the U.S. department of Housing and Urban Development, the State News has learned.

Official HUD confirmation will be sent to SHC next week after Congress is notified, HUD officials said. The grant has been confirmed by HUD officials in Washington, D.C.

Actual monies for the 3 percent interest loans won't be available until further HUD requirements are met and approved, a spokesperson in HUD's Washington, D.C. office said.

The reservation loan was granted under HUD's College Housing Program, which grants funds to universities and colleges on the basis of housing needs.

"It's a competitive process — your application competes with others from across the country," Joe Murphy, SHC president said.

About 315 applications were accepted nationwide and screened in Washington D.C. MSU was one of 68 colleges funded under the program, said Curtis Kohlman, director of Detroit HUD's College Housing Program.

The loans can be used to buy new buildings, renovate existing structures and make them energy efficient, Murphy said. The loans run from 10 to 40 years, based on the life expectancy of structures, he said.

New buildings cannot be purchased until SHC holds a membership referendum vote on which buildings to buy, if any, Murphy said.

"It's a three-week process for the Board of Directors to hold a referendum vote," Murphy said. "Then HUD will be notified to give us the forms needed to complete the loan process."

Murphy said most of the money will be used to purchase new buildings if SHC votes to do so.

SHC has nine houses, and intends to purchase six buildings and renovate an existing one, Murphy said.

SHC completed 100 pages of documents required by HUD to meet the July 28, 1978 deadline.

Floor plans of houses SHC intends to purchase were submitted, Murphy said. Data on current housing status for students in East Lansing and a breakdown of renovation and energy conservation costs were also submitted.

The college housing program was started in 1950 to provide additional housing for students. Student co-ops become eligible to receive money through the program.

Finland crash leaves 15 dead

HELSINKI, Finland (AP) — Fifteen persons, including three members of the Finnish Parliament and a district governor, died in the crash of a vintage DC-3 air force transport plane in a lake in central Finland shortly after takeoff, the air force said Wednesday.

The plane, carrying 12 persons and a crew of three, crashed into Lake Joursvesi moments after taking off from Rissala airport at Kuopio, 243 miles northeast of Helsinki.

Hoodlums slaughter nine people

MARSEILLE, France (AP) — Gunmen coolly walked into a Marseille bistro and slaughtered nine people in a savage gangland "hit" recalling Chicago's 1929 St. Valentine's Day massacre.

Investigators said a large-scale search was under way.

A witness said three or four masked men walked into the Telephone Bar just after 8 p.m. Tuesday and systematically killed proprietor Andre Leone and eight customers. A 61-year-old man in an apartment above the tavern was reported seriously wounded.

"It is Chicago of the 30s," said the Paris

daily France-Soir.

The hoodlums of Marseille have broken Al Capone's record.

It is assumed that Capone's men were responsible for the 1929 murder of seven persons, some of them members of the rival Bugs Moran gang. The killers, dressed as police, lined up the victims against a garage wall and riddled them with machine gun bullets.

But Marseille Police Chief Pierre Chateau said "this is the work of crazy neighborhood punks. It has nothing to do with the gangs of yesteryear."

Government plans to eradicate measles

WASHINGTON (UPI) — HEW Secretary Joseph Califano, citing a reduction of nearly 30,000 cases of measles this year, Wednesday announced a campaign to eliminate other than foreign sources of the disease in this country by Oct. 1, 1982.

"If we are successful," he told a news conference, "no measles will occur in the United States after that date unless the disease is introduced from other coun-

A major target of any such program would be Michigan, which had the second highest case total in the nation during a 38-week period this year.

The measles campaign, he said, will cost from $4 million to $5 million a year over what is already being spent on immunization efforts.

Federal workers' benefits quadruple

WASHINGTON (AP) — Benefits paid to federal workers for alleged job-related injuries quadrupled to $546 million between 1970 and 1977 because of poor screening for potentially fraudulent claims, a congressional watchdog agency charged Wednesday.

And the cost to taxpayers for federal worker compensation benefits could reach $1 billion by 1980 unless the government does a better job of verifying that the claims are valid, the General Accounting Office said in a report.

Between 1970 and 1977, the federal civilian workforce fell from about 2.99 million people to 2.85 million. But the GAO reported these developments during the same time span:

- injuries reported by federal employees rose 72 percent, from 120,625 to 207,615; and
- claims increased 70 percent, from 17,795 to 30,301.

Employee pays voluntarily, says Diggs

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Charles C. Diggs, D-Mich., Wednesday denied he required employees to kick back part of their salaries for his personal or office expenses and claimed a former office manager who helped him pay personal debts was acting voluntarily.

In more than one hour on the witness stand Diggs conceded he was in financial difficulties from 1972 until 1976 when he was charged with inflating salaries of five employees so they would pay both official and personal expenses.

Diggs testified his former office manager, Jean G. Stultz, began helping him by paying $2,500 for a portrait he needed when he was made chairperson of the House District of Columbia Committee in January 1973, and continued to pay other personal bills from time to time until about May 1976.

Diggs denied she ever expressed any dissatisfaction about the arrangement, stressing Stultz's help was completely voluntary.

Two killed in bus accident

CONWAY, N.H. (AP) — A bus from Missouri, taking 41 old people on a tour of New England's autumn foliage, collided with a car on a foggy mountain pass Wednesday, and the two people in the car died as it erupted into flames, police said.

At least 17 persons were injured. State police said the car hit the Continental Trailways bus on the Kancamagus Highway, about six miles from Conway.

They tentatively identified the two dead persons as John Mitchell, 65, of Greensboro, Vt., the driver, and Phyllis Knight, 65, of North Bridgeton, Maine.

State Police Trooper Robert McIntosh said it appeared that the car had crossed over the center line and struck the bus head-on.

A news reporter at the crash site said the car jammed the bus doors against the highway guardrail and the elderly occupants were forced to escape through the windows of the bus.

Strong quake shakes California

BISHOP, Calif. (AP) — An earthquake shook the southern and central Sierra Nevada and most of the San Joaquin Valley on Wednesday, breaking a few windows, causing landslides and possibly knocking out power in one area. No injuries were reported.

Seismologists said the 15-second tremor, centered 17 miles northwest of Bishop, measured 5.7 on the Richter scale.

"It was strong. I was standing up and it made me sway back and forth," said police officer Earl McWilliams. Bishop, a town of about 4,000 people, is 300 miles north of Los Angeles.

At least three aftershocks were felt after the earthquake struck at 9:43 a.m.

Elizabeth Wimmer, of the Los Angeles Department of Water and Power, said the quake may have been responsible for a power outage in the Owens Valley area. She said the quake's epicenter appeared to have been under the Control Gorge Power Plant.

Numerous landslides were reported around the quake's epicenter, the Inyo County Sheriff's department said. Rock slides were reported on U.S. 395, the major highway up the eastern slope of the Sierras.

FAR EAST TRIP CALLED MOST IMPORTANT

Mexico's president plans visit

MEXICO CITY (AP) — President Jose Lopez Portillo plans to visit China and Japan this month on what could become one of the most important foreign trips made by a Mexican president in years.

The goal is to help Mexico solve a chronic agricultural problem and expand markets for its infant, but potentially great, petrochemical industry.

Mexican government officials are downplaying the trip because of what is called the bad taste left by expensive, often unproductive trips by Lopez Portillo's predecessor.

Lopez Portillo, 58, will leave Mexico City Oct. 21 for Peking and his third visit this year to communist country. He was in the Soviet Union May 15-25 and in Bulgaria May 26-29.

After a week in China he will spend four days in Japan.

Lopez Portillo took over the presidency Dec. 1, 1976 from Luis Echeverria Alvarez, just after the Mexican peso had been devalued, while unemployment was high and inflation was skyrocketing.

He still has those problems, and said his main achievement since assuming leadership was "keeping the ship of state afloat."

There has been little mention of the trip in the national press.

The president wants closer ties with China and the Soviet Union but he also wants to keep cordial relations with the United States for geographic reasons, and because it does about 75 percent of its trade across the northern border.

But discovery of huge petroleum deposits far larger than imagined has thrust Lopez Portillo into a unique bargaining position around the world. During his European trip he laid the groundwork for an oil deal with the Soviet Union and would like to do the same with the Chinese, who are eager to modernize their nation.

U.S. decides on visa for Rhodesia's minister

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department, ending two weeks of indecision, announced Wednesday it is allowing Rhodesia Prime Minister Ian Smith to visit the United States in hopes it will contribute to a settlement of his country's six-year-old civil war.

The action climaxed a tug-of-war within the administration over the propriety of approving visa applications by leaders of a regime which the United Nations regards as illegal.

Visas were approved for Smith and his three black allies on Rhodesia's ruling Executive Council.

Department spokesperson Thomas Reston said the administration decided to make an "exception" to U.N. sanctions against Rhodesia because "we believe the visit can contribute to the process of achieving a settlement."

In Salisbury, delighted government officials said Smith and one of the black leaders in the transition administration are scheduled to leave for the United States this weekend.

Intensive fighting spreads in Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Heavy rocket, mortar and artillery duels raged unchecked between Syrian troops and Christian forces Wednesday and the bombardment spread for the first time to the Muslim western sector of Beirut. The presidential palace on the city's eastern outskirts was reported hit by shells.

Official casualty figures were not immediately available, but the right-wing Phalangist radio said about 500 people had been killed or wounded in a 24-hour period.

The radio reported that bodies rotted in the streets and in hospitals because the heavy fighting made it impossible to dispose of the dead.

