Kennedy wins Mass. primary

By WALTER R. MEEHAN
AP Special Correspondent

BOSTON — Edmond G. Kennedy won the two Massachusetts presidential primary Tuesday night, debuting Press Secretary to Gov. Arthur F. Grace and political veteran in Vermont. John F. Kennedy and Robert Kennedy walked by wholesale after Bush and Reagan. The three liberal Democrats' drawings were a sharp blow to Bush, who was building to establish himself as the only alternative to Reagan.

Bush, campaigning in Charleston, S.C., Tuesday, remained on the offensive, denouncing Reagan as the "candidate of the far right" and "theベース of the hard right.

The military said earlier they would not fire their first shot until after Presidents Bush and Reagan get home from their earlier West Pacific tour.

Employee association files suit against MSU to halt hiring delay

By DEBORAH CHEMMER
State News Staff Writer

A lawsuit will be filed against the University of Michigan State University Employee Association Thursday by 323 clerical workers if they are not hired before March 12. The suit will be filed in the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Michigan.

The suit will challenge the university's hiring freeze policy, which has been in effect since January. The university has hired 275 employees since the hiring freeze was put in place.

The suit will be filed by the union, which represents the clerical workers, and the Michigan State University Employee Association.

The university has denied the union's claims that the hiring freeze is illegal.

Budget breach delays Carter's registration plan

New TV station possible

by ROLAND WILKINSON

A new network-affiliated television station may begin operation in Lansing in a single year, if the Federal Commission approves a petition by the Michigan State University Student Senate which asks for a station license.

The FCC Subcommittee 1 is expected to act on Aug. 30, 1963 for its final decision on the petition.

Making the deadline were Fox COMMUNICATIONS, headed by President Robert L. Scharlau, and the Michigan State University Student Senate, which is sponsoring the petition. The Student Senate said it would probably be at least two years before a station would be on the air.

After all the applications have been processed, the FCC will make the decision on whether or not to grant one or more stations.

If the applications are accepted, the new station will be on the air by the fall of 1965.

In the meantime, the station will begin operation at a rate of 1500 kilowatts.

An application for a new station was also received by the FCC from the Michigan State University Student Senate.

Approval comes in a U.S. Federal law that allows the Senate to apply for a station license.

Placements Services holds fair

Placement Services held its annual job fair at the University Union for the last time. Contractors from several companies that hire students for part-time, summer, and full-time jobs were present. According to Neil Zolton, assistant director of Placement Services, the job fair was attended by over 600 students. Although some students did not participate, Zolton stated that the fair was successful because it provided an opportunity for employers and students to meet and discuss job opportunities.

Volunteer groups hold last interviews

Several volunteer groups had their final interviews last week. Volunteers are often recruited through community service organizations, and they are usually involved in various activities such as helping in schools, hospitals, or environmental projects. These interviews are important as they help the organizations identify the most suitable candidates for the positions available.

Funds needed for Hall of Fame

The Michigan Women's Hall of Fame is in need of funds to continue its operations. The hall recognizes and honors the achievements of women in various fields, and it aims to promote gender equality. The organization is currently experiencing financial difficulties, and it needs support from the community to continue its mission.

By ZYLLA GOLDNY

Although Soviet women are known for their traditional family values, new studies suggest that they may be more inclined to remain single. According to sociologist Zylla Goldny, recent data show an increase in the number of women who prefer to remain single in the Soviet Union. She attributes this trend to social and economic changes, as well as increasing education levels.

Nuke moratorium must be continued

When the Kennedy Commission was appointed in October to assess the safety of nuclear power plant safeguards, its results were less than reassuring for nuclear power opponents. Rather, the commission found a number of “procedural” and “technical” problems; it also found a number of “lack of measures that could prevent serious core damage in a reactor mishap, or for that matter, any nuclear accident that is caused by terrorist threat to the public or the environment.”

Nukes, or nuclear power plants, are a very serious threat to the public and the environment.

Not to be stopped by such an ominous assessment, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission announced last week that it would resume licensing nuclear power plants because the industry has undergone major revisions in safety standards and procedures. No doubt the commission has been spurred on by the success of the nuclear power plants based on the recommendations found in Three Mile Island and the other accidents in the NRC’s history. However, the commission’s actions don’t mean anything unless the public is also made aware of the safety problems that exist.

