Washington, D.C.—President Reagan today approved a resolution asking the United States Senate to confirm the nomination of Republican Rep. Robert Torigan of California to become the next United States ambassador to the United Nations. The resolution was approved by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee last week, and the White House today said that Torigan's nomination would be sent to the Senate for consideration.

Reagan, Baker victors in Ark. delegate selection

By Bill Simmons
Associated Press Writer

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — The nominating conventions of the two major presidential contenders, Arkansas Gov. David B. Craig and former first lady Nancy Reagan, were held today in Little Rock, Arkansas.

Craig received the nomination on the third ballot, while Reagan received it on the fifth. Both candidates have won their respective conventions in recent weeks.

Reagan's speech was marked by a strong emphasis on foreign policy, particularly in the Middle East. She called for a strong commitment to the containment of communism and pledged to work toward a nuclear arms reduction treaty with the Soviet Union.

Craig's speech focused on domestic issues, particularly education and the economy. He promised to work with Congress to pass a comprehensive tax reform package and to balance the federal budget within his first term.

The two candidates are expected to campaign vigorously in the remaining months before the November election.
WASHINGTON — Congress wants draft info.

BARBARA JONES of Detroit had a simple request: Please don’t take my son from me.

"It isn’t that I don’t want him to serve his country, but I feel that if he is so gifted he can better be used in a different role," said Jones, a 52-year-old housewife. "I pray that he will be used to make a difference in the world, not in fighting the war."

"The gay community is concerned," said Barry Berkey, a gay rights activist in Detroit. "We are concerned about what the draft will mean for our community, but we are also concerned about what it will mean for the nation."

***

Jesse Jackson, a leader in the civil rights movement, said he would be "deeply disappointed" if the draft were reinstated.

"The draft is a symbol of the discrimination and oppression that black people have faced for centuries," he said. "It is a reminder of the pain and suffering that we have endured."

***

On the other hand, Senator Howard Baker, a Republican from Tennessee, said he believed the draft was an effective way to ensure national security.

"The draft is a just and fair system for selecting military personnel," he said. "It is a way to ensure that all citizens have the opportunity to serve their country."

The U.S. Senate was expected to vote on the draft issue this week.

The draft has been a source of controversy since it was first introduced in 1948.

ASMSU Student Board Representative Darrin Studer and his family announced Friday that Lansing State Community College would be the site of their spring annual meeting.

"We are excited to be able to host this meeting," Studer said. "The location provides a great opportunity to showcase the college and its many offerings to our students and the community."

The meeting will take place on Thursday, April 5, from 6 to 8 p.m. at the College Center. The evening will include a presentation by guest speaker Joel C. Miller, a professor of political science at Michigan State University. The event is open to all members of the public.

In other news, the Student Government Association executive board announced the results of its recent elections. The new board members are as follows:

- President: Taylor Davis
- Vice President: Sarah Johnson
- Treasurer: Alex Lee
- Secretary: Emily Brown
- External Affairs: Matthew Smith
- Internal Affairs: Rachel Miller
- Student Life: Nina Patel
- Information Technology: John Doe
- Public Relations: Jane Smith

The new board will begin its term on Monday, March 6, and will serve a one-year term.

In a related development, the Student Government Association executive board announced that it has approved a new budget for the upcoming academic year. The budget includes funding for several new programs, including a student success initiative, a sustainability program, and a technology enhancement program.

The board also approved a new set of bylaws to govern the operations of the Student Government Association. The new bylaws are designed to increase transparency and accountability, and to streamline the decision-making process.

Overall, the Student Government Association executive board is looking forward to a productive and successful year, and invites all members of the LSCC community to participate in the upcoming events and initiatives.
Abolition debate lacks alternatives

We never knew how closely knit ASMSU was until College of Arts and Letters Dean W. J. Sosa was removed from the Student Board on a technicality. Immediately following Sosa's departure, Jones, a member of the Student Media Approach Coalition (SMAC), declared that ASMSU had strayed from its original mission to start a petition drive to abolish all student government. He does not know what.

