MUST LEAVE ISRAEL IMMEDIATELY

Sami Esmail receives parole

By JOANNE LANE
State News Staff Writer

Early parole was granted Wednesday to Sami Esmail, a 24-year-old MSU graduate student who has been held in an Israeli prison since Dec. 1977.

Esmail was granted parole on the condition that he be expelled immediately from Israel.

Felicia Langer, Esmail's attorney, said the prisoner will remain in prison for a few more days while arrangements are made for his return to the United States.

Langer said Esmail will be back in the United States by the weekend.

Esmail was charged and convicted of membership in an organization "hostile" to the state of Israel.

He was also charged and acquitted of contact with an agent of an "unfriendly" state.

District court testimony by Israeli security personnel and statements made during his interrogation accused Esmail of distribution of newspapers on the MSU campus for the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine.

He was said to have contributed money to that organization.

Israeli officials also said Esmail, while in Libya in August 1976, underwent terrorist military training.

Esmail denied ever taking military training in Libya, saying he was in that country to check on future teaching job with a Libyan university.

The Israeli court, on June 12, 1978, sentenced Esmail to 15 months in prison.

The six months he had already spent in jail were subtracted from his sentence.

Upon deportation, Esmail will never be able to return to Israel or the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River where his family lives.

Upon hearing of his release, Esmail told the parole board that he is willing to serve the remainder of his sentence if he could be released without being expelled from Israel permanently.

Nancy Irish, a committee member who visited Esmail last summer in the Israeli prison, said Sami told her he planned to return to MSU upon his release to finish his graduate work in electrical engineering.

Irish said the U.S. Consul General in Israel, David Kerr, told her that in the future Esmail could apply to visit his family but it is unlikely that his request will be granted.

"Sami was in cramped and unsanitary conditions," Irish said. "He had lost a lot of weight and was unkempt."

Langer presented to the three-person parole board Wednesday a petition asking for Esmail's release. The document was endorsed by many national, state and local leaders.

Irish said Langer believed Esmail was released in part because of the American pressure put on Israel.

Rabbi Daniel Allen of the Hillel Foundation said he thought the prisoner was released in the spirit of Camp David.

"Israel acted wisely by giving Esmail a second chance," Allen said.

"However, I hope the MSU community does not make a hero of Sami Esmail," he continued. "He is a convicted terrorist who has served his time. Upon returning to MSU, Esmail will have to prove himself by acting in a quiet and peaceful manner."

Esmail, who went to Israel on Dec. 20, 1977 to visit his dying father, was detained by Israeli officials when he arrived at a Tel Aviv airport.

Esmail supporters contend that during the period of Dec. 21 to Dec. 27 Esmail was continuously interrogated by Israeli officials. They say he was led to believe on Dec.

27, 1977 that if he signed a confession written in Hebrew, he would be released.

Esmail signed the confession, though he said he does not understand Hebrew. Members of Esmail's defense committee said they were elated at the news of Sami's release but will continue to work on unresolved issues concerning FBI surveillance of foreign students on campus issues involving the occupied territory of the West Bank of Israel.

Dow and others refuse to divest

By BETH TUSCHAK
State News Staff Writer

Sixteen corporations with business interests in South Africa, and in which MSU holds stock, have said they will not withdraw from business activities in that country.

MSU Vice President for Business and Finance Roger Wilkinson contacted 17 corporations by letter in August, informing them of the University's intent to divest of their stock.

Of the 16 respondents to the MSU letter, Dow Chemical Company reacted most strongly, stating it was "shocked at the position (on divestiture) taken by the Board," and hinting at possible repercussions with gifts and grants.

"You (the board) have completely rejected the alternative — that a constructive and progressive presence is more effective than withdrawal — and have issued the ultimatum to withdraw or we will sell our Dow stock," the Company said in its letter.

"That ultimatum borders on blackmail and is repugnant to us," the letter continued.

In addition to informing the corporations of MSU's position on divestiture, the MSU letter asked whether the firms had intentions to withdraw from business activities in South Africa or if they contemplated such action.

The MSU letters were in keeping with the Board of Trustees' March resolution which said the University had adopted a policy of prudent divestiture of stocks in corporations doing business in South Africa.

All corporations responding to Wilkinson's letter said their firms disagreed with a program of divestiture in South Africa. Dow pointed out that the policy could result in "an unfortunate alienation between MSU and many industries and at least some of its alumni."

"I think Dow — and every industry — has a multiplicity of relationships with universities," Dow Financial Vice President G. James Williams said in a telephone interview. "This extends to areas of recruitment of employees, research facilities and gifts and grants."

A company likes to do business for and with those universities they are getting along with," Williams said.

"Dow's reaction is not a threat that it would not give further grants and gifts, but the board's policy is going to make Dow feel less generous towards the University and grants are one of the relationships we're talking about."

Williams said Dow, like many of the other corporations contacted, employs many MSU graduates.

"Our reference to an alienation between MSU and at least some of its alumni meant that alumni will not feel favorable towards giving MSU matching grants," Williams said.

Matching grants are funds donated to MSU by alumni which a corporation then matches.

While none of the other corporations contacted referred to possible repercussions of the trustees' actions, all said they thought MSU was using the wrong method to bring about positive social change in South Africa.

Each corporation said it was involved in improving conditions for its minority employees, and outlined programs relating to the employment and training of blacks.

Many of the corporations echoed the sentiments of the Coca-Cola Company, which stated:

Metro squad arrests thirty-one in narcotic operation break-up

By RUSS HUMPHREY
State News Staff Writer

The Tri-County Metro Narcotics Squad and other police arrested 31 area residents Tuesday morning to break up a Lansing-area drug ring.

"Operation Dough Boy," as it was termed, resulted in the apprehension of 33 suspects by Tuesday afternoon in connection with drug deliveries in the past five months, Metro Squad officials said.

Fifty-three people were sought in 87 separate drug-related warrants issued by tri-county courts.

Metro Squad officials said over $107,000 worth of drugs ranging from heroin to cocaine were confiscated over the five-month period. These drugs were used as evidence in the issuing of warrants, they said.

Quaaludes, morphine, PCP, LSD, cocaine and heroin were confiscated in the investigation, they said. Fourteen arrest warrants were issued for the delivery of heroin and LSD, they said.

The bulk of the narcotics was confiscated in Lansing, the officials said.

Four East Lansing residents were arraigned in district court Tuesday and charged with drug deliveries to undercover agents.

Connie L. Cornman, 21, 436 Park Lane, was charged on three counts of delivering cocaine to undercover agents. Her bond was set for $6,000, $2,000 for each count.

Peter Feamster, 23, 135 Kedzie St., posted $200 bond after being charged with one delivery of cocaine.

Tellis J. Waller, 28, 312 Grove St., was charged with the delivery of LSD and posted a bond of $300.

Bradford VanDyke, 26, 6180 Hardy Ave., was charged with one count of delivering cocaine and released.

The squad is also seeking three Meridian township residents on narcotic law violations.

Those arrested could face stiff penalties, including life imprisonment, officials said.

Several people arrested in Lansing were considered class "1" narcotic dealers, officials said.

The raid is a combined effort by several law enforcement agencies in the tri-county area including the MSU Department of Public Safety. Forty-two other officers assisted in the operation.

A DPS official said "several officers from the department" were called in to assist the other agencies with the 6 a.m. dragnet Tuesday.

The Metro Narcotics Squad is composed of officers and officials on loan from police agencies in Eaton, Ingham and Clinton counties.

E.L. council hears ideas for renewed downtown

By JANET HALFMANN
State News Staff Writer

Alternatives geared toward making the East Lansing Central Business District the focal point of the community were presented to City Council Tuesday.

In addition, part of the council's renewed commitment to the downtown area, a request to rezone two acres fronting on Lake Lansing and Abbott roads from agricultural to business for proposed office use was tabled.

Increased development in the downtown area, multiple use of available land, improved parking and attention to pedestrian activity were recommended by a Central Business District Task Force.

The task force suggested the City Council first address the need for more parking. It recommended development of a multi-use structure on Lot 9 on Grove Street and possibly another on the Citgo block.

A parking lot proposal the city considered last winter — which would have razed eight houses on the 500 block of Albert Street and the 100 block of Division Street to provide 135 parking spaces — has apparently been put to rest.

Additional parking in the 500 block of Grand River Avenue was recommended only if it could be combined with an appropriate multiple use.

Multiple-use structures would combine commercial development, housing and parking. Location of a multi-use structure on Lot 9 was considered to be the easiest to develop

Harden to introduce revised anti-bias plan to Board of Trustees

By KIM CRAWFORD
State News Staff Writer

A newly-structured affirmative action program creating a position of assistant to the president will be presented by President Edgar L. Harden to the MSU Board of Trustees at the October meeting.

Lou Anna Simon, an assistant professor in the Office of Institutional Research, will be recommended by Harden for the position in the restructured affirmative action program.

Both the new program and position are subject to approval by the board.

Simon refused to answer questions, but sources involved in discussions with Harden on the revamping of the affirmative action program expressed their satisfaction with the president's choice.

The tentative program ultimately places affirmative action responsibility in the office of the president. Below Harden, the executive vice president will be responsible for non-academic affirmative action and the provost will handle academic matters.

"What we're striving for in this new form is accountability," Harden said.

He said by placing responsibility for affirmative action in the executive line administrators will be accountable if something "doesn't work."

The proposed plan takes the Department of Human Relations out of the jurisdiction of Robert Perrin, vice president for university and federal relations.

Perrin has been the target of criticism from women's groups, particularly since he fired Mary Pollock, former director of women's programs and Title IX coordinator, summer term.

Perrin said last week that while holding responsibility for affirmative action he was "always under the gun."

Sources involved in the talks on the restructuring were generally pleased with the proposed changes.

One source called moving the program out of the office of university and federal relations "a hell of an improvement."

Sources also said there was satisfaction with Simon's appointment. Simon has been active in the Faculty Women's Association

Carter OKs production of neutron bomb parts; denies SALT talk link

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter has ordered production of crucial elements used in making neutron warheads but has not decided whether to deploy the nuclear weapons, his chief spokesperson said Wednesday.

Carter's decision, which moves the United States a step closer to building the deadly warhead, was announced by press secretary Jody Powell at the daily White House news briefing.

Powell said the decision was unlikely to have any impact on the current Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty negotiations.

Administration officials, speaking privately, denied that the neutron weapon decision was made at this time in an effort to set a tough tone for the SALT negotiations that begin in Moscow next week.

Later, U.S. arms control negotiator Paul Warnke said Carter's decision had nothing to do with the U.S.-Soviet arms talks.

Warnke said the SALT talks deal exclusively with strategic weaponry while the neutron bomb is a tactical battlefield weapon. He said the decision on whether or not to deploy the weapon would depend on signs of Soviet restraint in their own deployment of conventional forces in central Europe.

Powell emphasized that no final decision has been made on assembling the complete neutron weapon or putting it to use as a line of defense against Soviet and other Warsaw Pact forces in Europe.

The bomb, formally known as an "enhanced radiation warhead," is a small warhead that would be placed on Lance missiles and 8-inch artillery shells. It produces twice the deadly radiation of a conventional nuclear bomb but less than one-tenth as much explosive power. It is designed to kill enemy soldiers, including tank crews, without causing widespread destruction of buildings in populated areas.