Red Cross officials said the threat of starvation and death from thirst was growing by the hour since the supply routes to the city had been cut off.

The United Nations Security Council was called into private consultations late Wednesday to discuss the Lebanese situation.

Earlier at the United Nations, Saudi Arabia's ambassador Jamiel M. Baroudy blamed Syrian President Hafez Assad for the fighting.

Site of air disaster now draws tourists

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The neighborhood where the nation's worst air crash occurred has become a tourist attraction, and some residents are bitter. "Why don't you go away and leave us alone?" reads a sign put up by Vera Knowles, whose home was undamaged when a Pacific Southwest Airlines jet and a small Cessna collided in the air and crashed into the quiet North Park section of this city on Sept. 25.

In all, 144 persons died as the planes plowed into several homes.

Since the crash, the grim crash scene has attracted hundreds of gawkers, men in shirtsleeves carrying cameras and women in shorts and halters with children in tow.

"For a very good view, try the city morgue," reads a hand-painted sign.

High school organization asks ASMSU for help in fight against Proposal D

By R.W. ROBINSON
State News Staff Writer

"We are interested in winning," Chris Magnus, public relations coordinator for the Three O'Clock Lobby, Inc., told the ASMSU Student Board Tuesday night.

Because the organization is interested in winning, it believes the board's tactics in opposing Proposal D will not be totally effective, Magnus said.

Proposal D is a measure on the Nov. 7 ballot that would change the drinking age to 21.

The Three O'Clock Lobby is an incorporated organization made up of high school students. Its purpose is "to raise the consciousness of Michigan youth on social and legislative issues and to unite them to have influence and power over the forces that affect them."

"It is good to inform the students on campus about Proposal D," Magnus said, "but we need to inform the masses to win the election."

He explained that there is nothing wrong with the student board's advertisement campaign against Proposal D, but he believes the board should educate the citizenry in Michigan on the reason why the bill should not be passed.

He asked the board for their support through money and participation in a rally at the state Capitol Oct. 24 which will focus on explaining facts the Three O'Clock Lobby feels are not well-known.

"I have heard about the way you don't work," Magnus said. "Here is a way you can work."

He went on to say if voters in the state realize the tactics which are being used to persuade them to vote in favor of the issue they would vote against the proposal.

He said if all the students in Michigan universities and colleges voted in opposition to raising the drinking age, they would only add up to the number of signatures on the petition which placed the proposal on the ballot.

"In this election it's going to take more than a college vote," Magnus said.

Magnus pointed out, "Young people have no higher risk under the influence of alcoholic beverages than anyone up to the age of 55."

He also said the Michigan Association of Secondary School Principals are against raising the drinking age, though most voters believe high school officials support the proposal.

"Apparently there are four or five sets of facts going around and apparently they are all wrong," Magnus explained.

In an attempt to encourage students to vote in opposition to Proposal D, the ASMSU Student Board allocated $150 to the Legislative Relations Cabinet from the special projects fund to continue its advertisement campaign which began last week.

Proposed mall foes ask campaign spending limit

By JANET HALFMANN
State News Staff Writer

Citizens for a Livable Community's campaign division has again asked Dayton Hudson Properties to agree to a $15,000 limit on overall campaign expenses.

At the same time CLC's campaign arm, the Committee for Balanced Development, agreed to a $4,000 limit on media advertising proposed by Dayton Hudson Aug. 28. CLC had originally requested an overall limit on campaign expenses.

CLC and Dayton Hudson are battling for voter support on a Nov. 7 referendum on whether the Dayton Hudson mall should be built in East Lansing.

Peter Hutchinson, director of Dayton Hudson Properties, said he was "very disappointed" in the agreements delivered Tuesday.

CLC's agreements didn't respond to two suggestions made by Dayton Hudson, he said.

Hutchinson proposed a $4,000 limit on media advertising which would be the "sum total of such activity by all parties on each side" of the mall issue.

If the limit applied only to CLC and Dayton Hudson and excluded other groups that might campaign against the mall, Dayton Hudson would be at a disadvantage, Hutchinson said.

James Anderson, coordinator of CLC, said no mention was made of other groups in the agreement because CLC isn't "able to bind other parties."

Hutchinson said the recent agreements also made no mention of his principle that both sides refrain from using rhetoric, sloganeering and unsubstantiated assertions.

Anderson said he considered that portion of Dayton Hudson's response a "part of the rhetoric of the campaign."

A limit on overall campaign spending is the main issue which must be resolved before other issues can be dealt with, Anderson said.

In CLC's proposed agreement, expenses would be defined as they are in the Michigan Campaign Finance Act.

Salaries, office rent, furniture rental and other indirect campaign expenses must be included in campaign financial statements filed with the Ingham County Clerk's office. Hutchinson said he doesn't consider items such as salaries and furniture as expenses directed toward influencing voters.

Hutchinson has said he is confident Dayton Hudson will not spend over $15,000 on activities directly related to trying to influence voters.

Hutchinson said he would probably send a letter to CLC expressing Dayton Hudson's concerns with the language of the spending limit as proposed.

Anderson said if Dayton Hudson submitted a limit proposal with stipulations, CLC would "look hard at it to see if it seemed reasonable."

Hutchinson said he has no problems with spending limits. The key is that both sides, rather than just two organizations, be bound by a limit agreement, he said.

MSU called number one in sin by visiting self-styled preacher

By NANCY ROGIER
State News Staff Writer

Warning against sex, masturbation and X-rated movies, a well-dressed evangelist named Max drew a lively crowd of about 200 students Wednesday to his pulpit near the Wells Hall bridge.

Fielding a continuous volley of questions and insults from his audience, the preacher held center stage for close to five hours and at the peak of his pitch, almost ended up in the Red Cedar River.

Max, who gave his full name as Max

Wayne Lynch, said he was at MSU because God told him to spread His word to all U.S. universities. He said he was a former mathematics instructor from Indiana University who quit teaching when God told him not to work for humanity any more.

"God sent me here to preach the Word," Lynch said. "If you reject the truth, that's between you and God. If you accept the truth, that's also between you and God. I'm here to tell you the truth so you can make an intelligent choice."

Leafing through his Bible to answer questions from the crowd, Lynch told students how the Devil rebelled and was thrown out of heaven along with one-third of the angels and how Adam's downfall took place because he listened to Eve. One student astride a bicycle came forward to check the book and hastily retreated when his bike fell over.

"God has spoken," the student said, amid laughter from students. "He just broke my 10-speed."

Lynch's stand on women had the crowd's reaction alternating between amused and angered.

"What started out as Adam's rib became Satan's rib, then women's lib," he said. "I'm not trying to put women down. I'm only trying to put them in their place."

"Millions of women today are depressed because they are out of the order of God," he told one female student. "I tell you, woman, if you need a pill to make you happy, then take the gospel!"

Lynch, dressed in a light blue suit, gray raincoat and sunglasses said God pays him and provides for his needs.

"I've been in this city for two days," he said. "And someone handed me a check this morning. I haven't even looked at it yet."

He pulled out the check and said it was for $175.

"Was it an angel?" came from another. Lynch, who walked back and forth in front of the crowd and sometimes jumped up and down, told the crowd that MSU was number one in sin.

"This is a notorious campus," he said "I've heard about it all over the United States." Cheers and applause followed his comments.

But, he added, there was hope for MSU students if they repented.

"I was once a sinner like most of you," he said.

One student responded, "We're not worried about faith in God. We're worried about a faith in you. You're a moron."

Lynch, who said he was from Terre Haute, Ind., told students his "associate" was a good example of a sinner turned Christian.

Students reported they had seen the associate, George Smock, Tuesday in the same location where he apparently tried to exorcise a demon from a student's body.

Lynch said he had no followers — "Thank God" — or church. Some of his comments about churches, particularly the Episcopalian and Catholic, drew sharp criticism from some students.

"You're pulling people away from Christ," one man said.

Another woman told the crowd, "If any of you are searching for Christ, go straight to Him and not to the man on the corner."

State News Mike Winter

Max Wayne Lynch, a self-proclaimed evangelist from Terre Haute, Ind., expounded the words of God and the Bible to about 200 students Wednesday by the Administration Building. Armed with the Bible and a bag of religious literature, he preached for about five hours.

Homecoming king, queen candidates' applications due today in Union office

Students who are interested in becoming a candidate for Homecoming King or Queen must have their applications in to the Union Activities Office today.

Applications must be accompanied by the signatures of 15 students from the sponsoring, fraternities and co-operatives.

Students living in apartments and houses off-campus may run for king or queen if they are sponsored by a registered student organization. There is a limit of one king and queen candidate per organization.

The Union Activities Office suggests that discretion be used when nominating a candidate. Selection will be based on poise, interests, appearance, congeniality and involvement in MSU activities.

Candidates will be notified as to the time and place of their interviews Friday. All interviews will be held in the Union Building Monday and Tuesday.

Winners will be announced Oct. 19, at the bonfire which will be held on the south campus intramural fields and again at the Homecoming game the following Saturday.

Homecoming activities include the bonfire, a special concert, pep rallies and a float competition. The theme is dedicated to the 50th anniversary of the construction of Beaumont Tower and is entitled "A Tower of Strength for 50 Years."

ASMSU to hire junior lawyer, change board attendance policy

By R.W. ROBINSON
State News Staff Writer

The ASMSU Student Board plans to hire a junior attorney to help with the work load in the ASMSU Legal Services office.

The new lawyer would work with Ken Smith, currently the only lawyer working for Legal Services.

