Carter lists reasons for signing tax bill

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — President Carter, explaining publicly for the first time why he signed the $18.7 billion tax cut bill, said Thursday he wanted to make sure Americans "will not be saddled" with huge tax increases at the beginning of next year.

"We did the best we could in the last few days, the last few hours" of the 95th Congress, the president said at a nationally broadcast news conference here. Carter signed the bill Monday night.

On another matter, Carter said any peace agreement between Egypt and Israel should be linked to overall negotiations for a Middle East peace, particularly the status of Palestinians on the West Bank of the Jordan River.

And he said that although the Democrats lost some key races in Tuesday's elections, he believes the party did fairly well "on a nationwide basis."

Later, in a speech before the Future Farmers of America, Carter avoided any mention of administration farm policy. Instead, he lectured the young people on their role as future leaders and told them that "fear of failure is one of the greatest obstacles to progress."

At his news conference, the president was asked why he signed the tax bill, which did not include many of the "reforms" the administration had sought earlier.

"In balance, it was acceptable, it was necessary," Carter said of the measure, which differed substantially from that initially proposed by the administration.

The president said the measure would actually save $13 billion in increased taxes that would have been imposed with expiration of previously enacted tax-cut legislation.

Carter said he wanted to make sure that "people will not be saddled with $20 billion to $30 billion in increased taxes at the beginning of next year."

Speaking to reporters in the heart of the nation's farm belt, Carter also said he had no intention at present of seeking a change in legislation that will raise Social Security taxes by more than $300 a person in some cases next year.

If the Social Security payroll taxes were reduced, some of the money for payments to retired persons would have to come from general Treasury revenues, Carter noted.

Carter was asked whether, despite his drive to cut federal spending, he would recommend increases in defense spending while cutting back on social programs in the fiscal 1980 budget now under preparation.

Without mentioning specific figures, the (continued on page 11)

Faculty group claims provost broke bylaws

By CATHERINE RAFTREY
State News Staff Writer

A faculty organization has charged that Provost Clarence L. Winder violated the Bylaws for Academic Governance when he made his decision to phase out Justin Morrill and University colleges.

MSU's chapter of the American Association of University Professors charged in its formal complaint to C. Patric "Lash" Larowe, faculty grievance official, that Winder disobeyed the bylaws by failing to consult proper personnel before making his decision.

The grievance filed by the association Thursday charged that Winder was in violation of three sections in the academic bylaws.

The first section pointed to by AAUP states, "Academic Council shall participate in all major issues relating to educational policy."

The second section cited says, "The Committee on Academic Policy shall consult with the Provost on the establishment, disbandment or merger of undergraduate programs."

The third section states, "The Committee on Academic Policy shall advise and consult with the Provost on all matters of academic policy."

The MSU chapter of the AAUP has requested that the provost be temporarily barred from taking any further action concerning Justin Morrill and University colleges.

Members ask that no plan for the modification or discontinuation of these or other units be presented to the MSU Board of Trustees until the appropriate faculty organizations have been consulted.

Frank J. Blatt, president of the MSU chapter of AAUP, said the immediate goal of the grievance was to delay submission of the plan to the Board of Trustees so the academic governance structure could be implemented.

The trustees are currently expected to vote on the re-organization proposals at their Dec. 8 meeting.

Blatt said he wholeheartedly supports a petition now being circulated by members of MSU Faculty Associates which is also aimed at postponing action on the proposals. However, he said he believes the grievance may be more effective.

Blatt said that the provost is not obligated to follow the recommendations of Academic Council, but is required to listen to their suggestions. Blatt said all he was trying to do was to re-establish a sense of faith into the academic governance system.

The University Committee on Academic Policy is also questioning whether Winder (continued on page 11)

PBB ISSUE NOT MAJOR DRAWBACK

Voters say Milliken not so bad

By ANNE MARIE BIONDO
State News Staff Writer

Michigan voters apparently decided Tuesday Gov. William G. Milliken hasn't done such a bad job after all.

During the governor's last term, the state suffered from a PBB poisoning that seeped into dairy and beef products. Critics have accused the Milliken administration of covering up the disastrous effects of the PBB poisoning.

And less than a year ago it was discovered that patients were being grossly neglected and abused in several state mental health institutions.

All this and more highlighted a very offensive campaign by state Sen. William B.

Fitzgerald who wanted to unseat Milliken — but it didn't work.

Fitzgerald's last minute push by President Carter, Vice-President Walter Mondale and U.S. Sen. Edward Kennedy didn't work either.

In fact, for the first time in some 30 years a Republican carried the predominantly Democratic Wayne County in a gubernatorial election. Wayne County contains Detroit, which is Fitzgerald's home town.

"This is tremendous," Milliken told the State News Thursday.

Milliken also did better in many of the Upper Peninsula counties than he did in the 1974 race, he said.

"But I understand I didn't do well in Oscoda," Milliken said. "And I understand I didn't do well in Kalkaska either."

Certainly, because Mio, the PBB-contaminated cattle burial site, is in Oscoda County didn't help him. And about four years ago PBB was accidentally dumped into cattle feed in Kalkaska.

Fitzgerald received more votes than Milliken in 22 of the state's 83 counties.

Seven of those are adjacent to Oscoda and Kalkaska.

"It's symptomatic of PBB and the emotional effect on people," said Milliken's press aide Bob Berg.

Another possible reason why Milliken lost in these outstate counties is because people are shifting, Berg added.

"These areas have been traditionally Republican," Berg said. "But a number of UAW and auto retirees from Detroit are moving to northeast Michigan. It's getting more Democratic than before, and at the same time more Republicans are moving to Detroit."

Fitzgerald said he will spend the next few years practicing law in his Detroit law firm, O'Rourke, Fitzgerald, Cazul and Rutledge.

Troop offer called 'lie'

President says of Ugandan leader Amin 'carefully prepared for invasion'

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (AP)—President Julius Nyerere said Thursday that Ugandan President Idi Amin's recent offer to withdraw his invading "suicide squad" troops from Tanzania was a "lie."

Nyerere said the offer was aimed at making the Ugandan leader look like a lover of peace and Nyerere look like a lover of war.

Ugandan troops invaded northwestern Tanzania earlier this month and annexed 710 square miles of territory. Sketchy reports of the fighting between forces of the two black-ruled east African neighbors have come from official Ugandan and Tanzanian sources and there has been no independent confirmation.

Nyerere made the accusation against Amin after summoning all African ambassadors accredited to Tanzania to his ocean-side statehouse. He told them Amin had "carefully prepared for the invasion" of Tanzania by using Western news media.

"Western media had given his big lies about aggression from Tanzania a lot of publicity," Nyerere said.

Nyerere predicted Amin now would start what the Tanzanian leader called another series of carefully orchestrated lies.

"He has started by saying 'I am willing to pull out.' He might even say 'I have pulled out.' He is capable of saying anything. From now on that is going to be his lie."

Nyerere also attacked unnamed African heads of state for sending "incredible messages" asking for an immediate ceasefire and negotiations.

"I would expect a clear-cut message directed at Amin saying 'Get out of Tanzania.' I don't expect the same message as was sent to Amin to be sent to me. I expect brotherly African countries to say to me 'kick him hard if he does not get out of your country.'"

Lansing resident found at 'U' with stab wound

A Lansing man was found in shock on the main floor of the Union Wednesday afternoon with a stab wound in his leg.

Brian D. Jones, 20, of 1305 Theodore St., was treated for a wound in his left calf in the Union by Dr. Robert Fox, of Lincoln, Neb. before being transferred to Olin Health Center at 5:11 p.m.

He was then taken to Edward G. Sparrow Hospital in Lansing because doctors at the medical center could not treat the wound, campus police said. The knife reportedly punctured an artery deep in Jones' leg.

Jones ended up at the Union after getting confused when he drove from Knapp's Warehouse, 500 E. South St., where he was allegedly stabbed by his girlfriend. Police said Jones was in shock, from the great pain of the injury and stopped his car outside the Union to look for help. He collapsed on the floor.

Lansing police said the assault happened when Jones was picking up his girlfriend at Knapp's Warehouse. An argument began in the parking lot and the woman pulled a knife from her pocket and stabbed him just below the left knee, police said.

Levin's win over Griffin latest in series of victories

By KIM GAZELLA
State News Staff Writer

Carl Levin is an attorney who ran for Detroit City Council in 1970 and won. He ran for its presidency in 1973 and won that, too.

And in 1978, Carl Levin ran for the U.S. Senate and beat a man who hadn't lost an election in 22 years.

U.S. Sen. Robert P. Griffin served 10 years as a U.S. Representative and 12 years as a Senator. He was appointed to the Senate to fill a vacancy left by the death of Sen. Patrick V. McNamara in 1966.

Six months later he won his first six-year term by defeating former Gov. G. Mennen Williams by nearly 300,000 votes — the largest plurality given a Michigan Republican senatorial candidate in 20 years.

And in 1969, Griffin was elected minority whip of the Senate, a position he held until January 1977.

Then he lost his bid for the Senate post of minority leader to Sen. Howard Baker of Tennessee by one vote.

In April 1977, Griffin announced he would not seek re-election to a fourth term in the Senate because "a lot of the challenge is gone."

"In some ways it may be better for the state as well as me to have someone fresh come in with that eagerness you have when you first start out," he said then.

That statement came back to haunt him after GOP leaders convinced him to change his mind shortly before he announced his intention to run again nine months later. Levin drove that point home time after time in his campaign.

Griffin also missed 216 roll call votes last year, another major target for his opponent.

"That is the worst Senate voting record of anyone who didn't die in office last year," Levin said.

Levin said a number of factors contributed to his win, including Griffin's reversed decision on whether to run for re-election. But he said there is really no way of knowing all of the reasons for his victory.

Griffin beat one candidate in the primary. His press secretary contends he needed more time before the general election.

"If we had had two more days," Bill Matney said, "we could have won."

He said the senator had "very little time available" to campaign after Congress convened in mid-October.

He referred to the polls released throughout the campaign by the Detroit News, which showed the gap narrowing to just a few percentage points between the two candidates the day before the election.

Levin said time was not a factor, since he had been "continually climbing in the polls" since early in October.

Both candidates brought in some big party boosters to help them campaign. Griffin received hearty endorsements from former President Gerald R. Ford while both Vice-President Walter Mondale and President Carter stopped in Michigan to gather support for the Democratic party.

Campaign spending apparently didn't affect the results since Griffin broke a state record for campaign expenditures with nearly $2 million. Levin spent close to half that amount, or $900,000.

Griffin beat Levin in over half of the state's counties, taking 46 of the total 83 counties. Levin's strong point was his own home territory of Detroit and its surrounding areas. He beat Griffin in Wayne County by nearly 190,000 votes.

Griffin's strongest lead came in Ottawa County, where he led by 18,000 votes. He led in both Berrien and Kent counties by 14,000 votes.

He was also substantially ahead in his own home county of Grand Traverse by 4,000 votes.