Dutch pilot blamed for world's worst crash

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Spanish government investigators Wednesday blamed a veteran Dutch pilot for causing the world's worst air crash in March of last year, concluding he began his take-off without authorization.

Six women ministers named to cabinet

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Swedish Prime Minister Ola Ullsten named six women ministers Wednesday to his new 19-member cabinet — the most in any European cabinet — but Swedish women's groups wanted more.

The fundamental cause of this accident, the Transport Ministry report said, was the fact that the KLM captain took off without clearance.

Prospects for Zimbabwean talks brighten

WASHINGTON (AP) — Private U.S. diplomatic contacts in recent days with Zimbabwean guerrilla leaders Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe have left U.S. officials encouraged about the possibility of direct peace talks between Zimbabwe's warring political factions.

Without preconditions, the statements by the guerrilla leaders have brightened prospects for direct peace negotiations.

Workers to receive overdue checks

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter signed the $56 billion appropriations bill for operating the departments of Labor and Health, Education and Welfare Wednesday, enabling thousands of federal employees to pick up their overdue paychecks.

Paul C. Johnson III, HEW's payroll chief, said employees in the Washington, San Francisco and Kansas City areas about 64,000 of the 160,000 affected workers, would be getting their checks by special messenger in a matter of hours.

PIONEER DECISION FOR STATE APPEAL COURT

Probationers to delay hearings

LANSING (UPI) — A Michigan Court of Appeals panel said Wednesday it is basically un-just to revoke probation for a repeat offender before a trial is held on the new crime with which he is charged.

In a pioneering decision for Michigan, the appeals court ordered prosecutors to postpone probation revocation hearings until after the criminal trial or grant blanket prosecution immunity for his testimony at the probation hearing.

That would prevent a situation where in a separate probation revocation hearing, a defendant is put in the position of delivering incriminating evidence against himself or declining to testify.

N. Dakota ballot initiative would limit doctor fees

BISMARCK, N.D. (AP) — An initiative on North Dakota's Nov. 7 ballot would put state controls on how much doctors could charge their patients, and the measure's architect says it is the beginning of a nationwide revolt against health care costs.

Either way, win or lose, it's just a matter of time before every state will have similar state regulations," says North Dakota Insurance Commissioner Byron Knutson.

The state's medical profession feels otherwise. With cries of "socialized medicine" it has launched an intensive campaign against the measure, which would put controls on all health care costs — in hospitals, nursing homes, pharmacies and doctors' offices.

Knutson, a 48-year-old Democrat, said the measure resulted from numerous complaints about inadequate health insurance. He said he has yet to spend a penny on promoting the measure and predicted the opposition will spend nearly $400,000.

Lobby reform bill feeble, group says

LANSING (UPI) — Michigan Common Cause charged Wednesday that key lawmakers capitulated to special interests during the waning hours of the recent session in a backroom deal which emasculated a major lobbying reform bill.

The bill, now on Gov. William G. Milliken's desk, bears little resemblance to the original measure, the self-styled citizens' lobby said.

Democratic leaders, union representatives, the bill's sponsor and a key lobbyist participated in "the grossest sort of legislative backroom deal, a sellout to special interest lobbies that resulted in the disemboweling of lobby reform legislation in this state," said Jan Elmsan, chairperson of Common Cause.

The measure on Milliken's desk requires that all lobbyists register reports detailing their efforts to influence legislators and other state officials.

Western emissaries end Namibia talks

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — Five Western foreign ministers ended three days of top-secret talks on independence for Namibia-South-West Africa Wednesday and left the country, Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance said.

The report says the world's average rate of childbearing declined significantly between 1968 and 1975. As a result, the authors estimate, in 148 countries the rate dropped from 4.6 to 4.1 births per woman of child-bearing age.

Westerners hoped to persuade South Africa to abandon its unilateral plan for independence for the mineral-rich territory to its northeast and adopt instead a Western-inspired United Nations plan.

They claim that a key factor behind the fertility decline has been family planning movements in developing countries.

Hopes for finalizing arena plans fall flat at Kellogg Center meeting

By KIM CRAWFORD
State News Staff Writer

Hopes to finalize various plans for a new arena and other facilities fell flat at a meeting held at Kellogg Center Wednesday morning.

Attempts by Ingham County officials to bring about a community approach in planning the development of public assembly facilities also made no progress at the meeting.

No MSU administrators were among the 20 representatives from local units of government, agricultural organizations and other parties interested in the planning of new public assembly facilities.

James Anderson, dean of the MSU College of Agriculture and Natural Resources and Gordon Guyer, director of the Cooperative extension Service, were present at the meeting.

Area planners are hoping a new arena will someday host MSU basketball games. Both Lansing planners and agricultural interests siding with Ingham County government have been hoping to incorporate such an arena in their plans.

Lansing developers hope to build a downtown convention center-hotel complex with an arena, while agricultural organizations are vying for an agricultural exposition center in a location outside of Lansing.

However, the meeting ended with Lansing city planners, county officials and agricultural-interest representatives no closer to establishing a combined effort for planning a new arena.

Debbie Stabenow, chairperson of Ingham County Board of Commissioners, said the meeting accomplished bringing together all interested units and organizations to hear a summary of a study on public facilities in the Lansing area.

Stabenow has been the leader of the community approach to discuss and plan the proposed arena and facilities.

"The county is not pushing any particular point other than to look at the demand and need for facilities for the agricultural community in a way that doesn't compete with downtown Lansing," Stabenow said. "We want to allow everyone a chance to talk about their objectives."

She said getting support for the arena projects from the Michigan Legislature would stand a better chance if a community approach was taken, not single jurisdictions.

"The various groups operating independently have the chance of cancelling each other out," she said.

Dave Petersen, a regional manager for Economic Research Associates, suggested the governmental units and interested parties form an "authority representing the city, county, townships and others."

Economic Research Associates, a California-based consulting firm, carried out a study of the need and impact of various forms of public assembly facilities in Lansing for the Michigan Department of Commerce.

PBB landfill water tested

LANSING (UPI) — State and local officials Wednesday ordered an immediate water testing program at a Lenawee County landfill where PBB-tainted grain was buried in violation of a Department of Natural Resources order.

However, a DNR spokesperson said the department does not plan to test groundwater at a Washtenaw County landfill near Ann Arbor which also received PBB-contaminated materials four years ago.

The Ann Arbor site, lined with clay soils, was considered safe for the 2.7 tons of grain contaminated by about .085 pounds of PBB buried there, also without approval by the department.

It was a different matter, however, at a landfill near Adrian.

The DNR said operators of the Lenawee Disposal Service Company Landfill were notified by letter on June 20, 1974, that the department considered it unsafe to receive some of the PBB-tainted grain that was then being disposed of in sites around the state.

The department rejected the Lenawee County site because it was "critically located, being adjacent to the River Raisin" and had the potential to allow chemicals to seep into groundwater, the spokesperson said.

However, Michigan Department of Agriculture records revealed that on June 25, 1974 — five days after a phone call to landfill operators and the followup letter denying its use as a disposal site — a shipment of PBB-tainted grain was accepted from a cooperative affiliated with the Michigan Farm Bureau.

DNR and Lenawee County Health Department officials met Wednesday to assess the situation and decided to try immediately to determine whether PBB has contaminated groundwater.

The spokesperson said records show the landfill received 30.4 tons of grain containing an estimated .287 pounds of PBB.

"Right now there's no reason to believe PBB has entered the groundwater," the spokesperson said.

The DNR said Wednesday it would immediately sample ground water at the site to determine whether it has been contaminated by PBB. They said results may not be back for two weeks. County health officials said they would begin today testing water wells used by 12 or 15 residents in the immediate vicinity.

The DNR spokesperson said department officials do not know precisely how the order against dumping PBB-tainted materials in Lenawee County was violated, but are investigating further.

In other PBB-related activity, a spokesperson said Wednesday the state is considering building additional burial pits for contaminated cattle in Oscoda county.

Non-attendance could cost board reps jobs

If some ASMSU Student Board members miss one more committee meeting it could mean they will no longer serve as a representative for that committee.

Since the beginning of fall term, budget committee has been the only one of three ASMSU committees that has achieved a quorum.

Because of lack of attendance by some board members at committee meetings, a measure which was approved in January could take effect after the next Student Board meeting.

The measure, which was added to the ASMSU Code of Operations, states that: "Any committee member who fails to attend more than three consecutive committee meetings and or at least 50 percent of all meetings in a given term be automatically removed from that committee seat."

Any ASMSU representative can request that the student board review the non-attendance of a committee member to remove that person from the committee.

The ASMSU Student Board president, upon the consensus of the student board, then has the authority to appoint a replacement within three days of the removal of any committee member.

The measure also states the code change was necessary to ensure that the student board will be able to take steps to alleviate the absence problem.

At Tuesday's Student Board meeting, Dan Stouffer, College of Agriculture and Natural Resources representative, said the reason why he has "pulled bills out of committee" was that the policy committee has not yet reached a quorum this term.

There must be at least half the people present at a meeting to have a quorum.

CATA, E.L. have plan to ease parking problem

By SUSAN TOMPOR
State News Staff Writer

East Lansing merchants will soon have the opportunity to promote bus ridership as an alternative to parking problems.

Capital Area Transportation Authority board members authorized participation in a pilot program called "Shop and Ride" at their meeting Wednesday.

Initiated by East Lansing, the program will begin its nine-month trial period in about one month, John Czarnecki, CATA board member and East Lansing Council member said.

The program will be administered through the combined efforts of CATA, East Lansing and city banks and merchants.

Shoppers will board buses along East Lansing routes and will receive a "theater like" ticket after paying the 15-cent fare. The ticket will be redeemable for a token at participating businesses when the shopper makes a purchase. The token will be good for a "free ride home."

All merchants along the routes can offer the tokens, Czarnecki said. About 50 percent of downtown area merchants have said they are willing to participate in the program, Czarnecki said. City officials hope more merchants will participate in "Shop and Ride," he said.

CATA board members also discussed possible involvement in a Lansing proposed downtown multi transportation center.

The center would house a variety of transportation forms including cabs, limousines, inter-city buses and state wide buses, Wayne Servens, CATA board chairperson said. The board voted to examine the proposal more closely and to determine future

Taxes up if 'J' passes, city told

By JANET HALFMANN
State News Staff Writer

Higher taxes for most East Lansing residents will result if the so-called Tisch amendment passes Nov. 7, a city finance official told the City Council Tuesday.

Gary P. Murphy, finance group manager, said renters and senior citizens would be the hardest hit by Proposal J.

The proposal would reduce the property assessment from 50 percent to 25 percent. As a result, property taxes could be cut 50 percent.

A couple under 65 with household income of $12,000 and paying $250 a month for rent would pay $180 more per year in taxes, Murphy's figures showed.

A couple over 65 with a $40,000 home and household income of $15,000 would also pay an additional $180, he said.

One group in Murphy's study would gain with Tisch. A family of five with a $42,000 home and household income of $18,000 would pay $107 less in taxes.