Ian McPherson, Interfraternity Council president, was appointed to a newly-established space and personnel sub-committee which will interview prospective candidates for the open position. Only 12 of those who submit applications for the opening will be interviewed by the sub-committee after a "narrowing down process."

A proposed revision of the ASMSU constitution, compiled by former Student Board President Michael Lenz, was discussed quietly and briefly primarily because the board representatives admitted they had not read the constitution.

"You should have because you (the board) had all summer to do so," Dan Stouffer, College of Agriculture and Natural Resources representative, said.

The Lenz constitution was drafted last spring term as a proposal to change the present ASMSU constitution and a copy was submitted to each student board member.

"The people who wrote the bill (introducing the new constitution) were not aware of what the constitution could do to ASMSU and the cabinets," Stouffer said.

"It's lengthy," Stouffer said. "I would like to see the board set up a committee to see what is so wrong with our constitution. And why we need this piece of Uh!"

Stouffer's comment was made before the measure was formally introduced to the body and Kirk Messmer, College of Natural Science representative strongly felt Stouffer's opinion was out of order.

It was decided by the board to table the measure until all the representatives have read the proposal thoroughly.

The board also decided that each governing body, such as the Residence Halls Association, must select a permanent representative to the board if the president of those bodies cannot attend the board meetings.

Stouffer said the proposal was introduced because the ASMSU Code of Operations conflicted with the ASMSU Student Board Constitution.

The code now states:

"Chief Executives of governing groups may send an officer of their governing group as a voting representative in their absence."

The ASMSU Student Board Constitution states:

"Either the Chief Executive Officers, or the permanent representatives of the following associations: Off campus, Cooperatives, Residence Halls, Fraternities and Sororities, University Apartments, Residence Council, Pan-Hellenic Council and National Panhellenic Council . . ."

The ASMSU comptroller will now have to know one week in advance about any planned trips by student board members during the year because of a proposal that was overwhelmingly approved by the body.

"This will make people more accountable when they are going on trips," Stouffer said. "We have gotten into a lot of trouble in the past about trips."

McPherson disagreed with the strictness of the proposal. He said it does not leave the board any loopholes for emergencies.

McPherson suggested a friendly amendment to the proposal which stated that the comptroller has the authority to determine what trips will be considered an emergency.

An environmental council will be created by the board which would keep the representatives up to date on environmental matters. Although council members have not yet been selected, appointments will soon be made.

The Council of Graduate Students is preparing a reception for the MSU Board of Trustees and President Edgar L. Harden at the Kellogg Center Big Ten Room Oct. 26 between 5 and 7 p.m.

The student board agreed to donate $200 toward the affair and COGS is putting up $400 to pay for the total cost of the reception, which is being sponsored by the student liaison group to the Board of Trustees.

"I am in favor of the bill, because how many opportunities does a student receive to have a cookie with President Harden?" Tim VanAntwerp, president of the Residence Halls Association, said.

VanAntwerp will receive a $36 reimbursement from the board for his trip to Lansing over the summer to attend a Board of Trustees meeting as the student liaison representative.

Patricia Wilcox will act as ASMSU Student Board President Jones' Executive Assistant. Wilcox will continue to be director of the Labor Relations Cabinet as well as being responsible for projects dealing with women's issues and participating in advisory committees when Jones is unavailable.

He was treated and released at Lansing's Sparrow Hospital, officials said.

Former agent says CIA not necessary

By JOANNE LANE
State News Staff Writer

The United States does not need and should not have the secret services of the CIA, John Stockwell, a former CIA officer of 12 years, told a large crowd Tuesday night in Wells Hall.

Stockwell resigned from the CIA in April 1977 and has since violated his oath of secrecy by writing a book about the agency's operations entitled In Search of Enemies, A CIA Story.

He told the crowd of mostly students that the clandestine section of the CIA is not a passive group and they have used aggression in solving world problems.

Stockwell said when he went into the country in 1975 as the chief of the Angolan task force he was led to believe by the CIA that the world was being taken over by the communists.

"The CIA brainwashed their officers into believing that the communists were about to take over Angola," Stockwell explained. "They said other countries around the world were falling like dominoes to communists and the CIA was the only force big enough to stop them."

After arriving in Angola, Stockwell found that intervention was not necessary to U.S. national security as he had once believed, and many of the CIA operations in Angola were useless and unnecessary.

"At the time of the crisis in Angola the CIA's credibility among the American public was high," he explained. "They managed to present a distorted picture to the public of the situation in Angola and eventually made Americans sympathetic to the cause."

Stockwell said the CIA lied to just about everyone about Angola from the public and the press to Senate committees and the White House.

The CIA, Stockwell claimed, helped contribute to the bloodshed in Angola. They sent over 1,400 tons of arms to escalate the civil war.

Stockwell, who lived in Africa for 10 years, is a University of Texas graduate and has spent time in the U.S. Marine Corps.

He was assigned in the spring of 1975 as a case officer to the Tay Ninh Province, Vietnam. His duties there, and later in Angola, were to recruit individuals of all nationalities to spy for the United States.

"The situation in Vietnam was more than I bargained for," he said. "I witnessed an indecent end in Vietnam that really shattered my belief in the CIA as an elite organization, essential to national security."

"We had Vietnamese working for the CIA in Saigon and when that city fell in 1977 the CIA abandoned those people to the communists."

At this point in time, Stockwell said, he was ready to resign from the agency. He was making $32,000 a year and could have lived comfortably with his government pension. "I was on my way in to tell them I quit and they greeted me with 'welcome aboard the Angolan task force,'" Stockwell said. "My first reaction was 'no way,' but then I decided to stay, out of pure and simple curiosity to see how the United States could rationalize such actions."

While in Vietnam, Stockwell also served on a sexual entrapment mission which recruited "intelligent" prostitutes to sleep with Soviet and Chinese ambassadors. "This operation cost the taxpayers $28,000 and was unsuccessful," Stockwell said.

"The covert actions of the CIA are a joke. They don't respect their own cover and tend to work quite openly in foreign communities."

ASMSU should expedite passage of revised AFR so all others can approve

The ASMSU resolution designed to remove Eldon Nonnamaker from the appellate process of the ASMSU judiciary is a well-reasoned, overdue idea.

As vice-president for student affairs, Nonnamaker has more than a handful of administrative duties to keep his days full, without the extra burden of being the ultimate appellate judge in student grievances.

The rationale for having the vice-president as a judge in student affairs is questionable in itself, regardless of the time the duty might take. It is hard to second-guess the reasoning used when the original Academic Freedom Report was written, but it appears as if students were not trusted to make a reasoned decision in matters involving their peers. As if two judiciaries could not make a fair judgment without the advice and consent of an administrator.

Nonnamaker himself has made no secret of his reluctance toward exercising his judicial duties. And when he has exercised that responsibility, he very seldom overrules or revises a lower decision. He either has more faith in the Student-Faculty Judiciary than the AFR implies, or he quite frankly could not care less. We would like to believe he has faith in the lower judiciary.

Steve Politowicz, chairperson of the ASMSU Programming Board, must be commended for his recognition of the obvious. The bill introduced by him at the ASMSU board meeting should proceed through ASMSU red tape with all due haste. The best place to start would be for the ASMSU policy committee to reach a quorum and pass the bill on to the entire student board for approval.

After its approval by ASMSU, the measure must also be approved by the Student Council, University Committee on Student Affairs, Academic Council, President Harden and Board of Trustees. We urge all parties to seriously consider the motion and approve its passage as quickly as possible.

The need for student rights is a hard concept to grasp in the first place, especially when one considers that nearly every student at MSU is a legal adult and entitled the same rights and responsibilities as any other citizen.

As citizens it seems obvious that students should be treated in an equitable manner when a grievance arises over grades, living conditions, or student guidelines whether an Academic Freedom Report is in existence or not.

But since the obvious is not apparent to all, the AFR is still vitally important in guaranteeing certain rights — as well as being useful in spelling out certain student responsibilities.

Since there is still a need for these rights and responsibilities to be recorded in an Academic Freedom Report, and since there is obviously a need to revise the present AFR, let us be sure that all parties agree on what it says.

Milliken's abortion stance admirable

It is becoming increasingly apparent the Michigan Legislature opposes letting a woman decide whether or not to have abortion. They have again refused to allow Medicaid funding for abortions.

Weeks ago, the Legislature passed a $250 million Medicaid package. But because it omitted Medicaid funding for abortions, Gov. William Milliken vetoed the entire budget.

Milliken has gone on record as supporting a woman's choice to have an abortion. Financial condition, he concludes, should not be a barrier to that choice, and he is right. Abortion has been recognized by the Supreme Court as a right that cannot be denied by the states. We do not permit "money" to be a barrier to legal defense or freedom of expression. We should not tolerate it as a barrier to choice.

The Michigan Legislature, though, is being narrow-minded on this issue. They still wish to abolish abortion regardless of the Supreme Court, and have found financing as a possible way of doing it. They intend to keep abortion away from the poor because they know the poor have no voice in government.

A power struggle erupted during the summer between the Democrat-dominated Legislature and the Republican governor. It culminated in Milliken's refusal to support any portion of the Medicaid funding bill if the Legislature refused to support abortion funding. It was an admirable stance that led to a political standoff.

The standoff put the Legislature on the spot. They could either act favorably to Milliken's stand or answer to the voters for failing to secure Medicaid funding for the state. Milliken's plan almost worked.