To debate the effectiveness of a student government structured around a board is to challenge the entire concept of ASMSU. For years, a popular alternative to the Student Board has been one that would allow college students to elect college representatives and establish a system that would serve as a student trustee, capable of offering various other academic services. As of now, ASMSU is modeled somewhat on the system of representative government and functions, for the most part, with all of its inadequacies.

An all-student structure of the Student Board is intrinsically weak, since the evidence does suggest that all have not been well within the board for months. Representative have not shown up, refused a chance of a place, and communication lines between the Student Board and the other academic and social resources have been broken. The board, Jones tells the reports, "has to abolish the board, get the board back, and reintegrate its role in the University." The call for such a mass movement is a recognition of the need for meaningful representation in student government. Yet not only does Jones fail to offer a reasonable plan, but he does not know what.

Deposit proposal deserves support

It was a small yet significant victory for our battles bravely fought against the Board of Trustees. Amidst cries of opposition from real-estate lobbyists, a bill requesting payment of all student emergency deposits was passed in the House of Representatives on a 7-4 vote.

We have another vote to take. A move to a university without student representation will be an important step in the direction of the Senate. The Board's original measure would have allowed for real estate developers and other security deposits paid to the Board. This measure has been passed by the Senate, and we should continue our effort until the Board is abolished. The bill would allow for the development of a new system of representative government.

Cabin Project won't kill Baker

In response to the letter written against the Baker Fieldhouse Cabin Project, the Editor of The Illinois, appreciating the position of the Baker Fieldhouse Cabin Project, has stated that the plan has been halted. Jones, however, has stated that the plan has been halted. The Editor of The Illinois has stated that the plan has been halted.

Meal card replacement a rip-off

We have recently purchased a depression-era meal card and the increased price has not been justified. In fact, we believe that the price has been lowered. The new cards are not useful, and we have no plan to replace them. The cards are a rip-off and have caused us a great deal of inconvenience.

VIEWPOINT: LENNON

Data Processing Dept. replies to charges of vice

Recent reports appearing in The State News regarding the Illinois Data Processing Department are very serious. If we have to face charges of vice, we are urged to respond. If we do not respond, we are urged to face charges of vice. We are urged to respond.

WCC should not be closed down

Camping Center has been running a summer camp in the Illinois countryside for many years. The camp has been widely acclaimed as a valuable experience for young people. It is an excellent opportunity for our children to learn about the outdoors and to develop a love for nature.

Our allegiance is to humanity

We have been asked to participate in the Yugoslavia Revamping Program, which we believe is a positive step. We are committed to supporting the revamping program and its goals of promoting education, cultural exchange, and economic development in Yugoslavia.

VIEWPOINT: REGISTRATION

ASMSU should oppose sign-up

The Student Board has just presented an amendment to the registration form that would require students to sign up for each class in advance. We strongly oppose this amendment.

In the spring of 1977, the University adopted a new system of registration that allowed students to register for classes throughout the semester. This system was intended to provide greater flexibility for students and to reduce the number of registration problems. The system has been successful and has been widely praised.

However, the Student Board is proposing a change that would allow classes to be dropped at the end of the semester. This would reduce the flexibility of the system and could lead to increased registration problems. We urge students to oppose this amendment and to voice their concerns to the Student Board.
Prison alternatives are viable solution

By MARIE FELLOWS
Stotesbury News Writer
Michigan's prison system is in a bad shape, but the state's embryos argues that the obvious answer is not to replace overcrowded prisons with new ones. Instead, he calls for more imaginative solutions for prison reform.

He recently presented his ideas at the joint legislative and prison reform conference in Lansing.

He describes how one major problem is the lack of rehabilitation programs for prisoners. Miller, a prison expert who has been studying the problem for years, believes that unless these programs are improved, prisoners will continue to commit crimes after their release.

"If we want to reduce crime rates and save money, we need to focus on rehabilitation," he said.

A showcase of fantasies

Just as the race to be original is on again, the embers of ivory have been stirred up again. The world of ivory is a world of fantasy and dreams, where the most exotic and rare creatures are the prizes of the rich and powerful.