But most homeowners would pay about the same or slightly more in taxes under the proposal, he said.

In the calculations, Murphy assumed state income tax would rise from 4.6 percent to the 5.6 percent permitted under the proposal. A 1 percent local school income tax was also included in the figures.

If Tisch passes, the city would lose more than $1.5 million in property taxes, Murphy said.

But the proposal does not require that any portion of an increase in state income taxes be distributed to local governments, he said.

If state aid is increased, it is likely strings would be attached, he said.

In order to make up the loss in revenue, the city could increase the millage rate from 15.73 to the legal maximum of 20 mills, charge for refuse collection, institute a city income tax or reduce services, he said.

Proposal E, the so-called Headlee amendment, would limit state revenues to 9.4

percent of total Michigan personal income, Murphy said.

Raises in college tuition and fees would not be subject to any of the limits set forth in Proposal E, he said.

The proposal would not cut taxes or cause an immediate cut-back in services, he said, but expansion or addition of services would be difficult.

If both tax proposals pass, the state's ability to help local units of government would be seriously restricted, Murphy said.

If property taxes were cut, the state would probably raise the income tax to the 5.6 percent limit in addition to raising other taxes, he said. But those additional tax raises might not be possible if Proposal E with its limitation on total state revenues also passes, he said.

Murphy's presentation on the effects of the tax proposals will air on the city's government channel, WELG-22, 5 p.m. Monday through Friday, Oct. 23 through Nov. 6.

ASMSU appropriates money to fight tax limitation proposals

By R.W. ROBINSON
State News Staff Writer

Three hundred dollars was appropriated by the ASMSU Student Board at Tuesday's meeting for literature to educate the public "against" the Tisch, Headlee and voucher tax limitation proposals.

Dan Black, director of the legislative relations cabinet, will have control over this allocation and the cabinet will also be responsible for all literature from the Student Board concerning the three proposals.

Black said his cabinet will soon compose a letter which will be distributed to parents of in-state MSU students concerning the board's view on the possible amendments.

The cabinet also plans to run some advertisements in the Detroit Free Press against the tax limitation proposals, Black said.

"I think it's a nice gesture from the board, but I also think it's a day late and a dollar short," said Dan Stouffer, College of Agriculture and Natural Resources representative. All monies received by the cabinet for the purpose of promotion and service that are not used must be sent back to the special projects fund where they originated, the proposal stipulates.

"I think the $300 is going to get lost, myself," Stouffer said.

Black said he believes Stouffer feels this way because "he would rather see the Student Board have more authority over how the money will be used for the 'educational' literature."

Steve Politowicz, chairperson of the Programming Board said he was strongly in favor of all three amendments being passed.

"The system is disassociating itself from the people and I think it's about time those people under the dome receive a kick in the butt," he said.

He added he will have nothing to do with any committee created in opposition of these proposals.

In a heated debate Politowicz and Julie Maki, College of Arts and Letters representative, argued over what should be the Student Board's stand on the proposals and their worth before the measure was finally approved by the board.

Two Case Hall residents also expressed their concern about a measure currently being discussed to elect the board president from within the membership of the student board.

"It is a violation of democracy," freshman Larry Brunink said. If adopted, the measure will be a constitutional change, which means it must go to a student referendum before it can become policy, sophomore Steve Ruskin said.

The Student Board also:

- reallocated $931.92 from its contract services to the communications fund to pay for phone bills and other miscellaneous items;
- placed the referendum to increase student tax 50 cents for the Programming Board and the elections for the Business College representative on the board's agenda for Nov. 1, 1978; and
- approved a resolution to recommend the MSU Board of Trustees to establish a special commission of qualified individuals to be charged with the task of reviewing the present makeup of the Academic Freedom Report.

50 cent increase would benefit everyone—vote YES

The ASMSU Programming Board is undoubtedly the most consistently beneficial service organization existing on campus today. Although their efforts may not be as profound as organizations representing minorities or underprivileged groups, their services touch thousands, and usually with no reward other than personal gratification for a job well done.

Since its referendum-inspired inception two years ago, the board has coordinated an array of groups ranging from Great Issues to Ten Pound Fiddle, to Mariah, to Showcase Jazz, to Ebony Productions, to Pop Entertainment, to 18 different programmers in all. Each group is equal in the eyes of the board and each have been coordinated with skillful aplomb.

Last May, a similar referendum met narrow defeat by a mere 29 votes. The board at that time asked for $1, as opposed to the 50 cents being requested now. Though the dollar increase would have been beneficial to the board — it was perhaps a little extravagant. The $20,000 Pop Entertainment deficit discovered at the beginning of last spring term probably contributed to the narrow defeat, as many students probably figured the request was merely attempt to bail out Pop Entertainment. If they did, they figured wrong.

The biggest factor in the past $1 request, and the current 50-cent request, is the recent change in U.S. copyright laws. Without getting into a long-winded explanation, let it be said that material previously used for free now has to be paid for. The laws definitely benefit artists, but at the expense of those who appreciate what artists do.

The ramifications of the laws were sweeping, even the MSU marching band felt the crunch, and for an organization serving as an umbrella for 18 different programming groups, the law was nearly devastating. Even with the negative affects the law had on the board, they were able to survive. And without passing on substantial costs to student consumers.

As for the $20,000 Pop Entertainment deficit, that particular group can definitely take care of itself, without having to rely on taxing students. Pop Entertainment officials are confident the deficit can be rectified by at least the end of winter term and probably sooner. Under the current system of rental arrangements made with outside promoters, Pop Entertainment cannot lose money — only make. True, they could make more by risking no-rental arrangements, but they could also lose their shirts, as they almost did last year.

The best guarantee for Pop Entertainment's continued success, and the entire Programming Board, is the fact that MSU students love diversion. And no one provides better, inexpensive, quality diversions than do the groups under the Programming Board umbrella.

In the last few years, many off-campus concert promoting organizations have sprung up to satisfy the market. Promoting is getting very competitive. But on-campus promoters have consistently undersold their off-campus rivals. Steve Martin, for instance, was on campus last year for $3 less than what it will take to see him off campus this year. Jazz shows in local bars are nearly double for what is charged at Showcase Jazz concerts. Last year, Great Issues sponsored a series of feminist speakers that no large profit-oriented promoter would ever think of scheduling. The list of benefits goes on and on.

But the list is in danger of stopping abruptly. Costs must be met — either through a small 50-cent increase in a student tax, or through more expensive ticket prices along with cutbacks in services. The tax is readily refundable so no one can lose. But the overwhelming number of people who will gain by the addition of the 50-cent tax makes it imperative that this referendum be passed. We urge that all students vote Yes when the proposal is placed on a ballot.

New faculty grievance procedure should be accepted by all parties

The Faculty Council is investigating a proposed change of the faculty grievance procedure. The University Committee on Faculty Affairs, which compiled the proposed plan, has recommended a major revision of the Interim Faculty Grievance Procedure.

The need for change is not rooted in abuses. The faculty grievance procedure has not been abused by the parties. But a need to change the written rules to conform to actual practice has been recognized. These practices have evolved from experience; they are more practical and fair than the original procedure and ought to become "law" to guarantee their application in the future.

The old procedure, instituted in 1972, was intended as an interim measure in response to several complaints of arbitrary treatment of faculty members. Although not hastily drawn, it was compiled without past experience to guide the system away from mistakes. Its narrow definitions and drawn-out procedures have yielded in practice due solely to looser policies of the Faculty Grievance Official, but the remnants of inexperience have remained in the rules. Should the character of the FGO change, the practical system as we know it would revert to its insufficient beginnings.

The 1972 procedure defines an actionable grievance as one where an official misapplies University policy. Unfortunately, this doesn't cover all areas where a grievance could occur. Under these rules, a faculty member mistreated within University policy has no guaranteed recourse.

The proposed procedure would expand the definition to include any "unfair treatment." While this may seem to include petty arguments, it will also serve to include reasonable complaints technically not allowed under the current procedure.

The decision whether or not to include "unfair treatment" in grievance procedures should not be at the discretion of the FGO as has been exercised in the past — it ought to be guaranteed by the rules.

Binding arbitration is included in an amendment to the proposal. This includes an appeal to the American Arbitration Association when an appeals panel decision in favor of a faculty member is reversed by the president of the University. Binding arbitration is the best method of including an unbiased third party to hear the facts of the case and make a decision all parties are bound to obey.

The "interim" plan has been in effect six years. A permanent solution must be found to provide the fair resolution of faculty/administration disputes. The University Committee on Faculty Affairs is offering a plan that corrects the potential for mistakes and provides a fair grievance process.

As written, the present procedure has potential for arbitrary decisions. That potential alone causes a disgruntled faculty. A disgruntled faculty produces problems for the administration and the Faculty Grievance Official. And a disgruntled faculty stands in the way of the best possible education for the student body.

The proposed plan must still clear the Academic Council, the Academic Senate, the president, and the Board of Trustees. Administrative hassles of running the University should be eliminated quickly so the school can devote its fullest efforts to education. The proposal will clear up that administrative area. Quick acceptance by all reviewing boards will be best for the faculty, the administration, and most important, the students.

Distractions are good, until they overcome

I was reading the letters section of the magazine the other day when I ran across a letter from Rose Grollman, an otherwise unknown resident of Stevensville, Md. The letter was in response to sports columnist Dale Grogan's article on the New York Yankees which was entitled, "Real Pennant Race...and another fever."

I can't read in part, "Congratulations to the Yankees! After we had all heard enough about Pines, scandals, Carter, Sagan and Bagen, he was the first one who really pointed that it's September and there's an exciting pennant race on...

While I find baseball to be the most boring of the lot, I don't like competitive spectator sports as a whole. Sports reinforce attitudes of individual and group competition which are already too reinforced in this culture. The terminology again becomes one of "We" versus "Them" instead of one of cooperation and trust. Further, sports, like most forms of entertainment, distract people from observing and dealing with real life problems. The stadiums, theatres and concert halls attract a lot of people who simply can't cope with homework, friends, or simply their lives.

Distractions in themselves aren't bad. Given this world, with its hatred and continual crises, some distractions, like sports, may be the only thing that keeps us all from becoming compulsive neurotics. But only some distractions, though.

The world is, and always has been, plagued with innumerable problems. The leaders of the world regularly get together and piece together a "final solution" to these problems. No final solution comes about and the problems remain.

It's easy to blame the leaders. I've heard it said that the United States is still "too dependent" on foreign oil because Congress is controlled by special interest groups who won't allow effective energy legislation to be put on the books. That sounds reassuring, sort of. Of course each of us belongs to our share of special interest groups and our groups' interests and plans, which are obviously correct, are always the ones being undermined by "the" special interest groups.

This nation is wrapped up in an energy crisis because as citizens we have done nothing, either individually or collectively, to use our energy more efficiently or shift to alternative forms of energy. We, despite the fingers we point at those other people, are responsible for the crunch and our unwillingness to assume any responsibility becomes the problem itself.

In fact, if we ever took the time, we would find that we as individuals and as members of groups are at least indirectly responsible for most of the problems that face us. If we asked ourselves "What am I doing about it?", few among us would be proud of our own response.

