Another story:
Long days of tension come to an end as Lansing's new State News is put on press.

WASHINGTON — President Carter canceled a major energy speech that he had planned to give Thursday as White House aides were spread with information about the event.

The president is the process of assessing major domestic economic problems that are being reported to the nation and which include but go beyond the question of energy, which has been the subject of intense interest for a long time.

"The Carter administration is in the process of assessing major economic problems that are being reported to the nation and which include but go beyond the question of energy, which has been the subject of intense interest for a long time."

The statement was made by a Carter aide, who spoke on condition of anonymity. Although Carter had been reported to have been in a meeting Thursday on the topic of energy, the aide said that the meeting was informal, and that Carter was only one among several people attending.

"I am concerned," the aide said, "that the Carter administration is in the process of assessing major economic problems that are being reported to the nation and which include but go beyond the question of energy, which has been the subject of intense interest for a long time."

The source of the statements was the U.S. Labor Department, because major problems must be assessed before the President can make a policy statement on energy.

Primary process should be altered

Michigan may not see a presidential primary in the state before the 1980 elections, and the legislative battle will likely mount in the meantime. The House has already lost last year's attempts to scrap plants to stage a primary in Michigan, citing the need for higher political openness in Michigan's open primary process. The House's decision may overshadow the importance of holding a presidential primary in Michigan.

Proponents of the primary have traditionally been good indicators of how the public would react. Although the primary vote is an election of some kind, some public participation is a process that will cost the state $1.5 million in the form of election expenses. The pro-primary forces, however, are out-organized by the opposition. Proposals for a Michigan primary have been attempting to work around those arguments by introducing legislation and other processes. Acceptance of those proposals will probably determine whether Michigan engages in a primary election.

The primary process may need alteration, but should not be abolished altogether. Public input is a problem for all legislative offices. The public education of the 1980 elections (the state's primary elections) has already been cut short. Public opinion regarding presidential candidates get's a lot of air time and is handled by the media's deadlines and deadlines of public support for political candidates.

But the best news is that the necessity of a primary vote as it exists now seems to mean that primary is not in much agreement in any case. What is needed is a change in any case. What is needed is a change in the convictions of individuals so that primary can be changed as a whole.

Law created new public problems

A recent survey conducted by the Michigan Council on Alcohol Problems concluded that high school principals believe Michigan's 21-year-old drinking law is failing. The survey of all high school principals showed that 28 percent of all principals polled claim they are having less alcohol-related problems in their schools than they have had in the past. In all of these, however, concludes the 1980-year-old drinking law is creating new and different public problems. The law's relatively new status and still underdeveloped rules are more likely to be the major factors for the law's change.

Some other laws have been affected by principals and general inter-schools concerning what effects the higher drinking age law would produce. There has been a rise in cross-voting, class, high school, and in the rest of the state. To some extent, the effect of the 21-year-old age limit is attempting to cause problems with the law. The law was new and all of them have been affected.

Second, many districts now enable to drink legally have turned to areas parts of the city. In the city, Detroit, several other districts have been affected by the law. Some have also not allowed un-paraded drinkers into their establishments, and that means more problems with drinking.

The law is important

The law's spirit is more important than the letter

The law of the Old Testament laws you quote, are very temporary embodiments of eternal principles, only to use one particular reference. They are not binding on the people of the Old Testament, but their spirit is binding on all men.

Partly that's because our society is really guided by faith. Partly it's because the laws of the Old Testament, and of God's statements in the New Testament, are so high that they can only be followed by the highest moral standards. The Old Testament is the moral ideal, and the people would have agreed with the Old Testament moral ideal.

MSU will offer minor in reading

A minor is reading for elementary and secondary certification candidates at MSU has been authorized by the Board of Trusteis of the Michigan Department of Education to be offered.

The program is a result of a movement "to stress the basics," said a MSU spokesman. "It would make a difference in the amount of knowledge teachers have about the reading process."

The minor is being offered by the Center for Reading Improvement, the University of Detroit, and the Wayne State University.

Several states already have programs like this, and the University of Michigan is in the process of offering a minor in Educational Psychology with a reading emphasis.