It is obvious the NRC’s findings won’t satisfy those skeptical of relying on nuclear power as a major source of energy. A variance to issuing licenses is certain to reinforce the notion that nuclear power is dangerously out of the closet. But, hopefully, the commission will be sufficiently transparent to allow the public the right to determine whether or not nuclear power is a safe, inexpensive form of energy.

In light of the fact that the threat of nuclear power is as valid as ever, it is improbable that the public will accept the propaganda of plant licensing. And it should not.

Propping up the shrinking dollar

As the crisis in Iran and Afghanistan are not enough to scare Congress, the nuclear power industry is facing a threat at home that may see its subsidies reduced. Acting to stem economic sluggishness in this time of World War II, is the threat of inflation.

The threat, of course, is inflation in fact now running higher than it did in 18-months ago. If it follows the course other observers predict, it will be a real threat to the present economic system.

Economists, for all their computer-generated predictions, are still toying with a scare tactic, a fact which Congress is beginning to realize. In order for the administration to get its proposals through to Congress, there will be a fight for the Checklist in coming months. It is a fight for the power wielded by the Federal Reserve Board, the nation’s credit suppliers, and the elected officials of Congress.

Others have focused on the simple, albeit simplistic argument, that the sole cause of inflation is the budget. That sentiment boils down to the belief that the government is guilty of overspending, or at least a budget which exceeds the tax revenues of the government.

There have been focused on the simple, albeit simplistic argument, that the sole cause of inflation is the budget. That sentiment boils down to the belief that the government is guilty of overspending, or at least a budget which exceeds the tax revenues of the government.

There is a lack of confidence among economists that the government is responsible for inflation is a lack of confidence that inflation is caused by the government. This is a lack of confidence that there is a lack of confidence that inflation is caused by the government.
COUNCIL DECISION UNANIMOUS

Lansing residents to vote on fluoridation

The Lansing City Commission on Thursday unanimously approved a first reading of fluoridation of the city’s water supply.

City Manager John Hubl said the city council will have another chance to vote on the issue at its regular meeting next week, and the matter will then go to the voters in a referendum.

Substance abuse program funds

The Michigan State University Department of Health and Human Services received $300,000 from the federal government to establish a substance abuse program at its campus.

The funds will be used to support the development of a new program to help reduce the incidence of drug and alcohol abuse among university students.

The program will provide counseling, treatment, and educational services to students who have problems with substance abuse.

Nursing school sponsorships

The Michigan State University College of Nursing has received $50,000 from the Michigan State University Foundation to support its nursing programs.

The funds will be used to support the development of new programs, to provide scholarships to students, and to support research.

Cogs to discuss funding

The Council of Graduate Studies and the University of Michigan announced a new initiative to support students in the arts and humanities.

The initiative will provide $2 million in grants to support creative projects and artistic scholarship.

Truth in Renting Act controls leases

By MICHAEL VER

The Truth in Renting Act is a federal law that requires landlords to disclose all the terms of a lease to tenants. It also requires landlords to provide tenants with a written lease agreement that includes the following information: the names of both parties to the lease, the address of the rental property, the rental amount, the term of the lease, any restrictions on the use of the property, the procedures for terminating the lease, and the rights and responsibilities of both parties. The law also requires landlords to provide tenants with a written notice of cancellation of the lease at least 30 days before the end of the lease term.

Handicapper center states goals

By DAVID VARGA

Horse News

The state's major handicapper center has Phase I of a long planned expansion underway. The $1.2 million center will be the first of its kind in the Midwest to have a bar, restaurant, and gift shop.

"The new center will be a great addition to our community," said Gary Gordon, director of the center. "It will provide a place for handicappers to meet and socialize while enjoying a variety of activities, including horse racing and other sporting events."

Additionally, the center will feature a 360-degree video wall that allows handicappers to view horse races from all angles.

"This wall will be a real asset for handicappers," said Gordon. "It will provide a unique viewing experience that will enhance their ability to analyze and predict horse racing outcomes."

The center will also offer a variety of workshops and seminars on handicapping strategies, as well as a library stocked with books and videos on the subject.

"Our goal is to provide the best possible resources for handicappers," said Gordon. "We want to offer a place where handicappers can come together to learn and share their knowledge.

Several students at Michigan State University have been arrested for forgery and fraud after investigators discovered they were using fake bus passes.

"This is a serious crime," said Chief of Police John Asmussen. "We take this very seriously and will prosecute those involved to the fullest extent of the law.

In addition to the bus passes, investigators found a number of other fake documents, including driver's licenses and passports.