U.S. Senator-elect Carl Levin and his wife Barbara greeted people before his acceptance speech in the Radisson-Cadillac Hotel Tuesday night.

Chancellor acknowledges Holocaust guilt

COLOGNE, West Germany (AP) — Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, wearing a black skullcap, acknowledged a German "heritage of the guilty" on the 40th anniversary Thursday of the start of the Jewish Holocaust. As the chancellor spoke, police said anti-Semitic slogans were smeared on walls in two northern German towns.

Schmidt promised to listen to Jewish views in the debate over expiration of West Germany's statute of limitations for Nazi murders.

The deadline on initiating murder charges for war crimes expires Dec. 31, 1979, and that date is now the focus of a controversy over whether to lift the statute and permit trials to continue indefinitely.

We politicians and lawmakers will listen to what our Jewish citizens, our friends in Israel and what our neighbors in Europe will say," Schmidt said in a speech at Cologne synagogue honoring victims of the Nov. 9, 1938 pogrom against German Jews.

Endangered species illegally exported

MORGES, Switzerland (AP) — Hundreds of thousands of animals belonging to endangered species are being illegally exported to Europe and the United States for pets, a worldwide conservation group charged in a report published Thursday.

Gibbons, snakes, birds and baby chimpanzees are among the animals illegally leaving developing countries en route for the West. The International Union for Conservation of Nature and Natural Resources said in its monthly bulletin.

Exporting countries, the report said include Thailand, Panama and the African nation of Sierra Leone. Among leading importers are the United States and Belgium. The report described Belgium as Europe's main center of illicit wildlife traffic.

Much of the illegal traffic into Brussels comes from Bangkok while "huge numbers of baby chimpanzees have been exported from Sierra Leone to the United States which has signed the convention."

This traffic, the report says, has so depleted the country's own chimpanzee population that the animals are now being stolen from neighboring countries where such exports have long been forbidden under national law.

China to build hotels in major cities

HONG KONG (UPI) — Pan American World Airways and China have signed a $500 million agreement to build several 1,000-room hotels in the Communist nation's major cities, a company official said Thursday.

Reynolds Burgund, vice President of Intercontinental Hotels Corp., a Pan Am subsidiary, said survey teams will leave for Peking, Shanghai, Canton and other cities in the next few weeks to check on building sites.

The project, scheduled for completion in late 1981, is aimed at trying to cope with the increasing influx of foreign tourists to China, who numbered 100,000 this year, including 20,000 Americans.

Burgund said he has just returned from a grueling week of talks in Peking with China International Travel Service director Yuan Chao-chun and officials of the General Administration for Travel and Tourism.

LAW ENDS UP WEAKENED VERSION

Energy plan signed by Carter

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, expressing "great personal satisfaction," signed a weakened version of his energy plan into law Thursday after an 18-month political struggle with Congress.

"We have acquitted ourselves well as a nation," Carter declared at a White House signing ceremony.

In the East Room, crowded with lawmakers and other dignitaries, Carter said publicly what administration officials have been saying privately since the 95th Congress passed the compromise plan on Oct. 15. The plan is bound to change.

"As problems evolve we will ask Congress to modify the bill," the president said.

"Today we can rightfully claim that we have a conscious national policy for dealing with energy problems," Carter said.

He said the energy plan will enable the United States to save 2.5 million barrels of oil per day by 1985. "This is not as great as the original goal, but it is a substantial basis on which to predicate future achievements," he added.

Later, at a news conference in Kansas City, Mo., where he went to address a Future Farmers of America convention, Carter said the new law is only 65 percent of what he wanted since his plan would have saved an estimated 4.5 million barrels of oil a day by 1985.

"But I have not given up on my original proposal that there should be a constraint on the excessive consumption of oil and the excessive importation of oil," he said. "How we go about that I don't know yet."

He said passage of the plan was "one of the most difficult legislative tasks that Congress has ever undertaken — possibly in the history of the country."

The plan is much weaker than the proposal Carter submitted to Congress in what he called the "moral equivalent of war." But he said it encompasses his three main principles: efficient use of energy; incentives to spur production of available energy supplies; and a shift to more abundant supplies of energy, such as coal and solar energy.

While the bill provides tax credits to consumers for various energy conservation steps, it also is expected to increase costs for natural gas users. There is disagreement on how much.

Carter said it will "guarantee consumers increased supplies with more predictable and moderate price increases."

Opponents of deregulating natural gas prices have claimed it will transfer $200 billion from consumers to producers over the next seven years. They say that could mean increases averaging $100 to $200 a year for typical families who heat with natural gas.

Iran parliament official accused

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi's anti-corruption drive, aimed at calming the unrest that has shaken his rule, reached into the halls of the Iranian Parliament on Thursday. A deputy was accused of profiteering by cornering Iran's glass market.

A key opposition leader, meanwhile, was reported headed back to Iran, but there appeared little likelihood of face-to-face talks with the Shah to negotiate an end to the country's political crisis.

An uneasy peace prevailed in this capital city, center of violent anti-shah protests last weekend that led to the fall of Iran's civilian administration and the shah's appointment of a military-led government. Troops backed by armored vehicles and machine gun-mounted trucks guarded government buildings and patrolled key locations throughout the city.

Dozens of political figures, including a former prime minister, have been arrested so far in the anti-corruption campaign. On Thursday, the round-up reached into the lower house of the Iranian Parliament, which lifted the immunity of Deputy Mansur Yasini so he could be prosecuted for alleged industrial profiteering.

A report by a parliamentary investigation committee charged that Yasini, who owns all three of Iran's glass factories, had caused a seven-fold increase in glass prices to $1.35 per square foot.

The committee said the politician-industrialist had set up a subsidiary corporation so he could control both production and distribution and arbitrarily jack up prices.

Former Prime Minister Amir Abbas Hoveyda, arrested Wednesday, had been one of the shah's closest confidants. Military police did not say why Hoveyda was arrested, but reliable sources said he was accused of misuse of power during his term as government head, 1964-77.

After naming the military government, the shah announced he would vigorously prosecute corruption in Iran, one of the demands made by the opposition during months of bloody anti-government rioting.

Carter urges Israel to accept compromise

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter on Thursday urged Israel to accept a previously negotiated compromise on linking peace in the Sinai to peace in the Middle East generally.

The linkage issue has been the major obstacle in the Mideast peace talks, which continued Thursday in Washington with a meeting between Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and Egyptian negotiators.

Egypt wants a strong clause in the treaty, making it plain that the price Israel must pay for peace with Egypt includes following through with the Camp David Summit commitment to establish an autonomous Palestinian entity on the West Bank and in the Gaza Strip. Israel has balked, maintaining that the two issues are legally separate.

After the meeting with Vance, Egyptian sources said their government would like a stronger link in the treaty, but could accept the language suggested by Carter. Israeli sources said their government still was insisting on weaker language.

The two sides reached a tentative compromise in a draft written last month, but the governments in Cairo and Jerusalem refused to accept it. The Israeli Cabinet this week instructed its negotiators to stand fast on the issue, persisting in the desire to weaken the link.

FBI captures fugitive pornographer

ATLANTA (AP) — Fugitive pornographer Mike Thevis, one of the FBI's most wanted men, has been captured, the FBI said Thursday.

Thevis was captured in the northeast region of the United States, spokesman Bill McGrath said.

Thevis, 46, escaped in April about two months before he was indicted by a federal grand jury in Atlanta on charges of arson, murder and extortion in the building of his X-rated bookstore and peep-show empire.

He slipped out an unlocked side door of a county jail in New Albany, Ind., where he was in custody while testifying in a civil suit in Louisville, Ky.

He was serving eight and one-half years on federal convictions for arson conspiracy and interstate transportation of obscene materials.

Lottery may decide remaining House seat

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Control of Pennsylvania's 203-member House of Representatives may be decided by a lottery after Democrats and Republicans each won 101 seats and the remaining race ended with each candidate getting 8,551 votes.

"It seemed almost impossible to happen," said Donald Moul, the Republican challenger in the disputed race in a largely rural area of south-central Pennsylvania. "It makes me feel very humble."

If a recount still shows a tie, Moul and incumbent Kenneth Cole will pull a number out of a bag, with the winner being the man who picks the lowest number.

"It's the only remedy in the Election Code," said Louis Mete, director of the state election bureau.

But other political observers figure that the eventual outcome will be a court challenge, which conceivably could drag on for months or even years.

In fact, a state Senate seat remained vacant for two years last decade because the vote was challenged in court.

Smoke-out day next Thursday

By KAREN SHERIDAN
State News Staff Writer

The American Cancer Society has designated Thursday as its "Second Annual Smokeout" to urge smokers to stop for one day and quit for good if they're happy with the results.

To celebrate and publicize the event, the MSU card block will perform special stunts Saturday when the MSU Spartans meet the University of Minnesota Gophers at Spartan Stadium.

Susan Phillips, of the society's Michigan chapter said the "smokeout" began in California and Minnesota several years ago and went nationwide in 1977.

Survey results showed eight out of 10 smokers across the country were aware of last year's event, and 30 percent of those aware stopped or reduced smoking for the day, she said.

"That was a pretty high success rate for the first year," Phillips said. "If smokers realize they can quit for one day, they can go on for a second or a third and eventually stop."

The poll also showed smokers were well-versed in the dangers of smoking, that many had tried to quit at one time, and most would like to quit permanently.

According to American Cancer Society statistics, lung cancer is the leading cancer killer among men, and death rates for women from the disease have doubled during the past 10 years.

Those who smoke have an increased probability of developing mouth, bladder, pancreas, kidney and esophageal cancers, the society claims, as well as strokes, heart disease, emphysema and bronchitis.

Phillips said local cancer society chapters are organizing promotional events for the day in most major cities.

Ed Asner, star of the CBS television series "Lou Grant," is 1978 "Smokeout" chairperson. A smoker, Asner has vowed to stay away from cigarettes on Smokeout Day. He and other celebrities and athletes across the country will ask all cigarette smokers to join them in signing "I Quit" pledge cards.

Many areas will hold "burn-outs," where smokers can toss their cigarettes into gigantic bon-fires, and the Detroit Chapter has scheduled promotional entertainment to be held downtown, Phillips said.

In addition to the show by the MSU card block, other campus events have been organized by Kirk Banerian, MSU student coordinator for the smokeout.

Banerian and several others will hand out booklets and have posters and information available outside the Holden Hall cafeteria during dinner Thursday.

"We want to make people aware of the Cancer Society and our goals," Banerian said. "The campaign is being stressed on campus more this year because of the large number of student smokers."

ADDS FIVE SEATS TO BOARD

GOP voter appeal works

By SHEILA BEACHUM
State News Staff Writer

Voter appeal seems to be working for Republicans after they picked up five seats on the Ingham County Board of Commissioners in Tuesday's election.

However, Democrats still have the edge on the 21 member commission with 12 of their own safely seated on the board.

Republican Donald P. Bunka easily defeated Democratic contender Dotty Juengst in the 6th District commissioners race.