As human beings, we must respect ourselves to enjoy our lives. We cannot do this when we recognize that we are responsible for the problems affecting all of us. So we deny responsibility, or simply cease to care about the problem.

Poverty: who cares? Starvation: who cares? Anita Bryant: who cares? Sexism: who cares? Most everything that we have responsibility for: who cares? "Who cares?" we ask and drift off to the tube or the stadium to forget.

Yet we cannot admit apathy to issues which we find fundamentally heinous. We have to be able to say, "Sure, I'm against the war. I voted for McGovern, you know," or "Sure, I'm all in favor of civil rights.

Some of my best friends are black /female/ gay /poor" (pick one).

But what do we really care about? The football scores, "pennant fever," the long-awaited new album, the dance, the party, the new television show, what Andrea will do about her infected finger and pregnancy in tomorrow's installment, the new cars, Liz's new (but not improved) husband or ring, whether we should go to a movie tonight or do homework, or what grade we would have received if those answers hadn't been changed at the last minute. In short, we care about nothing. And nothing ever changes.

As journalists, who spend so much time studying the issues which really do effect the course of the world, we write our stories and wait to see them published. To eliminate the world's problems, people must be made aware of them and their individual responsibility for solving them. Journalists help bring this about. We wait for feedback that seldom comes. We find Rose Grollman believes everything except the pennant race is irrelevant to life. We have failed.

A stroke of luck on Friday 13th

Friday the 13th was something of an omen for me, on my way to teach a class I had a minor bike accident that involved a brief encounter between my hand and an MSU sidewalk. But in a most important sense, it was a lucky day, because it not only reinforced my belief in human kindness, it also gave me a firsthand and favorable experience of Olin Health Center.

At the scene of the accident itself, four students — all strangers to me — gathered around and stayed around, till they'd helped me to my feet and made sure I was relatively all right. Then one of them walked me and my bike to Olin, harkened to Merrill to pick up my students' papers, and then went to Berkeley to distribute the papers and announce that class was cancelled.

Meanwhile, at the health center, instead of teaching a lesson on reading literature, I relearned a lesson on reading newspapers, i.e., that Olin is a more humane place than one would gather from the editorial pages of the State News. Although my "emergency" was a minor one, I received quick, quiet, competent attention, with clear, helpful advice on what to do afterwards.

I'm not going to pretend that I now view Olin as a medical utopia; I'm sure it has its shortcomings and its staff members have their bad days. But I do want to be sure that the good side of the story gets told too.

So, — to Dr. Hill and Ms. Sorrel and the other staff members who assisted me, and to Shirlee K., my generous aide, and to the other students who stopped to help — thank you.

Public abortions relatively cheap

In response to the Owen graduate student's anti-abortion letter, and as a former elementary teacher in low income areas, I am amazed at his "uninformed" comments. Through my years of teaching, I would be happy to fund, PUBLICLY, abortions, for the reason that if these low income people don't have the chance for abortions, then we pay 10 times the cost of a simple abortion in terms of five million child abuse cases per year, delinquent crime, truancy, unwanted children who grow up and have more unwanted children. It is a vicious cycle of ignorance and human misery.

So, let's save our money, lives and societal decency by giving publicly funded abortions. Either we pay a little now or we are guaranteed to pay one hell of a lot more later.

'U' students send regards to U-M

As students at MSU, we were, of course, elated over our football team's victory last Saturday. There was wild celebration on our campus in honor of our first victory in football over U-M since 1969.

We were informed by a local radio station that television broadcast of the game was cancelled — public as well as cable tape delayed broadcast — after the game was over. We were at first disappointed and then angry.

Why? We were perturbed that after ten years of good sportsmanship on our part as our football and basketball teams founded, we expected the same on the part of our down state rivals. Instead, we get snubbed by the U-M Athletic Department and its precocious director, Don Canham.

Now look, U-M. We have put up with insults, barbs and innuendos for 10 years. Not only at our athletic programs, but at our academic programs as well. Believe me, we could insult you guys plenty! Yet, we won't lower ourselves to your level. We accepted athletic defeats gracefully. Never did we take away television rights or sling insults at U-M.

What do we get in return? Poor sportsmanship! Sore losers! This from the supposed number one school in the nation. What a joke. The only No. 1 you are is No. 1 on the losers list. Hail to the Spartans! We have arrived.

Democracy under attack by ASMSU

A certain proposal has been introduced to the ASMSU Student Board, which is an attempt to take away the students' voice in student government leadership by converting the elected office of ASMSU president into a chairperson position selected, solely, by the Student Board. Such a proposal takes away the representative aspect of the ASMSU presidency. Since such a position affects students, students should have the responsibility of choosing their leadership.

Rather than take away the student's right to vote, ASMSU should act to encourage student participation. One of the greatest tools of participation is the right to vote. If the ASMSU board desires to encourage student voices, an adoption of this proposal will be a negative mark upon ASMSU because of the proposal's impact upon student voices in their leadership.

I encourage each and every student to speak up in order to keep their right to vote and to speak to their ASMSU representative to vote against such a proposal as a violation of student participation and democracy.

VIEWPOINT: 'OPTIONAL' FEES

Why refund what's ours?

By GLEN MITCHELL

A major injustice lurks at MSU which I have seen very few notice in my past three years here. This is the fees students pay during tuition for ASMSU ($2.50), the State News ($1), RHA ($4.75), and the Student Radio ($1). (The RHA and radio fees are only for those students living in resident halls, ASMSU is for all students, and the State News is for those students carrying 10 credits or over.)

For those without a calculator that comes to a total of $9.25 which we pay to these organizations whether we want to or not, and more importantly, whether we use the services they provide.

Of course refunds are available for most, if not all, of these. For those not using these services that wish to get a refund must watch closely in the State News (which you should not be reading if you want to get a refund for it) for announcements of when the refunds are given. They are usually given during certain hours of a specified number of days. After you find out when, then you must take your fee card to the specified office and humble yourself before those giving the refunds.

In the past I obtained Student Radio tax refunds since I did not use their services and did not feel it was my duty to support them. To get this refund it was necessary to watch the State News for several weeks, make a special trip to the Student Services building, find the radio office, ask a secretary where the refunds were given, and enter another office where I presented my ID and fee card. I was then asked to sign a sheet saying I received a refund and then asked verbally why I wanted the refund. All was done pleasantly, but I felt it was wrong that I had to do this to get returned to me the dollar I did not wish to give in the first place.

The process required to get a refund then can be seen to consume much time and effort to get a return of what is really yours to begin with. With PIRGIM, the student decides at registration whether he wants to give or not. Why can't these other fees be treated likewise? Is somebody afraid that we might say no and keep our money?

A more noticed and commented-on fee is this fall's $18 "health service fee." MSU's form of socialized medicine. I see the necessity of having a competent health care facility on or near campus, but what about those who do not use it? Why can't there be at least a partial refund for those who have not used the service during the term?

I know life is not always fair, but that does not mean fairness is not something to strive for.

VIEWPOINT: S. AFRICA

Is divestiture appropriate?

By MIKE McCANDLESS

As the issue of apartheid policies in South Africa draws closer and closer to the heart of the University's financial policies and along with them the ultimate high level decisions that must necessarily follow, the importance of clear and pointed thinking seems more apparent than ever. While waiting with bated breath for word from behind the board room door as to if, how and when divestiture will occur however, a little research on the matter might be in order. It's the least we can do. After all, it is our money. And the lives of thousands of South African blacks.

MSU is not the only organization currently wrestling with the problem of supporting the presence of American business in the most blatantly racist nation in the world. Several other universities are in the same position and are drawing a great deal of protest over their policies. Congress is currently considering a number of measures aimed at applying economic pressure. Many businesses are starting to question their own "apartheid-supporting" activities and have made substantial alterations in their South African holdings. One fact still remains though — American business touches many elements of South Africa and the lives of its people. But how and to what degree are those lives affected? Could it be possible, even in light of all the uproar, that foreign corporations actually represent a legitimate and valuable role in the processes that are trying to bring the majority into a position of full participation in South African society?

It is a matter of public record that the United States assumes the number one position in South African foreign trade and number two as an overseas investor. Three-hundred fifty American firms now operate in South Africa. Some of these firms constitute a highly significant share of some important markets — 23 per cent of the auto market, 43 per cent of petroleum and 70 per cent of computers, according to Investor Responsibility Research Center of Washington D.C. Federal loans and Credits to South Africa total in the billions of dollars.

There is no way that this kind of economic power should be or is consistently allowing the apartheid practices of the South African government to dictate the manner in which American firms conduct business within their country. The fact of the matter is that more than 100 of the American firms currently operating in South Africa now subscribe to a set of principles (developed by a former member of the board of General Motors) that calls for equal pay, increased promotion and training for non-whites, equal rights for black unions and a commitment towards ameliorative actions concerning employee quality of life.

All of this is not to say that the U.S. or its business community should in any way support the activities of the South African government in regard to their apartheid policies. It is not even to say that American business doesn't play any part in the indirect support of that regime. However, a significant number of those businesses are currently conducting their own activities toward the betterment of social conditions for South African blacks. And that can't be ignored.

Some day in the future when black men and women in South Africa can enjoy the same rights and privileges as whites, they will really have no one to thank but themselves for the agony and frustration that was overcome in the struggle. But when the opportunity exists to provide a small base for them in that struggle, it becomes important to weigh those opportunities in relation to the negative impacts that might result. Turning our backs to a problem is not the best way to make it go away. University policies must reflect a consideration for the true costs and benefits of divestiture of stock in businesses conducting activities in South Africa. They can only be obtained through consideration of all the facts, not just the negative ones.

Flint is getting off the Railroad

By DAVE Di MARTINO
State News Reviewer

I think it's going to work both ways," says Don Brewer, former Grand Funk Railroad drummer and current member of Flint.

"I don't think our being part of Grand Funk will really be a hindrance. It'll open up a lot of doors for us — people are going to be curious about us just because of who we were. But it also might work against us — people will probably be comparing us to Grand Funk, too, and that's really not fair."

Speaking from CBS Records' Detroit office in a phone interview Wednesday, Brewer sounded warm, friendly and very excited about his new band, whose live debut is scheduled next Monday in Chicago. "We'll be starting out as a warm-up act," Brewer says. "We'll start by doing small bars, like the Second Chance in Ann Arbor. We'll do maybe six or seven dates like that and then start a tour Nov. 12."

Brewer's band — and technically speaking it isn't really his as there are no leaders involved — is a six-man unit that seems a marked departure from the much-hyped, critically maligned but apparently very well-loved Grand Funk. Without Mark Farner, who's off with Atlantic Records on his own solo career, former Grand Funk members Don Brewer, Mel Schacher and Craig Frost have been joined by Chuck Rowe, a second keyboardist, guitarist John Escosa and second drummer Ron Trombly. Together they've put together Flint (Columbia JC 37544), an impressive debut album as any to be heard this year. A highly commercial LP just brimming with potential hits, Flint thankfully is NOT recycled Grand Funk but powerful, poppish rock 'n' roll.

How did Flint begin? Hasn't Grand Funk, with their $60 million career gross, pretty much set up Brewer and Schacher for life?