But the Legislature was able to turn the tables and pass a temporary package that provides Medicaid funding for three months. They included a section that could be vetoed separately which limits funding for non-therapeutic abortions to $1. The Legislature, in essence, was laughing at Milliken and telling him to decide the fate of Medicaid in Michigan. He signed the package, except the abortion funding.

Milliken has taken a strong, respectful stance on the abortion issue. He has had to alter his tactics, though, to facilitate what he sees as the reality of politics. It is hoped that he will stick to his uncompromising position and force the Legislature to make a decision. It is too late for that decision to be made before the election, but that decision must be made regardless of the political atmosphere. Abortion rights must not be defeated by primitive thinking in a stubborn Legislature.

VIEWPOINT: GREEK LIFESTYLES

Greeks aren't geeks, they're good citizens

By CINDI DUBEY

Being a Greek while still residing in a dorm allows me to live and understand two major lifestyles. Through talking with friends in the dorm, I've noticed that many students entertain certain misconceptions about the Greek system as an alternative lifestyle. The most ill-conceived fallacy I've discovered existing is that non-Greeks tend to believe that Greeks are all the same; a type of mass stereotype.

Certain stereotypes have proven themselves to be more popular than others. For instance, all fraternity brothers chug beer, are athletic, extremely masculine and exceptionally good looking. To find a member of a fraternity all you have to do is go to the local bar or the nearest athletic field. Sorority sisters are a different matter; they are beautiful, conceited, secretive and live in a male-oriented world. All Greeks wear the same status symbols; t-shirts, Chemise Lacoste shirts with alligators on the left breast and straight legged cords.

Obviously anyone who actually believes that these steadfast images cover everyone in the Greek system definitely does not know the whole story. The part that they do know and base their accusations upon are the aspects of the Greeks that are in the public light; the Greeks at the bar, on the athletic fields and Greek Week. I'll admit that on these occasions the image that the Greeks portray may appear to justify stereotyping of Greeks by the non-Greeks. But there is another side to the Greeks, a serious side, one that is not as evident in the omnipresent public spotlight.

All Greek letter houses have an altruism or philanthropy that they actively support, usually by planning and participating in fund raising events. For example, last year Sigma Chi raised $1,200 for the Wallace Village for Children by holding a trampolene.

Delta Chi raised $400 going door to door for their main philanthropy, the American Cancer Society. Alpha Gamma Delta held a carwash for Cleft Palate, their international altruism.

In addition to altruism, all Greek houses encourage scholastics, usually by establishing set quiet hours, grade point requirements and scholarship.

The Greek system also has some advantages over dorm or apartment living. The friends you make are going to be there for the duration of your education and after graduation through alumni chapters. Alumni are often of aid when graduation passes and you need some leads in finding a job. Last year Fortune magazine reported that 80 percent of the nation's top executives have once belonged to a fraternity or sorority.

I'm not promoting the Greek system nor am I saying that it's the right alternative for everyone — as opposed to living in a dorm, co-op or apartment. What I am saying is that every Greek is a unique individual and although at times some Greeks may appear to fit the popular stereotypes, the stereotype doesn't really exist.

Why apologize?

Let's waste 'em!

The State News editorial "opinion" that "Latin America is owed an apology" reminds me of a line Elaine May (with Mike Nichols' help as a stooge) got off at an early anti-Vietnam rally in New York City's Madison Square Garden.

Mike was explaining to this charming archetype of the "dumb female" how President Kennedy had gotten caught with his pants down at the time Gary Powers' U-2 reconnaissance plane got shot down over the Soviet Union.

"Why, that's terrible!" she said indignantly. "I think President Kennedy should apologize to Premier Khrushchev!" and then she added, with a perfectly straight face: "... but not if he doesn't really mean it."

It brought down the house. But no U.S. "apologies" will bring down the house of Somoza in Nicaragua or the houses of any of the other puppet cliques ruling in the American Empire's colonies south of the border.

Your editorial insults the intelligence not only of your student readers, but of the people of Latin America.

Beware of unfair criteria in grading

In your time as a student at Michigan State, you are likely to encounter two often unfair criteria of course grading, if you haven't come across them already: compulsory attendance and participation in class discussions.

The reasons why the first may be unfair seem more obvious. Certain instructors enjoy lecturing, and feel that a large part of the course material is conveyed directly in lectures; hence, they reason, it is important that students attend class meetings. Some professors, it is painfully evident, would probably find themselves lecturing to near-empty classrooms were it not for their imposition of this requirement.

But it is an unjust one, because it doesn't allow for the possibility that some students might be able to learn the course material without listening to every lecture. If you can skip half of Prof. X's lectures and still ace his comprehensive final exam, there is no reason why your grade should be lowered simply because you were wise enough to realize your time could be better spent studying than by listening to his lectures.

The second criterion, class participation, seems to raise less protest, but is just as unfair. Especially when, all too often, class participation involves not real discussion, but playing a game with the prof that involves trying to guess the answer he or she wants. What a prof often does is pose a question to the class that has many possible answers, but as each student eagerly offers his or her own perception of the issue, the prof dismisses the answers until he or she gets just the one he or she is looking for. And then proceeds to do the same thing with another question.

This is not real discussion, but a kind of rhetorical guessing game, in which the prof manipulates and dominates the flow of ideas in the "discussion." It may or may not be a bad thing, but students certainly should have the option to not participate. Many of us prefer not to play the game and would rather keep our mouths shut and treat the "discussion" as what it really is: a lecture.

What both these unfair methods of grading have in common is this: what is being evaluated is not the student's knowledge of the course material, but how well the student plays the professor's game. True, there should be more to education than just "learning the material." But a student's ability to reason, to think, to feel, to consider alternatives, etc. should not be subject to any grading procedure; it should be allowed to flourish unhampered.

If grading must continue, it should be as objective as possible, and be based on student's knowledge of the material, as measured by quizzes, exams, or class assignments. Nothing more.

Letters say no, but what will the Nov. 7 voting tell?

RHA's position: check facts, vote

By R. DAVID WHITAKER

According to the results of a public opinion poll printed in the Lansing State Journal, 79 percent of Michigan's voters favor passage of Proposal D, the constitutional amendment raising Michigan's drinking age from 19 to 21. Obviously, there is a great deal of support for the proposal, which will appear on the Nov. 7 ballot; in fact, many analysts consider its passage a foregone conclusion.

In spite of this impressive display of public enthusiasm, confusion still reigns over the nature of the proposal and its effects. Here are some points of information the Residence Halls Association feels are essential to understanding the measure and its implications:

- the proposal takes the form of a constitutional amendment, not a statutory revision, and as such will become an integral part of the Michigan State Constitution, and will not be subject to revision or review by the Legislature;

- as a constitutional amendment, the proposal will take effect 45 days after passage, according to the state's elections division. Some sources have held the effective date to be 10 days after certification: this assertion is based on faulty information, confusing the constitutional provisions concerning initiative petition laws with those applying to initiative petition constitutional amendments; and

- there is no grandfather clause, rendering this measure substantially different from that which raised the drinking age to 19. Those persons now 18, 19, and 20 will be prohibited from drinking until their 21st birthday.

Proponents of the amendment are supporting their drive for ratification with two major arguments. First, they hold that since the 1972 reduction of the legal drinking age to 18, the incidence of alcohol-related accidents involving 18- to 20-year-olds has increased substantially enough to warrant considerable concern. Secondly, they argue that the 19-year-old statutory drinking age will not prove effective in curbing alcohol abuse in Michigan's high schools.

Opponents of the proposal point to difficulties with the statistical information being used to support the claim that teenage drunk-driving has increased, arguing that police tend to discriminate against teen-agers in both the testing and reporting of alcohol abuse. In addition, and more importantly, they maintain that the revocation of the 18-year-old drinking age will deprive people between 18 and 21 of their full adult rights, placing them in an illogical legal limbo somewhere between adolescence and adulthood (for instance, 18, 19, and 20 year olds will still be old enough to vote and be drafted, but not old enough to drink).

The Residence Hall Association of Michigan State University urges all students, whatever their personal convictions, to vote on Nov. 7. Voter registration will continue through Oct. 10, and an absentee ballot may be obtained by those registered in another voting district simply by requesting one in writing from their local county clerk. Please remember to vote: after all, access to the ballot box is not just a right, but a responsibility as well. RHA encourages everyone to exercise the right, and honor the responsibility.

Whitaker is an RHA representative from Case Hall. His viewpoint has been approved as an official RHA position by Tim Van Antwerp, RHA President.

Jesus didn't have to wait 'till 21

This letter is in defense of booze — alcohol, to those of you more literal-minded.

The history of alcoholic beverages goes clear to antiquity. The ancient Egyptians and Babylonians knew how to brew beer, as did the American Indians, who used malted corn. Even the Bible has many references to drinking — note it even says that Jesus drank wine.

Fermentation is moreover a natural process that was not necessarily designed to drive people senseless. In booze, humanity not only had a beverage that was oftentimes safer than the local water, but something of distinct medicinal value.

Alcohol, still widely used in medical circles, was found to be very useful for sterilizing wounds and a damn good anesthetic for early doctors. After a few good swigs of whiskey, patients didn't care where the doctor cut.

Yet in the last 100 years, the internal (infernal, some people say) consumption of booze has caused evermore controversy. Many people are under the assumption that "evil" lurks inside bottles of booze.

This is indeed a strange turn in the history of booze. People aren't evil if they choose to drink. But this choice involves a measure of responsibility: the responsibility of not hurting oneself and other people.