Of the 5,012 votes cast in the 6th District, Bunka received 3,162 while Juengst tallied 1,850 votes.

While Bunka garnered the most votes in all nine precincts in the 6th District, he did the best overall in the residential precincts. The upset for the Democrats came in the 7th District where Democratic incumbent Sherry Finkbeiner was ousted by Republican challenger Gary Anderson.

Anderson won by a narrow margin, chalking up 3,477 votes compared to Finkbeiner's 3,232.

Anderson said the key precinct in his race was the mixed residential and student 27th.

Heavy canvassing and campaign literature distribution was an important element in his successful bid to office, Anderson said.

It was fairly evident from the time the first election returns straggled in Tuesday that 8th District Democratic incumbent Mark Grebner would be around for a second term.

Grebner received 3,263 votes compared to 1,802 votes cast for his Republican challenger in the race, Larry Gordon.

Voters in all of the 11 student and mixed precincts in the 8th District gave Grebner a wide margin of support over his Democratic challenger.

Grebner did his best in the 33rd Precinct where he received 449 votes to Gordon's 155.

Republican Thomas Brennan, Jr., won handily in the 9th District commissioners race where he was matched against Democrat Gina Torielli.

Brennan polled 1,972 votes compared to the 1,359 votes tallied by Torielli.

Of the five precincts in that district, Brennan carried three residential and one student precinct while Torielli captured the 22nd mixed home-owners and student precinct.

Brennan attributed his win to concerted attempts to knock on every door in the 9th District, plus the fact that two of the strongest Republican precincts in Ingham county are in the 9th District.

The 10th District Democratic incumbent Jess Sobel won reelection to a second term with 2,429 votes, compared to Republican Fred Girard's 1,398 votes.

Of the eight precincts in the 10th District, half are student and the other half are mixed.

Sobel carried a comfortable margin of votes over Girard in all eight precincts.

One election still unsettled on Ed board

Michigan residents have yet to learn the final outcome in the see-sawing race for the two open seats on the State Board of Education.

While Thursday's near-final unofficial results declared incumbent Democrat Annetta Miller a clear winner, the race between incumbent Democrat Barbara Dumouchelle and Republican Malcolm G. Dade was still too close to call, although Dumouchelle was ahead by a slight margin.

Regardless of the final outcome it seemed certain that Silverenia Kanoyton trailed behind the other candidates.

Government offices close for holiday

Most governmental offices will be closed today in honor of Saturday's Veterans Day holiday.

Since these offices are normally closed on Saturday, most government employees will observe the holiday a day earlier.

East Lansing City Hall, 410 Abbott Road, will also be closed today, while the city's District Court 54-B will remain open.

All Ingham County libraries will also be closed, reopening for regular hours Saturday.

Postal Service employees and bank employees will observe the traditional date and celebrate Veterans Day Saturday.

There will be no regular mail delivery or services Saturday.

Special delivery and lockbox service will, however, be available.

Stamps, postal cards, parcel post, and scales and rate charts will be obtainable at 24-hour Self-Service Postal Centers.

The center on campus is located at the corner of Shaw and Farm Lane. Normal service will resume on Monday.

Saturday is also a holiday for banks. Campus offices and libraries will follow regular schedules today and Saturday.

The sounds and odors of a goat disrupted activities briefly early Sunday morning on the fifth floor of North Wonders Hall.

A Wonders Hall resident complained to the Department of Public Safety, who responded to the hall to pick up the animal.

Police found the kid wandering aimlessly on the floor, picked it up and transported the small animal in the back seat of the patrol car to the Veterinary Clinic. The animal was kept inside the building in a pen used for stray dogs and cats.

DPS then attempted to return the animal to the Endocrine Research Unit on College Road, where it was believed to be stolen from, but researchers there would not accept it.

"They tried to peddle it off on us but we don't use goats here," Dr. Dail D. Riegler, professor of animal husbandry, said.

Sgt. Jay Jensen said Thursday the goat had been taken to the MSU barns. Its fate is still uncertain.

While walking northeast of Munn Ice Arena Saturday shortly before sunset, a Wonders Hall woman witnessed an incident exposure.

A man was covering his face with one hand while using the other to masturbate in the woodlot adjacent to this arena, the woman told campus police.

The only description given of the man fit almost every 22-year-old, white male on campus, they said.

Police are investigating.

Some amateur photographers will go to any extent to get that one picture worth treasuring.

Department of Public Safety officers apprehended three MSU men at 7 a.m., Nov. 3 for trespassing on the smoke stack at the Shaw Lane Power Plant.

Officers waited as the men climbed back down to the ground from the 250-foot smoke stack with photographic equipment.

They were later released and will not be prosecuted a police officer said.

Apparently the men used a rope to reach the catwalk between the plant and the smoke stack. From the catwalk they were able to scale the top of the stack on the ladder which runs along its side.

Minority job seminar

State News Staff Writer

Although there are more openings for minorities in journalism, they should not depend on their ethnicity to find a job, said three reporters at the "Minorities in Journalism" session sponsored by the School of Journalism.

The session was one of several seminars offered during the Careers in Journalism program held Thursday in the Union Building.

W. Kim Herron, Yolanda Alvarez and Jimmy Harris, reporters from the State Journal, gave tips to a small audience about beginning a career with a major newspaper.

"You have to come into a newspaper with the expectation that the paper is giving you the opportunity to publish, to generate ideas," Herron said.

Herron, an MSU graduate, said he found his job by being in the "right place at the right time."

He was freelancing for the Journal when an intern position became available.

"They gave the position to me and then a reporter went on vacation and I had to cover his beat," he said.

He also told the audience everyone has to be adaptable.

"Interns were usually thrust into an assignment when someone was unable to cover it so you have to be ready for anything," he said.

Harris, a native of Virginia, said he was originally unfamiliar with Meridian town ship and was suddenly given the assignment to cover the township's meetings.

"You have to be able to adjust," he said. "I was insecure, but the insecure feelings will make the reporter work harder if they want to keep their job."

Alvarez, who did not attend a journalism school, said she did volunteer work putting together newsletters. As a part time reporter for the Journal, she threatened to resign because her pay was too low. Instead of accepting her resignation, she was hired full time.

However, Alvarez does not recommend this route for everyone.

Alvarez, a Spanish American, said she was generally covering Spanish-related stories at first, but now she is a general assignment reporter.

Alvarez also admitted that previous complaints about the negative stories being done by the State Journal have resulted in more balanced coverage, she said.

They all stressed that though there are more openings for minorities, journalists should have a strong writing ability.

"Your ability as a writer is the most important thing and that can only be proven by getting experience now," said George A. Hough III, professor of journalism and chairperson of the department.

Petitions passed for vote on tax hike

LANSING (UPI) — Two Republican state senators began circulating petitions Thursday to force a statewide vote on transportation tax hikes approved this fall by the legislature.

Sens. John Welborn of Kalamazoo and Harry DeMaso of Battle Creek — who say they have been dubbed Pothole Jack and Hate Highway Harry for that effort — told a news conference they hope to conclude the petition drive with about 250,000 signatures before Christmas.

That would give them a substantial cushion on the requirement of about 150,000 signatures of qualified electors to force a referendum on the $147 million transportation package.

The measure, approved by the narrowest possible margin in each house, raises the gasoline and diesel fuel tax by two cents and state license plate fees by about 30 percent to beef up the state's inflation-eroded transportation budget.

Although they were accompanied at the news conference by a horde of special interest representatives — including gasoline and diesel fuel retailers and jobbers and recreational vehicle sales persons — DeMaso and Welborn maintained the Legislature approved the tax hike in the face of overwhelming popular opposition.

The will of the people was thwarted in the legislative process then, Welborn said. The people were completely forgotten.

DeMaso said persons in virtually every corner of the state have contacted his office to obtain petitions to circulate.

Welborn said the tax hikes would be held in abeyance from the date the petitions are certified until the 1980 general election — when the fate of the tax hikes will be decided by voters.

Both said they are not directly counseling citizens to hold off purchasing license plates until after the petitions are filed, but Welborn said he believes those who buy plates at the higher rate will not receive a rebate.

They also said they believe existing transportation revenues would be sufficient if state highway officials were more penny-pinching.

Meanwhile, State Highway Commission Chairperson Peter B. Fletcher — who would suffer a third straight personal defeat on major transportation policy questions if the petition drive is successful — resigned his post effective immediately.

Marijuana usage may also be on the rise

There was a two- or three-year decline out of marijuana and into alcohol," said Kevin Potter, a member of the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws. "I think there will be a dramatic increase in pot smoking."

Potter said pot will be an attractive alternative to alcohol.

"People will probably rediscover what it's like to be high again," Potter said.

Oberlin predicted that short-term effects will be limited to whether alcohol is available to persons under 21.

that quite a few young people will also be getting "a little tipsy" as a result of the passage of Proposal D.

Oberlin said the thrill of going out drinking will be heightened because it also will be illegal. Peer pressure and social acceptance will have a big effect, he said.

"One of the things they'll do is like what they did in Prohibition — drink more," Oberlin said. "And if it is effective in reducing the availability of alcohol, people will probably turn to marijuana."

"Marijuana use is on the increase anyway," Oberlin said, "but it will probably be higher than normal next year."

"When the drinking age was lowered, tion. "In effect, we are re-establishing what the law was before 1972," said Allen Rice, executive director of the Michigan Council of Alcohol Problems.

Proposal D is the public's reaction to two specific problems — alcoholism and alcohol related traffic accidents involving teenagers, Rice said.

"If the public supports it, it will be enforced," Rice said.

"People under 21 may even be obeying the new law."

But Oberlin and Lafkas doubted that enforcement would be easy or effective.

"Before the law was originally changed, kids had very little difficulty getting booze, because the state didn't live up to its responsibility in enforcement," Oberlin said.

"No one has the money or the interest in prosecuting those crimes," he said.

Lafkas feared that Proposal D could have an inverse effect, and force people under 21 to drink in cars rather than at a bar.

"It's not a question of what is legal," Oberlin said. "Prohibition doesn't work and there's no reason to believe that this will either. People who are disenfranchised and want to be irresponsible are the most likely to go out on a binge or look for a substitute."

City Council's insightful action warrants approval

The East Lansing City Council, in one of the most insightful responses to the new drinking age, directed the city attorney to draft, and examine the legality of, an ordinance decriminalizing alcohol for 18- to 21-year-olds.

The initiative of the council must be commended. Councilmember Alan Fox wasted no time in requesting the examination of a new ordinance. That such a move was made so early will relieve many people's concerns. It shows that some rational thoughts will come out of the ballot proposal that was fueled by emotional outbursts, twisted logic, and faulty statistics.

The ordinance, if adopted, would cover simple possession; it would not circumvent the application of the referendum as far as sales are concerned. Sales of alcohol, both in stores and bars, are under the jurisdiction of the Liquor Control Commission. The commission must wait for the Michigan Legislature to adopt rules and laws for the enforcement of the constitutional amendment, but there is no reason why the Legislature shouldn't also adopt similar lenient laws.

