HATCH SAYS BLOCKADE CUBA

Vance—Gromyko talks continue

By BARB SCHREIBER

United Nations—Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko met on Monday to discuss the dispute over the Cuban blockade. But there was no immediate indication a solution was found.

"We will be reporting the results to our respective governments," Vance said after the private U.N. meeting.

The United Nations Security Council had requested Vance and Gromyko to meet for discussions over the blockade, which has been in place since October 1962.

Sixteen days ago, the Soviet Union announced it would lift the blockade if the United States agreed to a number of conditions, including the withdrawal of U.S. missiles from Turkey.

"We are not yet prepared to announce a decision on the blockade," Vance said after the meeting. "We have received no information that supports such an announcement."

The meeting was called "to examine the present situation, the results of the United Nations General Assembly discussion, and to discuss the prospects for reaching a peaceful settlement of the dispute."

Arts and Letters forms alliance

The College of Arts and Letters in the past month organized a pre-enrollment module for students, which will be called "A Taliban" for the college. Henry S. Dean, the ASMSU, was on hand for the ceremony, as the college administration, he explained, is not in the habit of having the students present when the ceremony is performed.

Dean said that the college plans to have a table with a central element in the middle of the room where students can sit and talk to the coordinator. That area can be used for any type of event, including the monthly open house.

"Greek system takes time to seek new blood for its ranks—especially freshmen"

By LEA HIN"

It is a common misconception that all groups are the same. This notion is perpetuated by the Greek system, which is often considered "university life." However, it is important to recognize that different groups have different values, traditions, and expectations.

For example, some groups may place a greater emphasis on academics, while others may prioritize social events. It is essential to understand these differences in order to create a more inclusive and welcoming environment for all students.

In the "FRESHMAN COMER" section, this viewpoint is shared by many of the membership. We believe that students should be given the opportunity to explore different groups and make informed decisions about which one is the best fit for them.

The Greek system is a complex and multifaceted institution that requires a significant amount of time and effort to establish. It is important to remember that these things take time, and that the process of finding the right group is not always straightforward.

Three main sources of financial aid for students are federal funds, private loans, and university scholarships.

Federal funds are the largest source of financial aid for students, and are provided by the government. Private loans are provided by banks and other financial institutions, and are typically used to supplement federal aid.

University scholarships are usually awarded by the college or university, and are based on academic achievement, financial need, or other factors.

These three main sources of financial aid are available to students in different combinations, depending on their specific needs.

Candidates need issues

As the economy deteriorates, and the future of a struggling corporation remains uncertain, students feel more than ever before the need to determine issues which will serve in the upcoming Michigan presidential primary. Considering the uncertainty is Massachusetts Senator Edward M. Kennedy, who is not yet a declared candidate, nor is any of the ballot leaders, including Senator Kennedy. Failure to address the issues, and running an election campaign on charismatic hype, are two major reasons why Senator Jackson, the United President Carter in the oval office and may do the same in 80 with Jackson.

Of course, it only matters if Senator Kennedy decides to run. Almost all of the nation's leading polls state Senator Kennedy ahead of President Carter and other democratic contenders, with approximately 30 percent of the vote.

Kennedy is now leading in every single region of the country except where Carter will maintain a slight but decisive edge. One would naturally tend to assume that the state vote would be an apt reflection of his political views. In this case, that is a most preposterous assumption. Maybe a few days before the election (should Kennedy decide to run), he will make his views and opinions known to the public at large.

Several senators of Kennedy's actions argue that he is taking the middle of the road stance to ward off the right wing's position. Senator Kennedy would be a one wonders if Kennedy will attempt to destroy the Liberal's advantage in a more formidable fashion of testing out. Defying the growing shift in the right in America politics, it is obvious that Senator Kennedy is trying to stay abreast of the white walls of talk of opinions falling in the white on the right. Senator Kennedy's effort to the right include such legislation as the Social Security Act.

And some have suggested that Watergate's actions other than the New York Times would be interpreted as an effort to move the public toward the future's possibility of a future-damaging Watergate. The administration of Richard Nixon considered Watergate's actions the right way to try to ensure their future in the White House, but a hint portraying their actions would have been successful. The administration of Richard Nixon considered Watergate's actions the right way to try to ensure their future in the White House, but a hint portraying their actions would have been successful. For instance, Senator Kennedy is also the primary sponsor of a bill to establish a new charter for the FIE. Once again Kennedy's thoughts fail to surface in.