No law can teach people responsibility; that is something best left to families to teach their children. Proposal D, to raise the drinking age to 21, is not the right way.

Henry E. Sosa

tornado hasn't dropped me in the heart of Alabama.

First of all comes the outrageously hideous Headlee and Tisch amendments, which will probably raise my tuition by $5 to $20 per credit hour, will make life miserable for the poor and elderly, and will put our state's public school system on the same level of quality and performance as those in Ohio! (Do we deserve such a fate?)

Next is the Calvinist inspired crusade to raise the drinking age to 21. As a 19-year-old who faces the likely possibility of not being able to drink till January 1980, I'm mad as hell! What makes me angrier yet is that so many of my fellow students aren't registered to vote so that they could say no to Proposal D. What do they want to do on a Friday night? Watch Gilligan's Island reruns? If Proposal D passes, countless students will lose their jobs in restaurants, bars, and grocery stores. Personally, I find job hunting hard enough without an influx of unemployed peers on the job market.

Register to vote! We have to fight with the only weapon we have.

Plenty of laws to cover abuses

Rarely is there a proposition so myopic in vision as the referendum to raise the drinking age to 21. But then, raising the drinking age to 19 was similarly near-sighted — and it passed!

The 19-year-old drinking age passed in response to the impassioned plea of high school administrators to get alcohol out of the high schools. This time around the Michigan Association of Secondary School Principals is on record in opposition to the 21 age hike!

In this state and in this nation, people are considered legally adult at 18. That point alone shows how totally unnecessary the 21 age hike is.

First of all — drunk driving — no drinking age level is needed here as this state already has strict laws governing reckless and drunk driving, if they are enforced. Second — irresponsible drinking — Michigan already has drunk and disorderly laws covering all people of legal age, not just those between 18-21. And people who are alcoholics already get help from AA through the courts.

And third, drinking age laws are much too easy to get around. There is, after all, hardly a soul who hasn't imbibed a single drop until 18! These laws are next to impossible to enforce without creating the equivalent of a police state.

It occurs to me that the goody-two-shoes who push this proposal would be better off teaching their children to handle alcohol responsibly, because this proposal is no good.

McCarthy doesn't give 'em Hell

By ROSANNE SINGER
State News Reviewer

"I just happened to be in the right place at the wrong time." Thus Harry S. Truman explains how he got to be president in Give 'em Hell, Harry, the one-man show presented by the Lecture Concert series Tuesday night at the University Auditorium.

Playwright and director Samuel Gallu has created a fascinating reminiscence of Truman's life and times, in which the president interacts with a variety of characters, though none ever appear onstage. He chats with the ghost of Franklin Roosevelt in the Oval Room of the White House, strolls along the beach at Wake Island with General Douglas MacArthur and pauses while mowing his lawn in Independence, Missouri to talk with his wife, Bess. He shares with the audience his thoughts on former presidents, and little confidences about them.

For the bulk of the play, Truman verbally recreates different moments in his career. He confronts the Missouri Ku Klux Klan members who threatened to kill him, handles a drunken Irish unit as an army officer in World War I and addresses townspeople across the country in what was called his Whistle Stop Campaign of 1948.

A one-man show, Give 'em Hell, Harry, demands extreme concentration and energy from the participating actor. Tuesday night, Kevin McCarthy enacted only a superficial Truman. Physically, he looked the part — in one sequence as he mowed his front lawn in Missouri with his shirt sleeves rolled up he looked startlingly like Truman. He also captured what must have been a Truman habit of quipping cheerily, "That's right." For the most part, however, McCarthy seemed to have trouble maintaining his grasp on the part.

Truman is alone onstage, but reacts to and converses with imaginary presences. Unfortunately, in each confrontation McCarthy's tone, inflection and attitude remained the same, erasing the individuality of those other characters. As he stepped from the Oval Office to the floor of the Senate there was no change in voice projection, no transition from a conversational tone to a speech voice. McCarthy rarely waited long enough for imaginary characters to respond before answering them; only when he addressed the audience did his lines have some focus.

McCarthy delivered his lines at a consistent speed, regardless of circumstance. At one point, Truman discusses the difficulty he had deciding to drop the bomb. McCarthy conveyed little sense of the weightiness of the matter, choosing not to slow down his usual conversational pace. When confronting MacArthur on Wake Island, McCarthy's voice expressed little of the underlying tension between the two men. Throughout, his Missouri accent was inconsistent and his command of the part tenuous. His Truman was likeable, humorous and earthy — but not a great man or president.

Give 'em Hell, Harry is an arresting and imaginative one-man entertainment, and in the hands of a more competent actor could well have been an exciting recreation of an appealing personality and his era.

A new 'Little Women' on TV: despite it all, it was still good

By DEBORAH HEYWOOD
State News Staff Writer

When I was in sixth and seventh grade my favorite books were Louisa May Alcott's. I had the whole collection lined up on my bookshelf — An Old Fashioned Girl, Jack and Jill, Rose in Bloom, Eight Cousins and, of course, Little Women. I devoured those books, reading and crying over each one at least a dozen times.

I guess I consider myself some kind of pseudo-authority on the Alcotts. About a month ago I went on a tour of the Alcott house in Concord, Mass., where my grandmother is a tour guide. We spent a few hours going through the house and she filled me in with all kinds of little-known trivia and stories about the Alcott family. I even took a trip to Fruitlands, Bronson Alcott's (Louisa's father) ill-fated attempt at communal living, inspired in part by his friends and contemporaries, Emerson and Thoreau.

So, naturally, when I learned another version of Little Women was being made for TV, I cringed a little. I just couldn't visualize Susan Dey, of The Partridge Family, as Jo and Eve Plumb, of The Brady Bunch, as Beth. Better to stick with Katharine Hepburn and Elizabeth Taylor in the original version, I thought.

But no matter how sentimental or romantic the new version might have been, it kept admirably close to the original script. The story line was virtually unchanged, and the language was definitely circa 1860.

After the initial culture shock that accompanied the beginning of the show, it was easy to believe I was reading the old story again. No one but Meredith Baxter-Birney could have played Meg, and Eve Plumb and Ann Deussenberry were excellent as Beth and Amy. Although Susan Dey is really too pretty to play Jo, her adept characterization of the tomboy writer more than made up for it.

William Shatner, however, was the real surprise. As Professor Bhaer, he sports a German accent and wavy black hair. His portrayal of the proud, kind and sensitive professor was a real delight to watch.

It might be very easy for women who watched the show to condemn the traditional roles women played in the movie. All of them, except Beth (who dies) are 'hitched' by the end of the movie; even stubborn Jo succumbs to Professor Bhaer's insistence that he support her.

What's important, I think, is not to let our views and perceptions of the world in 1978 cloud the actions of those in the past. Even if our ideas and values make a lot of sense and seem quite natural now, we can still miss a lot by condemning others with different values. I was somewhat taken aback in several parts of the movie by some obvious sexism, but I couldn't let it spoil my appreciation of the movie as a whole.

The only real flaw was that the movie should have been on at an earlier time for children. Running it two consecutive school nights until 11 p.m. was certainly a mistake.

It was not a movie to miss, especially if you've ever read Little Women — and even if you haven't. And if you're like me, and enjoy crying over movies, you would've loved it.

Dressage instructor keeps a tight rein on his horse course

By REBECCA DICKEN
Horses, horses, horses, horses,
horses, horses, horses, horses,
all directions, horses, horses...
— Patti Smith

As you travel the long, bumpy driveway leading to the Rowe Dressage Stable you know that horses are not allowed to run around in all directions here.

James P. Rowe, owner of the stables on Jolly Road in Okemos and MSU dressage instructor, has devoted most of his life to training horses.

The attractive 56-year-old sauntered around the viewing area of the training arena talking about his life time involvement with dressage training and performing.

Dressage is the precision control of a horse's gait and pace in response to the rider's hand, rein and leg movements.

"My earliest memories revolved around horses and being near them," Rowe said.

Rowe dresses in breeches and spurred boots and wears a hunting knife suspended from his belt. The entrance to his stables is decorated with colorful ribbons and shiny trophies won by Rowe's students. Rowe delivers constant barbs and jokes to his human counterparts, but his style is smooth and gentle to the horses he obviously loves.

"I am not even sure how many horses we own," said Sharon Rowe, his wife and teaching partner.

The Rowes teach about 150 MSU students dressage twice a week, and have been doing so for the last five years.

MSU offers three courses in dressage instruction taught by the Rowes under the Health, Physical Education and Recreation program. The courses are taught at the Rowe Dressage Stable.

A bachelor of arts degree is not available in dressage but the Rowes are pushing the University to establish one.

"Dressage is the systematic training of horses and rider corresponding to ballet for humans," Jim Rowe said.

"The horse is taught to be happily obedient to all controls," he added.

"Examples of dressage steps are 'piaffe,' when the horse is taught to trot in place, and passage, a high, lofty trot," he continued.

Both Rowes reported that they have never had a serious accident to horse or rider while training MSU students.

"In five years only two riders have even fallen off their horse," Jim Rowe said.

"A beginner must learn to relax on the horse," he said. "The horse becomes what the rider is."

James P. Rowe, a dressage instructor at MSU, leads one of his horses around the corral at the Rowe Dressage Stables in Okemos.

East Lansing council may limit parking along residential streets

By JANET HALFMANN
State News Staff Writer

A proposal to restrict parking on residential streets is still under consideration by East Lansing officials.

The parking plan was originally proposed in February by Councilmember John B. Czarnecki in response to complaints from residents who dislike "having a parking lot in front of the house."