The Legislature has not hesitated to circumvent outside interference with their rule-making powers. When the federal government ordered a 55 mph speed limit for states receiving federal highway funds (which all states receive), the state responded by allowing for lax enforcement of the law. The State Police do not hold drivers to the 55 mph limit.

A similar show of leniency is needed with the alcohol law. The state is well within its powers to be lenient, especially with a law surrounded by so many doubts. We urge the state Legislature to adopt a state-wide decriminalization law for alcohol, and to recommend that police powers not be focused on this law.

MSU, being on state land, may not come under an East Lansing ordinance. This is the problem with the marijuana law — campus offenders are prosecuted under the more stringent state law.

MSU can do something, too, without waiting for the state to act. The administration and the Department of Public Safety, can adopt an easy attitude of enforcement. DPS should not adopt a get-tough attitude, as they have done with other areas of law enforcement, or disrespect for the law will skyrocket.

The administration can leave the law alone and let someone else do the worrying, rather than jump the gun and come down hard on an already disgruntled student population. On-campus residents are already mad enough that MSU has taken to enforcing the liquor laws so strictly. The administration's attitude of ignoring a law suits them fine with tripling — they should be able to leave the drinking part of the student's lifestyle alone.

We feel the proper solution to alcohol problems is education. We feel the proper solution to drunk driving is education and enforcement in that particular area. But the response shown to these problems, a constitutional amendment, is one giant step too far. Alcohol abuse is a problem that needs dealing with, but concentrating all efforts on simple alcohol use, a status offense, will only hide the problem. We urge all law-making bodies to recognize the folly of the new drinking age and use their discretionary powers to implement the rational solutions.

Students are citizens too

In the days following the election, specifically the defeat of the Dayton Hudson mall, the State News has been receiving calls and letters from homeowner-citizens of East Lansing attacking the paper's and students' influence in the final decision made Nov. 7.

Many of the callers and letter writers assert students have no "right" to vote on issues affecting East Lansing. The sum of their arguments is that as students we will not be here very long and do not have to suffer from our voting.

Their argument suffers from some serious misconceptions. Their first misconception is we "all" move on to other locations after graduation. Some students do remain and settle in this area after graduation and therefore maintain the same "rights" as other residents. But, following this illogical argument to a logical conclusion, would the voting ban also apply to homeowner-residents who may be transferred or planning a move out of the area during the four years following an election? We think not.

The second misconception presented by the anti-student residents is that students don't pay taxes. The sizable number of off-campus student residents certainly do contribute to taxes every time they cough up their month's rent. To our knowledge there exist few landlords who do not charge rent based upon the total cost of their investment, i.e. mortgage, property taxes, inflation, etc. Not to mention sales taxes, gas taxes and the other miscellaneous taxes and fees students pay for living here.

The many students who do contribute to the taxes as described are not usually sending children to schools, either. We do, however, patronize the businesses that many residents make their livings from.

The basic point, though, is that students are inherently a part of East Lansing whether residents like it or not. As a group, for now and the future, they have as much a "right" to decide on local issues as anyone.

Let's hear no more about the student's right to vote.

Jaws XVII, coming to a theater near you

Are you chagrined to find that most movies out today are just remakes of old movies or "spinoffs" of successful movies, such as "Jaws 2" or "The Bad News Bears Go to Japan"?

Well, unfortunately, this trend is going to continue as long as they are a financial success and the State News has learned that the following spinoff movies are already in production in Hollywood and will be released sometime around Christmas:

Jaws 17 — The great grandson of our favorite Great White shark comes to the rescue of the U.S. Navy by eating a Russian nuclear submarine that threatens to destroy Pismo Beach. Stars Roy Scheider as the Navy admiral and Richard Dreyfuss as the happy-go-lucky stowaway. Introducing "Charlie the Tuna" as the shark.

Star Whores — John Travolta as Luke Skywalker leads a galaxy of stars who disco past the nasty storm troopers, into our hearts, and through our wallets in this space spectacular. Also stars Olivia Newton-John as Princess Leia, Abe Vigoda as Darth Vader, and Grizzly Adams as Chewbacca the Wookiee. (All special effects are choreographed by Frank Zappa).

Close Encounters With the Third Grade — Roman Polanski produces, directs, and stars in this film made entirely on location near Times Square in New York. With Brooke Shields and Tatum O'Neil.

Slitthits Meets the Bad News Bears — Our favorite Little League team tangles with a scifi monster on their way to another victory. Kristy McNichols and Paul Williams star as lovable "second and short" combination and Don Rickles steals the show as manager. Also, Phyllis Diller in her first serious role plays Slitthits. (Production of this flick has been indefinitely suspended, however, because all of the bears are holding out for bigger contracts).

Exorcism of the Pink Panther — Peter Sellers and Linda Blair star in this wacky comedy about Inspector Clouseau being possessed by the devil until the priest (Don Knotts) comes to the rescue. Introducing MSU's own Scott Spiegel as Cato in a Sam Tami film.

Godzilla and the Bandit — Burt Reynolds and Sally Field star in this CB-Truckin' flick that takes the happy couple all across Japan with Godzilla in hot pursuit. The final roadblock scene is unbeatable as Reynolds leads our unsuspecting lizard into a surprise trap. Featuring Robert DeNiro as the Japanese Sheriff and Arnold Schwarzenegger as Godzilla. (Musical score by the Bee Gees).

American Gorefitti — Ronnie Howard and Vincent Price star in this macabre tale of a bunch of high school students who go out cruisin', run out of gas, and stop at the wrong house for help.

You Light Up My Wife — Pat and Debby Boone, Donnie and Marie Osmond, Steve Garvey, and Linda Lovelace star in this movie that is "fun for the whole family."

Magnum Force Guitar — Clint Eastwood returns as Dirty Harry and finally meets his match as Harry's six-shot .44 Magnum is no match for Ted Nugent's 12-string electrical guitar backed by six Fender Super Twin Reverb amps.

Airport '79 — Sid Vicious plays a demented Vietnam veteran who hijacks a 747 and threatens to crash it into a nursing home unless he is given controlling interest of the New York Yankees. The pilot (Charlton Heston) cleverly ditches the plane into Lake Michigan where it comes to rest on top of Beldar Conehead's star cruiser. Both the audience and passengers are given a brief thrill when "Jaws" the shark makes a cameo appearance.

The Spy With the Limp Pistol — Roger Moore plays 87-year-old James Bond who just isn't up for the part of a superstud in the British Secret Service. Needless to say, the climax scene is a big disappointment and the whole audience needs a cigarette right afterwards. With Farrah Fawcett-Majors and Jaclyn Smith.

VIEWPOINT: SOUTH AFRICA

Embrace 'model' republic to thwart Soviet satellite

By BRENT M. FOX

The Board of Trustees should rescind their earlier decision to divest University stocks in those companies operating in the Republic of South Africa. The campaign for divestiture is based upon the premise that such companies strengthen the South African government, and thereby contribute to the oppression of the South African peoples. The second part of this premise needs to be analyzed and freely debated.

Though falling far short of the standards of our liberal democracy, South Africa is nonetheless one of the most enlightened and progressive nations on the continent. The government of South Africa is based upon the Westminster parliamentary model, a legacy of British colonial administration. Admittedly, the right to hold public office and to vote is restricted to the white citizens of the republic, but where else in Africa is there a parliament elected by the people and representing a broad spectrum of political parties and ideas? Nearly all of the black-ruled African nations are military dictatorships, one-party socialist states, or absolute monarchies.

Furthermore, the South African people (including the non-whites) enjoy civil liberties which are found in few other African states. Freedom of worship is certainly one of the greatest of liberties. This freedom is granted to the people of South Africa, but not to the peoples of Uganda, Zaire, Mozambique, and Equatorial Guinea, to name just four of the most repressive totalitarian states in Africa. The right of due process of law, at least in part, is recognized in South Africa. Now the tragic deaths of Steven Biko and other black leaders show the darker side of South African life. But the South African government made a careful inquiry into the death of Biko, and the results of that inquiry were reported in the free portion of the world's press.

Meanwhile, the incredible carnage in certain African nations went largely unheeded. Where is the world's outrage over recent tribal massacres in Sudan and Burundi, over slave labor and crucifixion in Equatorial Guinea, over torture of political prisoners in Guinea, and over the feeding of Ugandan Christians to the Nile crocodiles? Why do the Western universities ignore (and even condone) such atrocities?

The reason for the double standard of morality is not elusive. The West has been caught up into the "cult of the Third World," as the eminent U.S. diplomat and senator, Daniel Moynihan, has called it. According to this creed, which has the unofficial support of the U.S. State Department, the Third World nations (especially the most repressive and anti-American regimes) can do nothing wrong, and any sins which they might have are the result of Western colonialization. Hence the brutalities of the black-ruled African states are rationalized out of existence.

Now South Africa makes no secret of its Western-oriented character, even though that character is deficient of some of the values of the free world. The Third World rightfully senses that South Africa is "out of place" on the African theater; a piece of the Western world is struggling to survive on an anti-Western continent. This struggle for survival is mirrored on the campuses of the Western countries, where any attack on the West is hailed as "national liberation" or "the people's war."

This struggle places South Africa on the international scene. South Africa is the only nation in Africa which regards itself as an ally of the West. Furthermore, the enormous mineral resources and the strategic geographic location of South Africa should compel the West to win the unshakable friendship of the South Africans. Should a Marxist regime take power in South Africa (and Marxism and "national liberation" are synonyms in the vocabulary of the pseudo-advocates of peace and freedom), the free world would suffer an incalculable loss.

The Soviet Union, through its minions in "liberated" Azania, would receive a cornucopia of such rare and important minerals as uranium (from South-West Africa), chromium, vanadium and gold. By exploiting these minerals, the Soviets could undermine the gold-based Western economies, and could surpass the military might of the Western nations, particularly regarding their nuclear capacities. Also, the Soviets would command the cape sea route, around which much of the petroleum from the Persian Gulf states to the United States and Western Europe passes. If, in addition, the Suez Canal were closed simultaneously, the petroleum lifeline of the West would be completely strangled. Therefore, it logically follows that a strong South Africa — diplomatically, politically, economically, and militarily — is vital for the survival of the free world.

The Board of Trustees should hear the "other side" of the argument over divestiture, for there are indeed two sides in every argument. It is incumbent upon the trustees (and all faculty members and students) as citizens of a free republic, to familiarize themselves with this momentous issue, and to take the actions dictated by their consciences.

SQRRR method of study can help students learn

By NANCY M. GILLARD

Students can learn to study effectively and manage anxiety, according to a presentation given Wednesday night in the North Upper Lounge of Wonders Hall.

Hal Bradsher, from the Wonders Hall Counseling Center, and Judy Tant, from the Counseling Center in the Student Services Building explained the "SQRRR" method, which, Bradsher said, "puts more emphasis on active involvement in study," and "helps you get more out of your textbooks."