"There are certain reading errors that need to be corrected, " the spokesman said. "Some children are reading in a way that they are not understanding the content."

Lawmakers try to revise juvenile code

The bill, introduced by Senator Mitchell, would provide for a system of juvenile courts to be established in each state. The courts would have jurisdiction over all delinquents, including those under the age of 16.

The bill states, in part, "The purpose of the juvenile court is to provide a fair and impartial process for the adjudication of delinquency cases."
‘Alcatraz’ is a prison film classic

BY JEROME BRESLO

This film is one of the longest ever made. stars Sean Connery, and it is the story of one of the biggest escape attempts in history. The film is based on the true story of the failed escape attempt from Alcatraz in 1962, which became one of the most famous prison escape attempts.

The film opens with the capture of a gang of prisoners by the U.S. Marshals Service. The prisoners are taken to Alcatraz, a maximum-security prison located in San Francisco Bay.

The film then follows the story of the prisoners as they plan and carry out their escape attempt. The escape is led by Frank Morris, who is played by Al Pacino. The escape attempt is seen as a symbol of the prisoners' desire for freedom and their resistance against the oppressive conditions of prison life.

The film is a powerful and gripping story of the prisoners' struggle for freedom, and it is a must-see for anyone interested in film history or prison reform.

Encore’s summer production of Wildness

Bears out Richard Miller’s promise to do Shakespeare

Richard Miller is to have given his audience another look at the Bard. Miller recently finished directing Wildness, which is to open at the Michigan State University’s James G. Konkel Theater on July 13. Miller, the University’s director of theatre, had previously directed three of Shakespeare’s plays and has just completed his fourth.

STORY: RICHARD MILLER TO DIRECT SHAKESPEARE **

Wildness, which Miller directed with Robert Alton, is a production of the Michigan State University’s Shakespeare Festival. The play is an adaptation of three plays by Shakespeare: The Three Sisters, Taming of the Shrew, and Measure for Measure.

SHAKESPEARE’S PLAYS IN AN ADAPTATION **

Wildness is an adaptation of Shakespeare’s plays, and Miller has made changes to the original scripts. He has cut out some scenes and added new ones to make the play more accessible to modern audiences.

THE ACTORS: MILLER, ALTON, AND MILLER **

Miller and Alton are the main actors in the production. Miller plays the role of Malvolio, a servant in the play, while Alton plays the role of Duke of Milan.

THE SET: SIMPLE, BUT EFFECTIVE **

The set for the play is simple, with only a few props and a few costumes. The simplicity of the set allows the audience to focus on the characters and the story.

THE AUDIENCE: ENJOY THE PERFORMANCE **

Audience members have responded positively to the production, with many enjoying the adaptation of Shakespeare’s plays.

THE FUTURE: MILLER CONTINUES TO DIRECT **

Miller plans to continue directing Shakespeare’s plays in the future, with future productions planned for the next season.

THE END. **

EX-SPARTAN TO HELP HETHCOTTE

Edgar Wilson named new cage aide

By ADAM TenNEBER

Sports Editor

MSU head basketball coach Jud Heathcote has named former Spartan basketball and baseball player Edgar Wilson as an assistant coach. When Wilson, 37, replaces Bill Berry, who was named to the head coaching job at Rice State University, he will become the third assistant coach named under Heathcote's reign.

Wilson, who was a standout basketball player at MSU, will become the third assistant coach named under Heathcote's reign.

When we first heard about our new employee, a former MSU basketball player, we were excited about the possibility of having someone who had been through the program and had a strong connection to the university. We were also impressed with his skills and abilities, which made him a strong candidate for the position.

Wilson's addition to our staff will be a significant asset. He brings a wealth of knowledge and experience to the team, having played at MSU and having worked at other institutions. We believe he will be a valuable asset to our program and help us achieve our goals.

We are looking forward to working with Wilson and seeing his impact on our team. With his passion for the sport and his commitment to excellence, we are confident that he will make a positive contribution to our program. Thank you again for considering our application. We are honored to be a part of such a great organization and will work tirelessly to uphold its values and standards.