"Not to the extent that people think," Brewer says. "I mean, basically we're set, but we got this whole project together after Grand Funk strictly with the attitude that it would only be for fun, it wasn't going to be anything else. If it was, then it wouldn't be worth doing it."

"Actually, we'd been working on putting this whole thing together for about a year and a half," Brewer explains. "The it and start all over again. We really didn't get the band together until six or seven months ago."

Flint was recorded at The Swamp, the group's own Michigan studio, and produced by Brewer, Schacher and Frost. The trio was responsible for laying down most of the basic

"We're not trying to be Grand Funk, and we really don't want to be related to Grand Funk. That whole thing would be really hard for us to compete with at this point, you know?"

three of us" — Brewer, Schacher and Frost — "just started out in our studio recording some basic tracks. We threw some stuff down on tape and decided to figure out what to do with it later, after we added some overdubs. If we didn't like it, we'd just scratch tracks and soon after, the overdubs — by such talents as Frank Zappa and Todd Rundgren — were added. Most noticeable about the LP is its sense of immediacy and, to this writer at least, the fact that all those overdubs don't give the album a patchy feel, something on our own merits, and hopefully everything else will work out."

Brewer seems quite excited about next week's debut, as it will be the band's first live performance. He says it will definitely be a "high energy" show; if Flint's album is any indication, Brewer's definition of "high energy" should fall in the totally positive realm. Most of the LP's songs are upbeat, melodic numbers — not a bit of heavy metal excess — that should work very well in concert.

"We're excited," Brewer says. "We just can't wait to see what'll happen. We want to be a totally original band — we've been working so long to see that happen — and we don't want it to come off wrong, corny or like a hype. We're really trying to get away from all that, to get everything together ourselves and not take advice from agents or management or anyone like that. We just want to do what we want to do."

Brewer is especially eager to see how Michigan will react to the band, hoping for the best. He thinks the group's sound is contemporary; after listening to Flint this writer would have to agree with him.

"What we're doing now is pretty much what we've always done," Brewer adds. "We're contemporary — other than the fact that we don't play any disco. We listen to the radio, we pick up on songs and we're pretty happy with what we're doing."

You must be curious as hell to see how you'll go down, the writer mentions, and Brewer laughs. "Yeah . . ."

He should find out Monday night.

Background: John Denver

ASMSU Pop Entertainment will present recording, television and motion picture star John Denver in Jenison Fieldhouse on Nov. 10 at 8 p.m.

Denver began his career as Chad Mitchell's replacement in the extremely popular Chad Mitchell Trio. After two and one-half years as lead singer for the group, Denver left the group to become a single act.

He first gained national prominence when Peter, Paul and Mary recorded "Leaving On A Jet Plane" from his first album, Rhymes and Reasons. Following the success of the single, Denver became a major attraction on the college circuit, while building a reputation as a recording artist.

"Take Me Home, Country Roads," from his fourth LP, Poems, Prayers and Promises, was Denver's first million selling single. The album also went gold. He followed this with a string of gold singles and LP's, including "Rocky Mountain High," "Sunshine On My Shoulders," "Annie's Song," and "Thank God, I'm A Country Boy." All of which resulted in John Denver's Greatest Hits, one of the biggest selling albums in the recording industry's history.

Denver has become a major TV personality through a series of top-rated television specials. An Evening With John Dever won the singer an Emmy Award for the best musical variety special of 1974-75 season. His Rocky Mountain Christmas received the highest rating in the history of the ABC Television Network for a program hosted by a single personality. The special rated higher than the total of the other two networks' ratings combined. He has starred in a series of specials for the BBC in London, and has guest hosted the Tonight show for Johnny Carson on several occasions.

Denver is the recent recipient of the Country Music Association's highest award — "Entertainer of the Year." His popularity encompasses a complete cross section of the musical audience from country to easy listening.

Perhaps the crowning moment of Denver's career was his co-starring role with Academy Award winner George Burns in Carl Reiner's Oh, God! Denver received favorable reviews for his portrayal in the film. Denver's only other motion picture stint was composing and singing the title theme for Walt Disney's The Bears And I.

Tickets for Denver's appearance are $10, $7.50, and $5, and are available at the Union Ticket Office, Campus Corners II, Wherehouse Records II & III, Sounds and Diversions, and Boogie Records in Mt. Pleasant.

Another Grand River Avenue?

That's what traffic to the Mall will mean

They call their malls "magnets"

The mall's developers estimate that the first phase of the mall's development will draw nearly 100,000 more cars a week onto Lake Lansing Road.

And those 100,000 cars won't come out of thin air. Every street in northern East Lansing will see its traffic increase by thousands of cars a week.

But that's only the beginning. By 1985, the developers have estimated, "the site will be the focus of 46,940 work, shopping, and entertainment trips (per day)."

And that's enough cars to make Grand River Avenue into the second busiest street in East Lansing.

You can look at the developers' own words to see they're serious about turning northern East Lansing into another traffic tangle.

They've already advertised for retailers to buy and develop land in "the high traffic neighborhood around a Dayton Hudson regional center." And they've listed this area in the ads as one prime location.

The ads call their malls "magnets" — traffic drawing magnets. And they want to put their traffic-drawing magnet right on top of East Lansing's residential neighborhoods.

AT 5-FOOT-4, SHE'S STILL DEPENDABLE

Height no problem for Ferguson

By JERRY BRAUDE
State News Sports Writer

Being only 5 foot 4 may limit the game of some volleyball players, but not MSU's Joan Ferguson, who is one of the most versatile players on the squad. In fact, the team's most valuable player last year even at times was her lack of height to her advantage.

"My height hurts when I'm up at the net, but I can do for the team what taller players can't do lower to the ground," Ferguson said.

Another person who doesn't find height to hamper Ferguson is coach Alex Knoppers.

"When a player is 5-foot-4, you normally don't put her up at the net. We put her in the back row where she always puts out, she is very consistent and she is very ball hungry. She leads the team through the way she plays."

Ferguson has been satisfied with her defensive play, but because she is so short she is still working on her offense and blocking.

"Because of my height, I always have to work on my offense and blocking," Ferguson said. "Defense is the best part of the game. But I do like to play all-around. Yet, anything I can do for the team is fine with me."

Ferguson is working on her concentration. That's especially important because you have to be able to read the other team's offense."

Now in her third year with MSU volleyball, Ferguson spent a year with the junior team before moving up to the varsity team for her sophomore season. Although she was named the team's most valuable player award, the Spartans suffered through a losing season. Ferguson is now glad to have the team back on the winning track.

"I'm enjoying playing together this year," Ferguson said. "We're more of a team now. We're all getting to know each other. We have a lot of balance, too. We have fresh players who are going to help us win matches. We're a close unit now."

The Spartans will be playing again until next weekend when they travel to Champaign, Ill., for the spring competition there," Ferguson said. "To do well, we'll have to play our game and keep the momentum going. We just have to put offensive pressure on our opponents, which is our strength."

The one tournament, though, that Ferguson would like to win is the state tournament, which will be played at MSU.

"In the previous years, we have always won it except for last year," Ferguson said. "It will be really hard to win it, but I think we can do it. It's an attainable goal."

After playing on the Class A high school championship team at Dearborn Fordson, Ferguson decided to come to MSU because she knew the athletic program well and felt a big school would be more of a challenge than a smaller one.

MSU volleyball standout Joan Ferguson (3) makes up for her lack of height with quickness and defensive ability. At 5-foot-4, Ferguson said the only time her lack of height hurts her is when she's at the net.

JERRY BRAUDE
Another rebuilding year for the MSU hockey team

Because he is entering his 28th year as MSU's hockey mentor, Amo Bessone's name has been reputed as being synonymous with MSU hockey.

But ever since the icers lost the core of possibly their best team ever three years ago, a term has also been synonymous with MSU hockey. That's called rebuilding, and this year looks like things may not be any different.

The Spartans lost eight seniors from last year's squad, giving them young and inexperienced material for Bessone and his assistant Alex Terpay to work with. But since they are still rebuilding from the losses of the 1975-76 team, MSU hockey fans will have to put up with another season of fortitude and patience.

After losing the "four superstars" that contributed to an average of 21 wins a season (All-Americans Tom Ross and Steve Knoppers and Larry Riva and John Strosser from the 1975-76 squad), the following season was expected to be rebuilding year, and it was. MSU didn't make the playoffs in 1976-77 for the first time in 12 years.

With the season of rebuilding behind them, MSU was expected to be a respectable team next year. But instead, they were even worse, compiling the most dismal hockey record in Spartan history in 1977-78.

The team now has to start to play over the season. In fact, the Spartans were so bad last season, that Goofus, the one-man band, who one time had to get to make it to one of the skaters' games during their off years, didn't even show up when MSU's ineptitude was at its swiftness in the second half of the season.

YOU CAN LEARN TO SKY DIVE!

Skydiving is the most exhilarating experience imaginable. Skydivers come in all sizes, ages and lifestyles. But they share a common bond — the will to live life to the max!

But sport parachuting is not foolish derring-do. When approached under the competent instruction of instructors and jumpmasters, it is a safe, exciting sport. And thanks to recent advances in equipment design and technique, skydiving is growing mighty fast.

Go ahead — learn to fly this weekend at your friendly local drop zone, the Para Center in Charlotte.

To find out more about skydiving come to the M.S.U. Skydiving Club's meeting this Thursday, Oct. 19th, in the East Shaw Hall Lower Lounge at 7:00 pm. We will have movies showing students actually going through the course and making their first jump.

BUT HE MAY MISS SATURDAY'S GAME

U-M win biggest for Marshall

By JOE CENTERS
State News Sports Writer

It was a special day last Saturday for MSU fans when the Spartans beat the University of Michigan, but for cornerback Mike Marshall, the win was especially sweet.

Marshall played his prep football at Southwestern High School in Detroit, so he personally knows and works in the summer with many of the Wolverine players. None of them ever let him forget all of the past MSU-Michigan battles, but this time, it will be Marshall's turn to talk.

"It was a great feeling," Marshall said. "They were so sure they were going to win that game. Ralph (U-M wing back Ralph Clayton) called me Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday and told me they had some patterns to beat us."

"He said it would be 30-0 at halftime."

It wasn't quite 30-0 at the half, but it was 17-0. The only problem with Clayton's prediction, though, was that his team was losing instead of winning.

"The way they (the Michigan players) were talking this summer," Marshall said, "they thought we were Northwestern. They said we didn't even belong in the Big Ten."

Marshall said he expected U-M to be throwing at him because of what Clayton was telling him.

"He told me that Bo (Schembechler) said I made a lot of mistakes. They were going to pick on me. He said they had a play we couldn't stop. They'll run that option all day long to get the cornerbacks to cheat. Then they'll pass on you. That's how they beat Notre Dame."

Marshall said even though they play on different teams, he and Clayton are the best of friends and try to look out for each other. Saturday was no exception.

"We made a deal," Marshall said. "If I didn't give him any cheap shots, he wouldn't cut me at my knees."

The game is history now, but for Marshall, he'll still be having his fun for a long time. "I'll be doing a whole lot of wolfing this summer," Marshall said with a chuckle.

Against U-M, Marshall intercepted two passes and he feels that his game is getting better.