"SQRRR" stands for "survey," "question," "read," "rite" and "review."

They also discussed relaxation behavioral techniques which help to manage anxiety about upcoming exams.

The five-step SQRRR method is based on the principle that studying is an academic skill which can be learned and brought to higher levels of proficiency, Bradsher said.

It also maintains that learning generally requires practice, he explained, and established studying behaviors must be replaced by those which are more efficient.

The main feature of the SQRRR method is that it stresses "active involvement in study," Bradsher said this method will require additional time at first, but "as you become proficient in practice, the amount of added time will decline."

The first step toward more effective study of textbook material is surveying the material in advance, to recognize the major points, Bradsher said. This step should give the student a general idea of the pattern of organization and key ideas or concepts, he said.

Secondly, Bradsher said students should ask themselves questions about the purpose of the particular studying material. This is done, not only to emphasize the major points, but also to establish relationships about the material.

The third step of the SQRRR method is taking effective notes while studying. Notes force you to condense the material which Bradsher said is an active process.

The student must also "use concise statements to organize and emphasize important concepts, relationships, or data." He also suggested students put their notes in their own words.

The fourth step, recitation, requires students to predict questions that the instructor will ask on the exam.

This prediction Bradsher said, will help students "get used to the kinds of questions the instructor asks" in an attempt to "fight the exam."

Finally, the student must review — organize and establish relationships about the material. In addition, periodic review, which Bradsher calls the "practice effect," is valuable and review before major tests is "crucial," he said.

Following Bradsher's presentation, Tant encouraged audience participation in a discussion on managing anxiety.

One student said she finds studying for an exam two nights in advance "quite helpful" because "I get too nervous the night before."

Tant said following the steps of the SQRRR method should also help reduce anxiety.

She also said, "The more you practice, the more you can effectively adapt yourself to new problems."

A student in the audience said reading too slowly was his major problem in studying.

Tant said this is "due to anxiety about not understanding the material. You need to increase your confidence," which will increase reading speed necessary for heavy loads.

Bradsher and Tant also suggested that students who suffer from extreme test anxiety should imagine the worst possible outcome to "put the exam itself in proper perspective."

Students get shuttle buses

The Residence Halls Association decided to underwrite a bus shuttle from Capitol City Airport to the different resident hall complexes the Sunday of Thanksgiving weekend, at the RHA meeting Wednesday night.

Buses will tentatively run every hour-and-a-half for nine hours and start at either noon or 1 p.m. The charge will be $1.

Frank Cox, RHA executive assistant, said it will cost $300 to charter the CATA buses.

"Off-campus people would have to get off on campus," Cox said.

In other business: The RHA Judiciary selected seven new RHAJ members and reappointed two present members. The representatives approved were sophomores Michael Stevenson, Elizabeth Coleman, James Bowser and Debrah Marshall; seniors Michael Turan, Arnold Vandereruyssen and Matthew McNulty.

Juniors Craig Lazar and Todd Moss were reappointed to the judiciary.

Applications for RHA treasurer are due Wednesday. The new treasurer will replace Scott Denison, who resigned last week.

Exile to speak on experiences

A Chilean exile, who has worked on housing and youth programs in the Santiago slums, will speak at 3 p.m. today in the Erickson Kiva.

Martin Garate, who is currently a staff member to the Quaker Mission to the United Nations, was exiled from Chile in 1974.

Since leaving Chile, Garate has been working to try and expose the U.S. role in Chile.

The lecture is being sponsored by the Peace Education Center, Non-Intervention in Chile and Lash Larrowe, professor of economics.

Iranian documentary film, lecture tonight

Bloody September, a 50 minute documentary film about the Moslem uprisings in Iran, will be shown tonight at 7 in 158 Natural Resources Bldg.

A lecture will also be given before the film on the present situation and Islamic movement in Iran.

The film's showing is being sponsored by the Organization of Iranian Moslem Students and the central point of the film will be the demonstrations and subsequent killing of some demonstrators in Tehran, Iran Sept. 8.

Bloody September was filmed at the scene of the demonstrations and later smuggled out of the country.

The film covers Moslem demonstrations on Sept. 4 and 7 and also scenes of the dead and wounded in Tehran's main public cemetery.

Iranian Moslems have demonstrated in the streets of Iran against the shah's regime and the U.S. support of his regime.

While demonstrating the Moslems have called for the overthrow of the shah's regime and the establishment of an Islamic popular government.

The shah has imposed martial law in Tehran and 11 other cities across Iran. Moslems have defied the shah's martial law by staging demonstrations in Tehran and other cities.

Cycle crash injures man

A Lansing man was injured Wednesday afternoon when a vehicle struck his motorcycle head on.

Gary L. Schupp, 25, of 3805 Ingham St., was listed in "serious" condition at Ingham Medical Center.

Police said a vehicle turned left on Victor Avenue from Pleasant Grove Drive directly into the path of his motorcycle.

Police said Schupp had no headlights on his motorcycle, and he received a citation for it.

Carmen: schlock, not rock

By DAVE DIMARTINO
State News Reviewer

"Well, I know it sounds funny," says Eric Carmen. "But I'm not in it for the money, no."

"I don't need no reputation," he says, "and I'm not in it for the show."

"I just want a hit record," Carmen says. "Want to hear it on the radio. I want a BIG hit record, one that everybody's got to know."

All this from Eric Carmen, circa 1975. An interview? Nope, just simple song lyrics from the last Raspberries album, Starting Over. The LP's opening track, "Overnight Sensation (Hit Record)," signified a new beginning for Carmen and a new formation of the Raspberries, the group he founded in Ohio in 1970.

Unfortunately, Carmen's ambitions worked very much against the Raspberries. The album was a relative stiff, saleswise, and lacking a real "Hit Record." Starting Over ironically marked the demise of the band. Soon after, Carmen released his first solo album for Arista Records and his career truly did start over. "All By Myself," the wimp ballad supreme, ended whatever affiliations Carmen had with rock 'n roll and placed him midway between Barry Manilow and Dan "Sometimes-When-We-Touch" Hill.

"Why use a rock band when you can use an orchestra?" is apparently Carmen's prevailing line of logic, and of course such logic is disheartening to die-hard Raspberries fans who don't especially enjoy oatmeal in their rock 'n roll. Unfortunately, oatmeal is still the most valid comparison two albums later with Change Of Heart (Arista AB 4184), a string-laden effort worlds apart from the rock of the Raspberries. The LP, Carmen's third for Arista, begins with "Desperate Fools Overture" and ends with the real thing, "Desperate Fools." And in between are some very disappointing songs.

Nothing's really BAD on the album — but nothing's really good, either, and that's what hurts most. Carmen is one of few American songwriters capable of creating high-quality pop-tunes that immediately grab the listener at first hearing — like "Go All the Way" or "Ecstasy" from his Raspberries days — and there's simply nothing comparable anywhere on his new album.

With an orchestra, a slick bunch of backing musicians and some overwhelming backing vocals, Carmen's rock 'n roll spirit is drowning in schlock.

To be honest, I must admit the title track at least approaches some of Carmen's better work. It's already an AM hit of sorts and it's clearly the album's high point, but it doesn't rock, it bounces — which isn't quite the same thing. The two tunes following it, "Hey Deanie" and "Someday," are upbeat and similarly appealing, featuring back-up vocal spots by Bruce Johnston and Curt Becher, among others. The three tunes together constitute three-quarters of the LP's second side — which brings up another disturbing point. In total, Change of Heart boasts a little less than 31 minutes total playing time. Within that time, we're given a two-minute instrumental, a pointless re-make of "Baby I Need Your Lovin'," and a lyricized version of the opening instrumental. Carmen's last LP, you might remember, was one of Arista's first $7.98 list-price albums; one might reasonably ask if the consumer is getting screwed somewhere in the deal. In the case of Change of Heart, the consumer clearly is.

As Carmen made clear in "Overnight Sensation (Hit Record)," he wants a big hit record, one that "everybody's got to know." He's already got that with "All By Myself," he may have it with Change of Heart's title track, and, if nothing else, he's already dressing the part. He's always been trendy — the cover of the first Raspberries LP featured four dreamy guys looking like the only English popstars left in a hippie-filled world — and the cover of the new LP features a spiffed-up Eric looking pensive as hell. Cute, too, which is probably the idea.

In the end, Carmen's inclinations for the pop star life are negatively affecting his music. It shows here — with an orchestra, a slick bunch of backing musicians and some overwhelming backing vocals, Carmen's rock 'n roll spirit is drowning in schlock. If he was inherently a wimp, maybe he wouldn't be worth writing about. The point is, however, that he isn't a wimp. He's just misdirected.

So maybe it's a good thing. If Eric Carmen keeps pulling this Barry Manilow thing on us, he'll get his hits, his "number ones," and maybe — who knows? — he'll get tired. Maybe he'll get a real band, and maybe, just maybe, he'll remember what it was about rock 'n roll that got him started in the business in the first place. I sure hope so, 'cause Change of Heart needs a transplant, and that's no joke.

BILL HOLDSHIP

Out of the bars, into the cars

Give this column to someone who supported and voted "yes" on Proposal D:

Man, are you ever dumb! I mean, we all knew it was going to pass in the first place, so it came as no big surprise. After all, every conservative/bad law is going to pass in this country during the next several years, as America continues its slow, frustration-filled de-evolution toward the right and its next war. (But that's the stuff future columns are made of.)

Serious repercussions will result from raising the drinking age to 21, including the death of quality entertainment at area bars. So seriously, shed a tear for the demise of Lansing as one of Michigan's hot spots for night club concerts.

Brad Parsons of Pyramid productions said that he doesn't anticipate a great effect on the outfit's shows at Dooley's, especially the jazz concerts. In a survey conducted by Pyramid last spring, it was estimated that 70 to 75 percent of those attending the Dooley's shows were 21 and over. However, Parsons did say that the rock shows which attract a younger crowd will probably be affected.

Of course, there are those who could care less if Patti Smith, the Ramones, etc., etc., ever show their faces in Lansing again. These are probably the same people who argued a rational (yeech) case in favor of Proposal 'D,' that is, it will lower alcohol-related deaths among 18- to 21-year-old drivers. This is rational. If you took booze from the 40- to 44-year-old groups it would lower booze-related deaths among 40- to 44-year-olds.

Now, let's face it: alcohol is really a repugnant drug. I'm not trying to be uppity, as I've been known to hang a good one on more than once a month. Our society — the social and entertainment aspects of it — seems to revolve around alcohol. To show how screwed up our laws and priorities are, it has always amazed me that a society can condone a drug that has ruined so many lives (or even something as nauseatingly addicting as nicotine) and condemn the use of less evil drugs like marijuana.

Marijuana's effects on a person are something akin to "I'm real high so I better be careful when I drive." On the other hand, alcohol often makes a person think that he or she is Andy Granetelli . . . or Muhammed Ali, for that matter (you see one at most every bar — "Whadda ya mean, how am I? Man, you're gonna be pickin' your face up off the floor!") The point to this is if you're drunk, don't drive. But the point also is that driving under the influence isn't necessarily relative to age. In fact, sometimes the older a person is, the more "courageous" that person is apt to be.