Study still going strong

By DAVE JANSSEN
State News Sports Writer

Despite receiving a rather quiet extension, the Master Performance Study (MPS) continues to run strong in its 25th year of operation at MSU.

The study, initiated by Dr. Vern Eiselstein in January, 1973, was conceived as a longitudinal study designed to look at the relationship between physical growth and motor development in children. Ten years later, the study remains much as it was when initiated.

The program remains the joint support of the Departments of Health, Physical Education and Recreation and Psychology. It was established to study the growth and development of children in the school-age years with a specific focus on motor-skill development.

Participants in the MPS come from families in the East Lansing Public Schools and are placed in the program based on their performance in the kindergarten program. Focus is given throughout the program to those children who are either among the lowest or highest performers in the kindergarten program. Throughout the year, the children are evaluated and re-enrolled into the program based on their progress.

The study is designed to examine the ways in which children develop in physical activity. "It is felt that in a typical instructional program we may possibly cause harm to children," said Dr. Eiselstein. "If children get involved in competition too soon, they become the fourth grade. We want to make sure they have the basic skills, and we want them to have the social skills versus the previous performance. We want competition looking at a rising setting is not the objective of the program.

With children in kindergarten and first grade, the primary purpose of the program is to instill a broad range of fundamental motor skills. Children are taught various locomotor skills such as running, jumping, skipping and jumping, non-locomotor skills such as throwing, turning, balance and body awareness.

The MPS staff, which currently consists of Dr. Eiselstein, several assistant coordinators and other school district staff, is the department of physical education at MSU. The curricular staff is selected from the latest and most recent training programs at the university. The graduate students are physical educators, all certified, and interested in activities such as swimming.

Undergraduate students are required to serve as research assistants in the study to instill the proper approach to the MPS. The children are instructed in their own class, and the instruction is arranged in accordance with the curriculum at the school district.

Besides the basic motor development program, the staff runs two related programs. The first, the Beneficial Motor Clinic, currently under the supervision of doctoral student Holly Lynn, is designed to increase the children's physical activity level. The second involves the use of computer programs to design individualized physical education programs for the children. The program is designed to increase the children's physical activity level.

The MPS staff continues to work with the MPS staff to develop the program and to instill the proper approach to the MPS. The children are instructed in their own class, and the instruction is arranged in accordance with the curriculum at the school district.

One of the children currently enrolled in the Master Performance Study is a third-grader at East Lansing.

Lansing July 4 spectacle draws estimated 25,000

Lansing’s annual Independence Day parade through the city was predictably a scene of festive fireworks and music, as well as a parade of floats and marchers. The parade, led by the Lansing Symphony Orchestra, featured a variety of groups and organizations, including marching bands, cheerleaders, and local businesses.

The event was estimated to draw up to 25,000 spectators, who lined the streets to watch the parade proceed down Grand River Avenue. The parade began at the state Capitol and ended at Riverfront Park, with a fireworks display to close out the event.

HELLO, SALLY, I JUST CALLED TO DISCUSS HOW YOUR BROTHER IS...
I SUPPOSE YOU THOUGHT I TOLD YOU TO CALL ME TO DO SO... "HE PAVERS..."
ME, I DON'T... AND I WOULDN'T GO TO THE PAPERS IF YOU SUGGEST IT.

Windstorm demolishes airship

MOUNT PLEASANT, Iowa (AP) - The winds in central Iowa turned mobile homes into garbage bins, lifted a dirt road out of its foundation and sent a 59-foot-wide rippling into aague.

The winds also caused a plane and an airship to crashland in the western end of the state. The damage was reported in the Mount Pleasant area, where a mobile home was damaged and a dirt road was washed out.

Meridian Twp. police assaulted at bar

Two Meridian Township police officers were assaulted outside a bar in Lansing, Mich., early Saturday. The officers, along with an arrest warrant issued for an unknown suspect, were injured in the incident.

The officers were responding to a disturbance outside the bar when they were attacked by an unknown suspect. The suspect was later arrested and charged with assault.

The incident occurred at the Rainbow Bar, located at the corner of E. Michigan Ave. and Mary R. Ave. in Lansing. The officers were injured but did not require hospitalization.