Student vote must stand

The status of the student government took a turn for the better this past Wednesday, when RIA President Chris Hoffman told the polling representatives that residence halls will not be beyond Nestle products. Officially, the RIA currently prices students voted last spring to buy Nestle products.

RIA's management apparently claims voting to be too low to adequately represent students, and so they will continue to buy and use Nestle products until the next set of residence hall vote is lower. For some prior consideration in national voting procedures, the United States would probably not have a president, state governors, or any local government officials. The fact is that in presidential elections — particularly in the past 10 years — no student leader of this country would win with a less than 30 percent of the registration vote. And if we can thrust the leader of this country into office with less than 30 percent of the available vote, we can most certainly give Nestle victory if the majority of the students who voted it were.

Furthermore, we are representatives from the Residence Hall Association to strongly protest this decision. The Association, to quote any, any and every available source to see that this management decision does not go unnoticed. The Residence Hall Association was created, after all, as the voice of students living in residence halls. If they won, as suggested by Hoffman, to strike up a petition drive to eliminate Nestle foods from the cafeteria, this is one way of admitting that residence hall residents as a group have no power.

The Republican-British head of Nestle will probably lead in the next year to beyond Nestle foods. Let it rest there.

At the same meeting, the most likely reason for the recent RIA's action was to cut costs. As residence hall manager Robert Underwood mentioned the "unfriendly financial impact" which would result from Senate's products he received from University food aids. Students, decided by their vote, not to support a company which produces student-oriented informers and sells that mixture for astronomical press in the world countries. In case of reversed student applaud, this is an issue concerned students wanted to support. It would be a short while RIA were to discourage student action by telling their representatives their vote does not count. If RIA discards this vote, then let them; also discard the student vote next spring, when students lift a candidate to that reached office in Student Services Building.

The past year was rather dismal for one student issue. RIA made few strong stands of defense of student rights. It would appear that, at least in the case of RIA, this has not changed. We urge the group to act on this blatant detail of student concerns and protect the wishes of the students they were elected to serve.

Court OKs drive-in porn movies

By CHAD PARKS

United Press International (UPI) - The Michigan Court of Appeals has ruled that drive-in movies are protected under the state's anti-obscenity law.

The decision, which was handed down by a three-judge panel, means that drive-in theaters across the state can continue to show explicit films without fear of legal action.

The case involved a drive-in theater in the city of Lansing, which had been sued by a group of residents who claimed the films were offensive.

The appeals court said that the showing of such movies is not obscene, and that the state's anti-obscenity law does not apply to drive-in theaters.

The decision is likely to be appealed to the state's highest court, the Michigan Supreme Court.

Supporters of environmental protection have been fighting for years to keep drive-in theaters from being forced to shut down. The decision was a big win for the industry.

The court's ruling means that drive-in theaters can continue to show movies that are otherwise considered obscene, as long as they are shown in a setting that is not conducive to public viewing.

The decision is expected to be appealed to the state's highest court, but it is unlikely that the outcome will be changed.

The workshop will cover topics such as how to improve the insulation of your home, how to seal air leaks, and how to improve the efficiency of your heating and cooling systems.

The cost of the workshop is $50 per person, which includes materials and refreshments. It is open to the public, and registration is required.

The workshop will be held at the Shepard's Downtown East Lansing store, located at 488-7215.

THE WANDERERS' Wandering through a doomed era

By JOHN SELDOM

Now We Stand Wares
To some people, record albums are a luxury — a form of expensive diversion of one's pocket money. But to others, they are necessities, the same thing as soap. People remember them as dustiacs and need them. It's a fact, and if one knows how to retain cash, if one knows how to make money and keep it, one may get to be a savvy millionaire and find that one can turn his hand to anything: buying stamps, buying real estate, buying a steady job, or becoming a. . . writer. The possibility of becoming a writer is something worth fighting for, especially in the modern world.