The evils of alcohol aside, it's impossible to take a right away from a group like this without serious repercussions. "If we're old enough to fight . . ." and don't kid yourself — it's not that there isn't a draft, just that there isn't a war. A situation like this leads directly to rebellion and a "screw-the-law" attitude. Hell, pot has been illegal for years, but that hasn't stopped anyone from smoking it. All Proposal 'D' will lead to is more police (yeech) records for 18- to 21-year-olds, something that is already more than a problem in this total "police state" known as East Lansing.

The drinking age was still 21 when I was in high school, but that didn't prevent us from getting absolutely plastered every single weekend. Which just goes to show that the new law will accomplish nothing, and here's what will undoubtedly happen: People will drive around in their cars drinking since the bars are no longer accessible. Rather than consuming single drinks, many people will feel they have to finish the entire bottle or pack in one sitting since it's illegal to possess it. The drinks won't be watered down as they are in the bars, and people won't be dancing which often aids in reducing the body's alcohol content. In other words, there will be more drunk drivers than ever before!

In high school, my best friend loved to drink. He totaled three cars (and fortunately survived them all) before he was old enough to go to the bars where his sober friends could drive him home. Come Dec. 22, many 18- to 21-year-olds will join the high school kids sneaking booze on the roads.

So what does this all mean? I predict more alcohol-related traffic accidents than before as a result of Proposal D. Accidents cause deaths. If you supported and voted "yes" on the proposal, let it be on your head.

Man, are you ever dumb!

DeJohnette's Directions due here next week

Showcase Jazz will present Directions, the brainchild of drummer/pianist Jack DeJohnette Friday and Saturday, Nov. 17 and 18 at Erickson Kiva. Accompanying DeJohnette will be guitarist John Abercrombie, bassist Eddie Gomez, and trumpeter Lester Bowie, who have also recorded together on DeJohnette's recently-released New Directions LP.

DeJohnette began playing classical piano at the age of four, adding drumming to his skills when his interest shifted to jazz. He has since worked with many of the great jazz performers, including John Coltrane, Sonny Rollins, Bill Evans, Miles Davis, Charles Lloyd and Stan Getz.

The other members of Directions have equally impressive performing and recording credits, both under their own names and with other artists, as evidenced by Lester Bowie's recent appearance here with the Art Ensemble of Chicago. As Directions they specialize in free group improvisation, incorporating a wide variety of sophisticated rhythmic and melodic ideas.

There will be shows at 8 and 10:30 each night, and advance tickets will be available for $4 at the MSU Union Ticket Office, Warehouse Records, and Flat, Black and Circular.

THIS WEEKEND

No one can accuse Lansing of being a dull town this weekend. Tonight Steve Martin is appearing at the Lansing Civic Center (his mother would be appearing with him but she is carrying his weights up to the attic) and John Denver will be on campus at Jenison Fieldhouse. Both performances are sold out. How about that?

MUSIC
 •Tonight clarinetist Georgina Dobree and pianist Gary Kirkpatrick will perform works by Mozart, Weber, Schumann, and Lefevre at 8:15 in the Music Auditorium. In the Hart Recital Hall of the Music Building organist Ferdinand Klinda will play the words of Olivier Messiaen at 8:15 tonight.

•Phyllis Rice, mezzo-soprano, will give a recital at 3 p.m. Sunday at the Center for the Arts. General admission is $3 and students and senior citizens are $2.

•The Beaumont String Quartet will appear at 4:30 p.m. Sunday at Kresge Art Gallery, as part of a series of Gallery Chamber Music Concerts. General admission is $4 and students are $1 at the door.

•Chicago Ceilidh is being presented by the Ten Pound Fiddle at 8 tonight in Old College Hall in the MSU Union. Admission is $2.50.

•The Dillardards, America's premier bluegrass-country-rock band, will appear as part of the Mariah Coffeehouse series tonight and Saturday in McDonel Kiva. They will give two performances at 8 and 10:30 p.m. each night. Tickets are $3.50 at the door or can be purchased for $3 prior to the day of the show at the MSU Union, Elderly Instruments, Warehouse Records, or Castellani's Market.

•Tony Brown and Friends, a reggae and blues group, will appear at Lizard's Underground tonight and Saturday.

•The MSU Black Orpheus Gospel Choir will present "An Evening of Gospel Sounds" at 5:30 p.m. Sunday in Erickson Kiva. Admission is free but donations will be accepted.

THEATER
 •The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie, the second play of the Performing Arts Company's season, will appear at 8:15 tonight and Saturday in the Fairchild Auditorium.
 •This is the final weekend for the Okemos Barn Theatre's production of the Agatha Christie drama, Witness for the Prosecution. Show time is 8 p.m. Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

•Also on this weekend, is the BoarsHead Theater's production of the 1911 German comedy, The Underpants, in which a young German woman drops her underpants during the Kaiser's parade and sets off a series of repercussions. Performances are at 8 tonight and Sunday, 6 and 9 p.m. Saturday.

FILM
 •Porn lovers can experience something elevating this weekend if they attend Marachino Cherry at 7:30 or 9:30 p.m. in 146 Giltner Friday or Saturday. Know what we mean?
TELEVISION

•The Grateful Dead will be appearing on Saturday Night Live this weekend, which arguably is a cut below the likes of Devo, the Stones, Van Morrison and (even) Frank Zappa. But, hey, our philosophy is: don't bite the hand that feeds you. TV's free, and nothing else up there is, if you know what we mean. And, then again, there's books.

Water Polo Club hosts tourney

By DAVE JANSSEN

The MSU Water Polo Club will probably face some real struggles when it hosts the Midwest Water Polo Tournament at the Men's IM Pool this weekend, but this will be nothing new to the club.

In fact, in the past few years, the club's toughest struggle has merely been that of staying alive. One might venture to say that an appearance alone in this weekend's tournament is a small victory for the MSU club.

Early this fall, when Erving Rosenberg left the University, the club appeared to be doomed. Coach Rosenberg, a one-time Canadian National Team member, left the club in the same predicament that he found it when he rescued it two years earlier.

This set the stage for the arrival of player coach Bill McCord this fall. McCord, who had played on the club throughout his undergraduate career, didn't want to see water polo die at MSU. Therefore, he proceeded to put together a team for the 1978 season.

With McCord's experience, and the enthusiasm of the rest of the swimmers, the club has been able to overcome some of the difficulties encountered by a typical MSU Water Polo Club.

One of the major difficulties that the club must face is lack of talent. Though water polo is a growing sport, it is still generally neglected. This is particularly true in the Midwest, says McCord, where there are very few high school teams. Most MSU members are high school swimmers who didn't want to swim in college and joined the club primarily in order to stay in shape.

A couple of the other problems stem from the fact that water polo is a club sport at MSU and, therefore, receives limited aid from the University. Because of this, the club must do its own scheduling. This has been a major problem, this fall, according to McCord. He says scheduling has cost the club a couple of their losses because of the difficulty of getting the whole team to gether at one time.

Also, being a club at MSU means that the activity is not year round. The MSU Water Polo team, though it does compete against some all year teams, starts in the fall. This means that most players are out of shape, while many of those coming from high school swim teams have only one week of experience in playing the game before entering their first match.

Despite having to face all of these problems, the club has compiled a 4-4 record and has beaten some fine teams. MSU has defeated three of the five teams that will travel to the tournament this weekend. They have not played the other two teams.

MSU has beaten the University of Michigan, Western Michigan, and Warren Tower a team made up of veteran players, from the Warren area. MSU has not played the Windsor A nor the Windsor B team. McCord has called the Windsor A team the team to beat in the tournament. According to McCord, this team is usually one of the best teams in North America.

"The attitude of this team has been fantastic all year," McCord emphasized. "That along with the University cooperation in getting outstanding pool facilities (Men's IM Pool) should be a real help to us this weekend."

McCord cited three players who contributed much to the success of the team throughout the fall. He said freshmen Chris Keenan of Ann Arbor and Jim Morris of Philadelphia added both talent and experience to the club. He noted that the team was fortunate to draw these players from areas where water polo is popular. McCord also mentioned that the leadership of senior veteran Mark Schroeder has also been vital to the team leading up to the season-ending tournament.

The tournament begins with preliminary matches tomorrow from 9:30 a.m. through 5 p.m. MSU's first scheduled match is at 11 a.m. against Warren Tower.

The semi-finals will be held on Sunday at 7:45 and 9:15 a.m. The championship match is scheduled for 10:45 a.m.

Spatz adds depth to harriers

By ADAM TEICHER
State News Sports Writer

MSU's women's cross country team ran in the AIAW Midwest Regionals last week in Macomb, Ill. and finished in second place. No big surprise in that second was where the Spartans were picked to finish.

The fact that Kelly Spatz was the first finisher for MSU also was no big surprise. The sophomore from Saginaw has been among the top Spartan runners all year long.

But what was kind of a big deal was that Spatz broke her previous best time for the 5,000 meter course by a full 17 seconds. "I was surprised myself," Spatz exclaimed, trying to find a reason for her best performance ever. "There doesn't seem to be a reason. Just lucky, I guess," she continued.

But she did agree that the 75-degree temperature for the regionals made running a bit easier, for her it not for her teammates. "It (the temperature) did have a good effect on me. Breathing was a lot easier in the warm air. I enjoyed the heat instead of worrying about it."

With their second place finish in the regionals, the Spartans will be running in the AIAW national finals in Denver, where the high altitude will pose a new problem for the runners. "I like to take the first mile fast. At the regionals last week, I ran the first mile in 5:20, but for the finals, I won't go out at first any faster than 6:00 for the mile. It (the altitude) will make quite a difference. I think it will be a learning experience for all of us," Spatz said.

She also hopes that this year's nationals won't be a repeat of the finals last season. Two of the top Spartan runners were injured and were forced to miss the meet and this had an unsettling effect on the other members of the team. "Mentally, we all sort of let down. I don't think that will happen again this time," she recalled.

Although she was not happy with her freshman cross country season — "I didn't feel I ran as well as I felt I could" — her track season saw her cut 10 seconds off her best high school time in the mile when she ran it in 4:58. "One of my goals for the season was to break the five-minute mile, so when I did it, I kind of felt that it was a successful year."

Spatz concluded by saying that she is happy at MSU because of the cross country situation. "We really like the coach (Eric Zemper) and we all get along real well. If you're happy with the coach and like your teammates, then it's going to be fun."

Kelly Spatz (left) and Nathalie Hughes, shown here in a dual meet victory over Minnesota, are two of the top runners on the MSU women's cross country team.

Icers travel to Michigan Tech

By JERRY BRAUDE
State News Sports Writer

After four straight Western Collegiate Hockey Association defeats, MSU's hockey team will travel to Michigan Tech this weekend in hope of getting its first league victory. "We've been playing better than last year even though we haven't been winning," coach Amo Bessone said. "I'm pleased with the way we've been playing. We just need a break, and to cut down on the early lapses."