Recommendations on the proposal were presented to East Lansing City Council Tuesday by the Transportation Commission.

The council referred the plan to the city manager and staff for review.

The commission recommended that a request for limiting residential parking to two spaces per residence could be initiated by a petition signed by two thirds of the residents aged 18 or older on both sides of the street.

Such a parking limitation request could be granted if 80 percent or more of curb parking spaces were occupied for any two-hour period between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. for four of five weekdays in any week.

The plan's details will now be hammered out to make it legal.

enforceable and workable before it is presented to the City Council for action. City Manager Jerry Coffman said.

Coffman and the city police chief, attorney and engineer will be among those reviewing the parking plan.

Czarnecki said if the proposal was adopted, parking could basically be restricted to people living on a street.

"Residential areas should not serve as parking lots for MSU," he said.

The city wouldn't be mandating limited parking, but would be establishing a system under which residents could act, Czarnecki said.

In other action, the council:

- delayed action for one meeting on a request to rezone 13 acres adjacent to 111 Lake Lansing Road from agricultural to business;

- approved a citizen participation plan for the Community Development Grant Program; and

- referred to the Planning Commission a Transportation Commission recommendation that the establishment of bike path sidewalks along major streets be considered in the current review of the Comprehensive Plan.

DNR: wildlife contamination low

Preliminary results of a Department of Natural Resources toxic substance monitoring program indicate no great amount of chemical contamination in Michigan wildlife.

"We really didn't suspect we had a problem but we had no data," DNR biologist Tom Rohrer said. "Now we have some data to back up our assumptions."

We are quite pleased with the results."

The DNR has results on 60 of the 180 wildlife specimens collected from six areas around the state, Rohrer said. Complete results from the survey will be released near the end of the year, he said.

Laboratory analysis of the animals looks for organic and inorganic chemicals and heavy metals introduced into the environment through the use of pesticides and industry waste, Rohrer said.

One raccoon from Gratiot County contained a fairly high level of PBB and one raccoon from Livingston County had a high level of PBB but on the whole the animals have been untainted, he said.

The animals collected were deer, rabbits, pheasants and raccoons, Rohrer said. Fish samples included northern pike, bluegills, rock bass, brown or brook trout and bullheads, he said.

Rohrer said state and federal regulations that require the use of more biodegradable pesticides and chemicals in industry have helped.

This survey is the second step in a three-phase DNR program. The first phase, completed last spring, found no PBB problem in Michigan deer herds.

The third phase of the program will be to set up a comprehensive statewide sampling program for the future. DNR aquatic biologist Richard Powers said. A permanent schedule for testing will be established, he said.

"We want to know if wildlife are contracting toxic materials from the environment," Rohrer said.

Fitzgerald visits Vatican with U.S. democrats

Sen. William B. Fitzgerald, D-Detroit, was in Vatican City Wednesday with nine members of the official U.S. delegation attending the funeral of Pope John Paul I.

The delegation, which represents the United States at the Pope's funeral, is headed by Lillian Carter, mother of the president, and includes 10 members invited by the White House.

All 10 members are Democratic public officials from various parts of the United States, including U.S. Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., and New York Mayor Edward Koch.

Fitzgerald is a Detroit Democrat trying to unseat Gov. William G. Milliken in the Nov. 7 election.

"It's not a political event," said Michael Bartlett speaking from Fitzgerald's campaign headquarters.

Fitzgerald will travel to Washington, D.C. from Rome on Thursday and meet with President Carter to discuss Michigan politics and the "general state of Michigan."

Bartlett said. "At that time they will discuss possible campaign appearances by the president."

Fitzgerald will return to Michigan on Friday.

LOTTERY SYSTEM TO BE USED

Change in cage ticket sales

By MIKE KLOCKE
State News Sports Writer

With less than a week remaining before MSU basketball tickets go on sale for the student body, the MSU athletic department has completely altered the manner in which the tickets will be sold.

In a move that athletic officials hope will eliminate the need for camping out overnight and long lines, a lottery system will be used to allocate the tickets.

Anyone who wants tickets for the season, either the A or the B series, must register for the lottery. Registration will begin 10 a.m. this morning and run through noon Saturday at the south end of Jensen Field House.

Guidelines to follow for the lottery registration are:

*a maximum of eight fee receipts will be honored. One person may purchase up to eight tickets (including spouses);

*if you wish to obtain tickets, you must bring all the fee receipt cards to the lottery registration. The fee receipts will be stamped. Only fee receipts that are stamped may be redeemed at the lottery;

*the person who is registering the fee receipt cards for the lottery must have an MSU ID with him;

*a coupon will be issued for a lottery; and

*a person may register for the lottery only once, since his/her fee receipt will be stamped. If a group wants eight tickets, not all eight of the people may register separately. The lottery will begin Monday.

The lottery will determine the order in which people (or groups of eight or less) will be able to purchase their tickets. The person will get in line after the number is called and purchase the tickets then. The lottery will be held in the gymnasium part of Jenison Fieldhouse.

Each student must be enrolled for a minimum of seven credits. Doctoral candidates must have six credits. Graduate assistants must have appointment papers or a special graduate assistant ID card.

To repeat, the student purchaser for himself or a group must be present when the lottery is held.

Approximately 7,000 tickets are going to be available for students (about 3,500 for each of the two series). So, quite obviously, registration for the lottery doesn't guarantee tickets for the games.

In fact, freshmen have almost no chance with their ID numbers since Jenison Fieldhouse seats only 9,886.

About the only chance is to get a senior fee receipt card so underclassmen can be included in the first lottery. MSU assistant athletic director Bill Beardsley said he realizes some people may get shut off, but that this is the most equitable system.

If there are any questions, see the advertisement on this page or call the athletic ticket office at 355-1610.

For your information, the A series will include: the Russian National Team, Minnesota, Indiana, Ohio State, Northwestern and Purdue. The B series will include: Central Michigan, Wisconsin, Iowa, Kansas, Michigan and Illinois.

Melvin "Juice" Land (47) recovers a fumble against Syracuse earlier this season.

LAND'S ASSET IS QUICKNESS

MSU's 'Juice' is loose

By JOE CENTERS
State News Sports Writer

Compared to most defensive tackles, MSU's Melvin Land is about as small as they come. Ability-wise, though, he is about the best that they come.

Land, better known as "The Juice," stands 6-foot-4, 240 pounds, but he says his lack of size doesn't bother him.

"Recently, it's been hard because I've been out-weighted by 15-20 pounds," Land said. "But my strength and quickness make up for my size."

Against Southern California, only one of the five interior linemen, center Chris Foote, who is also 6-foot-4, 240 pounds, was comparable to Land in size. The other four had the edge on the Juice.

The two guards, Brad Budde, 6-foot-5, 253 pounds, and Pat Howell, 6-foot-6, 255 pounds, plus the two tackles, Keith Van Horne, 6-foot-7, 250 pounds and Anthony Munoz, 6-foot-7, 280 pounds, all had the size advantage on Land.

But Land was all over the field as he made 16 tackles, two of those for losses, and recovered two Trojan fumbles. Inside linebacker Dan Bass also made 16 stops as the two of them spent their Friday evening plugging up holes and smothering ball carriers.

"I feel I've played a little better than I played in the first three games last year," Land said.

But Land has to play better because with the graduation of All-Big Ten Player of the Year, Larry Bethea, Juice is the mainstay of the defensive line.

"To lose a player like Larry meant a lot to our defense," Land said. "But what we had returning we were able to fill his spot."

Land feels that the defensive line, with all its youth, will keep getting better and lead the Spartans to the Rose Bowl next year.

But the Rose Bowl is something that the Juice will never get to play in. His four years of eligibility will run out after this season so his personal future won't focus on the big game in Pasadena, but on a professional football career.

"Definitely if I get the chance to play pro I'd like to play," Land said.

If Land does play, he knows he is too small to be on the defensive line. He said he would have to play either at a linebacker position or on offense.

That's where his speed and strength will really help him. After practice on Monday, Juice did some extra running on his own because he knows that it will be his speed, more than anything else, that will keep him in football.

Right now, though, Land has his mind on the rest of the season and especially on Notre Dame.

"I feel every game we play right now is important to us," he said. "This one coming up means a lot to the rest of our season."

"Any time you play the name Notre Dame, it means a lot to you."

Spikers sweep EMU and Wayne

By JERRY BRAUDE
State News Sports Writer

If there's supposed to be a letdown after an intense weekend tournament, MSU's volleyball team didn't show it as they rolled over Wayne State and Eastern Michigan universities in three straight sets Tuesday.

Combined with the three wins on Saturday during the Spartan Invitational, MSU has now won five matches in a row to run its record to 12-7-4.

"Against Wayne State we did make some errors, but I was still pleased with the way we played," coach Annelies Knoppers said. "Mostly, I like the way we kept the pressure on Eastern Michigan, which we wanted to do. Eastern stayed with us the first game, but because we kept the pressure on, they were forced into making mistakes in the second and third game. I was just pleased with everybody's play."

Against Wayne State in their first match of the day, the Spartans got off to a shaky start, trailing 4-0. After closing the gap to 5-4, MSU reeled off six straight points enroute to a 15-9 win.

MSU completely dominated the second game, 15-2, and it looked like they were going to do more of it in the third when it jumped out to 7-1 and 9-4 leads. Wayne State suddenly caught fire and grabbed the lead at 10-9 before MSU put it back together by scoring five consecutive points to sweep the match.