The Wanderers movement, the United States edition of the French Revolution, is a great tradition going back to the days of Robespierre and Marat. The Wanderers are a group of young men who have decided to leave their homes and start a new life. They are not interested in money, power, or fame, but in doing good. They plan to use their new lives to help others, and to create a new society based on the principles of the French Revolution.

The Wanderers believe that the only way to create a better world is to start with the individual. They believe that each person has the power to change the world, and that it is up to each person to decide how they want to live their lives. The Wanderers believe that the only way to make a difference is to start small, and to work your way up to bigger things.

The Wanderers believe that the key to success is hard work, determination, and perseverance. They believe that anyone can be successful, as long as they are willing to work hard and never give up. The Wanderers believe that the only way to create a better world is to start with the individual, and to work together as a community to create a better world.

The text from the image suggests that Johnson's first game with the Lakers was a memorable one. The text mentions his impressive play and the fans' reaction to his debut, highlighting his star power.

Earvin Johnson was a basketball player for the Michigan State University (MSU) Spartans. He was selected as the first overall pick in the 1979 NBA Draft by the Los Angeles Lakers. Johnson played for the Lakers from 1979 to 1989, winning three NBA championships during his time with the team. He was inducted into the Naismith Memorial Basketball Hall of Fame in 2002. Johnson is widely regarded as one of the greatest players in NBA history, known for his versatility and his ability to impact the game in multiple ways. His career was marked by his scoring ability, rebounding, passing, and defensive skills, making him a key figure in the evolution of the modern NBA.
Young harriers have experience

The names and faces of a year ago will be the same, but the Michigan State University MSU cross country team that finished 25th in the NCAA meet will be an entirely different squad.

"Our team is composed of seven of the 14 runners who ran in the Big Ten meet last year," said Coach Virgil Gilholt. "The returners include Damion Jackson and sixth-year senior Jeff Gross who is a key runner for the BSC meet. Howard Haul drubbed the USCAA Class C team this year to win the championship. Coach Virgil is a fantastic coach. He brings the team together and gives them inspiration."

There will be a lot of new faces on the cross country team this year. Coach Virgil is planning on bringing in a lot of new runners who will be the future of the MSU cross country team.

The only senior is the coach in Keith Moore of Gladwin. He is a senior with two seasons of cross country and track experience. He has a lot of potential and can make a big impact on the team.

The harriers will be in full swing by the time the Big Ten meet is held, and Coach Virgil is excited about the potential of this year's team. The harriers will work hard to make sure they are in top shape for the Big Ten meet and the NCAA meet.

More mothers to be employed by '90s

BY OWEN ULLMAN

Associate Press Writer

ATLANTIC CITY — Two of every three American mothers will be holding a job in 1990 as the result of increased demands from the home to the workplace, conclusions of the next decade, according to several sociological experts quoted Monday.

The role of the American housewife is shrinking more rapidly than the role of others, according to research cited at a conference of sociologists who were gathering here on the Boardwalk.

A recent study of 11 million working mothers showed that the number of school-age children was a major factor in the decision to work outside the home. The study, said to be the first of its kind, was presented here by a sociologist from the University of California at San Diego.

As a result, the part-time earnings of married women who are in the workforce will grow from the current level of just more than half to nearly three-quarters of all income in the book. The same trend is expected to apply to men who still hold down a real-estate career.

According to a report by the National Center for Health Statistics, 10.5 percent of all American children were living in homes where the mother was not employed outside the home. This is down from 19.7 percent in 1960.

And the number of working mothers is expected to rise from a current high of 15 percent to 20 percent of all American women by the end of the next century.

The study, which was sponsored by the U.S. Department of Labor, showed that women are finding work outside the home for a variety of reasons:

1. The amount of money needed to meet family needs.
2. The desire of women to prove their worth outside the home.
3. An increased desire for individual freedom.
4. The desire of women to prepare themselves for further education.
5. The desire of women to be more active in community affairs.
6. The desire of women to take on a new challenge.

In general, women are more likely to be employed if they have been working steadily for several years or if they have a high school education. Younger women are less likely to be employed outside the home than older women.

The study also showed that women are more likely to be employed if they have been working steadily for several years or if they have a high school education. Younger women are less likely to be employed outside the home than older women.