The series will be a crucial one for the Spartans, 2-4 overall, in trying not to fall too far behind in the league race.

"We've been in all of our games," Bessone said. "We've been hustling all year, and we'll just have to keep on doing it. We just have to keep our heads up until we get some help in January (when the academically ineligible players of Leo Lynett, Dan Sutton and Paul Gottwald return)."

The Spartans will be going into Houghton, however, with a healthy squad. Defensemen Jim Clifford, who missed the Minnesota series because of a blood clot in his leg, and freshman leftwinger Craig Lakian, who hasn't made a regular season appearance because of a bruised shoulder, will be ready for this weekend.

The Huskies, on the other hand, will be losing a pair of players from the defense, the strength of the team, in Nick Schwartz and Mark Palkovich. Both players were injured at Michigan last weekend where Michigan Tech took both games 4-2 to even its league record at 2-2.

Michigan Tech lost its first two WCHA contests to North Dakota, 5-3 and 4-1. The Huskies won their first two games of the season with non-league victories over Lake Superior State College, 5-4 and 8-1, for a 4-2 overall mark.

"Michigan Tech is big," Bessone said. "They use a pro-style offense. We'll give Jeff Bacon a chance to utilize his weight at the left wing."

The Huskies have lost nine letterman from last year's team that placed third in the WCHA with a 21-11-0 record. Their biggest losses came from up the middle.

But their freshman center Rick Boehm has helped alleviate the losses at up the middle. Boehm is second in team scoring with two goals and five assists for seven points.

Michigan Tech also has some excellent returning lettermen in junior rightwinger Gord Salt, the team's leading point-getter with one goal and seven assists, and junior leftwinger Greg Hay, who has four goals and two assists.

Tim Watters leads the defense with three goals and four assists.

Like the Spartans, the Huskies have strong goaltending with John Rockwell, who is fourth in the WCHA in goaltending with a 3.25 average. The senior out of Bloomington, Minn., turned back 90 shots against North Dakota and 64 saves against Michigan.

"We've been getting fantastic goaltending so far," Bessone said of Mark Mazzoleni and Doug Belland. "Belland has been showing that he can use his stick well."

"We're still working on our defense and strengthening the middle," Bessone said. "Our defense has been backing down to much. Either the defense or the centers have not been doing the job in the slot."

Three MSU harriers in NCAA District meet

Three MSU cross country harriers will try to qualify for the NCAA finals as they travel to Minneapolis for the NCAA District meet on Saturday.

Freshmen Martin Schulist, Mark Mesler and Michael White are the only members of the MSU harriers that can keep their hopes alive.

It won't be easy for the freshmen, as they will be competing against the best teams and individual runners in the Midwest.

"I figure they'll have to finish in the Top 20 to qualify," coach Jim Gibbard said. Teams from Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Wisconsin and Minnesota will be present.

Gibbard has been working hard all week with his runners. This race will be 10,000 meters (six and one-quarter miles), which is longer than the last few races have been. "They run better in the longer races," Gibbard said. "I think we will be able to qualify."

One thing that will be to the advantage of the three Spartans is that the Minnesota course is almost the same as Forest Hills.

However, now the harriers are running for themselves as individuals, instead of being part of a team effort. "They know that it's for themselves," Gibbard said. "They've been working real hard and trying all right. We just have to wait and see if we will all pay off."

The trio of freshmen have paced Gibbard's young harriers all season long.

After a cellar finish in last year's Big Ten meet, Gibbard has turned to youth to help rebuild the harriers. And although MSU's season record was only 2-6, the improvement over a year ago is quite obvious.

Although the cross country season is coming to an end, the prospects for the distance races in indoor track (winter term) appear bright.

Women tankers open season

The MSU women's swimming team will practice this season Saturday competing in the State of Michigan Relays Meet in Ann Arbor.

After a year-long leave of absence, Jennifer Parks is returning as head coach of the Spartan tankers.

And she's got a promising team to work with.

Top returnees include co-captain Vicki LeFevre, a top freestyle performer, backstroke swimmer Kathy Kolon and Melinda Whitcomb, a standout in the 200-yard individual medley.

The Spartans recently held a green white practice meet in preparation for the season, and Parks said she is pleased with the way the times have been improving. Colleges from all over the state will be competing in the meet.

ROTC football clash

The annual football clash between the Air Force and Army ROTC students at MSU will be renewed this weekend.

The two rivals will kick off at 1 p.m. at the IM Fields near Munn Arena. This is a long-standing rivalry which the teams take quite seriously and any spectators are welcome to view the game, free of charge.

Men's gymnasts open year in Indiana Classic

By JEFF MINAHAN

Gymnastics coach George Szypula will get his first look at the 1978 men's gymnasts in competition when the team travels to Columbus, Ind., to participate in the Indiana Classic this weekend.

Although the entire team will make the trip, there is no team championship at stake and the meet will be conducted on an individual basis. And Szypula will be looking for some sterling individual performances.

"Some of the best teams in the Midwest will be there," Szypula said, "but this won't show use where the team stands, just what events we may be strong in."

Three members of the team who will be watched very closely are Marvin Gibbs, Dan Miller, and Rich Licata.

Gibbs is the Spartan's best all around performer who is returning from a fine freshman year. He will compete in the rings and the floor exercise.

Dan Miller is returning as the number two man after an injury which kept him out last year, and will be entered in the horizontal bar.

Rich Licata will be competing on the horizontal bar in his first meet as an MSU gymnast. Szypula calls Licata "a pleasant surprise who we are expecting a lot from."

In other events, Charles Jenkins will compete in the floor exercise, the parallel bars and vaulting. Tom Tomkow will join Gibbs on the rings. Ken Stansbury will handle the vaulting with Jenkins, and Jim Prescott and Hubert Streep will be entered in the pommel horse.

Szypula says this is the team's "preseason warmup" and is anxious to be able to compete against these teams. In addition to such top teams as Indiana State and Southern Illinois, the Big Ten's best will also be represented.

The Spartans will also compete in the Midwest Open at Chicago on Nov. 24 and 25, and then in the Ball State Invitational on Dec. 1 and 2 at Muncie, Indiana.

The team is then idle until Jan. 13 and 14 when they compete in the Big Ten Invitational in Ann Arbor.

BABCOCK SHOULD PLAY DESPITE INJURY

Stickers seeded first in regional tourney

By CHERYL FISH
State News Sports Writer

The MSU field hockey team is seeded number one for this weekend's Midwestern Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (MAIAW) Championship in La Crosse, Wis.

The Spartans will face Kent State in their first of three tournament games. The Spartans must win two of these to become eligible for the national championship on Nov. 23-26.

The other six schools participating are Indiana University, Davis and Elkins of West Virginia, Wisconsin La Crosse, Michigan, Southern Illinois and Ohio State.

MSU Coach Sam Kajornsin sees a threat in only half of the teams in the tournament. For the opening Kent State game, he does not expect much difficulty. "We played them early in the year and tied them, but it was our first game and their sixth," he said. "We've come quite a ways since then."

Kajornsin is concerned however, about the health of two of his premier players. Center halfback Nancy Babcock got hit in the chin by a flying ball during the state tournament. In a practice scrimmage earlier this week, she was unable to play for part of the game.

Although there are substitutes to fill in for her, it is a difficult position to play. "This position requires skills and experience, which Babcock has," Kajornsin said. She will attempt to play in the tournament.

Right inner Debi Peven pulled a muscle in her leg in practice on Monday. While Kajornsin said it was not serious, it has slowed Peven down. "We'll know how bad these injuries are after the first tournament game," he said.

MSU will face the winner of the Indiana Davis and Elkins game if it beats Kent State. Kajornsin has studied the record and stats of the Davis and Elkins team, who are relatively unknown by midwestern teams. "They are a mystery around here, but I think they're a good team," he said. There will be time to watch them play, as their game is scheduled prior to MSU's.

The stickers have had three days of practice, working on every aspect of the game, and holding scrimmages. They will put their all into these next few games, as the season will be over if they do not place first or second. "It's a tremendously exciting event for us," Kajornsin said. He remains confident that his team has got what it takes to go to the national finals in Seattle, Wash.

AUTHORITY ON FOOD PROBLEMS SPEAKS

World's food goes to well-fed nations

By JOANNE LANE
State News Staff Writer
Most of the world's food is going to the well-fed nations of the world, a professor of food science and nutrition and of geography said Wednesday.

Georg Borgstrom, a world authority on food problems and the author of several books on the subject, told a large crowd in the Erickson Kiva that the world needs to reconstruct its food trade.

Japan is the biggest importer of food, Borgstrom said. The United Kingdom, Italy, Poland and West Germany also import large quantities of food.

"The world must teach its people how to manage the shock they will encounter when they realize the unbelievable growth of world population," Borgstrom said.

"We add a new United States, in terms of population, to the world each third month," he added.

The destitute persons of the world with an annual income of up to $50 have not previously been counted in the world population, Borgstrom explained.

"The destitute, in past times, just did not exist," he said, "but now they are marching out to be counted."

Borgstrom also said a minority is using the majority of the world's resources which include energy.

The idea of the world having an abundance of food is just not true, the professor said.

"There is no world surplus, only various scarcities," Borgstrom said.

Twelve to 15 years ago scientists predicted a "blissful paradise," he said, where oceans would be used to feed the world and space would be a new frontier.

Those so-called blissful programs have been exploited and are now stagnated, he explained.

Queen, court presentation set

Ms. Black MSU and her court for 1978-1979 will be presented to the East Lansing community during halftime for the Minnesota-MSU football game Saturday.

Monica Houston, a 20-year-old minority aide in Holmes Hall, was crowned queen in April.

Although Houston is the third queen to represent the black community, this is the first time Ms. Black MSU will be presented during a halftime show.

Vicki Greene, co-director of Nouveau Noir, the group sponsoring the presentation, said Houston is being presented as a representation of positive black womanhood in the community.

Nouveau Noir, the French phrase meaning

New Black Productions, has been in existence for two terms.

"Previous pageants were not sponsored by a particular group and Nouveau Noir has been organized to present social and academic activities to the community," Greene said.

Houston said her goal as queen is to present a positive image to high school students in the community and to encourage them to continue their education so they can achieve whatever they can.

"I hope to do this by conducting discussion groups with area high school students," she said.

The presentation is in conjunction with the ASMSU Programming Board.

Tricky barber uses magic

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Now you see it and now you don't — Junior's hair, that is — at "The Magic Hare" barber shop.

Jerry Benson, a magician, diverts young clients who might otherwise be inclined to squirm a bit at the sight of a barber's scissors. He produces sponges from little ears and makes ropes dance, to the great delight of his customers.

Now, a chain of department stores has decided to replace its salons with "Magic Hare" shops.

A career in law—without law school

After just three months of study at The Institute for Paralegal Training in Philadelphia, you can have an exciting and rewarding career in law or business—without law school.