"We had some tough moments that we shouldn't have had," assistant coach Nancy Steel said. "But we came out okay."

"The players also had to adjust to the differences in atmosphere from last weekend, where there was a lot of people and everything was going at full pace. But they have to learn to play whenever and where ever. Wayne State's program is growing, but the match was a warm-up for Eastern Michigan."

In the first game, Eastern Michigan took the early lead 7-3, but it was the only time during the match that MSU looked like they were in trouble. The Spartans came back to win 15-12 and then jumped out to big leads early in the following two games for 15-3 and 15-8 victories.

However, they will have an exhibition match against former MSU volleyball players at 7 p.m. Friday in the Men's IM Building.

All except one player that has played MSU volleyball on the varsity level will be playing. Most of them are from the team that went to the national tournament in 1976 and 1975. The 1976 team, which was seventh in the nation, will have such players coming back from the alumni game as Kathy DeBoer, Laura Peterson, Cindy Hardy, Cathy Davis, Mary Jo Hardy, Pat Felleros and Laurie Zoodsma.

Before the match, there will be a "Jump for Inches" contest for the varsity players in attempting to raise enough money to go to Los Angeles for the UCLA National Invitational Tournament. Anyone who is interested in sponsoring a player can contact the Women's Athletic Department.

Stickers pulverize Toledo, 9-0

The MSU field hockey team virtually blew away Toledo Monday, by a score of 9-0.

Five goals were scored in the first half, in a game that the Spartans controlled from their opening possession. Two goals were scored by Debra Peven, another pair by Nancy Lyons and Julie Johnson scored one.

In the second half, coach Sam Kajorsin put in his second string team. "We didn't want to embarrass our opponents. It's always nice to be able to give our second-string team some playing time," he said.

Toledo just couldn't keep up with the team work and slick moves of MSU. "They weren't tough enough," Kajorsin said.

Goals in the second half were put in by Nancy Reed, Teresa

Morris, and Jennie Klepinger had a pair.

Kajorsin pointed out the strong points that enabled MSU to win three out of their first four games.

"We have good wings to bring the ball up and pass to the forward lines. We also have speed and a tough defense."

The team has been in good health so far and Kajorsin would like to keep it that way.

Today's game will be against Grand Valley State College at Allendale. MSU beat them last year by a score of 10-0. "I think we can blow them out again this year, but we cannot get careless," Kajorsin stressed. Often when a team begins to win, they may get too confident and begin to get careless. Kajorsin assures that his team will work just as hard as ever on their team work.

NIELSEN DECLARED INELIGIBLE

Offense finally! Kickers win, 9-0

By JERRY BRAUDE

State News Sports Writer

In preparing for a 10-1 Notre Dame squad Saturday, MSU's soccer team, now 3-1, couldn't find a better team to experiment against than Grand Valley State College Tuesday.

During the Spartans' 9-0 victory, they got a chance for the first time to work on their new line-up of moving Tom Coleman up to midfield and Solomon Younes up to forward.

"It was the first time in eight games that we weren't in a one-goal contest, which gave us a chance to relax, move players around to different positions and play the reserves that normally don't get into the game," coach Joe Baum said. "The new arrangement looked excellent."

Before the game, however, some bigger news than the game hit the soccer scene when starter Hans Nielsen and Peer Brunnweiler were declared academically ineligible for the remainder of the season.

Brunnweiler started the first three games in goal while Nielsen had two goals and an assist.

"I'm disappointed because both players are a definite asset to the team," Baum said. "I had a meeting with the players after the ruling, and they had a tremendous attitude about the situation. They decided not to let the disappointment affect their play and to come out and pick up the slack."

Against GVSC, Curt Major replaced Nielsen at striker and Rob Grinter replaced Brunnweiler in the nets.

"We scored a couple of goals early in the game, and then they seemed to lose their intensity," Baum said. "Grand Valley's defense made some real tactical errors. They over-committed a lot and were out of position."

Mike Price, who's assignment was to put more emphasis on offense, responded with three goals and one assist. Tom Campbell and Scott Teasdale, who was brought up from the junior varsity squad, contribute with two goals apiece. Scott Campbell had a goal and three assists and Curt Major scored the other goals.

"Tom Coleman did a fine job of taking charge from his midfield position," Baum said. "From there, he can be an overall field leader. Now he also gets involved in the offense, and you could see the players responding to his instruction."

Involvement the key in MSU's many club sports

By ADAM TEICHER

State News Sports Writer

Where would the MSU student with an above-average interest in a sport such as karate or badminton go if he or she wanted to participate in these sports? Certainly not to the intercollegiate athletic department, where neither of the two sports are offered. Ditto for the intramural program.

Ready to give up? Not quite. The MSU Sports Club program has clubs for more than 40 different sports. No matter whether interest in the sport is for competitive, instructional or recreational purposes, these clubs are independent organizations which offer not only students, but also faculty, the opportunity to develop their skill in that sport.

"The clubs are student run," said Russ Rivet, the director of the MSU sports club program. "They are student organizations, and are members of ASMSU. My job is just to guide the clubs and smooth out the rough edges on their problems. In fact, the only real tie the clubs have with the program is that we get facilities for them to use that they otherwise may not get. The clubs are run by students."

The Sports Clubs began at MSU over 50 years ago with the formation of Green Splash, the synchronized swimming club, and now between 4,500 and 5,000 MSU faculty and students are in one club or another.

"It's fun and a great way of recreation and to become skilled," added Rivet, who could not over-emphasize the fact that the clubs are operated by students.

Skill or experience is not a pre-requisite to join any of the clubs. A beginner will be tutored, not by faculty or coaches, but by other members of the club. Through the sports clubs, participants have the opportunity to realize potentials and skills, and to enjoy them.

Perhaps the apex for a highly-skilled athlete, let's say a swimmer, would be for him to pass on his knowledge of the sport to others who would develop and derive the same enjoyment from it that he enjoys. Rivet reasoned, "That's what we're all about."

Most sports clubs now have teams which compete against other schools. The teams are made up from the most highly skilled members of the clubs and are in no way related to the athletic department.

The 1977-78 school year was a successful one for the MSU sports club teams and individuals. Both the men's and women's sailing teams won the Midwest Collegiate Sailing Championships and placed in the nationals in San Diego. The men's basketball team won the Midwest Regional title.

Among the most outstanding performances were in the weightlifting. Paul Schneider won the national title in the 105-pound class. Penny Jordan also won the national title in the 105-pound class. The national Collegiate Powerlifting Championships were held in San Diego, while setting a national record. Penny Jordan also won the United States and three world records in the National Women's Powerlifting Championships.

Procedure for beginning a new sports club is easy and encouraged by Rivet and his staff. Students interested in a particular sport not provided by the athletic department, the IM program or in physical education classes at MSU can get together and meet in 231 Men's IM Bldg. with their idea.

were breaking off and doing their own thing. If they're interested in a Delhi site, good, then we'll all work together as a group again," she said.

Joel Ferguson, former Lansing City Council member and a member of the committee studying the proposed arena, said the city is not in conflict with the county for the location of the arena.

There is no conflict, he said, simply because the other country areas cannot raise the money needed to build the complex.

"Putting an arena in the middle of the county just isn't possible," Ferguson said. He said the city of Lansing could gather nearly 75 percent of the funds for the development of the complex by selling the Lansing Civic Center to the state to allow the expansion of the state government complex and by qualifying for urban development grants from the federal government.

"We could easily raise other funds and contributions from that point," Ferguson said. He said the sale of the Civic Center to the state is under discussion.

"The county says they can build their arena in the middle of nowhere with no money," Ferguson said. "There's no conflict as far as I'm concerned."

Representatives of local governments and parties involved in the arena discussions will meet in the Kellogg Center Oct. 18 to review the final Economic Research Associates report.

Persons involved in the discussions said plans for the proposal may be clarified then.

James Allen hospitalized; talk canceled

"The Ruin Monuments of Kenya," a lecture that was to be given tonight by James Allen, has been cancelled.

The lecture was scheduled for 8 p.m. at the Kresge Art Center and was sponsored by the African Studies Center.

Allen, a professor at the University of Nairobi, Kenya, and a well-known archeologist and historian, has been hospitalized in New York.

Senate hopefuls debate low-key

"Headlee is a responsible way to end the pork barrel mentality," he said. "The Legislature will have to decide which programs have higher funding priorities."

Owen disagreed by calling the Headlee amendment "cosmetic at best" and said it is a risk because the public thinks it will provide tax relief when it does not.

"My opponent shows it's not an effective limit," he said in one of the few direct slams in the debate. "He supports the limitation but calls for more money for education funding and prison programs."

Owen prefers a property tax reform to the ballot proposals that eliminate the use of property tax to fund public education.

He supports financing of schools through the "state's general revenues" including revenue from income and sales tax.

The candidates both stressed the need for Senate reform, with Owen calling the state Senate a "graveyard for legislation in Michigan" and Sederburg pulling for a "strong ethics code."

"We need to restore the public's confidence in the government," Sederburg said.

"We need to open up the budget process and committee agendas to involve more people in the political process."

Owen said the Senate "kills" legislation initiated by the state House and our "squeaky wheel government" is one that responds to lobbyists who can buy legislators' votes.

Judicial candidates meet

Judicial candidates for the 30th Circuit Court will meet at 7:15 tonight at the Central United Methodist Church in Lansing.

The six candidates seeking election to two positions are James T. Kallman, Jack W. Warren, Robert Holmes Bell, James R.

Giddings, Thomas R. Roberts and Thomas E. Woods.