"These documents were being used to gain illegal access to multiple areas on campus," said Asmussen. "We will not tolerate this type of behavior and will hold those responsible accountable.

The students face charges ranging from forgery to identity theft.

"This is a stark reminder to all of our community members that we take the integrity of our documents very seriously," said Asmussen. "We will continue to pursue these cases vigorously to ensure that those who engage in such activities are held accountable."
University blacksmith is a ‘jack-of-all-trades’

Norman Oswald is a new man, one of dying breed, you might say.

Oswald, the University blacksmith, one of the few blacksmiths left in the country. He has a large workshop with a forge, on Farm Road near Lansing. The University has to buy equipment, but the University remains firm and makes University IRequest that he stays on.

"He's a blacksmith," said Lee, the Michigan State University student. "He's the only blacksmith in the area," said Lee. "He's the only blacksmith in the United States," said Lee. "He's the only blacksmith in the world," said Lee.

Tavares return with supercharged LP

There's no one music to be more precious... but I don't think a group should offer you only one thing. You do what looks right, that's all.

Ralph Stote, 1976

More than 30 years ago, Chuck & Don, the Twin Towers brothers, offered country songs to the world on a label called Modern. Now, 30 years later, Chuck and Donald Miller are back with a large populated following that shows their ability to write and record against any number of large and small production budgets around the world. The group of old friends and new friends has been refined and shaped to an impressive showpiece on their first album. The songs that Chuck and Donald Miller have written and recorded have been diary entries beneath the surface, and the material on their album has been a way to express those feelings and memories.

The Towers

And as "We Don't Talk," they put at the listener's disposal one of the most beautiful ballads this reviewer has ever heard, but it's these strengths that are the group's major assets at best sound as well as vision. "They Together" geese better than ever, and excesses Brother Charles in tight outer shell. Perhaps the biggest change is in brother Chuck's blazing, romantic sounds. There are still moments of similarity, but there's also a marked difference. This time the group has managed to avoid the pitfalls of the past and has managed to put some more life in its show. The group has managed to find its way through the group's talent at the Mattress Marché. Drawing on its strength from the session men, arrangements. They show off the fruits, the Bandoni brothers for a producer who could lend their voices with solid orchestration and light production, and the stools. Their career has never been a fast food affair for Chuck and Donald. They've had to work hard for what they've got, and while their professional roles have changed, they've still managed to avoid the pitfalls of the past.

Their new album, Perle, on the same label that released their debut album, is more mature and sophisticated. Chuck says that he's learned a lot from his experiences with the group and that the new album reflects the best of their past work. The album features songs that are more personal and introspective, and the group has managed to avoid the pitfalls of the past. I've been a long-time admirer of the music of the Towers, a group that has been part of my life since the mid-1960s. Their music has always been a source of inspiration and joy, and I am thrilled to see them return with their new album. The Towers are a group that has always been able to blend different musical styles and create something unique. Their new album is no exception. It features songs that are both intimate and powerful, and it is a testament to the group's talent and creativity.

Video production by Ralph Stote of the Paris, Texas, and the group's manager, and photo photography by Ralph Stote of the Paris, Texas, and the group's manager. Four-way deadlock for coaches award

By RANDY MONROE

The Sporting News

In the national championship meet — the NCAA Division I cross-country, indoor track and field, wrestling and baseball championships — there will be four coaches who are strong contenders for the top spot. The choices are: Princess O'Hara, coach of the University of Illinois; Frank Miller, coach of the University of Michigan; John Wooden, coach of the University of California, Los Angeles; and Tommie Smith, coach of the University of Oregon.

The four coaches have each led their teams to national championships in their respective sports. O'Hara has led Illinois to three national championships in cross-country, while Miller has led Michigan to three national championships in track and field. Wooden has led UCLA to three national championships in basketball, and Smith has led Oregon to three national championships in track and field.

The decision will be made by the selection committee, which includes coaches, sports writers, and former athletes. The committee will meet in May to determine the winner.

Despite late start, Thomas turns in stellar season

By JIM WETZEL

State News Sports Writer

THOMAS STARTED OFF the season by winning the Big Ten Championship, but he then had to sit out five games with an injury. He returned to the lineup and was one of the top players on the team, finishing with a career-high 11 goals.

Even though he missed the majority of the season, Thomas was still able to contribute to the team's success. He was named to the All-Big Ten team and was one of the most productive players in the conference.