As a lawyer's assistant you will be performing many of the duties traditionally handled only by attorneys. And at The Institute for Paralegal Training, you can pick one of seven different areas of law to study. Upon completion of your training, The Institute's unique Placement Service will find you a responsible and challenging job in a law firm, bank or corporation in the city of your choice.

The Institute for Paralegal Training is the nation's first and most respected school for paralegal training. Since 1970, we've placed over 2,500 graduates in over 85 cities nationwide.

If you're a senior of high academic standing and looking for an above average career, contact your placement office for an interview with our representative.

We will visit your campus on:
Wed. & Thurs., Nov. 29 & 30

Carter signs tax cut bill

The president said "final decisions will not be made until next month" but added that he is committed to increasing NATO's portion of the defense budget by 3 percent after discounting for inflation.

He said the nation would meet its commitments to increased financing for NATO, but at the same time would meet the goal he outlined in his anti-inflation program of reducing the federal budget deficit to below $30 billion.

to mandatory wage and price controls and said that "most organized labor members" feel it is best for them to help control inflation.
Questioned about a report that the price of Hershey chocolate bars is going up, Carter said that if the report is true, "I would disapprove it strongly."

Turning to the Mideast negotiations, Carter said the question of linking the Israeli-Egyptian peace agreement to a treaty on the future of the West Bank and the Gaza Strip "is a matter for negotiation."

The president said that neither he, Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin nor Egyptian President Anwar Sadat had ever doubted that the Egyptian-Israeli peace talks were intended to lead to a solution of the West Bank and Gaza questions.

The statement placed Carter in agreement with Sadat's position.

Commenting on the election results, Carter said he does not believe approval of an arms limitation agreement with the Soviet Union has been jeopardized by Republican gains in the Senate.

Voters decide Milliken is their man

"Do you need an attorney," he mused, "do you know anyone who does?"
He intends to remain active in politics, though saying he will "maintain Lansing and Washington connections."

As for taking another shot at becoming governor, "I certainly wouldn't rule that out," Fitzgerald said.

Saying he fought a good race in an aggressive campaign, Fitzgerald said people were too familiar with Milliken and were reluctant to change.

"My polling showed I could have beat anyone else," he said.

"We weren't really sad election night. We did as much as we could to unify the state."

Coal resources

According to the Department of Energy, the United States has vast resources of coal. Our domestic coal reserves are equal to one half of the known reserves in the entire world and have five times the energy value of our domestic recoverable oil and natural gas.

Provost

violated the bylaws. After discussing that possibility at a committee meeting Thursday, committee members decided to examine the issue further.

State News Kim VanderVeer
William Fitzgerald, unsuccessful democratic candidate for governor, and his running-mate Olivia Maynard concede defeat Tuesday.

Robbery suspects caught

A series of armed robberies of pizza delivery persons could be over on Lansing's northwest side after a police officer posed as one Wednesday night.
Officer Daniel Issac delivered a Casa Nova Go Go Pizza to 1425 Turner St. wearing a coat over his uniform and was assaulted with a weapon by an 18-year-old man and a 14-year-old juvenile.

offered the officer no resistance.

For the last several nights, the northwest side of Lansing has been the area of two previous armed robberies of a pizza delivery person. Only a small amount of money and pizzas were taken.

The manager of The Casa Nova Go Go Pizza called Lansing Police officers after receiving a suspicious telephone call.

"I don't really know what made the manager call us, it was something he sensed — that's all," Tim Poxson, Lansing Police public affairs officer, said.

The names were withheld pending the issuing of an arrest warrant.

Workshops to be held on house weatherizing

By MICHELE McELMURRY

Urban Options will conduct a series of workshops on basic home weatherization beginning Saturday.

The workshops will be conducted at the Energy House, 135 Linden St., a city owned house made available to Urban Options by the East Lansing City Council.

Urban Options is a new, non-profit organization of local architects, builders and others formed to provide information about energy conservation to Ingham County residents.

Staff members will demonstrate the uses of different materials and advise workshop participants on winterizing skills.

Information on the cost and availability of local materials will also be discussed at each three-hour workshop session.

A $5 fee per session will be charged to each participant. Materials for the workshops will be provided by local businesses.

Urban Options' two main projects, the Energy House and a series of energy task forces, address energy problems by suggesting use of technologies and strategies making the best use of available materials.

A formal contract has not yet been drawn up between the city and the Urban Options group, but the workshop will still be conducted Saturday.

The city's rehabilitation specialist said $4,147 would have to be spent on the Energy House to make it usable for the project.

A tentative project for next year is the building of a solar greenhouse, which would be built in front of the Energy House and would collect solar energy to heat the house. Food could also be grown in the greenhouse.

The Nov. 11 workshop will involve caulking, weatherstripping and water pipe insulation.

Two subsequent workshops being held on Dec. 2 and 9 will consist of weatherizing storm windows, shutters and insulating walls.

People interested in the first workshop can register for either of two sessions, a morning session from 9 a.m. to noon or an afternoon session from 1 to 4 p.m. The $5 fee can be sent in advance to the Energy House, 135 Linden Street, East Lansing 48823. For more information call 355-7847 or 485-0425.

Moslems hold prayer session

The Muslim Students Association will sponsor a prayer session today in the Union Building at 9:30 a.m.

The session will be held to celebrate Eid, which is the annual Moslem commemoration of the prophet Abraham's sacrifice of his son, Ishmael.

Ifkhar Malik, a member of the association, said Moslems from all continents are gathering this week in Mecca, Saudi Arabia, to pay tribute to Abraham's God who bestowed his blessings on his followers by promising to send the prophet Mohammed to that city. Individual Moslem community members may also privately sacrifice sheep or goats to celebrate the event.

THE CONTEST IS EASY

Just think of something that a computer can do, might do, should do, or that you wish it would do.

Deadline for entry - Nov. 16. Winner(s) announced 2:00 p.m. Nov. 18.

Mountaineering #4.

THE OPTIMUM MOMENT.

Mountaineering is a skill of timing as well as technique. The wrong moment, like the wrong method, marks the gap between amateur and aficionado. So the key to successful mountaineering is to choose the occasions wisely and well. When then is it appropriate to slowly quaff the smooth, refreshing mountains of Busch Beer?

Celebrations, of course, are both expected and excellent opportunities to test your mountaineering mettle. Indeed on major holidays it is virtually mandatory to do so. Imagine ushering in the fiscal new year or commemorating Calvin C. Coolidge's birthday or throwing Take-A-Sorghum-To-Lunch-Week without the benefit of Busch. A disturbing prospect at best.

On the other hand, not every event need be as significant as those outlined above. Small victories like exams passed, papers completed or classes attended are equally acceptable. Remember the mountaineer's motto: matriculation is celebration.

Interpersonal relationships are also meaningful times. There are few things finer than taking your companion in hand and heading for the mountains, transcending the hum and hum-drum in favor of a romantic R & R. Naturally, couples who share the pleasures of mountaineering run the risk of being labeled social climbers. But such cheap shots are to be ignored. They are the work of cynics, nay-sayers and chronic malcontents.

Similarly, the ambience of an athletic afternoon, e.g. The Big Game, is another ideal moment. Downing the mountains elevates the morale of the fan and hence, the team. Therefore, if you care at all about the outcome, it is your duty to mountaineer.

When should one not enjoy the invigoration of the mountains? Here, you'll be happy to learn, the list is much briefer. Mountaineering is considered declassé with dessert, improper during judicial proceedings and just plain foolish while crop dusting around power lines. Otherwise, as the hot-heads of the sixties used to say, "Seize the time."

Otherwise, as the hot-heads of the sixties used to say, "Seize the time."

Mountaineering is the science and art of drinking Busch. The term "mountaineering" is to the starchy joy beads supplied by the label, outside and perpendicular to the cold, naturally retreating, bare, ridges of seasons 1 & 2.

WWI veteran recalls the origin of Armistice Day

First Lieutenant Carl Blanchard

By KEVIN BOGGS
Sixty years ago today First Lieutenant Carl Blanchard was severely wounded in the Argonne Forest in France when a shell exploded nearby.
The next day he was in a hospital. Moments before he was given a tranquilizer, a nurse told Blanchard World War I was at last over. Drifting off to sleep, he thought she meant it was over only for him.
But it was over for everybody.
Although it has since been re-named Veteran's Day, to World War I veterans like Carl Blanchard, Nov. 11 will forever be Armistice Day.
Today, the 85 year old Blanchard voluntarily helps other veterans cut red tape as field service director for the Lansing office of the Military Order of the Purple Heart.
A vigorous man, he also participates as one of seven members on the board of managers of the State Veteran's Facility of Michigan.

He took time out from his busy schedule to briefly recall his part in the American Expeditionary Force that went to Europe under the command of General John J. Pershing.
"There was a great spirit among the fellows who had a lot to overcome in that war," the affable Blanchard said. "There was a great sense of patriotism, although there was some griping."
A native of Maine, Blanchard graduated as a first lieutenant in August 1917 from the officer's training school at Camp Leon Springs, Tex.
He trained a 400 person machine gun company there and in June 1918, as their "acting captain," he took command of them in France.
Before the guns fell silent on the 11th hour of the 11th day in the 11th month of 1918, Blanchard would join the ranks of the 117,000 Americans killed or wounded in the Meuse Argonne offensive.

He spent Christmas in the hospital and was not released until the following February.
The mud he encountered along the European countryside, created by the hordes of men and the animal teams transporting food and ammunition, surprised Blanchard a great deal.
Gas masks were worn with regularity and the absence of antibiotics plagued the wounded. The harsh peace treaty hammered out at Versailles by the "Big Four" disappointed Blanchard.
"They won the war on the battlefield but lost it at the peace table," he said.
Dubbed the "war to end all wars" by Woodrow Wilson, Blanchard did not believe it then or now.

"There are always new generations that know nothing of war," Blanchard said. "Succeeding generations must develop leaders endeared to humanity and who have respect for the rights of all people or we won't survive."
Blanchard feels WWI did, in part, make the world "safe for democracy." He was also able to glean one other benefit from an atrocious war whose victims numbered over 47 million.
"I think it cemented our country together like never before," he said. "It healed all wounds of the Civil War. Northern and southern men were mixed in together all over the country."
The mobility of society, Blanchard said he believes, was given a strong impetus by the American doughboys — or the infantry — returning home from Paris.

The statuesque gentleman insisted that the credit go to others who suffered irreparable damage during the war.
"Many a man was torn to pieces by the horror of war — not by the shells. No one in the world can ever claim superiority," he said.
In 1919 when he left the army, Blanchard's salary was $166 a month. Like all other veterans of that era, the government saw to it he left the service with a paltry $60 "bonus."
Blanchard came to Michigan in 1944 to assist Gov. Harry F. Kelly in the establishment of the Office of Veteran's Affairs.
His office, part of the Veteran's Trust Fund on East Michigan Avenue, is filled with awards for public service and other mementos of his part in the development of this country in the 20th century.