The meeting, sponsored by the Lansing Area League of Women Voters and the Coalition for Justice, will give voters an opportunity to ask questions and meet the candidates.

Bars push registration

off if the legal age is raised to 21. Norm Robinson, owner of the Alle Ey and America's Cup Restaurant, said 25 to 30 percent of his 125 employees would lose jobs. Most cuts would be made at the Alle Ey, because America's Cup hosts an older crowd, he said.

Robinson estimated 60 percent of his business is under 21. He said if Proposal D passes, he would have to redirect his marketing efforts by changing policies, music and raising prices. "We'd definitely have to cater to an older crowd," he said.

Bars such as Beggar's Banquet, 218 Abbott Road and Olde World Cafe, 211 M.A.C. Ave., don't expect an older age to affect their business since they also cater to older crowds.

Though voter registration is up in East Lansing, bar managers say many students are indifferent to the drinking age hike.

"When they come in they either have the attitude 'there's no way it'll go through because they can't take away my right to drink,'" Rainbow Ranch's Craymer said, "or else they say 'what difference does it make, I can drink already.' That comes mostly from the people over 21."

Though some bar owners contend the city's tax base would erode if bars lose money and are forced to close because of Proposal D, East Lansing City Manager Jerry Coffman disagreed. "I don't see any dire economic consequences on the city itself. I can't put a dollar value on it, though," he said.

"If the bars go out of business we expect some other businesses to move in. Commercial and office property are at a premium in East Lansing."

Party store owners are noticeably silent on the issue. Bar owners, students, police and city officials point out that package liquor and beer sales would increase at stores since most students wouldn't be able to legally drink in bars.

Doug Wozniak, manager of Campus Corners II, 551 E. Grand River Ave., said, "You'll see our sales go down for awhile but they'll go back up eventually to a level the same as before — total profit would be about the same."

One business that would probably flourish if Proposal D passes is the fake identification market.

East Lansing Police, bar owners, party store managers and state officials agreed students would find some way to buy alcohol or enter bars.

For that reason, bars and stores would be rigid in screening IDs before selling alcohol to any student, managers said.

East Lansing Police Lt. Tom Hendricks said raising the age will create some enforcement problems.

"Alcohol is a problem in East Lansing but not one that's uncontrollable or that takes up all our time," he said.

Program soliciting government interns

By SANDRA HOLT
State News Staff Writer

Graduating college students interested in a career in public administration may apply for a 10-week internship and spend two terms at two southern universities, said Coleman B. Ransone, director of the Southern Regional Training Program in Public Administration.

Ransone, professor of political science at the University of Alabama, said the public administration fellowship program has been offered for about 30 years and will accept seven men and women during the 1979-80 academic year.

Those receiving the fellowships will serve 10-week internships during the summer of 1979 and spend fall semester at the University of Kentucky, he said.

Ransone said four interns will then spend another semester at the University of Tennessee, while the other three go to the University of Alabama to finish the course work.

The fellowship program is a cooperative venture between the three southern universities, Ransone explained.

He said former participants have interned in Alabama, Tennessee and Kentucky, working in various government jobs ranging from state legislative research committees to the Tennessee Valley Authority.

"We want to attract good people to the south and hope they will stay there," Ransone said.

Those who complete the program earn a Certificate in Public Administration and will have completed all course work necessary to take the final examination for a Master of Public Administration degree, Ransone said.

The degree must be earned at one of the universities attended by the participants during the program, he added.

Fellowships are awarded on the basis of high academic achievement and scores on the Graduate Record Exam, a standard test used at colleges and universities instructing public administration, political science and other subjects, Ransone explained.

Program literature specifies that students must be American citizens and hold a bachelor's degree in any area of study by June 1979 to apply for a fellowship.

Ransone said fees and tuition are paid for by the program and monthly payments are given to the fellowship recipients during the program.

Applications must be received by Feb. 23. For information and applications write to: Coleman B. Ransone, Jr., Director, Southern Regional Training Program in Public Administration, Drawer I, University, Alabama 35486.

U-M survey indicates bleak economic outlook

By SUSAN TOMPOR
State News Staff Writer

More consumers look bleakly toward economic conditions over the next five years, a recently released Survey of Consumer Attitudes revealed.

The survey, conducted monthly by the University of Michigan Research Center, questions a random telephone sample of American consumers on their attitudes and behavioral patterns regarding the economy, Robert Comment, research associate said.

Consumers questioned recently regarding the economic climate for 1978 through 1983 held differing opinions. A majority of 54 percent telephoned predicted unfavorable conditions, 24 percent predicted good conditions and 15 percent had mixed opinions.

In 1976, 32 percent predicted unfavorable conditions for the next five years, 24 percent looked optimistically toward the future and 44 percent had mixed opinions, Comment said.

Inflation, changes in unemployment levels and a relatively favorable business climate in recent years contributed to changing consumer attitudes, he said.

"When the economy has been growing well, as it has been, consumers become satiated with good news and their sentiments begin to change," Comment said.

Consumers also remember "hearing" unfavorable news items concerning business more frequently than in the past.

In 1976, 25 percent of those surveyed recalled hearing news regarding declining economic conditions, while in August, 45 percent remembered such stories, Comment said.

Overall consumer optimism fell from 87.6 in 1977 to 78.4 in the most recent survey.

The measure of consumer sentiment customarily has a six-to-nine-month lead on drops in the economy, Comment said.

Since consumer sentiment has been declining at a slower rate than it did preceding the 1970 and 1974-75 recessions, an actual contraction in the economy is not expected, he said.

"It is possible we will experience a growth recession with the economy growing at a slower rate than the long run average," Comment said.

Subscribers to the survey include large corporations and government agencies who use it to predict consumer spending and saving attitudes, he said.

College credit offered to 'mature' people for year of study in Scandinavian schools

By MARCIA BRADFORD
State News Staff Writer

Students seeking a new experience in education may want to try a year in Scandinavia. Offered to undergraduates, graduates and anyone interested, the Scandinavian seminar in New York offers a year of study for college credit in Denmark, Finland, Norway or Sweden.

The main requirement for interested persons is that they "are over 18 and have a good deal of maturity," said Gunnar Wrede, public relations consultant.

"The students are very much on their own in this program," Wrede said. "They have to learn the language of the country in which they are staying."

The year in Scandinavia consists of three basic parts: an introductory three-week language course, a short stay with a family and a stay at a People's College, a residential school for continuing education or some other specialized institution.

"The students spend the greatest amount of time in very small schools," Wrede said. "Most of them have about 50 to 60 students and all courses are taught in the native language of the country where the student is staying. The school becomes almost like a small community."

Wrede stressed that participants in the program must learn the language of the country where they plan to stay. She said most students learn the languages very easily and quickly.

The students arrive in their designated countries in July and by Christmas most of them have become competent; they are able to speak and understand the language."

Wrede said. "Many of them become very fluent."

One director coordinates the program for each country and consults students at various times throughout the year to help them coordinate the required independent projects.

Everyone in the program meets in Norway the first week of January for a mid-year seminar. At this time they have a chance to discuss their independent projects and any problems they have encountered.

"The independent projects are done in a variety of study areas," Wrede said. "Students do anything from making a chair to writing songs to translating poetry."

She said most of the students choose an area of study in which they have already had training.

"Many of the participants are very creative people," she said. "We have many people interested in textiles and weaving and others in crop development."

Entrance to the program is based on first-come, first-served basis and the deadline for applications is April 15 for the 1979-80 program year.

"Many of the people who take part in our program have a special interest in a certain country or a certain area of study," she said. "The earlier these people apply, the better the chances of placing them in the areas best suited to their interests."

The cost for the year in Scandinavia is $4,600, covering tuition, room, board and all course-connected travels. However, it does not cover books and materials for the classes, Wrede explained.

Applications are now being accepted at Scandinavian Seminar, 100 East 85th Street, New York, N.Y. 10028.

No monument to FDR this year — too expensive

By DAVID ESPO
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Friends of Franklin Delano Roosevelt have been trying for more than 20 years to persuade Congress to build a memorial to the nation's 32nd president.

They can forget it for this year.

In a year of tax-cutting Proposition 13 and congressional elections, there is scant support among politicians for the latest proposed memorial, a $50 million tribute.

The Senate Rules Committee has twice failed to get a quorum present when it was scheduled to vote on the measure. As a result, the bill is likely to die for lack of attention.

The FDR Memorial Commission has received about 300 letters, most of them complaining about spending taxpayer money on the project.

The commission was set up by Congress in 1955 and has been trying ever since to win approval for a memorial to Roosevelt, who served longer than any other president.

FDR said he wanted any memorial built for him to be simple. And as of now, that's what he has. In 1965, on the 20th anniversary of his death, a group of friends dedicated a small, privately financed monument, near the National Archives.

Three earlier plans for a national monument were killed, largely on esthetic grounds. One of them, a series of concrete slabs jutting as much as 156 feet into the air, was called "ugly" by FDR's son James.

"While nobody is more enthusiastic about a Roosevelt Memorial for many reasons, personal as well as in the national interest, the cost of $50 million bothers me," Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., said at a Rules Committee hearing.

The memorial would be built on 27 acres between the Tidal Basin and the Potomac River in Washington, a short walk from the Lincoln Memorial and Jefferson Memorial.

There would be an outdoor memorial garden with sculpture, granite walls and waterfalls. The walls, with Roosevelt's utterances chiseled in stone, would form four outside "rooms."

In addition, there would be an "interpretive center," including an auditorium.