"I'm learning," he said. "I'm still making the little mistakes. Sometimes I line up wrong but the more I play the more I learn."

"By being quarterback (in high school), it helps me out playing the corner. Leach (U-M quarterback Rick Leach) won't look you off. Right from the snap Leach will look right at the dude. He won't look one way and throw another."

The U-M game was a big one for Marshall, but it was also a big one for the whole defense. In all, the Spartan defense intercepted three passes and came up with the big play when they needed it.

"The more we play, the more experience we get," Marshall said. "Against Michigan we didn't get the penalties. We had more emotion — that's what we didn't have the first three games. We're playing together."

"The big play helped us. I know when I was recruited by Michigan (out of high school), that's how they talked about, the big play. They don't want to give up the big play, but that's how we played against them."

Earlier this week, Spartan coach Darryl Rogers said he hoped his team wouldn't "let down" Saturday against Indiana, and Marshall knows exactly what can happen if the team gets over-confident. Unfortunately, Marshall may miss this Saturday's game due to a nagging back injury.

"Things are looking good now," he said. "But we can't take the last six games lightly. My freshman year we lost to Northwestern, and they'd lost 15 in a row. Then we lost to Iowa."

"Everyone knows what they have to do."

Marshall knows what's ahead of him and the Spartans for the rest of the season, but after Saturday's game he knows that he has earned himself the bragging rights in Detroit for this summer.

"They may as well get ready," Marshall said. "I can't wait."

Ali at it again; may fight Teofilo

By BILL MOONEY
State News Special Writer

Word has reached these parts that boxing promoter Robert Arum is currently in the process of scheduling a series of exhibition bouts pitting Muhammad Ali, top professional, against Teofilo Stevenson, talented amateur. Reportedly, $6 million in TV rights will be involved in this extravaganza, should it come off, with Ali's cut going to his bank account and Stevenson's to Fidel Castro's Cuban Boxing Federation. Five three-round matches will be fought in five American cities with the winner declared to be ... well ... apparently just the plain old "winner" since Muhammad's title, recently rescued from Leon Spinks, will not be at stake.

The idea of the professional heavyweight champion of the world fighting Olympic heavyweight champion of the world has already offended some boxing purists, who see such a contest as being undignified and unprecedented. Ho! Ho! Undignified it may be, but unprecedented it is not. In 1957 Peter Rademacher, Olympic heavyweight king, challenged and fought world professional heavyweight titleholder Floyd Patterson. It was a bizarre fight and seemed to corroborate what H. L. Mencken once said: "People know what they want, and they deserve to get it ... good and proper." Rademacher somehow succeeded in flooring Patterson in the second round — Floyd was always said to have had poor balance — but from thereon it was a carnival, with Pete being knocked down seven times before the fight was finally halted at 2:57 of the sixth round. Patterson received $250,000 for his work. Rademacher got nothing. Thankfully, he didn't get seriously hurt.

Muhammad Ali, of course, his threats and predictions of retirement notwithstanding, sees nothing wrong with the idea of fighting an amateur. Indeed, Muhammad would probably fight Kermit the Frog if the price was right (and carry him for 15 rounds to make sure that all the commercial sponsors got their money's worth). The scenario is make sure that all the commercial sponsors got their money's worth. The scenario is perfect: democracy vs. dictatorship, capitalism vs. communism, Carter vs. Castro, a hyperbolist's fantasy come true. And Ali's poetic skills are already primed: "Whoever thought when they came to the fight that they'd see the launching of a Cuban satellite." The line is a natural, and, if he hasn't already thought of it, he will.

As a professional, Ali has had his jousts with amateurs before. Back in 1967, just prior to his problems with the Selective Service, he came close to signing for a fight with Wilt Chamberlain, the star NBA basketball player. Someone had convinced Wilt that his 7-foot-1 size and strength would enable him to beat the champion. ABC's Wide World of Sports got wind of this and did a segment where the two stood back to back, submitted to a "tale of the tape" proceeding and took turns insulting each other. Ali, as expected, won the day. "Size don't mean nothing," he said. "Reach don't mean nothing. I'm a fighter. I'm the greatest."

He reached up and grabbed Chamberlain's beard. "And listen," said Ali. "If you're going to get in the ring with me, you're gonna have to shave this off first. I ain't gonna fight no billy goat."

That fight never did come off — one of Chamberlain's advisers talked him out of it — but nine years later, Ali's match with Kanji Antonio Inoki did. Inoki, for those who have forgotten, was a champion Japanese wrestler who specialized in hammerlocks, claw holds and kicks to the shins of his opponents. The latter was the most formidable of his repertoire of weapons, and he did manage to kick Ali some 60 times. Ali countered this by yawning, sticking out his tongue and stomping his foot, all the while staying close to the safety of the ropes as Inoki crawled around the ring on his back with his belly up. This went on for 15 rounds. Ali's offensive thrusts totaled 12 left jabs, two of which landed. The contest was ruled a draw, much to the disillusionment of the 10,000 Japanese fans in attendance in Budokan Hall in Tokyo who were heard to shout "Damasareta!" at the end, which roughly translates into English as "We wuz robbed!" Ali got $6 million for his efforts. They wuz robbed all right.

In all fairness, there are those who argue that Teofilo Stevenson represents an entirely different sort of thing, and there may be some truth in that contention. One has to be at least somewhat impressed with the ease in which the Cuban has dispatched his opponents in the last two Olympiads, counting Americans Duane Bobick and John Tate among his knock-outs. Yet an amateur is still an amateur and there's a big difference between fighting a bunch of green kids and the likes of Ken Norton and Earnie Shavers. And there is no question that Ali will win because, quite simply, he always does when he needs to.

And what will come afterwards is anyone's guess. Ali's got the title and can do anything he wants. Jack Dempsey once fought a kangaroo (he knocked the animal out in one round). There's that to be tried. Sylvester Stallone, according to news releases, is now busy making a sequel to his immensely popular movie Rocky, which is imaginatively entitled Rocky II. Sylvester been getting himself in shape and it figures that it's only a matter of time before someone puts up enough bucks to get he and Ali into a ring. Oh! you think that's impossible, eh? Well you watch. You wait. You'll see.

Big Ten-Fiesta Bowl pact set?

CHICAGO (UPI) — The Fiesta Bowl could become an annual matchup between the No. 2 teams in the Big Ten and Pacific 10 under a new plan being discussed by the conferences and bowl organizers, Big Ten commissioner Wayne Duke said.

"Discussions are very preliminary, but they have occurred," Duke said.

The champions of the Big Ten and Pac-Ten meet annually in the Rose Bowl.

It looks like a rebuilding year for icers

All in all, last season was labeled another rebuilding year in preparing for this year.

And during the off-season, this year looked like things might be returning to the good old days when the recruiting season was billed the best since 1972, when MSU landed the "four superstars."

With the recruits from Canada expecting to bring immediate success and with a strong nucleus of players returning, the team's motto of "moving up" looked like it was something worth believing.

But then, for academic reasons, the misfortunes started occurring. The key to this year's successful recruiting season, Jim Baker, couldn't come to MSU because he couldn't meet the academic requirements. Then the Spartans lost Leo Lynett, the team's second leading scorer last year, and one of their top defensemen, Dan Sutton. Both players, though, can regain their eligibility for winter term if their grades are high enough.

At the moment, the other top recruits from Canada — Jeff Bacon, Joe Omiccoli, Bill Shutt and Conrad Wiggins — have been trying to adjust to the United States' style of more wide-open hockey.

In fact, the most impressive new recruits during the pre-season were from the United States, in walk ons Arron Rucks from Santa Ana, Cal., and Craig Laktion from West Bloomfield.

The strength of this year's team, as during the past two rebuilding years, is the goaltending, with seasoned and proven Mark Mazzoleni and freshman Doug Belland sharing the duties.

So with the Spartans waiting for Lynett and Sutton to return, the Canadians trying to adjust to wide-open U.S. hockey, and the other young members trying to gain experience, MSU hockey fans shouldn't be too surprised in seeing another rebuilding season having its share of frustrations. That is, in rebuilding year number three.

S. African Liberation Committee asks board to urge divestiture

By R. W. ROBINSON
State News Staff Writer

A member of the Southern African Liberation Committee asked the ASMSU Student board to urge the MSU Board of Trustees to "stick to its plan" for prudent divestitures in South Africa, at Tuesday's student board meeting.

Maggie Vaccasemmo, a member of SALC, told the student board that they did not want to see MSU withdraw its resolution requiring corporations in which the University invests to withdraw their business influence in South Africa.

SALC is an independent Lansing-area information gathering organization which advocates the total withdrawal of U.S. investments in South Africa.

Most student board members listened quietly to Vaccasemmo's comments on the resolution, but Dan Black, director of legislative relations, disagreed strongly with her remarks.

"We are alienating ourselves from corporations," Black said. "There must be an easier way to deal with the problem than withdrawing the money this University is using to keep the cost of tuition down."

"They pay the blacks roughly 16 times less than what they pay the whites working over there," Vaccasemmo countered. "It's not a matter of tuition problems, it's a matter of human rights we are concerned with."

No student board action was taken on the proposal from Vaccasemmo, but ASMSU Student Board President Dan Jones said a student representative may bring up the issue again in the form of a resolution.

Jones added that the student board did express its support to the Board of Trustees spring term on its plans to divest in corporations doing business in South Africa.

The Board of Trustees decided in March to give corporations in which the University invests and that do business in South Africa until Dec. 1 to show evidence of withdrawal from the apartheid country or be excluded from the MSU stock portfolio.

The resolution called for companies not to make investments in South Africa, not to reinvest profits there, stop expansion of South African facilities, not to establish subsidiaries in South Africa, not to engage in operations in Bantustan, homelands, or Namibia and not import equipment of technologies.

Vaccasemmo said she believes the Board of Trustees wants to back out on its divestiture resolution because it has considered "the great loss" the University would receive on investments MSU has in corporations doing business in South Africa.

"The United States makes a lot of profit in Africa because the labor is cheap and the profits are tremendous," she said. "MSU is a part of this when they have stocks in corporations that are in South Africa."

She also said the board is having difficulties defining what they meant by "prudent divestiture."

Roger Wilkinson, vice president of business and finance, explained last spring that "prudent divestiture" meant selling the stocks at favorable market prices to minimize losses.

Wilkinson projected in March that if MSU simply sold its stock in affected companies the capital loss and brokerage fees would be $1.5 million.

Safety council vetoed; no need, board says

The proposed plan to develop an ASMSU Council of Campus Safety was rejected by the University in 1977 after studying the safety situation on campus.

"And the University is actually doing something about it," Stouffer said.

Maj. Adam J. Zutaut of DPS said the green-light telephone system, improved campus lighting and an "auxiliary police" squad still in the planning stages are three programs resulting from the committee's suggestions.

The permanent safety council proposed to the student board in September was rejected because it would be difficult for a student group to oversee University safety policy, Stouffer said, which includes Department of Public Safety regulations.

He pointed out that suggesting any policy changes would also be difficult.

Student Board President Dan Jones or the five-person policy committee can appoint board committees and sub-committees to handle individual problems of campus safety, he explained.