The ivory trade is a beloved tradition in many cultures, but it has come under scrutiny in recent years due to concerns about wildlife conservation.

In this showcase of fantasies, we will explore the world of ivory, from the history of its use to the modern-day trade. We will also examine the challenges and solutions being proposed to protect these magnificent creatures.

The exhibition will feature a range of ivory artifacts, as well as videos and interactive displays. Visitors will have the opportunity to learn about the world of ivory through a variety of engaging exhibits.

A showcase of fantasies will run from [date] to [date] at [location]. Admission is free, and the exhibition is open to the public.

They won something big

With dusty eyes, Larry Munsterman and Lori Lichtenau staggered and leaned each other during their last dance. They had just been discharged from the hospital after a month-long stay. They had been discharged, they celebrated a victory in their fight against multiple sclerosis, a disease which leaves the nervous systems of young people intact. They were just in time for the Spring Dance for Strength at Meridian Mall.

The victory was a personal one for everyone. They were one of the six couples who raised the $10,012.12, Michigan chapter of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society for research, counseling, and medical assistance. As they danced, they became part of the community, the war against multiple sclerosis.

Lori and Larry had come a long way together. Only 14 hours before, they arrived at Meridian Mall dressed in their finest. They had spent most of the past weekend dancing in the mall. Lori and Larry had spent most of the past weekend in the mall. Lori and Larry were dancing in the mall.

As they danced, they ignored the world that surrounded them. They were lost in their own world, dancing to the music. They were lost in their own world.

Lori and Larry were lost in their own world.

They won something big...
Vincent pours in 36, Spartans beat U-M

By ADAM TECQUE
State News Writer

Spartans senior Jay Vincent, who made a free throw with three seconds remaining to complete a go-ahead, tie-breaking seven-point run in the final minute to give Michigan 90-82 lead over Wisconsin, was named the game's most valuable player.

Vincent finished the game with 36 points on 14-of-22 shooting, including seven threes. His performance was essential in propelling Michigan to victory.

The Spartans outscored the Badgers 49-32 in the second half and 64-49 overall.

Waters names aide

Dave D'Entremont, the head coach of the University of Michigan Women's Track and Field and Cross Country programs, has announced the hiring of Vincent Waters as an assistant coach.

Waters, who will join the track and field program as a specialist in middle distance and distance events, brings a wealth of experience and knowledge to the program.

She has previously served as an assistant coach at Ohio State University and has been a part of several National Championship teams.

Waters is a native of England and has experience working with athletes from various backgrounds.

The hiring of Waters is part of a broader effort to build a successful program and compete at a high level.

The Michigan Women's Track and Field and Cross Country programs have a long history of success and have been consistently competitive in the Big Ten Conference.

The hiring of Waters is a significant step forward in continuing that tradition and building towards future success.
Columnist gives talk

"The one thing I've given up is the motherhood role to make my career role more exciting," said Columnist Caffrey.

"The one thing I've given up is the motherhood role for the career role, feeling the two were not mixed," she said.

Caffrey could be described as one of the "superwomen" in society. She is a counselor and instructor at Lansing Community College, is the co-owner of an East Lansing business and is married.

"I read the term superwoman for myself, mainly because of the ways it's used by many people," she said.

ONE PROBLEM MANY women have faced is the period of transition between a new role and a former role. The causes of this varied from changing jobs, moving or changing one's marital status.

Many difficulties are faced by women with several of these period transitions, and these changes can be difficult. Transitioning from a married woman to a single woman may involve the death of a spouse, the loss or leaving of children and divorce, she added.

"I thought my life was perfect," said Jackie Drake, an East Lansing resident currently going through a divorce. "I found my best coping mechanism was to get out." Drake said that before her husband left, she saw her life as a spinning wheel, with her husband at the center. She said she often felt alone and afraid of the new role she would have to face.

"It's like losing a baby, to be left all alone," she said. "And that is a shame." Drake said that although women today hold new and different roles in society, there are some things changing about being a woman, she said. "We are still the nurturing sex. We are still the chief and primary teachers and value-setters for our generation.'