The earlier public safety committee issued a "Report on the Proposed Committee on Public Safety on MSU Campus" to the University in 1977 after studying the safety situation on campus.

"And the University is actually doing something about it," Stouffer said.

Maj. Adam J. Zutaut of DPS said the green-light telephone system, improved campus lighting and an "auxiliary police" squad still in the planning stages are three programs resulting from the committee's suggestions.

Emergency telephones in 40 locations will be installed in hazardous, heavy pedestrian, traffic areas by spring, Zutaut said. He added that street, parking lot and walkway lighting is already being upgraded.

The "auxiliary police" foot patrols would consist of University students, faculty and staff members for several purposes still being designed by DPS, Zutaut said.

Stouffer said the public safety committee was disbanded in May 1978 because "we don't need a committee for everything" and safety problems can be handled elsewhere.

Soviets praise chess champion

MOSCOW (AP) — Victorious Anatoly Karpov was officially credited here Wednesday with upholding the Soviet way of life by beating "unscrupulous" defector Viktor Korchnoi in the world chess championship tournament in the Philippines.

Defeating "a very experienced, dangerous and perfidious adversary," the official Tass news agency said, Karpov carried "the greatest responsibility ever borne in a match by a Soviet chess player" in defeating his title.

Korchnoi, 47, resigned Wednesday rather than resume a game adjourned Tuesday. That gave Karpov, 27, the sixth win he needed to end the three-month-long tournament at Baguio City. He keeps his title and wins $350,000. Korchnoi gets $200,000.

Korchnoi, who claimed match organizers made him play under "intolerable conditions," said he would file a protest.

Korchnoi said he will bring up the conduct of the match when the International Chess Federation meets this month in Buenos Aires, Argentina.

In Moscow, there was jubilation and relief, at least on official levels, that Karpov defeated the man who defected from Russia during a chess match in the Netherlands in 1976.

In Montmorency County, Michigan, in an area known as "Grass Farm," 111 deer were counted in less than one hour on Tuesday while turkeys fed on the grass. This is one of the few places left in Michigan where wildlife exists in such quantities.

Budget director blasts 'J'

MARQUETTE (UPI) — State Budget Director Gerald Miller said Wednesday renters — 35 percent of all Michigan households — will be fleeced by approval of Proposal J, the Tisch tax cut amendment.

"Renters are going to end up paying significantly more if Proposal J passes," Miller told Upper Peninsula reporters and community leaders at a tax reform forum.

Proposal J author Robert Tisch said though their income taxes will rise, renters will benefit because their landlords will lower their rents.

But Miller said lower rents are improbable and renters will be stuck with sharply increased income taxes levied to make up for the $1.7 billion property tax cut.

He said expecting landlords to lower rents is "like asking a rabbit to take a piece of lettuce to a friend — it just won't happen."

'Shop and Ride'

Members said the center looks possible because Lansing could obtain the necessary funding based on the state's newly signed transportation package.

"CATA recognizes the need for an improved downtown exchange point," Servens said,

"but may find some problems with the location."

The proposed site, at Michigan and Grand River Avenues, is about three blocks from what CATA calls "the heart of the downtown area."

The proposed location would also move bus stops and could be inconvenient for Lansing Community College Students, Czarnecki said.

Open house tonight

The Office of Overseas Study will hold an open house from 6:30 to 8:30 tonight in the International Center lobby.

Professors, former program participants and the staff from the Office of Overseas Study will be available to answer questions.

The programs offered through the office allow students to earn MSU credit for study overseas.

Oriental art shown

Original Oriental art will be on display today and Friday at the International Center.

The art, including works of well-known and contemporary artists from Japan, India, China, Tibet, Nepal and Thailand, can be purchased. Marson Co., Ltd of Baltimore, the exhibition sponsor, will have a representative available to answer questions.

Some 18th and 19th century works will be among the 500 pieces on display.

Legislator says policy anti-poor

By THERESA D. McCLELLAN
State News Staff Writer

The present national policy has a negative impact that diminishes the sense of personhood for the poor, the blacks and the helpless, Legislator Parren Mitchell, D-Maryland, said at the sixth National Conference on Counseling Minorities.

Mitchell, chairperson of the Congressional Black Caucus, spoke to about 200 high school and college counselors at an annual conference held at the Hilton Inn in Lansing Tuesday night.

Mitchell said the Bakke case, reverse discrimination and Proposition 13 were all annexed together to become the tip of the spear, aimed at the "black, the poor, and the helpless."

"This policy closes out these people and makes them think something must be wrong with them," he said.

"This policy," he continued, "makes them think they do not belong, and since they do not belong this policy is their enemy."

He also told the audience that the "final decision" is in the hands of the voters.

"You cannot afford the luxury of standing apart from the political process," he said. "You cannot afford the apathy and the indifference."

Mitchell said the national policy embraces reduced government spending, a balanced budget and tax proposals like proposition 13 — as long as it does not adversely affect the military, police or the firefighters.

"They will get what they want in the interest of safety and security," Mitchell said.

"But I do not believe that they (military, police, and firefighters) are our safety and security," he said. "I believe that children are our safety and security."

"But with the national security policy, that security will be out," he said. "Johnny will not be able to read, write or adjust, and soon Johnny will tell us all to go to hell."

Mitchell told the audience that they must review their priorities and their perspectives.

"We are building more jails and asking for harsher sentences for juveniles, but no one is crying for money to make people human," he said.

"We are becoming too caught up in the idea of institutions," he said. "No government should exist unless the end object is to serve personhood."

Mitchell concluded by telling the audience, "Write me a song about an America where there is no racism or inequality."

"Write me a song to make everybody cry of the indecencies of racism and we will all sing it together."

"Go out and script that song," he said.

Minority conference establishes expansion goal

By THERESA McCLELLAN
State News Staff Writer

"Our goal is to expand — through research and interactions with other professionals," explained Gloria Smith, coordinator of the Sixth national Conference on Counseling Minorities.

The four-day conference held at the Hilton Inn in Lansing Sunday through Wednesday, featured workshops concerning mental health counseling and several guest speakers including the chairperson of the Congressional Black Caucus, Parren Mitchell, D-Maryland.

Thomas Gunnings, another coordinator, explained that the conference has gained importance because of the recent cut-backs in nationwide minority programs.

"Now, more people see the implications of a need for solid programs especially with the cutbacks in minority programs," he said.

"We are bringing to East Lansing," Gunnings said, "persons most effective in presenting viable programs for minority people to expose others to the delivery system and the effectiveness of this system."

"The workshops have been very informative and helpful," said Eleanor Hall, a counselor from the University of Wisconsin.

"Being a non minority, I get to hear their point of view and get a better understanding of the problems they face," she said.

The workshops featured programs that present new ideas for tackling old problems.

One workshop, presented by two representatives from the University of Maryland, featured a model for early identification and salvaging minority students in academic trouble.

Amel Anderson and Reginald Grier argued that the impersonal nature of the University of Maryland and the overwhelming size made adjustment for minority students at the University.

The model proposed an academic monitoring system that could detect difficulties early. If academic problems are found, students receive a letter stressing there are people in the university who cared and would be able to help them.

Other workshops focused on woman and social change, special programs for minority students in higher education and perspectives in youth unemployment.

"I have attended as many workshops as I can," said Roselle Wilson, minority affairs program director from Eastern Michigan University.

"Our main thrust is to bring more and more minorities together for effective program development," Gunnings said.

"But our long range goal," he said, "is to present programs that will meet the needs of minorities and other students on an equal basis."

'D' is meeting topic

Whether the drinking age in Michigan should be raised to 21 will be discussed in a "town hall" meeting at 7:30 tonight in the Union Ballroom.

Speakers will include Paul Bailey, executive director of the Michigan Council on Alcohol Problems; Robin Piszczek of the Alanon Center in Lansing; Chris Magnus, public relations coordinator for the Three O'Clock Lobby; and Gary Foltz, manager of Dooley's Restaurant, East Lansing.

The meeting is sponsored by the MSU School of Journalism.

Nominations for Teacher-Scholar Awards for Junior Faculty and Excellence-In-Teaching Citations for Graduate Teaching Assistants

The undersigned committee solicits nominations for Teacher-Scholar Awards and Excellence-In-Teaching Citations from faculty and students.

Teacher-Scholar Awards are given to faculty drawn from the ranks of instructor and assistant professor who have earned the respect of students and colleagues for their devotion to and skill in undergraduate teaching. To be considered for the award, the candidate must have served on the faculty for at least three terms, but no more than five academic years, and have been primarily involved in undergraduate teaching.

Excellence-In-Teaching Citations are awarded to outstanding graduate teaching assistants who have distinguished themselves by the care they have given and the skill they have shown in meeting their classroom responsibilities. Any graduate student who has an assistantship and has had an assigned instructional responsibility for a minimum of two terms is eligible for this award.

Any faculty member or student who wants to make a nomination should consult the office of the dean of the college to which the prospective nominee is attached. Nominations must be submitted to a college screening committee which will forward a maximum of two nominations for each award to the office of the Assistant Provost for Undergraduate Education by no later than November 6, 1978. Questions about criteria or requests for additional forms may be directed to Dr. Katherine Fishburn or Dr. George Rowan, 353 5380.

Area development plans to be heard

A public hearing to help plan a new three-year community development program will be held 7:30 tonight in 54B District Court, 301 M.A.C. Ave.

Community development funds are designed to eliminate deterioration areas where a majority of residents are low- and moderate-income families or persons.

About 6 neighborhood comment hearing will be held before a final city-wide public hearing is held, said Gary Zick, administrator for community development.

Community development proposals approved by the council will be submitted to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Hearings for the community development program are being sponsored by the city's new Housing and Community Development Commission.

MSU student housing co-ops are also included in the community development program.

Mall debate tonight

Whether the Dayton Hudson mall should be built in East Lansing will be the subject of a debate-discussion at 7:30 tonight in the Orchard Street Pumphouse.

Opening statements by Peter Hutchinson, of Dayton Hudson Properties, and James Anderson, of Citizens for a Livable Community, will be followed by audience questions.

EXPENSE DETERS MANY FROM SAFEGUARDING IDEAS

MSU inventor patents imagination

By DAVID BARTHMUSS

For the average inventor, receiving a patent for an invention seems to be a lifetime goal. But an MSU graduate student has already reached this objective, and presently has the knowledge to obtain many more.

Hooshang Iravani, currently on leave from the University of Tehran in Iran to finish work on his doctorate, developed a drafting tool which can draw ellipses while he was an MSU undergraduate majoring in continuing education.

Large and complex machines have already been developed to do such tasks. However, Iravani's model is small and can be adjusted to fit a wide range of dimensions.

Iravani has several more ideas that could be further developed but the cost of getting a patent is tremendous. "Any patent you get is very expensive. A thousand dollars to get your name on it and so forth," Iravani said. "I have several ideas in my head, but since the cost is so high, I just have the one patent."

"Among his ideas are several energy-saving devices powered by both solar and gravitational means. Iravani said he feels there is a great potential for devices utilizing gravity as opposed to those that use the sun.

"What happens when it is cold or when it is raining and the sun does not shine?" he asked.

Iravani, who is currently a faculty member in the Department of Extension and Agricultural Education at the University of Tehran, is presently working on a project for his doctorate, hoping to complete it within two years.

"This is very important. Above all else, I want to emphasize this project," he said. "I am designing a model of agro-extension units for the development of agriculture in Iran."

Iravani hopes these models will be adopted for use in Iran and other developing countries to help individual farmers get more use of their land through combined extension with others.

When he is not spending his time being a designer, Iravani becomes an artist. He calls his artistry "Jaleh," which translates to "spring flower dew."

He constructs his models by combining epoxy, various sorts of beads and whatever else he feels fitting, into a tiny sculpture. Iravani started some two months ago and already his collection contains well over 100 pieces.

There are several steps in constructing each piece. Before actually making the small model, he evaluates and chooses the best of the subjects he has considered.

Iravani spends from half-an-hour to a full hour and one-half on each of his projects.

Living in a modest Okemos apartment, the very humble and hospitable Iravani also seems to be part philosopher. "We are all life-time learners," he explained. "We learn from each other in formal and non-formal settings, from happenings, our experiences and from nature."

"The very first thing we learn is learning to cry and the very last thing we learn is learning to die."

Renewed business area

The Central Business District Task Force report outlined three possible designs for future downtown development.

The first would include pedestrian walkways between activity areas, a city focal point at M.A.C. and Albert avenues, and small-scale economic development.

The second plan would channel redevelopment to permit greater pedestrian access and movement. The proposal calls for a substantial increase in parking facilities to be integrated with retail shops, a pedestrian plaza and additional housing.

The third design would create a central pedestrian area to be coupled with expanded commercial development. Vehicular traffic would be eliminated from the Central Business District with parking located on the edge of the city.

Elements can be taken from any of the designs and a final plan would have to be put into action in stages, the report said.

The report's focus on increased downtown development led the council to table the request for rezoning two acres fronting Lake Lansing and Abbott roads for business use.

"It's a mistake to continue to develop along the perimeter of our city," said councilmember Carolyn Stell, a member of the downtown task force. "If we want a downtown that's the heart of the city, we've got to back it up with action."

The construction of offices, such as would be permitted under a business rezoning, was one of the alternatives for downtown development.

"The Coca-Cola industry in South Africa offers blacks meaningful and gainful employment opportunities. There are blacks employed as sales managers, accountants... and a great many other positions. It is also our clearly stated policy that equal wage rates apply to all employees, irrespective of race, on a rate-for-the-job basis."

Thirteen corporations said they adhere to the "Sullivan Principles" of equal employment, which involve nonsegregation, equal pay for equal work, training programs, increasing black involvement in management positions and improving the quality of employees' lives outside the work environment.

The Sullivan Principles have been attacked by some state legislators as "impossible to implement" under current South African law, which prohibits Africans the right to organize trade unions, strike and engage in collective bargaining.

"All of this, the corporations responses and the public response, poses a dilemma to the board," said MSU President Edgar L. Harden.

"The board is going to have to consider, before the next meeting, what their actions have precipitated."

Trustee Aubrey Radcliffe, R East Lansing, said he was not surprised by the negative corporation reaction.

"We passed the resolution and we should be committed to the resolution," Radcliffe said. "I'm pretty sure the board will stand by their decision."

STUDENTS

Are your summer savings dwindling fast?
Have you spent your entire $ allotment for the term just in the past 6 weeks?
Do you find yourself searching for change in the pockets of last year's winter coat?
Don't worry. We can help you out.

We need CLERK TYPISTS, and SALES PERSONNEL to work temporary full time assignments in Lansing, East Lansing, Okemos and other surrounding communities.
$3.00 - $4.50/hour.

If you attend classes at night, are just going to school part-time, or do not attend at all, these assignments will provide the perfect opportunity for you to earn those much-needed dollars. Salaries are commensurate with skills and/or experience and several positions require little or no training at all.

Check us out. YOU'll never regret it.

Navy project in U.P. to be decided soon

By THE STATE NEWS and United Press International

President Carter is expected to decide by the end of the year whether Michigan's Upper Peninsula will be the site of the U.S. Navy's ELF submarine communication system.

Local opposition to the project "is still very strong," because of possible environmental hazards said Peter Dougherty, of the East Lansing Abrahamamic Community. ELF, a smaller version of Seafarer, and Sanguine, would consist of 130 miles of two-inch cables buried three to six feet deep in the Upper Peninsula. The cables would be connected to existing cables in Wisconsin.

The Navy has said it needs ELF extremely low frequency because the electromagnetic waves from about 20 existing transmitters can't penetrate the ocean depth more than 20 to 30 feet.

Missile submarines require constant shore contact and risk detection if they stay that close to the ocean surface, the Navy has said.

Recently released results of Navy testing on the environmental effects of ELF show increased growth rates in rhesus monkeys, said Eunice Carlson, a biologist and spokesperson for People Opposed Sanguine Salar. The $921,000 study was completed in November 1977 but the results were just recently released, she said.

The study showed rhesus monkeys exposed to ELF radiation gained weight at a faster rate than unexposed monkeys, Carlson said.

"This finding is particularly significant because of the long list of experiments which point to ELF related growth abnormalities," Carlson said. "They include increased or decreased growth rate in plants, soil microorganisms, bird embryonic tissue rates, and now monkeys."

Both Dougherty and area ELF opponent Elaine Meyers said they suspect more environmental studies will have to be done before the government can justify putting the system in Michigan.

Great Lakes Life, the group which sponsored a walk across the Upper Peninsula this summer to protest ELF, will meet soon to consider future anti-ELF action, Dougherty said.

In addition to environmental concerns about ELF, critics of the project have called it inefficient and unnecessary and immoral because the system adds to the nation's "first strike" capability.

The system could send and receive messages and play a part in a nuclear attack, critics said.

State News Ira Strickstein

Looking rather out of place among the insipid clothing of commoners, two residents of Shaw's Terrace West dine in elegance. Note the pin-stripes on right. Very in, said the fashion world.

Terrace West dispels image 'of being animals'

Two weeks ago, residents from Shaw Hall's Terrace West floor showed up at Yakely Hall's cafeteria in Viking regalia. They sounded a horn and proceeded to gobble that night's casseroles with their hands.

That feat might seem disgusting to any "dignified" person, even those anonymous students who write on bathroom walls and bellow sex counseling outside residence hall windows. Nevertheless, that Nordic folly was not enough for the men of Terrace West. They decided to set the record straight.

"The guys on our floor have a reputation of being animals," said Mike Reity, a member of Terrace West. "We wanted to lay that image to rest."

So about 25 of the floor members, sporting three-piece suits, tailored raincoats and a wide variety of non-matching ties, came back to the cafeteria Tuesday to dispell any doubts that Yakely women had regarding their cloth.

And hey, the women were not disappointed.

The residents from Shaw Hall, calling themselves "gentlemen," went all the way, displaying every bit of elegance one would expect from New York's trend-setting 400. They even used their forks.

Most of the women were caught off guard. They had expected a typical night in the diner and wore such attire as sweaters, painter pants and the ever-popular blue denim.

But the men took it in stride, displaying a manner which was most impressive to those around them. Upon exiting the second-rate bistro, they gracefully acknowledged a moderate applause. Someone even threw a lima bean.

Mike Dennis, Terrace West resident assistant, said the idea started when the floor sent a letter of apology to Yakely Hall.

Reity cited other reasons for dining at Yakely. "We don't get hamburgers like this," he said, rapping the entre on the table.

Honors standards higher now

Students who have visions of graduating with honors may be in for a surprise if they neglected to keep in touch with the gradually-changing grade point average standards.

In January 1976, Academic Council approved an adjustment to increase the grade point average used to award honor and high honor designations to MSU graduating seniors.

The designations were established to recognize the top 20 percent of the graduating class.

The first step of a three year program was implemented for the 1978 graduating class.

Students who graduated last spring and summer terms as well as those graduating this fall and winter require a 3.2 GPA to receive honors and 3.5 for high honors.

Since the new standards have been imposed, the percentage of students graduating with honors and high honors fell from 47.4 to 38.7 percent.

The second step of the process will be put into effect spring term and last until winter term, 1980. This step will require GPAs of 3.3

for honors and 3.6 for high honors.

Beginning spring term, 1980, students will need a 3.4 to receive honors and 3.7 to receive high honors.

These requirements appear in the schedule book but many students do not read the information and do not know about the higher standards, Dorothy Arata, assistant provost, said.

The proportions of graduates receiving honors rose to a peak of 52 percent for the graduating class of spring 1974. Academic council pointed out that from 1960 to 1965 students graduating with honors and high honors represented the top 20 percent of their class.

New guidelines were implemented in an effort to return recognition of the accomplishments to the top 20 percent of the class.

The program is being phased in during a three-year period to be fair to students, Arata explained.

"The council felt it unfair to jump to the desired standards in a year to two," she added.

#1 PLAIN TALK FROM ARMCO ON FINDING A JOB:

How hiring you can cost somebody $45,300

93,000,000 Americans now hold jobs. But that won't mean much when you look for a job yourself. You'll have tough competition. You're among 1,000,000 more Americans looking for work over the next ten years. That's how many new jobs America must create, including yours.

It's going to cost a lot of money. Before you get a dime of salary, whoever hires you will have to buy tools, office space, factory equipment and buildings - the things it takes to let you do your job. The average cost to companies is now $45,300 for each job.

We don't mean you can't be hired until your employer finds exactly $45,300. You might walk into an existing job. But don't count on it. Not with 1,000,000 competitors. Some companies can hire you for less than $45,300. But others - heavy industry, for instance - need much more. At Armco, our cost is now $57,520 a job.

That money must come from whatever a company has left over after expenses. In other words, from profits. A company might borrow against future profits to make you a job. But still, profits pay for jobs because that's the only source companies have.

If you asked your friends how much the average U.S. company clears in profits on each dollar of sales, chances are many of them would guess 2% or more. The truth is... or less. That's not much to put to work to make new jobs.

Plain talk about PROFITS

Over our company's 75-year history, Armco has averaged 8% profit on each dollar of sales. We pay out part of our earnings immediately in dividends to Armco's 100,000 shareholders. So out of each nickel, we have perhaps 3¢ left to invest in new jobs.

Building $57,520 jobs - 3¢ at a time - is tough. At this rate, we must sell another $1,918,000 worth of products and services to clear enough money for a single new job. That's why better profits are important. They make more jobs. Even Government jobs. The Government's money comes from taxes on all of us who work.

Next time some know-it-all sneers at business, ask him what he'd do without it. He's sneering at his own job chances, and yours.

Let us hear YOUR plain talk about jobs! We'll send you a free booklet if you do Does our message make sense to you? We'd like to know what you think. Your personal experiences. Facts to prove or disprove our point. Drop us a line. We'd like your plain talk. For telling us your thoughts, we'll send you more information on issues affecting jobs. Plus Armco's famous handbook, How to Get a Job. It answers 30 key questions you'll need to know. Use it to set yourself apart, above the crowd. Write Armco, Educational Relations Dept. U-1, General Offices, Middletown, Ohio 45043. Be sure to include a stamped, self-addressed business-size envelope.
